THE PREFACE.

THIS valuable Book of Engliſh Martyrs being grown ſo very ſcarce, as to be rarely found but in the Cloſets of the Learned or Curious, it is hoped that the Method taken to reſtore it to the Publick will meet with general Approbation and Encouragement; as it ſeems to be the moſt proper Way for promoting the univerſal Good intended: For the Purchaſe of ſo voluminous a Work cannot be reach'd by every one's Purſe at once; and therefore this Expedient was reſolv'd on, of publiſhing a certain Number of Sheets weekly, by Subſcription, that the common People might be alſo enabled, by degrees, to procure it.

May God give a Bleſſing to the Undertaking; and grant that theſe dreadful Accounts of Popiſh Tyranny, may not only prove a Means of preſerving our Church from ever falling into ſuch groſs Errors and Enormities; but alſo teach us, and all Chriſtians, to ſet a greater Value upon that Religion, which, by the Bleſſing of God, is eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom, whoſe Doctrine and Conſtitution is ſo exactly agreeable to that of the Primitive Chriſtians, and firſt Propagaters of the Goſpel, and alſo incline us more ſtedfaſtly to adhere to the Faith and Profeſſion of it.

It would be needleſs to tire the Reader with an Account of the Particulars contain'd in the following Hiſtory, ſince every Matter therein is too fully expreſs'd preſs'd to need any Comment; and it was for this Reaſon that Mr. Fox's Original Preface is omitted, it being thought too long, giving an Account only of the Riſe, Progreſs, Gatherings and Abſurdity of the Maſs, with the Canon and all its Appurtenance; which, he ſays, like Æſop's Crow plum'd with the Feathers of various Birds, was longer in patching together, than the Temple of Solomon was building. Whence he proves, that none of the Apoſtles founded it; and yet this Popiſh Maſs was one of the principal Cauſes for which ſuch an Army of godly Men became Martyrs, ſuffering Death in ſo many cruel Shapes; ſome conſumed by Fire, ſome pined away with Hunger, ſome hanged, ſome ſlain, ſome racked, ſome tormented one way, ſome another, as will hereafter at large appear.

May the Bleſſed Spirit of God bring into the Way of Truth all ſuch as have erred and are deceived: May it pleaſe him to ſtrengthen ſuch as do ſtand, to comfort and help the weak-hearted, to raiſe up them that fall, and finally to beat down Satan under our Feet.

In the REIGN of Queen MARY the First.

BOOK I.

Of Queen Mary's Acceſſion to the Throne; and the ſeveral Troubles and Alterations that happened in her Reign both in Church and State.

Anno 1553.

DURING the Time that King Edward the ſixth was afflicted by a long Illneſs, there was a Marriage provided, concluded, and ſolemnized, in the Month of May, between the Lord Guilford, Son to the Duke of Northumberland, and the Lady Jane, the Duke of Suffolk's Daughter; whoſe Mother being then alive, was Daughter to Mary, King Henry's ſecond Siſter, who was firſt married to the French King, and afterwards to Charles Duke of Suffolk. The Marriage being conſummated, and the King every Day growing worſe, and there being no hopes of his Recovery, it was brought to paſs by the conſent both of the Nobility and chief Lawyers of the Realm, that the King by his laſt Will and Teſtament did ſet aſide his two Siſters Mary and Elizabeth, and left the Crown to the aforeſaid Lady Jane, the Duke of Suffolk's Daughter.

Marriage between the Lord Guilford and the Lady Jane.

To this Order ſubſcribed all the King's Council, and chief of the Nobility, the Lord Mayor and City of London, and almoſt all the Judges and principal Lawyers of the Realm, except Juſtice Hales of Kent, who was remarkable for his being as true a Proteſtant, and as upright a Judge as any in the Realm, and who firſt giving his Conſent to the Lady Mary's being Queen, would upon no Account therefore ſubſcribe to the Lady Jane. But of this Man more hereafter. The Objections againſt the Lady Mary's Reigning were becauſe it was fear'd ſhe would Marry with a Stranger, and ſo entangle the Crown, and likewiſe that ſhe would bring in the Pope, and quite alter the Religion uſed both in her Father King Henry, and her Brother King Edward's Days.

Sir James Hales ſtandeth up for Lady Mary.

Two Things feared in Lady Mary's being Queen.

What moſtly occaſioned this Conjecture of theirs, was the great Stubbornneſs ſhe ſhewed and declar'd in her Brother's Days, as appears from Letters that paſſed between her and King Edward, and the Council. The Matter however being thus concluded and confirmed by the ſubſcribing of every Man's Hand, not long after through the Violence of his Illneſs, that moſt hopeful Prince King Edward departed this Life, when he was ſixteen Years of Age, and with whom decayed, in a great Meaſure, the flouriſhing Eſtate and Honour of the Engliſh Nation.

Lady Jane, proclaim'd Queen.

After King Edward was dead, the Lady Jane was by the Nobles Conſent proclaimed Queen in London and other populous Cities, and as ſuch was there ſo taken and called. There was but little difference in Age between this young Lady and King Edward, but as to Learning and Knowledge of the Languages ſhe was not only equal, but ſuperior to him, as having had the Advantage of a Man of moſt excellent Learning for her Tutor and Inſtructor; and had her Fortune been equal to her Education and Fineneſs of Wit, no doubt but ſhe would have been comparable not only to the Houſe of Veſpaſians, Sempronians, and Mother of the Gracchi's, yea to any other Woman beſides, but even to Men of the Univerſity that had taken ſeveral Degrees there in the Schools.

Comparison between King Edward and Lady Jane.

This Inſtructor was Maſter Elmar.

But while theſe Things were working, and upon the Anvil at London, the Lady Mary knowing her Brother's Death, wrote to the Lords of the Council in the following Manner.

The Lady Mary's Letter to the Lords of the Council, claiming the Crown upon her Brother's Deceaſe.

The Lady Mary's Letter to the Lords of the Council, wherein ſhe claimeth the Crown.

'MY Lords, we greet you well, and have receiv'd ſure Advertiſement, that our deareſt Brother the King, our late Sovereign Lord, is departed to God's Mercy, which News how woful they be unto our Heart, he only knoweth, to whoſe Will and Pleaſure we muſt and do humbly ſubmit us and our Wills. But in this ſo lamentable a Caſe, that is to wit, now after his Majeſty's Departure and Death, concerning the Crown and Governance of this Realm of England, with the Title of France, and all Things thereto belonging, what hath been provided by Act of Parliament, and the Teſtament and laſt Will of our deareſt Father, beſides other Circumſtances advancing our Right, you know, the Realm, and the whole World knoweth, the Rolls and Records appear by the Authority of the King our ſaid Father, and the King our ſaid Brother, and the Subjects of this Realm; ſo that we verily Truſt, that there is no good true Subject that is, can, or would pretend to be Ignorant thereof: And of our Part we have of ourſelves cauſed, and, as God ſhall aid and ſtrengthen us, ſhall cauſe our Right and Title in this Behalf to be publiſhed and proclaimed accordingly. And albeit this ſo weighty a Matter ſeemeth ſtrange, that our ſaid Brother dying upon Thurſday at Night laſt paſt, we hitherto had no Knowledge from you thereof, yet we conſider your Wiſdoms and Prudence to be ſuch, that having * eftſoons amongſt you debated, pondered, and well weighed this preſent Caſe with our Eſtate, with your own Eſtate, the Commonwealth and all our Honours, we ſhall and may conceive great Hopes and Truſt, with much Aſſurance in your Loyalty and Service, and therefore for the Time interpret and take Things not the worſt; and that ye will, like Noblemen, work the beſt. Nevertheleſs, we are not Ignorant of your Conſultations, to undo the Proviſions made for our Preferment, nor of the great Bands and Proviſions forcible, wherewith ye be aſſembled and prepared, by whom, and to what End, God and you know, and Nature cannot but fear ſome Evil. But be it that ſome Conſideration Politick, or whatſoever thing elſe hath moved you thereto, yet doubt you not, my Lords, but we can take all theſe your doings in gracious Part, being alſo right ready to remit and fully pardon the ſame, and that freely to eſchew Bloodſhed and Vengeance, againſt all thoſe that can or will intend the ſame, truſting alſo aſſuredly you will take and accept this Grace and Virtue in good Part as appertaineth, and that we ſhall not be inforced to uſe the Service of other our true Subjects and Friends, which in this our juſt and right Cauſe, God, in whom our whole Affiance is, ſhall ſend us. Wherefore, my Lords, we require you, and charge you, and every of you, that of your Allegiance which you owe to God and us, and to none other, for our Honour and the Surety of our Perſon only imploy yourſelves, and forthwith upon Receipt hereof, cauſe our Right and Title to the Crown and Government of this Realm to be proclaimed in our City of London, and other Places, as to your Wiſdom ſhall ſeem Good, and as to this Caſe appertaineth, not failing hereof as our very Truſt is in you. And this our Letter, ſign'd with our Hand, ſhall be your ſufficient Warrant in this Behalf. Anno 1553.

Given under our Signet, at our Manor of Kening-hall, the ninth of July 1553.

To this Letter of the Lady Mary, the Lords of the Council returned the following Anſwer:

The Lords Anſwer to the Lady Mary's Letter.

A Letter of the Council, anſwering again to the Lady Mary.

'MAdam, we have received your Letters, the ninth of this Inſtant, declaring your ſuppoſed Title, which you judge yourſelf to have to the Imperial Crown of this Realm, and all the Dominions thereunto belonging. For Anſwer whereof, this is to Adverſiſe you, that foraſmuch as our ſovereign Lady Queen Jane is, after the Death of our ſovereign Lord King Edward, the Sixth, a Prince of moſt noble Memory, inveſted and poſſeſſed with the juſt and right Title in the Imperial Crown of this Realm, not only by good Order of antient Laws of this Realm, but alſo by our late ſovereign Lord's Letter Patents ſigned with his own Hand, and ſealed with the Great Seal of England, in preſence of the moſt Part of the Nobles, Counſellors, Judges, with divers other grave and ſage Perſonages, aſſenting and ſubſcribing to the ſame: We muſt therefore, as of moſt bound Duty and Allegiance, aſſent unto her ſaid Grace, and to none other, except we ſhould (which faithful Subjects cannot) fall into grievous and unſpeakable Enormities. Wherefore we can no leſs do, but for the Quiet both of the Realm and you alſo, to adverſiſe you, that foraſmuch as the Divorce made between the King of famous Memory, King Henry VIII. and the Lady Katherine your Mother, was neceſſary to be had both by the everlaſting Laws of Lady Jane inveſted in Poſſeſſion of the Crown by King Edward's Will, and Aſſent of the whole Council.

Anno 1553.

'God, and alſo by the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, and by the moſt Part of the Nobility and learned Univerſities of Chriſtendom, and confirmed alſo by the ſundry Acts of Parliaments remaining yet in their Force, and thereby you juſtly made illegitimate and unheritable to the Crown Imperial of this Realm, and the Rules, and Dominions, and Poſſeſſions of the ſame, you will upon juſt Conſideration hereof, and of divers other Cauſes lawful to be alledged for the ſame, and for the juſt Inheritance of the right Line and godly Order taken by the late King our ſovereign Lord King Edward VI. and agreed upon by the Nobles and great Perſonages aforeſaid, ſurceaſe by any Pretence to vex and moleſt any of our ſovereign Lady Queen Jane her Subjects, from their true Faith and Allegiance due unto her Grace: Aſſuring you, that if you will for Reſpect ſhew yourſelf Quiet and Obedient (as you ought) you ſhall find us all and ſeveral ready to do you any Service that we with Duty may, and glad with your Quietneſs to preſerve the common State of this Realm, wherein you may be otherwiſe grievous unto us, to yourſelf, and to them. And thus we bid you moſt heartily well to fare.

Lady Mary accounted illegitimate.

All theſe Perſons aforeſaid, except the Duke of Northumberland and Sir John Gates, were afterwards by ſpecial Favour, or ſpecial or general Pardon diſcharged.

Lady Mary keepeth herſelf from the City of London.

Upon receiving this Anſwer, and thereby perceiving the Lords Minds, the Lady Mary makes haſte away privately far out of London, relying chiefly upon the Good-will of the Commons; but yet not altogether deſtitute of the ſecret Advertiſements of ſome of the Nobles. When the Council heard of her ſudden Departure, and perceived her Stoutneſs, and that Things went not as they expected, they ſpeedily gathered a Body of Men together, and pitched on the Duke of Suffolk for their Leader or General. But afterwards, changing their Minds, they thought it beſt to let the Duke of Suffolk keep the Tower where the Lord Guilford and the Lady Jane then lodged, and to ſend the Duke of Northumberland, with ſeveral other Lords and Gentlemen: In which Expedition, notwithſtanding the Guards were very unwilling to march at firſt, yet through the Perſuaſion and Importunity of the Lord Treaſurer, Maſter Chomley, and others, they were at length induced and prevailed on to aſſiſt the Duke, and to ſet forward with him.

The Duke of Northumberland ſent againſt Lady Mary.

Theſe Things thus agreed on, and the Duke being now ſet forward out of London after the beſt Manner, both with his Times and Journey preſcribed him by the Council, that he might not do any thing but upon Warrant; the Lady Mary in the mean while fatigued with travelling up and down, and conſidering where to fix moſt for her Advantage, withdrew herſelf at length into the Quarters of Norfolk and Suffolk, where, for ſubduing the Rebels in her Brother King Edward's Days, ſhe underſtood the Duke's Name was very much hated; and procuring to her Aid and Aſſiſtance as many of the Commons as ſhe could, ſhe kept herſelf cloſe in Fremingham Caſtle. And here reſorted firſt to her the Suffolk Men, who being always very forward in promoting the Proceedings of the Goſpel, promiſed her their Aid and Help, in caſe ſhe would not attempt the Alteration of the Religion, which by Laws and Orders publickly enacted, was before eſtabliſhed in her Brother King Edward's Days, and which was generally received by the Conſent of the whole Realm.

Suffolk Men ſide with the Lady Mary.

In ſhort, with this Condition ſhe readily complied, promiſing them faithfully that no Innovation ſhould be made in Religion, ſo that no Man at that Time miſtruſted her: Which Promiſe, if ſhe had as conſtantly kept as they did willingly preſerve her with their Bodies and Weapons, ſhe had acted worthy her Blood, and made her Reign more ſtable to herſelf through future Tranquillity; for let a Man be never ſo powerful, yet Breach of Promiſe is an ill Supporter of Quietneſs; Fear, worſe; but Cruelty worſt of all.

Lady Mary promiſeth faithfully that ſhe would not alter Religion.

Queen Mary's Breach of Promiſe.

But however, the Lady Mary being guarded and aſſiſted with the Power of the Proteſtants, vanquiſhed the Duke, and all thoſe that came along with him: In Conſideration whereof, upon the Suffolk Mens afterwards ſupplicating her Grace, and reminding her of performing her Promiſe, methinks the following Anſwer ſhe returned was very ſevere and ungrateful: Foraſmuch, ſaith ſhe, as you being but Members, deſire to rule your Head, you ſhall one Day well perceive that Members muſt obey their Head, and not look to bear Rule over the ſame. And not only ſo, but to ſtrike a greater Terror into others, a certain Gentleman near Windham Side, namely, one Mr. Dobbe, for the ſame Cauſe, that is, by advertizing her by humble Requeſt of her Promiſe, was puniſhed with ſtanding three Times in the Pillory, to be a common Gazing-ſtock to all Men. Divers others likewiſe delivered her Books and Supplications collected out of the Scripture, to exhort her to continue in the true Religion then eſtabliſhed, and for their Goodwill were impriſoned. But ſuch is the State and Condition of Human Nature, (as may here be plainly ſeen) that generally ſpeaking, we are always more ready to ſeek Friendſhip when we ſtand in need of Help, than to requite a Benefit that is once paſt and received. However, this may be Matter of great Comfort to all miſerable Creatures, that Equity and Fidelity are ever perfect with the Lord above, though the ſame be ſhut out of Doors in this World, and not to be found among Men.

Queen Mary's Anſwer to the Suffolk Men.

Mr. Dobbe pilloried.

But my Deſign being to write a Hiſtory, I ſhall chuſe to paſs by the Suffolk Men for a while, and proceed to conſider the contrary Side, the Duke of Northumberland; who, having his Warrant under the Broad Seal, with all his Furniture in Readineſs, proceeded on his March againſt the Lady Mary; but what made moſt for her Advantage, were the ſhort Journies aſſigned the Duke by his Commiſſion, which I took took Notice of before; for the longer the Duke lingred in his Journey, the Lady Mary's Army increaſed, the Hearts of the People being much inclined to her. Which, when the Council at London perceived, and underſtood how the common People began to withdraw from them to her, and likewiſe that certain Noblemen began ſo to do, they forthwith changed their Note, and proclaimed for Queen the Lady Mary, eldeſt Daughter to King Henry VIII. and appointed by Parliament to ſucceed King Edward, dying without Iſſue.

Lady Mary proclaimed Queen.

The Duke of Northumberland brought to the Tower as a Traitor.

And ſo the Duke of Northumberland, ſent againſt her by Advice of the Council, was left deſtitute and forſaken at Cambridge, with only ſome of his Sons, and a few others, as the Earl of Huntingdon for one; who were all arreſted, and brought to the Tower of London, as Traitors to the Crown.

Thus have ye the Lady Mary made Queen, and the Sword of Authority put into her Hand; which how ſhe afterwards uſed, may be plainly ſeen in the Sequel of this Book: For when ſhe had been thus advanced by means of the Proteſtants, and by conquering her Enemies, and ſending the Duke captive to the Tower, July 25, ſaw all Things quiet, ſhe followed not long after, being brought up to London the third of Auguſt, with the Rejoicing of ſome, the Fear of many, but probably with the Flattery of a far greater Number.

When ſhe came to London, ſhe firſt lodged at the Tower; where, a little before her coming, the Lady Jane, and her Huſband the Lord Guilford were impriſoned, where they remained almoſt five Months waiting her Pleaſure. But the Duke, within a Month after his coming to the Tower, was adjudged to Death, and brought forth to the Scaffold, and beheaded, notwithſtanding the Promiſe made him of his Life, (yea, tho' his Head were upon the Block) if he would but renounce his Religion and hear Maſs, which he accordingly did, and denied in Words that true Religion, which in the Days of Henry VIII. and Edward VI. he had frequently declared himſelf willing both to favour and further; alſo exhorting the People to return to the Catholick Faith, as he termed it: Whoſe Recantation the Papiſts forthwith publiſhed and ſpread abroad; rejoicing not a little at his Converſion, or rather Subverſion.

The Lady Jane and the Lord Guilford Priſoners in the Tower.

The Duke of Northumberland revokes his Religion in hopes of a Pardon.

The Duke of Northumberland, Sir John Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer beheaded.

Thus the Duke of Northumberland, with Sir John Gates and Sir Thomas Palmer, were put to Death, which laſt confeſſed his Faith that he had learned in the Goſpel, and lamented that he had not lived more conformable thereunto. In the mean Time, Queen Mary beginning her Reign with the Blood of theſe Men, and with hearing Maſs herſelf in the Tower, but more eſpecially with releaſing from thence Stephen Gardiner, gave plain Indication that ſhe would not perform what ſhe promiſed the Suffolk Men, concerning the not ſubverting or altering the State of Religion.

Beſides the Premiſes, there were other Things that followed, which every Day more and more diſcomforted the People, and which declared the Queen to bear no Good-will to the preſent State of Religion; as not only the releaſing of Gardiner, and making him Lord Chancellor of England, and Biſhop of Wincheſter, turning out Dr. Poynet; the making Bonner Biſhop of London, and diſplacing Dr. Ridley; alſo the promoting Dr. Day to the Biſhoprick of Chicheſter, putting out J. Scory; Dr. Tonſtal to the Biſhoprick of Durham; Dr. Heath to the Biſhoprick of Worceſter, and committing J. Hooper to the Fleet; Dr. Veſie made Biſhop of Exeter, and Miles Coverdale put out. All which Things cauſed great Trouble and Diſcontent to the Proteſtants; but on the contrary, as great Rejoicing to the Papiſts: In which Diverſity of Minds there was now to be ſeen a miſerable State of Things throughout the whole Realm; for they that could diſſemble cared not how Matters went; but ſuch as were Men of Conſcience perceived Coals to be already kindled, and which ſhould afterwards be the Deſtruction of many a true Chriſtian, as indeed it came to paſs. In the mean while Queen Mary, after theſe Beginnings, removed to Hampton-Court, and againſt the tenth of October next enſuing, cauſed a Parliament to be ſummoned, of which more ſhall be ſpoken hereafter.

Anno 1553.

Proteſtant Biſhops diſplaced.

A Parliament ſummoned.

Thus have ye heard how divers Biſhops were removed, and others placed in their Room; amongſt whom was Dr. Ridley Biſhop of London, a worthy Man, pious and learned, who in the Time of Queen Jane, by order of the Council, preached a Sermon at Paul's-Croſs, declaring therein his Opinion concerning the Lady Mary, and diſſwading them by alledging the Inconveniencies that might ariſe by admitting her to the Crown, propheſying, as it were, before, that which afterwards came to paſs, namely, that ſhe would bring in a foreign Power to Reign over them, and ſubvert the Chriſtian Religion then happily eſtabliſh'd; ſhewing moreover, that the Lady Mary, being in his Dioceſe, he, according to his Duty, as being then her Ordinary, had done his Endeavour to reduce her to this Religion, and notwithſtanding in all other Points of Civility ſhe ſhewed herſelf gentle and tractable, yet in Matters that concern'd true Faith and Doctrine, ſhe appeared perverſe and obſtinate; that he could conceive no other Hopes of her, but that ſhe would diſturb and overturn all that had been planted and confirm'd with ſo much Induſtry in the Reign of her Brother King Edward. Soon after this Sermon was preached, the Lady Mary was proclaimed Queen, whereupon Dr. Ridley forthwith repaired to ſalute her at Fremingham Caſtle, where he met with cold Entertainment, and being deprived of all his Dignity, was ſent back to the Tower.

Biſhop Ridley preacheth.

The Sunday following Mr. Rogers preached, diſcourſing very learnedly on the Goſpel for the Day: Whereupon Queen Mary perceiving Things not to go forward according to her Mind, ſhe forthwith conſulted with her Council how to bring about by other Means what by open Law ſhe could not well accompliſh; and accordingly directed forth an Inhibition by Proclamation, that no Man ſhould preach or read openly the Word of God in Churches, and ſeveral other Things inhibited in the ſame Proclamation, the Copy whereof here followeth.

Mr. Rogers preacheth.

An Inhibition of the Queen for preaching, printing, &c.

'THE Queen's Highneſs well Remembering what great Inconveniencies and Dangers have grown to this her Highneſs's Realm in Times paſt, through the Diverſity of Opinions in Queſtion of Religion, and hearing alſo that now of late, ſince the beginning of her moſt gracious Reign, the ſame Contentions be again much revived, through certain falſe and untrue Reports and Rumours ſpread by ſome light and evil diſpoſed Perſons, hath thought Auguſt 18.

Anno 1553. Queen Mary beginneth to ſet forth her Popiſh Religion. Religion here grounded upon the Queen's good Will.

'thought good to do to underſtand, to all her 'Highneſs's moſt loving Subjects, her moſt 'gracious Pleaſure in Manner following.

'Firſt, her Majeſty, being preſently by the 'only Goodneſs of God ſettled in her juſt Poſ-'ſeſſion of the Imperial Crown of this Realm, 'and other Dominions thereunto belonging, 'cannot now hide that Religion which God and 'the World knoweth ſhe hath ever profeſſed 'from her Infancy hitherto. Which as her 'Majeſty is minded to obſerve and maintain for 'herſelf by God's Grace, during her Time, ſo 'doth her Highneſs much deſire, and would 'be glad the ſame were of all her Subjects 'quietly and charitably embraced.

'And yet ſhe doth ſignify unto all her Ma-'jeſty's loving Subjects, that of her moſt gracious Diſpoſition and Clemency, her Highneſs 'mindeth not to compel any her ſaid Subjects 'thereunto, until ſuch Time as further Order 'by common Aſſent may be taken therein: 'Forbidding nevertheleſs all her Subjects of all 'Degrees, at their Perils, to move Seditions, or 'ſtir Unquietneſs in her People, by interpreting 'the Laws of this Realm after their Brains and 'Fantaſies, but quietly to continue for the Time 'till (as before is ſaid) further Order may be 'taken, and therefore willeth and ſtraitly 'chargeth and commandeth all her ſaid good 'loving Subjects, to live together in quiet Sort, 'and Chriſtian Charity, leaving thoſe new 'found deviliſh Terms of Papiſt or Heretick, 'and ſuch like, and applying their whole Care, 'Study and Travel, to live in the Fear of God, 'exerciſing their Converſations in ſuch charita-'ble and godly Doing, as their Lives may in-'deed expreſs that great Hunger and Thirſt of 'God's Glory and Holy Word, which by raſh 'Talk and Words many have pretended: And 'in ſo doing they ſhall beſt pleaſe God, and 'live without Danger of the Laws, and main-'tain the Tranquillity of the Realm. Whereof 'as her Highneſs ſhall be moſt glad, ſo if any 'Man ſhall raſhly preſume to make any Aſſem-'blies of People, or at any publick Aſſemblies, 'or otherwiſe, ſhall go about to ſtir the Peo-'ple to Diſorder or Diſquiet, ſhe mindeth ac-'cording to her Duty, to ſee the ſame moſt ſe-'verely reformed and puniſhed according to her 'Highneſs's Laws.

Terms of Papiſt and Heretick forbidden.

False ſurmiſes againſt true Preachers, Printers, and Players.

'And furthermore, foraſmuch as it is alſo 'well known, that Sedition and falſe Rumours 'have been nouriſhed and maintained in this 'Realm, by the Subtilty and Malice of ſome 'Evil diſpoſed Perſons, which take upon them 'without ſufficient Authority to preach and to 'interpret the Word of God after their own 'Brain in Churches and other Places both pub-'lick and private, and alſo by playing of Inter-'ludes, and Printing of falſe found Books, 'Ballads, Rhimes, and other lewd Treaties in 'the Engliſh Tongue, concerning Doctrine in 'Matters now in Queſtion and Controverſy, 'touching the high Points and Myſteries of the 'Chriſtian Religion; which Books, Ballads, 'Rhimes, and Treatiſes, are chiefly by the 'Printers and Stationers ſet out to Sale to her 'Grace's Subjects, of an evil Zeal, for Lucre 'and Covetouſneſs of vile Gain: Her Highneſs 'therefore ſtraitly chargeth and commandeth all 'and every of her ſaid Subjects, of whatſoever 'State, Condition, or Degree they be, that none 'of them preſume from henceforth to preach, 'or by way of reading in Churches, or other 'publick or private Places, except in Schools 'of the Univerſity, to interpret or teach any

'Scriptures, or any Manner of Points of Do-'ctrine concerning Religion, neither alſo to 'print any Books, Matter, Ballad, Rhime, In-'terlude, Proceſs or Treatiſe, nor to play any 'Interlude, except they have her Grace's ſpecial 'Licence in Writing for the ſame, upon Pain 'to incur her Highneſs's Indignation and Diſ-'pleaſure.

'And her Highneſs alſo further chargeth and 'commandeth all and every her ſaid Subjects, 'that none of them of their own Authority do 'preſume to puniſh, and to riſe againſt any 'Offender in the Cauſes aboveſaid, or any other 'Offender in Words or Deeds, in the late Re-'bellion committed or done by the Duke of 'Northumberland, or his Complices, or to ſeize 'any of their Goods, or violently to uſe any 'ſuch Offender by ſtriking, or impriſoning, or 'threatning the ſame, but wholly to refer the 'Puniſhment of all ſuch Offenders unto her 'Highneſs and Publick Authority, whereof her 'Majeſty mindeth to ſee due Puniſhment ac-'cording to the Order of her Highneſs's Laws.

'Nevertheleſs, as her Highneſs mindeth not 'hereby to reſtrain and diſcourage any of her 'loving Subjects, to give from Time to Time 'true Information againſt any ſuch Offenders in 'the Cauſes aboveſaid, unto her Grace or Coun-'cil, for the Puniſhment of every ſuch Offen-'der, according to the Effect of her Highneſs's 'Laws provided in that Part: So her ſaid 'Highneſs exhorteth and ſtraitly chargeth her 'ſaid Subjects to obſerve her Commandment 'and Pleaſure in every Part aforeſaid, as they 'will avoid her Highneſs's ſaid Indignation and 'moſt grievous Diſpleaſure. The Severity and 'Rigour whereof as her Highneſs ſhall be moſt 'ſorry to have Cauſe to put in Execution: So 'doth ſhe utterly determine not to permit ſuch 'unlawful and rebellious Doings of her Subjects, 'whereof may enſue the Danger of her Royal 'Eſtate, to remain unpuniſhed, but to ſee her 'ſaid Laws touching theſe Points to be through-'ly executed: Which Extremities ſhe truſteth 'all her ſaid Subjects will foreſee, dread, and 'avoid accordingly: Her ſaid Highneſs ſtraitly 'charging and commanding all Mayors, She-'riffs, Juſtices of Peace, Bailiffs, Conſtables, 'and all other publick Officers and Miniſters, 'diligently to ſee to the obſerving and executing 'of her ſaid Commandments and Pleaſure, and 'to apprehend all ſuch as ſhall wilfully offend 'in this Part, committing the ſame to the next 'Jail, there to remain without Bail or Main-'prize, till upon Certificate made to her High-'neſs, or her Privy Council, of their Names 'and Doings; and upon Examination had of 'ther Offences, ſome further Order ſhall be ta-'ken for their Puniſhment to the Example of 'others, according to the Effect and Tenor of 'the Laws aforeſaid.

Given at our Manor of Richmond, the 18*th Day of* Auguſt, in the firſt Year of our moſt proſperous Reign.

M. Bourn's Sermon at Paul's-Croſs, Auguſt 13.

About this Time, one Mr. Bourn, a Canon of Paul's, who was afterwards made Biſhop of Bath, was appointed by Bonner, then Biſhop of London, to preach at Paul's Croſs; and he taking Occaſion from the Goſpel of the Day, largely to juſtify Bonner then preſent; by ſaying, that Day four Years Bonner had preach'd upon the ſame Text, and in the ſame Place, and was thereupon moſt cruelly and unjuſtly caſt into the moſt vile Dungeon of the Marſhalſea, and there kept during King Edward's Reign; his Words had ſuch an ill Effect upon his Auditors, that they could not keep Silence, but began to murmur and ſtir in ſuch Sort, that the Mayor and Aldermen with other Eſtates then preſent, were much afraid of an Uproar: Nay, one hurled a Dagger at the Preacher, but who it was could not be proved then, although it was afterwards known.

In ſhort the Tumult was ſo great, that the Preacher pluck'd in his Head, and durſt no more appear in that Place; for the Matter of his Sermon tended much to the Diſpraiſe of King Edward, which the People could in no wiſe endure.

Mr. John Bradford appeaſeth the People.

Then Mr. Bradford, at the Requeſt of the Preacher's Brother, and others, then being in the Pulpit, ſtood forth, and ſpoke ſo mildly and effectually, that with a few Words he pacified and appeaſed all. And afterwards he and Mr. Rogers conducted the Preacher from the Pulpit to the Grammar-School Door, where they left him ſafe. But not long after they were both rewarded with long Impriſonment, and at laſt with Fire in Smithfield.

Bradford and Rogers guarded the preacher.

By reaſon of this Tumult at Paul's Croſs, there was an Order forthwith diſpatched from the Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Aldermen of London, that they ſhould call a common Council the next Day, and thereby charge every Houſholder, to cauſe their Children, Apprentices, and other Servants, to keep their own Pariſh-Churches upon Holy-Days, and not to ſuffer their attempting in the leaſt to violate or diſturb the common Peace; willing them likewiſe to ſignify to the ſaid Aſſembly the Queen's Determination uttered unto them Auguſt 12. by her Highneſs in the Tower; which was this, that notwithſtanding her Majeſty's Conſcience was ſatisfied as to Matters of Religion, yet ſhe graciouſly meant not to compel or force the Conſciences of others, only hoping God, through opening his Word to them by godly, virtuous, and learned Preachers, would ſo guide and direct them, as to bring them to be of the like Religion with herſelf.

Alſo it was then ordered, that every Alderman in his Ward ſhould forthwith ſend for the Curates of every Pariſh within their Liberties, and warn them not only to forbear preaching themſelves, but likewiſe not to ſuffer any other to preach, or make any open or ſolemn Reading of Scripture in their Churches, unleſs the ſaid Preachers were ſeverally licenſed by the Queen.

Moreover, after the Sermon at Paul's Croſs aforeſaid, the next Day after it was ſo ordered, that the Queen's Guard came to the Croſs to attend the Preacher. And when Men withdrew themſelves from the Sermon, Order was taken by the Mayor, that the Antients of all Companies ſhould be preſent, leſt the Preacher ſhould be diſcouraged by his ſmall Auditory.

August, 1553.

Auguſt 5. 1553. one William Rutler was committed to the Marſhalſea by the Council, for ſpeaking certain Words againſt Mr. Bourn, for his Sermon at Paul's Croſs the Sunday before.

Aug. 16. Humphry Palden was committed to the Compter, for Words againſt the ſaid Bourn's Sermon at Paul's Croſs.

A Letter was ſent to the Sheriffs of Buckingham and Bedford, for apprehending one Fiſher, Parſon of Amerſham.

Fiſher.

Another Letter to the Biſhop of Norwich, not to ſuffer any Preacher or other, to preach or expound the Scripture publickly, without ſpecial Licenſe from the Queen. Anno 1553.

The ſame Day Mr. Bradford, Vernon and Beacon, Preachers, were committed to the Charge of the Lieutenant of the Tower. Bradford, Vernon and Beacon.

The ſame Day likewiſe Mr. John Rogers was commanded to keep himſelf Priſoner in his own Houſe, without converſing with any other but thoſe of his own Houſhold. John Rogers.

Aug. 22. Two Letters were directed to Mr. Coverdale Biſhop of Exeter, and Mr. Hooper Biſhop of Glouceſter, for them to repair forthwith to the Court, and there to attend the Council's Pleaſure. Coverdale and Hooper.

The ſame Day Parſon Fiſher of Amerſham appeared before the Council, according to their Letter of Auguſt 16, and was ordered to bring a Copy of his Sermon the next Day.

Aug. 24, one John Melvin a Preacher, and a Scotchman, was ſent to Newgate in London by the Council. John Melvin.

Aug. 28, there was a Letter ſent to the Mayor of Coventry and his Brethren, for the apprehending of one Symonds, Vicar of St. Michael's in Coventry, and for ſending him up to the Council, with his Examinations, and other Matters they could charge him with, with Commiſſion likewiſe to puniſh all ſuch, as by means of his preaching had at that Time talked againſt the Queen's Proceedings. Symonds.

Aug. 26. Mr. Hooper Biſhop of Worceſter appeared before the Council.

Aug. 31. Mr. Coverdale Biſhop of Exeter appeared before the Council, according to their Letters of the 22d.

September, 1553.

September 1. Mr. Hooper and Mr. Coverdale appeared again before the Council, from whence Mr. Hooper was committed to the Fleet, and Mr. Coverdale ordered to attend the Lords Pleaſure.

Sept. 2. Mr. Hugh Symonds Vicar of St. Michael's in Coventry, was before the Council for a Sermon, and commanded to appear again the Monday following.

Sept. 4. A Letter was directed from the Council to Mr. Hugh Latimer, for his appearing before them.

The ſame Year, about the 5th Day of September, Peter Martyr came to London from Oxford, where for a Time he had been commanded to keep his Houſe, and found there the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who offered to defend the Book of Common Prayer, both by the Scriptures and the Fathers, aſſiſted by Peter Martyr and others, as will hereafter appear. But whilſt they were in Hopes of coming to a Diſputation, the Archbiſhop and the others were impriſon'd, and Peter Martyr permitted to return from whence he came.

The ſame Day a Letter was ſent to the Mayor of Coventry with orders to ſet Hugh Symonds at Liberty, if he would recant his Sermon, otherwiſe to detain him, and give Notice thereof to the Council.

September 13, Mr. Hugh Latimer appeared before the Council, according to their Letter of the 4th, and was committed cloſe Priſoner to the Tower, attended by his Servant Auſtin.

The ſame Day the Archbiſhop of Canterbury appeared before the Council, and was ordered to attend them the next Day in the Afternoon in the Star-Chamber.

September 14, The Archbiſhop of Canterbury accordingly made his Appearance before the Lords in Anno 1553. in the Star-Chamber; where, being charged with Treaſon, and with diſtributing ſeditious Bills, to the Diſturbance of the State, he was immediately committed to the Tower of London, there to remain till further Juſtice and Order, at the Queen's Pleaſure.

September 15, A Letter was ſent to Mr. Horn, Dean of Durham, commanding him to appear before them; and October 7, another was ſent to haſten his Appearance.

September 16, Letters were ſent to the Mayors of Dover and Rye, to permit all French Proteſtants to paſs out of this Realm, except thoſe whoſe Names ſhall be ſignified to them by the French Ambaſſador.

OCTOBER, 1553.

October 1. Q. Mary crowned. October 1, Queen Mary was crowned at Weſtminſter, and the 10th Day of the ſame Month the Parliament began with a ſolemn Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt, in the Popiſh Manner, celebrated with great Pomp in the Palace of Weſtminſter, where, according to Cuſtom, the Lords the Biſhops that remained yet undepoſed, were to be preſent among the other Lords; which were the Arch-biſhop of York, Dr. Taylor Biſhop of Lincoln, and John Harley, Biſhop of Hereford; but when the Biſhops, Dr. Taylor and Mr. Harley preſented themſelves according to their Duty, and had taken their Places amongſt the Lords, upon ſeeing Maſs begin they immediately withdrew from the Company, as not enduring the Sight thereof; for which Cauſe the Biſhop of Lincoln being examined, and proteſting his Faith, was commanded to attend; not long after which he died at Ankerwike; and Mr. Harley, for being married, was excluded both from the Parliament and his Biſhoprick.

October 10. The Parliament beginneth with a Maſs.

Two Biſhops withdrew themſelves from the Sight of the Maſs.

Mr. Harley Biſhop of Hereford put out of his Biſhoprick.

Maſs being ended, the Queen, accompanied with the Eſtates of the Realm, was brought into the Parliament Houſe, there, according to Cuſtom, to enter upon, and begin a Conſultation; at which Conſultation all Statutes were repealed that were made in the Reign of King Henry VIII. for Reformation; and Statutes made in Edward VI. Time, for adminiſtring the Common Prayer and Sacrament in the Engliſh Tongue: And further, the Attainder of the Duke of Northumberland was by this Parliament confirmed.

Statutes of Premunire repealed.

Altars and Maſſes erected.

In the mean while ſeveral were very forward in erecting Altars and Maſſes in Churches; and ſuch as were for adhering to the Laws made in the Time of King Edward, till others ſhould be eſtabliſhed, were either mark'd, or preſently apprehended, among whom was Sir James Hales, Knt. of Kent, and Juſtice of the Common-Pleas; one, that notwithſtanding he had ventured his Life in Queen Mary's Cauſe, by not ſubſcribing to the diſinheriting her by the King's Will, yet, becauſe at a Quarter-Seſſions he gave a Charge upon the Statutes made in the Reigns of King Henry VIII. and Edward VI. for the Supremacy and Religion, he was therefore impriſoned in the Marſhalſea, Compter, and Fleet, and ſo cruelly handled and terrified by the Talk that the Warden of the Fleet uſed to have in his hearing, of the Torments as were preparing for Hereticks (or for what other Cauſe God only knows) that he intended to diſpatch himſelf with a Knife; and afterwards was willing to ſay what they deſired him, whereupon he was diſcharged; but never afterwards reſted till he drowned himſelf in a River, about Half a Mile from his own Houſe in Kent; of whom more will be ſaid hereafter.

The Troubles of Judge Hales.

During the Time of this Parliament, the Clergy likewiſe, after their uſual manner, had a Convocation, with a Diſputation alſo, appointed by the Queen's Command, to be held at Paul's Church in London, about the 18th of October. In this Convocation Mr. John Harpſfield, Batchelor of Divinity, made a Sermon AD CLERUM. After Sermon, it was aſſigned by the Biſhops, that they of the Clergy Houſe, for avoiding Confuſion of Words, ſhould chuſe them a Prolocutor. To which Office Dr. Weſton, Dean of Weſtminſter, was choſe by common Aſſent, and preſented to the Biſhops with an Oration of Mr. Pie, Dean of Chicheſter; and alſo of Mr. Wimbiſley, Arch-deacon of London. Dr. Weſton being choſe, and brought to the Biſhops, made his Gratulatory Oration to the Houſe, and was anſwered with another by Biſhop Bonner.

The Convocation begun.

Oration of Mr. Pie and Mr. Wimbiſley, of Dr. Weſton and of Biſhop Bonner, in the Convocation Houſe.

They proceeded next to the Diſputation, appointed as is aboveſaid by the Queen's Commandment, about the Matter of the Sacrament; which Diſputation continued ſix Days, wherein Dr. Weſton was chief on the Pope's Part, who behaved himſelf outragiouſly in taunting and checking. In fine, ſuch as diſputed on the contrary Part, were driven ſome to flee, ſome to deny, ſome to die, though to moſt Mens Judgments that heard the Diſputation, they had the upper hand, as may here appear by the Report of the ſaid Diſputation, the Copy whereof we thought fit here to annex as followeth.

The true Report of the Diſputation had and begun in the Convocation Houſe at London, Oct. 18, 1553.

WHereas divers and uncertain Rumours be ſpread abroad of the Diſputation had in the Convocation Houſe, to the Intent that all Men may know the Certainty of all Things therein done and ſaid, as much as the Memory of him that was preſent thereat can bear away, he hath thought good, at requeſt, throughly to deſcribe what was ſaid therein on both Parties, of the Matters argued and had in queſtion, and of the Entrance thereof.

The FIRST Day's Act.

October 18. Dr. Weſton, Prolocutor, againſt the Book of Catechiſm ſet forth in King Edward's Time.

Upon Wedneſday, October 18, in the Afternoon, Dr. Weſton, the Prolocutor, firſt certified the Houſe, that it was the Queen's Pleaſure that the Company of the ſame Houſe being learned Men aſſembled, ſhould debate Matters of Religion, and for that End conſtitute Laws, which her Grace and the Parliament would ratify. And becauſe (ſaid he) there was a Book lately publiſhed, called the Catechiſm, which he ſhewed forth, bearing the Name of this honourable Synod, and yet put forth without your Conſents, as I have learned, being a Book very peſtiferous, and full of Hereſies; and likewiſe an abominable Book of Common Prayer (as he pleaſed to call it) I thought it beſt therefore firſt to begin with the Articles of the Catechiſm, concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, for confirming the natural Preſence of Chriſt in the ſame, and alſo Tranſubſtantiation. Wherefore (ſaid he) it ſhall be lawful on Friday next enſuing, for all Men freely to ſpeak their Conſcience in theſe Matters, that all Doubts may be removed, and they fully ſatisfied therein.

Two Bills exhibited in the Convocation Houſe by the Prolocutor.

The SECOND Day's Act.

The Friday coming, being October 20, when it was expected they ſhould have entred into Diſpu-

Diſputation of the Queſtions propoſed, the Prolocutor exhibiting two Bills to the Houſe, the one for the natural Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar, and the other concerning the Catechiſm, that it was not publiſhed by the Conſent of that Houſe, and that they did not agree thereunto, requiring all them to ſubſcribe to the ſame as he himſelf had done. Whereunto the whole Houſe accordingly aſſented, except ſix, viz. the Dean of Rocheſter, the Dean of Exeter, the Archdeacon of Wincheſter, Archdeacon of Hereford, Arch-deacon of Stow, and one more. And while the reſt were about ſubſcribing to theſe two Articles, John Philpot ſtood up and ſpoke firſt concerning the Articles of the Catechiſm, that he thought they were deceived in the Title of the Catechiſm, for that it bore the Title of the Synod before this, altho' as to publiſhing thereof ſeveral of them then preſent were not made privy thereunto; and that becauſe this Houſe had granted Authority to certain Perſons appointed by the King's Majeſty to make Eccleſiaſtical Laws; and whatſoever Eccleſiaſtical Laws were thereupon publiſhed by the Authority of them, or the major Part of them, according to a Statute in that Behalf made and provided, it might well be ſaid to be done by the Conſent of the Synod of London, notwithſtanding ſuch as were Members of this Houſe now had no Notice thereof before the Promulgation. And therefore in this Point he thought the Publiſher thereof had not in the leaſt ſlandered the Houſe, as they by their Subſcriptions were endeavouring to perſuade the World, ſince they had one ſynodal Authority for impowering them to make ſuch ſpiritual Laws, as they thought convenient and neceſſary.

Philips, Haddon, Philpot, Cheyney, Elmar, and one other, refuſed to ſubſcribe to the Bills.

The Catechiſm vindicated by Philpot,

And moreover he ſaid, that as to the Article of the natural Preſence in the Sacrament, it was both contrary to Reaſon and Learning, and likewiſe very prejudicial to Truth, for Men to be moved to Subſcribe before the Matter was thoroughly examined and diſcuſſed. But when he ſaw his Allegations were to no purpoſe, being like a Man aſtoniſhed at ſo many antient learned Men being purpoſely aſſembled to maintain old Traditions preferable to the Truth of God's Holy Word, he made it his Requeſt to the Prolocutor, that whereas on that Side there were preſent ſo many learned Men, as the like were not to be found again in the whole Realm, and that on the other Side, of thoſe that had not ſubſcribed there were not above five or ſix, and they far inferior to them both in Age and Learning: In order therefore that there might be an Equality of Perſons concerned in this Diſputation, he deſired that the Prolocutor would intercede with the Lords, that ſome of thoſe Men that were learned, and occaſioned the publiſhing of the Catechiſm aforeſaid, might be admitted into the Houſe to ſhew their Learning that moved them to ſet forth the ſame, and that Dr. Ridley and Mr. Rogers, with two or three more, might have the Liberty of being preſent at this Diſputation, and Aſſociating with them.

againſt the Article of Natural Preſence.

Philpot's Requeſt to the Prolocutor.

This Requeſt was thought reaſonable, and was therefore propoſed to the Biſhops, who returned this Anſwer; That it was out of their Power to call ſuch Perſons to the Houſe, ſince ſome of them were Priſoners; but they ſaid, they would petition the Council in this Behalf, and in Caſe any of them were abſent that ought to be of the Houſe, they were for their being admitted as they deſired. After this, they minding to have entered into Diſputation, there came a Gentleman with a Meſſage from the Lord great Maſter, ſignifying unto the Prolocutor, that the Lord great Maſter and the Earl of Devonſhire would be preſent at the Diſputations, and therefore he deferred the ſame till Monday, at one of the Clock in the Afternoon. Anno 1553.

The Third Day's Act.

Upon Monday, Octob. 23. at the Time appointed, in Preſence of many Earls, Lords, Knights, Gentlemen, and ſeveral others both of the Court and City, the Prolocutor made a Proteſtation, that the Members of that Houſe had appointed this Diſputation, not to call in Queſtion the Truth, whereunto they had all ſubſcribed already except five or ſix, but that thoſe Gainſayers might be reſolved of their Arguments in which they ſtood, not doubting but they will alſo come over to us. The third Seſſion.

Then he demanded of Mr. Haddon, whether he would reaſon againſt the Queſtions propoſed, or not; to whom he anſwered, that he had certified him before in Writing that he would not, ſince they could not have ſuch Men for their Aſſiſtants as they deſired. Mr. Elmar, likewiſe was aſked the ſame Queſtion, who returned the ſame Anſwer to the Prolocutor; adding moreover, that they had done too much Prejudice already to the Truth, to ſubſcribe before the Matter was diſcuſſed; and it would ſignify little or nothing to reaſon for the Truth, ſince they were now determined to the contrary. After this he demanded of Mr. Cheyney, who, the Prolocutor ſaid, allowed the Preſence with them, (but upon certain Authorities whereon he ſtandeth, and in which he deſires to be reſolved, as you ſhall hear, denied Tranſubſtantiation) whether he would propoſe his Doubts concerning Tranſubſtantiation. To which he replied, yea, I ſhould be glad my Doubts were reſolved, that move me to diſbelieve Tranſubſtantiation. Haddon and Elmar refuſed to Anſwer unleſs their Requeſt were granted.

Mr Cheyney Archdeacon of Hereford.

The Firſt is out of St. Paul to the Corinthians, who ſpeaking of the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, frequently calls it Bread after Conſecration. Cheyney's Doubts concerning Tranſubſtantiation.

The Second is out of Origen, who ſpeaking of this Sacrament, ſaith, that the material Part thereof goeth down to the Excrements.

The Third is out of Theodoretus, who ſpeaking of the ſacramental Bread and Wine after Conſecration, ſaith, that they go not out of their former Subſtance, Form and Shape. Theſe among ſeveral others, are the Doubts I require to be anſwered.

Then the Prolocutor aſſigned Dr. Moreman to anſwer him, who, to St. Paul, anſwered him thus: That the Sacrament is called by him Bread indeed; but it is thus to be underſtood, that it is the Sacrament of Bread, that is, the Form of Bread. Moreman's Anſwer.

Then Mr. Cheyney inferred and alledged, that Heſychius called the Sacrament both Bread and Fleſh. Cheyney's Reply.

Yea, reply'd Moreman, Heſychius calleth it Bread, becauſe it was Bread, not becauſe it is ſo. And paſſing over Origen, he came to Theodoretus, and ſaid, that Men miſtook his Authority, by interpreting a general into a ſpecial, as Peter Martyr hath done in the place of Theodoret, taking the Greek Word that ſignifies Subſtance in its ſpecial Signification, whereas in the general it may be apply'd to Accidents as well as Subſtance; and therefore I anſwer Theodoret thus, That the ſacramental Bread and Wine do not Moreman's Anſwer.

not go out of their former Subſtance, Form and Shape, that is, not out of their accidental Subſtance and Shape.

Mr. Elmar argueth againſt Dr. Moreman's Anſwer.

After this Mr. Cheyney ſat down, and Mr. Elmar (a Man that could not endure to hear ſo weak and childiſh an Anſwer to ſo grave an Authority) ſtood up and diſputed upon the Authority before alledged by Mr. Cheyney, and declared that Moreman's Anſwer to Theodoret was no juſt or ſufficient Anſwer, but an Illuſion and ſubtle Evaſion, contrary to Theodoret's Meaning. For if the Greek Word that ſignifies Subſtance, ſaid he, ſhould, in the Place alledged, be taken for Accident, as it is anſwered by Moreman, then were it a Word ſuperfluous in Theodoret there, where there are two other Greek Words, which ſufficiently expound the Accidents of the Bread, and in Engliſh ſignify Shape and Form; and ſo he proved out of the ſame Author, by divers Allegations, that the Greek Word that ſignify'd Subſtance in Theodoret, could not be ſo generally taken in that Place, as Moreman, for a Shift, would have it. But Moreman, as a Man having no other Salve for that Sore, affirmeth ſtill, that the Greek Word which ſignify'd Subſtance, muſt needs ſignify Accidental Subſtance properly. To whoſe Importunity, ſince he could have no better Anſwer, Elmar, wearied with his Obſtinacy, gave Place.

Philpot's Replication to Moreman.

Then John Philpot ſtood up, and ſaid, that he could prove from the Matter Theodoret handled in the Place before alledged, and the Similitude which he makes uſe of for proving his Purpoſe, Moreman's Interpretation of the Greek Word that there ſignify'd Subſtance, was by no means to be taken for an accidental Subſtance, as for a Shift he would interpret it to be. For the Matter Theodoret diſcourſeth of in that Place, is againſt the Heretick Eutiches, who denied two Natures of Subſtance to remain in Chriſt, being but one Perſon; and that his Humanity, after the Accompliſhment of the Myſtery of our Salvation, aſcending into Heaven, and being joined to the Divinity, was abſorpt or ſwallowed up of the ſame; ſo that, according to his Opinion, Chriſt was no more but of one Divine Subſtance only; againſt which Opinion Theodoret writeth, and by the Similitude of the Sacrament proveth the contrary againſt this Heretick: That like as in the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt after the Conſecration, there is the Subſtance of Chriſt's Humanity, with the Subſtance of Bread remaining as it was before, not being abſorpt by the Humanity of Chriſt, but by Divine Operation joined thereunto; even ſo in the Perſon of Chriſt, being now in Heaven, of whom this Sacrament is a Repreſentation; there be two ſeveral Subſtances, that is, his Humanity and Divinity united in one Hypoſtaſy or Perſon, which is Chriſt, the Humanity not being abſorp'd by the Conjunction of the Divinity, but remaining in its former Subſtance.

The Place of Theodoret falſly taken by the Papiſts.

And this Similitude, ſaith Philpot, brought by Theodoret to confound Eutiches, would prove nothing at all, if the very Subſtance of the ſacramental Bread remained not as it did before. But if Dr. Moreman's Interpretation might take Place for Tranſubſtantiation, then by Theodoret's Authority ſo taken, would the Heretick have a ſtrong Argument to maintain his Hereſy, and to prove himſelf an Orthodox Chriſtian, and might well ſay to Theodoret thus; Like as thou Theodoret, if thou wert of Dr. Moreman's Mind, doth ſay, that after the Conſecration in the Sacrament, the Subſtance of the Bread is abſorpt or tranſubſtantiated into the human Body of Chriſt coming thereunto, ſo that in the Sacrament there is but one Subſtance of the Humanity alone, and not the Subſtance of Bread as it was before; even ſo likewiſe may I affirm, and conclude by thine own Similitude, that the Humanity aſcending up by the Power of God into Heaven, and adjoined unto the Deity, was by the Might thereof abſorpt and turned into one Subſtance with the Deity; ſo that now there remaineth but one divine Subſtance in Chriſt, no more than in the ſacramental Signs of the Lord's Supper, after the Conſecration, doth remain any more than one Subſtance, according to your Belief and Conſtruction.

In anſwering to this Dr. Moreman ſtaggered, which Philpot well perceiving, ſpake on this wiſe; Well, Maſter Moreman, if you have no Anſwer at this preſent ready, I pray you conſider of one, if you can conveniently, againſt our next Meeting here again.

Dr. Weſton offended.

With that his Saying the Prolocutor was grievouſly offended, telling him that he ſhould not brag there, but that he ſhould be fully anſwered. Then ſaid Philpot, it is the Thing that I only deſire, to be anſwered directly in this Behalf; and I deſire of you, and of all the Houſe here preſent, that I may be ſufficiently anſwered, which I am ſure you are not able to do, taking Theodoret's Authority and Similitude as he ought to be taken. Whereupon, without any further Anſwer to Philpot's Reaſoning, he was commanded to be ſilent.

Philpot's Reply anſwer'd by commanding him to be ſilent.

Then the Dean of Rocheſter ſtood up, offering himſelf to diſpute againſt the natural Preſence, wiſhing that the Scripture, and the antient Doctors, might be weighed, believed, and followed in this Point. And againſt this natural Preſence, he thought that Saying of Chriſt in St. Matthew was a ſufficient Argument, if Men would credit and follow Scripture; where ſpeaking of himſelf, he ſays, That the Poor we ſhould have always with us, but him we ſhould not have always: Which, quoth he, was ſpoken concerning the natural Preſence of Chriſt's Body, and therefore we ought to believe as he hath taught us, That Chriſt is not naturally preſent on Earth in the Sacrament of the Altar.

Weſton's Anſwer to the Dean of Rocheſter.

To this he was anſwered by the Prolocutor, That we ſhould not have Chriſt preſent always to exerciſe Alms Deeds upon him, but upon the Poor.

The Dean's Reply. St. Auguſtine on the real Preſence.

But the Dean proſecuted his Argument, and ſhewed it out of St. Auguſtin further, that the ſame Interpretation of the Scripture alledged was no ſufficient Anſwer, who in the 50th Treatiſe of St. John ſpeaketh thus on the ſame Sentence: ‘When as he ſaid (ſaith St. Auguſtin) Me ye ‘ſhall not have always with you, he ſpake of ‘the Preſence of his Body. For by his Majeſty, ‘by his Providence, by his unſpeakable and in‘viſible Grace, that is fulfilled which is ſaid of ‘him, Behold I am with you until the Conſum‘mation of the World. But in the Fleſh which ‘the Word took upon him, in that which was ‘born of the Virgin, in that which was appre‘hended by the Jews, which was crucified on ‘the Croſs, which was let down from the Croſs, ‘which was wrapped in Clouts, which was hid ‘in the Sepulchre, which was manifeſted in the ‘Reſurrection, you ſhall not have me always ‘with you. And why? For after a bodily ‘Preſence he was converſant with his Diſciples ‘forty Days, and they accompanying him, ſee‘ing and not following him, he aſcended and ‘is not here; for there he ſitteth at the Right 'Hand of the Father; and yet here he is, be-

'cauſe he is not departed in the Preſence of his
'Majeſty. After another Manner we have Chriſt
'always by the Preſence of his Majeſty, but af-
'ter the Preſence of his Fleſh it is rightly ſaid,
'You ſhall not verily have me always with you.
'For the Church had him in the Preſence of his
'Fleſh a few Days, and now by Faith it appre-
'hendeth him, and ſeeth him not with Eyes.'

Watſon's Anſwer to St. Auguſtine. To this Authority Dr. Watſon anſwer'd, and ſaid, he would anſwer St. Auguſtin by St. Auguſtin, and having a certain Book in his Hand of Notes, he alledged out of the 70th Treatiſe upon St. John, that after that mortal Condition and Manner we have not now Chriſt on Earth, as he was heretofore before his Paſſion.

Philpot's Reply to Watſon. To this Anſwer John Philpot replied, and ſaid, That Mr. Watſon had not fully anſwered St. Auguſtin by St. Auguſtin, as he promiſed to do, for that in the Place abovementioned by the Dean of Rocheſter, he doth not only teach the mortal State of Chriſt's Body before his Paſſion, but alſo the immortal Condition of the ſame after his Reſurrection: In which mortal Body St. Auguſtin ſeemeth plainly to affirm, That Chriſt is not preſent upon the Earth, neither in Form viſibly, neither in corporal Subſtance inviſibly, as in a few Lines after the Place above alledged, St. Auguſtin doth more plainly declare by theſe Words, ſaying, 'Now theſe two Manners of 'Chriſt's Preſence declared, which is by his
'Majeſty, Providence and Grace now preſent
'in the World, which before his Aſcenſion was
'preſent in the Fleſh; and which being now
'placed at the Right Hand of the Father, is
'abſent from the World, I think there remains
'no further Diſpute about the Matter.

Now, ſaid Philpot, if St. Auguſtin allowed no other Preſence of Chriſt here on Earth but only his divine Preſence, and touching his Humanity to be in Heaven, we ought to confeſs and believe the ſame. But if we put a third Preſence of Chriſt, that is corporally to be preſent always in the Sacrament of the Altar inviſibly according to your Suppoſitions, whereof St. Auguſtin maketh no Mention in all his Works, you ſeem to judge that which St. Auguſtin did never comprehend.

Why, ſaid Watſon, does not St. Auguſtin in the Place I alledged, make Mention how St. Stephen being in this World, ſaw Chriſt after his Aſcenſion?

It is true, ſaid Philpot, but he ſaw Chriſt, as the Scripture ſaith, in the Heavens, being open, ſtanding at the Right Hand of God the Father: at which Watſon was ſilent.

Then the Prolocutor went about to anſwer St. Auguſtin, ſaying, That he is not now in the World after the Manner of bodily Preſence, but yet preſent for all that in his Body.

To whom Philpot anſwered, that the Prolocutor dwelt much upon the Word * in St. Auguſtin that ſignified after a Manner, or in Form; but that he made no Anſwer to † that which ſignified that Thing or Subſtance of Chriſt in which Chriſt ſuffered, aroſe, and aſcended into Heaven, in which Thing or Subſtance he is in Heaven, and not on Earth, as St. Auguſtin in the Place before ſpecified does moſt clearly make appear.

* Secundum.

† Id quod.

Nothing further being anſwered to this, the Dean of Rocheſter proceeded in the Maintenance of his Argument, and read out of a Book of Annotations ſundry Authorities for the Confirmation thereof. To which Moreman, who was appointed to anſwer him, made no direct Anſwer, but bade him frame an Argument, ſaying, that the Dean had recited many Doctors Words, but had not made one Argument. Anno 1553.

Then ſaid the Dean, the Authorities of the Doctors I have quoted, are Arguments ſufficient to prove my Intent, and to which I deſire you will anſwer. But Moreman ſtill cried, make an Argument, to ſhift off the Authority which he could not anſwer to. Whereupon the Dean made the following Argument from the Inſtitution of the Sacrament; Do this in Remembrance of me; and thus ye ſhall ſhew forth the Lord's Death until he come.

Weſton's anſwering the Argument Donec, Until, in Scripture. The Sacrament is the Remembrance of Chriſt: therefore, the Sacrament is not very Chriſt; for as yet he is not come. For theſe Words, Until he come, do plainly ſignify the Abſence of Chriſt's Body. Then the Prolocutor went about to ſhew, that theſe Words, Until he come, did not import any Abſence of Chriſt on the Earth, by other Places of Scripture, where the Word, Until, was made Uſe of; but directly to the Purpoſe he anſwered nothing. In fine, the Dean fell to aſking Moreman, whether Chriſt did eat the paſchal Lamb with his Diſciples, or not? He anſwered, Yea. He further demanded, whether upon inſtituting the Sacrament, he did likewiſe eat the Sacrament with them? Moreman anſwered, Yea. Then he aſked what he did eat, and whether he did eat his own natural Body, as they imagined it to be, or not? Which when Moreman had affirmed, then ſaid the Dean, it is a great Abſurdity by you granted; and ſo ſate down.

Moreman affirmeth that Chriſt did eat his own Body. Againſt this Abſurdity Philpot ſtood up and argued, ſaying, He could prove it by good Reaſon deduced out of Scripture, that Chriſt eat not his own natural Body at the Inſtitution of the Sacrament; and gave the following Reaſon:

Receiving of Chriſt's Body hath a Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sins with it annexed.
Chriſt eating the Sacrament, had no Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sin.
Therefore, Chriſt in the Sacrament did not eat his own Body.

Moreman's denying the Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sins annexed to the Sacrament. Moreman anſwered this Reaſon, by denying the former Part of the Argument, that the Sacrament had a Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sins annexed unto it.

Then Philpot ſhewed this to be the Promiſe in the Sacrament; Which is given for you, which is ſhed for you, for the Remiſſion of Sins. But Moreman would not allow that to be any Promiſe, and ſo forced Philpot to the Sixth of St. John, to make good his Saying with theſe Words; The Bread which I will give is my Fleſh, which I will give for the Life of the World.

Harpſfield aſſerting what his Fellow Mr. Moreman denied. Moreman anſwering nothing directly to this Argument, Harpſfield ſtarted up to ſupply what was wanting in Moreman; and thinking to have anſwered Philpot, confirmed more ſtrongly his Argument, by ſaying, Ye miſtake the Promiſe which is annexed to the Body of Chriſt in the Sacrament; for it pertained not to Chriſt, but to his Diſciples, to whom Chriſt ſaid, This is my Body which is given for you; and not for Chriſt himſelf.

You have well ſaid, quoth Philpot, for that is my Argument; the Promiſe of the Body of Chriſt took no Effect in Chriſt: therefore Chriſt eat not his own Body.

Then the Prolocutor, to ſhoulder out the Matter, ſaid, the Argument was nought. For by the like Argument he might go about to Anno 1553. prove, that Chriſt was not baptized, becauſe the Remiſſion of Sins, which is annexed unto Baptiſm, had no Effect in Chriſt. To which Philpot replied, that like as Chriſt was baptized, ſo he eat the Sacrament; but he took on him Baptiſm, not that he had any need thereof, or that it took any Effect in him, but as our Maſter, to give the Church an Example to follow him in the Miniſtration of the Sacrament, and thereby to exhibit unto us himſelf, and not to give himſelf to himſelf.

Philpot's Argument not ſolved.

No more was ſaid on this. But afterward the Prolocutor demanded of Philpot, whether he would argue againſt the natural Preſence, or not? To whom he anſwer'd, Yea, if he would hear his Argument without Interruption, and aſſign one to anſwer him, and not many, which is a Confuſion to the Opponent, and eſpecially for him that had but an ill Memory. By this Time the Night was come on; wherefore the Prolocutor brake up the Diſputation for that Time, and appointed Philpot to be the firſt that ſhould begin the Diſputation the next Day, concerning the Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament.

The Fourth Day's Act.

Mr. Philpot not ſuffered by the Prolocutor to make his Declaration.

On Wedneſday, October 25. John Philpot, as it was before appointed, was ready to have entered the Diſputation, minding firſt to have made an Oration and Declaration in Latin of the Matter of Chriſt's Preſence which was then in Queſtion. Which the Prolocutor perceiving, forbad Philpot to make any Declaration or Oration of any Matter, commanding him alſo that he ſhould make no Argument in Latin, but to conclude his Argument in Engliſh.

Then, ſaid Philpot, this is contrary to your Order at the beginning of this Diſputation; for then you appointed that all the Arguments ſhould be made in Latin, and thereupon I have drawn and deviſed all mine Arguments in Latin: And becauſe you, Mr. Prolocutor, have ſaid heretofore openly in this Houſe that I had no Learning, I intended to ſhew ſuch Learning as I have, in a brief Oration, and ſhort Declaration of the Queſtions now in Controverſy, thinking it ſo moſt convenient alſo, that in caſe I ſhould ſpeak otherwiſe in my Declaration than ſhould ſtand with Learning, or than I were able to warrant, and juſtify by God's Word, it might the better be reformed by ſuch as were learned of the Houſe, ſo that the unlearned being preſent, might take the leſs Offence thereat. But this prevailed nothing with the Prolocutor, who ſtill inſiſted upon his forming an Argument in Engliſh, or elſe to hold his Peace.

Chriſt's Preſence in the Sacrament diſtinguiſhed.

Then, ſaid Philpot, you have ſore diſappointed me, thus ſuddenly to go from your former Order: But I will accompliſh your Commandment, leaving mine Oration apart, and I will come to my Arguments, which, as well as ſo ſudden a Warning will ſerve, I will make in Engliſh. But before I bring forth any Argument, I will in one Word declare what manner of Preſence I diſallow in the Sacrament, to the intent the Hearers may the better underſtand to what End and Effect mine Arguments ſhall tend; not to deny utterly the Preſence of Chriſt in his Sacrament, truly miniſtred according to his Inſtitution, but only to deny that groſs and carnal Preſence, which you of this Houſe have already ſubſcribed unto, to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, contrary to the true and manifeſt meaning of the Scriptures: That by Tranſubſtantiation of the Sacramental Bread and Wine, Chriſt's natural Body ſhould, by virtue of the Words pronounced by the Prieſt, be contained and included under the Forms or Accidents of Bread and Wine. This kind of Preſence imagined by Men, I do deny, quoth Philpot, and againſt this I will reaſon. But before he could make an End of what he was about, he was interrupted by the Prolocutor, and commanded to deſcend to his Argument: At whoſe unjuſt Importunity Philpot being offended, and hoping to find Remedy, fell down upon his Knees before the Earls and Lords which were there preſent, being a great Number, whereof ſome were of the Queen's Council, beſeeching them that he might have Liberty to proſecute his Arguments, without Interruption, which was readily granted by the Lords. But the Prolocutor would not condeſcend to it, but ſtill cry'd, Hold your Peace, or elſe make a ſhort Argument. I am about it, ſaid Philpot, if you will let me alone: But firſt I muſt ask a Queſtion of my Reſpondent (who was Dr. Chedſey) concerning a Word or two of your Suppoſition, that is, of the Sacrament of the Altar, what he meaneth thereby, and whether he taketh it, as ſome of the antient Writers do, terming the Lord's Supper the Sacrament of the Altar; partly becauſe it is a Sacrament of that lively Sacrifice which Chriſt offered for our Sins upon the Altar of the Croſs, and partly becauſe that Chriſt's Body, crucified for us, was that bloody Sacrifice, which the Blood-ſhedding of all the Beaſts offered upon the Altar in the old Law, did prefigurate and ſignify unto us; in Signification whereof the old Writers ſometime do call the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, among other Names which they aſcribe thereunto, the Sacrament of the Altar; or whether you take it otherwiſe; as for the Sacrament of the Altar, which is made of Lime and Stone, over which the Sacrament hangeth, and to be all one with the Sacrament of the Maſs, as it is at preſent in many Places. This done, I will direct my Arguments according as your Anſwer ſhall give me Occaſion.

Philpot's Requeſt to the Lords for proſecuting his Arguments without Interruption.

Philpot again interrupted by the Prolocutor.

Altar diverſly taken.

Then Dr. Chedſey made this Anſwer, That in their Suppoſition they took the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Sacrament of the Maſs, to be all one.

Chedſey.

Then, ſaid Philpot, by Mr. Prolocutor's Leave, I will ſpeak plain Engliſh, and make a ſhort Reſolution thereof; that the Sacrament of the Altar, which ye reckon to be all one with the Maſs, once juſtly aboliſhed, and now put in full Uſe again, is no Sacrament at all, neither is Chriſt in any wiſe preſent in it; and this he offered to prove before the whole Houſe, if they required it: He would likewiſe vouch the ſame before the Queen and her honourable Council, before the Face of ſix of the moſt learned Men of the Houſe of the contrary Opinion, and refuſed none: And if I ſhall not be able by God's Word to maintain what I have ſaid, and confound thoſe ſix which ſhall take upon them to withſtand me in this Point, let me be burdened with as many Faggots as can be found in London, before the Court Gates. This he ſpake with the utmoſt Zeal and Courage.

Philpot's Offer in the Convocation Houſe.

At this the Prolocutor with many others were very much offended, demanding of him whether he knew what he ſaid; Yea, quoth Philpot, I know very well what I ſay, and I deſire that no Man may be offended at it, for I ſpeak no more than by the Word of God I am able to prove; and praiſed be God that the Queen's Grace hath granted to us of this Houſe (as our Prolocutor hath informed us) the free Liberty of uttering uttering our Conſciences in theſe Matters of Controverſy in Religion; and therefore I will here freely ſpeak my Conſcience, grounded upon God's Holy Word, for the Truth, although ſome of you here preſent do not like it.

The Prolocutor threatneth Philpot with Impriſonment.

Then the Prolocutor, with ſeveral others of the Houſe, taunted and reproved him for ſpeaking ſo indecently againſt the Sacrament of the Maſs. The Prolocutor told him he was Mad, and threatned to ſend him to Priſon, if he would not ceaſe ſpeaking.

Philpot ſeeing himſelf thus abuſed, and not permitted the free Liberty of declaring his Mind, fell into an Exclamation, caſting his Eyes towards Heaven, and ſaid, O Lord, what a World is this, that the Truth of thy holy Word cannot be ſpoken and endured! And for great Sorrow and Trouble the Tears were ſeen to trickle down his Eyes.

Philpot permitted to make a ſhort Argument.

The Prolocutor being moved by ſome that were about him, conſented that he ſhould make an Argument, provided it were a ſhort one. I will be as brief, ſaid Philpot, as I can conveniently in uttering all that I have to ſay. And, firſt, I will begin to ground my Arguments upon the Authority of Scripture, whereon all the building of our Faith ought to be grounded; and then I ſhall confirm the ſame by the ancient Fathers of the Church. I take the Occaſion of the firſt Argument out of the 28*th* Chapter of St. Matthew's Goſpel, of what was ſaid by the Angel to the three Mary's, ſeeking Chriſt at the Sepulchre, ſaying, He is Riſen, he is not here; and in St. Luke, Chap. xxiii. the Angel aſketh them, Why they ſought him that Liveth among the Dead. The Scripture teſtifieth, that Chriſt is Riſen, aſcended into Heaven, and ſitteth on the Right-hand of the Father: All which is ſpoken of his natural Body: Ergo, It is not on Earth included in the Sacrament.

I will confirm this yet more effectually, by the Saying of Chriſt in the 16*th* of St. John; I came (ſaith Chriſt) from my Father into the World, and now I leave the World and go away to my Father. Which coming and going he meant of his natural Body; therefore we may conſequently affirm, that it is not found in the World.

The Papiſts blind Diſtinction of viſibly and inviſibly.

But (ſaith he) I expect here to be anſwered with a blind Diſtinction of viſibly and inviſibly, that he is viſibly departed in his Humanity, but remaineth inviſibly in the Sacrament. But that I may with more Expedition paſs on to the Pith of my Arguments, (whereof I have a dozen to propoſe) I will prevent that Anſwer, and that no ſuch Diſtinction ought to take away the Force of that Argument, will prove from the Anſwer which Chriſt's Diſciples gave unto him, ſaying, Now thou ſpeakeſt plainly, and uttereſt forth no Proverb. Which Words St. Cyril interpreting, ſaith, That Chriſt ſpake without any manner of Ambiguity or obſcure Speech. And therefore I do from thence conclude, that if Chriſt ſpake plainly, and without Parable, ſaying, I leave the World now, and go away to my Father; then that obſcure, dark and imperceptible Preſence of Chriſt's natural Body remaining in the Sacrament inviſibly upon Earth, contrary to the plain Words of Chriſt, ought not to be allowed; for nothing can be more uncertain, parabolical, and abſurd, than ſo to ſay. I will now give Attention to your Anſwer, and then deſcend to confirm what I have ſaid by ancient Writers.

Chedſey's Anſwer to Philpot.

Then Dr. Chedſey reciting his Argument in ſuch Sort as it was made, took upon him to anſwer every Part thereof ſeverally on this wiſe. Anno 1553.
Firſt, To the ſaying of the Angel, That Chriſt is not here: and, Why ſeek ye the Living among the Dead? He anſwered, that theſe Sayings pertained nothing to the Preſence of Chriſt's natural Body in the Sacrament, but that they were ſpoke of Chriſt's Body being in the Sepulchre, when the three Mary's thought him to have been in the Grave ſtill. And therefore the Angel ſaid, Why do ye ſeek him that Liveth among the Dead? And to the Authority of St. John, where Chriſt ſaith, Now I leave the World and go to my Father; he meant that of his Aſcenſion. And ſo likewiſe did Cyril, interpreting the Saying of the Diſciples, that knew plainly that Chriſt would viſibly aſcend into Heaven, but that doth not exclude the inviſible Preſence of his natural Body in the Sacrament. For St. Chryſoſtom writing to the People of Antioch, doth affirm the ſame, comparing Elias and Chriſt together, and Elias's Cloak and Chriſt's Fleſh. When Elias (ſaith he) was taken up in the fiery Chariot, he left his Cloak behind him unto his Diſciple Eliſæus. But Chriſt aſcending into Heaven took his Fleſh with him, and left alſo his Fleſh behind him. From whence we may juſtly conclude, that Chriſt's Fleſh is viſibly aſcended into Heaven, and abideth ſtill inviſibly in the Sacrament of the Altar.

Philpot's Anſwer to Chedſey.

To this Philpot reply'd, and ſaid, You have not directly anſwered to the Saying of the Angel, Chriſt is Riſen, and is not here, becauſe you have omitted that which was the chief Point of all. For, ſaid he, I proceed further, as thus; He is Riſen, aſcended, and ſitteth at the Right-hand of God the Father; therefore, he is not remaining on the Earth. Neither is your Anſwer to Cyril, by me alledged ſufficient. But I will preſently return to your Interpretation of Cyril, and plainly declare it, after I have refelled the Authority of Chryſoſtom, which is one of the chief Principles that you alledged to make for your groſs carnal Preſence in the Sacrament; which being well weighed and underſtood, pertaineth nothing thereunto.

Philpot again interrupted by the Prolocutor.

At that the Prolocutor ſtartled, that one of the chief Pillars in this Point ſhould be overthrown; and therefore he recited the ſaid Authority firſt in Latin, and afterwards he turned it into Engliſh, and deſired all that were preſent to remark that Saying of Chryſoſtom, which he thought invincible on their own Side. But I will make it appear (ſaid Philpot) by and by, that it doth make little for your Purpoſe. And as he was declaring his Mind in that behalf, the Prolocutor interrupted him, as he frequently did. With which Philpot being diſpleaſed, ſaid, Mr. Prolocutor thinketh that he is in a Sophiſtry-School, where he well knoweth the Manner is, that when the Reſpondent perceiveth, that he is like to be inforced with an Argument, which he is not able to anſwer, thus he doth what he can by Cavillation and Interruption to drive him from the ſame. This Saying of Philpot was ill taken by the Prolocutor and his Adherents; and the Prolocutor ſaid, that Philpot could bring nothing to avoid that Authority but his own vain Imagination. Hear, quoth Philpot, and afterwards judge; for I will do in this, as in all other Authorities, wherewith you ſhall take upon you to refel any of my Arguments that I have to proſecute, anſwering the ſame either by ſufficient Authorities of Scripture, or elſe by ſome other Teſtimony of like Authority with yours, and not of my own Imagination; which if I do I deſire it to be of no no Credit. And as to the Saying of Chryſoſtom, I have two Ways to beat him from your Purpoſe, one out of Scripture, and the other out of the very Place of Chryſoſtom himſelf here by you alledged.

The Place of Chryſoſtom, of Chriſt taking up his Fleſh, and leaving his Fleſh, anſwered to by Philpot.

Firſt, where he ſeemeth to ſay, that Chriſt aſcending took his Fleſh with him, and left alſo his Fleſh behind him; it is Truth; for we all do confeſs and believe, that Chriſt took on him our human Nature in the Virgin Mary's Womb, and through his Paſſion in the ſame hath united us to his Fleſh, and thereby are we become one Fleſh with him; ſo that Chryſoſtom might therefore well ſay, that Chriſt aſcending took his Fleſh which he received of the Virgin Mary away with him; and alſo left his Fleſh behind him, which are we that be his Elect in this World, which are the Members of Chriſt, and Fleſh of his Fleſh; as St. Paul doth aptly teſtify, Eph. v. ſaying, We are Fleſh of his Fleſh, and Bone of his Bones. And if any Man will reply, that he there treateth of the Sacrament, and that this Interpretation cannot ſo aptly be applied unto him in that Place, then will I yet interpret Chryſoſtom another Way by himſelf. For in that Place, a few Lines before thoſe Words which were here now read, are theſe Words; That Chriſt, after he aſcended into Heaven, left unto us, indued with his Sacraments, his Fleſh in Myſteries, that is, Sacramentally: and that myſtical Fleſh Chriſt leaveth as well to his Church in the Sacrament of Baptiſm, as in the ſacramental Bread and Wine. And this St. Paul doth juſtly witneſs, Gal. iii. ſaying, As many of us as are baptized in Chriſt have put upon us Chriſt. And thus you may perceive that St. Chryſoſtom maketh nothing for your groſs and carnal Preſence in the Sacrament, as you wrongly take him.

Chryſoſtom expounded by Chryſoſtom.

Now in the mean while the Prolocutor was moved by Mr. Pie, whiſpering him in the Ear, to put Philpot to Silence, and to appoint ſome other, fearing if he held on long, he would at length ſhake their carnal Preſence, ſeeing he had already gave one of their chief Foundations ſuch a pluck. Then the Prolocutor ſaid to Philpot, that he had reaſoned enough, and that ſome other ſhould ſupply his Room. At which Philpot was diſpleaſed, ſaying: Why, Sir, I have a dozen Arguments to propoſe concerning this Matter, and I have as yet ſcarce gone over the firſt; for being hitherto hindered through your frequent interrupting me, I have not for confirmation thereof quoted any ancient Writer, as I could a great many.

A good Solution for all his Argument.

Well, ſaid the Prolocutor, you ſhall ſpeak no more now, and I command you to hold your Peace. You perceive, ſaid Philpot, that I have Stuff enough for you, and am able to withſtand your falſe Suppoſition, and therefore you command me to be ſilent. If you will not give place, ſaid the Prolocutor, I will ſend you to Priſon. This is not, ſaith Philpot, according to your Promiſe made in this Houſe, nor yet to your Brags made at Paul's Croſs, that Men ſhould be anſwered in this Diſputation to whatſoever they can ſay, ſince of a dozen Arguments you will not ſuffer me to proſecute one.

Then Mr. Pie took upon him to promiſe that he ſhould be anſwered another Day. But Philpot ſeeing he could not proceed as he deſigned, was juſtly offended thereat, and made an End, by ſaying thus: A Sort of you here, which hitherto have lurked in Corners, and diſſembled with God and the World, are now gathered together to ſuppreſs the ſincere Truth of God's holy Word, and to ſet forth every falſe Device, which by the Catholick Doctrine of the Scripture ye are not able to maintain.

Mr. Elmar again ſteps forth.

Then ſtepped forth Mr. Elmar, Chaplain to the Duke of Suffolk, whom Mr. Moreman took upon him to anſwer: Againſt whom, for confirming the Argument he took in Hand the Day before, Mr. Elmar objected ſeveral Authorities, to prove that the Greek Word in Theodoret, which Mr. Cheyney ſaid ſignify'd Subſtance, muſt needs ſignify Subſtance, and not Accidents. But his Reaſons and Proofs being all grounded upon and deduced from the Greek, I ſhall paſs them over, as knowing they want their Grace in Engliſh, and likewiſe their proper Underſtanding. But his Allegations ſo incumbred Moreman, that he deſired a Day to overlook them, for at that Inſtant he was without a convenient Anſwer.

Moreman deſires Time to anſwer Elmar.

Then the Prolocutor call'd Mr. Haddon, Dean of Exeter, and Chaplain to the Duke of Suffolk, who proſecuted Theodoret's Authority in confirming Mr. Elmar's Argument. Dr. Watſon took upon him to anſwer him, who, after long Talk, was ſo confounded, that he was not able to anſwer to the Word MYSTERIUM *. But foraſmuch as he ſeemed to doubt therein, Mr. Haddock took out of his Boſom a Latin Author to confirm his Saying, and ſhewed the ſame to Dr. Watſon, aſking him, whether he thought that Tranſlation to be true, or that the Printer were in any Fault: To which Watſon replied, there may be a Fault in the Printer, for I am not remembred of this Word. Then Mr. Haddon took out of his Boſom a Greek Book, wherein he ſhewed with his Finger the ſame Word, which Mr. Watſon could not deny. What further Arguments were made uſe of, I ſhall chuſe to omit declaring at large, becauſe they were moſtly in Greek.

Dr. Watſon confounded by Mr. Haddon.

* Myſtery.

Then Mr. Perne ſtood up, and argued againſt Tranſubſtantiation, confirming the Authorities alledged by Mr. Elmar and Mr. Haddon. To whom the Prolocutor ſaid, I wonder, Mr. Perne, at your ſpeaking thus, for no longer than laſt Friday you ſubſcribed to the contrary: Which Saying Mr. Elmar diſapproved, and blamed the Prolocutor, telling him, that he ought not to reprehend any Man, becauſe, ſaid he, this Houſe is a Houſe of free Liberty for every Man to ſpeak his Conſcience, and that Yeſterday he promis'd, that any Man, notwithſtanding he had ſubſcribed, ſhould have free liberty to ſpeak his Mind. And for that the Night did approach, and the Time being ſpent, the Prolocutor praiſing them for their Learning, did ſtill notwithſtanding conclude, that all Reaſoning ſet apart, the Order of the Holy Church muſt be received, and all Things muſt be ordered thereby.

Mr. Perne againſt Tranſubſtantiation.

The FIFTH Day's Act.

Oct. 27.

On Friday the 27*th* of October, the Prolocutor firſt propounded the Matter, ſhewing that the Convocation had ſpent two Days already in diſputing about one Father, which was Theodoret, and about one Greek Word, which was ἐσχάτη; and now they were come the third Day to anſwer all Things that could be objected, ſo that they would ſhortly put their Arguments. Mr. Haddon, Dean of Exeter, deſired leave to oppoſe Mr. Watſon, which, with two more, that is, Morgan and Harpsfield, were appointed to anſwer: Mr. Haddon demanded of him, whether any Subſtance of Bread or Wine remained after Conſecration; then Mr. Watſon aſked him, whether he thought there to be a Real Preſence of Chriſt's Body, or not: Mr. Haddon ſaid, it was not right according to Order, that one who was appointed to be Reſpondent ſhould be Opponent, nor he whoſe Buſineſs it was to Object, to Anſwer. Mr. Watſon a long Time would not agree to anſwer; but that Thing firſt being granted him, at laſt an Order was ſet, and Mr. Haddon was permitted to go on with his Argument.

Then he proved by the Words of Theodoret, that the Subſtance of Bread and Wine remained: For theſe are his Words, The ſame they were before the Sanctification, which they are after. Mr. Watſon ſaid, that Theodoret meant not the ſame Subſtance, but the ſame Eſſence. Whereupon they were driven again to the diſcuſſing of the Greek Word abovementioned; and Mr. Haddon prov'd it to mean a Subſtance, both by the Etymology of the Word, and by the Words of Theodoret. For, ſaid he, οὐσία cometh to the particle ὢν, which deſcendeth to the Verb εἰμὶ, and ſo cometh the Noun οὐσία, which ſignifieth Subſtance.

Theodoret's Words alledged.

Then ſaid Mr. Watſon, It hath not that Signification only: But Mr. Haddon proved that in that Place it could not ſignify otherwiſe. Then he aſked Watſon, when the Bread and Wine became Symbols; to whom Watſon anſwered, After Conſecration, and not before. Then Mr. Haddon gathered the following Reaſon out of his Author.

Mr. Haddon's Argument.

> The ſame Thing, ſaid Theodoret, that the Bread and Wine were before they were Symbols, the ſame they remain ſtill in Nature and Subſtance, after they are Symbols.
> Bread and Wine they were before.
> Therefore, Bread and Wine they are after.

Watſon is driven to a ſhameful Shift, to deny the Author when he cannot anſwer.

Then Mr. Watſon denied the Author, and ſaid he was a Neſtorian; deſiring to anſwer Mr. Cheyney, who ſtood by, that he was more fit to diſpute in the Matter, becauſe he had granted and ſubſcribed to the Real Preſence. Mr. Cheyney deſired Patience of the honourable Men to hear him, hoping ſo to open the Matter, that the Truth ſhould appear; proteſting, that he was no obſtinate nor ſtubborn Man, but would be conformable to all Reaſon; and if they by their Learning, which he acknowledged to be much more than his, could anſwer his Reaſons, then he would be ruled by them, and ſay as they ſaid; for he would be no Author of Schiſm, nor hold any thing contrary to the holy Mother the Church, which is the Spouſe of Chriſt. Dr. Weſton liked this very well, and commended him highly, telling him that he was a very learned and ſober Man, and well experienced in all good Learning, and in the Doctors; and finally, a Man, for his Knowledge, fit to diſpute in that Place; I pray you hear him, quoth he. Then Mr. Cheyney deſired thoſe that were preſent to pray to God with him in two Words, and to ſay, Vincat Veritas, Let the Truth take Place and have the Victory; and all that were preſent cried with a loud Voice, Vincat Veritas, Vincat Veritas.

Cheyney.

Cheyney's Prayer.

Dr. Weſton told him that it was Hypocritical, and that they had better ſay Vicit Veritas, Truth hath gotten the Victory. Mr. Cheyney ſaid again, If you will give me leave, I will bring it to that Point, that you may truly ſay ſo.

Cheyney and Watſon diſpute.

He then began with Mr. Watſon after this Manner: You ſay that Mr. Haddon was not fit to diſpute, becauſe he had not granted the Natural and Real Preſence; but I ſay you are much leſs fit to anſwer, becauſe you take away the Subſtance of the Sacrament.

Cheyney challeng'd for ſubſcribing to the real Preſence.

Watſon told him, that he had ſubſcribed to the Real Preſence, and ſhould not go away from that: So ſaid the Prolocutor and the other Prieſts; ſo that for a long Time he could not have leave to proceed, till the Lords deſired that he ſhould he heard. Anno 1553.

He then told them what he meant by ſubſcribing to the Real Preſence, far otherwiſe than they ſuppoſed. He then went on, and proſecuted Haddon's Argument, proving that the Greek Word before diſcuſſed was a Subſtance, uſing the ſame Reaſon that Haddon did, and when he had received the ſame Anſwer that was made to Haddon, he told them it was but a lewd Refuge, when they could not anſwer, to deny the Author, and proved the Author to be a Catholick Doctor; that being proved, he further confirmed what was ſaid of the Nature and Subſtance. The Similitude of Theodoret is this, ſaid he, as the Tokens of Chriſt's Body and Blood, after the Invocation of the Prieſt, do change their Names, and yet continue the ſame Subſtance; ſo the Body of Chriſt after his Aſcenſion, changed his Name, and was called immortal, yet it had his former Faſhion, Figure, and Circumſcription, and to ſpeak in one Word, the ſame Subſtance of his Body. Therefore, ſaid Cheyney, if in the former Part of the Similitude you deny the ſame Subſtance to continue, then in the latter Part of the Similitude, which agreeth with it, I will deny the Body of Chriſt, after his Aſcenſion, to have the former Nature and Subſtance! But that were a great Hereſy; therefore it is alſo a great Hereſy to take away the Subſtance of Bread and Wine after Conſecration.

The Argument of Theodoret renew'd by Cheyney.

Watſon was then obliged to ſay, that the Subſtance of the Body, in the former part of the Similitude brought in by him, did ſignify Quantity, and other Accidents of the ſacramental Tokens which be ſeen, and not the very Subſtance of the ſame; and therefore Theodoret ſaith, Thoſe things which be ſeen. For according to Philoſophy, the Accidents of Things be ſeen, and not the Subſtances.

Cheyney then appealed to the Nobility, and deſired that they would give no Credit to them in ſo ſaying: For if they think as they teach, after your Lordſhips have ridden forty Miles on Horſe-back (as your Buſineſs ſometimes may require) you ſhall not be able to ſay at Night, that you ſaw your Horſes all the Day, but only the Colour of them: And by this Reaſon Chriſt muſt go to School, and learn of Ariſtotle how to ſpeak. For when he ſaw Nathaniel under the Fig-tree, if Ariſtotle had ſtood by, he would have ſaid, No, Chriſt, thou didſt not ſee him, but the Colour of him. Then ſaid Watſon, Suppoſe it were granted that Theodoret was on the other Side, whereas where there were one of that Opinion, there were an Hundred on the other.

Cheyney appealed to the Lords.

Then the Prolocutor called Morgan to help him out, who ſaid, that Theodoret did no more than what he might lawfully do. For firſt he granted the Truth, and then for fear of ſuch as were not fully inſtructed in the Faith, he ſpake Myſtically, and that was lawful for him to do; For firſt he granted the Truth, and called them the Body and Blood of Chriſt. Then afterwards he ſeems to give ſomewhat to the Senſes and to Reaſon: But that Theodoret is of the ſame Mind that they were of, the Words following, quoth he, do declare. For that which followeth is a Cauſe of that which went before; and therefore he ſaith, The Immortality, &c. whereby it doth appear, that he meant the Divine Nature, and not the Human. Morgan was then detected in miſalledging the Text: For the Book had not this Word [for], for the Greek Word did rather ſignify [truly] and not [for], ſo that it might manifeſtly appear, that it was the beginning of a new Matter, and not a Sentence rendering a Cauſe of that he ſaid before.

Morgan taxed with miſalledging the Text.

Watſon again ſaid, Suppoſe Theodoret be with you, which is one we never heard of printed, but two or three Years ago; yet he is but one, and what is one againſt the Conſent of the whole Church? Cheyney then inferred, that not only Theodoret was of that Mind, that the Subſtance of Bread and Wine do remain, but many others alſo, eſpecially Irenæus, who making mention of this Sacrament, ſaith thus, When the Cup which is mingled with Wine, and the Bread that is broken, do receive the Word of God, it is made the Euchariſt of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, by the which the Subſtance of our Fleſh is nouriſhed, and doth conſiſt. If the Thankſgiving do nouriſh our Body, then there is ſome Subſtance beſides Chriſt's Body.

Watſon. Both Watſon and Morgan anſwered, that [By the which] in the Sentence of Irenæus, was referred to the next Antecedent, that is, to the Body and Blood of Chriſt; and not to the Wine which is in the Cup, and the Bread which is broken.

Cheyney. Mr. Cheyney replied, that it was not the Body of Chriſt which nouriſhed our Bodies. And let it be that Chriſt's Fleſh nouriſheth to Immortality, yet it doth not anſwer to that Argument, although it be true; no more than that Anſwer which was made to my Allegation out of St. Paul, The Bread which we break, &c. with divers others; whereunto you anſwered, that Bread was not taken there in its proper Signification, that is, not for that it was Bread, but for that it had been ſo; any more than the Rod of Aaron was taken for a Serpent, becauſe it had been a Serpent. After this Mr. Cheyney quoted Heſychius, and uſed the ſame Reaſon that he did concerning the burning of Symbols; and ask'd them, what was burnt? Mr. Watſon ſaid, We muſt not inquire nor ask, but if there was any Fault, impute it to Chriſt. Then ſaid Mr. Cheyney, whence came thoſe Aſhes? Not from Subſtance; or can any Subſtance ariſe from Accidents.

Harpsfield called to help Watſon. Then was Mr. Harpsfield called in to ſee what he could ſay in the Matter. Who told a fair Tale about the Omnipotency of God, and the Imbecillity and Weakneſs of Man's Reaſon as to the Attainment of godly Things. And likewiſe ſaid, that whatſoever we ſaw, felt, or taſted, it was not convenient to truſt our Senſes. And he told alſo a Tale out of St. Cyprian, how a Woman ſaw the Sacrament burning in her Coffer, and that which burned thus, ſaid Harpſfield, burneth here, and becometh Aſhes, but what that was that burnt he could not tell. But Mr. Cheyney continued ſtill, and forced them with this Queſtion, What was it that was burnt? it was either, ſaid he, the Subſtance of Bread, or elſe the Subſtance of the Body of Chriſt; which was too great an Abſurdity to grant. And therefore at length they anſwer'd it was a Miracle; at which Mr. Cheyney ſmil'd, and ſaid, that he could then ſay no more.

Weſton aſking whether they were ſufficiently anſwered, when he and his Adherents had anſwer'd no argument.

Then Dr. Weſton aſked the Company, whether theſe Men were ſufficiently anſwer'd, or not? At which certain Prieſts ſaid, yea; but for the great Multitude that cried, no, no, they were not heard; the Cry was ſo great, as it was heard and noiſed almoſt to the End of Paul's. Whereat Dr. Weſton being much moved, anſwer'd bitterly, that he aſked not the Judgment of the rude Multitude, and unlearned People, but of ſuch as were Members of the Houſe. Then he aſked Mr. Haddon and his Fellows, whether they would anſwer them other three Days? Mr. Haddon, Cheyney, and Elmar anſwered, no. But the Archdeacon of Winchester ſtood up and ſaid, That they ſhould not ſay but they ſhould be anſwered; and though all others refuſed to anſwer, yet he would not, but offered to anſwer them all one after another: with whoſe Offer the Prolocutor being diſſatisfied, railed at him, and ſaid, that he ſhould go to Bedlam; to whom the Archdeacon ſoberly returned this Anſwer, That he was more worthy to be ſent thither, who behaved himſelf ſo furiouſly in the Diſputation, without any indifferent Equality.

Mr. Philpot again.

Then Dr. Weſton roſe up, and ſaid, All the Company have ſubſcribed to our Article, except only theſe Men which you ſee. What their Reaſons are you have heard. We have anſwered them three Days, upon Promiſe (as it pleaſed him falſly to deſcant, for no ſuch Promiſe was made) that they ſhould anſwer us again as long as the Order of Diſputation doth require, and if they be able to defend their Doctrine, let them do ſo.

A ſtrong Argument of Weſton, where he is not able to anſwer, he would outface.

Then ſtood up Mr. Elmar, and proved how vain a Man Weſton was; for he affirmed that they never promiſed a Diſpute, but only to declare and teſtify to the World their Conſciences. For when they were required to ſubſcribe they refuſed, and ſaid, that they would ſhew good Reaſons which moved them, that they could not with their Conſciences ſubſcribe, as they had partly done already, and were able to do more ſufficiently: Therefore, ſaid he, it hath been ill called a Diſputation, and they are much to blame that called it ſo. For we meant not to Diſpute, nor now intend to Anſwer, before our Arguments, ſaid he, which we have to propound be ſolved, according as it was appointed. For by anſwering we ſhould but incumber ourſelves and profit nothing, ſince the Matter is already decreed on and determined, whatſoever we ſhall prove or diſpute to the contrary.

Mr. Elmar's Reaſon why he would not anſwer

The Sixth Day's Act.

The ſixth Act or Seſſion.

On Monday following, October 30. the Prolocutor demanded of John Philpot, Archdeacon of Winchester, whether in the Queſtions before propounded, he would anſwer their Objections or not? To whom he made this Anſwer, that he would willingly do ſo, if according to their former Determination and Promiſe, they would firſt Anſwer ſufficiently ſome of his Arguments, of which he had a Dozen, not half of the Firſt being decided. And if they would firſt anſwer fully and ſufficiently but one of his Arguments, he promiſed he would anſwer all the Objections they ſhould bring.

Philpot's argument.

Then the Prolocutor bade him propound his Argument, and it ſhould be reſolutely anſwered by one of them; whereunto Morgan was appointed. On Wedneſday laſt, ſaid Philpot, I was forced to ſilence before I had proſecuted half my Argument, the Sum of which (as was gathered by the juſt Context of the Scripture) was this, That the human Body of Chriſt was aſcended into Heaven, and placed at the Right Hand of God the Father: Wherefore after the Imagination of Man, it could not be ſituate upon Earth inviſibly in the Sacrament of the Altar. The Argument was denied by Morgan; but for Proof hereof, Philpot ſaid, that this was what he had to confirm his firſt Argument with, if they would have ſuffered him the other Day, as he hoped they would.

One ſelf and ſame Nature, ſaid he, receiveth not in it ſelf any Thing that is contrary to it ſelf.

But the Body of Chriſt is an human Nature, diſtinct from the Deity, and is a proper Nature of itſelf.

Ergo, It cannot receive any Thing that is contrary to that Nature, and that varieth from it ſelf.

But bodily to be preſent, and bodily to be abſent, to be on Earth, and to be in Heaven, and all at one preſent Time, be Things contrary to the Nature of an human Body. Ergo, It cannot be ſaid of the human Body of Chriſt, that the ſelf ſame Body is both in Heaven, and alſo in Earth at one Inſtant, either viſibly or inviſibly.

Here is a new Evaſion invented by Morgan.

Morgan denied the firſt Part of the Argument. Which Philpot vouched out of an ancient Writer, Vigilius. But Morgan cavilled thereat, and ſaid, that it was no Scripture, and bade him prove the ſame from Scripture.

Philpot replied, that he could likewiſe do, and very well deduce the ſame from St. Paul, who ſaith, that Chriſt is like unto us in all Points, except Sin: and therefore, like as one of our Bodies cannot receive in itſelf any thing contrary to the Nature of a Body, as to be in Paul's Church and at Weſtminſter in one Inſtant, or to be at London viſibly, and at Lincoln inviſibly at one Time; for that is contrary to the Nature of a Body, and of all Creatures (as Didymus and Baſilius affirm) that an inviſible Creature, as an Angel, cannot be at one Time in different Places. Wherefore he concluded, that the Body of Chriſt could not be in more Places than one, which is in Heaven, and ſo conſequently was not included or contained in the Sacrament of the Altar.

One Body cannot be at once in divers Places.

The Prolocutor took upon him to anſwer to this, ſaying, That it was not true that Chriſt was like unto us in all Points, except Sin. For that Chriſt was not conceived by the Seed of Man as we be.

Chriſt, after his Incarnation, like unto us all Points, Sin only accepted.

Whereunto Philpot again replied, That Chriſt's Conception was propheſied before by the Angel to be ſupernatural, but after he had received our Nature by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt in the Virgin's Womb, he became in all Points like unto us, except Sin.

Then Morgan inferred that this Saying of Paul did not plainly prove his Purpoſe. Well, ſaid Philpot, I perceive that you Anſwer but by cavilling, yet am I not deſtitute of other Scriptures to confirm my firſt Argument, though you refuſe the Probation of ſo Ancient and Catholick a Doctor as Vigilius is. For St. Peter making mention of Chriſt in the Sermon that he made in the Third of the Acts, ſaith thus, Whom Heaven muſt receive, until the Conſummation of all Things, &c. which Words are ſpoken of his Humanity. And if Heaven muſt hold Chriſt, then can he not be here on Earth, in the Sacrament, as is pretended.

Harpsfield puts in.

Morgan laughing at this, and giving no direct Anſwer at all, Harpsfield ſtood up, being one of the Biſhop of London's Chaplains, and took upon him to anſwer to the Saying of St. Peter, and demanded of Philpot, Whether he would of Neceſſity force Chriſt to any Place, or not?

Philpot's Anſwer.

Philpot ſaid, that he would no otherwiſe force Chriſt of Neceſſity to any Place, than he is taught by the Words of the Holy Ghoſt, that ſound thus; That Chriſt's human Body muſt abide in Heaven until the Day of Judgment, as I rehearſed out of the Chapter abovementioned. Anno 1553.

Harpsfield replied, do ye not know that God is a God omnipotent? Yes, ſaid Philpot, I know that right well, neither do I queſtion his Omnipotency at all. But as to Chriſt's Omnipotency, what he may do is not our Queſtion, but rather what he doth. I know he may make a Stone in the Wall a Man, if he pleaſe, and alſo that he may make more Worlds, but doth he therefore ſo? It were no good Conſequent ſo to conclude, he may do this or that, therefore he doth it.

Only ſo much is to be believed of God's Omnipotency, as is in the Word expreſſed.

That Chriſt's Body is both in Heaven, and here alſo really in the Sacrament, is not expreſſed in the Word.

Ergo, it is not to be believed, that the Body of Chriſt, being in Heaven, is here alſo really in the Sacrament.

If Weſton charge them for impriſoning Chriſt in Heaven, how may they chage the Papiſts for impriſoning Chriſt in a Box.

Why, ſaid the Prolocutor, then you will put Chriſt in Priſon in Heaven. To which Philpot anſwered, Do you reckon Heaven to be a Priſon? God grant us all to come to that Priſon.

After this, Harpsfield inferred, that this Word Oportet in St. Peter, which in Engliſh ſignifieth muſt, did not import ſo much as I would infer, of Neceſſity, as by other Places of Scripture it may appear, as in the Firſt to Timothy, where St. Paul ſaith, A Biſhop muſt be the Huſband of one Wife. Here, quoth he, the aforeſaid Latin Word Oportet, that ſignifies muſt, doth not import ſuch a Neceſſity, but that he that never was married, may be a Biſhop.

Mr. Philpot.

To which Philpot again reply'd, that the Places which he went about to compare were not alike, and that in comparing the Scriptures we muſt not conſider the bare Words, but rather the Meaning of the Scriptures; and becauſe in the Place by him alledged, St. Paul declares of what Quality a Biſhop ought to be: But as to the other Place, St. Peter teaches us the Place where Chriſt muſt neceſſarily be until the End of the World; which we ought to believe to be true. And this Compariſon of the Latin Word Oportet, which in Engliſh ſignifies muſt, is no more an Anſwer to my Argument, than if I was to ſay of you now being here, You muſt needs be here, which importeth ſuch a Neceſſity for the Time, that you can no otherwiſe be but here, and yet you would go about in Words to avoid this Neceſſity with another Oportet in another Senſe, as for Inſtance, you muſt be a good Man, where muſt doth not verily conclude any ſuch Neceſſity, but that you may be an evil Man. Thus you may ſee that your Anſwer is not ſufficient, and, as it were, no Anſwer to my Argument.

Oportet in Latin, but in Engliſh, muſt, differently taken in Scripture.

Then the Prolocutor, to help the Matter out, if poſſible, brought in another Oportet, ſaying, What ſay you to this, Oportet hæreſes eſſe; muſt Hereſies needs be therefore becauſe of this Word Oportet?

Yea, truly, quoth Philpot, it cannot otherwiſe be, if you will add that which followeth immediately upon theſe Words of Paul, that is, Ut qui electi ſunt manifeſtentur; that is, That ſuch as be the Elect of God may be manifeſted and known.

Why, quoth the Prolocutor, the Time hath been that no Hereſies were. I know no ſuch Time, ſaid Philpot: For ſince the Time of Abel and Cain Hereſies have been, and then began they. Then ſaid the Prolocutor, will you now anſwer Morgan to an Argument or two? I Anno 1553. will, said Philpot, if I may have my Arguments first answered any thing according to Truth and Learning. What, quoth the Prolocutor, you will never be answered. How I am answered, said Philpot, let all Men that are here present judge, and especially such as are learned, and with what cavilling you have dallied with me.

First, to the antient Authority of Vigilius you have answered nothing at all, but only denying what he saith to be Scripture. Secondly, To the Saying of St. Peter in the Acts, ye have answered thus, demanding of me, whether I would keep Christ in Prison, or not? Let Men now judge if this be a sufficient Answer or not?

Then Morgan stood up again, and asked Philpot, whether he would be ruled by the universal Church, or not?

Yes, said Philpot, if it be the true Catholick Church. And since you speak so much of the Church, I would fain have you declare what the Church is.

The Church, said Morgan, is diffused and dispersed throughout the whole World. That is a diffuse Definition, said Philpot, for I am yet as uncertain as I was before, what you mean by the Church: But I acknowledge no Church but that which is grounded and founded on God's Word, as St. Paul saith, Upon the Foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, and upon the Scriptures of God.

Moreman. Whether the Church was before the Scripture.

What, quoth Moreman, was the Scripture before the Church? Yea, said Philpot. But I will prove nay, said Moreman, and I will begin at Christ's Time. The Church of Christ was before any Scripture written. For Matthew was the first that wrote the Gospel, about a dozen Years after Christ. Ergo, the Church was before the Scripture.

To whom Philpot answering, denied his Argument. Which when Moreman could not prove, Philpot shewed his Argument to be a Fallacy, or a deceivable Argument: For he took the Scripture to be only that which was written by Men in Letters, whereas in Truth, all Prophecy uttered by the Spirit of God, was counted to be Scripture before it was written in Paper and Ink, for that it was written in the Hearts, and graven in the Minds, yea, and inspired in the Mouths of good Men, and of Christ's Apostles by the Spirit of Christ: As the Salutation of the Angel was the Scripture of Christ, and the Word of God, before it was written. At that Moreman cried, Fie, fie, wondering that the Scripture of God should be counted Scripture before it was written, and affirmed, that he had no Knowledge that said so.

Scripture consists not only in letters, but is that which is inspired in the Hearts of good Men by the Holy Ghost.

To whom Philpot replied, That as to Knowledge in this Matter, for the Trial of the Truth about the Questions in Controversy, he would wish himself no worse matched than with Moreman.

At which Saying the Prolocutor was grievously offended, saying, that it was arrogantly spoken of him, to compare himself with such a worshipful learned Man as Moreman was, being himself a Man unlearned, yea, a Madman, fitter to be sent to Bedlam, than to be among such a Sort of learned and grave Men as were there, and a Man that never would be answered, and one that troubled the whole House; and therefore he commanded him to come no more into the House, and thereupon demanded of the House, whether they would agree thereunto, or not. To whom a great Company answered, yea. Upon which Philpot replied again, that he might think himself happy that was out of their Company.

Weston calleth Philpot Madman.

Then Morgan rose up and whispered the Prolocutor in the Ear; and the Prolocutor spoke to Philpot again, and said, Lest thou shouldst slander the House, and say that we will not suffer you to declare your Mind, we are content you shall come into the House as you have done before, so that you be apparelled with a long Gown and a Tippet, as we be, and that you shall not speak but when I command you. Then, said Philpot, I had rather be absent altogether.

Philpot commanded to come in a long Gown and a Tippet, or else to come no more to the Convocation.

Thus they reasoned to and fro, till at length about the 13th of December, Queen Mary, to take up the Matter, sendeth to Bonner, Bishop of London, commanding him to dissolve and break up the Convocation. The Copy of which Command here followeth.

The Queen's Precept to Bonner Bishop of London, for dissolving the aforesaid Convocation.

Decem. 13. Qu. Mary dissolves the Convocation.

MARY, &c. To the Reverend Father in God Edmund Lord Bishop of London, sendeth greeting. Whereas there is now held at Paul's, London, the Convocation of the Clergy belonging to the Province of Canterbury; We, by and with the Advice and Consent of Our Council, and for divers other Causes and Considerations particularly moving Us thereunto, have hereby thought fit the said Convocation should be dissolved. And therefore we strictly charge and command you, forthwith to dissolve or cause to be dissolved the said Convocation, as shall seem to you most fit and convenient: Signifying withal on Our Part to all and several the Bishops, Archdeacons, Deans, and all other spiritual Persons, that they and every of them do obey and comply with this Our Command as becometh them so to do.

Witness Ourself at Westminster, the 13th Day of December, in the First Year of Our Reign.

During the Time of this Disputation, November 20. the Mayor of Coventry sent up unto the Lords of the Council Baldwin Clarke, J. Careless, Thomas Wilcocks, and Richard Estelin, for their Behaviour upon Allhallows-day before. Whereupon Careless and Wilcocks were committed to the Gatehouse, and the other two to the Marshalsea.

The same Day there was a Letter directed to Sir Christopher Heydon, and Sir William Farmer, Knights, for the apprehending of John Huntington, Preacher, for making a Rhime against Dr. Stokes and the Sacrament; who appearing before the Council the 3d of December then following, was, upon his humble Submission and Promise to amend as well in Doctrine as in Living, again suffered to depart.

In the Days of King Henry and King Edward his Successor, divers Noblemen and others were committed to the Tower, some charged with Treason, as Lord Courtney, and the Duke of Norfolk (whose Son Lord Henry, Earl of Surrey, a worthy and ingenious Gentleman, had been at the same Time beheaded, but for what Cause, I shall not stand here inquiring: This is certain, that not many Years after, followed the beheading of both the Lord Seymours, and likewise of the Duke of Northumberland) some for the Pope's Supremacy, and suspicious Letters tending to Sedition, as Tonstal Bishop of Durham, and others for other Things, who were all continued Prisoners there till Queen Mary's coming in: Unto whom the said Queen forthwith granted their Pardon, and restored them to their former Dignities. Amongst whom was Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, who she not only freed out out of Captivity, but also advanced to be High Chancellor of England. Moreover, to the Lord Courtney she shewed such Favour that she made him Earl of Devonshire, insomuch that there was a Suspicion amongst many that she would marry him, but that proved otherwise.

Steph. Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, made Lord Chancellor.

The Lord Courtney made Earl of Devonshire.

At the same Time likewise the Queen released Bonner from his Confinement in the Marshalsea, and restored him to the Bishoprick of London, displacing Dr. Ridley, with divers other good Bishops, as is mentioned before; as Cranmer from Canterbury, the Archbishop of York likewise, Poynet from Winchester, John Hooper from Worcester, Barlow from Bath, Harley from Hereford, Taylor from Lincoln, Ferrar from St. David's, Coverdale from Exeter, Scory from Chichester, &c. with a great Number of Archdeacons, Deans, and briefly all such beneficed Men, who were either married, or would constantly adhere to their Profession, were removed from their Livings, and others of the contrary Sect put in the same, as Cardinal Pool (who was then sent for) Gardiner, Heath, White, Day, Troublefield, &c.

Good Bishops displaced.

Popish Prelates intruded by Q. Mary.

And as touching Cranmer, of whom mention was made before, forasmuch as at the same Time there was a Rumour spread Abroad of him in London that he had recanted, and caused Mass to be said at Canterbury, in order therefore to clear himself, he published Abroad a Declaration of his Truth and Constancy in that Behalf, protesting that he neither had done so, nor minded so to do: adding moreover, that if the Queen pleased, he, with Peter Martyr, and certain others whom he would chuse, would in open Disputation vindicate the Doctrine taught and set forth in the Time of King Edward, against all Persons whomsoever. But while he was in Expectation to have this Disputation obtained, he, with other Bishops, were laid fast in the Tower, but Peter Martyr was permitted to depart the Realm, and so he went to Argentine.

Cranmer, with Peter Martyr, and others, offered to defend the Cause of their Doctrine against all Men.

In the Month of November, Archbishop Cranmer, notwithstanding he had earnestly refused to subscribe to the King's Will in disinheriting his Sister Mary, alledging many grave and pithy Reasons for her Legitimation, was in Guildhall of London arraigned and attainted of Treason, with the Lady Jane, and three of the Duke of Northumberland's Sons, who were remanded back to the Tower, at the Intreaty of certain Persons, and there kept for a Time. But Cranmer being acquitted of Treason, stood only in the Action and Case of Doctrine which they called Heresy, of which he was very glad and joyful.

Dr. Cranmer, with Lady Jane arraigned of Treason in Guildhall.

Cranmer acquitted of Treason.

This being done in November, the People, and especially the Churchmen, perceiving the Queen so eagerly set on her old Religion, they likewise for their Parts, to shew themselves no less forward to comply with the Queen's Humour, (as the Custom is of the Multitude commonly to frame themselves after the Humour of the Prince and Time present) begin in their Quires to set up the Pageant of St. Catherine, and of St. Nicholas, and of their Processions in Latin, after their old Solemnity with their gay Gar-deviance, and gray Amices or Vestments.

And when the Month of December was come the Parliament broke up, repealing first all such Statutes as were made either of Premunire, or concerned any Alteration of Religion and Administration of Sacraments in the Days of King Edward. In which Parliament also Communication was moved of the Queen's Marriage with King Philip the Emperor's Son. Anno 1553.

In the Mean while Cardinal Pool being sent for by Queen Mary, was by the Emperor requested to stay with him, to the Intent (as some think) that his Presence in England should be no Hindrance to the Marriage between his Son Philip and Queen Mary. For the accomplishing of which he sent a most ample Embassy, with full Power to make up the Marriage between them; which had such good Success, as that after a few Days communing about Matters, they knit up the Knot.

Cardinal Pool sent for.

Marriage between Philip and Mary concluded.

January 13. 1554. Dr. Crome was committed to the Fleet, for preaching on Christmas-day without License. Anno 1554.

Jan. 21. Thomas Wooton, Esq; was committed close Prisoner to the Fleet for Matters of Religion.

The mention of this Marriage was about the Beginning of Jauuary, and was ill taken both of the common People, and several of the Nobility, who for this, and for Religion, conspiring among themselves, raised a Rebellion, whereof Sir Thomas Wyat, Knight, was one of the chief Beginners: who being in Kent, said, That the Queen and Council would by her Marriage with a Foreigner, bring upon this Realm most miserable Servitude, and establish the Popish Religion. About the 25th of January, News came to London of this Rising in Kent, and shortly after of the Duke of Suffolk, who was fled into Warwickshire and Leicestershire, there to gather to him a Power. The Queen therefore caused them both, with the Carews of Devonshire, to be proclaimed Traitors; and sent into Kent against Wyat, Thomas Duke of Norfolk, who being about Rochester Bridge forsaken of them that went with him, returned safe to London without any further harm, and without bloodshed on either Party.

Sir Thomas Wyat rebels.

The Duke of Norfolk sent 'gainst Wyat.

Furthermore, to apprehend the Duke of Suffolk, being fled into Warwickshire, the Earl of Huntingdon was sent Post, who entering the City of Coventry before the Duke, disappointed him of his Purpose. Wherefore the Duke in great Distress committed himself to the keeping of a Servant of his named Underwood, in Astley Park, who like a Traitor, betrayed him: and so he was brought up to the Tower of London.

The Duke of Suffolk apprehended.

In the mean while Sir Peter Carew hearing of what was done, fled into France, but the others were taken, and Wyat came towards London in the Beginning of February. The Queen hearing of Wyat's coming, came into the City to the Guildhall, where she made a vehement Oration against Wyat; the Contents whereof here followeth, as near as could be penn'd.

Q. Mary cometh to Guildhall.

Queen Mary's Oration in Guildhall.

Q. Mary's Oration to the Londoners.

I Am come unto you in mine own Person, to tell you that which already you see and know, that is, how traiterously and rebelliously a number of Kentishmen have assembled themselves against both us and you. Their Pretence (as they said at the first) was for a Marriage determined for us: To which, and to all the Articles thereof ye have been made privy. But since we have caused certain of our Privy-Council to go again unto them, and to demand the Cause of this their Rebellion, and it appeared

Anno 1554.

Demands pretended to be sent from Wyat and his Company to Queen Mary.

appeared then unto our ſaid Council, that the Matter of the Marriage ſeemed to be but a Spaniſh Cloak to cover their pretended Purpoſe againſt our Religion, for that they arrogantly and traiterouſly demanded to have the Governance of our Perſon, the keeping of the Tower, and the placing of our Councellors.

Now, loving Subjects, what I am ye right well know. I am your Queen, to whom at my Coronation, when I was wedded to the Realm, and Laws of the ſame (the ſpouſal Ring whereof I have on my Finger, which never hitherto was, nor hereafter ſhall be left off) you promiſed your Allegiance and Obedience unto me. And that I am the right and true Inheritor of the Crown of this Realm of England, I take all Chriſtendom to Witneſs. My Father, as ye all know, poſſeſſed the ſame regal State, which now rightly is deſcended unto me: And to him always ye ſhewed yourſelves moſt faithful and loving Subjects, and therefore I doubt not but ye will ſhew yourſelves likewiſe to me, and that ye will not ſuffer a vile Traitor to have the Order and Governance of our Perſon, and to occupy our Eſtate, eſpecially being ſo vile a Traitor as Wyat is: Who moſt certainly, as he hath abuſed mine ignorant Subjects which be on his Side, ſo doth he intend and propoſe the Deſtruction of you, and Spoil of your Goods. And I ſay to you in the Word of a Prince, I cannot tell how naturally the Mother loveth the Child, for I was never the Mother of any, but certainly, if a Prince and Governor may as naturally and earneſtly love her Subjects, as the Mother doth love the Child, then aſſure yourſelves, that I, being your Lady and Miſtreſs, do as earneſtly and tenderly Love and Favour you. And I thus loving you, cannot but think that ye as heartily and faithfully love me, and then I doubt not but we ſhall give theſe Rebels a ſhort and ſpeedy Overthrow.

How he intended the Spoil of their Goods, it appeareth, in that he coming to Southwark, did hurt neither Man, Woman nor Child, neither in Body, nor in a Penny of their Goods.

As concerning the Marriage, ye ſhall underſtand, that I enterprized not the doing thereof without Advice, and that by the Advice of all our Privy-Council, who ſo conſidered and weighed the great Commodities that might enſue thereof, that that they not only thought it very honourable, but alſo expedient, both for the Wealth of the Realm, and alſo of you our Subjects. And as touching myſelf, I aſſure you, I am not ſo bent to my Will, neither ſo preciſe nor affectionate, that either for mine own Pleaſure I would chuſe where I liſt, or that I am ſo deſirous, as needs I would have one. For God, I thank him, to whom be the Praiſe therefore, I have hitherto lived a Virgin, and doubt nothing, but with God's Grace, I am able ſo to live ſtill. But if, as my Progenitors have done before, it may pleaſe God that I might leave ſome Fruit of my Body behind me, to be your Governor, I truſt, you would not only rejoice thereat, but alſo, I know, it would be to your great Comfort. And certainly, if I either did think or know, that this Marriage were to the Hurt of any of you my Commons, or to the Impeachment of any Part or Parcel of the royal State of this Realm of England, I would never conſent thereunto, neither would I ever marry while I lived. And in the Word of a Queen, I promiſe you, that if it ſhall not probably appear to all the Nobility and Commons in the high Court of Parliament, that this Marriage ſhall be for the high Benefit and Commodity of the whole Realm, then will I abſtain from Marriage while I live.

Q. Mary excuſeth her Marriage.

The promiſe of Q. Mary touching her Marriage.

And now good Subjects, pluck up your Hearts, and like true Men, ſtand faſt againſt theſe Rebels, both our Enemies and yours, and fear them not; for I aſſure you, I fear them nothing at all. And I will leave with you my Lord Howard, and my Lord Treaſurer, who ſhall be Aſſiſtants with the Mayor for your Defence.

Here it is to be obſerved, that at the coming of Queen Mary to Guildhall, it being before reported, that ſhe was coming with harneſſed Men, ſo affrighted the Londoners, leſt they ſhould be there entrapped and put to Death, that great Numbers of them made out at the Gate before ſhe entered in. It is likewiſe to be noted, that when ſhe had ended her Oration, Winchester ſtanding by her when the Oration was done, with great Admiration cried to the People; O how happy are we, to whom God hath given ſuch a wiſe and learned Prince, &c.

Two Days after, the third of February, the Lord Cobham was committed to the Tower, and Mr. Wyat entered into Southwark: Who, finding that he could not enter that way into London, returned with his Army by Kingſton, and came up through the Streets to Ludgate, and returning thence, he was reſiſted at Temple-Bar, and there ſurrender'd himſelf to Sir Clement Parſon, who brought him to the Court; and with him the reſt of his Army (for Sir George Harper and almoſt half of his Men had ran away from him at Kingſton-bridge) were alſo taken, and about an hundred killed, and they that were taken were ſent to Priſon, and a great many of them hanged, and he himſelf afterwards was executed on Tower-hill, and then quartered.

Mr. Wyat in Southwark.

Mr. Wyat came to Ludgate.

He is apprehended at Temple-Bar.

Mr. Wyat executed.

The 12th Day of February the Lady Jane was beheaded; two Days before her Death Mr. Fecknam, alias Howman, was ſent to her from the Queen to converſe with her, and endeavour to reduce her from the Doctrine of Chriſt to Queen Mary's Religion. The Effect of which Communication here followeth.

A Conference between the Lady Jane and Fecknam.

Fecknam. Madam, I lament your heavy Caſe, and yet I doubt not, but that you bear out this Sorrow of yours with a conſtant and patient Mind.

Jane. You are welcome unto me, Sir, if your coming be to give Chriſtian Exhortation. And as for my heavy Caſe, (I thank God) I do ſo little lament it, that rather I account the ſame for a more manifeſt Declaration of God's Favour towards me, than ever he ſhewed me at any Time before. And therefore there is no Cauſe why either you, or others which bear me good Will, ſhould lament or be grieved with this my Caſe, being a thing ſo profitable for my Soul's Health.

Lady Jane comfortably taketh her Trouble.

Feck. I am here come to you at this preſent ſent from the Queen and her Council, to inſtruct you in the true Doctrine of the right Faith: Although I have ſo great a Confidence in you, that I ſhall have, I truſt, little need to travel with you much therein.

Jane. Forſooth I heartily thank the Queen's Highneſs, which is not unmindful of her humble Subject: And I hope likewiſe that you no leſs will do your Duty therein both truly and faithfully, according to that you were ſent for.

Feck. What is then required of a Chriſtian Man?

Jane. That he ſhould believe in God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, three Perſons and one God.

Feck. What, is there nothing elſe to be required or looked for in a Chriſtian, but to believe in him?

Jane. Yes, we muſt love him with all our Heart, with all our Soul, and with all our Mind, and our Neighbour as ourſelf.

Feck. Why? then Faith juſtifieth not, nor ſaveth not.

Jane. Yes verily, Faith (as Paul ſaith) only juſtifieth.

Feck. Why, St. Paul ſaith, If I have all Faith without Love, it is nothing.

Jane. True it is; for how can I love him whom I truſt not? Or how can I truſt him whom I love not? Faith and Love go both together, and yet Love is comprehended in Faith.

Feck. How ſhall we love our Neighbour?

Jane. To love our Neighbour is to feed the Hungry, to cloath the Naked, and give Drink to the Thirſty, and to do to him as we would do to ourſelves.

Feck. Why, then it is neceſſary unto Salvation to do good Works alſo, and it is not ſufficient only to believe.

Good Works neceſſary in a Chriſtian, yet do they not profit to Salvation.

Jane. I deny that, and I affirm that Faith only ſaveth: But it is meet for a Chriſtian, in Token that he followeth his Maſter Chriſt, to do good Works, yet may we not ſay that they profit to our Salvation. For when we have done all, yet we be unprofitable Servants, and Faith only in Chriſt's Blood ſaveth us.

Two Sacraments.

Feck. How many Sacraments are there?

Jane. Two. The one the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the other the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Feck. No, there are Seven.

Jane. By what Scripture find you that?

Feck. Well, we will talk of that hereafter. But what is ſignified by your two Sacraments?

The Sacrament of Baptiſm what it ſignifieth. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, what it ſignifieth.

Jane. By the Sacrament of Baptiſm I am waſhed with Water and regenerated by the Spirit, and that waſhing is a Token to me that I am the Child of God. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper offered unto me, is a ſure Seal and Teſtimony that I am, by the Blood of Chriſt which he ſhed for me on the Croſs, made Partaker of the everlaſting Kingdom.

Feck. Why, what do you receive in that Sacrament? Do you not receive the very Body and Blood of Chriſt?

What we receive with the Sacrament.

Jane. No ſurely, I do not ſo believe. I think that at the Supper I neither receive Fleſh nor Blood, but Bread and Wine: Which Bread when it is broken, and the Wine when it is drunken, putteth me in Remembrance how that for my Sins the Body of Chriſt was broken, and his Blood ſhed on the Croſs, and with that Bread and Wine I receive the Benefits that come by the Breaking of his Body, and ſhedding of his Blood for our Sins on the Croſs.

Feck. Why, doth not Chriſt ſpeak theſe Words, Take, eat, this is my Body? Require you any plainer Words? Doth he not ſay it is his Body?

Jane. I grant he ſaith ſo; and ſo he ſaith, I am the Vine, I am the Door, but he is never the more the Door nor the Vine. Doth not St. Paul ſay, He calleth Things that are not as though they were? God forbid that I ſhould ſay, that I eat the very natural Body and Blood of Chriſt: For then either I ſhould pluck away my Redemption, or elſe there were two Bodies, or two Chriſts. One Body was tormented on the Croſs, and if they did eat another Body, then had he two Bodies: Or if his Body were eaten, then was it not broken upon the Croſs, or if it were broken upon the Croſs, it was not eaten of his Diſciples.

Rom. iv.

Feck. Why? Is it not as poſſible that Chriſt by his Power could make his Body both to be eaten and broken, as to be born of a Woman without Seed of Man, and to walk upon the Sea, having a Body, and other ſuch like Miracles as he wrought by his Power only? Anno 1554.

Jane. Yes verily, if God would have done at his Supper any Miracle, he might have done ſo: But I ſay, that then he minded no Work nor Miracle, but only to break his Body, and ſhed his Blood on the Croſs for our Sins. But I pray you to anſwer me to this one Queſtion: Where was Chriſt, when he ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body? Was he not at the Table when he ſaid ſo? He was at that Time alive, and ſuffered not till the next Day. What took he, but Bread? what brake he, but Bread? And what gave he, but Bread? Look what he took, he brake: And look, what he brake, he gave: And look, what he gave, they did eat: And yet all this while he himſelf was alive, and at Supper before his Diſciples, or elſe they were deceived. Chriſt had Power to turn Bread into his Body, but that is no Argument that he did ſo.

Feck. You ground your Faith upon ſuch Authors as ſay and unſay both in a Breath, and not upon the Church, to whom ye ought to give Credit. Fecknam goeth from the Word to the Church.

Jane. No, I ground my Faith on God's Word, and not upon the Church, for if the Church be a good Church, the Faith of the Church muſt be try'd by God's Word, and not God's Word by the Church, nor yet my Faith. Shall I believe the Church becauſe of Antiquity? or ſhall I give Credit to the Church that taketh away from me the half Part of the Lord's Supper, and will not let any Man receive it in both Kinds? Which Things if they deny to us, then deny they to us Part of our Salvation. And I ſay, that it is an evil Church, and not the Spouſe of Chriſt, but the Spouſe of the Devil, that altereth the Lord's Supper, and both taketh from it, and addeth to it. To that Church (ſay I) God will add Plagues, and from that Church will he take their Part out of the Book of Life: Do they learn that of St. Paul when he miniſtred to the Corinthians in both Kinds? ſhall I believe this Church? God forbid. Faith to be grounded upon the Word, and not upon the Church. A Note of the falſe Church.

Feck. That was done for a good Intent of the Church, to avoid an Hereſy that ſprang on it.

Jane. Why? ſhall the Church alter God's Will and Ordinance for good Intent? how did King Saul? The Lord God defend. God's Word not to be altered for good Intent.

With theſe and ſuch like Perſuaſions he endeavoured, but to no Purpoſe, to turn her to the Popiſh Religion. They reaſoned about many other Things, but theſe were the Chief.

Then Fecknam took his Leave, ſaying, that he was ſorry for her: For I am aſſure, quoth he, that we two ſhall never meet.

Jane. True it is, ſaid ſhe, that we ſhall never meet, except God turn your Heart. For I am aſſured, unleſs you repent and turn to God, you are in an evil Caſe: and I pray God, in the Bowels of his Mercy, to ſend you his Holy Spirit: For he hath given you his great Gift of Utterance, if it pleaſed him alſo to open the Eyes of your Heart. Theſe Words were ſpoken openly.

The Lady Jane's Letter to her Father.

Lady Jane's Letter to her Father.

FATHER, although it hath pleaſed God to haſten my Death by you, by whom my Life ſhould rather have been lengthened: yet can I ſo patiently take it, as I yield God more hearty Thanks for ſhortening my woful Days, than Anno 1554. than if all the World had been given unto my Poſſeſſions with Life lengthened at my own Will. And albeit I am aſſured of your impatient Dolors, redoubled manifold Ways, both in bewailing your own Woe, and eſpecially (as I hear) my unfortunate State, yet, my dear Father (if I may without Offence rejoice in my own Miſhaps) me ſeems in this I may account myſelf Bleſſed, that waſhing my Hands with the Innocency of my Fact, my guiltleſs Blood may cry before the Lord, Mercy to the Innocent. And yet, tho' I muſt needs acknowledge, that being conſtrained, and as you wot well enough, continually aſſayed, in taking upon me I ſeemed to conſent, and therein grievouſly offended the Queen and her Laws: yet do I aſſuredly truſt, that this my Offence toward God is ſo much the leſs, in that being in ſo royal Eſtate as I was, mine inforced Honour, blended never with mine innocent Heart: And thus, good Father, I have opened unto you the State wherein I at preſent ſtand. Whoſe Death at hand, although to you perhaps it may ſeem right woful, to me there is nothing that can be more welcome, than from this Vale of Miſery to aſpire to that heavenly Throne of all Joy and Pleaſure with Chriſt our Saviour. In whoſe ſtedfaſt Faith (if it may be lawful for the Daughther ſo to write to the Father) the Lord that hitherto hath ſtrengthened you, ſo continue you, that at the leaſt we may meet in Heaven with the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt.

This Parentheſis concludeth with a Prayer and private Admonition to her Father, that he fall not from his Religion.

When her Father, in King Edward's Time, flouriſhed in Freedom and Proſperity, he had belonging to him a learned Man, a Student of the Univerſity of Oxford, who then being his Chaplain, and appearing to be a ſincere Preacher of the Goſpel according to the Doctrine of that Time ſet forth and received, but ſhortly after, when the State of Religion began to be altered by Queen Mary, he altered his Profeſſion according to the Time, and of a Proteſtant, became a Friend and Defender of the Pope's Proceedings. This pious and chriſtian Lady ſeeing ſuch a Change in a Perſon whom ſhe thought ſo ſincere, was much grieved, and moſt of all lamented the dangerous State of his Soul, in ſo cowardly ſliding away from the Truth, and writeth her Mind to him in a ſharp and vehement Letter: Which (as it appeared to proceed from an earneſt and zealous Heart, ſo) ſhe pray'd that God might make it effectual in reducing him to Repentance, and engage him to take better Hold on that whereon depended the eternal Welfare of his own Soul. The Copy of the Letter is as follows.

Another Letter of the Lady Jane, to Mr. Harding, late Chaplain to her Father, the Duke of Suffolk.

Luke 9. A ſharp Letter from Lady Jane to Mr. Harding.

SO often as I call to Mind the dreadful and fearful Saying of God, That he which layeth hold upon the Plough and looketh back, is not meet for the Kingdom of Heaven: And, on the other Side, the comfortable Words of our Saviour Chriſt to all thoſe that forſaking themſelves, do follow him: I cannot but marvel at thee, and lament thy Caſe, which ſeemed ſometime to be the lively Member of Chriſt, but now the deformed Imp of the Devil; ſometime the beautiful Temple of God, but now the ſtinking and filthy Kennel of Satan; ſometime the unſpotted Spouſe of Chriſt, but now the unſhamefac'd Paramour of Antichriſt; ſometime my faithful Brother, but now a Stranger and Apoſtate; ſometime a ſtout Chriſtian Soldier, but now a cowardly run-away. Yea, when I conſider theſe Things, I cannot but ſpeak to thee, and cry out upon thee, thou Seed of Satan, and not of Judah, whom the Devil hath deceived, the World hath beguiled, and the Deſire of Life ſubverted, and made thee of a Chriſtian an Infidel. Wherefore haſt thou taken the Teſtament of the Lord in thy Mouth? Wherefore haſt thou preached the Law and the Will of God to others? Wherefore haſt thou inſtructed others to be ſtrong in Chriſt, when thou thyſelf doeſt now ſo ſhamefully ſhrink, and ſo horribly abuſe the Teſtament and Law of the Lord? When thou thyſelf preacheſt not to ſteal, yet moſt abominably ſtealeſt, not from Men, but from God, and committing moſt heinous Sacrilege, robbeſt Chriſt thy Lord of his right Members, thy Body and Soul, and chuſeſt rather to live miſerably with Shame in the World, than to die, and glorioufly with Honour reign with Chriſt, in whom, even in Death is Life? Why doſt thou now ſhew thyſelf moſt weak, when indeed thou oughteſt to be moſt ſtrong? The Strength of a Fort is unknown before the Aſſault, but thou yieldeſt thy Hold before any Battery be made. O wretched and unhappy Man, what art thou but Duſt and Aſhes? And wilt thou reſiſt thy Maker that faſhioned thee and framed thee? Wilt thou now forſake him that called thee from the Cuſtom gathering among the Romiſh Antichriſtians, to be an Ambaſſador and Meſſenger of his eternal Word? He that firſt framed thee, and ſince thy firſt Creation and Birth preſerved thee, nouriſhed and kept thee, yea, and inſpired thee with the Spirit of Knowledge, (I cannot ſay of Grace) ſhall he not now poſſeſs thee? Dareſt thou deliver up thyſelf to another, being not thine own, but his? How canſt thou, having Knowledge, or how dareſt thou neglect the Law of the Lord, and follow the vain Traditions of Men: And whereas thou haſt been a publick Profeſſor of his Name, become now a Defacer of his Glory? Wilt thou refuſe the true God, and worſhip the Invention of Man, the Golden Calf, the Whore of Babylon, the Romiſh Religion, that abominable Idol, the moſt wicked Maſs? Wilt thou torment again, rent, and tear the moſt precious Body of our Saviour Chriſt, with thy bodily and fleſhly Teeth? Wilt thou take upon thee to offer up any Sacrifice unto God for our Sins, conſidering that Chriſt offered up himſelf (as Paul ſaith) upon the Croſs a lively Sacrifice once for all? Can neither the Puniſhment of the Iſraelites, (which for their Idolatry they ſo oft received) nor the terrible Threatnings of the Prophets, nor the Curſes of God's own Mouth, fear thee to honour any other God than him? Doſt thou ſo regard him that ſpared not his dear and only Son for thee, ſo diminiſhing, yea, utterly extinguiſhing his Glory, that thou wilt attribute the Praiſe and Honour due unto him to the Idols, which have Mouths and ſpeak not, Eyes and ſee not, Ears and hear not; which ſhall periſh with them that made them?

This Harding a little before the Death of King Edward, was openly heard in his Sermons in London, to exhort the People great Vehemency, that if Trouble came, they ſhould never ſhrink from the true Doctrine of the Goſpel which they had received, but ſhould rather take it from God as a Trial of their Faith, and to prove them, whether they would ſtand by it or not.

What ſaith the Prophet Baruch, where he recited the Epiſtle of Jeremy written to the captive Jews? Did he not forewarn them, that in Babylon they ſhould ſee Gods of Gold, Silver, Wood and Stone born upon Men's Shoulders, to caſt a Fear before the Heathen? But be not ye afraid of them (ſaith Jeremy) nor do as others do. But when you ſee others worſhip them, ſay you in Baruch 6.

yeur Hearts, It is thou, O Lord, that oughteſt only to be worſhipped: For as for thoſe Gods, the Carpenter framed them and poliſhed them, yea, gilded be they, and laid over with Silver and vain Things, and cannot ſpeak. He ſheweth moreover the Abuſe of their Dealings, how the Prieſts took off their Ornaments, and apparelled their Women withal: How one holdeth a Scepter, another a Sword in his Hand, and yet can they judge in no Matter, nor defend themſelves, much leſs any other, from either Battle or Murder, nor yet from gnawing of Worms, nor any other evil Thing. Theſe and ſuch like Words ſpeaketh Jeremy unto them, whereby he proveth them to be but vain Things, and no Gods. And at laſt he concludeth thus, Confounded be all they that worſhip them. They were warned by Jeremy, and thou as Jeremy haſt warned others, and art warned thyſelf by many Scriptures in many Places. God ſaith, he is a jealous God, which will have all Honour, Glory and Worſhip given to him only. And Chriſt ſaith in the Fourth of Matthew, to Satan which tempted him, even to the ſame Belzebub, the ſame Devil which hath prevailed againſt thee: It is written, ſaith he, thou ſhalt honour the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. Matth. 4.

Theſe and ſuch like do prohibit thee and all Chriſtians to worſhip any other God than which was before all Worlds, and laid the Foundations both of Heaven and Earth: And wilt thou honour a deteſtable Idol, invented by Romiſh Popes, and the abominable College of crafty Cardinals? Chriſt offered himſelf up once for all, and wilt thou offer him up again daily at thy Pleaſure? But thou wilt ſay, thou doeſt it for a good Intent. Oh Sink of Sin! Oh Child of Perdition! Doſt thou dream therein of a good Intent, where thy Conſcience beareth thee Witneſs of God's threatned Wrath againſt thee? How did Saul? who for that he diſobeyed the Word of the Lord for a good Intent, was thrown from his worldly and temporal Kingdom. Shalt thou then that doſt deface God's Honour, and rob him of his Right, inherit the eternal and heavenly Kingdom? Wilt thou for a good Intent diſhonour God, offend thy Brother, and danger thy Soul, wherefore Chriſt hath ſhed his moſt precious Blood? Wilt thou for a good Intent pluck Chriſt out of Heaven, and make his Death void, and deface the Triumph of his Croſs by offering him up daily? Wilt thou either for Fear of Death or Hope of Life, deny and refuſe thy God, who enriched thy Poverty, healed thy Infirmity, and yielded to thee his Victory, if thou couldeſt have kept it? Doſt thou not conſider that the Thread of thy Life hangeth upon him that made thee, who can (as his Will is) either twine it harder to laſt the longer, or untwine it again to break the ſooner? Doſt thou not then remember the Saying of David, a notable King, to teach thee a miſerable Wretch, in his 104 Pſalm, where he ſaith thus: When thou takeſt away thy Spirit (O Lord) from Men, they die and are turned again to their Duſt, but when thou letteſt thy Breath go forth, they ſhall be made, and thou ſhalt renew the Face of the Earth. Pſal. 104. Remember the Saying of Chriſt in the Goſpel: Whoſoever ſeeketh to ſave his Life, ſhall loſe it: But whoſoever will loſe his Life for my Sake ſhall find it. And in the ſame Place, Whoſoever loveth Father or Mother above me, is not meet for me. He that will follow me, let him forſake himſelf, and take up his Croſs, and follow me. What Croſs? the Croſs of Infamy and Shame, of Miſery and Poverty, of Affliction and Perſecution Matt. 10.

for his Name's Sake. Let the oft falling of thoſe heavenly Showers pierce thy ſtony Heart. Let the two-edged Sword of God's holy Word ſheer aſunder the Sinews of worldly Reſpects, even to the very Marrow of thy carnal Heart, that thou mayeſt once again forſake thyſelf and embrace Chriſt. And like as good Subjects will not refuſe to hazard all in the Defence of their earthly and temporal Governour, ſo fly not like a white-livered Milkſop from the ſtanding wherein thy chief Captain Chriſt hath ſet thee in Array of this Life. Fight manfully, come Life, come Death: The Quarrel is God's, and undoubtedly the Victory is ours. Anno 1554.

But thou wilt ſay, I will not break Unity. What, not the Unity of Satan and his Members? Not the Unity of Darkneſs, the Agreement of Antichriſt and his Adherents. Nay, thou deceiveſt thyſelf with a fond Imagination of ſuch an Unity as is among the Enemies of Chriſt. Were not the falſe Prophets in an Unity? Were not Joſeph's Brethren and Jacob's Sons in an Unity? Were not the Heathen, as the Amalekites, the Perizites and Jebuſites in an Unity? Were not the Scribes and Phariſees in an Unity? Doth not King David teſtify, They have caſt their Heads together, and are confederate againſt the Lord? Yea, Thieves, Murderers, Conſpirators have their Unity. But what Unity? Tully ſaith of Amity, There is no Amity but with the Good. But mark my Friend, yea, Friend, if thou be not God's Enemy: There is no Unity but where Chriſt knitteth the Knot among ſuch as be his. Yea, be well aſſured, that where his Truth is not reſident, there it is verified that he himſelf ſaith: I came not to ſend Peace on Earth, but a Sword, &c. but to ſet one againſt another, the Son againſt the Father, and the Daughter againſt the Mother-in-Law. Deceive not thyſelf therefore with the glittering and glorious Name of Unity; for Antichriſt hath his Unity, yet not in Deed but in Name. The Agreement of ill Men is not an Unity, but a Conſpiracy. Thou haſt heard ſome Threatnings, ſome Curſings, and ſome Admonitions out of the Scripture to thoſe that love themſelves above Chriſt. Thou haſt heard alſo the ſharp and biting Words to thoſe that deny him for Love of Life: Saith he not, Matt. 10. He that denieth me before Men, I will deny him before my Father in Heaven? And to the ſame Effect writeth Paul, Heb. 6. It is impoſſible, ſaith he, that they which were once lightened, and have taſted of the heavenly Gift, and were Partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and have taſted of the good Word of God, if they fall and ſlide away, crucifying to themſelves the Son of God afreſh, and making of him a Mocking-ſtock, ſhould be renewed again by Repentance. And again, ſaith he, Heb. 10. If we ſhall willingly ſin after we have received the Knowledge of his Truth, there is no Oblation left for Sin, but the terrible Expectation of Judgment, and Fire which ſhall devour the Adverſaries. Thus St. Paul writeth, and this thou readeſt, and doſt thou not quake and tremble?

Antichriſt alſo hath his Unity, which is not to be kept.

Pſal. 83. 4.

Matth. 10. 34.

The Agreement of evil Men is no Unity, but a Conſpiracy.

Well, if theſe terrible and thundering Threatnings cannot ſtir thee to cleave unto Chriſt, and forſake the World; yet let the ſweet Conſolations and Promiſes of the Scriptures, let the Example of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, holy Martyrs and Confeſſors, encourage thee to take faſter Hold of Chriſt. Hearken what he ſaith, Matth. 5. Bleſſed are you when Men revile you, and perſecute you for my Sake: Rejoice and be glad, for great is your Reward in Heaven; for ſo perſecuted they the Prophets that were before you.

Anno 1554. Hear what the Prophet Isaiah saith, chap. 51. Fear not the Curse of Men, be not afraid of their Blasphemies, for Worms and Moth shall eat them up like Cloth and Wool, but my Righteousness shall endure for ever, and my saving Health from Generation to Generation. What art thou then, said he, that feareſt a mortal Man, the Child of Man, which fadeth away like the Flower, and forgetteſt the Lord that made thee, that spread out the Heavens, and laid the Foundation of the Earth? I am the Lord thy God, that makes the Sea to rage and be still, whose Name is the Lord of Hosts: I shall put my Word in thy Mouth, and defend thee with the turning of an Hand. And our Saviour Christ saith to his Disciples, Luke 12. Matt. 13. They shall accuse you, and bring you before Princes and Rulers for my Name's Sake, and some of you they shall persecute and kill; but fear you not, saith he, nor care you what you shall say: For it is the Spirit of your Father that speaketh within you. Even the very Hairs of your Head are all numbered. Lay up Treasure for yourselves (saith he, Matt. 10.) where no Thief cometh, nor Moth corrupteth. Fear not them that kill the Body, but are not able to kill the Soul; but fear him that hath Power to kill both Soul and Body. If ye were of the World, the World would love his own: But because ye are not of the World, but I have chosen you out of the World, therefore the World hateth you, John 15.

Let these and such like Consolations taken out of the Scriptures, strengthen you to Godward: Let not the Examples of holy Men and Women go out of your Mind, as Daniel and the rest of the Prophets, of the three Children, of Eleazarus that constant Father, of the seven Maccabees Children, of Peter, Paul, Steven, and other Apostles and holy Martyrs in the Beginning of the Church. As of good Simeon, Archbishop of Soloma, and Zetrophone, with infinite others under Sapores the King of the Persians and Indians, who contemned all Torments devised by the Tyrants for their Saviour's Sake. Return, return again unto Christ's War, and as becometh a faithful Warrior, put on that Armour that St. Paul teacheth to be most necessary for a Christian Man, Eph. 16. And above all Things take to you the Shield of Faith, and be you provoked by Christ's own Example to withstand the Devil, to forsake the World, and to become a true and faithful Member of his mystical Body, who spared not his own Body for our Sins.

Throw down yourself with the Fear of his threatned Vengeance for this so great and heinous an Offence of Apostacy; and comfort your self on the other Part with the Mercy, Blood, and Promise of him that is ready to turn unto you whensoever you turn unto him. Disdain not to come again with the lost Son, seeing you have so wandred with him. Be not ashamed to turn again with him from the Swill of Strangers, to the Delicates of your most benign and loving Father, acknowledging that you have sinned against Heaven and Earth: Against Heaven, by staining the glorious Name of God, and causing his most sincere and pure Word to be evil spoken of through you. Against Earth, by offending so many of your weak Brethren, to whom you have been a stumbling Block through your sudden sliding. Be not abashed to come home again with Mary, and weep bitterly with Peter, not only with shedding the Tears of your bodily Eyes, but also pouring out the Streams of your Heart, to wash away out of the Sight of God the Filth and Mire of your offensive Fall. Be not abashed to say with the Publican, Lord be merciful unto me a Sinner, Luke 18. Remember the horrible History of Julian of old, and the lamentable Case of Spira of late, whose Case, methinks, should be yet so green in your Remembrance, that being a Thing of our Time, you should fear the like Inconvenience, seeing you are fallen into the like Offence.

Last of all, let the lively Remembrance of the last Day be always before your Eyes, remembring the Terror that such shall be in at that Time, with the Runagates and Fugitives from Christ, which setting more by the World than by Heaven, more by their Life, than by him that gave them Life, did shrink, yea did clean fall away from him that forsook not them: And contrarywise, the inestimable Joys prepared for them, that fearing no Peril, nor dreading Death, have manfully fought, and victoriously triumphed over all Power of Darkness, over Hell, Death, and Damnation, through their most redoubted Captain Christ, who now stretcheth out his Arms to receive you, ready to fall upon your Neck and kiss you, and last of all to feast you with the Dainties and Delicates of his own precious Blood: Which undoubtedly, if it might stand with his determinate Purpose, he would not let to shed again, rather than you should be lost. To whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost, be all Honour, Praise, and Glory everlasting. Amen.

Be constant, be constant, fear not for any Pain.
Christ hath redeemed thee, and Heaven is thy Gain.

A Letter written by the Lady Jane at the End of the New Testament in Greek, which she sent to her Sister the Lady Katharine, the Night before she suffered.

An Exhortation of the Lady Jane to her Sister the Lady Katharine, to read God's Word.

I Have here sent you (good Sister Katharine) a Book, which although it be not outwardly trimmed with Gold, yet inwardly it is more worth than precious Stones. It is the Book (dear Sister) of the Law of the Lord. It is his Testament and last Will which he bequeathed unto us Wretches: Which shall lead you to the Path of eternal Joy, and if you with a good Mind read it, and with an earnest Mind do purpose to follow it, it shall bring you to an immortal and everlasting Life. It shall teach you to live, and learn to die. It shall win you more than you should have gained by the Possession of your woful Father's Lands. For as, if God had prospered him, you should have inherited his Lands, so if you apply diligently this Book, seeking to direct your Life after it, you shall be an Inheritor of such Riches, as neither the covetous shall withdraw from you, neither Thief shall steal, neither yet the Moths corrupt. Desire with David, good Sister, to understand the Law of the Lord God.

So live die, th by De you m live.

Live still to die, that you by Death may purchase eternal Life. And trust not that the Tenderness of your Age shall lengthen your Life; for as soon (if God call) goeth the Young as the Old, and labour always to learn to die. Defy the World, deny the Devil, and despise the Flesh, and delight yourself only in the Lord. Be penitent for your Sins, and yet despair not: Be strong in Faith, and yet presume not: And desire with St. Paul to be dissolved and to be with Christ, with whom even in Death there is Life.

Life. Be like the good Servant, and even at Midnight be waking, leſt when Death cometh and ſtealeth upon you as a Thief in the Night, you be, with the evil Servant found ſleeping, and left for lack of Oil, you be found like the five fooliſh Women, and like him that had not on the Wedding Garment, and then ye be caſt out from the Marriage. Rejoice in Chriſt, as I do. Follow the Steps of your Maſter Chriſt, and take up your Croſs: Lay your Sins on his Back, and always embrace him. And as touching my Death, rejoice as I do, (good Siſter) that I ſhall be delivered of this Corruption, and put on Incorruption. For I am aſſured, that I ſhall for loſing of a mortal Life, win an immortal Life, the which I pray God grant you, and ſend you of his Grace to live in his Fear, and to die in the true Chriſtian Faith, from the which (in God's Name) I exhort you, that you never ſwerve, neither for Hope of Life, nor for Fear of Death. For if you will deny his Truth for to lengthen out your Life, God will deny you, and yet ſhorten your Days. And if you will cleave unto him, he will prolong your Days to your Comfort and his Glory: To which Glory God bring me now, and you hereafter, when it pleaſeth him to call you. Fare you well, good Siſter, and put your only Truſt in God, who alone muſt help you.

A Prayer of the Lady Jane.

O Lord, thou God and Father of my Life, hear me poor and deſolate Woman, which flieth unto thee only in all Troubles and Miſeries. Thou, O Lord, art the only Defender and Deliverer of thoſe that put their Truſt in thee; and therefore I being defiled with Sin, incumbered with Affliction, unquieted with Troubles, wrapped in Cares, overwhelmed with Miſeries, vexed with Temptations, and grievouſly tormented with the long Impriſonment of this vile Maſs of Clay my ſinful Body, do come unto thee, O merciful Saviour, craving thy Mercy and Help, without the which ſo little Hope of Deliverance is left, that I may utterly deſpair of any Liberty. Albeit it is expedient, that ſeeing our Life ſtandeth upon trying, we ſhould be viſited ſometime with ſome Adverſity, whereby we might both be tried whether we be of thy Flock or no; and alſo know thee and our ſelves the better: Yet thou that ſaidſt thou wouldeſt not ſuffer us to be tempted above our Power, be merciful unto me now a miſerable Wretch, I beſeech thee; which, with Solomon, do cry unto thee; humbly deſiring thee, that I may neither be too much puffed up with Proſperity, neither too much preſſed down with Adverſity; leſt I, being too full, ſhould deny thee, my God; or being too low brought, ſhould deſpair and blaſpheme thee, my Lord and Saviour. O merciful God, conſider my Miſery beſt known unto thee; and be thou now unto me a ſtrong Tower of Defence, I humbly require thee. Suffer me not to be tempted above my Power; but either be thou a Deliverer unto me out of this great Miſery, or elſe give me Grace patiently to bear thy heavy Hand and ſharp Correction. It was thy right Hand that delivered the People of Iſrael out of the Hands of Pharaoh, which, for the Space of four hundred Years did oppreſs them, and keep them in Bondage. Let it therefore likewiſe ſeem good to thy fatherly Goodneſs, to deliver me, ſorrowful Wretch, for whom thy Son Chriſt ſhed his precious Blood on the Croſs) out of this miſerable Captivity and Bondage wherein I am now. How long wilt thou be abſent, for ever? O Lord, haſt thou forgotten to be gracious; and haſt thou ſhut up thy loving Kindneſs in Diſpleaſure? Wilt thou be no more intreated? Is thy Mercy clear gone for ever, and thy Promiſe come utterly to an End for evermore? Why doſt thou make ſo long tarrying? Shall I deſpair of thy Mercy, O God, far be that from me. I am thy Workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus; give me Grace therefore to tarry thy Leiſure, and patiently to bear thy Works, aſſuredly knowing, that as thou canſt, ſo thou wilt deliver me when it ſhall pleaſe thee; nothing doubting or miſtruſting thy Goodneſs towards me, for thou knoweſt better what is good for me than I do; therefore do with me in all Things as thou wilt, and plague me what Way thou wilt; only in the mean time arm me, I beſeech thee, with thy Armour, that I may ſtand faſt, my Loins being girded about with Verity, having on the Breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſs, and ſhod with the Shoes prepared by the Goſpel of Peace; above all Things taking to me the Shield of Faith, wherewith I may be able to quench all the fiery Darts of the Wicked, and taking the Helmet of Salvation, and the Sword of the Spirit, which is thy moſt Holy Word; praying always, with all Manner of Prayer and Supplication, that I may refer my ſelf wholly to thy Will, abiding thy Pleaſure, and comforting my ſelf in thoſe Troubles that it ſhall pleaſe thee to ſend me; ſeeing ſuch Troubles be profitable for me, and ſeeing I am aſſuredly perſuaded that it cannot be but well all that thou doeſt. Hear me, O merciful Father, for his Sake, whom thou wouldeſt ſhould be a Sacrifice for my Sins: To whom with thee and the Holy Ghoſt, be all Honour and Glory. Amen.

The Words and Behaviour of the Lady Jane upon the Scaffold.

The Lady Jane's Behaviour on the Scaffold.

WHEN ſhe firſt mounted the Scaffold, ſhe ſpake to the Spectators in this Manner: Good People, I am come hither to die, and by a Law I am condemned to the ſame, The Fact againſt the Queen's Highneſs was unlawful, and the conſenting thereunto by me: But touching the Procurement and Deſire thereof by me or on my Behalf, I do waſh my Hands thereof in Innocency before God, and the Face of you, good Chriſtian People, this Day. And therewith ſhe wrung her Hands wherein ſhe had her Book. Then, ſaid ſhe, I pray you all good Chriſtian People, to bear me Witneſs that I die a true Chriſtian Woman, and that I do look to be ſaved by no other Mean, but only by the Mercy of God in the Blood of his only Son Jeſus Chriſt: And I confeſs, that when I did know the Word of God I neglected the ſame, loved myſelf and the World, and therefore this Plague and Puniſhment is happily and worthily happened unto me for my Sins: And yet I thank God that of his Goodneſs he hath thus given me a Time and Reſpite to repent: And now, good People, while I am alive, I pray you aſſiſt me with your Prayers. And then kneeling down, ſhe turned to Fecknam, ſaying, Shall I ſay this Pſalm? and he ſaid, Yea. Then ſhe ſaid the Pſalm of Miſerere mei Deus, in Engliſh, in a moſt devout Manner throughout to the End, and then ſhe ſtood up, and give her Maid, Mrs. Ellen, her Gloves and Handkerchief, and her Book to Mr. Bruges; and then ſhe untied her Gown, and the Executioner preſſed upon her to help her off with it, but ſhe deſiring him to let her alone, turned towards her two Gentlewomen, who helped her off therewith, and alſo with her Frowes, Paaſt, and Neckerchief, giving to her a fair Handkerchief to put about her Eyes.

Then the Executioner kneeled down and aſked her Forgiveneſs, whom ſhe forgave moſt willingly. Then he deſired her to ſtand upon the Straw, which doing, ſhe ſaw the Block. Then ſhe ſaid, I pray you diſpatch me quickly. Then ſhe kneeled down, ſaying: Will you take it off before I lay me down? And the Executioner ſaid, No, Madam. Then ſhe tied the Handkerchief about her Eyes, and feeling for the Block, ſhe ſaid: What ſhall I do? Where is it? Where is it? One of the Standers by guiding her thereunto, ſhe laid her Head down upon the Block, and then ſtretched forth her Body, and ſaid, Lord into thy Hands I commend my Spirit; and ſo finiſhed her Life, in the Year of our Lord 1554. the 12th Day of February, about the 17th Year of her Age.

Lady Jane and Lord Guilford Dudley beheaded.

Thus died the Lady Jane, and on the ſame Day the Lord Guilford her Huſband, one of the Duke of Northumberland's Sons, who was likewiſe beheaded, two Innocents in Compariſon of them that fate upon them. For they were both very young, and ignorantly accepted that which others had contrived, and by open Proclamation conſented to take from others, and give to them.

A wonderful Example upon Morgan the Judge, who gave Sentence againſt the Lady Jane.

It is worthy Notice, that Judge Morgan, who gave Sentence againſt the Lady Jane, ſoon after he had condemned her, fell mad, and in his raving cried out continually to have the Lady Jane taken away from him, and ſo he ended his Life.

Henry Duke of Suffolk, her Father beheaded.

On the 21ſt Day of the ſame Month, Henry Duke of Suffolk was beheaded on Tower-Hill, the Fourth Day after his Condemnation: About which Time many Gentlemen and Yoemen were condemned, whereof ſome were executed at London, and ſome in the Country. In the Number of whom was the Lord Thomas Gray, Brother to the ſaid Duke, being apprehended not long after in North Wales, and executed for the ſame. Sir Nicholas Throgmorton very narrowly eſcaped, as ye ſhall hear (God willing) in another Place.

Lord Thomas Gray apprehended and executed.

On the 24th Day of February, in the ſame Year, Bonner Biſhop of London ſent a Commiſſion, directed to all the Paſtors and Curates of his Dioceſs, for the taking of the Names of all ſuch as ſhould refuſe to come to auricular Confeſſion the Lent following, and to the receiving at Eaſter. The Copy of which here followeth.

The Monition of Bonner Biſhop of London, ſent to all and ſingular Curates of his Dioceſs.

A Monition of Bonner Biſhop of London to all the Miniſters of his Dioceſs.

EDMUND, by the Permiſſion of God, Biſhop of London, to all Parſons, Vicars, Curates, and Miniſters of the Church within the City and Dioceſs of London, ſendeth Grace, Peace, and Mercy in our Lord everlaſting. Foraſmuch as by the Order of the Eccleſiaſtical Laws and Conſtitutions of this Realm, and the laudible Uſage and Cuſtom of the whole Catholick Church, by many hundred Years agone, duly and devoutly obſerved and kept, all faithful People, being of lawful Age and Diſcretion, are bound once in the Year at leaſt (except reaſonable Cauſe excuſe them) to be confeſſed to their own proper Curate, and to receive the Sacrament of the Altar, with due Preparation and Devotion: And foraſmuch alſo as we be credibly informed, that ſundry evil-diſpoſed and undevout Perſons, given to ſenſual Pleaſures, and carnal Appetites, following the Luſts of their Body, and neglecting utterly the Health of their Souls, do forbear to come to Confeſſion according to the ſaid Uſage, and to receive the Sacrament of the Altar accordingly, giving thereby pernicious and evil Example to the younger Sort, to neglect and contemn the ſame: We minding the Reformation thereof for our own Diſcharge, and deſirous of good Order to be kept, and good Example to be given; do will and command you by virtue hereof, that immediately upon the Receipt of this our Commandment, ye and every each of you within your Cure and Charge, do uſe all your Diligence and Dexterity to declare the ſame, ſtraitly charging and commanding all your Pariſhioners, being of lawful Age and Diſcretion, to come before Eaſter next coming, to Confeſſion, according to the ſaid Ordinance and Uſage, with due Preparation and Devotion to receive the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, and that ye do note the Names of all ſuch as be not confeſſed unto you, and do not receive of you the ſaid Sacrament, certifying us, or our Chancellor or Commiſſary thereof before the ſixth Day of April next enſuing the Date hereof; that ſo we, knowing thereby who did not come to Confeſſion, and receiving the Sacrament accordingly, may proceed againſt them, as being Perſons culpable, and Tranſgreſſors of the ſaid Eccleſiaſtical Law and Uſage. Further alſo certifying us, our ſaid Chancellor or Commiſſary, before the Day aforeſaid, whether you have your Altars ſet up, Chalice-Book, Veſtments, and all Things neceſſary for Maſs, and the Adminiſtration of Sacraments and Sacramentals, with Proceſſion, and all other divine Service prepared and in Readineſs, according to the Order of the Catholick Church, and the virtuous and godly Example of the Queen's Majeſty. And if ye ſo have not, ye then with the Church-Wardens cauſe the ſame to be provided for, ſignifying by whoſe Fault and Negligence the ſame Want or Fault hath proceeded, and generally of the not coming of your Pariſhioners to Church, undue walking, talking, or uſing of themſelves there unreverently in the Time of divine Service, and of all other open Faults and Miſdemeanours, not omitting thus to do, and certify as before, as you will anſwer upon your Peril for the contrary.

Coming to Confeſſion. Receiving the Sacrament of the Altar.

Given at London the 23d of February, in the Year of our Lord 1554.

On the 4th of March following the Queen ſent a Letter to Bonner Biſhop of London, with certain Articles annexed thereunto, to be put in ſpeedy Execution, containing as follows.

Queen Mary's Letter to Bonner Biſhop of London.

A Letter of Queen Mary to Biſhop Bonner.

'RIGHT Reverend Father in God, Right Truſty and Well-beloved, we greet you well. And whereas heretofore in the Time of the late Reign of our moſt deareſt Brother King Edward the Sixth, whoſe Soul

'God pardon, divers notable Crimes, Exceſſes and Faults, with ſundry Kinds of Hereſies, Simony, Adultery, and other Enormities have been committed within this our Realm, and other our Dominions, the ſame continuing yet hitherto in like Diſorder ſince the Beginning of our Reign, without any Correction or Reformation at all, and the People both of the Laity and alſo of the Clergy, and chiefly of the Clergy, have been given to much Inſolency and ungodly Rule, greatly to the Diſpleaſure of Almighty God, and very much to our Regret and evil Contentation, and to no little Slander of other Chriſtian Realms, and in a Manner to the Subverſion and clean defacing of this our Realm; and remembring our Duty to Almighty God, to be to foreſee (as much as in us may be) that all Virtue and godly Living ſhould be embraced, flouriſh and increaſe; and therewith alſo that all Vice and ungodly Behaviour ſhould be baniſhed and put away, or at the leaſtwiſe (ſo nigh as might be) ſo bridled and kept under, that Godlineſs and Honeſty might have the upper hand; underſtanding by very credible Report and publick Fame, to our no ſmall Heavineſs and Diſcomfort, that within your Dioceſs, as well in not exempted as exempted Places, the like Diſorder and evil Behaviour hath been done and uſed, like alſo to continue and increaſe, unleſs due Proviſion be had and made to reform the ſame; which earneſtly in very Deed we do mind and intend to the uttermoſt all the Ways we can poſſible, truſting of God's Furtherance and Help in that Behalf. For theſe Cauſes and other moſt juſt Conſiderations us moving, we ſend unto you certain Articles of ſuch ſpecial Matters, as among other Things be moſt neceſſary now to be put in Execution by you and your Officers, extending to the End by us deſired, and the Reformation aforeſaid: Wherein ye ſhall be charged with our ſpecial Commandment, by theſe our Letters, to the Intent you and your Officers may the more earneſtly and boldly proceed thereunto, without Fear of any Preſumption to be noted on your Part, or Danger to be incurred of any ſuch our Laws, as by our doing of that is in the ſaid Articles contained, might any wiſe grieve you, whatſoever be threatned in any ſuch Caſe. And therefore we ſtraitly charge and command you, and your ſaid Officers, to proceed to the Execution of the ſaid Articles, without all Tract and Delay, as ye will anſwer to the contrary.'

Given under our Signet, at our Palace of Weſtminſter, the 3d Day of March, the firſt Year of our Reign.

Articles ſent from the Queen unto the Ordinary, commanding both him and his Officers to ſee them put in Execution throughout the whole Dioceſs.

Articles of Queen Mary.

FIRST, That every Biſhop and his Officers, with all other having Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, ſhall with all Speed and Diligence, and all Manner of Ways to them poſſible, put in Execution all ſuch Canons and Eccleſiaſtical Laws, heretofore in the Time of King Henry the Eighth uſed within this Realm of England, and the Dominions of the ſame, not being directly and expreſly contrary to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm. Anno 1554.

Item, That no Biſhop or any of his Officers, or other Perſon aforeſaid, hereafter in any Eccleſiaſtical Writing, in Proceſs, or other extrajudicial Acts, do uſe to put in this Clauſe or Sentence, [Supported by Royal Authority.] The King's Authority giveth Place to the Pope's Authority.

Item, That no Biſhop, or any of his Officers, or other Perſon aforeſaid, do hereafter exact or demand in the Admiſſion of any Perſon to any Eccleſiaſtical Promotion, Order, or Office, any Oath touching the Primacy or Succeſſion, as of late in few Years paſſed hath been accuſtomed and uſed. The Supremacy of the King repealed.

Item, That every Biſhop and his Officers, with all other Perſons aforeſaid, have a vigilant Eye, and uſe ſpecial Diligence and Foreſight, that no Perſon be admitted or received to any Eccleſiaſtical Function, Benefice, or Office, being a Sacramentary, infected or defamed with any notable Kind of Hereſy, or other great Crime. and that the ſaid Biſhop do ſtay, and cauſe to be ſtayed, as much as lieth in him, that Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions do not notably decay, or take Hindrance by paſſing or confirming of unreaſonable Leaſes.

Item, That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do diligently travel for the repreſſing of Hereſies, and notable Crimes, eſpecially in the Clergy, duly correcting and puniſhing the ſame. For puniſhing of Hereſies, as they call them.

Item, That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do likewiſe travel for the condemning and repreſſing of corrupt and naughty Opinions, unlawful Books, Ballads, and other pernicious and hurtful Devices, engendring Hatred amongſt the People, and Diſcord among the ſame. And that Schoolmaſters, Preachers and Teachers, do exerciſe and uſe their Offices and Duties without teaching, preaching, or ſetting forth any evil and corrupt Doctrine, and that doing the contrary, they may be by the Biſhop and his ſaid Officers puniſhed and removed.

Item, That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, proceeding ſummarily, and with all Celerity and Speed, may and ſhall deprive or declare deprived, and amove, according to their Learning and Diſcretion, all ſuch Perſons from their Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions, who contrary to the State of their Order, and the laudible Cuſtom of the Church, have married and uſed Women as their Wives, or otherwiſe notably and ſlanderouſly diſordered and abuſed themſelves; ſequeſtring alſo, during the ſaid Proceſs, the Fruits and Profits of the ſaid Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions. Againſt Prieſts Marriage.

Item, that the ſaid Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, to uſe more Lenity and Clemency with ſuch as have married, whoſe Wives be dead, than with other whoſe Women do yet remain alive. And likewiſe ſuch Prieſts, as with the Conſent of their Wives or Women openly in the Preſence of the Biſhop do profeſs to abſtain, to be uſed more favourably. In which Caſe, after the Penance effectually done, the Biſhop, according to his Diſcretion and Wiſdom, may upon juſt Conſideration, receive and admit them again to their former Adminiſtration, ſo it be not in the ſame Place, appointing them ſuch a Portion to live upon, to be paid out of their Benefice whereof they be deprived, by Diſcretion of the ſaid Biſhop or his Officer, as he ſhall think may be ſpared of the ſaid Benefice. Proviſion for Prieſts who renounce their Wives.

Anno 1554.

Item, That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do foreſee that they ſuffer not any religious Man, having ſolemnly profeſſed Chaſtity, to continue with his Woman or Wife, but that all ſuch Perſons after Deprivation of their Benefice or eccleſiaſtical Promotion, be alſo divorced every one from his ſaid Woman, and due Puniſhment otherwiſe taken for the Offence therein.

Married Prieſts divorced both from Wife and Benefice.

Item, That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do take Order and Direction with the Pariſhioners of every Benefice, where Prieſts are wanting, to repair to the next Pariſh for Divine Service, or to appoint for the convenient Time, till other better Proviſion may be made, one Curate to ſerve in their ſtead, in divers Pariſhes, and to allot to the Curate for his Labour ſome Portion of the Benefice that he ſo ſerveth.

Proviſion for want of Prieſts.

Item, That all and all Manner of Proceſſions of the Church be uſed and frequented, and continued after the old Order of the Church in the Latin Tongue.

Proceſſions in Latin.

Item, That all ſuch holy Days and faſting Days be obſerved and kept, as were obſerved and kept in the latter Time of King Henry the Eighth.

Holy days and faſting days.

Item, That the laudable and honeſt Ceremonies which were wont to be uſed, frequented, and obſerved in the Church, be alſo hereafter frequented, uſed, and obſerved.

Ceremonies reſtored.

Item, That Children be chriſtened by the Prieſt, and confirmed by the Biſhop, as heretofore hath been accuſtomed and uſed.

Item, Touching ſuch Perſons as were heretofore promoted to any Orders, after the new Sort and Faſhion of Orders: conſidering they were not ordered in very Deed, the Biſhop of the Dioceſs finding otherwiſe Sufficiency and Ability in thoſe Men, may ſupply that Thing which wanted in them before, and then according to his Diſcretion admit them to miniſter.

Orders.

Item, That by the Biſhop of the Dioceſs an uniform Doctrine be ſet forth by Homilies, or otherwiſe, for the good Inſtruction and Teaching of all People: And that the ſaid Biſhop and other Perſons aforeſaid, do compel the Pariſhioners to come to their ſeveral Churches, and there devoutly to hear divine Service, as of Reaſon they ought.

Coming to divine Service.

Item, That they examine all Schoolmaſters and Teachers of Children, and finding them ſuſpect in any wiſe to remove them, and place Catholick Men in their rooms, with a ſpecial Commandment to inſtruct their Children, ſo as they may be able to anſwer the Prieſt at the Maſs, as hath been accuſtomed.

Proviſion for Catholick Schoolmaſters.

Item, That the ſaid Biſhop, and all other the Perſons aforeſaid, have ſuch Regard, Reſpect, and Conſideration of the ſetting forth of the Premiſes, with all kind of Vertue, godly Living, and good Example, with repreſſing alſo and keeping under Vice and Unthriftineſs, as they and every of them may be ſeen to favour the Reſtitution of true Religion; and alſo to make an honeſt Account and Reckoning of their Office and Cure, to the Honour of God, our good Contentation and Profit of this our Realm, and the Dominions of the ſame.

A like Preſcript alſo with Articles, was ſent from the Queen to the Lord Mayor of London, the fourth Day of March in the ſame Year, who upon receiving the ſame, directed his Commandment to the Aldermen, every one ſeverally in his Ward, as followeth:

By the Lord Mayor.

A Preſcript of the Lord Mayor to the Aldermen.

ON the Queen our moſt gracious and moſt benign Sovereign Lady's behalf, we moſt ſtraitly Charge and Command you, that ye the ſaid Aldermen, fail not perſonally to call before your own Perſon in ſuch Place within your ſaid Ward, as to you ſhall ſeem moſt convenient and meet, upon Wedneſday next coming, which ſhall be the ſeventh Day of this preſent Month, at ſeven o'Clock in the Morning of the ſame Day, all and every the Houſholders both Poor and Rich of your ſaid Ward, and then and there openly and plainly for your own Diſcharge, and for the eſchewing the Perils that to you might otherwiſe be juſtly imputed and laid, do not only ſtraitly admoniſh, charge, and command, in the Queen our ſaid Sovereign Lady's Name and Behalf, all and every the ſaid Houſholders, that both in their own Perſons, and alſo their Wives, Children and Servants, being of the Age of twelve Years and upwards, and every of them, do at all and every Time and Times from henceforth, and namely at the holy Time of Eaſter now approaching, honeſtly, quietly, obediently, and catholickly, uſe and behave themſelves like good and faithful chriſtian People, in all and every Thing and Things touching and concerning the true Faith, Profeſſion, and Religion of his Catholick Church, both according to the Laws and Precepts of Almighty God, and alſo their bounden Duty of Obedience towards our Sovereign Lady the Queen, her Laws and Statutes, and her Highneſs moſt good Example and gracious Proceeding according to the ſame, and according alſo to the Right, Wholeſome, Charitable and godly Admonition, Charge and Exhortation, late ſet forth and given by the Right Reverend Father in God, the Biſhop of London, our Dioceſan and Ordinary, to all the Parſons, Vicars and Curates, within his Dioceſs: But alſo that they and every of them do truly, without delay, advertiſe you of the Names and Sirnames of all and every Perſon and Perſons, that they or any of them can or may at any Time hereafter know, perceive or underſtand to tranſgreſs or offend in any Point or Article concerning the Premiſſes, at their utmoſt Perils. That ye immediately after ſuch Notice thereof to you given, do forthwith advertiſe us thereof. Fail ye not thus to do with all Circumſpection and Diligence, as ye will anſwer to our ſaid moſt dread Sovereign Lady the Queen for the contrary at your like Peril. Given at the Guildhall of the City of London, the fifth Day of March in the firſt Year of the Reign of our ſaid Sovereign Lady and Queen.

BLACKWELL.

And likewiſe do you give to every of the ſaid Houſholders ſtraitly in Commandment, that they or their Wives depart not out of the ſaid City, until this holy Time of Eaſter be paſt.

About the ſame Year and Time that Doctor Bonner publiſhed his Preſcript or Monitory, there came from the Queen another Proclamation commanding all Foreigners and Strangers to deſert this Realm. The Copy of which Proclamation, becauſe it related chiefly to Religion and the true Profeſſors thereof, I have thought fit here to annex.

A Copy

A Copy of the Queen's Proclamation for driving out all Foreigners and Strangers out of the Realm.

Q. Mary's Proclamation for driving out of Strangers.

THE Queen our Sovereign Lady, underſtanding that a Multitude of evil diſpoſed Perſons, being born out of her Highneſs Dominions in other Sundry Nations, flying from the Obeyſance of the Princes and Rulers under whom they be born, (ſome for Hereſy, ſome for Murther, Treaſon, Robbery, and ſome for other horrible Crimes,) be reſorted into this her Majeſty's Realm, and here have made their Demurrer, and yet be commorant and lingring, partly to eſchew ſuch condign Puniſhment as their ſaid horrible Crimes deſerve, and partly to dilate, plant, and ſow the Seeds of their malicious Doctrine and lewd Converſation among the good Subjects of this her ſaid Realm, on purpoſe to infect her good Subjects with the like, inſomuch as beſides innumerable Hereſies, which divers of the ſame being Hereticks have preached and taught within her Highneſs ſaid Realm, it is aſſuredly known unto her Majeſty, that not only their ſecret Practices have not failed to ſtir, comfort and aid divers her Highneſs Subjects to this moſt unnatural Rebellion againſt God and her Grace, but alſo ſome other of them deſiſt not ſtill to practiſe with her People forthwith to rebel: Her Majeſty therefore having (as afore is ſaid) Knowledge and Intelligence hereof, hath for remedy herein determined, and moſt ſtraitly chargeth and commandeth, that all and every ſuch Perſon or Perſons born out of her Highneſs Dominions, now Commorant or Reſident within this Realm, of whatſoever Nation or Country, being either Preacher, Printer, Bookſeller, or other Artificer, or of whatſoever Calling elſe, not being Denizen or Merchant known uſing the Trade of Merchandize, or Servant to ſuch Ambaſſadors as be Liegers here from the Princes and States joined in League with her Grace, ſhall within twenty four Days of this Proclamation, avoid the Realm upon pain of moſt grievous Puniſhment by Impriſonment, and Forfeiture and Confiſcation of all their Goods and Moveables, and alſo to be delivered unto their natural Princes or Rulers, againſt whoſe Perſons, or Laws they have offended. Giving to all Mayors, Sheriffs, Bayliffs, Conſtables, and all other her Miniſters, Officers, and good Subjects ſtraitly alſo in Charge, if they know any ſuch Perſon, not born in the Queen's Highneſs Dominions (except before excepted) that ſhall, after the Time and Day limited in the Proclamation, tarry within this Realm, that they ſhall apprehend the ſame Perſon or Perſons, and commit him or them to Ward, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize, till her Grace's Pleaſure or her Councils be ſignified unto them for the further ordering of the ſaid Perſon or Perſons. And that if any of her ſaid Officers, after the ſaid twenty four Days, apprehend, take, or know of any ſuch, they ſhall with all Diligence immediately certify her ſaid Council thereof, to the Intent Order may be forthwith given for their Puniſhment accordingly.

Cauſes laid againſt Strangers.

Peter Martyr and Joannes Alaſco baniſhed the Realm.

Engliſhmen fled out of the Realm for Religion.

In the mean while, upon the Proclamation above-mentioned, not only the Strangers received into the Realm for Religion in King Edward's Time, among whom was Peter Martyr, and John Alaſco the King of Poland's Uncle, but many Engliſhmen fled, ſome to Freizland, ſome to Cleveland, ſome to High Germany, where they were diverſly ſcattered into different Companies and Congregations, at Weſel, Frankfort, Baſil, Zurich, Geneva, and other Places; where by the Providence of God near 800 Perſons, reckoning Students and others, were all ſuſtained, and entertained with much greater Kindneſs among Strangers abroad, than they could be in their own Country at home. Anno 1554.

March 15. Lady Elizabeth and L. Courtney upon Suſpicion of Sir Thomas Wyat's Riſing committed to the Tower.

In the ſaid Month of March likewiſe the Lord Courtney Earl of Devonſhire, whom the Queen at her firſt Entrance releaſed out of the Tower, and the Lady Elizabeth the Queen's Siſter, were both ſuſpected to have been conſenting to Wyat's Conſpiracy, and therefore this very March were apprehended for the ſame, and committed to the Tower.

But as to the Impriſonment of the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney, I could wiſh thee for thy Learning, good Reader, to take Notice of a politick Point of Practice in Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, not unworthy to be conſidered. For this Gardiner being always a capital Enemy to the Lady Elizabeth, and thinking from Mr. Wyat's Rebellion to gather ſomething whereby to accuſe the Lord Courtney, and ſo in the End entangle the Lady Elizabeth: deviſed for their Conveyance thither a moſt peſtilent Practice, as from the following Story may plainly appear.

A Point of Practice of Stephen Gardiner againſt the Lady Elizabeth.

The Story is this: The ſame Day Sir Thomas Wyat was executed, he deſired the Lieutenant to bring him to the Preſence of the Lord Courtney; where before the Lieutenant and the Sheriffs kneeling down upon his Knees, he beſought the Lord Courtney to forgive him, for that he had falſly accuſed both him and the Lady Elizabeth: And when brought from thence to the Scaffold, publickly to ſuffer in the Face of all the People, he clear'd the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney, ſo as to be entirely innocent and free from all Suſpicion of that Commotion. At which Confeſſion Dr. Weſton ſtanding by, cried to the People, ſaying, Believe him not, good People, for he confeſſed otherwiſe before the Council.

After the Execution of Sir Thomas Wyat, which was April 11. Word was immediately brought to the Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas White, a little before Dinner, how Maſter Wyat had cleared the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney, and what Dr. Weſton likewiſe ſaid to the People; whereunto the Lord Mayor anſwering, ſaid, Is this true? Said Weſton ſo? In ſooth, I never took him otherwiſe but for a Knave. But upon the Lord Mayor's ſitting down to Dinner that Day at the Bridge-Houſe, there cometh in Sir Martin Bowes with the Recorder, newly come from the Parliament-Houſe, and hearing from the Mayor and Sheriffs this Report of Wyat's Confeſſion, both upon the Scaffold and alſo in the Tower, marvelled thereat, declaring how there was a contrary Tale told the ſame Day in the Parliament-Houſe, which was, that Sir Thomas Wyat ſhould deſire the Lord Courtney to confeſs the Truth, as he had done before.

Cut an Apprentice in London brought before Stephen Gardiner.

It was not long after this, that a certain Apprentice living in St. Laurence-lane, named Cut, as he was drinking with one Denham a Plaiſterer, being one of Queen Mary's Servants, happened amongſt other Things to mention how Sir Thomas Wyat had cleared the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney, to be no Conſenters to his Riſing. Which Words being brought to Gardiner (by what Means I know not) Sir Andrew Judd was immediately ſent by the ſaid Biſhop unto the Lord Mayor, commanding him to bring the ſaid Apprentice to the Star-Chamber, who was accuſed for ſaying, That Wyat was conſtrained by Anno 1554. by the Council to accuſe the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney. And when this Fellow was come to the Star-Chamber, the aforeſaid Gardiner, letting paſs all other Matters that were in hand, began to declare to the whole Multitude, how miraculouſly Almighty God had brought the Queen's Majeſty to the Crown, the whole Realm being in a Manner againſt her, and that he had brought this to paſs for this ſingular Intent and Purpoſe, that this Realm being overſpread with Hereſies, ſhe might reduce the ſame again to the true Catholick Faith: And how ſhe took the Lady Elizabeth into Favour, and loved her tenderly, and alſo the Lord Courtney, who had been long detained in Priſon, and by her was ſet at Liberty, and received great Benefits at her Hands, and notwithſtanding all this they had both moſt unnaturally and traiterouſly conſpired againſt her, with that heinous Traitor Wyat, as by the Confeſſion of Wyat, ſaid he, and the Letters ſent to and fro may plainly appear: Yet there were ſome in the City of London who reported, that Wyat was conſtrained by the Council to accuſe the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney; and yet you, my Lord Mayor, quoth he, have not ſeen the ſame puniſhed.

The Party is here, ſaid the Lord Mayor. Take him with you, ſaid Gardiner, and puniſh him according to his Deſert; and ſaid further, my Lord, take heed to your Charge, the City of London is a Whirlpool and Sink of all evil Rumours, where they be bred, and from thence ſpread into all Parts of the Realm.

There ſtood by at the ſame Time the Lord Shandois then Lieutenant of the Tower, and hearing the Biſhop thus ſpeak, to flatter him in his Tale, came in with theſe Words as follows: My Lords, ſaid he, this a Truth that I ſhall tell you, being Lieutenant of the Tower when Wyat ſuffered, he deſired me to bring him to the Lord Courtney; which when I had done, he fell down on his Knees before him in my Preſence, and deſired him to confeſs the Truth of himſelf, as he had done before, and ſubmit himſelf unto the Queen's Majeſty's Mercy.

The Lord Shandois's falſe Report in the Star-Chamber againſt Lady Elizabeth and Lord Courtney

And thus much I thought fit to declare of this Matter, to the Intent that the Reader perceiving the Biſhop's Proceedings in the Premiſſes, and comparing the ſame with the Teſtimony of Wyat himſelf, and with the Teſtimony of the Sheriffs that were then preſent, when Sir Thomas Wyat aſked the Lord Courtney Forgiveneſs, may the better judge of the whole Caſe and Matter for which the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney were ſo long in Troubie. Of which her Grace's Trouble (God willing) more ſhall be ſaid hereafter in the Story of her Life. In the mean while, let us now proceed in our Hiſtory.

Not long after this, Queen Mary ſummoned a Parliament to be held at Oxford, where both the Univerſity, Town and Country had ſhewed themſelves very forward in reſtoring the popiſh Religion. For this Purpoſe great Proviſion was made by the Townſmen and Inhabitants of Oxford, and the Country round about.

A Parliament held at Weſtminſter.

But the Queen's Mind ſoon changed, and the April following the ſame Parliament was held at Weſtminſter; where the Queen propoſed her Marriage with King Philip, which was agreed upon; and reſtoring of the Pope's Supremacy, which could not then be obtained.

At the ſame Time when this Parliament was ſummoned, the Queen ſummoned likewiſe a Convocation of Biſhops, and of the Clergy, writing unto Bonner (whom ſhe had made Vicegerent in the room of Cranmer, being then in the Tower) in a Style different from the old Style of King Henry and King Edward, as followeth.

Bonner made Vicegerent and Preſident in the Convocation.

MARY, by the Grace of God, of England, France, and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith; to the Reverend Father in God Edmund Lord Biſhop of London, ſendeth greeting.

Here the Reader is deſired to take Notice, that the Queen's Title is altered, and the latter Part left out; to wit, Of the Churches of England and Ireland, ſupreme, becauſe in this Parliament the Supremacy was taken from the Crown of England, and given to the Pope: And Biſhop Bonner, giving his Certificate upon the ſame, leaves out Autoritate, &c. By the Authority of our moſt illuſtrious Queen impowered; which Part of the Biſhop's Title in the ſame Parliament was likewiſe repealed and taken away.

In this aforeſaid Convocation, Bonner Biſhop of London being Vicegerent, made an Oration to the Clergy, wherein he ſeemeth to ſhew a great Piece of profound Learning, in ſetting forth the ſuper-angelical Order of Prieſthood, as may appear by this Fragment of his Oration, being collected by ſome that ſtood by; which as it came to our Hands, ſo I thought to impart it to the Reader.

The Dignity of Prieſts extolled by Bp. Bonner.

Biſhop Bonner's Oration in Praiſe of Prieſthood.

WHEREFORE it is to be known, that Prieſts and Elders be worthy of all Men to be worſhipped for the Dignity Sake which they have of God, as in Matthew xvi. Whatſoever ye ſhall looſe upon Earth, &c. And whatſoever ye ſhall bind, &c. For a Prieſt by ſome Means is like Mary the Virgin, and is ſhewed by three Points; As the Bleſſed Virgin by five Words did conceive Chriſt, as it is ſaid: Luke 1. Be it unto me according to thy Word: So the Prieſt by five Words doth make the very Body of Chriſt. Even as immediately after the Conſent of Mary, Chriſt was all whole in her Womb; ſo immediately after the ſpeaking of the Words of Conſecration; the Bread is ſubſtantiated into the very Body of Chriſt. Secondly, as the Virgin carried Chriſt in her Arms, and laid him in an Ox-ſtall after his Birth; even ſo the Prieſt after the Conſecration, doth lift up the Body of Chriſt, and placeth it, and carrieth it, and handleth it with his Hands. Thirdly, As the Bleſſed Virgin was ſanctified before ſhe had conceived; ſo the Prieſt being ordained and anointed before he doth conſecrate, becauſe without Orders he could conſecrate nothing: Therefore the Lay-man cannot do that Thing, altho' he be never ſo holy, and do ſpeak the ſelf-ſame Words of Conſecration, Therefore here is to be known, that the Dignity of Prieſts by ſome Means paſſeth the Dignity of Angels, becauſe there is no Power given to any of the Angels to make the Body of Chriſt. Whereby the leaſt Prieſt may do on Earth, that which the greateſt and higheſt Angel in Heaven cannot do, as St. Bernard ſaith, O worſhipful

Prieſts compared to the Virgin Mary in three Points.

Prieſthood compared and preferred before the State of Angels.

Dignity of Prieſts, in whoſe Hands the Son of God is, as in the Womb of the Virgin he was incarnate. St. Auguſtine ſaith, That Angels in the Conſecration of the ſacred Hoſt do ſerve him, and the Lord of Heaven deſcendeth to him. Whereupon St. Ambroſe upon St. Luke ſaith, Doubt thou not the Angels to be where Chriſt is preſent upon the Altar; Wherefore Prieſts are to be honoured before all Kings of the Earth, Princes, and Nobles. For a Prieſt is higher than a King, happier than an Angel, Maker of his Creator, Wherefore, &c.

Horrid Blaſphemy.

Communication between Dr. Ridley Secretary Bourne, &c. in the Tower, at the Lieutenant's Table.

MASTER Thomas Bridges ſaid at his Brother Maſter Lieutenant's Board, I pray you Maſter Doctors, for my Inſtruction, tell me what an Heretick is. Maſter Secretary Bourne ſaid, I will tell you who is an Heretick; whoſo ſtubbornly and ſtiffly maintaineth an Untruth, he is an Heretick. You mean Sir, ſaid I, an Untruth in Matters of Religion, and concerning our Faith. Yea, that is true, ſaid he; and in this we are are ſoon agreed. Then ſaid Maſter Fecknam, Dean of St. Paul's, ſitting at the upper End of the Table, I will tell you by St. Auguſtine who is an Heretick; He that either for the Sake of Princes, or for the Sake of filthy Lucre, ſets on foot, or propagates wrong Notions, he is an Heretick. Sir, ſaid I, St Auguſtine addeth the third Number, which is, Or for the Sake of Vain Glory. You ſay even true, Maſter Doctor, ſaid he, and thus far we did agree all three.

An Heretick defined by St. Auguſtine.

Maſter Fecknam began again to ſay, Whoſo doth not believe what the Scripture affirmeth, but will oſtinately maintain the contrary, he is an Heretick: As in the Sacrament of the Altar, Matthew doth affirm there to be Chriſt's Body, Mark doth affirm it, Luke affirmeth it, Paul affirmeth it, and none denieth it; therefore to hold the contrary is Hereſy. It is the ſame Body and Fleſh that was born of the Virgin; and this is confirmed by Unity, Antiquity, and Univerſality. For none before Berengarius did ever doubt of this, and he was an Heretick, as Maſter Doctor there knoweth full well; I do take to Witneſs his own Conſcience, ſaid he.

Fecknam provoking Dr. Ridley.

Marry Sir, ſaid Maſter Secretary, Maſter Fecknan hath ſpoken well. Theſe be great Matters, Unity, Antiquity, and Univerſality. Do you not think ſo Maſter Doctor, ſaid he to me?

Here, while I ſtrained Courteſy and pretended no Willingneſs to talk; ſaid one of the Commiſſioners, Peradventure Maſter Ridley doth agree with Maſter Fecknam, and then there needs not much debating of the Matter.

Sir, ſaid I, in ſome Things I do, and ſhall agree with him, and in ſome Things which he hath ſpoken, to be plain, I do not agree with him at all. Maſters, ſaid I, ye be (as I underſtand) the Queen's Commiſſioners here, and if ye have Commiſſion to examine me in theſe Matters, I ſhall declare unto you plainly my Faith; if ye have not, then I ſhall pray you either to give me leave to ſpeak my Mind freely, or elſe to hold my Peace.

There is none here, ſaid Maſter Secretary, that doth not favour you: And then every Man ſhewed what favour they bare towards me, and how glad they would be of an Agreement.

But as I ſtrained to have Licenſe of them in plain Words to ſpeak my Mind, ſome thought they granted me it for Vix or Ægre. Well, at the laſt I was content to take it for licenſed, and ſo began to talk. Anno 1554.

Biſhop Ridley anſwering Fecknam.

To Maſter Fecknam's Arguments of the manifold Affirmation where no Denial was, I anſwered; where is a Multitude of Affirmations in Scripture, and where is one Affirmation, all is one concerning the Truth of the Matter: For that which any one of the Evangeliſts ſpake, inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt, was as true as that which was ſpoken of them all. It is as true that John ſaith of Chriſt, I am the Door of the Sheep, as if all had ſaid it. For it is not in Scripture as in Witneſs of Men, where the Number is credited more than one, becauſe it is uncertain with what Spirit he doth ſpeak. And where Maſter Fecknam ſpake of ſo many, affirming without any Negation, &c. Sir, ſaid I, all they do affirm the Thing which they meant. Now if ye take their Words, to leave their Meaning, then do they affirm what ye take, but not what they meant. Sir, ſaid I, if in Talk with you, I ſhould ſo utter my Mind in Words, that ye by the ſame do, and may plainly perceive my Meaning, and could, if you would be captious, cavil at my Words, and writh them to another Senſe, I would think ye were no gentle Companions to talk with, except ye would take my Words as ye did perceive I did mean.

Words in Scripture muſt be taken with their Meaning.

Marry, quoth Maſter Secretary, we ſhould elſe do you plain Injury and Wrong.

Maſter Fecknam perceiving whereunto my Talk went. Why, quoth he, What Circumſtances can ye ſhew me that ſhall move to think of any other Senſe, than as the Words plainly ſay, This is my Body which ſhall be betrayed for you?

Sir, ſaid I, even the next Sentence that followeth, viz. Do this in my Remembrance. And alſo by what Reaſon ye ſay the Bread is turned into Chriſt's carnal Body, by the ſame I may ſay, that it is turned into his myſtical Body. For as that ſaith of it, This is my Body which ſhall be betrayed for you; ſo Paul which ſpake by Chriſt's Spirit, ſaith, We being many, are all but one Bread and one Body, inaſmuch as we are Partakers of one Bread.

This is my Body, expounded.

Reaſons why theſe Words ought not to be taken literally.

Here he calleth one Bread, one Loaf, ſaid Maſter Secretary.

Yea, ſaid I, one Loaf, one Bread, all is one with me.

But what ſay ye, quoth Maſter Secretary, of the Univerſality, Antiquity, and Unity, that Maſter Fecknam did ſpeak of?

I aſſure you, ſaid I, I think them Matters weighty, and to be conſidered well. As for Unity, the Truth is before God, I do believe it, and embrace it, ſo it be with Verity, and joined to our Head Chriſt, and ſuch an one as Paul ſpeaketh of, ſaying; one Faith, one God, one Baptiſm. And for Antiquity, I am alſo perſuaded that to be true which Irenæus ſaith, That which is firſt is true. In our Religion Chriſt's Faith was firſt truly taught by Chriſt himſelf, by his Apoſtles, and by many good Men, that from the Beginning did ſucceed next unto them; and for this Controverſy of the Sacrament, I am perſuaded that thoſe old Writers, which wrote before the Controverſy and the uſurping of the See of Rome, do all agree, if they be well underſtood in this Truth.

I am glad to hear, ſaid Mr. Secretary, that you do ſo well eſteem the Doctors of the Church.

Now as for Univerſality, it may have two Meanings; one to underſtand that to be univer-ſal, which from the Beginning in all Ages hath been allowed; another to underſtand Univerſality for the Multitude of our Age, or of any other ſingular Age.

Anno 1554.

No, no, ſaith Mr. Secretary, theſe three do always agree, and where there is one, there is all the reſt: And here he and I changed many Words. And finally, to be ſhort in this Matter, we did not agree.

There was none, quoth Mr. Fecknam, before Berengarius, Wickliffe and Huſs, and now in our Days Caroloſtadius and Œcolampadius. Caroloſtadius ſaith, Chriſt pointed to his own Body, and not to the Sacrament, and ſaid, This is my Body. And Melanchthon writeth to one Miconius (Miconius, ſaid I,) theſe or the like Words; I can find no grounded Reaſon to cauſe me to diſſent from the Belief of our Forefathers.

Thus when he had ſpoken, at length, with many other Words more; Sir, ſaid I, it is certain that others before theſe have written of this Matter: Not by the Way only, and Obiter, as do for the moſt all the old Writers, but even Ex profeſſo; and there whole Books treat of it alone, as Bertram.

The Doctrine of the Sacrament not new.

Bertram, ſaid the Secretary, what Man was he? and who was he? and how do you know, &c. with many Queſtions.

Sir, quoth I, I have read his Book; he propoundeth the ſame which is now in Controverſy, and anſwereth ſo directly, that no Man may doubt but that he affirmeth, that the Subſtance of Bread remaineth ſtill in the Sacrament, and he wrote unto Carolus Magnus.

Marry, quoth he, mark, for there is a Matter. He wrote, quoth he, ad Henricum, and not ad Carolum; for no Author maketh any ſuch Mention of Bertram.

Yes, quoth I, Trithemius in Catalogo illuſtrium Scriptorum, ſpeaketh of him. Trithemius was but of late Time; but he ſpeaketh, quoth I, of them that were of Antiquity. Here after much Talk of Bertram, what Authors have ye, quoth Mr. Secretary, to make of the Sacrament a Figure?

Doctors that make the Sacrament but a Figure. Tertullian. Gelaſius. Origen.

Sir, quoth I, ye know (I think) that Tertullian in plain Words ſpeaketh thus; This is my Body, that is to ſay, a Figure of my Body. And Gelaſius ſaith plainly, That the Subſtance of Bread remaineth. And Origen ſaith likewiſe, That which is ſanctified, as touching the Matter or Subſtance, paſſeth away into the Draught. Upon this Maſter Secretary ſaid to me, you know very well as any Man, &c. And here, if I would I might have been ſet in a fooliſh Paradiſe of his Commendation of my Learning, and a Man of much Reading. But this I would not take at his hand. He ſet me not up ſo high, but I brought myſelf as low again; and here was much ado.

As for Melanchthon (quoth I) whom Mr. Fecknam ſpake of, I marvel that ye will alledge him, for we are more nigh an Agreement here in England, than the Opinion of Melanchthon is to you: For in this Point we all agree here, that there is in the Sacrament but one material Subſtance; and Melanchthon, as I ween, ſaith, there are two.

Ye ſay Truth, quoth Mr. Secretary, Melanchthon's Opinion is ſo. But I pray you, ye have heard that the Sacrament was in old Time ſo reverenced, that many were then forbidden to be preſent at the Miniſtration thereof; Catechumeni, quoth he, and many more.

Truth Sir, quoth I, there were ſome called Audientes, ſome Pœnitentes, ſome Catechumeni, and ſome Energumeni, which were commanded to depart.

Catechumeni and others went out at the Miniſtration.

Now, quoth he, then; and how can ye then make but a Figure or a Sign of the Sacrament, as that Book doth which is ſet forth in my Lord of Canterbury's Name? I know ye can tell who made it, did not ye make it? and here was much murmuring of the reſt, as tho' they would have given me the Glory of the Writing of that Book; which yet was ſaid of ſome there to contain the moſt heinous Hereſy that ever was.

The Book of Catechiſm.

Maſter Secretary, quoth I, that Book was made by a great learned Man, and him which is able to do the like again: As for me I aſſure you (be not deceived in me) I was never able to do or write any ſuch like Thing; he paſſeth me no leſs than the learned Maſter his young Scholar.

Now here every Man would have his Saying which I paſs over, not much material for to tell. But Sir, quoth I, methinks it is not charitably done, to bear the People in hand that any Man doth ſo lightly eſteem the Sacrament, as to make of it a Figure. For that [but] maketh it a bare Figure without any more Profit, which that Book doth often deny, as appeareth to the Reader moſt plainly.

Yes, quoth he, that they do.

Sir, no, quoth I, of a Truth, and as for me, I aſſure you I make no leſs of the Sacrament than thus: I ſay, whoſoever receiveth the Sacrament, he receiveth there with either Life or Death.

No, quoth Mr. Secretary, Scripture ſaith not ſo.

Sir, quoth I, although not in the ſame Sound of Words, yet it doth in the ſame Senſe, and St. Auguſtine ſaith in the Sound of Words alſo: For Paul ſaith, The Bread which we break, is it not the partaking or Fellowſhip of the Body of Chriſt? And St. Auguſtine, Eat Life, drink Life.

Then ſaid Mr. Pope, what can ye make of it when ye ſay, There is not the real Body of Chriſt, which I do believe, &c. and I pray God I may never believe other. How can it bring (as ye ſay) either Life or Death, when Chriſt's Body is not there?

The Sacrament may bring Life without Tranſubſtantiation.

Sir, quoth I, when you hear God's Word truly preached, if you do believe it, and abide in it, ye ſhall and do receive Life withal; and if ye do not believe it, it doth bring unto you Death: And yet Chriſt's Body is ſtill in Heaven, and not carnal in every Preacher's Mouth.

I pray you tell me, quoth he, how can you anſwer to this, Which ſhall be given for you. Was the Figure of Chriſt's Body given for us.

No Sir, quoth I, but the very Body itſelf, whereof the Sacrament is a ſacramental Figure.

How ſay you then, quoth he, to, Which ſhall be given for you?

Forſooth, quoth I, Tertullian's Expoſition maketh it plain, for he ſaith, The Body is a Figure of the Body. Now put to, Which ſhall be given for you, and it agreeth exceeding well.

In faith, quoth he, I would give forty Pounds that ye were of a good Opinion, For I aſſure you, I have heard you, and had an Affection to you.

I thank you Mr. Pope for your Heart and Mind, and ye know, quoth I, I were a very Fool if I would in this Matter diſſent from you, if that in my Conſcience the Truth did not inforce me ſo to do. For I know it is ſomewhat out of my Way, if I would eſteem worldly Gain.

What

What ſay ye, quoth he to Cyprian? Doth he not ſay plainly, The Bread which the Lord did deliver being changed, not according to the Form, but according to the Nature thereof, by the omnipotent Word is made Fleſh.

Dr. Ridley falſly reported of, for a Sermon of his at Paul's.

True, Sir, ſo he doth ſay, and I anſwer even the ſame which once by Chance I preached at Paul's-Croſs in a Sermon, for which I have been as unjuſtly reported of, as any poor Man hath been. For there I ſpeaking of the Sacrament, and inveighing againſt them that eſteemed it no better than a Piece of Bread; told even the ſame Thing of Pœnitentes, Audientes, Catechumeni, Energumeni, that I ſpake of before; and I bad them depart as unworthy to hear the Myſtery: And then I ſaid to thoſe that be worthy, Cyprian the Martyr ſhall tell you how it is that Chriſt calleth it, ſaying, Bread is the Body, Meat, Drink, Fleſh, becauſe that unto this material Subſtance is given the Property of the Thing whereof it beareth the Name: And this Place then took I to utter as the Time would then ſuffer, that the material Subſtance of Bread doth remain. Mr. Fecknam, (which as is reported to me, did bely me openly in the ſame Matter at Paul's Croſs) heard all this my Talk, as red as ſcarlet in his Face, and herein anſwered me not a Word.

The Place of St. Cyprian expounded.

You do well, quoth Mr. Secretary, that Origen and Tertullian were not Catholick, but erred.

None of all the Doctors holden in all Points.

Sir, quoth I, there is none of all the Doctors that are holden in all Points, but are thought to have erred in ſome Things. But yet I never heard that it was either laid to Origen's Charge, or to Tertullian, that ever they were thought to have erred in this Matter of the Sacrament.

What, quoth Mr. Cholmley, late Chief Juſtice, doth not Chriſt plainly ſay, that it is his very Fleſh, and his very Blood, and we muſt needs eat him, or elſe we can have no Life? Sir, quoth I, if you will hear how St. Auguſtine expounded that Place, you ſhall perceive that you are in a wrong Box. And then I began to tell St. Auguſtine's Mind in his Book of the Doctrine of Chriſtianity. Yea, yea, quoth Mr. Secretary, that is true, St. Auguſtine doth it figuratively indeed.

St. Auguſtine taeth the Words of the Sacrament figuratively by Bourne's own Confeſſion.

Forty Years ago, quoth Mr. Fecknam, all were of one Opinion in this Matter.

Forty Years ago, quoth I, all held that the Biſhop of Rome was ſupream Head of the univerſal Church.

What then, ſaid Mr. Fecknam, who was beginning to ſpeak; but Mr. Secretary took the Tale, and ſaid that was but a poſitive Law.

A poſitive Law, quoth I; no Sir, he would not have it ſo; for it is in his Decrees that he challenged it by Chriſt's own Word: For his Decree ſaith, The Church of Rome was advanced above all other Churches in the World, not by any ſynodical Conſtitutions, nor any Councils, but by the lively Voice of the Lord, according as the Lord ſaid to Peter, Thou art Peter, &c. And in another Place he intreateth, Thou art Cephas, that is to ſay, the Head.

Tuſh, it was not counted an Article (quoth Mr. Secretary) of our Faith.

Yes, ſaid I, if ye call that an Article of our Faith, which is believed under pain of Damnation: For he ſaith, We do abſolutely determine, declare, and pronounce, that every Creature is ſubject to the Obedience of the ſaid Biſhop of Rome upon neceſſity of Salvation.

And here, when we ſpake of Laws and Decrees, Mr. Roger Cholmley thought himſelf much wronged, that he could not be ſuffered to ſpeak, the reſt were ſo ready to interrupt him; and then he up and told a long Tale, what Laws were of Kings in England made againſt the Biſhop of Rome, and was vehement to tell how they alway of the Clergy did fly to him. And here, becauſe he ſeemed to ſpeak of many Things beſide our Purpoſe, whereof we ſpake before, he was anſwered of his own Fellows, and I let them talk. Anno 1554.

Finally, We departed in Peace, and Mr. Secretary promiſed in the End, that of their Talk there ſhould come to me no Harm. And after I had made my moan for lack of my Books, he ſaid, they were all once given him; but ſince I know (ſaid he) who hath them now, write me the Names of ſuch as you would have, and I will ſpeak for you the beſt I can.

Dr. Ridley's Books given away.

Upon the Articles above-mentioned, and Inquiſition made upon the ſame, divers Miniſters were divorced from their Wives: Amongſt whom was one John Draper, and Joan Gold his Wife, in the Dioceſe of London, troubled for the ſame by Bonner, Biſhop of London, who ſent forth a Commiſſion, with a Proceſs, to ſequeſter and ſeparate them, enjoining alſo Penance to the poor Woman. Many others were alſo divorced the ſame Time againſt their Wills; and ſome were contented of their own unconſtant Accord, to be ſeparated from their Wives.

March 10, 1554. A Letter was ſent to the Lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver the Bodies of Dr. Cranmer, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Dr. Ridley, and Mr. Latimer, to Sir John Williams, to be conveyed by him to Oxford.

March 26. There was a Letter directed to Sir Henry Doel, and one Foſter, to attach the Bodies of Dr. Taylor, Parſon of Hadley, and of Henry Aſkew, and to ſend them up to the Council.

Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer ſent down to Oxford to diſpute.

About the tenth of April, Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Ridley, Biſhop of London, and Hugh Latimer, ſometime Biſhop of Worceſter, were convey'd as Priſoners from the Tower to Windſor, and from thence to the Univerſity of Oxford, there to diſpute with the Divines and learned Men of both the Univerſities, Oxford and Cambridge, about the Preſence, Subſtance, and Sacrifice of the Sacrament. The Names of the Univerſity Doctors and Graduates appointed to diſpute againſt them were theſe; of Oxford, Dr. Weſton, Prolocutor; Dr. Treſham, Dr. Cole, Dr. Oglethorpe, Dr. Pie, Mr. Harpsfield, Mr. Fecknam. Of Cambridge, Dr. Young, Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Glin, Dr. Seaton, Dr. Watſon, Dr. Sedgewick, Dr. Atkinſon, &c. The Articles or Queſtions whereupon they ſhould diſpute, were theſe:

Three Queſtions.

1. Whether the natural Body of Chriſt be really in the Sacrament, after the Words ſpoken by the Prieſt, or no?
2. Whether in the Sacrament, after the Words of Conſecration, any other Subſtance do remain than the Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt?
3. Whether in the Maſs be a Sacrifice propitiatory for the Sins of the Quick and the Dead?

Concerning the Order and Manner of all Things there done, with the Notes, Arguments, and all Circumſtances thereunto pertaining, to deduce the Matter from the beginning, leaving out nothing that ſhall ſeem neceſſary to be added: Firſt, Here is to be underſtood, that upon Saturday the 7th of April, the Heads of the Colleges in Cambridge being aſſembled together,

Anno 1554. Letters coming down from Stephen Gardiner, Lord Chancellor, were read, with Articles therewith annexed, that should be disputed upon at Oxford; the Contents of which three Articles are sufficiently expressed before. Whereupon, in the said Congregation of the aforesaid University of Cambridge, there was granted first a Grace, in this Form, proposed by the senior Proctor: May it please you to have an Instrument made, that the Doctrine of these aforesaid Articles is sound and catholick, and consonant with the Verity of the right meaning Faith, and that the same may be approved by your Consent and Voices? Secondly, In the said Congregation another Grace was given and granted, that Dr. Young, being Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Glin, Dr. Atkinson, Dr. Scot, and Mr. Sedgewick, should go to Oxford to defend the said Articles against Canterbury, London, and Latimer: Also to have Letters to the Oxford Men, sealed with their common Seal. Item, Another Grace granted to Mr. Sedgewick to be actual Doctor, being thereupon immediately admitted. The foresaid Letters being then drawn out, the third Day after were read in the foresaid Congregation-House, and there sealed.

The coming of the Cambridge Men to Oxford.

Whereupon the next Day the aforesaid Doctors, with the full Grace of that University, set forward to Oxford, and coming thither the 13th of April, were lodged all at the Cross-Inn, with one Wakecline, being sometime Servant to Bishop Bonner.

Soon after their coming, Dr. Crooke presented them with Wine for their Welcome; and shortly after two of their Beadles came from the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, and presently the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, with a Dish of Apples and a Gallon of Wine; after whom Mr. Pie and Fecknam came next to welcome them. Then, after Consultation concerning the Delivery of their Letters, and Instrument of Grace (which was in Dr. Seaton and Dr. Watson's keeping) they all went to Lincoln-College to Dr. Weston, the Prolocutor, and to Dr. Tresham, the Vice-Chancellor; and there they delivered their Letters, and declared what they had done touching the Articles, Letters and Graces. Half an Hour after Eight they returned to their Inn again; but first they concluded of a Procession, Sermon, and Convocation, to be had the Morrow following, and that the Doctors of Cambridge should be incorporate in the University of Oxford, and likewise that the Doctors of Oxford should be incorporate in the University of Cambridge. The same Day the fore-named Prisoners were dissevered, Dr. Ridley to the House of Alderman Irish, Mr. Latimer to another, and Dr. Cranmer remained still in Bocardo *.

* The Name of a Prison in Oxford.

On Saturday, April 14. at Eight of the Clock, the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, with the other Doctors of the same University, repaired to Lincoln-College again, and found the Prolocutor above in a Chapel, with a Company of the House, singing Mass for the Dead, and tarried there until the End: Then consulting all together in the Master's Lodging, about Nine of the Clock they all came to the University Church, called St. Mary's; and there, after a short Consultation in a Chapel, the Vice-Chancellor, the Prolocutor, &c. of Oxford, caused the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, and the rest of the Doctors of that University, to send for their scarlet robes brought from Cambridge, save that Dr. Seaton and Watson borrowed of the Oxford Men. And in this Time the Regents in the Congregation House had granted all the Cambridge Doctors their Graces, to be incorporate there; and so they went up and were immediately admitted, Dr. Oglethorpe presenting them, and the Proctor reading the Statute, and giving them their Oaths.

That done, they all came into the Choir, and there held the Convocation of the University: They had Mass of the Holy Ghost solemnly sung by the Choir Men of Christ's Church; but first, the Cause of the Convocation was opened in English, partly by the Vice-Chancellor, and partly by the Prolocutor, declaring that they were sent by the Queen, and wherefore they were sent; and caused Mr. Say, the Register, openly to read the Commission. That done, the Vice-Chancellor read the Cambridge Letters openly; and then concluded that three Notaries, Mr. Say for the Convocation, a Beadle of Cambridge for that University, and one Mr. White for Oxford, should testify of their Doing; and then ordered the said Notaries to provide Parchment, that the whole Assembly might subscribe to the Articles, except those that had subscribed before in the Convocation House at London and Cambridge; and so the Vice-Chancellor began first, the rest of the Oxford Men after him, as many as could in the Mass-time.

The Causes of their Assembly declared.

The Mass being done, they went in Procession: First, the Choir in their Surplices followed the Cross; then the First-year Regents and Proctors; then the Doctors of Law, and their Beadles before them; then the Doctors of Divinity of both Universities intermingled, the Divinity and Arts-beadles going before them; the Vice-Chancellor and Prolocutor going together: After them Batchelors of Divinity, Regentes & non Regentes, in their Array; and last of all the Batchelors of Law and Art; after whom followed a great Company of Scholars and Students not graduate: And thus they proceeded through the Street to Christ-Church, and there the Choir sung a Psalm, and after that a Collect was read. This done, the Commissioners, Doctors, and many others, went to Lincoln College, where they dined with the Mayor of the Town, one Alderman, four Beadles, Mr. Say, and the Cambridge Notary. After Dinner they all went again to St. Mary's Church; and there, after a short Consultation in a Chapel, all the Commissioners came into the Choir, and sat all on Seats before the Altar, to the Number of thirty-three Persons. And first, they sent to the Mayor, that he should bring in Dr. Cranmer, who within a while was brought to them with a Number of Bill Men.

Procession in Oxford.

A Consultation of the Doctors and Priests.

Then the Reverend Arch-bishop, when he was brought before the Commissioners, reverenced them with much Humility, and stood with his Staff in his Hand; who notwithstanding, having a Stool offered him, refused to sit. Then the Prolocutor sitting in the Midst in a scarlet Gown, began with a short Oration in praise of Unity, and especially in the Church of Christ; declaring withal his bringing up, and taking Degrees in Cambridge; and also how he was promoted by King Henry, and had been his Counsellor and Catholick Man, one of the same Unity, and a Member thereof in Times past; but of late Years did separate and cut off himself from it, by teaching and setting forth of erroneous Doctrine, making every Year a new Faith; And therefore it pleased the Queen's Grace to send them of the Convocation, and other learned Men, to bring him to this Unity again, if it might be. He then shewed him how they of the Convocation House had agreed upon certain Archbishop Cranmer brought before the Doctors and High-Priests at St. Mary's Church.

Articles, whereunto they desired him to subscribe.

The Answer of the Archbishop to D. Weston.

The Archbishop answered to the Preface very wittily, modestly, and learnedly, shewing that he was very glad of an Unity, forasmuch as it was, The Preserver of all Common-wealths, as well of the Heathen, as of the Christians; and so he dilated the Matter with one or two Stories of the Roman Common-wealth. Which thing when he had done, he said, That he was very glad to come to an Unity, so that it were in Christ, and agreeable to his holy Word.

When he had thus spoken his full Mind, the Prolocutor caused the Articles to be read to him, and asked if he would grant and subscribe to them. Then the Archbishop of Canterbury read them over three or four times, and concerning the first Article, he asked what they meant by these Terms, True and Natural? Do you not mean, saith he, A sensible Body? Some answered, The same that was born of the Virgin; and so confusedly, some said one thing, some another. Then the Archbishop of Canterbury denied it utterly, and when he had looked upon the other two, he said they were all false, and against God's holy Word: and therefore he would not agree, he said, in that Unity with them. Which done, the Prolocutor first willing him to write his Mind of them that Night, said moreover that he should dispute in them, and caused a Copy of the Articles to be delivered him, assigning him to answer thereunto on Monday next, and so charged the Mayor with him again, to Beccardo, where he was kept before; offering moreover unto him, to name what Books he would occupy, and he should have them brought unto him. The Archbishop was greatly commended of every body for his Modesty; insomuch that some Masters of Arts were seen to weep for him, who in Judgment were contrary to him.

The Articles denied by the Archbishop.

Dr. Ridley brought in.

Then was Dr. Ridley brought in, who hearing the Articles read to him, answered without any Delay, saying, They were all false; and said further, That they sprang out of a bitter and sour Root. His Answers were sharp, witty, and very earnest. Then they laid to his Charge a Sermon that he preached when he was Bishop of Rochester, wherein (they said) he spake for Transubstantiation. He denied it utterly, and asked whether they could bring out any that heard him, which would say and affirm with them the same. They could bring no Proof of it at all. After that, he was asked by one, whether he desired not my Lord Chancellor that now is, to stick to the Mass, and other Things? He said, That my Lord would say no such Things or Words of him; for if he did, he reported not the Truth of him.

Answer of Bishop Ridley to the Articles.

Then he was asked, whether he would dispute or no? He answered, That as long as God gave him Life, he should not only have his Heart, but also his Mouth and Pen to defend his Truth; but he required Time and Books. They said, he could not, and that he should dispute on Thursday, and till that Time he should have Books. He said, it was not Reason that he might not have his own Books, and Time also to look for his Disputation. Then they gave him the Articles, and bid him write his Mind of them that Night, and so they commanded the Mayor to take him whence he came.

Bishop Ridley appointed to dispute the next Day after the Archbishop.

Mr. Latimer brought in.

Last of all came in Mr. Latimer, in like sort, with a Kerchief, and two or three Caps on his Head, his Spectacles hanging by a String at his Breast, and a Staff in his Hand, and was set in a Chair; for so was he suffered by the Prolocutor. And after his Denial of the Articles, when he had Wednesday appointed for Disputation, he alledged Age, Sickness, Dis-use, and lack of Books, saying, That he was almost as meet to Dispute, as to be a Captain of Calice: but he would, he said, declare his Mind either by Writing or Word, and would stand to all they could lay upon his Back; complaining moreover, That he was permitted to have neither Pen nor Ink, nor yet any Book, but only the New Testament there in his Hand, which he said he had read over seven times deliberately, and yet could not find the Mass in it, neither the Marrow-bones nor Sinews of the same. At which Words the Commissioners were not a little offended; and Dr. Weston said, That he would make him grant that it had both Marrow-bones and Sinews in the New Testament. To whom Mr. Latimer said again, That you will never do, Mr. Doctor, and so forthwith they put him to silence; so that where he was desirous to tell what he meant by those Terms, he could not be suffered: There was a very great Press and Throng of People, and one of the Beadles swooned by reason thereof, and was carried into the Vestry. After this, bringing home the Prolocutor first, the Cambridge-Men, viz. Dr. Young, Vice-chancellor, Seton, Glin, Atkinson, Scot, Watson, and Sedgewick, went to the Cross-Inn to Supper. And this was on Saturday April 14.

Anno 1554.

Mr. Latimer could not find the Mass in all the New-Testament. What he meaneth by the Marrow-Bones of the Mass, read after in his Protestation given in Writing to the Prolocutor.

On Sunday after Mr. Harpsfield preached at St. Mary's, the University-Church, at Nine of the Clock, where were divers of the Doctors of the University in their Robes, and placed accordingly. After the Sermon they went all to Dinner to Magdalen College, and there had a great Dinner. They supped at Lincoln College with the Prolocutor, whither Dr. Cranmer sent Answer of his Mind upon the Articles in Writing.

On Monday, being the 16th of April, Mr. Say and Mr. White, Notaries, went about in the Morning to the Colleges, to get Subscriptions to the Articles. And about eight of the Clock the Prolocutor, with all the Doctors and the Vice-chancellor, met together at Exeter College, and so they went into the Schools, and when the Vice-chancellor, the Prolocutor, and Doctors were placed, and four appointed to be Exceptores Argumentorum, set at a Table in the midst, and four Notaries sitting with them, Dr. Cranmer came to the Answerer's Place, the Mayor and Aldermen sitting by him, and so the Disputation began to be set on work by the Prolocutor with a short Præludium. Dr. Chedsey began to argue first, and e're he left, the Prolocutor divers times, Dr. Tresham, Oglethorp, Marshal, the Vice-chancellor, Pye, Cole, and Harpsfield, did interrupt and press him with their Arguments, so that every Man said somewhat, as the Prolocutor would suffer, disorderly, sometime in Latin, sometime in English, so that three Hours of the Time was spent e're the Vice-chancellor of Cambridge began; who also was interrupted as before. He began with three or four Questions subtily. Here the Beadles had provided Drink, and offered the Answerer; but he refused, with Thanks. The Prolocutor offered him, if he would make Water, or otherwise ease himself, he should. Thus the Disputation continued until almost two of the Clock, with this Applausion Audientium, Vicit veritas. Then were all the Arguments, written by the four appinted, delivered into the Hand of Mr. Say, Register. And as for the Prisoner, he was had away by the Mayor; and the Doctors dined together at the University College.

The Archbishop offered Drink.

Anno 1554.

Dr, Cranmer after Disputation returned again to Bocardo.

And thus much concerning the general Order and Manner of these Disputations, with such Circumstances as there happen'd: now followeth to declare the Orations, Arguments, and Answers, used and brought forth forth in the said Disputations on both Parts.

The Arguments, Reasons, and Allegations used in this Disputation.

ON Monday, Dr. Weston, with the Residue of the Visitors, Censors, and Opponents, repairing to the Divinity-School, each one installed themselves in their Places. Dr. Cranmer was brought thither, and set in the Answerer's Place, with the Mayor and Aldermen sitting by him: where Dr. Weston, Prolocutor, apparelled in a Scarlet Gown, after the Custom of the University, began the Disputation with this Oration:

Dr. Weston speaketh truer than he intended.

Ye are assembled hither, Brethren, this Day, to confound the detestable Heresy of the Verity of the Body of Christ in the Sacrament, &c. At which Words thus pronounced unawares by the Prolocutor, several of the learned Men there present considering and well weighing the Words by him uttered, burst out into a great Laughter, as though, even in the Entrance of the Disputations, he had betrayed himself and his Religion, that termed the Opinion of the Verity of Christ's Body in the Sacrament a detestable Heresy. The rest of his Oration tended all to this Effect, That it was not lawful by God's Word to call these Questions into Controversy; for such as doubted of the Words of Christ, might well be thought to doubt both of the Truth and Power of God. Whereupon Dr. Cranmer desiring License, answered in this wise:

Dr. Cranmer's Answer to the Preface.

We are assembled (said he) to discuss these doubtful Controversies, and to lay them open before the Eyes of the World; whereof ye think it unlawful to dispute. It is indeed no Reason (said he) that we should dispute of that which is determined upon before the Truth be tried. But if these Questions be not called into Controversy, surely mine Answer then is looked for in vain. This was the Sum and Effect of his Answer; and this done, he prepared himself for Disputation.

Dr. Chedsey.

Then Chedsey the first Opponent began in this wise to dispute.

Articles.

Reverend Mr. Doctor, these three Conclusions are put forth unto us at present to dispute upon:

1. In the Sacrament of the Altar is the natural Body of Christ, conceived of the Virgin Mary, and also his Blood, present really under the Forms of Bread and Wine, by Virtue of God's Word pronounced by the Priest.
2. There remaineth no Substance of Bread and Wine after the Consecration, nor any other Substance, but the Substance of God and Man.
3. The lively Sacrifice of the Church is in the Mass propitiatory, as well for the Quick as the Dead.

These be the Conclusions propounded, whereupon this our present Controversy doth rest. Now to the end we might not doubt how you take the same, you have already given up unto us your Opinion thereof. I term it your Opinion, in that it disagreeth from the Catholick. Wherefore thus I argue.

Ched. Your Opinion differeth from Scripture.

Ergo, You are deceived.

Cran. I deny the Antecedent.

Ched. Christ, when he instituted his last Supper, spake to his Disciples, Take, eat, this is my Body which shall be given for you,

But his true Body was given for us.

Ergo, His true Body is in the Sacrament.

The right Form of this Argument is thus to be framed.

The same which was given for us is in the Sacrament.

But his true Body was given for us:

Ergo, His true Body is in the Sacrament.

How Christ's Body is present in the Sacrament.

Cran. His true Body is truly present to them that truly receive him; but spiritually. And so it is taken after a spiritual Sort. For when he said, This is my Body, it is all one as if he had said, This is the breaking of my Body, This is the shedding of my Blood. As oft as you shall do this, it shall put you in Remembrance of the breaking of my Body, and the shedding of my Blood; that as truly as you receive this Sacrament, so truly shall you receive the Benefit promised by receiving the same worthily.

Ched. Your Opinion differeth from the Church, which saith, that the true Body is in the Sacrament.

Ergo, Your Opinion therein is false.

Cran. I say and agree with the Church, that the Body of Christ is in the Sacrament effectually, because the Passion of Christ is effectual.

Ched. Christ, when he spake these Words, This is my Body, spake of the Substance, but not of the Effect.

Cran. I grant he spake of the Substance, and not of the Effect after a sort; and yet it is most true, that the Body of Christ is effectually in the Sacrament. But I deny that he is there truly present in Bread, or that under the Bread is his organical Body. And because it would be too tedious (he said) to make Discourse of the whole, he delivered up there his Opinion thereof to Dr. Weston, written at large, with Answers to every one of their three Propositions: which he desired Dr. Weston, sitting there on high, to read openly to the People; which he promised to do. But it was not the first Promise that such Papists have broken.

Christ's Body effectually, not substantially in the Sacrament.

The Copy of this Writing, altho' it were not there read, yet the Contents thereof we have drawn out as followeth.

An Explication of Cranmer upon the aforesaid Conclusions.

The Contents of Cranmer's Explication, given up in Writing.

CRANMER. In the Assertions of the Church and of Religion, trifling and new-fangled Novelties of Words, so much as may are to be eschewed, whereof ariseth nothing but Contention and Brawling about Words, and we must follow, so much as we may, the Manner of Speaking of the Scripture.

How Christ is really present.

In the first Conclusion, if ye understand by this Word [really] Re ipsa, that is, in very Deed and effectually; so Christ by the Grace and Efficacy of his Passion, is indeed and truly present to all true and holy Members.

But if ye understand by this Word [really] Corporaliter, that is, corporally; so that by the Body of Christ is understood a natural and organical; so the first Proposition doth vary, not only from the usual Speech and Phrase of Scrip-

Scripture, but also is clean contrary to the holy Word of God, and Christian Profession: when as both the Scripture doth testify by these Words, and also the Catholick Church hath professed from the Beginning, Christ to have left the World, and to sit at the Right-hand of the Father till he come to Judgment.

And likewise I answer to the second Question; that is, That it swerveth from the accustomed Manner and Speech of Scripture.

The third Conclusion, as it is intricate and wrapped in doubtful and ambiguous Words, and differing also much from the true Speech of the Scripture, so as the Words thereof seem to import no open Sense, is most contumelious against our only Lord and Saviour Christ Jesus, and a violating of his precious Blood, which upon the Altar of the Cross, is the only Sacrifice and Oblation for the Sins of all Mankind.

Ched. By this your Interpretation which you have made upon the first Conclusion, this I understand, the Body of Christ to be in the Sacrament only by the way of Participation: insomuch as we communicating thereof, do participate the Grace of Christ, so that you mean hereby only the Effect thereof. But our Conclusion standeth upon the Substance, and not the Efficacy only, which shall appear by the Testimony both of Scriptures, and of all the Fathers a thousand Years after Christ.

And first, to begin with the Scripture, let us consider what is written in Matt. xxvi. Mark xiv. Luke xxii. and 1 Cor. xi. Matthew saith, As they sat at Supper, Jesus took Bread, &c. In Mark there is the same Sense, although not the same Words, who also for one Part of the Sacrament speaketh more plainly, Jesus taking Bread, &c. After the same Sense also writeth Luke xxii. And when Jesus had taken Bread, &c. In the Mouth of two or three Witnesses, saith the Scripture, standeth all Truth. Here we have three Witnesses together, that Christ said that to be his Body which was given for many, and that to be his Blood which should be shed for many; whereby is declared the Substance, and not only the Efficacy alone thereof. Ergo, It is not true that you say, there to be not the Substance of his Body, but the Efficacy alone thereof.

Substance and Efficacy both granted in the Sacrament.

Cran. Thus you gather upon mine Answer, as though I did mean of the Efficacy, and not of the Substance of the Body; but I mean of them both, as well of the Efficacy as of the Substance. And forasmuch as all things come not readily to Memory, to a Man that shall speak Extempore, therefore for the more ample and fuller Answer in this Matter, this Writing here I do exhibit.

Archbishop Cranmer's Explication.

The final Cause why the Supper was ordained.

OUR Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, at the Time of his Maundy, preparing himself to die for our Cause, that he might redeem us from eternal Death, to forgive us all our Sins, and to cancel out the Hand-writing that was against us; that we through ungrateful Oblivion, should not forget his Death, therefore at the Time of his Holy Supper did institute a perpetual Memory of this his Death, to be celebrated among Christians in Bread and Wine, according as it is said: Do this in Remembrance of me. And so often as you eat this Bread and drink this Cup, you shall shew forth the Lord's Death till he come. And this Remembrance or Sacrament of his holy Passion, that is, of his Body slain, and Blood shed, he would all Christians to frequent and celebrate in Bread and Wine, according as he said, Take, eat, and drink ye all of this. Therefore whosoever for Man's Tradition denieth the Cup of Christ's Blood to Lay-men, they manifestly repugn against Christ, forbidding that which Christ commandeth to be done, and be like to those Scribes and Pharisees of whom the Lord spake; Matth. xxv. Ye Hypocrites, ye have rejected the Commandments of God for your Traditions. Well did Esaiah prophecy of you, saying, This People honoureth me with their Lips, but their Heart is far from me. Without Cause do they worship me, teaching the Doctrines and Precepts of Men. The Sacrament and mystical Bread being broken and distributed after the Institution of Christ, and the mystical Wine being likewise taken and received, be not only Sacraments of the Flesh of Christ wounded for us, and of his Blood-shedding, but also be most certain Sacraments for us, and (as a Man would say) Seals of God's Promises and Gifts, and also of that holy Fellowship which we have with Christ and all his Members. Moreover they be to us Memorials of that heavenly Food and Nourishment, wherewith we are nourished unto eternal Life, and the Thirst of our boiling Conscience quenched; and finally, whereby the Hearts of the Faithful be replenished with unspeakable Joy, and be corroborated and strengthened unto all Works of Godliness. We are many, (saith St. Paul, 1 Cor. xi.) one Bread, and one Body, all we which do participate of one Bread, and one Cup. And Christ saith, Eat ye, this is my Body. And, Drink ye, this is my Blood. And, I am the living Bread which came down from Heaven. He that eateth me, shall also live for ever. Not as your Fathers did eat Manna in the Desart, and are dead: He that eateth me, shall also live for ever. Anno 1554.

Bread and Wine remaineth still in the Eucharist, and be Seals to us annexed with God's Promises.

Thus therefore true Bread and true Wine remain still in the Eucharist, untill they be consumed of the Faithful, to be Signs, and as Seals unto us annexed unto God's Promises, making us certain of God's Gifts towards us. Also Christ remaineth in them, and they in Christ, which eat his Flesh and drink his Blood, as Christ himself hath promised: They that eat my Flesh, and drink my Blood, abide in me, and I in them. Moreover, he abideth also in them which worthily receive the outward Sacrament, neither doth he depart so soon as the Sacrament is consumed, but continually abideth, feeding and nourishing us so long as we remain Bodies of that Head, and Members of the same. I acknowledge not here the natural Body of Christ, which is only spiritual, unintelligible, and insensible, having no Distinction of Members and Parts in it: But that Body only I acknowledge and worship, which was born of the Virgin, which suffered for us, which is visible, palpable, and hath all the Form, and Shape, and Parts of the true natural Body of Man. Christ spake not these Words of any uncertain Substance, but of the certain Substance of Bread. which he then held in his Hands, and shewed his Disciples when he said, Eat ye, this is my Body: And likewise of the Cup, when he said, Drink ye, this is my Blood: Meaning verily of that Bread which by Nature is usual and common with us, which is taken ut of the Fruit of the Ground, compacted by the uniting of many Grains together made by Man, and by Man's Hand brought to that visible Shape, being of round Compass, and without all Sense or Life, which nourisheth the Christ's Words are spoken not of an uncertain Substance, but of a certain Substance of Bread.

Anno 1554.

Body, and ſtrengthneth the Heart of Man: Of this ſame Bread (I ſay) and not of any uncertain and wandring Subſtance, the old Fathers ſay that Chriſt ſpake theſe Words, Eat ye, this is my Body. And likewiſe alſo of the Wine, which is the Creature and Fruit of the Wine preſſed out of many Cluſters of Grapes, and maketh Man's Heart merry, of the very ſame Wine (I ſay) Chriſt ſpake, Drink ye, this is my Blood. And ſo the old Doctors do call this ſpeaking of Chriſt, tropical, figurative, anagogical, allegorical, which they do interpret after this Sort, that although the Subſtance of Bread and Wine do remain, and be received of the Faithful, yet notwithſtanding Chriſt changed the Appellation thereof, and called the Bread by the Name of his Fleſh, and the Wine by the Name of his Blood, not that it is ſo in very Deed, but ſignified in a Myſtery. So that we ſhould conſider, not what they be in their own Nature, but what they import to us and ſignify, and ſhould underſtand the Sacrament not carnally, but ſpiritually, and ſhould attend not to the viſible Nature of the Sacraments, neither have reſpect only to the outward Bread and Cup, thinking to ſee there with our Eyes no other Things but only Bread and Wine, but that lifting up our Minds we ſhould look up to the Blood of Chriſt with our Faith, ſhould touch him with our Mind, and receive him with our inward Man, and that being like Eagles in this Life, we ſhould fly up into Heaven in our Hearts, where that Lamb is reſident at the Right Hand of his Father, which taketh away the Sins of the World, by whoſe Stripes we are made whole; by whoſe Paſſion we are filled at his Table, and whoſe Blood we receiving out of his holy Side, do live for ever, being made the Gueſts of Chriſt, having him dwelling in us thro' the Grace of his true Nature, and thro' the Virtue and Efficacy of his whole Paſſion, being no leſs aſſured and certified, that we are fed ſpiritually unto eternal Life by Chriſt's Fleſh crucified, and by his Blood-ſhed, the true Food of our Minds, than that our Bodies be fed with Meat and Drink in this Life: And hereof this ſaid myſtical Bread on the Table of Chriſt, and the myſtical Wine, being adminiſtered and received after the Inſtitution of Chriſt, be to us a Memorial, a Pledge, a Token, a Sacrament, and a Seal.

How the Doctors take the Speech of Chriſt.

In the Sacrament is to be conſidered not what it is in Nature, but what it ſignifieth in Myſtery.

The Sacrament is a Memorial, a Pledge, a Token, a Sacrament and a Seal.

And thereof it is that Chriſt ſaith not thus; This is my Body, eat ye: But after he had bidden them eat, then he ſaid, This is my Body, which ſhall be given for you. Which is to mean, as though he ſhould ſay, In eating of this Bread, conſider you that this Bread is no common Thing, but a myſtical Matter; neither do you attend that which is ſet before your bodily Eyes, but what feedeth you within: Conſider and behold my Body crucified for you, that eat and digeſt in your Minds, chew you upon my Paſſion, be fed with my Death, this is the true Meat, this is the Drink that moiſteneth, wherewith you being truly fed, and inebriate, ſhall live for ever. The Bread and Wine which be ſet before your Eyes are only Declarations of me, but I myſelf am the eternal Food. Wherefore whenſoever at this my Table you ſhall behold the Sacraments, have not Regard ſo much to them, as conſider ye what I promiſe to you by them, which is myſelf to be Meat for you of eternal Life.

What the crucified Body of Chriſt doth to our Souls.

The only Oblation of Chriſt (wherewith he offered himſelf to God the Father once to Death upon the Altar of the Croſs for our Redemption) was of ſuch Efficacy, that there is no more need of any Sacrifice for the Redemption of the whole World; but all the Sacrifices of the Old Law he took away, performing that in very Deed, which they did ſignify and promiſe. Whoſoever therefore ſhall fix the Hope of his Salvation in any other Sacrifice, he falleth from the Grace of Chriſt, and is contumelious againſt the Blood of Chriſt. For He was wounded for our Tranſgreſſions, and was broken for our Iniquities. All we like Sheep have wandred aſtray. Every Man hath turned after his own Way, and the Lord hath laid all our Iniquities upon him. For he hath entred once for all into the holy Place by the Blood, not of Goats or Calves, but by his own Blood, finding eternal Redemptitn: And hath entred into Heaven, to appear now in the Sight of God for us, not to offer himſelf oftentimes (for ſo ſhould he have ſuffered many Times) but now hath he appeared once to put away Sin, through his own Oblation. And as it is appointed to all Men once to die, ſo alſo Chriſt once was offered: Who offering up one Oblation for Sins, ſitteth now for ever on the Right Hand of God. For by one Oblation hath he made perfect for ever thoſe that be ſanctified. For where is Remiſſion of Sins, there is now no Oblation for Sin, but this only Sacrifice of Chriſt; whoſoever ſhall ſeek any other Sacrifice propitiatory for Sin, maketh the Sacrifice of Chriſt of no Validity, Force, or Efficacy. For if it be ſufficient to remit Sins, what need is there of any other? For the Neceſſity of another argueth and declareth this to be inſufficient. Almighty God grant that we may truly lean to one Sacrifice of Chriſt, and that we to him again may repay our Sacrifices of Thankſgiving, of Praiſe, of confeſſing his Name, of true Amendment, of Repentance, of Mercifulneſs towards our Neighbours, and of all other good Works of Charity. For by ſuch Sacrifices we ſhall declare ourſelves neither ingrateful to God, nor altogether unworthy of this holy Sacrifice of Chriſt. And thus you have out of the Teſtimonies of holy Scripture, and of the antient Doctors of the Church, the true and ſincere Uſe of the Lord's holy Supper, and the Fruit of the true Sacrifice of Chriſt. Which whoſoever through captious or wreſted Interpretations, or by Men's Traditions, ſhall go about, otherwiſe than Chriſt ordained them, to alter or tranſubſtantiate, he ſhall anſwer to Chriſt in the latter Day, when he ſhall underſtand (but then too late) that he hath no Participation with the Body and Blood of Chriſt, but that out of the Supper of eternal Life he hath eaten and drunken eternal Damnation to himſelf.

The Sacrifice of Chriſt's Body once ſufficient for all.

Iſaiah 53.

Heb. 9.

Heb. 9. 27

Chriſt ſacrificed once for Sin, we ſacrifice daily by Thankſgiving, and thankful Works of Charity.

Weſt. Becauſe we will not conſume and ſpend the Time in Waſte, this your Writing which you exhibit, hereafter ſhall be read in this Place. In the mean Seaſon let us now fall to the Arguments.

Ched. The Scriptures in many Places do affirm, that Chriſt gave his natural Body, Matth. 26. Mark 14. Mark 22.

Ergo, I do conclude that the natural Body is in the Sacrament.

Cran. To your Argument I anſwer: If you underſtand by the Body natural [Organicum] that is, having ſuch Proportion and Members as he had living here, then I anſwer negatively.

Furthermore, concerning the Evangeliſts, thus I ſay and grant, that Chriſt took Bread, and called it his Body.

Ched. The Text of the Scripture maketh againſt you, for the Circumſtance thereto annexed doth teach us, not only there to be the Body, but alſo teacheth us what Manner of Body it is, and ſaith, The ſame Body which ſhall be given.

That Thing is here contained, that is given for us.

But the Subſtance of Bread is not given for us.

Ergo, the Subſtance of Bread is not here contained.

The Word [contained] diſtinguiſhed.

Cran. I underſtand not yet what you mean by this Word [Contained]: If ye mean Really, then I deny your Major.

Ched. The Major is the Text of Scripture. He that denieth the Major, denieth the Scripture. For the Scripture ſaith, This is my Body which is given for you.

Cran. I grant he ſaid it was his Body which ſhould be given, but he ſaid it was not his Body which is here contained; but the Body, ſaith he, that ſhall be given for you. As though he ſhould ſay, This Bread is the breaking of my Body, and this Cup is the ſhedding of my Blood. What will ye ſay then? Is the Bread the breaking of his Body, and the Cup the ſhedding of his Blood really? If you ſay ſo, I deny it.

Chriſt ſaith not, This is my Body which is here contained; but, This is my Body which ſhall be given for you.

Ched. If you aſk what is the Thing therein contained; becauſe his Apoſtles ſhould not doubt what Body it was that ſhould be given, he ſaith, This is my Body which ſhall be given for you, and my Blood which ſhall be ſhed for many. Ergo, here is the ſame Subſtance of the Body, which the Day after was given, and the ſame Blood which was ſhed. And here I urge the Scripture, which teacheth that it was no fantaſtical, no feigned, no ſpiritual Body, nor Body in Faith, but the Subſtance of the Body.

Cran. You muſt prove that it is contained, but Chriſt ſaid not which is contained. He gave Bread, and called that his Body. I ſtick not in the Words of the Scripture, but in your Word, which is feigned and imagined of yourſelf.

Ched. When Chriſt took Bread and brake it, what gave he?

Cran. He gave Bread. The Bread ſacramentally, and his Body ſpiritually, and the Bread there he called his Body.

Ched. This Anſwer is againſt the Scripture, which ſaith, that he gave his Body.

Cran. It did ſignify that which he did eat.

Ched. They did not eat the Body as the Capernaites did underſtand it, but the ſelf ſame Body which was given for the Sins of the World. Ergo, It was his Body which ſhould be given, and his Blood which ſhould be ſhed.

In ſome other Copies I find this Argument to be made by Chedſey.

Argument

The ſame Body is in the Sacrament, which was given for us on the Croſs.

But Bread was not given on the Croſs for us: Ergo, Bread is not given in the Sacrament.

Cran. I deny the Major, which is, that the ſame natural Body is given in the Sacrament, which was given on the Croſs, except you underſtand it ſpiritually. And after he denied alſo the Argument as utterly naught, as he might well do, the Major in the ſecond Figure being not univerſal.

When Mr. Chedſey had put forth his Argument, and proſecuted the ſame, and Dr. Cranmer anſwered as before is ſhewed, Dr. Oglethorpe, one of thoſe Doctors which the Prolocutor called Cenſores. (belike to be Arbiters to order the Diſputations) ſaid on this wiſe.

Oglethorpe. You come in ſtill with one Evaſion or ſtarting Hole to flee to. He urgeth the Scriptures, ſaying that Chriſt gave his very Body. You ſay, that he gave his Body in Bread. Quomodo prædicatur corpus? Qualis eſt corpus? Qualis eſt prædicatio? Panis eſt corpus. Anno 1554.

Dr. Oglethorpe ſpeaketh falſe Latin.

Cran. You ſhould ſay, Quale corpus. I anſwer to the Queſtion: It is the ſame Body which was born of the Virgin, was crucified, aſcended; but tropically, and by a Figure. And ſo I ſay, Panis eſt corpus, is a figurative Speech, ſpeaking ſacramentally, for it is a Sacrament of his Body.

Cranmer anſwereth Oglethorpe.

Ogle. This Word [Body, being Prædicatum] doth ſignify Subſtance.

But Subſtantia is not predicated denominatively.

Ergo, It is an eſſential Predication, and ſo it is his true Body, and not the Figure of his Body.

Cran. Subſtantia may be predicated denominatively in an Allegory, or in a Metaphor, or in a figurative Locution.

Ogle. It is not a likely Thing that Chriſt hath leſs Care for his Spouſe the Church, than a wiſe Houſholder hath for his Family in making his Will or Teſtament.

Cran. Your Reaſon is drawn out of the Affairs of Men, and not taken out of the holy Scriptures.

Ogle. But no Houſholder maketh his Teſtament after that Sort.

Cran. Yes, there are many that ſo do. For what Matter is it, ſo it be underſtood and perceived? I ſay Chriſt did uſe figurative Speech in no Place more than in his Sacraments, and ſpecially in this of his Supper.

Ogle. No Man of Purpoſe doth uſe Tropes in his Teſtament, for if he do, he deceiveth them that he comprehendeth in his Teſtament: Therefore Chriſt uſeth none here.

Cran. Yes, he may uſe them well enough. You know not what Tropes are.

Ogle. The good Man of the Houſe hath reſpect that his Heirs, after his Departure, may live in quiet, and without brabling.

But they cannot be in quiet if he do uſe Tropes:

Therefore (I ſay) he uſed no Tropes.

Cran. I deny your Minor.

Weſt. Auguſtine, in his Book intitled, De Unitate Eccleſiæ, chap. 10. hath theſe Words following:

A Place of St. Auguſtine recited by the Prolocutor.

What a Thing is this, I pray you, when the laſt Words of one lying upon his Death-bed are heard, which is ready to go to his Grave, no Man ſaith that he hath made a Lye, and he is not accounted his Heir which regardeth not thoſe Words. How ſhall we then eſcape God's Wrath, if either not believing, or not regarding, we ſhall reject the laſt Words, both of the only Son of God, and alſo of our Lord and Saviour, both aſcending into Heaven, and beholding from thence who deſpiſeth, who obſerveth them not, and ſo ſhall come from thence to judge all Men.

The Argument is thus formed:

Whoſoever ſaith that the Teſtator lieth, is a wicked Heir.

But whoſoever ſaith that Chriſt ſpake by Figures, ſaith that he did lie.

Ergo, Whoſoever ſaith that Chriſt here ſpake by Figures, is a wicked Heir.

Cran. I deny the Minor. As who ſay it is neceſſary, that he which uſeth to ſpeak by Tropes and Figures ſhould lie in ſo doing.

Ogle. Your Judgment is diſagreeing with all Churches.

Anno 1554.

Cran. Nay, I disagree with the Papistical Church.

Ogle. This you do through the Ignorance of Logick.

Cran. Nay, this you say through the Ignorance of the Doctors.

Weston. I will go plainly to work by Scriptures. What took he?

Cran. Bread.

West. What gave he?

Cran. Bread.

West. What brake he?

Cran. Bread.

West. What did he eat?

Cran. Bread.

West. He gave Bread, therefore he gave not his Body.

He gave not his Body, therefore it is not his Body verily, and indeed and in Truth.

Cran. I deny the Argument.

Cole. This Argument holdeth a Disparatis: It is Bread. Ergo, It is not the Body; and it is such an Argument or Reason as cannot be dissolved.

Disparata, is a School Term, meaning divers Substances, being so separated in Nature, that one can never be said to be the other. The Sacrament, setting the Figure aside, formally is not Christ's Body.

Cran. The like Argument may be made. He is a Rock, Ergo, he is not Christ.

Cole. It is not alike.

West. He gave not his Body indeed: Ergo, It was not his Body indeed.

Cran. He gave his Death, his Passion, and the Sacrament of his Passion. And in very Deed setting the Figure aside, formally it is not his Body.

West. Why, then the Scripture is false.

Cran. Nay, the Scripture is most true.

West. This saith Chrysostom, Homil. 61. ad pop. Antioch. Needful it is, dear Friends, to tell you what the Miracle of the Mysteries is, and wherefore it is given, and what Profit there is of the Thing. We are one Body, and Members of his Flesh and of his Bones. We that be in the Mystery, let us follow the Thing which was spoken. Wherefore that we may become this Thing, not only by Love, but also that we may become one with that Flesh indeed, that is brought to pass by this Food, which he gave unto us, minding to shew his great good Will that he hath towards us; and therefore he mixed himself with us, and united his own Body with us, that we should be made all as one Thing together, as a Body joined and annexed to the Head, for this is a Token of most ardent and perfect Love. And the same Thing Job also insinuating, said of his Servants, of whom he was desired above Measure, insomuch that they, shewing their great Desire toward him, said, who shall give unto us to be filled with his Flesh. Therefore also Christ did the same, who, to induce us into a great Love toward him, and to declare his Desire toward us, did not only give himself to be seen of them that would, but also to be handled and eaten, and suffered us to fasten our Teeth in his Flesh, and to be united together, and so to fill all our desire. Like Lions therefore, as breathing Fire, let us go from that Table, being made terrible to the Devil, remembring our Head in our Mind, and his Charity which he shewed unto us. For Parents many Times give their Children to others to be fed; but I do not so, saith he, but feed you with mine own Flesh, and set myself before you, desiring to make you all jolly People; and pretending to you great Hope and Expectation to look for Things to come, who here give my self to you, but much more in the World to come. I am become your Brother, I took Flesh and Blood for you. Again, my Flesh and Blood, by the which I am made your Kinsman, I deliver unto you.

Thus much out of Chrysostom; out of which Words I make this Argument.

The same Flesh whereby Christ is made our Brother and Kinsman, is given of Christ to us to be eaten.

Christ is made our Brother and Kinsman by his true, natural, and organical Flesh.

Ergo, His true, natural, and organical Flesh, is given to us to be eaten.

Cran. I grant the Consequence and the Consequent.

Dr. Weston's Argument denied: We are the true Body of Christ: Ergo, We eat it with our Mouth.

West. Therefore we eat it with our Mouth.

Cran. I deny it. We eat it through Faith.

West. He gave us the same Flesh to eat, whereby he became our Brother and Kinsman.

But he became our Brother and Kinsman by his true, natural, and organical Flesh.

Therefore he gave his true, natural, and organical Flesh to be eaten.

Cran. I grant he took and gave the same true, natural, and organical Flesh, wherein he suffered, and yet he feedeth us spiritually, and that Flesh is received spiritually.

West. He gave us the same Flesh which he took of the Virgin.

But he took not the true Flesh of the Virgin spiritually, or in a Figure.

Ergo, He gave his true natural Flesh, not spiritually.

Cran. Christ gave to us his own natural Flesh, the same wherein he suffered, but feedeth us spiritually.

West. Chrysostom is against you, who saith: Let it come into thy Remembrance with what Honour thou art honoured, and what Table thou sittest at: for with the same Thing we are nourished, which the Angels do behold and tremble at: Neither are they able to behold it without great Fear, for the Brightness which cometh thereof; and we be brought and compact into one Heap or Mass with him, being together one Body of Christ, and one Flesh with him. Who shall speak the Powers of the Lord, and shall declare forth all his Praises? What Pastor hath ever nourished his Sheep with his own Members? Many Mothers have put forth their Infants after their Birth to other Nurses: which he would not do, but feedeth us with his own Body, and conjoineth and uniteth us to himself.

Chrysostom alledged by Dr. Weston, Hom. 85. in Matt. cap. 26.

Whereupon I gather this Argument:

Like as Mothers nurse their Children with Milk, so Christ nourisheth us with his Body.

But Mothers do not nourish their Infants spiritually with their Milk:

Therefore, Christ doth not nourish those that be his spiritually with his Blood.

Cran. He gave us the Wine for his Blood.

West. If he gave the Wine for his Blood, as you say, then he gave less than Mothers do give.

But Chrysostom affirmeth, that he gave more than Mothers give.

Therefore he gave not the Wine for his Blood.

Cran. You prevent mine Answer. He gave Wine, yet the Blood is considered therein. As for Example: When he giveth Baptism, we consider not the Water, but the Holy Ghost, and Remission of Sins. We receive with the Mouth the Sacrament; but the Thing and the Matter of the Sacrament we receive by Faith.

Christ nourisheth us both with Bread and with his Body: with Bread our Bodies, with his Body our Souls.

West. When Christ said, Eat ye, whether meant he, by the Mouth or by Faith?

Cran. He meant that we should receive the Body by Faith, the Bread by the Mouth.

West.

A gros Saying.

West. Nay, the Body by the Mouth.

Cran. That I deny.

Chrysostom alledged by Dr. Weston.

West. I prove it out of Chrysostom, writing upon the 50th Psalm.

She that is a Mother, shameth sometime to play the Nurse. But Christ our Nurse doth not so play with us. Therefore instead of Meat he feedeth us with his own Flesh, and instead of Drink he feedeth us with his own Blood. Likewise upon the 26th Chapter of Matthew, the 83d Homily, he saith: For it shall not be enough for him to become Man, and in the mean while to be whipped; but he doth bring us into one Mass or Lump with himself (as I may so call it) and maketh us his Body, not by Faith alone, but also in very Deed.

Cran. I grant, we make one Nature with Christ. But that to be done with Mouth I deny.

Chrysostom alledged by Dr. Weston.

West. Chrysostom, 2 Cor. cap. xiii. Hom. 29. hath these Words, No little Honour is given to our Mouth, receiving the Body of the Lord.

Cran. This I say, that Christ entreth into us both by our Ears and by our Eyes. With our Mouth we receive the Body of Christ, and tear it with our Teeth, that is to say, the Sacrament of the Body of Christ. Wherefore I say and affirm, that the Virtue of the Sacrament is much: And therefore Chrysostom many times speaketh of Sacraments no otherwise, than of Christ himself, as I could prove, if I might have Liberty to speak, by many Places of Chrysostom, where he speaketh of the Sacrament of the Body of Christ.

The Words of Chrysostom expounded.

With which Word of the Sacrament of the Body, &c. Dr. Cole being highly offended, denied it to be the Sacrament of the Body of Christ, save only of the mystical Body which is the Church.

Cran. And why should we doubt to call it the Sacrament of the Body of Christ, offered upon the Cross, seeing both Christ and the ancient Fathers do so call it?

Cole. How gather you that of Chrysostom?

Chrysostom alledged by Dr. Cranmer. Chrys. lib. 3. de sacerd. cap. 3.

Cran. Chrysostom declareth himself, O miracle! O the Good-will of God towards us, which sitteth above at the Right-hand of the Father, and is holden in Mens Hands at the Sacrifices Time, and is given to feed upon, to them that are desirous of him! And that is brought to pass by no Subtilty or Craft, but with the open and beholding Eyes of all the Standers-by.

Thus you hear Christ is seen here in Earth every Day, is touched, is torn with the Teeth, that our Tongue is red with his Blood; which no Man having any Judgment, will say or think to be spoken without Trope or Figure.

West. What Miracle is it if it be not his Body, and if he spake only of the Sacrament, as though it were his Body?

Chrysostom alledged by Dr. Weston.

But hearken what Chrysostom saith, I shew forth that Thing on the Earth unto thee, which is worthy the greatest Honour. For like as in the Palace of Kings, neither the Walls, nor the sumptuous Bed, but the Body of Kings sitting under the Cloth of Estate, and royal Seat of Majesty, is of all things else the most excellent; so is in like manner the King's Body in Heaven, which is now set before us on Earth. I shew thee neither Angels nor Archangels, nor the Heaven of Heavens, but the very Lord and Master of all these things. Thou perceivest after what sort thou dost not only behold, but touchest, and not only touchest, but eatest that which on the Earth is the greatest and chiefest Thing of all other, and when thou hast received the same, thou goest Home; wherefore cleanse thy Soul from all Uncleanness? Anno 1554.

Upon this I conclude that the Body of Christ is shewed us upon the Earth.

Cran. What? upon the Earth? no Man seeth Christ upon the Earth: He is seen with the Eyes of our Mind, with Faith and Spirit.

West. I pray you, what is it that seemeth worthy highest Honour on the Earth? Is it the Sacrament, or else the Body of Christ?

Cran. Chrysostom speaketh of the Sacrament, and the Body of Christ is shewed forth in the Sacrament.

West. Ergo, Then the Sacrament is worthy greatest Honour.

Cran. I deny the Argument.

West. That Thing is shewed forth, and is now in the Earth [Ostenditur] & * [est] which is worthy highest Honour.

* This Word [est] is not in Chrysostom.

But only the Body of Christ is worthy highest Honour.

Ergo, The Body of Christ is now on the Earth.

Cran. I answer, the Body of Christ to be on the Earth, but so as in the Sacrament, and as the Holy Ghost is in the Water of Baptism.

West. Chrysostom saith [Ostendo] I shew forth, which noted a Substance to be present.

Cranmer answereth to the Place of Chrysostom, how Christ is shewed forth on the Earth, not bodily, but in a Sacrament, that is, sacramentally and figuratively.

Cran. That is to be understood sacramentally.

West. He saith [Ostendo in Terra] I shew forth on Earth, declaring also the Place where.

Cran. This is to be understood figuratively.

West. He is shewed forth, and is now on the Earth, &c. as before.

Cran. Your Major and Conclusion are all one.

West. But the Major is true: Ergo, the Conclusion also is true.

That Thing is on the Earth, which is worthy of most high Honour.

But no Figure is worthy of highest Honour

Ergo, That which is on the Earth is no Figure.

Cran. I answer, that is true sacramentally.

Here Weston crieth to him, that he should answer to one Part, bidding him repeat his Words. Which when he went about to do, such was the Noise and crying out in the School, that his mild Voice could not be heard. For when he went about to declare to the People how the Prolocutor did not well English the Words of Chrysostom, using for [Ostenditur in Terra,] He is shewed forth on the Earth, [Est in Terra,] He is on the Earth, whereas Chrysostom hath not [Est] nor any such Word of being on Earth, but only of shewing, as the Grace of the Holy Ghost, [in baptismo Ostenditur], Is shewed forth in Baptism: And oftentimes he did inculcate this Word [Ostenditur.] Then the Prolocutor, stretching forth his Hand, set on the rude People to cry out at him, filling all the School with hissing, clapping of Hands, and Noise, calling him unlearned, unskilful, impudent. Which impudent and reproachful Words this reverend Man most patiently and meekly did abide, as one that had been inured with the Suffering of such-like Reproaches. And when the Prolocutor, not yet satisfied with rude and unseemly Demeanour, did urge and call upon him to answer the Argument: Then he bad the Notary repeat his Words again.

Unreverend Words used in the School against Dr. Cranmer.

Notary. That which is worthy most high Honour, here I shew forth to thee on Earth.

The Body of Christ is worthy highest Honour.

Ergo,

Anno 1554.

The Body of Christ is shewed forth to us here in Earth diversWays: As in reading of the Scriptures, sometimes in hearing Sermons, and also in Sacraments, and yet neither the Scriptures, nor Sermons, nor Sacraments, are to be worshipped.

Ergo, He sheweth forth the Body of Christ here on Earth.

Cran. That is shewed forth here on the Earth which may be seen, which may be touched, and which may be eaten, but these Things be not true of the Body.

Cole. Why should not these Things be true of the Body of Christ?

Cran. The Major out of Chrysostom is true, meaning of the Sacraments. For in the Sacrament the true Body of Christ, and not the figurative Body, is set forth.

West. Shew me somewhat in Earth worthy greatest Honour.

Cran. I cannot, but in the Sacrament only.

West. Ergo, The Sacrament is worthy greatest Honour.

Cran. So it is.

Judges. Let it be written.

Cran. I pray you let my Answer be written likewise: I affirm, that the Body of Christ is shewed forth unto us. It is our Faith that seeth Christ.

West. Ostendo tibi, I shew it to thee, saith Chrysostom, not to thy Faith.

Cran. He speaketh sacramentally.

West. Ergo, Chrysostom lieth. For he, speaking of shewing, saith: Ego Chrysostomus ostendo: I Chrysostom do shew. But he can shew nothing sacramentally.

Ched. By Force of Argument we are brought to this Point, That the Body of Christ is proved to be on Earth, not only sacramentally, but in very Deed also, by this Reason, that it is worthy highest Honour. The Reason is indissoluble.

Cran. I never heard a more vain Argument, and it is most vain; also it hath mine Answer unto it.

Ched. Will you affirm, that it is absurd which Chrysostom saith, that the Body of Christ is touched?

I touch the Body of Christ in the Sacrament, as Thomas touched Christ.

Thomas touched Christ, and said Dominus meus, Deus meus: My Lord, my God.

Ergo, That which he touched was the Lord, the God.

The Argument of Chedsey is not formal.

This Argument, as I received it out of the Notary's Book, is not formal; but rather he should conclude in the third Figure thus.

As Thomas touched the Body of Christ, so we touch it in the Sacrament.

Thomas touched the Body of Christ corporally.

Ergo, We touch the Body of Christ corporally in the Sacrament.

God cannot be touched.

Cran. I deny your Argument. He touched not God, but him which was God. Neither is it sound Doctrine to affirm, that God is touched.

Ched. This is because of the Union; so that God is said to be touched, when Christ, which is both God and Man, is touched.

Tertul. de Resurrectione carnis. Quod Symbolorum est Rei attribuitur.

Tertullian saith, Let us consider as concerning the proper Form of the Christian Man, what great Prerogative this vain and foul Substance of ours hath with God. Although it were sufficient to it, that no Soul could ever get Salvation, unless it believe while it is in the Flesh; so much the Flesh availeth to Salvation; by the which Flesh it cometh, that whereas the Soul so is linked unto God, it is the said Flesh that causeth the Soul to be linked: Yet the Flesh moreover is washed that the Soul may be cleansed; the Flesh is anointed that the Soul may be consecrated; the Flesh is signed, that the Soul may be defended; the Flesh is shadowed by the Imposition of Hands, that the Soul may be illuminated with the Spirit; the Flesh doth eat the Body and Blood of Christ, that the Soul may be fed of God. Whereupon I gather this Argument.

The Flesh eateth the Body of Christ.

Ergo, The Body of Christ is eaten with the Mouth.

Item, Phoceus 1 ad Cor. cap. 11. Whereas he saith, Is guilty of the Body and Blood, this he declareth, that like as Judas betrayed him, and the Jews were fierce and spiteful against him; so do they dishonour him, which receive his holy Body with their impure Hands, and as the Jews did hold him then, do now receive him with impure Mouths. And whereas he often maketh Mention of the Body and Blood of the Lord, he declareth, that it is not simply Man that is sacrificed, but even the Lord himself, being the Maker of all Things, hereby (as it were) making them afraid.

Phoceus alledged by Chedsey.

Ergo, (as it is hereby gathered) the Body of Christ is touched with the Hands.

Cran. You vouch two Authors against me upon sundry Things. First, I must answer Tertullian, and then the other.

Ched. They tend both to one Meaning.

Answer to Tertullian.

Cran. Unto Tertullian I answer, (because our Disputation is wandring and uncertain) that he calleth that the Flesh which is the Sacrament. For athough God work all Things in us invisibly beyond Man's Reach, yet they are so manifest, that they may be seen and perceived of every Sense. Therefore he setteth forth Baptism, Unction, and last of all the Supper of the Lord unto us, which he gave to signify his Operation in us. The Flesh liveth by the Bread, but the Soul is inwardly fed by Christ.

Dr. Weston urgeth him with the Words of Tertullian.

West. Stick to those Words of Tertullian, The Body eateth, that the Soul may be fed.

Ched. The Flesh eateth the Body of Christ, that the Soul may be fed therewith.

West. Here you see two Kinds of Food, of the Soul and of the Body.

Ched. He saith, that not only the Soul, but the Flesh is also fed.

Cran. The Soul is fed with the Body of Christ, the Body with the Sacrament.

Ched. Is the Soul fed with the Body of Christ and not with the Sacrament.

Cran. Read that which followeth, and you shall perceive, that by Things external, an Operation internal is understood. Inwardly we eat Christ's Body, and outwardly we eat the Sacrament. So one Thing is done outwardly, another inwardly. Like as in Baptism the external Element whereby the Body is washed, is one; the internal Thing, whereby the Soul is cleansed, is another.

Inwardly we eat the Body, outwardly the Sacrament.

Ched. The Soul is fed by that which the Body eateth.

But the Soul is fed by the Flesh of Christ.

Ergo, The Body eateth the Flesh of Christ.

Cran. We eat not one Thing outwardly and inwardly. Inwardly we eat Christ's Body: Outwardly we eat the Sacrament.

Ched. I will repeat the Argument.

† The Flesh eateth Christ's Body, that the Soul may be fed therewith.

† The Form of this Argument which he repeateth stood better before, For the Form of this Connexion answereth to none of the three Figures of Syllogisms.

The Soul is not fed with the Sacrament, but with Christ's Body.

Ergo, The Flesh eateth the Body of Christ.

Cran. The Sacrament is one Thing, the Matter of the Sacrament is another. Outwardly we receive the Sacrament; inwardly we eat the Body of Christ.

Ched. I prove, that we receive that outwardly wherewith the Soul is fed.

Consequence. The Soul is fed with the Body of Christ.

Ergo, We eat the Body of Christ outwardly.

Consequence. The Flesh eateth Christ his Body.

Ergo, The Soul is fed therewith.

Answer. Cran. The Flesh (I say) eateth the Sacrament; it eateth not Christ's Body. For Tertullian speaketh of the Sacrament; and the Place hath not [inde] thereof, but [de Deo] of God.

Ched. What say you to Phoceus Saying; They which receive the Body with impure Hands, are guilty of the Lord's Blood, as Judas was?

West. That which followeth in Tertullian doth take away your Shift, whereas he saith; They cannot be separated in Reward, whom one Work joineth together.

But Manducation, i. e. the Work or Labour; Ergo, &c.

The Form of this Argument may be thus collected. One Work or Labour joineth Body and Soul together.

Manducation is a Work or Labour.

Ergo, One Manducation joineth together both Body and Soul.

* As the Body and Soul are joined in the Work of Baptism, so are they joined in the Communion of the Lord's Supper. For as the Flesh is washed with Water, that the Soul may be purged spiritually; so the Body eateth the outward Sacrament, that the Soul may be fed of God

* To the Major of which Argument, thus it may be answered, expounding the Saying of Tertullian, Una opera conjungit, sed non idem operandi modus. Again, Opera, here in Tertullian, may be taken for Temptations and Afflictions.

Cran. Your Authority (I suppose) is taken out of the Book, De Resurrectione Carnis: Of the Resurrection of the Flesh: And the Meaning thereof is this: Tertullian goeth about there to prove, that the Flesh shall rise again, becaufe it is joined together in one Work with the Soul. Through Baptism in this World the Body is washed, and the Soul is washed: The Body outwardly, the Soul inwardly, the Work is one. In this Work they are joined. And he speaketh of Signs.

West. He speaketh of eating in a Sign.

Ergo, The Reward is in a Sign.

Cran. They are coupled in one Work, namely, in the Sacrament.

West. There are two Works.

Ergo, There are two Rewards.

If the Work be in a Figure.

Ergo, The Reward is in a Figure.

Cran. He speaketh not of two Works. Two Works are but one Work. And yet he saith not, [Quos una opera conjungit,] Whom one Work joineth together, but [Opera] A Work: As in Baptism the Soul and Body are joined in Understanding.

West. The Flesh and Soul shall have one and the self same Reward, becaufe they have one Work.

Cran. Becaufe they be joined together in one Work.

Dr. Tresham disputeth. Tresh. Foraſmuch as the reverend Doctors here have impugned, and overthrown your Assertion and your Answers sufficiently: I will fall to another Matter, not altogether impertinent to the Purpose, and that in few Words, against a certain Sequel of your Opinion. The Sequel is this; That between us and Christ there is no further Conjunction, while we receive the Eucharist, than a Conjunction of the Mind, or a spiritual Conjunction, whereby we are united and knit unto Christ thro' Faith and Love. As for the Presence of Christ concerning the Substance, that you utterly deny. Whereupon in very Deed you leave but a spiritual Union and joining together of Mind. Howbeit you would seem to think otherwise by your subtle Answers. But I will declare by manifest Testimonies of the Fathers, that this your Sequel, which you account so sure, is far wide from the Truth. And I will begin with St. Hilary, who is both an ancient and learned Author. For disputing against the Arians, Octavo de Trinitate, he saith, that this was their Opinion; That the Father and the Son are conjoined only thro' Unity of Will. Whereupon Arius himself, when Scripture was alledged against him, did (as you do now) elude the right Meaning of it by his false Interpretations. But the Catholick Church hath always believed and ever maintained, That Christ is one with the Father in Nature, and not by Consent of Will only. To the Proof whereof, when the Catholicks vouched this Testimony of John, Pater & Ego unum sumus, The Father and I are one: The Arians answered, that [unum sumus] was to be understood by the Assent of their Wills, and Agreement of their Minds, not by Unity of their Natures. Thus it happeneth now adays, where Men do doubt of the Sacrament. But Hilary going on, and proving the natural Conjunction between the Father and the Son [a fortiori,] questioneth with his Adversaries after this Manner. I demand of them now which will needs have the Unity of Will only between the Father and the Son, whether Christ be now in us truly by Nature, or only by the Agreement of Wills. If (saith he) the Word be incarnate in very Deed, and we receive at the Lord's Table the Word made Flesh, how then is he to be thought not to dwell in us naturally, who being born Man, hath both taken the Nature of our Flesh upon him that is now inseparable, and hath also mingled that Nature of his own Flesh unto the Nature of Eternity under the Sacrament of his Flesh, to be communicated unto us? Thus much hath Hilary. Whereupon I ask of you this Question, How Christ dwelleth now in us; according to Faith, or according to Nature.

Anno 1554.

Conjunction between Christ and us.

Cran. I say that Christ dwelleth verily in us carnally and naturally, for that he hath taken of the Virgin our Flesh upon him, and becaufe he hath communicated his Nature unto us.

Tresh. Bucer contra Abrincensem, referreth these Words only to the Eucharist, saying, Christ doth exhibit all this unto us in his holy Supper, and according to the holy Fathers (saith he) Christ liveth thereby in us, not only by Faith and Love, as absent, but naturally, corporally, and carnally. Wherefore he is not absent, neither are we joined to Christ only by a spiritual Union (as you suppose) but also by a corporal and carnal Union.

Bucer contra Abrincensem alledged by Tresham,

Cran. I know that Mr. Bucer was a learned Man. But your Faith is in good Case, which leaneth upon Bucer.

Tresh. I do not bring Bucer as a Patron of our Faith, but becaufe he is a Man of your Sort, and yet bringeth this Place of Hilary for that Union which we have by the Sacrament, and confesseth, that by it we are carnally united to Christ, whereas you think we are joined by it only thro' Faith and Love.

Christ communicated and united to us by Birth, by Unity of the Church, by the Communion, by Baptism, by Faith.

Cran. I say that Christ was communicated unto us, not only by Faith, but in very Deed also when he was born of the Virgin. We have Fellowship with Christ, when we are united in the Unity of the Church, when we are made Flesh of his Flesh, and Bones of his Bones, and so we are united in the Communion, in Baptism, and in Faith.

Tresh

Anno 1554.

Tresh. I pray you what Fellowship have we with Christ, in that he is made Man? Are not the Turks and Jews therein joined with him? For they are Men as we are, and are joined with him in Man's Nature, in that he was born of a Woman. I speak now of a more near Unity. We are made one with Christ by the Communion in a perfect Unity.

We are united to Christ by Communion so as we are by Baptism.

Cran. We are made so, I grant; but we are made so also by Baptism; and the Unity in Baptism is perfect.

Tresh. We are not made one by Baptism in a perfect Unity, as Hilary there speaketh, but by the Communion, by which we are carnally made one, but not likewise by Baptism: Wherefore you understand not Hilary. You shall hear his Words, which are these: He had now declared afore the Sacrament of his perfect Union, saying; As the living Father sent me, so do I also live by the Father. And he that eateth my Flesh, shall also live through me. And a little after he writeth thus: This truly is the Cause of our Life, that we have Christ dwelling by his Flesh in us that are fleshly, which also by him shall live in such Sort as he liveth by his Father. Wherefore of these Words it is manifest, that we obtain this perfect Unity by Means of the Sacrament, and that Christ by it is carnally united unto us.

Objection of Hilary.

Answer to the Place of Hilary.

Cran. Nay, Hilary in that same Place doth teach, that it is done by Baptism: And that Doctrine is not to be suffered in the Church, which teacheth, that we are not joined to Christ by Baptism.

West. Repeat the Argument.

Cran. You must first make an Argument.

Tresh. It is made already, but it shall be made again in this Form:

As Christ liveth by his Father, so they that eat Christ's Flesh live by the same Flesh.

But Christ liveth by the Father, not only by Faith and Love, but naturally.

Ergo, We live not through the eating of Christ's Flesh, by Faith and Love only, but naturally.

Cran. We live by Christ, not only by Faith and Love, but eternally indeed.

Tresh. Nay, * naturally; I prove it thus:

As Christ liveth by the Father, so live we by his Flesh eaten of us.

But Christ liveth not by his Father, only by Faith and Love, but naturally.

Therefore we do not live by eating of Christ's Flesh only by Faith and Love (as you suppose) but naturally.

Cran. The Minor is not true.

Tresh. This is the Opinion of Arius, That Christ is united to his Father by Conjunction of Mind, and not naturally.

* The Papists by this one Word naturally, confound themselves. For if the natural Body of Christ were eaten, and went naturally into our Bodies, then should it follow, that the Nature of his Body being immaculate and now also immortal, our Bodies united in Nature to his pure and immortal Body, naturally should never sin nor die. Wherefore it remaineth, that the natural uniting to Christ's Body, cometh not by the bodily eating of the Sacrament, unto our Body, nor to our Soul, and so shall redound at length unto our Bodies. If that Union of the Substance of Flesh should be granted unto our Bodies, then should our Bodies never die, nor see Corruption.

Cran. I say not so yet, neither do I think so. But I will tell you what I like not in your Minor. You say, That Christ doth not live by his Father only by Faith and Love; but I say, That Christ liveth not at all by his Faith.

West. Mark and consider well this Word (by Faith) lest any Occasion of cavilling be given.

Tresh. Let that Word (by Faith) be omitted. Neither did I mean, that Christ liveth by his Father through Faith. Yet the Strength of the Argument remaineth in Force; for else Hilary doth not confute the Arians, except there be a greater Conjunction between us and Christ, when he is eaten of us, than only a spiritual Conjunction. You do only grant an Union. As for a carnal or natural Union of the Substance of the Flesh, by which we are joined more than spiritually, you do not grant. But our Lord Jesus give you a better Mind, and shew you the Light of his Truth, that you may return into the Way of Righteousness.

West. We came hither to dispute, and not to pray.

Tresh. Is it not lawful to pray for them that err?

West. It is not lawful yet. But proceed.

The same Argument again repeated.

Tresh. Again, I reason thus; As Christ liveth by his Father, after the same Manner do we live by the eating of his Flesh.

But Christ liveth not by his Father, only in Unity of Will, but naturally.

Ergo, We do not live when we eat the Flesh of Christ, only by Faith and Unity of Will, but naturally.

Answer.

Cran. This is my Faith, and it agreeth with the Scripture, Christ liveth by his Father naturally, and maketh us to live by himself indeed naturally, and that not only in the Sacrament of the Eucharist, but also in Baptism. For Infants, when they are baptised, do eat the Flesh of Christ.

West. Answer either to the whole Argument, or to the Parts thereof. For this Argument is strong, and cannot be dissolved.

The Archbishop repeateth the Argument.

Cran. This is the Argument.

As Christ liveth by his Father, after the same Manner do we live by his Flesh, being eaten of us.

But Christ liveth not by his Father only in Unity of Will, but naturally.

Ergo. We eating his Flesh do not live only by Faith and Love, but naturally.

But the Major is false; namely, That by the same Manner we live by Christ, as he liveth by his Father.

West. † Hilary saith, after the same Manner, upon these Words, He that eateth my Flesh shall live by me. Ergo, Christ liveth by his Father, after the same Manner we shall live by his Flesh. Here you see, that Hilary saith, After the same Manner.

Cran. After the same Manner, doth not signify alike in all Things, but in Deed and eternally: For so do we live by Christ, and Christ liveth by his Father. For in other Respects Christ liveth otherwise by his Father, than we live by Christ.

West. He liveth by his Father naturally and eternally.

Ergo, We live by Christ naturally and eternally.

Cran. We do not live naturally, but by Grace, if you take naturally for the Manner of Nature; as Christ hath eternal Life of his Father, so have we of him.

† Christ not after his Manhood, but after his Divine Nature, liveth naturally by his Father, which Divine Nature of his worketh also in his Man-hood an Immortality: So our Spirit and Soul, receiving the natural Body of Christ in the Mysteries, by Faith do receive also the Nature of his Body, that is, his Pureness, Justification, and Life; the Operation whereof redounding likewise unto our Bodies, doth make the same also capable of the same Glory and Immortality. And thus it is true that as Christ liveth naturally by his Father, so we live naturally by the Body of Christ eaten in the Mysteries, having respect both to the Man-hood of him, and us. For as the Flesh of Christ in respect of bare Flesh, liveth not naturally by the Father, but for that it is joined to his Divinity: So our Flesh liveth not naturally by Christ's Body eaten in the Sacrament (for then every wicked Man eating the Sacrament should live naturally by him) but for that our Flesh is joined to the Spirit and Soul, which truly eateth the Body of Christ by Faith: And so only the Bodies of the Faithful do live by eating the Body of Christ naturally, in participating the natural Properties of the Body of Christ.

West.

West. I stick to this Word Naturally.

Cran. I mean it touching the Truth of Nature. For Christ liveth otherwise by his Father, than we live by Christ.

West. Hilary, in his eighth Book de Trinitate, denieth it, when he saith: He liveth therefore by his Father, and as he liveth by his Father, after the same Manner we shall live by his Flesh.

Naturally expounded.

Cran. We shall live after the same Manner, as concerning the Nature of the Flesh of Christ: For as he hath of his Father the Nature of Eternity, so shall we have of him.

West. Answer unto the Parts of the Argument.

The Argument the third Time repeated.

As Christ liveth by his Father, after the same Manner shall we live by his Flesh.

But Christ doth not live by his Father only in Unity of Will, but naturally.

Ergo, We eating of his Flesh, do not live only by Faith and Love, but naturally.

Cran. I grant (as I said) we live by Christ naturally; but I never heard that Christ liveth with his Father in Unity of Will only.

West. Because it seemeth a Marvel unto you, hear what Hilary saith: These Things are recited of us to this End, because the Hereticks, feigning an Unity of Will only between the Father and the Son, did use the Example of our Unity with God, as though we being united to the Son, and by the Son to the Father only by Obedience and Will of Religion, had no Propriety of the natural Communion by the Sacrament of the Body and Blood.

But answer to the Argument. Christ liveth by his Father naturally and eternally: Therefore do we live by Christ naturally and eternally.

Cran. Cyril and Hilary do say, that Christ is united to us not only by Will, but also by Nature: He doth communicate to us his own Nature, and so is Christ made one with us carnally and corporally, because he took our Nature of the Virgin Mary. And Hilary doth not say only that Christ is naturally in us, but that we also are naturally in him, and in the Father; that is, that we are Partakers of their Nature, which is Eternity, or Everlastingness. For as the Word, receiving our Nature, did join it in Unity of Person, and did communicate unto that our Nature, the Nature of his Eternity; that like as he, being the everlasting Word of the Father, had everlasting Life of the Father, even so he gave the same Nature to his Flesh. Likewise also did he communicate with us the same Nature of Eternity, which he and the Father have, and that we should be one with them, not only in Will and Love, but that we should be also Partakers of the Nature of everlasting Life.

Naturally expounded, that is, our Bodies to participate the Nature and Properties of Christ's holy immortal Body.

West. Hilary, where he saith, Christ communicated to us his Nature, meaneth that not by his Nativity, but by the Sacrament.

Cran. He hath communicated to us his Flesh by his Nativity.

West. We have communicated to him † our Flesh when he was born.

† Then had Christ a sinful Flesh.

Cran. Nay, he communicated to us his Flesh, when he was born, and that I will shew you out of Cyril upon this Place, Et homo factus est.

West. Ergo, Christ being born, gave us his Flesh.

Cran. In his Nativity he made us ‖ Partakers of his Flesh.

‖ That is, made us Partakers of the Properties, Life, Innocency, and Resurrection of his Body.

West. Write, Sirs.

Cran. Yea, write.

Ched. This Place of Hilary is so dark, that you were compelled to falsify it in your Book, because you could not draw it to confirm your Purpose.

If Christ have taken verily the Flesh of our Body, and the Man that was verily born of the Virgin Mary, is Christ; and also we receive under the true Mystery the Flesh of his Body, by means whereof we shall be one, for the Father is in Christ, and Christ in us; how shall that be called the Unity of Will, when the natural Property, brought to pass by the Sacrament, is the Sacrament of Unity. We must not speak in the Sense of Man, or of the World in Matters concerning God: Neither must we perversly wrest any strange or wicked Sense out of the wholesome Meaning of the Holy Scripture, thro' impudent and vile Contention. Let us read those Things that are written, and let us understand those Things that we read, and then we shall perform the Duty of perfect Faith. For, as touching that natural and true Being of Christ in us, except we learn of him, we speak foolishly and ungodly that Thing that we do speak. For he saith, My Flesh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed: He that eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, abideth in me, and I in him. As touching the Verity of his Flesh and Blood, there is left no Place of Doubt: For now, both by the Testimony of the Lord, and also by our Faith, it is verily Flesh and verily Blood. Anno 1554.

Here you have falsified Hilary, for you have set [vero sub mysterio,] for [vere sub mysterio,] we receive truly under a Mystery. Hilary thrice reporteth [vere sub mysterio,] and you interpret it twice [vere sub mysterio,] but the third Time you have [vero] for [vere.]

Thus far was their Talk in English. Seeing Mr. Cranmer had twice Vere, and but once Vero, they had no Cause to be grieved, but that they were disposed to find a Knot in a Rush.

Cran. Assuredly, I am not Guilty of any Deceit herein. It may be that the Copy which I followed had [sub vero mysterio,] that is, under a true Mystery; altho' touching the Sense it differeth little. God I call to Witness, I have always hated falsifying, and if you had Leisure to hear false Citations, I could recite unto you six Hundred.

West. Here shall be shewed you two Copies of Hilary, the one printed at Basil, the other at Paris.

Cran. I suppose that Dr. Smith's Book hath [vero.]

West. Here is Dr. Smith; let him answer for himself.

Mr. Smith, Mr. Doctor, what say you for yourself? Speak, if you know it:

Here Dr. Smith, either for the Truth in his Book alledged, or else astonished with Dr. Weston's hasty calling, staid to Answer: For he only put off his Cap, and kept Silence.

West. But your own Book, printed by Wolf your own Printer, hath [vero.]

Cran. That Book is taken from me, which easily might have ended this Controversy. I am sure, the Book of Decrees, hath [vero.]

Cole. Now you admit the Book of Decrees, when it maketh for you.

Dr. Cole beginneth to carp.

Cran. Touching the Sense of the Matter there is little Difference. The changing of one Letter for another, is but a small Matter.

West. No? Yes; Pastor (as you know) signifieth a Bishop, and Pistor signifieth a Baker. But Pastor shall be Pistor, a Bishop shall be a Baker by this your Change of one Letter, if Vere and Vero do nothing change the Sense.

Cran. Let it be so, that in Pistor and Pastor one Letter maketh some Difference: Yet let Pistor be either a Maker or Baker of Bread, ye see here the Change of a Letter, and yet no great Difference to be in the Sense.

Dr. Young cometh in with his Socratical Interrogations.

Yong. This Disputation is taken in Hand, that the Truth might appear. I perceive that I must go go another way to work than I had thought. It is a common ſaying, Againſt them that deny Principles, we muſt not diſpute. Therefore, that we may agree of the Principles, I demand, Whether there be any other Body of Chriſt, than his inſtrumental Body?

Anno 1554.

Cran. There is no natural Body of Chriſt, but his organical Body.

Yong. Again, I demand, whether Senſe and Reaſon ought to give Place to Faith?

Cran. They ought.

Yong. Thirdly, Whether Chriſt be true in all his Words?

Cran. Yea, he is moſt true, and Truth itſelf.

Yong. Fourthly, Whether Chriſt at his Supper minded to do that which he ſpake, or no?

Cran. In ſaying he ſpake, but in ſaying he made not, but made the Sacrament to his Diſciples.

Yong. Anſwer according to the Truth, Whether did Chriſt that as God and Man which he ſpake, when he ſaid, This is my Body?

Cran. This is a ſophiſtical Cavillation; go plainly to work. There is ſome Deceit in theſe Queſtions. You ſeek Subtilneſs, leave your crafty Fetches.

Yong. I demand, Whether Chriſt by theſe Words wrought any Thing or no?

Cran. He did inſtitute the Sacrament.

Yong. But anſwer, whether did he work any Thing?

Cran. He did work in inſtituting the Sacrament.

This Syllogyſm, ſpeaking of a Figure, hath no perfect Form nor Figure.

Yong. Now I have you; for before you ſaid, it was but a figurative Speech.

But a Figure worketh nothing.

Ergo, It is not a figurative Speech. A Lyar ought to have a good Memory.

Cran. I underſtood your Sophiſtry before. You by working underſtand converting into the Body of Chriſt: But Chriſt wrought the Sacrament, not in converting, but in inſtituting.

Yong. Wo be to them that make Chriſt a Deceiver. Did he work any other Thing than he ſpake, or the ſelf ſame Thing?

Cran. He wrought the Sacrament, and by theſe Words he ſignified the Effect.

Yong. A figurative Speech is no working Thing.

But the Speech of Chriſt is working.

Ergo, It is not figurative.

Cran. It worketh by inſtituting, not by converting.

Yong. The Thing ſignified in the Sacrament, is it not that Sacrament.

Anſwer to Dr. Yong by St. Auſtin.

Cran. It is. For the Thing is miniſtred in a Sign. He followeth the Letter that taketh the Thing for a Sign. Auguſtine ſeparateth the Sacrament from the Thing. The Sacrament, ſaith he, is one, and the Thing of the Sacrament another.

Weſt. Stick to this Argument.

It is a figurative Speech.

Ergo, It worketh nothing.

Yong. But the Speech of Chriſt is a working Thing.

Ergo, It is not figurative.

Cran. Oh how many Crafs are in this Argument? they are meer Fallacies; I ſaid not, That the Words of Chriſt do work, but Chriſt himſelf; and he worketh by a figurative Speech.

Weſt. If a Figure work, it maketh of Bread the Body of Chriſt.

Cran. A figurative Speech worketh not.

Weſt. A figurative Speech, by your own Confeſſion, worketh nothing.

But the Speech of Chriſt in the Supper (as you grant) wrought ſomewhat.

Ergo, The Speech of Chriſt in the Supper was not figurative.

Cran. I anſwer, Theſe are meer Sophiſms: The Speech doth not work, but Chriſt by the Speech doth work the Sacrament.

I look for Scriptures at your Hands, for they are the Foundation of Diſputation.

Yong. Are not theſe Words of Scripture, This is my Body? The Word of Chriſt is of Strength; and by the Lord's Words the Heavens were made. He ſaid, This is my Body: Ergo, he made it.

Cran. He made the Sacrament, and I deny your Argument.

Yong. If he wrought nothing, nothing is left there. He ſaid, This is my Body. You ſay contrary to the Scriptures, it is not the Body of Chriſt, and fall from the Faith.

Cran. You interpret the Scriptures contrary to all the old Writers, and feign a ſtrange Senſe.

Amb. de iis qui initiantur, &c. cap. 9.

Yong. Ambroſe ſaith: Thou haſt read of the Works of all the World; That he ſpake the Word, and they were made; he commanded, and they were created. Cannot the Word of Chriſt, which made of nothing that which was not, change thoſe Things that are, into that they were not? For it is no leſs Matter to give new Things, than to change Natures. But what uſe we Arguments? let us uſe his own Examples, and let us confirm the Verity of the Myſtery by Example of his Incarnation. Did the Uſe of Nature go before, when the Lord Jeſus was born of Mary? *If you ſeek the Order of Nature, Conception is wont to be made by a Woman joined to a Man. It is manifeſt therefore, that contrary to the * Order of Nature, a Virgin did conceive: And this Body that we make, is of the Virgin. What ſeekeſt thou here the Order of Nature in the Body of Chriſt, when againſt the Order of Nature the Lord Jeſus was conceived of a Virgin? It was the true Fleſh of Chriſt which was crucified, and which was buried: Therefore it is truly the Sacrament of him. The Lord Jeſus himſelf crieth; This is my Body. Before the Bleſſing of the heavenly Words, it is named another Kind: But after the Conſecration the Body of Chriſt is ſignified. He calleth it his Blood. Before Conſecration it is called another Thing: After Conſecration it is called Blood, and thou ſayeſt,* Amen; that is, It is true. That the Mouth ſpeakth, let the inward Mind confeſs; that the Word ſoundeth, let the Heart perceive.

* As Chriſt Jeſus was conceived againſt the Order of Nature; ſo in the inſtituting of this Sacrament the Order of Nature is not to be ſought.

The ſame Ambroſe in his fourth Book of Sacraments, the fourth Chapter, ſaith thus: This Bread is Bread before the Words of the Sacraments; when the Conſecration cometh to it, of Bread it is made the Fleſh of Chriſt. Let us confirm this therefore; How can that which is Bread, by Conſecration be the Body of Chriſt? By what Words then is the Conſecration made, and by whoſe Words? By the Words of our Lord Jeſus. For touching all other Things that are ſaid, Praiſe is given to God, Prayer is made for the People, for Kings, and for the reſt: When it cometh that the reverend Sacrament muſt be made, then the Prieſt uſeth not his own Words, but the Words of Chriſt: Therefore the Word of Chriſt maketh this Sacrament. What Word? that Word by which all Things were made: The Lord † commanded, and Heaven was made; the Lord commanded, and the Earth was made; the Lord commanded, and the Seas were made; the Lord commanded, and all Creatures were made. Doſt thou not ſee then how ſtrong in working the Word of Chriſt is? If therefore ſo great Strength be in the Lord's Word, that thoſe Things ſhould begin to be which were not before, fore, how much the rather is it of Strength to work, that these Things which were, should be changed into another Thing? Ambrose saith, that the Words are of Strength to work.

† But the Lord Jeſus here uſed not ſuch Words of Commanding in the Sacrament as in the Creation: For we read not, [fiat hoc corpus meum,] as we read, [fiat lux &c.

Weston. You omit those Words which follow, which maketh the Sense of Ambrose plain: Read them.

Yong. Heaven was not, the Sea was not, the Earth was not, but hear him that said: He spake the Word, and they were made; he commanded, and they were created. Therefore to answer thee, it was not the Body of Christ before Consecration; but after the Consecration, I say to thee, that now it is the Body of Christ.

Cran. All these Things are common. I say, that God doth chiefly work in the Sacraments.

Yong. How doth he work?

Cran. By his Power, as he doth in Baptism.

Yong. Nay, by the Word he changed the Bread into his Body, This is the Truth, acknowledge the Truth, give Place to the Truth.

Cran. O glorious Words! You are too full of Words.

Yong. Nay, O glorious Truth! You make no Change at all.

Cran. Not so, but I make a great Change; as in them that are baptized, is there not a great Change, when the Child or Bondslave of the Devil, is made the Son of God? so it is also in the Sacrament of the Supper, when he receiveth us into his Protection and Favour.

Yong. If he work in the Sacrament, he worketh in this Sacrament.

Cran. God worketh in his faithful, not in the Sacraments.

West. In the Supper the Words are directed to the Bread; in Baptism to the Spirit. He said not, the Water is the Spirit, but of the Bread he said, This is my Body.

As the Dove is called the Spirit, so the Bread is called the Body.

Cran. He calleth the Spirit a Dove, when the Spirit descended in Likeness of a Dove.

West. He doth not call the Spirit a Dove; but he saith, that he descended as a Dove. He was seen in the Likeness of a Dove. As in Baptism the Words are directed to him that is baptized, so in the Supper the Words are directed unto the Bread.

Cran. Nay it is written, Upon whomsoever thou shalt see the Spirit descending. He calleth that which descended the Holy Spirit. And Augustine calleth the Dove the Spirit. Hear what Augustine saith in 1 John, What meant he by the Dove, that is, by the Holy Ghost? forsooth to teach him, who sent him.

Yong. He understandeth of the Spirit descending as a Dove: The Spirit is invisible. If you mind to have the Truth heard, let us proceed.

De Sacram. cap. 4.

Hear what Ambrose saith: You see what a working Power the Word of Christ hath. Therefore if there be so great Power in the Lord's Word, that those Things which were not, begin to be, how much more of Strength is it, to work, that those Things that were, should be changed into another Thing?

And in the fifth Chapter he saith: Before it is consecrated, it is bread: But when the Words of Christ come to it, it is the Body of Christ.

But hear what he saith more: Take ye, eat ye, this is my Body. Before the Words of Christ the Cup is full of Wine and Water; when the Words of Christ have wrought, there is made the Blood of Christ which redeemed the People. What can be more plain?

Cran. Nay, what can be less to the Purpose? The Words are of Strength to work in this Sacrament, as they are in Baptism.

Pie. The Words of Christ, as Ambrose saith, are of Strength to work. What do they work? Ambrose saith, they make the Blood which redeemed the People. Anno 1554.

Ergo, The natural Blood is made.

Cran. The Sacrament of his Blood is made. The Words make the Blood to them that receive it: Not that the Blood is in the Cup, but in the Receiver.

Pie. There is made the Blood which redeemed the People.

Cran. The Blood is made, that is, the Sacrament of the Blood, by which he redeemed the People. [Fit] It is made, that is to say, [Ostenditur] It is shewed forth there. And Ambrose saith, we receive in a Similitude, As thou hast received the Similitude of his Death, so also thou drinkest the Similitude of his precious Blood.

West. He saith, in a Similitude, because it is ministred under another Likeness. And this is the Argument:

Mark how Dr. Weston expoundeth to eat in a Similitude.

* There is made the Blood which redeemed the People.

But the natural Blood redeemed the People.

Ergo, There is the natural Blood of Christ.

* If this Syllogysm be in the second Figure (as by standing of the Terms appeareth) then is it false, because it concludeth affirmatively.

You answer, that Words make it Blood to them that receive it; not that Blood is in the Cup, but because it is made Blood to them that receive it. That all Men may see how falsly you would avoid the Fathers, hear what Ambrose saith in the sixth Book and first Chapter.

Peradventure thou wilt say, how be they true? I which see the Similitude, do not see the Truth of the Blood. First of all I told thee of the Word of Christ, which so worketh, that it can change and turn Kinds ordained by Nature. Afterwards when the Disciples could not abide the Words of Christ, but hearing that he gave his Flesh to eat, and his Blood to drink, they departed. Only Peter said, Thou hast the Words of eternal Life, whither should I go from thee? Lest therefore more should say this Thing, as though there should be a certain Horror of Blood, and yet the Grace of Redemption should remain: Therefore in a Similitude thou receivest the Sacrament, but indeed thou obtainest the Grace and Power of his Nature.

Amb. lib. 6. cap. 1. de Sacrament.

Cran. These Words of themselves are plain enough. And he read this Place again, Thou receivest the Sacrament for a Similitude. But what is that he saith, Thou receivest for a Similitude? I think he understandeth the Sacrament to be the Similitude of his Blood.

Answer to Ambrose.

Ched. That you may understand that Truth dissenteth not from Truth, to overthrow that which you say of that Similitude; hear what Ambrose saith:

Ambros. de Sacrament. lib. 4.

If the heavenly Word did work in other Things, doth it not work in the heavenly Sacraments? Therefore thou hast learned, that of Bread is made the Body of Christ, and that Wine and Water is put into that Cup, but by Consecration of the heavenly Word it is made Blood. But thou wilt say peradventure, that the Likeness of Blood is not seen. But it hath a Similitude. For as thou hast received the Similitude of his Death, so also thou drinkest the Similitude of his precious Blood, so that there is no Horror of Blood, and yet it worketh the Price of Redemption. Therefore thou hast learned, that that which thou receivest is the Body of Christ.

Note, that Ambrose saith, We drink a Similitude of Christ's Blood.

Cran. He speaketh of Sacraments sacramentally. He calleth the Sacraments by the Names of the Thing: for he useth the Signs for the Things signified: and therefore the Bread is not called Bread, but his Body, for the Excellency and Dignity of the Thing signified by it. So doth

Answer to the Place of Ambrose.

Anno 1554. doth Ambrose, interpret himself, when he saith, For a Type or Figure whereof we receive the mystical Cup of his Blood, for the Safeguard of our Bodies and Souls.

Ambros in 1 Cor. cap. 11.

Ched. A Type! He calleth not the Blood of Christ a Type or Sign: but the Blood of Bulls and Goats in that Respect was a Type or Sign.

Cran. This is new Learning; you shall never read this among the Fathers.

Ched. But Ambrose saith so.

Cran. He calleth the Bread and the Cup a Type or Sign of the Blood of Christ, and of his Benefit.

West. Ambrose understandeth it for a Type of his Benefit, that is, of Redemption, not of the Blood of Christ, but of his Passion. The Cup is the Type or Sign of his Death, seeing it is his Blood.

Cran. He saith most plainly, that the Cup is a Type of Christ's Blood.

Ched. As Christ is really and truly incarnate, so is he truly and really in the Sacrament.

But Christ is really and truly incarnate.

Ergo, The Body of Christ is truly and really in the Sacrament.

Cran. I deny the Major.

Justin. Apol.

Ched. I prove the Major out of Justine in his second Apology, Ὁν τρόπον Διὰ λόγου Θεοῦ σαρκοποιηθεὶς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ὁ σωτὴρ ἡμῶν, καὶ σάρκα καὶ αἷμα ὑπὲρ ζωηρίας ἡμῶν ἔσχεν, οὕτω καὶ τὴν διὰ εὐχῆς λόγου τοῦ παρ' αὐτοῦ εὐχαριστηθεῖσαν τροφὴν, ἐξ ἧς αἷμα καὶ σάρκες κατὰ μεταβολὴν τρέφονται ἡμῶν, ἐκείνου τοῦ σαρκοποιηθέντος Ἰησοῦ καὶ σάρκα καὶ αἷμα ἐδιδάχθημεν εἶναι.

Cran. This Place hath been falsified by Marcus Constantius. Justine meant nothing else but that the Bread, which nourishes us is called the Body of Christ.

Answer to the Place of Justine.

Ched. To the Argument. As Christ is truly and naturally incarnate, &c. as above.

Cran. I deny your Major.

Ched. The Words of Justine are thus to be interpreted Word for Word.

As by the Word of God, Jesus Christ our Saviour, being made Flesh, had both Flesh and Blood for our Salvation, so we are taught, that the Meat * consecrated by the Word of Prayer, instituted of him, whereby our Blood and Flesh are nourished by † Communion, is the Flesh and Blood of the same Jesus which was made Flesh.

* Of Thanksgiving. † Mutation.

Cran. You have translated it well; but I deny your Major. This is the Sense of Justine; that the Bread is called the Body of Christ, and yet of that sanctified Meat our Bodies are nourished.

Ched. Nay, he saith, of that sanctified Meat both our Bodies and Souls are nourished.

Cran. He saith not so, but he saith that it nourisheth our Flesh and Blood: And how can that nourish the Soul, that nourisheth the Flesh and Blood?

Cole. It feedeth the Body by the Soul.

Cran. Speak uprightly. Can that which is received by the Soul and Spirit be called the Meat of the Body.

West. Hear then what Irenæus saith, That the same Cup which is a Creature, he confirmed to be his Body, by which he increaseth our Bodies. When both the Cup mixed and the Bread broken, hath joined to it the Word of God, it is made the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, of which the Substance of our Flesh is increased and consisteth.

The Substance of our Flesh is increased by the Body and Blood of Christ.

Ergo, Our Body is nourished by the Body and Blood of Christ.

Cran. I deny your Argument. He calleth it the Flesh and Blood for the Sacrament of the Body and Blood, as Tertullian also saith, Our Flesh is nourished with symbolical or sacramental Bread, but our Soul is nourished with the Body of Christ.

West. Look what he saith more. How do they say, that the Flesh cannot receive the Gift of God, that is eternal Life, which is nourished with the Body and Blood of Christ?

Cran. The Body is nourished both with the Sacrament, and with the Body of Christ: With the Sacrament to a temporal Life; with the Body of Christ to eternal Life.

Ched. I cannot but be sorry when I see such a manifest Lye in your Writings. For where you translate Justine on this Fashion; that the Bread, Water and Wine, are not so to be taken in this Sacrament, as common Meats and Drinks are wont to be taken of us, but are Meats chosen out peculiarly for this, namely, for the giving of Thanks, and therefore be called of the Greeks Eucharistia, that is, Thanksgiving; they are called moreover the Blood and Body of Christ (so have you translated it:) the Words of Justine are thus; We are taught that the Meat consecrated by the Word of Prayer, by the which our Flesh and Blood is nourished by Communion, is the Body and Blood of the same Jesus which was made Flesh.

Note, That the Archbishop here did not translate the Words of Justine, but only gather the Effect of his Meaning.

Cran. I did not translate it Word for Word, but only I gave the Meaning: And I go nothing from his Meaning.

Cranmer purgeth himself.

Harps. You remember touching Justine, to whom this Apology was written, namely to a heathen Man. The Heathen thought that the Christians came to the Church to worship Bread; Justine answereth, that we come not to common Bread, but as to, &c. as is said afore. Weigh the Place well, it is right worthy to be noted; our Flesh is nourished according to Mutation.

In eating the Sacrament no Bread is considered, but only the true Body of Christ. Consecrat. dist. 2. Quia.

Cran. We ought not to consider the bare Bread, but whosoever cometh to the Sacrament eateth the true Body of Christ.

West. You have corrupted Emissenus; for instead of Cibis satiendus, that is, To be filled with Meat, you have set Cibis satiendus spiritualibus, that is, To be filled with spiritual Meats.

Cran. I have not corrupted it; for it is so in the Decrees.

West. You have corrupted another Place of Emissenus; for you have omitted these Words: Marvel thou when thou comest up to the reverend Altar to be filled with spiritual Meats: Look in Faith to the holy Body and Blood of thy God, marvel at his Honour, worthily touch him.

Cran. This Book hath not that.

Cranmer charged with false translating.

West. Also you have falsified this Place by evil translating [Honora Corpus Dei tui] Honour the Body of thy God: you have translated it, [Honora eum qui est Deus tuus] Honour him which is thy God: Whereas Emissenus hath not, Honour him; but, Honour the Body of thy God.

Cranmer purgeth himself.

Cran. I have so translated him, and yet no less truly, than not without a weighty Cause; else it should not have been without Danger, if I had translated it thus; Honour the Body of thy God; because of certain, that according to the Error of the Anthropomorphites, dreamed that God had a Body.

West. Nay you most of all have brought the People into that Error, which so long have taught that he sitteth at the right Hand of God the Father; and counted me for an Heretick, because I preached that God had no right Hand. Then

I will oppose you in the very Articles of your Faith.

Christ sitteth at the right Hand of God the Father.

But God the Father hath no right Hand.

Ergo, Where is Christ now?

Cran. I am not so ignorant a Novice in the Articles of my Faith, but that I understand, that to sit at the right Hand of God, doth signify to be equal in the Glory of the Father.

The right Hand of God, what it signifieth.

West. Now then take this Argument.

Wheresoever God's Authority is, there is Christ's Body.

But God's Authority is in every Place.

Ergo, What letteth the Body of Christ to be in every Place?

Cranmer charged with mistransliting Duns.

Moreover you have also corrupted Duns.

Cran. That is a great Offence, I promise you.

West. For you have omitted Secundum apparentiam, that is, As it appeareth. Where his Words are these, Et si quæras quare voluit ecclesia eligere istum intellectum ita difficilem hujus articuli, cum verba Scripturæ possint salvari secundum intellectum facilem & veriorem, secundum apparentiam, de hoc articulo, &c. That is, If you demand why the Church did chuse this so hard an Undertaking of this Article, whereas the Words of Scripture may be salved after an easie and true Understanding [as appeareth] of this Article, &c.

Cran. It is not so.

West. Also you have set forth a Catechism in the Name of the Synod of London, and yet there be fifty, which witnessing that they were of the Number of the Convocation, never heard one Word of this Catechism.

Cran. I was ignorant of the setting to of that Title; and as soon as I had Knowledge thereof, I did not like it: Therefore when I complained thereof to the Council, it was answered me by them, that the Book was so entituled, because it was set forth in the Time of the Concation.

West. Moreover, you have in Duns translated In Romana ecclesia, pro ecclesia catholica. In the Church of Rome, for, The catholick Church.

Cran. Yea, but he meant the Romish Church.

Dr. Cranmer charged with mis-translating Tho. Aquinas.

West. Moreover you have depraved St. Thomas, namely, where he hath these Words: In quantum vero est sacrificium, habet vim satisfactivam: Sed in satisfactione attenditur magis affectio offerentis, quam quantitas oblationis. Unde Dominus dicit apud Lucam dividua quæ obtulit duo æra, quod plus omnibus misit. Quamvis verbo hæc oblatio ex sui quantitate sufficiet ad satisfaciendum pro omnipæna: tamen fit satisfactoria illis pro quibus offertur, vel etiam offerentibus, secundum quantitatem suæ devotionis, & non pro tota pæna. That is, Inasmuch as it is a Sacrifice, it hath the Power of Satisfaction: But in Satisfaction the Affection of the Offerer is more to be weighed than the Quantity of the Oblation. Wherefore the Lord said in Luke's Gospel, of the Widow which offered two Mites, that she cast in more than they all. Therefore although this Oblation of the Quantity of itself will suffice to satisfy for all Pain, yet it is made satisfactory to them, for whom it is offered, or to the Offerers, according to the Quantity of their Devotion, and not for all the Pain.

You have thus turned it, Quod sacrificium sacerdotis habet vim satisfactivam, &c. That is, That the Sacrifice of the Priest hath Power of Satisfaction, &c. And therefore in this Place you have chopped in this Word [Sacerdotis] of the Priest, whereas in the Translation of all the New Testament you have not set it, but where Christ was put to death. And again, where St. Thomas hath [pro omni pœna] for all your Pain, your Book omitteth many Things there. Anno 1554.

Thus you see, Brethren, the Truth stedfast and inviolable; you see also the Craft and Deceit of Hereticks; the Truth may be pressed, but it cannot be oppressed; therefore cry altogether, Vincit Veritas. The Truth overcometh. Weston triumpheth before the Victory.

This disorder'd Disputation sometime in Latin, sometime in English, continued almost till two of the Clock. Which being finished, and the Arguments written and delivered to the Hands of Mr. Say, the Prisoner was had away by the Mayor, and the Doctors dined together at the University College.

A Disputation at Oxford between Dr. Smith, and others, with Bishop Ridley.

THE next Day, which was the 12th of April, Bishop Ridley was brought forth in the Divinity School. Against whom disputed Dr. Smith, Dr. Weston, Dr. Tresham, Dr. Oglethorpe, Dr. Glin, Dr. Seton, and Dr. Cole, Mr. Ward, Mr. Harpsfield, Dr. Watson, Mr. Pie, Mr. Harding, Mr. Curton, and Mr. Fecknam. Dr. Smith appointed to dispute against Bishop Ridley. Disputers against Dr. Ridley.

The Disputation began as follows:

Dr. Weston, Prolocutor. Good Christian People and Brethren, we have begun this Day our School, by God's good Speed I trust, and are entring into a Controversy, whereof no Question ought to be moved concerning the Verity of the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ in the Eucharist. Christ is true, which said the Words. The Words are true which he spake, yea, Truth itself that cannot fail. Let us therefore pray unto God to send down unto us his Holy Spirit, which is the true Interpreter of his Word; which may purge away Errors, and give Light, that Verity may appear. Let us also ask Leave and Liberty of the Church to permit the Truth received to be called this Day in Question, without any Prejudice to the same. Your Parts thereof shall be to implore the Assistance of Almighty God, to pray for the Prosperity of the Queen's Majesty, and to give us quiet and attentive Ears. Now go to your Question.

Dr. Smith. This Day (right learned Mr. Doctor) three Questions are propounded, whereof no Controversy among Christians ought to be moved, to wit:

The Question.

1. Whether the natural Body of Christ our Saviour, conceived of the Virgin Mary, and offered for Man's Redemption upon the Cross, is verily and really in the Sacrament by Virtue of God's Word spoken by the Priests, &c.
2. Whether in the Sacrament, after the Words of Consecration, be any other Substance, &c.
3. Whether in the Mass be a Sacrifice propitiatory, &c.

Concerning which Questions, although you have publickly professed your Judgment and Opinion on Saturday last; yet being not satisfied with that your Answer, I will assay again to demand your Sentence in the first Question; Whether the true Body of Christ, after the Words pronounced, be really in the Eucharist, or else only the Figure. In which Matter I stand here now to hear your Answer.

Dr.

Anno 1554.

Dr. Ridley's Preface or Proteſtation, before his Diſputation.

I Received of you the other Day, right worſhipful Mr. Prolocutor, and ye my reverend Maſters, Commiſſioners from the Queen's Majeſty and her honourable Council, three Propoſitions; whereunto ye commanded me to prepare againſt this Day, what I thought good to anſwer concerning the ſame.

Now whilſt I weighed with myſelf how great a Charge of the Lord's Stock was of late committed unto me, for which I am certain I muſt once render an Account to my Lord God, (and that how ſoon he knoweth) and that moreover, by the Commandment of the Apoſtle Peter, I ought to be ready alway to give a Reaſon of the Hope that is in me with Meekneſs and Reverence, unto every one that ſhall demand the ſame: Beſides this, conſidering my Duty to the Church of Chriſt, and to your Worſhips, being Commiſſioners by publick Authority: I determined with myſelf to obey your Commandment, and ſo openly to declare unto you my Mind touching the aforeſaid Propoſitions. And albeit, plainly to confeſs unto you the Truth in theſe Things which ye now demand of me, I have thought otherwiſe in Times paſt than now I do, yet (God I call to Record unto my Soul, I lye not) I have not altered my Judgment, as now it is, either by Conſtraint of any Man, or Laws, either for the Dread of any Dangers of this World, either for any Hope of Commodity, but only for the Love of the Truth revealed unto me by the Grace of God (as I am undoubtedly perſuaded) in his holy Word, and in the Reading of the ancient Fathers.

What moved Dr. Ridley to alter his Judgment from the Church of Rome.

Theſe Things I do rather recite at this preſent, becauſe it may happen to ſome of you hereafter, as in Times paſt it hath done to me: I mean, if ye think otherwiſe of the Matters propounded in theſe Propoſitions than I now do, God may open them unto you in Time to come.

But howſoever it ſhall be, I will in few Words do that which I think ye all look I ſhould do; that is, as plainly as I can, I will declare my Judgment herein. Howbeit of this I would ye were not ignorant, that I will not indeed wittingly and willingly ſpeak in any Point againſt God's Word, or diſſent in any one Jot from the ſame, or from the Rules of Faith, or chriſtian Religion: which Rules that ſame moſt ſacred Word of God preſcribeth to the Church of Chriſt, whereunto I now and for ever ſubmit myſelf and all my doings. And becauſe the Matter I have now taken in Hand is weighty, and ye all well know how unready I am to handle it accordingly, as well for lack of Time, as alſo lack of Books: therefore here I proteſt, that I will publickly this Day require of you, that it may be lawful for me concerning all mine Anwers, Explications, and Confirmations, to add or diminiſh whatſoever ſhall ſeem hereafter more convenient and meet for the Purpoſe, thro' more ſound Judgment, better Deliberation, and more exact trial of every particular Thing. Having now, by the Way of Preface and Proteſtation, ſpoken theſe few Words, I will come to the Anſwer of the Propoſitions propounded unto me, and ſo to the moſt brief Explication and Confirmation of mine Anſwers.

Biſhop Ridley ſubmitteth himſelf to the Church of Chriſt.

Weſton. Reverend Mr. Doctor, concerning the lack of Books, there is no Cauſe why you ſhould complain. What Books ſoever you will name, you ſhall have them: And as concerning the Judgment of your Anſwers to be had of yourſelf with farther Deliberation; it ſhall (I ſay) be lawful for you until Saturday next to add unto them what you ſhall think good yourſelf. My Mind is, that we ſhould uſe ſhort Arguments, leſt we ſhould make an infinite Proceſs of the Thing.

This Promiſe was not kept.

Rid. There is another Thing beſides, which I would gladly obtain at your Hands. I perceive that you have Writers and Notaries here preſent. By all likelihood our Diſputations ſhall be publiſhed, I beſeech you for God's Sake let me have Liberty to ſpeak my Mind freely, and without Interruption, not becauſe I have determined to protract the Time with a ſolemn Preface, but leſt it may appear that ſome be not ſatisfied. God knows I am no Orator, nor have I learned Rhetorick to ſet Colours on the Matter.

Weſt. Among this whole Company, it ſhall be permitted you to take two for your Part.

Two Notaries permitted to Dr. Ridley. Theſe two Notaries were Maſter Juel, ſometime Biſhop of Saliſbury, and Maſter Gilbert Mounſon.

Rid. I will chuſe two, if there were any here with whom I were acquainted.

Weſt. Here are two which Mr. Cranmer had Yeſterday. Take them if it pleaſe you.

Rid. I am content with them; I truſt they are honeſt Men.

The firſt Propoſition.

In the Sacrament of the Altar, by the Vertue of God's Word ſpoken of the Prieſt, the natural Body of Chriſt born of the Virgin Mary, and his natural Blood is really preſent under the Forms of Bread and Wine.

The Anſwer of N. Ridley.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer to the firſt Propoſition.

In Matters appertaining to God we may not ſpeak according to the Senſe of Man, nor of the World: Therefore this Propoſition or Concluſion is framed after another Manner of Phraſe or Kind of Speech than the Scripture uſeth. Again it is very obſcure and dark, by Means of ſundry Words of doubtful Signification. And being taken in the Senſe which Schoolmen teach, and at this Time the Church of Rome doth defend, it is falſe and erroneous, and plain contrary to the Doctrine which is according to Godlineſs.

The Explication.

How far the Diverſity and Newneſs of the Phraſe in all this firſt Propoſition is from the Phraſe of the holy Scripture, and that in every Part almoſt, it is ſo plain and evident to any that is but meanly exerciſed in holy Writ, that I need not now (eſpecially in this Company of learned Men) to ſpend any Time therein, except the ſame ſhall be required of me hereafter.

The firſt Doubt.

Firſt, there is a double Senſe in theſe Words [by Virtue of God's Word] for it is doubtful what Word of God this is; whether it be that which is read in the Evangeliſts, or in Paul, or any other. And if it be that which is in the Evangeliſts, or in St. Paul, what that is. If it be in none of them, then how it may be known to be God's Word, and of ſuch Virtue that it ſhould be able to work ſo great a Matter.

2. Doubt in the Word Prieſt.

Again there is a Doubt of theſe Words [of the Prieſt] whether no Man may be called a Prieſt, but he which hath Authority to make a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead; and how it may be proved that this Authority was committed of God to any Man, but to Chriſt alone.

3. Doubt in the Word ſacrificing.

It is likewiſe doubted, after what Order the ſacrificing Prieſt ſhall be, whether after the Order of Aaron, or elſe after the Order of Melchiſedeck. For as far as I know, the holy Scripture doth allow no more.

Weſt. Let this be ſufficient.

Rid. If we lack Time at this preſent, there is Time enough hereafter.

Dr. Weſton interrupteth him in his Explication.

Weſt. Theſe are but Evaſions or ſtarting Holes; you conſume the Time in vain.

Rid. I cannot ſtart far from you, I am captive and bound.

Weſt. Fall to it my Maſters.

Smith. That which you have ſpoken may ſuffice at this preſent.

Rid. Let me alone I pray you, for I have not much to ſay behind.

Weſt. Go forward.

4. Doubt the Word really,

Rid. Moreover, there is Ambiguity in this Word [really,] whether it be taken as the Logicians term it, [tranſcendenter;] i. e. Moſt generally: And ſo it may ſignify any Manner of Thing which belongeth to the Body of Chriſt, by any Means: After which Sort we alſo grant Chriſt's Body to be really in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, (as in Diſputation, if Occaſion be given ſhall be declared) or whether it be taken to ſignify the very ſame Thing, having Body, Life, and Soul, which was aſſumed and taken of the Word of God, into the Unity of Perſon. In which Senſe, ſince the Body of Chriſt is really in Heaven, becauſe of the true Manner of his Body, it may not be ſaid to be here in the Earth. There is yet a further

5. Doubt in the Words (Forms of Bread and Wine.)

Doubtfulneſs in theſe Words, [under the Forms of Bread and Wine] whether the Forms be there taken to ſignify the only accidental and outward Shews of Bread and Wine; or therewithal the ſubſtantial Natures thereof, which are to be ſeen by their Qualities, and perceived by exterior Senſes:

Now the Error and Falſeneſs of the Propoſition after the Senſe of the Roman Church and Schoolmen, may hereby appear, in that they affirm the Bread to be tranſubſtantiated and changed to the Fleſh aſſumed of the Word of Tranſubſtantiation not founded in Scripture.

God, and that (as they ſay) by Virtue of the Word, which they have deviſed by a certain Number of Words, and cannot be found in any of the Evangeliſts, or in Paul, and ſo they gather that Chriſt's Body is really contained in the Sacrament of the Altar. Which Poſition is grounded upon the Foundation of the Tranſubſtantiation; which Foundation is monſtrous,

The Analogy of the Sacrament is the Similitude and Likeneſs which they have with the Things they repreſent.

againſt Reaſon, and deſtroyeth the Analogy or Proportion of the Sacraments: And therefore this Propoſition alſo, which is builded upon this rotten Foundation, is falſe, erroneous, and to be counted as a deteſtable Hereſy of the Sacramentaries.

Weſt. We loſe Time.

Rid. You ſhall have Time enough.

Weſt. Fall to reaſoning. You ſhall have ſome other Day for this Matter.

Rid. I have no more to ſay concerning my Explication. If you will give me leave and let me alone, I will but ſpeak a Word or two for my Confirmation.

Weſt. Go to; ſay on.

The Confirmation of the aforeſaid Anſwer.

There ought no Doctrine to be eſtabliſhed in the Church of God, which diſſenteth from the Word of God, from the Rule of Faith, and draweth with it many Abſurdities that cannot be avoided. Anno 1554.

But this Doctrine of the firſt Propoſition, is ſuch.

Ergo, It ought not to be eſtabliſhed and maintained in the Church of God.

The Major or firſt Part of my Argument is plain, and the Minor or ſecond Part is proved thus.

The Doctrine maintaineth a real, corporal, and carnal Preſence of Chriſt's Fleſh, aſſumed and taken of the Word, to be in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and that not by Virtue and Grace only, but alſo by the whole Eſſence and Subſtance of the Body and Fleſh of Chriſt.

But ſuch a Preſence diſagreeth from God's Word, from the Rule of Faith, and cannot but draw with it many Abſurdities. The real Preſence of Chriſt's Body diſagreeth from the Scriptures.

Ergo, The ſecond Part is true.

The firſt Part of this Argument is manifeſt, and the ſecond may yet farther be confirmed thus.

Weſt. Thus you conſume Time, which might be better beſtowed on other Matters. Maſter Opponent, I pray you to your Arguments. Dr. Weſton again interrupteth Dr. Ridley.

Smith. I will here reaſon with you upon Tranſubſtantiation, which you ſay is contrary to the Rule and Analogy of Faith. The contrary whereof I prove by the Scriptures and the Doctors. But before I enter Argumentation with you, I demand firſt, whether in the ſixth Chapter of John, there be any Mention made of the Sacrament, or of the real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament.

Rid. It is againſt Reaſon that I ſhould be impeached to proſecute that which I have to ſpeak in this Aſſembly, being not ſo long, but that it may be comprehended in few Words.

Weſt. Let him read on.

Rid. Firſt of all, this Preſence is contrary to many Places of the holy Scripture. Inconveniences come of the Real Preſence.

Secondly, It varieth from the Articles of the Faith.

Thirdly, It deſtroyeth and taketh away the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper.

Fourthly, It maketh precious Things common to profane and ungodly Perſons; for it caſteth that which is holy unto Dogs, and Pearls unto Swine.

Fifthly, It forceth Men to maintain many monſtrous Miracles without Neceſſity and Authority of God's Word.

Sixthly, It giveth Occaſion to the Hereticks which erred concerning the two Natures in Chriſt, to defend their Hereſies thereby.

Seventhly, It falſifieth the Sayings of the godly Fathers; it falſifieth alſo the catholick Faith of the Church, which the Apoſtles taught, the Martyrs confirmed, and the faithful (as one of the Fathers ſaith) do retain and keep until this Day. Wherefore the ſecond Part of mine Argument is true.

The Probation of the Antecedent or former Part of this Argument by the Parts therof.

The firſt Inconvenience.

This carnal Preſence is contrary to the Word of God, as appeareth, John 16. I tell you the Truth. It is profitable to you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter ſhall not come unto you. Acts 3. Whom the Heavens muſt receive until the Time of reſtoring of all Things which God hath ſpoken. Mat. 9. The Children of the Bridegroom cannot mourn ſo long as the Bridegroom

Anno 1554. is with them: but now is the Time of Mourning. John 26. But I will ſee you again, and your Hearts ſhall rejoice. John 14. I will come again and take you to myſelf. Mat. 24. If they ſhall ſay unto you, behold here is Chriſt, or there is Chriſt, believe them not: For whereſoever the dead Carcaſe is, thither the Eagles will reſort.

2 The real Preſence againſt the Articles of the Faith.

It varieth from the Articles of the Faith; he aſcendeth into Heaven, and ſitteth at the right Hand of God the Father, from whence (and not from any other Place, ſaith St. Auguſtine,) he ſhall come to judge both the Quick and the Dead.

3. It deſtroyeth the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper.

It deſtroyeth and taketh away the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper, which was commanded only to be uſed and continued until the Lord himſelf ſhould come. If therefore he be really preſent in the Body of his Fleſh, then muſt the Supper ceaſe: For a Remembrance is not of a Thing preſent, but of a Thing paſt and abſent. And there is a Difference between Remembrance and Preſence, and (as one of the Fathers ſaith) a Figure is in vain where the Thing figured is preſent.

4. It prophaneth Things Holy and precious, and ingendreth abſurdities.

It maketh precious Things common to profane and ungodly Perſons, and conſtraineth Men to confeſs many Abſurdities. For it affirmeth, that Whoremongers and Murderers, yea, and (as ſome of them hold Opinion) the wicked and faithleſs Mice, Rats, and Dogs, alſo may receive the very real and corporal Body of the Lord, wherein the Fulneſs of the Spirit of Light and Grace dwelleth; contrary to the manifeſt Words of Chriſt in ſix Places and Sentences of the ſixth Chapter of St. John.

Anthropophagi, are a Kind of bruiſh People that feed on Man's Fleſh.

It confirmeth and maintaineth alſo that beaſtly Kind of Cruelty of the Anthropophagi, that is, the Devourers of Man's Fleſh: For it is a more cruel Thing to devour a quick Man, than to ſlay him.

Pie. He requireth Time to ſpeak Blaſphemies. Leave your Blaſphemies.

Ridley. I had little Thought to have had ſuch reproachful Words at your Hands.

Weſt. All is quiet. Go to your Arguments Mr. Doctor.

Ridley. I have not many Things more to ſay.

Weſt. You utter Blaſphemies with a moſt impudent Face: Leave off, I ſay, and get you to the Argument.

5. It maintaineth monſtrous Miracles without Neceſſity.

Ridley. It forceth Men to maintain many monſtrous Miracles, without any Neceſſity and Authority of God's Word. For at the coming of this Preſence of the Body and Fleſh of Chriſt, they thruſt away the Subſtance of Bread; and affirm that the Accidents remain without any Subject, and in Stead thereof they place Chriſt's Body without his Qualities and the true Manner of a Body. And if the Sacrament be reſerved ſo long until it mould, and Worms breed, ſome ſay that the Subſtance of Bread miraculouſly returneth again, and ſome deny it. Others affirm, the real Body of Chriſt goeth down into the Stomach of the Receivers, and doth there abide ſo long only as they ſhall continue to be good: but another Sort hold, that the Body of Chriſt is carried into Heaven, ſo ſoon as the Forms of Bread be bruiſed with the Teeth. O Works of Miracles!

All the reſt that followeth was not read, becauſe the Prolocutor made poſt Haſte to the Arguments.

Truly, and moſt truly, I ſee that fulfilled in theſe Men, whereof St. Paul propheſied, 2 Theſſ. 2. Becauſe they have not received the Love of the Truth, that they might be ſaved, God ſhall ſend them ſtrong Deluſions that they ſhould believe Lies, and be all damned which have not believed the Truth. This groſs Preſence hath brought forth that fond Phantaſy of Committance, whereby is broken at this Day and abrogated the Commandment of the Lord for diſtributing of the Lord's Cup to the Laity.

6. It giveth Occaſion to Hereticks.

It giveth Occaſion to Hereticks to maintain and defend their Errors; as to Martian, which ſaid that Chriſt had but a phantaſtical Body; and to Euteches, which wickedly confounded the two Natures in Chriſt.

7. It falſifieth the Sayings of the old Doctors.

Finally, It falſifieth the Sayings of the godly Fathers, and the catholick Faith of the Church, which Vigilius a Martyr and grave Writer ſaith, was taught of the Apoſtles, confirmed with the Blood of Martyrs, and was continually maintained by the Faithful, unto his Time. By the Sayings of the Fathers, I mean of Juſtine, Irene, Tertullian, Origen, Euſebius, Emiſene, Athanaſius, Cyril, Epiphanius, Jerome, Chryſoſtom, Auguſtine, Vigilius, Fulgentius, Bertram, and other moſt ancient Fathers. All thoſe Places, as I am ſure, I have read making for my Purpoſe, ſo am I well aſſured that I could ſhew the ſame, if I might have the Liberty of mine own Books, which I will take to me to do, even upon the Peril of my Life, and Loſs of all that I may loſe in this World.

The true Preſence of Chriſt's Body in the Supper not denied.

But now (my Brethren) think not becauſe I diſallow that Preſence which the firſt Propoſition maintaineth (as a Preſence which I take to be forged, fantaſtical, and beſides the Authority of God's Word, perniciouſly brought into the Church by the Romaniſts) that I therefore go about to take away the true Preſence of Chriſt's Body in his Supper, rightly and duly miniſtred, which is grounded upon the Word of God, and made more plain by the Commentaries of the faithful Fathers. They that think ſo of me, the Lord knoweth how far they are deceived. And to make the ſame evident unto you, I will in few Words declare what true Preſence of Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper I hold and affirm, with the Word of God and the antient Fathers.

The Faith and Confeſſion of Ridley in affirming the true Preſence in the Sacrament.

I ſay and confeſs with the Evangeliſt Luke, and with the Apoſtle Paul, that the Bread on the which Thanks are given, is the Body of Chriſt in the Remembrance of him and his Death, to be ſet forth perpetually of the Faithful until his coming.

I ſay and confeſs the Bread which we break to be the Communion and Partaking of Chriſt's Body, with the ancient and the faithful Fathers.

I ſay and believe that there is not only a Signification of Chriſt's Body ſet forth by the Sacrament, but alſo that therewith is given to the Godly and Faithful the Grace of Chriſt's Body, that is, the Food of Life and Immortality. And this I hold with Cyprian.

I ſay alſo with St. Auguſtine, that we eat Life and we drink Life; with Emiſene, that we feel the Lord to be preſent in Grace; with Athanaſius, that we receive celeſtial Food, which cometh from above; the Prophecy of natural Communion, with Hillary; the Nature of Fleſh and Benediction which giveth Life in Bread and Wine, with Cyril; and with the ſame Cyril, the Virtue of the very Fleſh of Chriſt, Life and Grace of his Body, the Propriety of the only Begotten, that is to ſay, Life, as he himſelf in plain Words expoundeth it.

I confeſs alſo with Baſil, that we receive the myſtical Advent and coming of Chriſt, Grace and Virtue of his very Nature; the Sacrament of his very Fleſh, with Ambroſe; the Body by

Grace

Grace, with Epiphanius; ſpiritual Fleſh, but not that which was crucified, with Jerom; Grace flowing into a Sacrifice, and the Grace of the Spirit, with Chryſoſtom; Grace and inviſible Verity, Grace and Society of the Members of Chriſt's Body, with Auguſtine.

The Power of God's Word feeding the Soul, Bertram.

Finally, with Bertram (which was the laſt of all theſe) I confeſs that Chriſt's Body is in the Sacrament in this Reſpect; namely (as he writeth) becauſe there is in it the Spirit of God, which not only feedeth the Soul, but alſo cleanſeth it. But of theſe I ſuppoſe it may clearly appear unto all Men, how far we are from that Opinion, whereof ſome go about falſely to ſlander us to the World, ſaying, we teach that the Godly and Faithful ſhould receive nothing elſe at the Lord's Table, but a Figure of the Body of Chriſt.

The Proteſtants falſly belyed to teach nothing but a Figure in the Sacrament.

The ſecond Propoſition.

After the Conſecration there remaineth no Subſtance of Bread and Wine, neither any other Subſtance, than the Subſtance of God and Man.

The Anſwer.

The ſecond Concluſion is manifeſtly falſe, directly againſt the Word of God, the Nature of the Sacrament, and the moſt evident Teſtimonies of the Godly Fathers; and it is the rotten Foundation of the other two Concluſions propounded by you, both of the Firſt, and alſo of the Third. I will not therefore now tarry upon any further Explication of this Anſwer, being contented with that which is already added afore to the Anſwer of the firſt Propoſition.

The ſecond Propoſition of Tranſubſtantiation denied.

The firſt Argument for the Confirmation of this Anſwer.

It is very plain by the Word of God, that Chriſt did give Bread unto his Diſciples, and called it his Body.

But the Subſtance of Bread is another Manner of Subſtance, than is the Subſtance of Chriſt's Body, God and Man.

Therefore the Concluſion is falſe.

The ſecond Part of mine Argument is plain, and the firſt is proved thus:

The ſecond Argument.

That which Chriſt did take, on the which he gave Thanks, and the which he brake, he gave to his Diſciples, and called it his Body.

But he took Bread, gave Thanks on bread, and brake Bread.

Ergo, The firſt Part is true. And it is confirmed with the Authorities of the Fathers, Irene, Tertullian, Origen, Cyprian, Epiphanius, Jerom, Auguſtine, Theodoret, Cyril, Rabanus, and Bede. Whoſe Places I will take upon me to ſhew moſt manifeſt in this Behalf, if I may be ſuffered to have my Books, as my Requeſt is.

Bread is the Body of Chriſt.

Ergo, It is Bread.

* A tertio adjacente ad ſecundum adjacens cum verbi ſubſtantivi pura copula.

* The Rule of Logick is this: A propoſitione de tertio adjacente, ad eam quæ eſt de ſecundo cum verbo recto ſignificante exiſtentiam, valet conſequentia affirmative, &c.

The third Argument.

As the Bread of the Lord's Table is Chriſt's natural Body, ſo is his myſtical Body.

But it is not Chriſt's myſtical Body by Tranſubſtantiation. Anno 1554.

Ergo, It is not his natural Body by Tranſubſtantiation.

The ſecond Part of my Argument is plain, and the firſt is proved thus: As Chriſt who is the Verity, ſpake of the Bread, This is my Body, which ſhall be betrayed for you, ſpeaking there of his natural Body; even ſo Paul, 1 Cor. 10. moved with the ſame Spirit of Truth, ſaid, We though we be many, yet are we all one Bread, and one Body, which be Partakers of one Bread. The Major proved

The fourth Argument.

We may no more believe Bread to be tranſubſtantiate into the Body of Chriſt, than the Wine into his Blood.

But the Wine is not tranſubſtantiate into his Blood:

Ergo, Neither is that Bread therefore tranſubſtantiate into his Body.

The Argument holdeth: A deſtructione antecedentis, ad deſtructionem conſequentis.

The firſt Part of this Argument is manifeſt, and the ſecond Part is proved out of the Authority of God's Word in Matthew and Mark, I will not drink of the Fruit of the Vine, &c. Now the Fruit of the Vine was Wine, which Chriſt drank and gave to his Diſciples to drink. With this Sentence agreeth plainly the Place of Chryſoſtom on the 20th Chapter of Matthew. As Cyprian doth alſo, affirming that there is no Blood, if Wine be not in the Cup. Matt. 26. Mark 14.

The fifth Argument.

The Words of Chriſt ſpoken upon the Cup and upon the Bread, have the like Effect and working.

But the Words ſpoken upon the Cup have not Virtue to tranſubſtantiate:

Ergo, It followeth, that the Words ſpoken upon the Bread have no ſuch Virtue.

This Argument holdeth after the ſame Rule as did the other before.

The ſecond Part of the Argument is proved, becauſe they would then tranſubſtantiate the Cup, or that which is in the Cup into the New Teſtament. But neither of theſe Things can be done, and very abſurd it is to confeſs the ſame.

The ſixth Argument.

The Circumſtances of the Scripture, the Analogy and Proportion of the Sacraments, and the Teſtimony of the faithful Fathers, ought to rule us in taking the Meaning of the Holy Scripture touching the Sacrament.

But the Words of the Lord's Supper, the Circumſtances of the Scripture, the Analogy of the Sacraments, and the Sayings of the Fathers, do moſt effectually and plainly prove a figurative Speech in the Words of the Lord's Supper.

Ergo, A figurative Senſe and Meaning is ſpecially to be received in theſe Words, This is my Body.

The Circumſtances of the Scripture, Do this in Remembrance of me. As oft as ye ſhall eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall ſhew forth the Lord's Death. Let a Man prove himſelf, and ſo eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup. They came together to break Bread; and they continued in breaking of Bread. The Bread which we break, &c. For we being many, are all one Bread and one Body, &c. The Circumſtances and Words of Scripture.

The Analogy of the Sacraments is neceſſary: for if the Sacraments had not ſome Similitude or Likeneſs The Analogy of the Sacraments.

Anno 1554.

Likeneſs of the Things whereof they be Sacraments, they could in no wiſe be Sacraments. And this Similitude in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is taken three Manner of Ways.

Analogy or Similitude in the Sacrament, three Mannner of Ways.

1. The firſt conſiſteth in nouriſhing, as ye ſhall read in Rabana, Cyprian, Auguſtine, Irene, and moſt plainly in Iſidore out of Bertram.

2. The ſecond in the uniting and joining of many into one, as Cyprian teacheth.

3. The third is a Similitude of unlike Things: where, like as the Bread is turned into one Body; ſo we, by the right Uſe of this Sacrament, are turned, thro' Faith, into the Body of Chriſt.

The Sayings of the Fathers for the figurative Speech.

The Sayings of the Fathers declare it to be a figurative Speech, as it appeareth in Origin, Tertullian, Chryſoſtom in opere imperfecto, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, Baſil, Gregory Nazianzen, Hilary, and moſt plainly of all in Bertram. Moreover the Sayings and Places of all the Fathers, whoſe Names I have before recited againſt the Aſſertion of the firſt Propoſition, do quite overthrow Tranſubſtantiation. But of all moſt evidently and plainly, Irene, Origen, Cyprian, Chryſoſtom to Ceſarian the Monk, Auguſtine againſt Adamantus, Gelaſius, Cyril, Epiphanius, Chryſoſtom again on the 20th of Matthew, Rabana, Damaſcene and Bertram.

Commendation of Bertram.

Here, right worſhipful Mr. Prolocutor, and ye the reſt of the Commiſſioners, it may pleaſe you to underſtand, that I do not lean to theſe Things only, which I have written in my former Anſwers and Confirmations, but that I have alſo for the Proof of that I have ſpoken, whatſoever Betram, a Man learned, of ſound and upright Judgment, and ever counted a Catholick for theſe ſeven hundred Years until this our Age, hath written. His Treatiſe, whoſoever ſhall read and weigh, conſidering the Time of the Writer, his Learning, Godlineſs of Life, the Allegations of the ancient Fathers, and his manifold and moſt grounded Arguments, I cannot, (doubtleſs) but much marvel, if he have any Fear of God at all, how he can with good Conſcience ſpeak againſt him in this Matter of the Sacrament. This Bertram was the firſt that pulled me by the Ear, and that firſt brought me from the common Error of the Romiſh Church, and cauſed me to ſearch more diligently and exactly both the Scriptures and the Writings of the old Eccleſiaſtical Fathers in this Matter. And this I proteſt before the Face of God, who knoweth I lye not in the Things I now ſpeak.

Dr. Ridley firſt brought to the Knowledge of the Sacrament by Bertram.

The third Propoſition.

The third Propoſition touching propitiatory Maſs.

In the Maſs is the lively Sacrifice of the Church, propitiable and available for the Sins as well of quick as of the Dead.

The Anſwer to this Propoſition.

I anſwer to this third Propoſition as I did to the firſt. And moreover I ſay, that being taken in ſuch Senſe as the Words ſeem to import, it is not only erroneous, but withal ſo much to the Derogation and Defacing of the Death and Paſſion of Chriſt, that I judge it may and ought moſt worthily to be counted wicked and blaſphemous againſt the moſt precious Blood of our Saviour Chriſt.

The Explication.

Concerning the Romiſh Maſs which is uſed at this Day, or the Lively Sacrifice thereof, propitiatory and available for the Sins of the Quick and the Dead, the Holy Scripture hath not ſo much as one Syllable.

Doubts in the third Propoſition. In the primitive Church the newly inſtructed in the Faith and unworthy were put away from the Communion.

There is Ambiguity alſo in the Name of Maſs: What it ſignifieth, and whether at this Day there be any ſuch indeed as the ancient Fathers uſed; ſeeing that now there be neither Catechiſts nor Pœnitentes to be ſent away.

Again, touching theſe Words [the lively Sacrifice of the Church] there is Doubt whether they are to be underſtood figuratively and ſacramentally, for the Sacrament of the lively Sacrifice (after which Sort we deny it not to be in the Lord's Supper) or properly and without any Figure: of the which Manner there was but one only Sacrifice, and that once offered, namely upon the Altar of the Croſs.

The third Doubt.

Moreover, in theſe Words [As well as] it may be doubted whether they be ſpoken in Mockage, as Men are wont to ſay in Sport, of a fooliſh and ignorant Perſon, that he is apt as well in Conditions as in Knowledge; being apt indeed in neither of them both.

The fourth Doubt.

There is alſo a Doubt in the Word [Propitiable] whether it ſignify here that which taketh away Sin, or that which may be made available for the Taking away of Sin; that is to ſay, whether it is to be taken in the active or in the paſſive Signification.

The Falſeneſs of the third Propoſition reproved.

Now the Falſeneſs of the Propoſition, after the Meaning of the Schoolmen and the Romiſh Church, and impiety in that Senſe which the Words ſeem to import, is this: that they leaning to the Foundation of their fond Tranſubſtantiation, would make the quick and lively Body of Chriſt's Fleſh (united and knit to the Divinity) to lie hid under the Accidents, and outward Shews of Bread and Wine. Which is very falſe, as I have ſaid afore: and they, building upon this Foundation, do hold that the ſame Body is offered unto God by the Prieſt in his daily maſſings to put away the Sins of the Quick and the Dead; whereas by the Apoſtle to the Hebrews it is evident, that there is but one Oblation, and one true and lively Sacrifice of the Church offered upon the Altar of the Croſs, which was, is, and ſhall be for ever the Propitiation for the Sins of the whole World: and where there is Remiſſion of the ſame, there is (ſaith the Apoſtle) no more offering for Sin.

But one Sacrifice in the Scripture.

Arguments confirming this Anſwer.

The firſt Argument Heb. 5.

No Sacrifice ought to be done, but where the Prieſt is meet to offer the ſame.
All other Prieſts be unmeet to offer Sacrifice propitiatory for Sin, ſave only Chriſt.

Argument

Ergo, No other Prieſts ought to ſacrifice for Sin, but Chriſt alone.

The ſecond Part of my Argument is thus proved.

No Honour in God's Church ought to be taken where a Man is not called, as Aaron.
It is a great Honour in God's Church to Sacrifice for Sin:

Ergo, No Man ought to Sacrifice for Sin, but only they which are called.

But only Chriſt is called to that Honour.

Heb. 7.

Ergo, No other Prieſt but Chriſt ought to ſacrifice for Sin. That no Man is called to this Degree of Honour but Chriſt alone, it is evident. For there are but two only Orders of Prieſthood allowed in the Word of God: namely, the Order of Aaron, and the Order of Melchiſedech. But now the Order of Aaron is come to an End, by Reaſon that it was unprofitable, and weak; and of the Order of Melcheſedeck there is but one Prieſt alone, even Chriſt the Lord, which hath a Prieſthood that cannot paſs to any other.

An Argument.

That Thing is in vain, and to no Effect, where no Neceſſity is wherefore it is done.
To offer up any more Sacrifice propitiatory for the Quick and the Dead there is no Neceſſity, for Chriſt our Saviour did that fully and perfectly once for all.
Ergo, To do the ſame in the Maſs it is in vain.

Heb. 9. Ab una cauſa veritatis ad propoſitionem habentem illam cauſam valet conſequentia.

Another Argument.

After that eternal Redemption is found and obtained, there needeth no more daily offering for the ſame.
But Chriſt coming an high Biſhop, &c. found and obtained for us eternal Redemption.
Ergo, There needeth now no more daily Oblation for the Sins of the Quick and the Dead.

Another Argument.

All Remiſſion of Sins cometh only by ſhedding of Blood.
In the Maſs there is no ſhedding of Blood.
Ergo, In the Maſs there is no Remiſſion of Sins; and ſo it followeth alſo that there is no propitiatory Sacrifice.

Another Argument.

In the Maſs the Paſſion of Chriſt is not in Verity, but in a Myſtery repreſenting the ſame: Yea, even there where the Lord's Supper is duly miniſtred.

But where Chriſt ſuffereth not, there is he not offered in Verity: For the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 9. Not that he might offer up himſelf often-times (for then muſt he have ſuffered often times ſince the Beginning of the World.) Now where Chriſt is not offered, there is no propitiatory Sacrifice:

Ergo, In the Maſs there is no propitiatory Sacrifice: For Chriſt appeared once in the latter End of the World, to put Sin to Flight by the offering up of himſelf. And as it is appointed to all Men that they ſhall once die, and then cometh the Judgment: Even ſo Chriſt was once offered to take away the Sins of many. And unto them that look for him ſhall he appear again without Sin unto Salvation.

Another Argument.

Where there is any Sacrifice that can make the Comers thereunto perfect, there ought Men to ceaſe from offering any more expiatory and propitiatory Sacrifices.
But in the new Teſtament there is one only Sacrifice now already long ſince offered, which is able to make the Comers thereto perfect for ever.
Ergo, In the New Teſtament they ought to ceaſe from offering any more propitiatory Sacrifices.

Sentences of the Scripture tending to the ſame End and Purpoſe, out of which alſo may be gathered other manifeſt Arguments for more Confirmation thereof.

By the which Will (ſaith the Apoſtle, Heb. 10.) we are ſanctified, by the offering up of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all. And in the ſame Place, But this Man, after that he had offered one Sacrifice for Sin, ſitteth for ever at the Right Hand of God, &c. For with one Offering hath he made perfect for ever them that are ſanctified, and by himſelf hath he purged our Sins. I beſeech you to mark theſe Words [by himſelf] the which well weighed, will without doubt ceaſe all Controverſy. Anno 1554.

The Apoſtle plainly denieth any other Sacrifice to remain for him that treadeth under his Feet the Blood of the Teſtament, by the which he was made holy. Chriſt will not be crucified again, he will not his Death to be had in Deriſion.

He hath reconciled us in the Body of his Fleſh. Mark I beſeech you, he ſaith not, in the Myſtery of his Body; but in the Body of his Fleſh. Coloſſ. 1.

If any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the Propitiation for our Sins, not for ours only, but for the Sins of the whole World. 1 John 2.

I know that all theſe Places of the Scripture are avoided by two Manner of ſubtle Shifts; the one is by the Diſtinction of the bloody and unbloody Sacrifice, as though our unbloody Sacrifice of the Church were any other than the Sacrifice of Praiſe and Thankſgiving, than a Commemoration, a ſhewing forth, and a Sacramental Repreſentation of that one only bloody Sacrifice, offered up once for all. The popiſh Diſtinction between bloody and unbloody Sacrifice.

The other is by depraving and wreſting the Sayings of the antient Fathers unto ſuch a ſtrange Kind of Senſe, as the Fathers themſelves indeed never meant. For what the Meaning of the Fathers was, is evident by that which St. Auguſtine writeth in his Epiſtle to Boniface, and in the 83d Chapter of his ninth Book againſt Fauſtus the Manichee, beſides many other Places; likewiſe by Euſebius, Emiſene, Cyprian, Chryſoſtom, Fulgentius, Bertram, and others, which do wholly concord and agree together in this Unity in the Lord, that the Redemption, once made in Verity for the Salvation of Man, continueth in full Effect for ever, and worketh without ceaſing unto the End of the World, that the Sacrifice once offered cannot be conſumed; that the Lord's Death and Paſſion is as effectual, the Virtue of that Blood once ſhed, as freſh at this Day for the waſhing away of Sins, as it was even the ſame Day that it flowed out of the bleſſed Side of our Saviour: And finally, That the whole Subſtance of our Sacrifice, which is frequented of the Church in the Lord's Supper, conſiſteth in Prayers, Praiſe, and giving of Thanks, and in remembring and ſhewing forth of that Sacrifice once offered upon the Altar of the Croſs: That the ſame might continually be had in Reverence by Myſtery, which one only, and no more, was offered for the Price of our Redemption. The Papiſts maintain their Sacrifice propitiatory, by the old Doctors falſly wreſted. The whole Subſtance of Sacrifice, wherein it conſiſteth.

Theſe are the Things (right worſhipful Mr. Prolocutor, and ye the reſt of the Commiſſioners) which I could preſently prepare to the anſwering of your three aforeſaid Propoſitions, being deſtitute of all Help in this Shortneſs of Time, ſudden Warning, and Want of Books. Wherefore I appeal to my firſt Proteſtation, moſt humbly deſiring the Help of the ſame (as much as may be) to be granted unto me. And becauſe ye have lately given moſt unjuſt and cruel Sentence againſt me, I do here appeal (ſo far forth as I may) to a more indifferent and juſt Cenſure and Judgment of ſome other ſuperior, competent, Biſhop Ridley appealeth from the unjuſt Sentence of his Adverſaries, to ſome other ſuperior competent Judge.

tent, and lawful Judge, and that according to the approved State of the Church of England. Howbeit, I confeſs, that I am ignorant what that is at this preſent, through the Trouble and Alteration of the State of the Realm. But if this Appeal may not be granted to me upon Earth, then do I fly (even as to my only Refuge and alone Haven of Health) to the Sentence of the eternal Judge, that is, of the Almighty God, to whoſe moſt merciful Juſtice towards us, and moſt juſt Mercifulneſs, I do wholly commit myſelf and all my Cauſe, nothing at all deſpairing of the Defence of mine Advocate and alone Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, to whom, with the everlaſting Father, and the Holy Spirit, the Sanctifier of us all, be now and for ever all Honour and Glory, Amen.

Biſhop Ridley for lack of equal Indifferency, appealeth to Almighty God

Albeit, this learned Biſhop was not ſuffered to read all that is above prefixed before the Diſputations, yet becauſe he had it then ready, and offered it up to the Prolocutor after the Diſputations and Sentence pronounced; I thought here the Place not unmeet to annex the ſame, together with the reſt. Now let us hear the Arguments and Anſwers between Dr. Smith and him.

Dr. Smith beginneth to oppoſe.

Smith. You have occaſioned me to go otherwiſe to work with you, than I had thought to have done. Me ſeemed you did in your Suppoſitions abuſe the Teſtimonies of Scripture concerning the Aſcenſion of Chriſt, to take away his Preſence in the Sacrament, as though this were a ſtrong Argument to enforce your Matter withal.

Smith's Argument.

Chriſt did aſcend into Heaven.

Ergo, He is not in the Sacrament.

Now therefore I will go about to diſprove this Reaſon of yours.

Chriſt's Aſcenſion is no Let to his real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Ergo, You are deceived, whereas you do ground yourſelf upon theſe Places.

Anſwer.

Rid. You import as though I had made a ſtrong Argument by Chriſt's going up into Heaven. But howſoever mine Argument is made, you collect it not rightly. For it doth not only ſtay upon his Aſcenſion, but upon his Aſcenſion and his * abiding there alſo.

* The Verity of Mr. Ridley's Anſwer touching the real Being of Chriſt on Earth, to be reſtrained by his aſcending and abiding in Heaven, ſtandeth upon the Neceſſity, which we call (Neceſſitas conſequentiæ) by this Demonſtration.

Every natural Body muſt neceſſarily be continued in his peculiar and certain Place.

Chriſt's Body is a natural Body.

Ergo, Chriſt's Body not to be in one certain Place at once contained, it is impoſſible, according to the Rule, omnes propoſitiones de impoſſibili & de neceſſe æquipollent dicto diſſimiliter ſe habenti, & modo ſimiliter.

Smith. Chriſt's going up to Heaven, and his abiding there, hinder not his real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Ergo, You are deceived.

Rid. Of Chriſt's real Preſence there may be a double Underſtanding: If you take the real Preſence of Chriſt according to the real and corporal Subſtance which he took of the Virgin, that Preſence being in Heaven, cannot be on the Earth alſo. But if you mean a real Preſence, according to ſome Thing that appertaineth to Chriſt's Body, certainly the Aſcenſion and abiding in Heaven are no Let at all to that Preſence. Wherefore Chriſt's Body after that ſort is here preſent to us in the Lord's Supper; by Grace I ſay, as Epiphanius ſpeaks of it.

Weſt. I will cut off from henceforth all Equivocation and Doubt. For whenſoever we ſpeak of Chriſt's Body, we mean that which he took of the Virgin.

Rid. Chriſt's Aſcenſion and abiding in Heaven cannot ſtand with his Preſence.

Smith. Chriſt appeared corporally and really on the Earth, for all his Aſcenſion and continual Abode in Heaven unto the Day of Doom.

Ergo, His Aſcenſion and abiding in Heaven, is no Let to his real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Rid. Mr. Doctor, this Argument is nothing worth. I do not ſtraightly tye Chriſt up in Heaven, that he may not come into the Earth at his Pleaſure. For when he will he may come down from Heaven, and be on the Earth, as it liketh himſelf. Howbeit I do affirm, That it is not poſſible for him to be both in Heaven and Earth at one Time.

Smith. Mark, I pray you, my Maſters that be here, diligently, what he anſwereth. Firſt, he ſaith, That the ſitting of Chriſt at the Right Hand of his Father, is a Let to the real Preſence of his Body in the Sacrament, and then afterwards he flieth from it again.

Chriſt's Abode in Heaven is no Let for him to appear on Earth when he will: But whether he will, that muſt be proved. Again, It is one thing to appear on Earth, another ſtill in the Sacrament, and to be preſent the ſame Time with his Body in Heaven, when he is bodily preſent in Earth.

Rid. I would not have you think that I do imagine or dream upon any ſuch Manner of ſitting, as theſe Men here ſit in the School.

Smith. Ergo, It is lawful for Chriſt then to be here preſent on the Earth, when he will himſelf.

Rid. Yea, when he will, it is lawful indeed.

Smith. Ergo, He aſcending into Heaven, doth not reſtrain his real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Rid. I do not gainſay, but that it is lawful for him to appear on the Earth when he will; but prove you that he will.

Smith. Then your Anſwer dependeth upon the Will of Chriſt, I perceive: Therefore I will join again with you in that ſhort Argument.

Chriſt, albeit he doth alway abide in Heaven after his Aſcenſion, was ſeen really and corporally on Earth.

Ergo, Notwithſtanding his Aſcenſion and continual ſitting at the Right Hand of his Father, he may be really and corporally in the Sacrament.

Rid. If the Notaries ſhould ſo record your Argument, as you have framed it, you peradventure would be aſhamed of it hereafter.

Smith. Chriſt after his Aſcenſion was ſeen really and corporally upon the Earth.

Ergo, Notwithſtanding his Aſcenſion and abiding with his Father, he may be corporally in the Sacrament.

Rid. I grant the Antecedent, but I deny the Conſequence.

Smith. Do you grant the antecedent?

Rid. Yea, I grant the antecedent. I am content to let you have ſo much. Becauſe I know that there be certain antient Fathers of that Opinion. I am well content to let you uſe that Propoſition as true. And I will frame the Argument for you.

He was ſeen on Earth after his Aſcenſion: Ergo, &c.

Smith. Nay, nay, I will frame it myſelf.

Chriſt after his Aſcenſion was ſeen really and corporally on Earth, albeit he do abide in Heaven continually:

Ergo, Notwithſtanding his Aſcenſion and continual abiding at the Right Hand of the Father, he may be really and corporally upon the Earth.

Chriſt continually ſitting in Heaven expounded.

Rid. Let us firſt agree about the continual ſitting at the Right Hand of the Father.

Smith. Doth he so sit at the Right Hand of his Father, that he doth never forsake the same?

Rid. Nay, I do not bind Christ in Heaven so straightly. I see you go about to beguile me with your Equivocations. Such Equivocations are to be distinguished. If you mean by his sitting in Heaven, to reign with his Father, he may be both in Heaven and also in Earth. But if ye understand his sitting to be after a corporal Manner of sitting, so is he always permanent in Heaven. For Christ to be corporal here on Earth, when corporally he is resident in Heaven, is clean contrary to the holy Scriptures, as Augustine saith; The Body of Christ is in Heaven, but his Truth is dispersed in every Place.

Christ cannot be both corporally here, and corporally also in Heaven at one Time.

Now if continually he abide in Heaven after the Manner of his corporal Presence, then his perpetual abiding there stoppeth or letteth that the same corporal Presence of him cannot be in the Sacrament.

Smith. Acts 3. we read that Christ shall sit perpetually at the Right Hand of God, unto the Consumption of the World.

West. I perceive you are come here to this Issue, whether the Body of Christ may be together both in Earth and in Heaven. I will tell you, that Christ in very deed is both in Earth and in Heaven together, and at one Time, both one and the same natural Christ, after the Verity and Substance of his very Body: Ergo, &c.

Rid. I deny the antecedent.

West. I prove it by two Witnesses. First by Chrysostom: Do we not offer every Day? we do so indeed, but doing it for the Remembrance of his Death. And this Offering is one, and not many. And how is it one, and not many, which was offered in the holy Place: This Sacrifice is a Pattern of that: The self same we always offer; not now as offering one Lamb to Day, and another to Morrow, but always one and the same Lamb. Wherefore here is but one Sacrifice; for else by this Means, seeing there be many Sacrifices in many Places, be there many Christs? Not so, but one Christ in all Places, both perfect here and perfect there, one only Body. Now thus I argue.

Chrys. Hom. 17. ad Hebræos.

We offer one Thing at all Times.

Argument. There is one Christ in all Places, both here compleat and there compleat.

Ergo, By Chrysostom there is one Body both in Heaven and Earth.

Answer. Rid. I remember the Place well. These Things make nothing against me.

West. One Christ is in all Places, here full and there full.

Rid. One Christ is in all Places; but not one Body in all Places.

One Christ, but not one Body, nor after one bodily Substance in all Places. Answer to Chrysostom.

West. One Body, saith Chrysostom.

Rid. But not after the Manner of bodily Substance he is in all Places, nor by Circumscription of Place. For [hic and illic] here and there, in Chrysostom, do assign no Place, as Augustine saith; The Lord is above, but the Truth of the Lord is in all Places.

West. You cannot so escape. He saith not the Verity of Christ is one; but one Christ is in all Places, both here and there.

One Christ and one Sacrifice in all Places, and how? to wit, Christ by Verity, the Sacrifice by Signification.

Rid. One Sacrifice is in all Places, because of the Unity of him whom the Sacrifice doth signify: Not that the Sacrifices be all one and the same.

West. Ergo, By your Saying, it is not Christ, but the Sacrifice of Christ.

But Chrysostom saith, One Body and one Christ is there, and not one Sacrifice.

Rid. I say, that both Christ and the Sacrifice of Christ is there: Christ by Spirit, Grace, and Verity; the Sacrifice by Signification. Anno 1554.

* Thus I grant with Chrysostom, that there is one Host or Sacrifice, and not many: And this our Host is called one, by reason of the Unity of that one, which one only all our Hosts do represent. That only Host was never other, but that which was once offered on the Altar of the Cross, of which Host all our Hosts are but sacramental Examples.

* Ex libre Ridlei ip. sius manu descripto.

Sacrifice, why it is called one

And where you alledge out of Chrysostom, that Christ is offered in many Places at once, both here full Christ, and there full Christ: I grant it to be true, that is, that Christ is offered in many Places at once, in a Mystery and sacramentally, and that he is full Christ in all those Places, but not after the corporal Substance of our Flesh which he took, but after the Benediction which giveth Life; and he is given to the godly Receivers in Bread and Wine, as Cyril speaketh; concerning the Oblation of Christ, whereof Chrysostom here speaketh, he himself doth clearly shew what he meaneth thereby, in saying by the Way of Correction, We always do the self same howbeit by the Recordation or Remembrance of his Sacrifice.

How one Christ is offered in many Places at once.

West. The second Witness Bernard in a Sermon that he made of the Supper of the Lord, who saith; How cometh this to us, most gentle Jesus, that we silly Worms creeping on the Face of the Earth, that we, I say, which are but Dust and Ashes, may deserve to have thee present in our Hands, and before our Eyes, who both together, full and whole, doth sit at the Right Hand of the Father, and who also in the Moment of one Hour, from the rising of the Sun to the going down of the same, are present one and the self same in many and divers Places.

Rid. These Words of Bernard make for you nothing at all. But I know that Bernard was in such a Time, that in this Matter he may worthily be suspected. He hath many good and fruitful Sayings; as also in the same foresaid Place by you alledged. But yet he followed in such an Age, when as the Doctrine of the holy Supper was sore perverted. Notwithstanding yet I will so expound him, rather than reject him, that he shall make nothing for you at all. He saith, that we have Christ in a Mystery, in a Sacrament, under a Veil or Cover, but hereafter shall have him without Veil or Cover. In the mean Time, here now he saith, That the Verity of Christ is every where. The Verity of Christ is both here and there, and in all Places.

Bernard rather expounded than rejected.

West. What do you call Verity? He saith not the Verity of Christ, but the Verity of the Body of Christ.

Rid. The Verity of the Body of Christ is the true Faith of the Body of Christ: After that Verity he is with them which truly believe upon him.

What is the Verity of the Body of Christ.

West. Christ is one and the same in divers Places. I urge the Words [in divers Places,] and yet I am not satisfied.

Smith. Christ was seen really and corporally on the Earth after his Ascension, and continually sitting at the Right Hand of the Father.

Ergo, The Ascension and perpetual sitting in Heaven hinder nothing, but that he may be really and corporally in the Sacrament.

Rid. If by perpetual sitting you mean the Residence of his Body in Heaven, your Reason containeth manifest Contradiction.

To be resident and not resident, import Contradiction.

Smith. These two have no Contradiction in them at all, both to sit continually at his Father's Right Hand, and alſo to be ſeen here really in Earth after his Aſcenſion. Firſt, You will give me that Chriſt ſitteth in Heaven at the Right Hand of his Father. For ſo it is written, Acts v. Heaven muſt needs receive him unto the Time of the reſtoring of all, &c. Secondly, He was alſo ſeen of Paul here corporally on Earth.

Wherefore theſe two do import, as ye ſee, no Contradiction.

Rid. What letteth, but that Chriſt, if it pleaſe him, and when it pleaſeth him, may be in Heaven and in Earth, and appear to whom he will? And yet notwithſtanding you have not yet proved that he will do ſo. And though Chriſt continually ſhall be reſident in Heaven unto the Judgment, yet there may be ſome Intermiſſion, that notwithſtanding. But this Controverſy, as I ſaid, is amongſt all the antient Doctors and Writers. And that Chriſt hath been here ſeen, that they grant all: But whether then he being in Earth or in Heaven, that is doubtful.

To be here and not here, importeth Contradiction in reſpect of ſundry Times.

Smith. I will prove that he would appear in Earth.

He ſõ would, and alſo did appear here in Earth after his Aſcenſion: Ergo, &c.

Rid. He appeared I grant; but how he appeared, whether then being in Heaven or in Earth, that is uncertain. So he appeared to Stephen, being then corporally ſitting in Heaven. For, ſpeaking after the true Manner of Man's Body, when he is in Heaven, he is not the ſame Time in Earth; and when he is in Earth, he is not the ſame Time corporally in Heaven.

Chriſt's appearing on the Earth ſometime, taketh not away his Reſidence in Heaven. How Chriſt appeared in Earth.

Smith. Chriſt hath been both in Heaven and in Earth all at one Time.

Ergo, You are deceived in denying that.

Rid. I do not utterly deny Chriſt here to have been ſeen in Earth. Of uncertain Things I ſpeak uncertainly.

This Argument holdeth rather materiæ than ratione formæ.

Smith. He was ſeen of Paul, as being born before his Time, after his aſcending up to Heaven, 1 Cor. 15.

But his Viſion was a corporal Viſion:

Ergo, He was ſeen corporally upon the Earth after his aſcending into Heaven.

Rid. He was ſeen really and corporally indeed: But whether being in Heaven or Earth, is a Doubt. And of doubtful Things we muſt judge doubtfully. Howbeit you muſt prove that he was in Heaven at the ſame Time, when he was corporally on Earth.

Smith. I would know of you, whether this Viſion may inforce the Reſurrection of Chriſt?

Whether Paul ſaw Chriſt in Heaven or in Earth, all is one to prove his Reſurrection.

Rid. I account this a ſound and firm Argument to prove the Reſurrection. But whether they ſaw him in Heaven or in Earth, I am in Doubt: And to ſay the Truth, it maketh no great Matter. Both ways the Argument is of like Strength. For whether he were ſeen in Heaven, or whether he were ſeen on Earth, either of both maketh ſufficiently for the Matter. Certain it is, he roſe again: For he could not have been ſeen, unleſs he had riſen again.

Smith. Paul ſaw him as he was here converſant on Earth, and not out of Heaven, as you affirm.

Rid. You run to the Beginning again: That you take for granted, which you ſhould have proved.

Smith. You make Delays for the nonce.

Rid. Say not ſo, I pray you. Thoſe that hear us be learned: They can tell both what you oppoſe, and what I anſwer well enough, I warrant you.

Treſh. He was ſeen after ſuch ſort, as that he might be heard.

Ergo, He was corporally on the Earth, or elſe how could he be heard? Argument

Rid. He that found the Means for Stephen to behold him in Heaven, even he could bring to paſs well enough, that Paul might hear him out of Heaven. Anſwer.

Smith. As other ſaw him, ſo Paul ſaw him.

Other did ſee him viſibly and corporally on Earth. Argument

Ergo, Paul ſaw him viſibly and corporally on Earth.

Rid. I grant he was ſeen viſibly and corporally: But yet have you not proved that he was ſeen in Earth. Anſwer.

Smith. He was ſeen of him as of other:

But he was ſeen of other being on Earth, and appeared viſibly to them on Earth:

Ergo, He was ſeen of Paul on Earth.

Rid. Your Controverſy is about [exiſtens in Terra] that is, being on Earth: If [exiſtere] to be, be referred as unto the Place, I deny that Chriſt after that Sort was on Earth. But if it be referred as to the Verity of the Body, then I grant it. Moreover, I ſay that Chriſt was ſeen of Men in Earth after his Aſcenſion, it is certain: For he was ſeen of Stephen; he was ſeen alſo of Paul. But whether he deſcended unto the Earth, or whether he being in Heaven did reveal or manifeſt himſelf to Paul, when Paul was wrapt into the third Heaven, I know that ſome contend about it: And the Scripture, as far as I have read or heard, doth not determine it. Wherefore we cannot but judge uncertainly of thoſe Things which be uncertain.

Smith. We have Egeſippus and Linus againſt you, which teſtify that Chriſt appeared corporally on the Earth to Peter after his Aſcenſion. Peter overcome with the Requeſts and Mournings of the People, which deſired him to get him out of the City, becauſe of Nero's lying in wait for him, began without Company to convey himſelf away from thence: And when he was come to the Gate, he ſeeth Chriſt come to meet him, and worſhipping him, he ſaid, Maſter, whether walk you? Chriſt anſwered, I am come again to be crucified. Egeſippus, l. 3. c. 3. Linus writing of the Paſſion of Peter, hath the ſelf ſame Story. St. Ambroſe hath the ſame likewiſe, and alſo Abdias, Scholar to the Apoſtles, which ſaw Chriſt before his aſcending into Heaven. With what Face therefore dare you affirm it to be a Thing uncertain, which theſe Men do manifeſtly witneſs to have been done? Linus de paſſione Petri. Ambroſius. Abdias.

Rid. I ſaid before that the Doctors in that Matter did vary.

Smith. Do you think this Story is not certain, being approved by ſo antient and probable Authority?

Rid. I do ſo think, becauſe I take and eſteem not their Words for the Words of Scripture. And though I did grant you that Story to be certain, yet it maketh not againſt me.

Smith. Such Things as be certain, and approved of them, you do reject as Things uncertain.

Rid. The Story of Linus is not of ſo great Authority; altho' I am not ignorant that * Euſebius ſo writeth alſo in the Story of the Church. And yet I account not theſe Men's Reports ſo ſure as the canonical Scriptures. Albeit if at any Time he had to any Man appeared here on the Earth after his Aſcenſion, that doth not diſprove my Saying. For I go not about to tye Chriſt up in Fetters (as ſome do untruly report of us) but that he may be ſeen upon the Earth according to his divine Pleaſure, whenſoever it liketh him. But we affirm, That it is contrary to the Nature of his Manhood, and the true

* This Addition is taken out of the Copy of Biſhop Ridley's own Writing.

Manner of his Body, that he ſhould be together and at one Inſtant both in Heaven and Earth, according to his corporal Subſtance. And the perpetual ſitting at the Right Hand of the Father, may (I grant) be taken for the Stability of Chriſt's Kingdom, and his continual or everlaſting Equality with his Father in the Glory of Heaven.

Smith. Now whereas you boaſt that your Faith is the very Faith of the antient Church; I will ſhew here that it is not ſo, but that it doth directly ſtrive againſt the Faith of the old Fathers, I will bring in Chryſoſtom for this Point. Eliſeus received the Mantle, as a right great Inheritance. For it was indeed a right excellent Inheritance, and more precious than any Gold beſide. And the ſame was a double Helias: He was both Helias above, and Helias beneath. I know well you think that juſt Man to be happy, and you would gladly be every one of you as he is. What will you then ſay if I ſhall declare unto you a certain other Thing, which all we that are indued with theſe holy Myſteries do receive much more than that? Helias indeed left his Mantle to his Scholar: But the Son of God aſcending did leave here his Fleſh unto us. Helias left it, putting off the ſame: But Chriſt both left it to us, and aſcended alſo to Heaven, having it with him.

Chryſoſtom alledged. Hom. 2. ad populum Antioch.

Rid. I grant that Chriſt did both; that is, both took up his Fleſh with him aſcending up, and alſo did leave the ſame behind him with us, but after a divers Manner and Reſpect. For he took his Fleſh with him, after the true and corporal Subſtance of his Body and Fleſh: Again, he left the ſame in Myſtery to the Faithful in the Supper, to be received after a ſpiritual Communication, and by Grace. Neither is the ſame received in the Supper only, but alſo at other Times, by hearing the Goſpel, and by Faith. For, The Bread which we break, is the Communication of the Body of Chriſt: And generally, Unleſs ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye ſhall have no Life in you.

Here at this Anſwer great Cartfuls of taunting, and ſpiteful, and reproachful Words were caſt upon this good Biſhop.

Smith. Chryſoſtom ſaith: O Miracle, O Good will of God! He that ſitteth above at the Sacrifice Time, is contained in the Hands of Men. Or elſe as other have tranſlated it, thus: O Miracle, O Gentleneſs of God? He that ſitteth above with the Father, is handled with the Hands of all Men at the very ſame Moment of Time, and doth himſelf deliver himſelf to them that are deſirous to take him and embrace him.

Chryſoſt. de dignitate ſacerdotii. Lib. 3. cap. 3.

Rid. He that ſitteth there is here preſent in Myſtery and by Grace, and is holden of the Godly, ſuch as communicate him, not only ſacramentally with the Hand of the Body, but much more wholſomely with the Hand of the Heart, and by inward Drinking is received; but by the ſacramental Signification he is holden of all Men.

Seton. Where is then the Miracle if he be only preſent through his Grace and Myſtery only?

Rid. Yes, there is a Miracle, good Sir, Chriſt is not idle in the Sacraments. Is not the Miracle great, when Bread, which is wont to ſuſtain the Body, becometh Food to the Soul? he that underſtandeth not that Miracle, he underſtandeth not the Force of that Myſtery. God grant we may every one of us underſtand his Truth and obey the ſame.

The Miracle in the Sacrament, wherein it conſiſteth.

Smith. Chryſoſtom calleth it a Miracle, that Chriſt ſitteth at the Right Hand of God in Heaven, and at the ſame Time is held in the Hands of Men: Not that he is handled with the Hands of Men: Only in a Myſtery, and is with them through Grace. Therefore while you deny that, you are altogether deceived, and ſtray far from the Truth. Anno 1554.

Harpſ. The former Part of Chryſoſtom is not to be let ſlip. Let me, before I begin, aſk this one Queſtion of you. Is it not a great Matter that Elias left his Cloak or Mantle, and the Gift of his Prophecy to his Scholar?

Rid. Yes ſurely, it is a great Matter.

Harpſ. Did not Elias then leave great Grace?

Rid. He did ſo.

Harpſ. But Chriſt left a far greater Grace than Elias: For he could not both leave his Cloak and take it with him; Chriſt doth both in his Fleſh.

Rid. I am well content to grant, that Chriſt left much greater Things to us than Elias to Eliſeus, albeit he be ſaid to have left his double Spirit with him: For that the Strength and Grace of the Body of Chriſt, which Chriſt aſcending up here left with us, is the only Salvation and Life of all Men which ſhall be ſaved: Which Life Chriſt hath here left unto us, to be received by Faith through the hearing of the Word, and the right Adminiſtration of the Sacraments. This Virtue and Grace Chryſoſtom, after the Phraſe and Manner of John the Evangeliſt, calleth Chriſt's Fleſh.

How Chriſt took up his Body, and left it with us.

The Phraſe of Chryſoſtom conſidered.

Harpſ. But Chriſt performed a great Matter. He carried up, and left behind. You underſtand not the Compariſon. The Compariſon is in this, That Elias left his Mantle, and carried it not with him; Chriſt left his Fleſh behind him, and carried it with him alſo.

Compariſon between Elias's Mantle and Chriſt's Fleſh.

Rid. True it is, and I myſelf did affirm no leſs before. Now where you ſeem to ſpeak many Things, indeed you bring no new Things at all. Let there be a Compariſon between Grace and Grace, then Chriſt gave the far greater Grace, when he did inſert or graft us into his Fleſh.

Elias took his Mantle, and left neither Mantle, nor Sacrament of his Mantle behind him. Chriſt took his Fleſh, and left a Sacrament of his Fleſh, which was more than Elias did: and yet the ſaid Elias afterward caſt down his Mantle.

Harpſ. If you will give me leave, I will aſk you this Queſtion. If Chryſoſtom would have meant ſo, that Chriſt left his Body in the Euchariſt, what plainer Words think you, or more evident could he have uſed than theſe?

Rid. Theſe Things be not of ſo great Force as they bear a great Shew outwardly. He might alſo have uſed groſſer Words, if he had liſted to have uttered his Mind ſo groſly: For he was an eloquent Man. Now he ſpeaketh after the Manner of other Doctors, which of myſtical Matters ſpeak myſtically, and of Sacraments ſacramentally.

Harpſ. The Compariſon lieth in this; That which was impoſſible to Elias, is poſſible with Chriſt.

Rid. I grant it was poſſible to Chriſt, which was to the other impoſſible, Elias left his Cloak; Chriſt both left his Fleſh, and took it with him.

Harpſ. Elias left behind him; and could not take with him: Chriſt both left behind him, and alſo took with him: Except you will ſay the Compariſon here made to be nothing.

Rid. He took up his Fleſh with him to Heaven, and left here the Communion of his Fleſh in Earth.

Weſt. You underſtand in the firſt Place his Fleſh for very true Fleſh; and in the ſecond Place for Grace, and Communion of his Fleſh; and why do you not underſtand it in the ſecond Place alſo for his true Fleſh? I will make it evident how blockiſh and groſs your Anſwer is.

Quam ſit ſtupida & craſſa reſponſio tua.

Rid. Theſe be Taunts and Reproaches, not beſeem-

Anno 1554. beſeeming, as I think, the Modeſty of this School.

Weſt. Elias left his Cloak to his Diſciples; but the Son of God going up to Heaven, left his Fleſh. But Elias certainly left his Cloak behind, and Chriſt likewiſe his Fleſh, and yet aſcending he carried the ſame with him too. By which Words we make this Reaſon:

Chriſt left his Fleſh to his Diſciples, and yet for all that he took the ſame up with him:

Ergo, He is preſent here with us.

Dr. Weſton ſpeaketh to the Audience in Engliſh.

Here Dr. Weſton crying to the People, ſaid unto them; Mr. Doctor anſwereth it after this Faſhion.

He carried his Fleſh into Heaven, and he left here the Communion of his Fleſh behind. Aſſuredly the Anſwer is too unlearned.

Rid. I am glad you ſpeak in Engliſh. Surely, I wiſh that all the whole World might underſtand your Reaſons and my Anſwers. He left his Fleſh. This you underſtand of his Fleſh, and I underſtand the ſame of Grace. He carried his Fleſh into Heaven, and left behind the Communion of his Fleſh unto us.

But were theſe Judges in King Edward's Time?

Weſt. Ye judges, what think you of this Anſwer?

Judges. It is ridiculous and a very fond Anſwer.

Rid. Well, I take your Words patiently for Chriſt's Cauſe.

Weſt. (Weſton here citeth the Place) We are ſprinkled with the Blood of Chriſt.

Rid. Mr. Doctor, it is the ſame Blood, but yet ſpiritually received, and indeed all the Prophets were ſprinkled with the ſame Blood, but yet ſpiritually I ſay, and by Grace. And whatſoever they be that are not ſprinkled with this Blood, they cannot be Partakers of the everlaſting Salvation.

* This he repeated in Engliſh to the People alſo.

Weſt. * Here I bring Bernard unto you again, Even from the Weſt unto the Eaſt, from the North unto the South, there is one and the ſelf ſame Chriſt in many and divers Places.

Rid. The Anſwer is ſoon made, that one Chriſt is here and in divers places. For God according to his Majeſty, and according to his Providence, as St. Auſtin ſaith, is every where with the Godly, according to his indiviſible and unſpeakable Grace. Or elſe, if ye would underſtand Bernard according to the corporal Preſence, how monſtrous, or huge and giant-like a Body would you then make Chriſt's Body to be, which would reach even from North to South, from Weſt to Eaſt?

The Papiſts make Chriſt to have a monſtrous Body.

Weſt. Nay, nay, you make a monſtrous Anſwer, and unlearned.

Ward. Before I come in with thoſe Reaſons which I had purpoſed to bring againſt you, I am minded to come again to Mr. Doctor's Argument, by which you being brought into the Briars, ſeemed to doubt of Chriſt's Preſence on the Earth. To the Proof of which Matter I will bring nothing elſe, than that which was agreed upon in the Catechiſm of the Synod of London, ſet out not long ago by you.

Here they returned again to Latin.

Biſhop Ridley falſly charged to ſet forth the Catechiſm.

Rid. Sir, I give you to wit, before you go any further, that I did ſet out no Catechiſm.

Dr. Weſton in K. Edward's Days ſubſcribed.

Weſt. Yes, you made one ſubſcribe to it, when you were a Biſhop in your Ruff.

Rid. I compelled no Man to ſubſcribe.

Ward. Yes, by the Rood, you are the very Author of that Hereſy.

Rid. I put forth no Catechiſm.

Cole. Did you never conſent to the ſetting out of thoſe Things which you allowed?

Rid. I grant that I ſaw the Book: but I deny that I wrote it. I peruſed it after it was made, and I noted many Things for it. So I conſented to the Book: I was not the Author of it.

Of this Catechiſm read before.

Judges. * The Catechiſm is ſo ſet forth, as though the whole convocation Houſe hath agreed to it. Cranmer ſaid Yeſterday, that you made it.

* The Judges give an untrue Verdict: For Dr. Cranmer, meaning by the Council, ſpake no Word of Ridley.

Rid. I think ſurely, that he would not ſay ſo.

Ward. The Catechiſm hath this Clauſe; If viſibly on the Earth.

Rid. I anſwer, That thoſe Articles were ſet out, I both witting and conſenting to them. Mine own Hand will teſtify the ſame, and Mr. Cranmer put his Hand to them likewiſe, and gave them to other afterward. Now, as for the Place which you alledged out of it, that may eaſily be expounded, and without any Inconvenience.

Ward. Chriſt is the Power and Virtue of his Father.

A poſſibili ad eſſe non valet conſequentia.

Ergo, He was not of ſo little Strength, that he could not bring to paſs, whatſoever he would himſelf.

Rid. I grant.

Ward. Chriſt was the Wiſdom of the Father.

Ergo, That he ſpake he ſpake wiſely, and ſo as every Man might underſtand: neither was it his Mind to ſpeak one Thing inſtead of another.

Rid. All this I grant.

Argument of the Wiſdom and Truth of Chriſt.

Ward. Chriſt was likewiſe the very Truth: Ergo, He made and performed indeed that which he intended to make. And likewiſe it is, that he doth neither deceive, nor could be deceived, nor yet would go about to deceive others.

Hilar. in Pſal. 118.

Weſt. Hillarius, hath theſe Words: All God's Words or Sayings are true, and neither idly placed, or unprofitably, but fiery, and wonderful Fiery, without all Doubtfulneſs of ſuperfluous Vanity, that there may be nothing thought to be there, which is not abſolute and proper.

Ward. He is the Truth of the Father: Ergo, He can neither deceive, nor yet be deceived; eſpecially I mean, when he ſpake at his latter End, and his Teſtament.

Anſwer to Mr. Ward's Argument.

Rid. Chriſt is the very Truth of the Father: and I perceive well to what Scope you drive your Reaſon. This is but a far fetcht Compaſs of Words. If that theſe Words of Chriſt, This is my Body, which you mean be rightly underſtood, they are moſt true.

Ward. He took, he brake, he gave, &c. What took he?

Rid. Bread, his Body.

Ward. What brake he?

Rid. Bread.

Ward. What gave he?

Rid. Bread.

Ward. Gave he Bread made of Wheat, and material Bread?

Rid. I know not whether he gave Bread of Wheat, but he gave true and material Bread.

Ward. I will prove the contrary by Scriptures.

This Argument is not formal in the ſecond Figure.

He delivered to them that which he bad them take.

But he bad not them take material Bread, but his own Body.

Ergo, He gave not material Bread but his own Body.

Anſwer.

Rid. I deny the Minor. For he bad them take his Body ſacramentally in material Bread: and after that Sort it was both Bread which he bad them take, becauſe the Subſtance was Bread, and it was alſo his Body, becauſe it was the Sacrament of his Body, for the ſanctifying and the coming of the Holy Ghoſt, which is always aſſiſtant to thoſe Myſteries which were inſtituted of Chriſt, and lawfully adminiſtred.

Harpſ. What is he that ſo ſaith, By the coming unto of the Holy Spirit?

Theophylact. in Mat. 26. Rid. I have Theophylact, for mine Author for this Manner of ſpeaking. And here I bring him that ye may underſtand that Phraſe not to be mine, upon Matthew 26. Furthermore, the ſaid Theophylact writing upon theſe Words, This is my Body, ſheweth that the Body of the Lord is Bread, which is ſanctified on the Altar.

Ogle. That Place of Theophylact maketh openly againſt you. For he ſaith in that Place, that Chriſt ſaid not, This is the Figure of my Body, but my Body. For, ſaith he, by an unſpeakable Operation it is transformed, although it ſeem to us to be Bread.

The Words of Theophylact (who ſaid not this is a Figure of my Body) anſwered.

Rid. It is not a Figure, that is to ſay, Non tantum eſt figura; that is, It is not only a Figure of his Body.

Weſt. Where have you that Word [Tantum] only?

Rid. It is not in that Place, but he hath it in another, and Auguſtine doth ſo ſpeak many Times, and other Doctors more.

Weſt. Here Weſton repeating the Words of Theophylact in Engliſh, ſaid, He ſaith it is no Figure, and you ſay it is a Figure.

And the ſame Theophylact ſaith moreover, that the converting or turning of the Bread is made into the Lord's Fleſh.

* This Argument is without perfect Mood and Form, having the Minor Negative in the ſecond Figure.

* That which Chriſt gave, we do give.
But that which he gave was not a Figure of his Body.
Ergo, We give no Figure, but his Body.

As concerning the Authority of Theophylact, what he thought and might have ſpoken of that Author, Dr. Ridley did not then ſpeak, nor could conveniently (as he himſelf afterward declared, writing with his own Hand the Diſputations in the Priſon) becauſe of the Uproars and Clamours, which were ſo great, and he by ſo many called upon, that he could not anſwer as he would, and what he thought touching the Authority of Theophylact, but anſwered ſimply to that which is brought out of that Author on this Sort.

Converſion after what Sort in the Sacrament.

I grant, quoth he, the Bread to be converted and turned into the Fleſh of Chriſt, but not by Tranſubſtantiation, but by a ſacramental Converſion or turning. It is transformed, ſaith Theophylact, in the ſame Place, by a myſtical Benediction, and by the Acceſſion or Coming of the Holy Ghoſt unto the Fleſh of Chriſt. He ſaith not, by Expulſion or driving away the Subſtance of Bread, and by ſubſtituting or putting in his Place the corporal Subſtance of Chriſt's Fleſh. And where he ſaith, It is not a Figure of the Body, we ſhould underſtand that Saying, as he himſelf doth elſewhere add [only,] that is, it is no naked or bare Figure only. For Chriſt is preſent in his Myſteries, neither at any Time, as Cyprian ſaith, doth the Divine Majeſty abſent himſelf from the Divine Myſteries.

Weſt. You put in [only], and that is one Lye. And I tell you farther, Peter Martyr was fain to deny the Author, becauſe the Place was ſo plain againſt him. But mark his Words, how he ſaith, It is no Figure, but his Fleſh.

Rid. To take his Words, and not his Meaning, is to do Injury to the Author. Anno 1554.

Hard. No other Doctor maketh more againſt you: for the Words are, Tranſelementatur; that is, turned from one Element into another. And ſhewing the Cauſe why it is in Form of Bread, he ſaith, Becauſe we are infirm, and abhor to eat the raw Fleſh, ſpecially the Fleſh of Man; therefore it appeareth Bread, but it is Fleſh. This Harding ſat at the Table among the Notaries. Theoph. in 6 Cap. Joan.

Rid. That Word hath not that Strength which you ſeem to give it. You ſtrain it overmuch, and yet it maketh not ſo much for your Purpoſe. For the ſame Author hath in another Place, We are tranſelemented, or transformed, and changed into the Body of Chriſt. And ſo by that Word, in ſuch Meaning as you ſpeak of, I could prove as well that we are transformed indeed into the very Body of Chriſt. Theophylact expounded.

Ward. Learned Mr. Doctor, thus you expound the Place, This is my Body; that is, a Figure of my Body.

Rid. Although I know there be ſome that ſo expound it, yet that Expoſition is not full to expreſs the Whole.

Argument in the third Figure.

Ward. My Sheep hear my Voice, and follow me.
But all the Sheep of Chriſt hear his Voice,
This is my Body, without a Figure:
Ergo, The Voice of Chriſt here hath no Figure.

Rid. The Sheep of Chriſt follow the Voice of Chriſt, unleſs they be ſeduced and deceived through Ignorance.

Ward. But the Fathers took this Place for no figurative Speech.

Rid. Yet they do all number this Place among figurative and tropical Speeches.

Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2.

Ward. Juſtin Martyr in his Second Apology hath thus, ὃ γὰρ ὡς κοινὸν ἄρτον οὐδὲ κοινὸν πόμα ταῦτα λαμβάνομεν, ἀλλ' ὃν τρόπον διὰ λόγου Θεοῦ σαρκοποιηθεὶς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ὁ σωτὴρ ἡμῶν, καὶ σάρκα καὶ αἷμα ὑπὲρ σωτηρίας ἡμῶν ἔσχεν, οὕτω καὶ τὴν διὰ εὐχῆς λόγου τοῦ παρ' αὐτοῦ εὐχαριστηθεῖσαν τροφὴν, ἐξ ἧς αἷμα καὶ σάρκες κατ' μεταβολὴν τρέφονται ἡμῶν, ἐκείνου τοῦ σαρκοποιηθέντος Ἰησοῦ ἡ σάρκα καὶ αἷμα ἐδιδάχθημεν εἶναι.

This Place Cranmer hath corrupted: thus it is engliſhed. For we do not take this for common Bread and Drink, but like as Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour incarnate by the Word of God, had Fleſh and Blood for our Salvation; even ſo we be taught the Food wherewith our Fleſh and Blood is nouriſhed by Alteration, when it is conſecrated by the Prayer of his Word, to be the Fleſh and Blood of the ſame Jeſus incarnate.

Dr. Cranmer charged with miſ-tranſlating a Place in Juſtin. Read his Anſwer to this before Page 47.

Dr. Cranmer hath thus tranſlated it: Bread, Water, and Wine, are not to be taken as other common Meats and Drinks be, but they be ordained purpoſely to give Thanks to God, and therefore be called Euchariſtia, and be called the Body and Blood of Chriſt; and that is is lawful for none to eat and drink of them, but ſuch as profeſs Chriſt, and live according to the ſame: and yet the ſame Meat and Drink is changed into our Fleſh and Blood, and nouriſheth our Bodies.

Rid. O good Mr. Doctor, go ſincerely to Work: I know that Place, and I know how it is uſed.

Sumptum ex exemplari domini Ridlei deſcripto.

Ward. (Ward here repeated the Place again out of Juſtine,) We are taught, &c. as above.

Rid. O what upright Dealing is this! I have the ſelf ſame Place of Juſtine here copied out. You know yourſelf which are ſkilful in Greek, how the Words here be removed out of the right Place, and without any juſt Cauſe.

Ward.

Anno 1554.

Ward. I ſtand ſtill upon mine Argument. What ſay you?

Rid. If you will that I ſhould anſwer to Juſtine, then you muſt hear. I have but one Tongue, I cannot anſwer at once to you all.

In this Argument if the Minor be a Negative, the Form is falſe: if it be Affirmative, æquipollenter, the Major is to be denied.

Weſt. Chriſt gave us his very and true Fleſh to be eaten:

But he never gave it to be eaten but in his laſt Supper, and in the Sacrament of the Altar:

Ergo, There is the very Fleſh of Chriſt.

Rid. If you ſpeak of the very true Fleſh of Chriſt, after the Subſtance of his Fleſh taken in the Womb of the Virgin Mary, and not by Grace and ſpiritually, I then do deny the firſt Part of your Reaſon. But if you underſtand it of the true Fleſh, after Grace and ſpiritual Communication, I then grant the firſt Part, and deny the ſecond. For he giveth unto us truly his Fleſh, to be eaten of all that believe in him. For he is the very and true Meat of the Soul, wherewith we are fed unto everlaſting Life, according to his Saying; My Fleſh is Meat indeed, &c.

Ward. I have deſired with my hearty Deſire to eat this Paſchal with you. What Paſchal, I pray you, deſired he to eat? If you ſtand in Doubt, you have Tertullian againſt Marcion: He there-

Tertul. contra Marcion, lib. 4. fore proteſting a great Deſire to eat his Paſchal, his own Paſchal, I ſay, (for it was not meet that he ſhould deſire any other than his own) taking Bread and diſtributing it to his Diſciples, made it his Body, ſaying, This is my Body, &c.

What ſay you? Did he underſtand by this Paſchal the Judaical Lamb, or by that which afterward he gave in his Supper?

Rid. I ſuppoſe that the firſt he underſtood of the Judaical Paſſover, and afterward of the Euchariſt.

Argument Ward. Nay then Tertullian is againſt you, which ſaith:

He deſired to eat his Paſſover.

But the Judaical Paſſover was not his, but ſtrange from Chriſt.

Ergo, He meant not of the Judaical Paſſover.

Anſwer. Rid. The Judaical Paſſover was not ſtrange from Chriſt, but his own: Inſomuch as he is the Lord of all; and as well the Lord of the Judaical Paſſover, as of his own Supper.

Ward. What anſwer you then to Tertullian, the which ſaith, He deſired to eat his own Paſſover, and not the Jewiſh Paſſover, which ſtood upon Words without Fleſh?

Analogical Senſe is that which hath a high and myſtical Underſtanding, that lieth abſtruſe and profound under the external Letter.

Rid. Tertullian may here dally in Senſe analogical. I know that Cyprian hath theſe Words: He began then to inſtitute the holy Euchariſt, but both were Chriſt's.

Auguſt. in Pſal. 96. Ward. Auguſtine in Pſalm 96. writing upon theſe Words, Worſhip his Footſtool, &c. I aſk (ſaith he) what is the Footſtool of his Feet? and the Scripture telleth me, The Earth is the Footſtool of my Feet. And ſo in ſearching thereof I turn myſelf to Chriſt, becauſe I ſeek him in the Earth, and find how, without Impiety, the Footſtool of his Feet may be worſhipped; for he took Earth of Earth, in that he is Fleſh and Earth; and of the Fleſh of Mary he took Fleſh, and becauſe that in the ſame Fleſh here he walked and alſo he gave the ſame Fleſh to us to be eaten unto Salvation. But no Man eateth that Fleſh except he have worſhipped before. And ſo it is found how ſuch a Footſtool of the Feet of the Lord is to be worſhipped, ſo that not only we ſin not in worſhipping, but alſo do ſin in not worſhipping the ſame.

He gave to us his Fleſh to be eaten, the which he took of the Earth, in which alſo here he walked, &c.

But he never gave his Fleſh to be eaten, but when he gave it at his Supper, ſaying, This is my Body.

Ergo, In the Euchariſt he gave us his Fleſh.

Rid. You do alledge the Place of Auſtin upon the 98th Pſalm, where he ſaith, that Chriſt gave his Fleſh to be eaten which he took of the Earth, and in which here he walked, inferring hereupon that Chriſt never gave the ſame his Fleſh to be eaten, but only in the Euchariſt: I deny your Minor; for he gave it both in the Euchariſt to be eaten, and alſo otherwiſe, as well in the Word, as alſo upon the Croſs.

How Chriſt gave his Fleſh to be eaten, and when.

Smith. What if Auguſtine ſay, that Chriſt did not only give himſelf to us in a Figure, but gave his own very Fleſh indeed and really?

Rid. I never ſaid that Chriſt gave only a Figure of his Body. For indeed he gave himſelf in a real Communication, that is, he gave his Fleſh after a Communication of his Fleſh.

Weſt. (Here Weſton read the Place of Auguſtine in Engliſh, and afterward ſaid; Ye ſay, Chriſt gave not his Body, but a Figure of his Body.

Rid. I ſay not ſo, I ſay he gave his own Body verily. But he gave it by a real, effectual, and ſpiritual Communication.

Chriſt gave himſelf not only in a Figure, but indeed by real and effectual Communication of his Fleſh.

After this, Dr. Glin began to reaſon, who (notwithſtanding Mr. Ridley had always taken him for his old Friend) made a very contumelious Preface againſt him. This Preface Mr. Ridley therefore did the more take to Heart, becauſe it proceeded from him. Howbeit he thought that Dr. Glin's Mind was to ſerve the Time. For afterward he came to the Houſe wherein Mr. Ridley was kept, and as far as Mr. Ridley could call to Remembrance, before Dr. Young and Dr. Oglethorp he deſired him to pardon his Words. Which Mr. Ridley did even form the very Heart, and wiſhed earneſtly, that God would give not only to him, but unto all others, the true and evident Knowledge of God's evangelical Sincerity, that all Offences put a-part, they being perfectly and fully reconciled, might agree and meet together in the Houſe of the heavenly Father.

Glin. I ſee that you elude or ſhift away all Scriptures and Fathers, I will go to work with you after another Sort.

Chriſt hath here his Church known in Earth, of which you were once a Child, although now you ſpeak contumeliouſly of the Sacraments.

Rid. This is a grievous Contumely, that you call me a Shifter away of the Scripture, and of the Doctors: as touching the Sacraments, I never yet ſpake contumeliouſly of them. I grant that Chriſt hath here his Church in Earth: but that Church did ever receive and acknowledge the Euchariſt to be a Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt, yet not the Body of Chriſt really, but the Body of Chriſt by Grace.

Glin. Then I aſk this Queſtion; whether the catholick Church hath ever or at any Time been idolatrous?

Rid. The Church is the Pillar and Stay of the Truth, that never yet hath been idolatrous in Reſpect of the whole: but peradventure in Reſpect of ſome Part thereof, which ſometimes may be ſeduced by evil Paſtors, and through Ignorance.

Glin. * That Church ever hath worshipped the Flesh of Christ in the Eucharist.

* This Argument having the Minor a negative, neither is formable in the third Figure, neither doth it conclude rightly, but should conclude thus: Ergo, To worship the Flesh of Christ in the Eucharist is no Idolatry. Sumpium ab autographo Ridlei manu descripto.

But the Church hath never been idolatrous:

Ergo, It hath always judged the Flesh of Christ to be in the Eucharist.

Rid. And I also worship Christ in the Sacrament, but not because he is included in the Sacrament, like as I worship Christ also in the Scriptures, not because he is really included in them. Notwithstanding I say, that the Body of Christ is present in the Sacrament, but yet sacramentally and spiritually, according to his Grace giving Life, and in that respect really, that is, according to his Benediction giving Life.

Furthermore, I acknowldge gladly the true Body of Christ to be in the Lord's Supper, in such Sort as the Church of Christ (which is the Spouse of Christ, and is taught of the Holy Ghost, and guided by God's Word) doth acknowledge the same. But the true Church of Christ doth acknowledge a Presence of Christ's Body in the Lord's Supper to be communicated to the Godly by Grace, and spiritually, as I have often shewed, and by a sacramental Signification, but not by the corporal Presence of the Body of his Flesh.

August. contra Faust. lib. 20. cap. 13.

Glin. Austin saith: Some there were which thought us instead of Bread and of the Cup, to worship Ceres and Bacchus.

Upon this Place I gather, that there was an Adoration of the Sacrament among the Fathers; and Erasmus, in an Epistle to the Brethren of Low-Germany, saith, that the worshipping of the Sacrament was before Austin and Cyprian.

Rid. We do handle the Signs reverently: but we worship the Sacrament as a Sacrament, not as a Thing signified by the Sacrament.

Glin. What is the Symbol or Sacrament?

Rid. Bread.

Glin. Ergo, We worship Bread.

Equivocation of this Word Worship, distinguished.

Rid. There is a Deceit in this Word [Adoramus.] We worship the Symbols, when reverently we handle them. We worship Christ whersoever we perceive his Benefits. But we understand his Benefit to be greatest in the Sacrament.

Glin. So I may fall down before the Bench here, and worship Christ: And if any Man ask me what I do, I may answer, I worship Christ.

We worship Christ in the Eucharist: But we worship not the Eucharist for Christ.

Rid. We adore and worship Christ in the Eucharist. And if you mean the external Sacrament; I say, that also is to be worshipped as a Sacrament.

Glin. So was the Faith of the primitive Church.

Rid. Would to God we would all follow the Faith of that Church.

Glin. Think you that Christ hath now his Church?

Rid. I do so.

Glin. But all the Church adoreth Christ, verily, and really in the Sacrament.

This Council of Florence was but of late Years in the Time of the Council of Basil.

Rid. You know yourself that the Eastern Church would not acknowledge Transubstantiation, as appeareth in the Council of Florence.

Cole. That is false. For in the same they did acknowledge Transubstantiation, altho' they would not intreat of the Matter, for that they had not in their Commission so to do.

Rid. Nay, they would determine nothing of the Matter, when the Article was propounded unto them.

Cole. It was not because they did not acknowledge the same, but because they had no Commission so to do.

Curtop. Reverend Sir, I will prove and declare, that the Body of Christ is truly and really in the Eucharist: And whereas the holy Fathers, both of the West and East Church, have written both many Things and no less manifest of the same Matter, yet will I bring forth only Chrysostom. Anno 1554.

Chrys. in Cap. 10. Cor. 1. Hom. 24.

* That which is in the Cup, is the same that flowed from the Side of Christ.

But true and pure Blood did flow from the Side of Christ.

Ergo, His true and pure Blood is in the Cup.

* The Major should be thus: Whatsoever did flow from the Side of Christ is in the Cup, &c. or else the Argument being in the second Figure is affirmatively, and false.

Rid. It is his true Blood which is in the Chalice, I grant, and the same which sprang from the Side of Christ. But how? It is Blood indeed, but not after the same Manner, after which Manner it sprang from his Side. For here is the Blood, but by Way of a Sacrament.

Again, I say, like as the Bread of the Sacrament and of Thanksgiving is called the Body of Christ given for us; so the Cup of the Lord is called the Blood which sprang from the Side of Christ. But that sacramental Bread is called the Body, because it is the Sacrament of his Body: Even so likewise the Cup is called the Blood also which flowed out of Christ's Side, because it is the Sacrament of that Blood which flowed out of his Side, instituted of the Lord himself for our singular Commodity; namely, for our spiritual Nourishment: Like as Baptism is ordained in Water to spiritual Regeneration.

Cur. The Sacrament of the Blood is not the Blood.

Rid. The Sacrament of the Blood is the Blood, and that is attributed to the Sacrament, which is spoken of the Thing of the Sacrament.

West. Here Weston repeateth Curtop's Argument in English.

* That which is in the Chalice, is the same which flowed out of Christ's Side.

* This Argument concludeth not directly, and being in the second Figure affirmative, it is not formal.

But there came out very Blood:

Ergo, There is Blood in the Chalice.

Rid. The Blood of Christ is in the Chalice indeed, but not in the real Presence, but by Grace, and in a Sacrament.

West. That is very well. Then we have Blood in the Chalice.

Rid. It is true, but by Grace, and in a Sacrament.

Here the People hissed at him.

Rid. O my Masters! I take this for no Judgment: I will stand to God's Judgment.

Wat. Good Sir, I have determined to have respect the Time, and to abstain from all those Things which may hinder the Entrance of our Disceptation: And therefore first I ask this Question; when Christ said in the Sixth of John, He that eateth my Flesh, &c. doth he signify in these Words the eating of his true and natural Flesh, or else of the Bread and Symbol?

Spiritual eating of the Flesh of Christ.

Rid. I understand that Place of the very Flesh of Christ to be eaten, but spiritually: And further I say, that the Sacrament also pertaineth unto the spiritual Manducation. For without the Spirit to eat the Sacrament is to eat it unprofitably. For whoso eateth eateth not spiritually, he eateth his own Condemnation.

Wat. I ask then whether the Eucharist be a Sacrament?

Rid. The Eucharist, taken for a Sign or Symbol, is a Sacrament.

Wat. Is it instituted of God?

Rid. It is instituted of God.

Wat. Where?

Rid. In the Supper.

Wat. With what Words is it made a Sacrament?

Rid. By the Words and Deeds which Christ

Anno 1554.

said and did, and commanded us to say and do the same.

Wat. It is a Thing commonly received of all, that the Sacraments of the new Law give Grace to them that worthily receive.

The Sacraments give no Grace, but are Instruments.

Rid. True it is, that Grace is given by the Sacrament, but as by an Instrument. The inward Virtue and Christ give the Grace through the Sacrament.

Wat. What is a Sacrament?

Sacrament defined.

Rid. I remember there be many Definitions of a Sacrament in Augustine: But I will take that which seemeth most fit for this present Purpose. A Sacrament is a visible Sign of invisible Grace.

Wat. Ergo, Grace is given to the Receivers.

Rid. The Society or Conjunction with Christ through the Holy Ghost is Grace, and by the Sacrament we are made the Members of the mystical Body of Christ, for that by the Sacrament the Part of the Body is grafted in the Head.

Wat. But there is Difference between the mystical Body, and natural Body.

Rid. There is (I grant you) a Difference, but the Head of them both is one.

† The Syllogysm is thus to be formed: The Sacrament of the New Testament hath a Promise of Grace annexed: Bread and Wine have no Promise of Grace annexed: Ergo, Bread and Wine is no Sacrament of the New Testament.

Wat. † The Eucharist is a Sacrament of the New Testament.

Ergo, It hath a Promise of Grace.

But no Promise of Grace is made to Bread and Wine:

Ergo, Bread and Wine be not the Sacraments of the New Testament.

Rid. I grant that Grace pertaineth to the Eucharist, according to this Saying, The Bread which we break, is it not the Communication or partaking of the Body of Christ? And like as he that eateth, and he that drinketh unworthily the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of the Lord, eateth and drinketh his own Damnation: Even so he that eateth and drinketh worthily, eateth Life, and drinketh Life. I grant also that there is no * Promise made to Bread and Wine. But inasmuch as they are sanctified and made the Sacraments of the Body and Blood of the Lord, they have a Promise of Grace annexed unto them; namely, of spiritual partaking of the Body of Christ to be communicated and given, not to the Bread and Wine, but to them which worthily do receive the Sacrament.

* No Promise made to Bread and Wine as they be common Bread and common Wine: But as they be sanctified and made Sacraments of the Lord's Body and Blood, they are not now called Bread and Wine, but have a Promise annexed to them: Or rather (to say the Truth) annexed to the Receivers of them.

Wat. If the Substance of Bread and Wine do remain, then the Society betwixt Christ and us is promised to them that take Bread and Wine.

But that Society is not promised to Bread and Wine, but to the Receivers of the Flesh and Blood. John 6. He that eateth my Flesh, &c.

Ergo, The Substance of Bread and Wine remaineth not.

Rid. The Promise undoubtedly is made to the Flesh and Blood, but the same is to be received in the Sacrament through Faith.

Wat. Every Sacrament hath a Promise of Grace annexed unto it.

Ergo, The Bread and Wine are not Sacraments.

Sacraments, how they have a Promise of Grace annexed, not absolutely, but instrumentally. Promise made not to the Symbols, but to the Thing of the Sacrament.

Rid. True it is, every Sacrament hath Grace annexed unto it instrumentally. But there is divers understanding of this Word [Habet] hath. For the Sacrament hath not Grace included in it; but to those that receive it well, it is turned to Grace. After that Manner the Water in Baptism hath Grace promised, and by that the Holy Spirit is given, not that Grace is included in Water, but that Grace cometh by Water.

Wat. This Promise is made to the Flesh and Blood of Christ, and not to the Bread and Wine.

Ergo, The Sacrament is not Bread and Wine, but the Body and Blood of Christ.

Rid. There is no Promise made to him that taketh common Bread and common Wine, but to him which receiveth the sanctified Bread, and Bread of the Communion, there is a large Promise of Grace made; neither is the Promise given to the Symbols, but to the Thing of the Sacrament. But the Thing of the Sacrament is the Flesh and Blood.

Wat. Every Sacrament of the New Testament giveth Grace, promised of God to those that worthily receive it.

Rid. This Sacrament hath a Promise of Grace made to those that receive it worthily, because Grace is given by it, as by an Instrument, not that Christ hath transfused Grace into the Bread and Wine.

Wat. But this Promise which is made, is not but to those that worthily receive the Flesh and Blood; not the Bread and Wine.

Rid. That Proposition of yours hath a divers Understanding. There is no Promise made to them that receive common Bread, as it were; but to those that worthily receive the sanctified Bread, there is a Promise of Grace made, like as Origen doth testify.

Wat. Where is that Promise made?

Rid. The Bread which we break, is it not a Communion of the Body of Christ? And we being many are one Bread, one Body of Christ? 1 Cor. 12.

Wat. What doth he mean by Bread in that Place?

Rid. The Bread of the Lord's Table, the Communion of the Body of Christ.

Wat. Hearken what Chrysostom saith upon that Place; The Bread which we break, is it not the Communion of Christ's Body? Wherefore did he not say, Participation? Because he would signify some great Matter, and that he would declare a great Convenience and Conjunction betwixt the same. For we do not communicate by Participation only and receiving, but also by co-uniting. For likewise as that Body is co-united to Christ, so also we by the same Bread are conjoined and united to him. Chrys. in 1 Cor. Cap. 10.

Rid. Let Chrysostom have his Manner of speaking, and his Sentence. If it be true, I reject it not. But let it not be prejudicial to me to name it true Bread. Answer to Chrysostom.

Wat. All (saith Chrysostom) which sit together at one Board, do communicate together of one true Body. What do I call (saith he) this communicating? We are all the self same Body. What doth Bread signify? The Body of Christ. What be they that receive it? The Body of Christ. For many are but one Body. Chrysostom doth interpret this Place against you. All we be one Bread, and one mystical Body, which do participate together one Bread of Christ. In 1 Cor. cap. 10.

Bread signifieth the Body after Chrysost.

One Bread one mystical Body.

Rid. All we be one mystical Body, which do communicate of one Bread in Christ, after the Efficacy of Regeneration or quickening.

Wat. Of what Manner of Bread speaketh he?

Rid. Of the Bread of the Lord's Table.

Wat. Is that Bread one?

Rid. It is one, of the Church being one, because one Bread is set forth upon the Table: And so of one Bread all together do participate which communicate at the Table of the Lord.

Wat. See how absurdly you speak. Do you say all which be from the Beginning to the End of the World?

Rid. All, I say, which at one Table together have communicated in the Mysteries might well so do. Albeit the heavenly and celestial

Bread

Bread is likewiſe one alſo, whereof the ſacramental Bread is a Myſtery: The which being one, all we together do participate.

Watſon cavilleth about the Word [All.]

Wat. A perverſe Anſwer. Which all? Mean you all Chriſtian Men.

Rid. I do diſtribute this Word [All:] For all were wont together to communicate of the one Bread divided into Parts. All, I ſay, which were one Congregation, and which all did communicate together at one Table.

Wat. What? Do you exclude then from the Body of Chriſt all them which did not communicate, being preſent?

Cyprian de Cœna Dom.

Feck. But Cyprian ſaith, Bread which no Multitude doth conſume. Which cannot be underſtood but only of the Body of Chriſt.

Rid. Alſo Cyprian in this Place did ſpeak of the true Body of Chriſt, and not of material Bread.

Mr. Feckenam's Reaſon.

Feck. Nay, rather he did there intreat of the Sacrament in that Tract De Cœna Domini, writing upon the Supper of the Lord.

Rid. Truth it is, and I grant he treateth there of the Sacrament: But alſo he doth admix ſomething therewithal of the ſpiritual Manducation.

Smith. When the Lord ſaith, This is my Body, he uſeth no tropical Speech.

Ergo, You are deceived.

Rid. I deny your Antecedent.

Auguſt. in Pſal. 33. Conc. 1.

Smith. I bring here Auguſtine in Pſal. 33. expounding theſe Words. Ferebatur in manibus ſuis, He was carried in his own Hands. How may this be underſtood to be done in Man? For no Man is carried in his own Hands, but in the Hands of others. How this may be underſtood of David after the Letter, we do not find; Of Chriſt we find it. For Chriſt was born in his own Hands, when he ſaith, This is my Body, for he carried that ſame Body in his own Hands, &c.

Auguſtine here did not ſee how this Place after the Letter could be underſtood of David, becauſe no Man can carry himſelf in his own Hands. Therefore, ſaith he, this Place is to be underſtood of Chriſt after the Letter. For Chriſt carried himſelf in his own Hands in his Supper, when he gave the Sacrament to his Diſciples, ſaying, This is my Body.

The Place of Auguſtine anſwered.

Rid. I deny your Argument, and I explicate the ſame. Auſtin could not find after his own Underſtanding how this could be underſtood of David after the Letter. Auſtin goeth here from other in this Expoſition, but I go not from him. But let this Expoſition of Auſtin be granted to you; although I know this Place of Scripture be otherwiſe read of other Men, after the Verity of the Hebrew Text, and it is alſo otherwiſe to be expounded. Yet to grant to you this Expoſition of Auſtin, I ſay yet notwithſtanding it maketh nothing againſt my Aſſertion: For Chriſt did bear himſelf in his own Hands, when he gave the Sacrament of his Body to be eaten of his Diſciples.

Smith. Ergo, It is true of Chriſt after the Letter, that he was born in his own Hands.

Rid. He was born literally, and after that Letter which was ſpoken of David: But not after the Letter of theſe Words, Hoc eſt Corpus meum.

The Place of Auſtin, how Chriſt was carried in his own Hands, ad literam, that is, literally.

I grant that St. Auſtin ſaith, that it is not found literally of David, that he carried himſelf in his own Hands, but that it is found of Chriſt. But this Word [ad literam,] literally, you do not well refer to that which was born, but rather it ought to be referred to him that did bear it. St. Auguſtine's Meaning is this; that it is not read any where in the Bible, that this carnal David, the Son of Jeſſe did bear himſelf in his Hands, but of that ſpiritual David that overthrew Goliah the Devil; that is, of Chriſt our Saviour, the Son of the Virgin, it may well be found literally, that he bare himſelf in his own Hands after a certain Manner, namely, in carrying the Sacrament of himſelf. And note, that St. Auſtin hath theſe Words, Quodam modo, after a certain Manner; which manifeſtly declare how the Doctor's Meaning is to be taken. Anno 1554.

Chriſt was born in his own Hands ſacramentally.

Smith. When then was he born in his own Hands, and after what Letter?

Rid. He was born in the Supper ſacramentally, when he ſaid, This is my Body.

Smith. Every Man may bear in his own Hands a * Figure of his Body.

* A Figure he may bear but not a Sacrament.

But Auguſtine denieth that David could carry himſelf in his Hands.

Ergo, He ſpeaketh of no Figure of his Body.

Rid. If Auſtin could have found in all the Scripture, that David had carried the Sacrament of his Body, then he would never have uſed that Expoſition of Chriſt.

Smith. Bnt he did bear himſelf in his own Hands:

Ergo, He did not bear a Figure only.

Rid. He did bear himſelf, but in a Sacrament: And Auſtin afterward addeth, Quodam modo, that is, ſacramentally.

Quodam modo.

Smith. You underſtand not what Auſtin meant when he ſaid, Quodam modo; for he meant that he did bear his very true Body in that Supper, not in Figure and Form of a Body, but in Form and Figure of Bread.

Ergo, You are holden faſt, neither are you able to eſcape out of this Labyrinth.

Dr. Weſton repeateth this Place again in Engliſh. Which done, then Dr. Treſham began thus to ſpeak, moved (as it ſeemed to Mr. Ridley) with great Zeal, and deſired that he might be in ſtead of John Baptiſt, in converting the Hearts of the Fathers, and in reducing the ſaid Biſhop Ridley again to the Mother Church. Now at the firſt, not knowing the Perſon, he thought he had been ſome good old Man, which had the Zeal of God, although not according to Knowledge, and began to anſwer him with Meekneſs and Reverence. But afterward he ſmelled a Fox under a Sheep's Cloathing.

Dr. Treſham prayeth for the converting Ridley.

God Almighty grant that it may be fulfilled in me, that was ſpoken by the Prophet Malachi of John Baptiſt, which may turn the Hearts of the Fathers to the Children, and the Hearts of the Children to their Fathers, that you at length may be converted. The wiſe Man ſaith, Son, honour thy Father, and reverence thy Mother. But you diſhonour your Father in Heaven, and pollute your Mother the holy Church here on Earth, while ye ſet not by it.

Rid. Theſe by-Words do pollute your School.

Treſh. If there were an Arian which had that ſubtle Wit that you have, he might ſoon ſhift off the Authorities of the Scripture and Fathers.

Weſt. Either diſpute, or elſe hold your Peace, I pray you.

The Decree of the Lateran Council alledged for Tranſubſtantiation.

Treſh. I bring a Place here out of the Council of Lateran, which Council repreſenting the univerſal Church, wherein were congregated three hundred Biſhops, and ſeventy Metropolitans, beſides a great Multitude of others, decreed that Bread and Wine, by the Power of God's Word, was tranſubſtantiate into the Body and Blood of the Lord. Therefore whosoever saith contrary, cannot be a Child of the Church, but an Heretick.

Rid. Good Sir, I have heard what you have cited out of the Council of Lateran, and remember that there was a great Multitude of Bishops and Metropolitans, as you said: But yet you have not numbred how many Abbots, Priors, and Friars were in that Council, who were to the Number of eight hundred.

One of the Scribes. What, will you deny then the Authority of that Council for the Multitude of those Priors?

Rid. No Sir, not so much for that Cause, as for that especially, because the Doctrine of that Council agreed not with the Word of God, as it may well appear by the Acts of that Council, which was holden under Innocent the third, a Man (if we believe the Histories) most pernicious to the Church and Common-wealth of Christ.

Tresh. What, do you not receive the Council of Lateran? Whereupon he with certain others cried, Write, write.

Bishop Ridley rejecteth the Council of Lateran.

Rid. No Sir, I receive not that Council; Write, and write again.

Good Men do eat the very true Body of Christ, both sacramentally and spiritually Tresh. Evil Men do eat the natural Body of Christ.

Ergo, The true and natural Body of Christ is on the Altar.

Rid. Evil Men do eat the very true and natural Body of Christ sacramentally, and no further, as St. Augustine saith: But good Men do eat the very true Body, both sacramentally, and spiritually by Grace.

Aug. lib. 5. contra Donatistas, cap. 8.

Tresh. I prove the contrary by Augustine, Like as Judas, to whom the Lord gave the Morsel, did offend; not in taking a Thing that was evil, but in receiving it after an evil manner, &c. And a little after, Because some do not eat unto Salvation, it followeth not therefore that it is not his Body.

Rid. It is the Body to them, that is, the Sacrament of the Body: and Judas took the Sacrament of the Lord to his Condemnation. Austin hath distinguished these Things well in another Place, where he saith, The Bread of the Lord, the Bread the Lord. Evil Men eat the Bread of the Lord, but not Bread the Lord. But good Men eat both the Bread of the Lord, and Bread the Lord.

This Weston spake in English.

West. Paul saith the Body, and you say, the Sacrament of the Body.

Rid. Paul meaneth so indeed.

Wat. You understand it evil concerning the Sign: For the Fathers say, that evil Men do eat him which descended from Heaven.

The old Doctors do use many Times the Sacrament for the Matter of the Sacrament.

Rid. They eat him indeed, but sacramentally. The Fathers use many Times the Sacrament for the Matter of the Sacrament, and all that same Place maketh against you; and so here he cited the Place.

West. I bring Theophylact, which saith: That Judas did taste the Body of the Lord. The Lord did shew the Cruelty of Judas, who, when he was rebuked, did not understand, and tasted the Lord's Flesh, &c.

Rid. This Phrase to Divines is well known, and used by the Doctors. He tasted the Flesh of the Lord, [Insensibly,] that is, the Sacrament of the Lord's Flesh.

West. Chrysostom saith, That the same Punishment remaineth to them which receive the Body of the Lord unworthily, as to them which crucified him.

Rid. That is, because they defile the Lord's Body: for evil Men do eat the Body of Christ sacramentally, but good Men eat both the Sacrament and the Matter of the Sacrament.

Wat. You reject the Council of Lateran, because (you say) it agreeth not with God's Word. What say you then to the Council of Nice? The Words of the Council be these, Let us not look a-low by the ground upon the Bread and the Drink set before us, but lifting up our Mind let us faithfully believe, there upon the holy Table to lie the Lamb of God taking away the Sins of the World, being sacrificed of the Priests.

Rid. That Council was collected out of ancient Fathers, and is to me a great Authority; for it saith, That Bread is set upon the Altar, and having our Minds lifted up, we must consider him which is in Heaven. The Words of the Council make for me.

Wat. [Exaltata mente] with a Mind exalted: that is, not as brute Beasts at the Rack or Manger, having an Eye only upon the Thing that is set before them. The * Lamb of God lieth on the Table, saith the Council.

* If the Lamb of God lie really upon the Table, then why doth the Council bid us lift up our Minds, which rather should bid us let down our Minds to the Altar? The Place of the Nicene Council expounded Rid. The Lamb of God is in Heaven, according to the Verity of the Body: and here he is with us in a Mystery, according to his Power, not corporally.

Wat. But the Lamb of God lyeth on the Table.

Rid. It is a figurative Speech, for in our Mind we understand him which is in Heaven.

Wat. But he lyeth there, the Greek Word is κεῖται.

Rid. He lyeth there, that is, he is here present, not corporally, but he lyeth there in his Operation.

Wat. He lyeth, but his Operation lyeth not.

Rid. You think very grosly of the Sitting or Lying of the celestial Lamb on the Table of the Lord. For we may not imagine any such Sitting or Lying upon the Table, as the Reason of Man would judge: but all Things are here to be understood spiritually. For that heavenly Lamb is (as I confess) on the Table, but by a spiritual Presence, by Grace, and not after any corporal Substance of his Flesh taken of the Virgin Mary.

De consecrat. dist. 2.

And indeed the same Canon doth plainly teach, that the Bread which is set on the Table is material Bread; and therefore it (the Canon I mean) commandeth that we should not creep on the Ground in our Cogitation, to those Things which are set before us; as who should say, what other Things are they (as much as pertaineth to their true Substance) than Bread and Wine? but rather, saith the Canon, lifting up our Minds into Heaven, let us consider with Faith the Lamb of God which taketh away the Sins of the World, sitting or lying upon the Table. For a lifted up Faith, saith he, seeth him which sitteth on the right Hand of God the Father, after the true Manner of a Body set by Grace on the Lord's Table, and taking away the Sins of the World. For I think you mean not so, as tho' the Lamb did lie there prostrate with his Members spread upon the Table.

Another Place of the Nicene council alledged.

Smith. I bring another Place out of the Council of Nice: None of the Apostles said, this is a Figure of the Body of Christ: None of the reverend Elders said, the unbloody Sacrifice of the Altar to be a Figure.

Ergo, You are deceived.

Rid. This Canon is not in the Council of Nice. For I have read over this Council many Times.

Then came in another whom Mr. Ridley

Out of Dr. Ridley's Copy.

knew not, and ſaid, The univerſal Church both of the Greeks and Latines, of the Eaſt and of the Weſt, have agreed in the Council of Florence uniformly in the Doctrine of the Sacrament, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is the true and real Body.

The Council of Florence alledged.

Rid. I deny the Greek and the Eaſt Church to have agreed either in the Council at Florence or at any Time elſe with the Romiſh Church, in the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation of Bread into the Body of Chriſt. For there was nothing in the Council of Florence, wherein the Greeks would agree with the Romaniſts; albeit hitherto I confeſs it was left for every Church to uſe, as they were wont, leavened or unleavened Bread.

Here cried out Dr. Cole, and ſaid, they agreed together concerning Tranſubſtantiation of Bread into the Body of Chriſt. Mr. Ridley ſaid that could not be.

One of the Scribes.

Here ſtarted up another unknown to Mr. Ridley, but thought to be one of the Scribes, who affirmed with him, that indeed there was nothing decreed concerning Tranſubſtantiation; the Council left that as a Matter not meet nor worthy to diſturb the Peace and Concord of the Church. To whom Mr. Ridley anſwered again, ſaying, that he ſaid the Truth.

Mr. Pie diſputeth againſt Biſhop Ridley.

Pie. What ſay you to that Council, where it is ſaid, that the Prieſt doth offer an unbloody Sacrifice of the Body of Chriſt?

Rid. I ſay, it is well ſaid, if it be rightly underſtood.

Sacrifice called unbloody is nothing elſe but a Repreſentation of the bloody Sacrifice of Chriſt.

Pie. But he offereth an unbloody Sacrifice.

Rid. It was called unbloody, and is offered after a certain Manner, and in a Myſtery, and as a Repreſentation of that bloody Sacrifice, and he doth not lye which ſaith Chriſt to be offered.

Weſt. I with one Argument will throw down to the Ground your Opinion out of Chryſoſtom, Hom. 24. in 1. ad Cor. And I will teach, not only a Figure and a Sign, or Grace only, but the very ſame Body, which was here converſant on the Earth to be in the Euchariſt.

This Argument after the Diſpoſition and Terms, as it ſtandeth, is not formal.

We worſhip the ſelf ſame Body in the Euchariſt which the wiſe Men did worſhip in the Manger.

But that was his natural and real Body, not ſpiritual.

Ergo, The real Body of Chriſt is in the Euchariſt.

Again, the ſame Chryſoſtom ſaith, We have not here the Lord in the Manger, but on the Altar. Here a Woman holdeth him not in her Hands, but a Prieſt.

Rid. We worſhip, I confeſs, the ſame true Lord and Saviour of the World, which the wiſe Men worſhipped in the Manger, howbeit we do it in a Myſtery, and in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and that in ſpiritual Liberty, as ſaith St. Auſt. l. 3. De Doctrina Chriſtiana: not in carnal Servitude; that is, we do not worſhip ſervilely the Signs for the Things: For that ſhould be, as he alſo ſaith, a Part of a ſervile Infirmity. But we behold with the Eyes of Faith him preſent after Grace, and ſpiritually ſet upon the Table; and we worſhip him which ſitteth above, and is worſhipped of the Angels. For Chriſt is always aſſiſtant to his Myſteries, as the ſaid Auguſtine ſaith. And the Divine Majeſty, as Cyprian ſaith, doth never abſent itſelf from the divine Myſteries; but this Aſſiſtance and Preſence of Chriſt, as in Baptiſm it is wholly ſpiritual, and by Grace, and not by any corporal Subſtance of the Fleſh: even ſo it is here in the Lord's Supper, being rightly and according to the Word of God duly miniſtred.

Weſt. That which the Woman did hold in her Womb, the ſame Thing holdeth the Prieſt. Anno 1554.

Rid. I grant the Prieſt holdeth the ſame Thing but after another Manner. She did hold the natural Body; the Prieſt holdeth the Myſtery of the Body. The ſame Thing, but the Manner divers.

Weſt. Weſton repeateth again his Argument out of Chryſoſtom in Engliſh.

Rid. I ſay that the Author meant it ſpiritually.

Dr. Weſton here diſſolving the Diſputations, had theſe Words: Here you ſee the ſtubborn, the boaſting, the crafty, the unconſtant Mind of this Man. Here you ſee, this Day, that the Strength of the Truth is without Foil. Therefore I beſeech you all moſt earneſtly to blow the Note; and he began, and they followed, Verity hath the Victory, Verity hath the Victory. Dr. Weſton bloweth up the Triumph.

The Diſputation had at Oxford, April 18, 1554. between Mr. Hugh Latimer, Anſwerer; and Mr. Smith and others, Oppoſers.

AFTER theſe Diſputations of Biſhop Ridley were ended, Mr. Hugh Latimer was next brought out to diſpute, upon Wedneſday April 18. Which Diſputation began at eight of the Clock, in ſuch Form as before: But it was moſt in Engliſh. For Mr. Latimer alledged, that he was out of Uſe with the Latin, and unfit for that Place.

There replied unto him Mr. Smith of Oriel College, Dr. Cartwright, Mr. Harpsfield, and ſeveral others had Snatches at him, and gave him bitter Taunts. He eſcaped no Hiſſings and ſcornful Laughings, no more than they that went before him. He was very faint, and deſired that he might not long tarry. He durſt not drink for fear of vomiting. The Diſputation ended before eleven of the Clock. Mr. Latimer was not ſuffered to read what he had, as he ſaid, painfully written: but it was exhibited up, and the Prolocutor read Part thereof, and ſo proceeded unto the Diſputation. Mr. Latimer not permitted to read what he had painfully written.

Men and Brethren, we are come together this Day (by the Help of God) to vanquiſh the Strength of the Arguments, and diſperſed Opinions of Adverſaries, againſt the Truth of the real Preſence of the Lord's Body in the Sacrament. And therefore, you Father, if you have any Thing to anſwer, I do admoniſh that you anſwer in ſhort and few Words.

Latimer. I pray you good Maſter Prolocutor, do not exact that of me which is not in me, I have not theſe twenty Years much uſed the Latin Tongue. Mr. Latimer requireth to diſpute in the Engliſh Tongue.

Weſt. Take your Eaſe, Father.

Lat. I thank you Sir, I am well; let me here proteſt my Faith, for I am not able to diſpute: and afterwards do your Pleaſure with me.

The Proteſtation of Mr. Hugh Latimer, given up in Writing to Doctor Weſton.

The Concluſions whereunto I muſt anſwer, are theſe:

1. The firſt is, That in the Sacrament of the Altar by the Virtue of God's Word pronounced nounced by the Prieſt, there is really preſent the natural Body of Chriſt, conceived of the Virgin Mary, under the Kinds of the Appearance of Bread and Wine; in like manner his Blood.

Anno 1554.

2. The ſecond is, That after Conſecration there remaineth no Subſtance of Bread and Wine, nor any other Subſtance, but the Subſtance of God and Man.

3. The third is, That in the Maſs there is the lively Sacrifice of the Church, which is propitiable, as well for the Sins of the Quick, as of the Dead.

The Anſwer of Mr. Latimer, given up in Writing concerning the Queſtions aforeſaid.

Concerning the firſt Concluſions, me thinketh it is ſet forth with certain new found Terms that be obſcure, and do not ſound according to the Speech of the Scripture. Howbeit, howſoever I underſtand it, this I do anſwer plainly, tho' not without Peril; I anſwer, I ſay, that to the right Celebration of the Lord's Supper, there is no other Preſence of Chriſt required, than a ſpiritual Preſence: and this Preſence is ſufficient for a Chriſtian Man, as a Preſence by which we abide in Chriſt, and Chriſt abideth in us, to the obtaining of eternal Life, if we perſevere. And this ſame Preſence, may be called moſt fitly a real Preſence, that is, a Preſence not feigned, but a true and a faithful Preſence. Which Thing I here rehearſe, leſt ſome Sycophant or Scorner ſhould ſuppoſe me, with the Anabaptiſts, to make nothing elſe of the Sacrament, but a naked and a bare Sign. As for that which is feigned of many concerning their corporal Preſence, I for my Part take it but for a papiſtical Invention; therefore think it utterly to be jected.

The Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, how it is a real Preſence.

Anſwer to the ſecond Concluſion

Concerning the ſecond Concluſion, I dare be bold to ſay, that it hath no Stay or Ground in God's Word, but is a Thing invented and found out by Man; and therefore to be taken as fond and falſe: and I had almoſt ſaid, as the Mother and Nurſe of the other Errors. It were good for my Lords and Maſters of the Tranſubſtantiation, to take Heed leſt they conſpire with the Neſtorians, for I do not ſee how they can avoid it.

Anſwer to the third Concluſion

The third Concluſion, (as I do underſtand it) ſeemeth ſubtily to ſow Sedition againſt the Offering which Chriſt himſelf offered for us in his own proper Perſon, according to that pithy Place of Paul, Heb. 1. Where he ſaith, That Chriſt his own ſelf, hath made Purgation of our Sins. And afterward, That he might, ſaith he, be a merciful and faithful Biſhop, concerning thoſe Things which are to be done with God, for the taking away of our Sins. So that the Expiation or Taking away of our Sins may be thought rather to depend on this, that Chriſt was an offering Biſhop, than that he was offered, were it not that he was offered of himſelf: and therefore it is needleſs that he ſhould be offered of any other. I will ſpeak nothing of the wonderful Preſumption of Man, to dare to attempt this Thing without a manifeſt Vocation, ſpecially in that it tendeth to the Overthrowing and making fruitleſs (if not wholly, yet partly) of the Croſs of Chriſt; for truly it is no baſe or mean Thing to offer Chriſt. And therefore worthily a Man may ſay to my Lords and Maſters the Offerers, By what Authority do ye this? And who gave you this Authority? Where? When? A Man cannot (ſaith the Baptiſt) take any Thing except it be given him from above: Much leſs then may any Man preſume to uſurp any Honour, before he be thereto called. Again, If any Man

The taking away of Sins dependeth rather in the Perſon of the Offerer, than in the Thing offered, but that he that was the Offerer was offered himſelf.

ſin (ſaith St. John) we have (ſaith he) not a Maſter or Offerer at home, which can ſacrifice for us at Maſs, but we have (ſaith he) an Advocate Jeſus Chriſt, which once offered himſelf long ago; of which Offering the Efficacy and Effect is perdurable for ever, ſo that it is needleſs to have ſuch Offerers.

What meaneth Paul, when he ſaith, They that ſerve at the Altar, are Partakers of the Altar? and ſo addeth, So the Lord hath ordained, that they that preach the Goſpel, ſhall live of the Goſpel. Whereas he ſhould have ſaid, The Lord hath ordained, that they that ſacrifice at Maſs, ſhould live of their Sacrificing, that there might be a Living aſſigned to our Sacrificers now, as was before Chriſt's coming to the Jewiſh Prieſts. For now they have nothing to alledge for their living, as they that be Preachers have. So that it appeareth, that the ſacrificing Prieſthood is changed by God's Ordinance into a preaching Prieſthood, and the ſacrificing Prieſthood ſhould ceaſe utterly, ſaying in as much as all Chriſtian Men are ſacrificing Prieſts.

The ſacrificing Prieſthood changed into a preaching Prieſthood

The Supper of the Lord was inſtituted to provoke us to Thankſgiving for the Offering which the Lord himſelf did offer for us, much rather than that our Offerers ſhould do there as they do. Feed (ſaith Peter) as much as ye may the Flock of Chriſt: Nay rather let us ſacrifice as much as we may for the Flock of Chriſt. If ſo be the Matter be as now Men make it, I can never wonder enough, that Peter would or could forget this Office of ſacrificing, which at this Day is in ſuch a Price and Eſtimation, that to feed is almoſt nothing with many. If thou ceaſe from feeding the Flock, how ſhalt thou be taken? Truly catholick enough. But if thou ceaſe from ſacrificing and maſſing, how will that be taken? at the leaſt, I warrant thee, thou ſhalt be called an Heretick.

The final Cauſe why the Lord's Supper was chiefly ordained.

Sacrificing taketh away preaching.

And whence, I pray you, come theſe papiſtical Judgments? Except perchance they think a Man feedeth the Flock in ſacrificing for them: and then what needeth there any learned Paſtors? For no Man is ſo fooliſh, but ſoon may he learn to ſacrifice and Maſs it.

Prepoſterous judgment of Papiſts.

Thus lo, I have taken the more Pains to write, becauſe I refuſed to diſpute, in Conſideration of my Debility thereunto: that all Men may know, how that I have ſo done not without great Pains, having not any Man to help me, as I have never before been debarred to have. O Sir, you may chance to live till you come to this Age and Weakneſs that I am of. I have ſpoken in my Time before two Kings more than once, two or three Hours together, without Interruption: But now, that I may ſpeak the Truth (by your Leave) I could not be ſuffered to declare my Mind before you, no, not by the Space of a Quarter of an Hour, without Snatches, Revilings, Checks, Rebukes, Taunts, ſuch as I have not felt the like, in ſuch an Audience, all my Life long. Surely it cannot be but an heinous Offence that I have given. But what was it? Forſooth I had ſpoken of the four Marrow Bones of the Maſs. Which Kind of ſpeaking I never read to be a Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Mr Latimer found more Audience with Kings and Princes, than with ruſtical Divines.

I could not be allowed to ſhew what I meant by my Metaphor: But Sir, now by your Favour I will tell your Maſterſhip what I mean.

The firſt is the Popiſh Conſecration, which hath been call a God's Body-making.

The ſecond is Tranſubſtantiation.

The third is maſſal Oblation.

The fourth Adoration.

The four Marrow Bones of the Maſs expounded by Mr. Latimer.

Theſe

Conſecration, Tranſubſtantiation, Oblation, Adoration.

Theſe chief and principal Portions, Parts and Points belonging or incident to the Maſs, and moſt eſteemed and had in Price in the ſame, I call the Marow-bones of the Maſs; which indeed you, by Force, Might, and Violence intrude in Sound of Words in ſome of the Scripture, with racking and cramping, injuring and wronging the ſame: But elſe indeed, plain out of the Scripture, as I am thoroughly perſuaded, although in Diſputation I now could nothing do to perſuade the ſame to others, being both unapt to ſtudy, and alſo to make a Shew of my former Study in ſuch Readineſs as ſhould be requiſite to the ſame.

I have heard much Talk of Mr. Doctor Weſton to and fro in my Time: But I never knew your Perſon to my Knowledge, till I came before you, as the Queen's Majeſty's Commiſſioner. I pray God ſend you ſo right Judgment, as I perceive you have a great Wit, great Learning, with many other Qualities. God give you Grace ever well to uſe them, and ever to have in Remembrance, that he that dwelleth on high, looketh on the low Things on the Earth; and that there is no Council againſt the Lord; and alſo that this World hath been, and yet is a tottering World. And yet again, that tho' we muſt obey the Princes, yet that hath this Limitation, namely, in the Lord. For who ſo doth obey them againſt the Lord, they be moſt pernicious to them, and the greateſt Adverſaries that they have: For they ſo procure God's Vengeance upon them, if God be only the Ruler of Things.

Obedience to Princes hath its Limitation.

There be ſome ſo corrupt in Mind, the Truth being taken from them, that they think Gain to be Godlineſs; great learned Men, and yet Men of no Learning, but of railing, and raging about Queſtions and Strife of Words. I call them Men of no Learning, becauſe they know not Chriſt, how much elſe ſoever they know. And on this Sort we are wont to call great learned Clerks, being ignorant of Chriſt, unlearned Men; for it is nothing but plain Ignorance, to know any Thing without Chriſt: Whereas who ſo knoweth Chriſt, the ſame hath Knowledge enough, although in other Knowledge he be to ſeek. The Apoſtle St. Paul confeſſeth of himſelf to the Corinthians, that he did know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt crucified. Many Men babble many Things of Chriſt which yet know not Chriſt; but pretending Chriſt, do craftily colour and darken his Glory. Depart from ſuch Men, ſaith the Apoſtle St. Paul to Timothy.

Knowledge without Chriſt is mere Ignorance.

Many there be which under Pretence of Chriſt darken the Glory of Chriſt.

It is not out of the Way to remember what St. Auguſtine ſaith. The Place where, I now now well remember not, except it be againſt the Epiſtles of Petitian; Whoſoever, ſaith he, teacheth any Thing neceſſarily to be believed, which is not contained in the Old and New Teſtament, the ſame is accurſed. Oh! beware of this Curſe if you be wiſe. I am much deceived if Baſilius have not ſuch like Words; Whoſoever, ſaith he, is beſides the holy Scripture, if the ſame be taught as neceſſarily to be believed, that is Sin. Oh therefore take Heed of this Sin!

There be ſome that ſpeak many falſe Things more probable, and more like to the Truth, than the Truth itſelf. Therefore Paul giveth a Watch-word; Let no Man, ſaith he, deceive you with Probability and Perſuaſions of Words. But what mean you, ſaith one, by this Talk ſo far from the Matter? Well, I hope, good Maſters, you will ſuffer an old Man a little to play the Child, and to ſpeak one Thing twice. O Lord God! you have changed the moſt holy Communion into a private Action; and you deny to the Laity the Lord's Cup, contrary to Chriſt's Commandment: And you do blemiſh the Annunciation of the Lord's Death till he come: For you have changed the Common Prayer, called the Divine Service, with the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, from the vulgar and known Language, into a ſtrange Tongue, contrary to the Will of the Lord revealed in his Word. God open the Door of your Heart, to ſee the Things you ſhould ſee herein. I would as fain obey my Sovereign as any in this Realm: But in theſe Things I can never do it with an upright Conſcience. God be merciful unto us. Amen.

Anno 1554.

The Abſurdities of the Papiſts opened in abaſing the Lord's Supper.

Weſt. Then refuſe you to diſpute? Will you here then ſubſcribe?

Lat. No, good Maſter, I pray be good to an old Man. You may, if it pleaſe God, be once old, as I am: You may come to this Age, and to this Debility.

But God ſaw it good that Dr. Weſton never came to this Age.

Weſt. Ye ſaid upon Saturday laſt, that ye could not find the Maſs, nor the Marrow-bones thereof in your Book: But we will find a Maſs in that Book.

Lat. No, good Mr. Doctor, ye cannot.

Weſt. What find you then there?

Lat. Forſooth a Communion I find there.

Weſt. Which Communion, * the firſt or the laſt?

* By this firſt and ſecond Communion, he meaneth the two Books of publick Order ſet forth in King Edward's Days, the one in the Beginning, the other in the latter End of his Reign.

Lat. I find no great Diverſity in them; they are one Supper of the Lord: But I like the laſt very well.

Weſt. The firſt was naught belike.

Lat. I do not well remember wherein they differ.

Weſt. Then Cake Bread and Loaf Bread are all one with you. Ye call it the Supper of the Lord, but you are deceived in that: For they had done the Supper before, and therefore the Scripture ſaith, After they had ſupped. For ye know that St. Paul findeth Fault with the Corinthians, for that ſome of them were drunken at this Suppper; and ye know no Man can be drunken at your Communion.

Dr. Weſton cavilleth againſt the Name of the Lord's Supper.

Lat. The Firſt were called [Cæna Judaica] The Jewiſh Supper, when they did eat the Paſchal Lamb together; the other was called [Cæna Dominica] The Lord's Supper.

Weſt. That is falſe; for Chryſoſtom denieth that. And St. Ambroſe in Cap. 10. Prioris ad Corinthios, ſaith, that The Myſtery of the Sacrament, given as they were at Supper, is not the Supper of the Lord.

And Gregory Nazianzene ſaith the ſame, Again he kept the holy Feaſt of Paſſover with his Diſciples in the dining Chamber after the Supper, and one Day before his Paſſion. But we keep it both in the Churches and Houſes of Prayer, both before the Supper, and alſo after the Reſurrection.

And that firſt Supper was called ἀγάπη: Can you tell what that is?

So were the Feaſts called wont to be given to the Poor.

Lat. I underſtand no Greek. Yet I think it meaneth Charity.

Weſt. Will you have all Things done that Chriſt did then? Why, then muſt the Prieſt be hanged on the Morrow? And where find you, I pray you, that a Woman ſhould receive the Sacrament?

Lat. Will you give me leave to turn my Book? I find it in the 11 Chapter to the Corinthians. I trow theſe be his Words, Probet autem ſeipſum homo, &c.

Weſton oppoſed in his Grammar.

I pray you, good Maſter, what Gender is Homo.

Weſt.

Anno 1554.

West. Marry the common Gender.

Cole. It is in the Greek, ὁ ἄνθρωπος.

Harps. It is ἄνηρ, that is, Vir.

Lat. It is in my Book of Erasmus's Translation, Probet seipsum homo.

Feck. It is Probet seipsum indeed, and therefore it importeth the Masculine Gender.

Lat. What then? I trow when the Woman touched Christ, he said, Quis tetigit me? Scio quod aliquis me tetigit; that is, Who touched me? I know that some Man touched me.

West. I will be at Host with you anon. When Christ was at his Supper, none were with him but his Apostles only.

Ergo, He meant no Woman, if you will have his Institution kept.

Lat. In the twelve Apostles was represented the whole Church, in which you will grant both Men and Women to be.

West. So through the whole heretical translated Bible ye never make Mention of Priest, till ye come to the putting of Christ to Death. Where find you then that a Priest or Minister (a Minstrel I may call him well enough) should do it of Necessity?

Lat. A Minister is a more fit Name for that Office; for the Name of a Priest importeth a Sacrifice.

West. Well, remember that ye cannot find that a Woman may receive by Scripture. Mr. Opponent fall to it.

Smith. Because I perceive that this Charge is laid upon my Neck to dispute with you: To the End that the same may go forward after a right Manner and Order, I will propose three Questions, so as they are put forth unto me. And first I ask this Question of you, although the same indeed ought not to be called in Question: But such is the Condition of the Church, that it is always vexed of the wicked Sort. I ask, I say, whether Christ's Body be really in the Sacrament?

Mr. Latimer modestly maketh himself unable to dispute.

Lat. I trust I have obtained of Mr. Prolocutor, that no Man shall exact that Thing of me which is not in me. And I am sorry that this worshipful Audience should be deceived of their Expectation for my Sake. I have given up my Mind in Writing to Mr. Prolocutor.

Smith. Whatsoever ye have given up, it shall be registred among the Acts.

Lat. Disputation requireth a good Memory; my Memory is gone clean, and marvellously weakened, and never the better for the Prison.

West. How long have ye been in Prison?

Lat. This three Quarters of this Year.

West. And I was in Prison six Years.

Lat. The more Pity, Sir.

West. How long have you been of this Opinion.

Lat. It is not long, Sir, that I have been of this Opinion.

West. The Time hath been when you said Mass full devoutly.

Lat. Yea, I cry God Mercy heartily for it.

Then they hiss'd and clap'd their Hands at him.

West. Where learned you this new Fanglenes.

Lat. I have long sought for the Truth in this Matter of the Sacrament, and have not been of this Mind past seven Years: And my Lord of Canterbury's Book hath especially confirmed my Judgment herein. If I could remember all therein contained, I would not fear to answer any Man in this Matter.

Mr. Latimer confirmed by Dr. Cranmer's Book.

Tresh. There are in that Book six hundred Errors.

West. You were once a Lutheran.

Lat. No, I was a Papist: For I never could perceive how Luther could defend his Opinion without Transubstantiation. The Tygurines once did write a Book against Luther, and I oft desired God, that he might live so long to make them Answer.

The Zeal of Mr. Latimer sometimes in Popery against the Tygurines.

West. Luther in his Book, De privata missa, said, That the Devil reasoned with him, and persuaded him that the Mass was not good; Fol. 14. Contigit me, &c. Whereof it may appear, that Luther said Mass, and the Devil dissuaded him from it.

In that Book the Devil doth not dissuade him so much from saying Mass, as he laboureth to bring him to Desparation for Mass: Such Temptations many Times happen to good Men.

Lat. I do not take in hand here to defend Luther's Sayings or Doings. If he were here, he would defend himself well enough. I told you before that I am not meet for Disputations. I pray you read mine Answer, wherein I have declared my Faith.

West. Do you believe this as you have written?

Lat. Yea, Sir.

West. Then have you no Faith.

Lat. Then would I be sorry, Sir.

Tresh. It is written, Except ye shall eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye shall have no Life in you. Which when the Capernaites, and many of Christ's Disciples heard, they said, This is a hard Saying, &c. Now that the Truth may the better appear, here I ask of you, Whether Christ speaking these Words, did mean of his Flesh to be eaten with the Mouth, or of the spiritual eating of the same?

John 6. Here Dr. Tresham began to dispute in Latin.

Lat. I answer (as Augustine understandeth) that Christ meant of the spiritual eating of his Flesh.

Tresh. Of what Flesh meant Christ, his true Flesh, or no?

Lat. Of his true Flesh, spiritually to be eaten in the Supper by Faith, and not corporally.

Tresh. Of what Flesh mean the Capernaites?

Lat. Of his true Flesh also; but to be eaten with the Mouth.

Tresh. They, as ye confess, did mean his true Flesh to be eaten with the Mouth. And Christ also (as I shall prove) did speak of the receiving of his Flesh with the Mouth.

Dr. Tresham's Argument without Form or Mood, concluding affirmatively in the second Figure.

Ergo, They both did understand it of the eating of one Thing, which is done by the Mouth of the Body.

Lat. I say, Christ understood it not of the bodily Mouth; but of the Mouth of the Spirit, Mind, and Heart.

Tresh. I prove the contrary, that Christ understandeth it of the eating with the bodily Mouth. For whereas Custom is a right good Mistress and Interpreter of Things, and whereas the Acts put in Practice by Christ, do certainly declare those Things which he first spake: Christ's Deeds in his Supper, where he gave his Body to be taken with the Mouth, together with the Custom which hath been ever since that Time of that eating which is done with the Mouth, doth evidently infer that Christ did understand his Words, here cited of me out of the Sixth of John, of the eating with the Mouth.

Dr. Tresham flieth to Custom.

Lat. He gave not his Body to be received with the Mouth, but he gave the Sacrament of his Body to be received with the Mouth: He gave the Sacrament to the Mouth, his Body to the Mind.

The Sacrament given to the Mouth, the Body to Faith.

Tresh. But my Reason doth conclude, That Christ spake concerning his Flesh to be received with the corporal Mouth; for otherwise (which God forbid) he had been a Deceiver, and had been offensive to the Capernaites and his Disciples, if he had not meant in this Point as they thought he meant: For if he had thought as you do feign, it had been an eaſy Matter for him to have ſaid, * You ſhall not eat my Fleſh with your Mouth, but the Sacrament of my Fleſh; that is to ſay, Ye ſhall receive with your Mouth not the Thing itſelf, but the Figure of the Thing, and thus he might have ſatisfied them: But ſo he ſaid not, but continued in the Truth of his Words, as he was wont. Therefore Chriſt meant the ſelf ſame Thing that the Capernaites did, I mean concerning the Thing itſelf to be received with the Mouth, videlicet, that his true Fleſh is truly to be eaten with the Mouth. Moreover, foraſmuch as you do expound for [Corpus Chriſti] the Body of Chriſt [Sacramentum corporis Chriſti] the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt, and hereby do ſuppoſe that we obtain but a ſpiritual Union, or Union of the Mind between us and Chriſt, plain it is, that you are deceived in this Thing, and do err from the Mind of the Fathers: For they affirm by plain and expreſs Words, that we are corporally and carnally joined together. And theſe be the Words of Hilary, Therefore if Chriſt did truly take the Fleſh of our Body upon him, and the ſame Man be Chriſt indeed which was born of Mary; then we alſo do receive under a Myſtery the Fleſh of his Body indeed, and thereby ſhall become one, becauſe the Father is in him, and he in us. How is the Unity of Will affirmed, when a natural Propriety by the Sacrament is a perfect Sacrament of Unity?

* And what doth Chriſt elſe mean by theſe Words where he ſaith, My Words be Spirit and Life, the Fleſh profiteth nothing?

Mr. Latimer charged to preach the contrary Doctrine before King Henry VIII. at Greenwich.

Thus far hath Hilary. Lo here you ſee how manifeſtly theſe Words confound your Aſſertion. To be ſhort, I myſelf have heard you preaching at Greenwich before King Henry the Eighth, where you did openly affirm, That no Chriſtian Man ought to doubt of the true and real Preſence of Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament, foraſmuch as he had the Word of Scripture on his Side, [videlicet,] Hoc eſt Corpus meum, This is my Body: Whereby he might be confirmed. But now there is the ſame Truth: The Word of Scripture hath the ſelf ſame Thing which it then had. Therefore why do you deny at this preſent that, whereof it was not lawful once to doubt before when you taught it.

Lat. Will you give me leave to ſpeak?

Treſh. Speak Latin, I pray you, for ye can do it, if ye liſt, promptly enough.

Lat. I cannot ſpeak Latin ſo long and ſo largely. Mr. Prolocutor hath given me leave to ſpeak Engliſh. And as for the Words of Hilary, I think they make not ſo much for you. But he that ſhall anſwer the Doctors had not need to be in my Caſe, but ſhould have them in a Readineſs, and know their Purpoſe. Melanctbon ſaith, If the Doctors had foreſeen that they ſhould have been ſo taken in this Controverſy, they would have written more plainly.

Melanctbon's Judgment of the old Doctors.

Smith. I will reduce the Words of Hilary into the Form of a Syllogiſm.

Such as is the Unity of our Fleſh with Chriſt's Fleſh, ſuch (yea greater) is the Unity of Chriſt with the Father.

But the Unity of Chriſt's Fleſh with ours is true and ſubſtantial.

Ergo, The Unity of Chriſt with the Father is true and ſubſtantial.

Lat. I underſtand you not.

Dr. Seaton reaſoneth againſt Mr. Latimer out of Cyprian.

Seaton. I know your Learning well enough and how ſubtle ye be: I will uſe a few Words with you, and that out of Cyprian, De cœna Domini. The Old Teſtament doth forbid the drinking of Blood; The New Teſtament doth command the drinking and taſting of Blood: But where doth it command the drinking of Blood? Anno 1554.

Lat. In theſe Words, Bibite ex hoc omnes; that is, Drink ye all of this.

Seat. Then we taſte true Blood.

Lat. We do taſte true Blood, but ſpiritually; and this is enough.

Seat. Nay, the Old and New Teſtament in this do * differ; for the one doth command, and the other doth forbid to drink Blood.

* By that Reaſon the New and Old Teſtament ſhould not differ, but ſhould be contrary one from the other, which cannot be true in natural or moral Precepts.

Lat. It is true as touching the Matter, but not as touching the Manner of the Thing.

Seat. Then there is no Difference between the drinking of Blood in the New Teſtament, and that of the Old; for they alſo drank ſpiritually.

Lat. And we drink ſpiritually alſo, but a more precious Blood.

Weſt. Auguſtine upon the 45th Pſalm, ſaith, Drink boldly the Blood which ye have poured out.

Ergo, It is Blood.

Lat. I never denied it, nor ever will I go from it, but that we drink the very Blood of Chriſt indeed, but ſpiritually: For the ſame St. Auguſtine ſaith, Believe, and thou haſt eaten.

Weſt. Nay, to believe, is not to drink or eat. You will not ſay, I pledge you, when I ſay, I believe in God.

Lat. Is not [Manducare] To eat, in your Learning put for [Credere] To believe?

Weſt. I remember my Lord Chancellor demanded of Mr. Hooper theſe Queſtions, Whether [* Edere] To eat, where [Credere] To believe, and [Altare] an Altar, were Chriſt in all the Scripture, &c. And he anſwered, Yea.

* Edere in ſome Places is taken for Credere; but that in all Places it is ſo taken, it followeth not.

Then ſaid my Lord Chancellor, Why then [† Habemus altare de quo non licet edere] that is, We have an Altar, of which it is not lawful to eat, is as much to ſay, as [Habemus Chriſtum, in quo non licet credere] We have a Chriſt, in whom we may not believe.

† This Place of the Hebrews alludeth to the old Sacrifice of the Jews, who, in the Feaſt of Propitiation the tenth Day, uſed to carry the Fleſh of the Sacrifice out of the Tents to be burned on an Altar without, becauſe none of them which ſerved in the Tabercle ſhould eat thereof: only the Blood was carried by the High Prieſt into the Holy Place.

Treſh. Believe, and thou haſt eaten, is ſpoken of the ſpiritual eating.

Lat. It is true, I do allow your Saying; I take it ſo alſo.

Weſt. We are commanded to drink Blood in the new Law.

Ergo, It is very Blood.

Lat. We drink Blood ſo as appertaineth to us to drink to our Comfort, in ſacramental Wine. We drink Blood ſacramentally: He gave us his Blood to drink ſpiritually, he went about to ſhew, that as certainly as we drink Wine, ſo certainly we drink his Blood ſpiritually.

Weſt. Do not you ſeem to be a Papiſt, which do bring in new Words, not found in Scripture? Where find you that [Sacramentaliter] Sacramentally, in God's Book?

Lat. It is neceſſarily gathered upon Scripture.

Weſt. The Old Teſtament doth forbid the taſting of Blood, but the New doth command it.

Lat. It is true, not as touching the Thing, but as touching the Manner thereof.

Weſt. Hear ye People, this is the Argument:

That which was forbidden in the Old Teſtament, is commanded in the New.

To drink Blood was forbidden in the Old Teſtament, and commanded in the New.

This Argument becauſe the Major thereof is not univerſal, is not formal, and may well be retorted againſt Weſton thus.

No natural or moral Thing, forbidden materially in the Old Teſtament, is commanded in the New.

Weſton's Argument retorted againſt himſelf.

Anno 1554.

To drink Man's natural Blood is forbidden materially in the Old Teſtament.

Ergo, To drink Man's natural Blood materially is not commanded in the New.

Lat. It is commanded ſpiritually to be drank, I grant it is Blood drank in the New Teſtament, but we receive it ſpiritually.

Pie. It was not forbidden ſpiritually in the Old Law.

Lat. The Subſtance of Blood is drank, but not in one Manner.

Pie. It doth not require the ſame Manner of drinking.

Lat. It is the ſame Thing, not the ſame Manner. I have no more to ſay.

Weſt. Here Weſton cited the Place of Chryſoſtom, of Judas's Treaſon: O the Madneſs of Judas! He made Bargain with the Jews for thirty Pence to ſell Chriſt, and Chriſt offered him his Blood which he ſold. Chryſoſtom.

Lat. I grant he offered to Judas his Blood which he ſold, but in a Sacrament.

Weſt. Becauſe ye can defend your Doctors no better, ye ſhall ſee what worſhipful Men ye hang upon, and one that hath been of your Mind ſhall diſpute with you. Mr. Cartwright, I pray you diſpute.

Dr. Cartwright urged to diſpute.

Cart. Reverend Father, becauſe it is given me in Commandment to diſpute with you, I will do it gladly. But firſt underſtand e'er we go any further, that I was in the ſame Error that you are in: But I am ſorry for it, and do confeſs myſelf to have erred, I acknowledge mine Offence, and I wiſh and deſire God that you may alſo repent with me.

Lat. Will you give me leave to tell what hath cauſed Mr. Doctor here to recant? It is Pœna Legis, The pain of the Law, which hath brought you back, and converted you, and many more; which hindereth many to confeſs God. And this is a great Argument, there are few here can diſſolve it.

Cart. That is not my Caſe, but I will make you this ſhort Argument, by which I was converted from mine Errors.

If the true Body of Chriſt be not really in the Sacrament, all the whole Church hath erred from the Apoſtles Time.

But Chriſt would not ſuffer his Church to err:

Ergo, It is the true Body of Chriſt.

No Mention made of any eating, but ſpiritually, in the Church, for 700 Years.

Lat. The Popiſh Church hath erred, and doth err. I think for the Space of ſix or ſeven hundred Years, there was no Mention made of any eating but ſpiritually: For, before theſe five hundred Years, the Church did ever confeſs a ſpiritual Manducation. But the Romiſh Church begat the Error of Tranſubſtantiation. My Lord of Canterbury's Book handleth that very well, and by him I could anſwer you if I had him.

Cart. Linus and all the reſt do confeſs the Body of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament: And St. Auguſtine alſo upon the 99 Pſalm, upon this Place, Worſhip his Footſtool, &c. granteth that it is to be worſhipped.

Lat. We do worſhip Chriſt in the Heavens, and we do worſhip him in the Sacrament: But the maſſing Worſhip is not to be uſed.

Smith. Do you think that Cyril was of the antient Church?

Lat. I do think ſo.

Cyril in Joan. l. 10. c. 13.

Smith. He ſaith, That Chriſt dwelleth in us corporally: Theſe be Cyril's Words of the myſtical Benediction.

Lat. That [corporally] hath another Underſtanding than you do groſly take it.

Cyril ſaith, that Chriſt dwelleth corporally in us, but he ſaith not that Chriſt dwelleth corporally in the Bread. Which Dwelling of Chriſt in us, is as our Dwelling is alſo in Chriſt, not local or corporal, but ſpiritual and heavenly. Corporally therefore is to be taken here in the ſame Senſe as St. Paul ſaith the Fullneſs of Divinity to dwell in Chriſt corporally, that is, not lightly nor accidentally, but perfectly and ſubſtantially, with all his Virtue and Power, &c. And ſo dwelleth Chriſt corporally in us alſo.

Smith. Here Smith repeateth theſe Words of Cyril, By the communicating of the Body of Chriſt, Chriſt dwelleth in us corporally.

Lat. The Solution of this is in my Lord of Canterbury's Book.

Smith. Cyril was no Papiſt and yet theſe be his Words, Chriſt dwelleth in us corporally: But you ſay he dwelleth in us ſpiritually.

Lat. I ſay both, that he dwelleth in us both corporally and ſpiritually, according to his Meaning: Spiritually by Faith, and corporally by taking our Fleſh upon him. For I remember I have read this in my Lord of Canterbury's Book.

Weſt. Becauſe your Learning is let out to farm, and ſhut up in my Lord of Canterbury's Book, I will recite unto you a Place of St. Ambroſe, De apparatione ad miſſam, where he ſaith, We ſee the chief Prieſt coming unto us, and offering Blood, &c.

Likewiſe both Auguſtine in the 38th Pſalm, and Chryſoſtom concerning the incomprehenſible Nature of God, Tom. 3. ſay, non ſolum homines, &c.

Lat. I am not aſhamed to acknowledge mine Ignorance, and theſe Teſtimonies are more than I can bear away.

Weſt. Then you muſt leave ſome behind you for lack of Carriage.

Chryſoſtom full of figurative Speeches and emphatical Locutions.

Lat. But of Chryſoſtom, he hath many figurative Speeches, and emphatical Locutions in many Places; as in that which you have now recited: But he ſaith not, For the Quick and the Dead; he taketh the Celebration for the Sacrifice.

Weſt. You ſhall hear Chryſoſtom again, upon the Ninth Chapter of the Acts, Quid dicis? Hoſtia in manibus ſacerdotis, &c. He doth not call it a Cup of Wine.

Lat. Ye have mine Anſwer there with you in a Paper; and yet he calleth it not, a propitiatory Sacrifice.

Weſt. You ſhall hear it to be ſo: And I bring another Place of Chryſoſtom out of the ſame Treatiſe, Non temere ab Apoſtolis eſt inſtitutum, &c.

Lat. He is too precious a Thing for us to offer; he offereth himſelf.

Weſt. Here in another Place of Chryſoſtom to the People of Antioch, and alſo to the Philippians, he ſaith, There ſhould be a Memory and Sacrifice for the Dead. Hom. 69.

Lat. I do ſay, that the holy Communion beareth the Name of a Sacrifice, becauſe it is a Sacrifice memorative.

Weſt. How ſay you to the Sacrifice of the Dead?

Lat. I ſay that it needeth not, and it booteth not.

Weſt. Auguſtine in his Enchiridion, ſaith, We muſt not deny that the Souls of the Dead are relieved by the Devotion of their Friends which are living, when the Sacrifice of the Mediator is Auguſt. Enchirid. c. 110.

offered

offered for them. Where he proveth the Verity of Chriſt's Body, and praying for the Dead. And it is ſaid, that the ſame Auguſtine ſaid Maſs for his Mother.

Auguſtine falſly belied to ſay Maſs for his Mother.

Lat. But that Maſs was not like yours, which Thing doth manifeſtly appear in his Writings, which are againſt it in every Place. And Auguſtine is a reaſonable Man, he requireth to be believed no further than he bringeth Scripture for his Proof, and agreeth with God's Word.

Weſt. In the ſame Place he proveth a propitiatory Sacrifice, and that upon an Altar, and no Oyſter Board.

The blaſphemous Mouth of Dr. Weſton calling the Lord's Table an Oyſter Board.

Lat. It is the Lord's Table, and no Oyſter Board. It may be called an Altar, and ſo the Doctors call it in many Places: But there is no propitiatory Sacrifice, but only Chriſt. The Doctors might be deceived in ſome Points, tho' not in all Things, I believe them when they ſay well.

Cole. Is is not a Shame for an old Man to lie? You ſay, you are of the old Fathers Faith where they ſay well, and yet ye are not.

Lat. I am of their Faith when they ſay well, I refer myſelf to my Lord of Canterbury's Book wholly herein.

Smith. Then are not you of Chryſoſtom's Faith, nor of St. Auguſtine's Faith.

Lat. I have ſaid, when they ſay well, and bring Scripture for them, I am of their Faith; and further Auguſtine requireth not to be believed.

Weſt. Origen, Hom. 13. upon Leviticus.

Lat. I have but one Word to ſay, The ſacramental Bread is called a Propitiation, becauſe it is a Sacrament of the Propitiation. What is your Vocation?

Weſton. My Vocation is at this Time to diſpute; otherwiſe I am a Prieſt, and my Vocation is to offer.

Lat. Where have you that Authority given you to offer?

Facere for Sacrificare with Dr. Weſton.

Weſt. Hoc facite, Do this; for Facite in that Place is taken for Offerte, that is, Offer you.

Lat. Is Facere nothing but Sacrificare, to ſacrifice? Why, then no Man muſt receive the Sacrament but Prieſts only: For there may none other offer but Prieſts.

Ergo, There may none receive but Prieſts.

Weſt. Your Argument is to be denied.

Lat. Did Chriſt then offer himſelf at his Supper?

If Chriſt offered himſelf at the Supper, and the next Day upon the Croſs, then was Chriſt twice Offered.

Pie. Yea, he offered himſelf for the whole World.

Lat. Then if this Word [Facite] Do ye, ſignify [Sacrificate] Sacrifice ye, it followeth, as I ſaid, that none but Prieſts only ought to receive the Sacrament, to whom it is only lawful to ſacrifice: And where find you that I pray you?

Weſt. Forty Year agon whither could you have gone to have found your Doctrine?

Lat. The more Cauſe we have to thank God, that hath now ſent the Light into the World.

Weſton's railing.

Weſt. The Light? Nay light and lewd Preachers; for you could not tell what you might have. Ye altered and changed ſo often your Communions and Altars, and all for this one End, to ſpoil and rob the Church.

Lat. Theſe Things pertain nothing to me, I muſt not anſwer other Mens Deeds, but only for mine own.

Weſt. Well, Mr. Latimer, this is our Intent, to will you well, and to exhort you to come to your ſelf, and remember, that without Noah's Ark there is no Health. Remember what they have been, that were the Beginners of your Doctrine: None but a few flying Apoſtates, running out of Germany for Fear of the Faggot. Remember what they have been which have ſet forth the ſame in this Realm: A Sort of Flingbrains and light Heads, which were never conſtant in any one Thing, as it was to be ſeen in the turning of the Table, where like a Sort of Apes, they could not tell which Way to turn their Tails, looking one Day Weſt, and another Day Eaſt; one that Way, and another this Way. They will be like (they ſay) to the Apoſtles, they will have no Churches; a Hovel is good enough for them. They come to the Communion with no Reverence. They get them a Tankard, and one ſaith, I drink, and I am thankful; the more Joy of thee, ſaith another. And in them was it true that Hilary ſaith, We make every Year and every Month a Faith. A runnagate Scot did take away the Adoration or worſhipping of Chriſt in the Sacrament, by whoſe Procurement that Hereſy was put into the laſt Communion Book; ſo much prevailed that one Man's Authority at that Time. You never agreed with the Tygurians or Germans, or with the Church, or with yourſelf. Your Stubbornneſs cometh of a vain Glory, which is to no Purpoſe; for it will do you no good when a Faggot is in your Beard. And we ſee all, by your own Confeſſion, how little Cauſe you have to be ſtubborn, for your Learning is in Feoffers hold. The Queen's Grace is merciful, if ye will turn.

Anno 1554.

Dr. Weſton's Apes have Tails.

Who be theſe, or where be they Mr. Oblocutor, that will be like the Apoſtles, that will have no Churches? that be Runagates out of Germany? that get them Tankards? that make monthly Faiths? that worſhip not Chriſt in all his Sacraments? Speak Truth Man and ſhame the Devil.

Lat. You ſhall have no Hope in me to turn; I pray for the Queen daily, even from the Bottom of my Heart, that ſhe may turn from this Religion.

Weſt. Here you all ſee the Weakneſs of Hereſy againſt the Truth: He denieth all Truth, and all the old Fathers,

Here all good Readers may ſee how this glorious Prolocutor triumpheth; but whether he hath the Victory or no, that I ſuppoſe they have yet neither heard nor ſeen. And grant that he had the Victory, yet what great Marvel was it, diſputing as he did, Non ſine ſuo Theſeo, that is, not without his tipling Cup ſtanding at his Elbow all the Time of his Diſputation; not without a privy Noting and Smiling of them that beheld the Matter; but eſpecially at that Time, when Dr. Ridley diſputing with one of the Opponents, the ſaid Prolocutor took the Cup, and holding it in his Hand, ſaid to the Opponent, Urge hoc, urge hoc, nam hoc facit pro nobis. In which Words, as he moved the Beholders thereof to Laughter, ſo I thought it proper to mention here, to delight the Reader withal, after his tedious Wearineſs in reading the Story thereof.

Urge hoc, quoth Weſton with his Beer Pot.

And thus haſt thou (loving Reader) the whole Action and Stage of this Diſputation ſhewed forth unto thee againſt theſe three worthy Confeſſors and Martyrs of the Lord; wherein thou may'ſt behold the diſordered Uſage of the Univerſity Men, the unmannerly Manner of the School, the rude Tumult of the Multitude, the Fierceneſs and Interruption of the Doctors, the full Pith and Ground of all their Arguments the Cenſures of the Judges, the railing Language of the Oblocutor, with his Blaſt of Triumph in the latter End, being both the Actor, the Moderator, and alſo Judge himſelf. And what Marvel then, if the Courage of this victorious Conqueror, having the Law in his own Hands,

Anno 1554. to do and say what he pleased, would say for himself, Vicit veritas, although he said never a true Word, nor ever made a true Conclusion, almost in all that Disputation.

It furthermore followed, after Disputation of these three Days being ended, that Mr. Harps-
April 19. field, the next Day after, which was April 19. should dispute for his Form, to be made Doctor. To which Disputation the Archbishop of Canterbury was brought forth, and permitted among the rest to utter an Argument or two in Defence of his Cause: as in Sequel hereof may appear.

The Disputation of Mr. Harpsfield, Batchelor of Divinity, answering for his Form to be made Doctor.

Mr. Harpsfield.

The Judgment of Mr. Harpsfield for the best Way to understand the Scriptures. If Mr. Harpsfield had willed us to submit our Senses to the Holy Ghost, he had said much better.

I Am not ignorant what a weighty Matter it is to intreat of the whole Order and Trade of the Scriptures: And most hard it is too, in the great Contention of Religion, to shew the ready Way whereby the Scriptures may best be understood; for the often reading of them doth not bring the true Understanding of them. What other Thing is there then? Verily this is the ready Way, not to follow our own Heads and Senses, but to give over our Judgment unto the Holy Catholick Church, who hath had of old Years the Truth, and always delivered the same to their Posterity: but if the often reading of Scriptures, and never so painful comparing of Places should bring the true Understanding, then divers Hereticks might prevail even against whole general Councils. The * Jews did greatly brag of the Knowledge of the Law, and of the Saviour that they waited for. But what availed it them? Notwithstanding, I know right well, that divers Places of the Scripture do much warn us of the often reading of the same, and what Fruit doth thereby follow; as, Search the Scriptures, for they do bear Witness of me, &c. The Law of the Lord is pure, able to turn Souls. And that Saying of St. Paul, All Scripture inspired from above, doth make that a Man may be instructed to all good Works. Howbeit doth the Law of the Jews convert their Souls? Are they by reading instructed to every good Work? The Letter of the Old Testament is the same that we have.

* No, but those Jews, sticking so much to the old Custom and Face of their Church, and not seeking for Knowledge by Ignorance of the Scriptures were deceived and so be you.

The Hereticks also have ever had the same Scriptures which we have that be Catholicks. But they are served as Tantalus that the Poets speak of, who in the Plenty of Things to eat and drink, is said to be oppressed with Hunger and Thirst. The swifter that Men do seek the Scriptures without the Catholick Church, the deeper they fall, and find Hell for their Labour. St. Cyprian never swerving from the Catholick Church, saith, He that doth not acknowledge the Church to be his Mother, shall not have God to his Father. Therefore it is true Divinity to be wise with the Church, where Christ saith, Unless ye eat my Flesh, and drink my Blood, ye have no Life in you.

If he had meant of only eating Bread and drinking Wine, nothing had been more pleasant to the Capernaites, neither would they have forsaken him. The Flesh profiteth nothing to them that do so take it. For the Capernaites did imagine Christ to be given in such Sort as he lived. But Christ spake high Things: not that they should have him as Flesh in the Market, but to consider his Presence with the Spirit under the Forms whereby it is given. As there is an Alteration of Bodies by Courses and Times of Ages, so there is no less † Variety in eating of Bodies.

 Under the Forms, that is, under the Properties of Bread and Wine, and so all this is true.

These Things which I have recited briefly, Mr. Harpsfield did set out with many more Words; and hereupon Dr. Weston disputed against him.

† In the material Eating of Man's Body there is no Variety: For to eat Man's Flesh either under Accidents, or not Accidents, both is against the Scripture and against Nature.

West. Christ's real Body is not in the Sacrament.

Ergo, You are deceived.

Harps. I deny the Antecedent.

West. John 16. I speak the Truth unto you: it behoveth me that I go away from you. For unless I do depart, that Comforter cannot come, &c.

Upon this I will make this Argument.

Christ is so gone away, as he did send the Holy Ghost.

But the Holy Ghost did verily come into the World:

Ergo, Christ is verily gone.

Harps. He is verily gone, and yet remaineth here.

This Answer doth not satisfy the Argument: For the Conclusion speaketh of a bodily Absence, the Answer speaking of a spiritual Remaining.

West. St. Augustine saith, that these Words, I will be with you even to the End of the World, are accomplished, [Secundum Majestatem] According to his Majesty: But Secundum præsentiam carnis non est hic] By the Presence of the Flesh he is not here. The Church hath him not in Flesh, but by Belief.

Harps. We must diligently weigh that there are two Natures in Christ: the divine Nature, and human Nature. The divine Nature is of such Sort that it cannot choose but be in all Places. The human Nature is not such, that of Force it must be in all Places, although it be in divers after a divers Manner. So where the Doctors do intreat of his Presence by Majesty, they do commend the Majesty of the divine Nature, not to hinder us of the * natural Presence here in the Sacrament.

* If the natural Presence is here, then is it false that St. Augustine saith, By the Presence of his Flesh he is not here.

West. He saith further, Ye shall not have me always with you, is to be understood in the Flesh.

Harps. The Presence of the Flesh is to be considered, that he is not here as he was wont to live in Conversation with them, to be seen, talked withal, or in such Sort as a Man may give him † any Thing: after that Sort he is not present.

†And how can we then give Honour to him, to whom we can shew no Charity, nor give any thing else unto? What manner soever ye give to the Body, if the substantial Body be here indeed, it cannot be avoided, but either it must needs be false that St. Augustine saith, He is West. But what say you to this of Augustine, He is not here.

Harps. I do answer out of St. Augustine upon John, Tractat. 25. upon these Words, I go to the Father, ye shall not see me; that is, Such as I am now. Therefore I do deny the Manner of his Presence.

West. I will overthrow St. Augustine, with St. Augustine; who saith this also, How may a Man hold Christ? Send thy Faith, and thou holdest him.

So he sheweth, that by sending our Faith, we do hold Christ.

Harps. Indeed no Man holdeth Christ unless he believe in him; but it is another Thing to have Christ merciful and favourable unto us, and to have him present in the Sacrament.

There St. Augustine speaketh of holding him by Faith, as he is favourable unto us.

West. Nay, he speaketh there how the Fathers had him in the Flesh, and teacheth that we have him not so in the Flesh, as they had him long Time, saying, Your Fathers did hold Christ present in the Flesh: Do you hold him in your Heart: What Words can be more plain?

not here, or elſe Chriſt muſt have two Bodies in two places together, preſent here after one manner, and in Heaven after another manner.

Further he ſaith, He is gone and is not here: he hath left us, and yet hath not forſaken us. He is here in Majeſty, and gone touching the Fleſh.

Harpſ. I do underſtand Auguſtine * thus, that Chriſt is here in the Fleſh to them that receive him worthily: to ſuch as do worthily receive him, to them he is not preſent in the Fleſh. I judge St. Auguſtine meaneth ſo. We have him, and have him not: we have him in receiving him worthily, otherwiſe not.

Weſt. Nay, Tenere carnem eſt tenere corticem literæ. I will proſecute another Argument. Cyril doth ſay, By the Majeſty of his Divinity he is ever here, but the Preſence of his Fleſh hath he taken away.

* Note what Harpſfield here holdeth; that the Body of Chriſt is not preſent in the Sacrament but only to them that receive him worthily.

Harpſ. The Senſe of Cyril is thus to be underſtood: the moſt true Fleſh of Chriſt is at the right Hand of the Father. Thus the Fathers taught, and ſo they believed. Thus ſaid Cyril: Thus ſaid Auguſtine; and becauſe this is the Foundation of our Faith, they did oftentimes teach it. Therefore when they prove this, (the Body to be in Heaven) they do not make againſt the Preſence in the Sacrament.

If the Preſence of his Fleſh be taken away, as Cyril ſaith, how then can the Preſence of his Fleſh be in the Sacrament? Vigilius ſaith his Body is taken up, how then doth the ſame Body remain ſtill? unleſs either ye make him to have two Bodies; or elſe make two contradictories true in one Propoſition.

So unleſs ye can plainly ſhew, that the Fathers do directly ſay he is not in the Sacrament, you make nothing againſt me: for I have ſhewed why the Fathers ſo ſpake. They did teach the great Difference between the divine Nature, and the human Nature, as I have before ſaid.

Weſt. I will then prove, that he is not in the Sacrament. Vigilius againſt the Heretick Eutiches, upon theſe Words, Ye ſhall not have me always with you, ſaith, The Son of God, as touching his Humanity, he is gone from us, by his Divinity he remaineth with us." And the ſame Vigillius in his fourth Book ſaith, He that is in the Heaven, is not in the Earth; ſpeaking of Chriſt.

Harpſ. I will ſhew you the Reaſon of theſe Words. The Heretick Eutiches did believe that the divine Nature of Chriſt was faſtned on the Croſs, and believed that Chriſt had no natural Body. To this Vigilius ſaid, That the human Nature was taken up and aſcended, which could not have ſo done, unleſs he had a Body. This he ſaid not, to take away the Preſence in the Sacrament.

For what had he to refer this Sentence to the Sacrament? He never did ſo much as dream of the Sacrament.

Weſt. Cyril ſaith, Although he be abſent from us in Body, yet are we governed by his Spirit.

The Body of Chriſt is here to feed our Bellies, but not to be lived withal.

Harpſ. By theſe Words he gave us a Chearfulneſs to aſpire upwards, ſeeking there hence our Help. For as touching his Converſation, he is not ſo in the Sacrament as one meet to be lived withal. But let him not teach us that he is not there to feed us; for after that Sort he is here.

Weſt. You have ſatisfied me with your Anſwers, in doing the ſame learnedly, and catholickly. But now to another Argument.

* The Argument holdeth e proportione.

* Chriſt is now ſo abſent from the Earth by his Body; as he was abſent from Heaven when he lived here.

But when he did live bodily on Earth; the ſame natural Body was out of Heaven.

Ergo, Now whilſt this natural Body is in Heaven, it is not in the Earth.

Harpſ. I deny the Major.

Weſt. Fulgentius ad Thraſimundum regem, lib 2. ſaith, Secundum humanam ſubſtantiam abſens erat cælo, cum deſcendit de cælo. Theſe are Fulgentius's Words touching his human Subſtance. He was abſent from Heaven, when he deſcended from Heaven; and touching the ſame Subſtance, now he is in Heaven he is not on the Earth: but concerning the divine Nature, he never forſook, neither Heaven nor Earth. Anno 1554.

After theſe Words, not waiting Harpsfield's Anſwer, he offered Mr. Cranmer to diſpute; who began in this wiſe.

Cranmer. I have heard you right learnedly and eloquently intreat of the Dignity of the Scriptures, which I do both commend, and have marvelled thereat within myſelf. But whereas you refer the true Senſe and Judgment of the Scriptures to the catholick Church as Judge thereof, you are much deceived; ſpecially for that under the Name of the Church you appoint ſuch Judges as have corruptly judged, and contrary to the Senſe of the Scriptures. I wonder likewiſe why you attribute ſo little to the diligent Reading of the Scriptures and conferring of Places; ſeeing the Scriptures do ſo much commend the ſame, as well in divers other Places, as alſo in thoſe which you yourſelf have already alledged. And as touching your Opinion of theſe Queſtions, it ſeemeth to me neither to have any Ground of the Word of God, nor of the primitive Church. And to ſay the Truth, the Schoolmen have ſpoken diverſly of them, and do not agree thereof among themſelves. Wherefore, minding here briefly to ſhew my Judgment alſo, I muſt deſire you firſt to anſwer to me a few Queſtions which I ſhall demand of you. Which being done, we ſhall the better proceed in our Diſputation. Moreover, I muſt deſire you to bear alſo with my Rudeneſs in the Latin Tongue, which thro' long Diſuſe is not now ſo prompt and ready with me as it hath been: and now all other Things ſet apart, I mind chiefly to have Regard to the Truth. My firſt Queſtion is this, How Chriſt's Body is in the Sacrament, according to your Mind or Determination?

The Opinion of Mr. Harpſfield reproved, referring the Senſe of the Scripture rather to the Judgment of the Church, than to the diligent Reading and Conferring of Places.

Then anſwered a Doctor, he is there as touching his Subſtance, but not after the Manner of his Subſtance.

Chriſt preſent in the Sacrament in Subſtance, but not after the Manner of Subſtance.

Harpſ. He is there in ſuch Sort and Manner, as he may be eaten.

Cran. My next Queſtion is, Whether he hath his Quantity and Qualities, Form, Figure, and ſuch like Properties.

Harpſ. Are theſe your Queſtions, ſaid Mr. Harpsfield? I may likewiſe ask you, When Chriſt paſſed thro' the Virgin's Womb, An ruperit necne? When they had thus a while contended, there were divers Opinions in this Matter.

The Rabbins could not agree among themſelves.

All the Doctors fell in a Buzzing, uncertain what to anſwer; ſome thought one Way, ſome another; and thus Mr. Doctors could not agree.

Then Mr. Cranmer ſaid thus; You put off Queſtions with Queſtions, and not with Anſwers, I ask one Thing of you, and you anſwer another. Once again I ask, Whether he have thoſe Properties which he had on the Earth?

Chriſt's Body without his Properties in the Sament.

Treſh. No, he hath not all the Quantities and Qualities belonging to a Body.

Smith. Stay you Mr. Treſham. I will anſwer you Mr. Doctor, with the Words of Damaſcene, [Transformatur panis, &c] The Bread is transformed, &c. But if thou wilt inquire how, [Modus impoſſibilis,] The manner is impoſſible.

Then two or three others added their Anſwers to

Anno 1554.

to this Question, somewhat doubtfully. A great hurly-burly was among them, some affirming one Thing, some another.

Cran. Do you appoint me a Body, and cannot tell what Manner of Body? Either he hath not his Quantity, or else you are ignorant how to answer it.

Harps. These are vain Questions, and it is not meet to spend the Time on them.

West. Hear me a while, Lanfrancus, sometime Bishop of Canterbury, doth answer in this wise unto Berengarius, upon such like Questions, They may well be believed, but never faithfully asked.

Cran. If you think good to answer it, some of you declare it.

Harps. He is there as pleaseth him to be there.

Cran. I would be best contented with that Answer, if that your appointing of a carnal Presence had not driven me of Necessity to have inquired for Disputation's Sake, how you place him there, since you will have a natural Body.

The Papists would have Christ's Body in the Sacrament, but they cannot tell how.

When again he was answered of divers at one Time, some denying it to be a [Quantum] some saying it to be [Quantitativum,] some affirming it to have [Modum quanti,] some denying it, some one Thing, some another: Up starts Dr. Weston, and doughtily decided, as he thought, all the Matter, saying, It is a Body having Quantity, but not according to the Manner of Quantity.

Mr. Ward in the misty Clouds of Duns's Quiddities.

Whereunto Mr. Ward, a great Sophister, thinking the Matter not fully answered, did largely declare and discourse his Sentence: How learnedly and truly I cannot tell, nor I think he himself neither, nor yet the best learned there. For it was said since, That far better learned than he, laid as good Ear to him as they could, and yet could by no Means perceive to what End all his Talk tended. Indeed he told a formal Tale to clout up the Matter. He was full of [Quantum & quantitativum.] This that follows was, as it is thought, the Effect, yet others think not. Howbeit we will rehearse the Sum of his Words, as it is thought he spake then.

Ward. We must consider, saith he, that there are two Positions. The one standeth by the Order of Parts, with respect of the whole. The other in respect of that which containeth Christ, is in the Sacrament in respect of the whole. This Proposition is in one of Aristotle's Predicaments, called Situs. I remember I did intreat these Matters very largely, when I did rule and moderate the philosophical Disputations in the publick Schools. This Position is [Sine modo quantitativo,] as by an Ensample, you can never bring Heaven to a Quantity. So I conclude that he is in the Sacrament [Quantum, sine modo quantitativo.]

Aristotle must help to tell us how Christ is in the Sacrament. Christ, [sine modo quantitativo] in the Sacrament.

These Words he amplified very largely, and so high he climbed into the Heavens with Dun's Ladder, and not with the Scriptures, that it is to be marvelled how he could come down again without falling. To whom Mr. Cranmer said, Then thus do I make my Argument.

Dr. Cranmer's Argument.

Cran. In Heaven his Body had Quantity, in Earth it hath none by your Saying.

Ergo, He hath two Bodies, the one in Heaven, the other in Earth.

Here some would have answered him, that he had Quantity in both, and so put off the Antecedent: But thus said Mr. Harpsfield:

Harps. I deny your Argument, though some would not have had him say so, Cran. The Argument is good. It standeth upon Contradictories, which is the most sure Hold.

Harps. I deny that there are Contradictions.

Cran. I thus prove it. Habere modum quantitativum & non habere, sunt contradictoria.

Sed Christus in Cœlis, ut dicitis, habet modum quantitativum, in Terra non habet:

Aristotle 4. Metaph. Impossibile est, idem simul esse & non esse.

Ergo, Duo sunt corpora ejus in quæ cadunt hæc contradictoria; nam in idem cadere non possunt.

West. I deny the Minor.

Harps. I answer that the Major is not true. For Habere quantum, & non habere, non sunt contradictoria, nisi sic considerentur, ejusdem ad idem, eodem modo & simpliciter.

West. I confirm the same; for one Body may have Modum quantitativum, and not have; and the same Body was passible and impassible; one Body may have Wounds and not Wounds.

* Passible and impassible cannot stand together in one Subject. Simul & ejusdem respectu & eodem tempore, propter rerum pugnantiam.

Cran. This cannot be at one Time.

West. The Ensample of the Potter doth prove that which I say; who, of that which is Clay now, maketh a Pot or Cup forthwith.

Cran. But I say again that it is so, but at divers Times: As one Piece of Meat to be raw and sodden cannot be at one Time together. But you would have it otherwise, that Christ should be here and in Heaven at one Time, and should have Modum quantitativum, and not have; which cannot be but by such Argument as I have shewed you.

Christ's Body to be passible and not passible at the Supper, it appeareth by these Words, That shall be given for you.

West. But I say Christ's Body was passible and not * passible at one Instant.

Seaton. You may ask as well other Questions, how he is in Heaven? whether he sit or stand? and whether he be there as he lived here?

† That remaineth yet unproved: Harpsfield seemed a little before to note the contrary, where he said, That the Flesh of Christ to them that receive him not worthily is not present, pag. 73.

Cran. You yourself, by putting a natural Presence, do force me to question, how he is here. Therefore next I do ask this Question, Whether good and evil Men do eat the Body in the Sacrament?

Harps. Yea, they do so †, even as the Sun doth shine upon King's Palaces, and on Dung-heaps.

Cran. Then do I inquire how long Christ tarrieth in the Eater?

Harps. These are curious Questions, unmeet to be asked.

Cran. I have taken them out of your Schools and Schoolmen, which you yourselves do most use: And there also do I learn to ask how far he goeth into the Body.

 Sed species non progreditur usque ad animam: Ergo, nec Corpus Christi non pascit Corpus & animam.

Harps. We know that the Body of Christ is received to nourish the whole Man, both Body and Soul, Eousque progreditur Corpus quousque  species.

Cran. How long doth he abide in the Body?

Seaton. St. Augustine saith, our Flesh goeth into his Flesh. But after he is once received into the Stomach, it maketh no Matter for us to know how far he doth pierce, or whither he is conveyed.

These Men would needs have a bodily Presence, yet would they not, or else could not bring any Reason how.

Here Mr. Tresham and one Mr. London answered, that Christ being given there under such Form and Quantity as pleased him, it was not to be inquired of his tarrying, or of his descending into the Body.

Harps. You were wont to lay to our Charge, that we added to the Scripture, saying always that we should fetch the Truth out of the Scripture, and now you yourself bring Questions out of the Schoolmen, which you have disallowed in us.

Cran. I say as I have said alway, that I am constrained to ask these Questions, because of this this carnal Preſence which you imagine: And yet I know right well that theſe Queſtions be anſwered out of the Scripture. As to my laſt Queſtion, How long he abideth in the Body, &c. the Scripture anſwereth plainly, that Chriſt doth ſo long dwell in his People, as they are his Members. Whereupon I make this Argument.

Dr. Cranmer's Argument in the ſecond Figure and ſecond Mood.

They which eat the Fleſh of Chriſt do dwell in him, and he in them.
But the wicked do not remain in him, nor he in them:
Ergo. The Wicked do not eat his Fleſh nor drink his Blood.

Anſwer inſufficient.

Harpſ. I will anſwer unto you as St. Auguſtine ſaith, not that howſoever a Man do eat, he eateth the Body; but he that eateth after a certain Manner.

Cran. I cannot tell what Manner ye appoint, but I am ſure that evil Men do not eat the Fleſh and drink the Blood of Chriſt, as Chriſt ſpeaketh in the Sixth of John.

Harpſ. In the Sixth of John ſome Things are to be referred to the Godly, and ſome to the Ungodly.

Cran. Whatſoever he doth intreat there of eating, doth pertain unto good Men.

Harpſ. If you do mean only of the Word of eating, it is true; if concerning the Thing, it is not ſo; and if your Meaning be of that which is contained under the Word of eating, it may be ſo taken, I grant.

Evil Men do not eat the Body of Chriſt.

Cran. Now to the Argument, He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. Doth not this prove ſufficiently, that evil Men do not eat that the good do?

Treſh. You muſt add, He that eateth worthily.

Cran. I ſpeak of the ſame Manner of eating that Chriſt ſpeaketh of.

Weſt. Auguſtinus ad Fratres in Eremo, Serm. 28. ſays, There is a certain Manner of eating. Auguſtine ſpeaketh of two Manners of eating; the one of them that eat worthily, the other that eat unworthily.

The Sixth Chapter of John is to be referred partly to the Supper, partly to Faith, after the Papiſts.

Harpſ. All Things in the Sixth of John are not to be referred to the Sacrament, but to the receiving of Chriſt by Faith. The Fathers do agree, that there is not Intreaty made of the Supper of the Lord, before they come unto, The Bread which I give, is my Fleſh, &c.

Cran. There is intreating of Manna both before and after.

Harpſ. I will apply another Anſwer. This Argument hath a Kind of Poiſon in it, which muſt be thus bitten away; that Manna and this Sacrament be not both one. Manna hath not his Efficacy of himſelf, but of God.

Compariſon between eating of Manna, and eating the Body of Chriſt.

Cran. But they that did take Manna worthily had Fruit thereby; and ſo by your Aſſertion, he that doth eat the Fleſh of Chriſt worthily, hath his Fruit by that. Therefore the like doth follow of them both, and ſo there ſhould be no Difference between Manna and this Sacrament, by your Reaſon.

Harpſ. When it is ſaid, that they which did eat Manna are dead, it is to be underſtood, that they did want the Virtue of Manna.

If Mr. Harpsfield do mean of bodily Life, they which eat the Sacrament do die as well as they which did eat the Manna. If he mean of ſpiritual Life, neither be they all damned that did eat Manna, nor all ſaved that do eat the Sacrament. Wherefore the Truth is, that neither the eating of Manna bringeth Death, nor the eating of the Sacrament bringeth Salvation: But only the ſpiritual believing upon Chriſt's bodily Paſſion, which only juſtifieth both them and us. And therefore as the Effect is ſpiritual, which Chriſt ſpeaketh of in this Chapter; ſo is the Cauſe of that Effect ſpiritual whereof he meaneth, which is our ſpiritual believing in him, and not our bodily eating of him.

Cran. They then which do eat either of them worthily, do live,

Harpſ. They do live which do eat Manna worthily, not by Manna, but by the Power of God given by it. The other which do eat this Sacrament, do live by the ſame.

Cran. Chriſt did not intreat of the Cauſe, but the Effect which followed: He doth not ſpeak of the Cauſe whereof the Effect proceedeth.

Harpſ. I do ſay, the Effects are divers, Life, and Death, which do follow the worthy and unworthy eating thereof.

Cran. Since you will needs have an Addition to it, we muſt uſe both in Manna and in the Sacrament, indifferently, either worthily or unworthily. Chriſt ſpake abſolutely of Manna and of the Supper, ſo that after that abſolute ſpeaking of the Supper, wicked Men can in no wiſe eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, and drink his Blood.

Further, Auguſtine upon John, Tractat. 26. upon theſe Words, He that eateth, &c. ſaith, There is no ſuch Reſpects in common Meats, as in the Lord's Body. For who that eateth other Meats hath ſtill Hunger, and needeth to be ſatisfied daily; but he that doth eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, and drinketh his Blood, doth live for ever. But you know wicked Men do not ſo.

Ergo, Wicked Men do not receive.

Harpſ. St. Auguſtine meaneth, That he who eateth Chriſt's Fleſh, &c. after a certain Manner, ſhould live for ever. Wicked Men do eat, but not after that Manner.

Argument in the ſecond Figure and ſecond Mood.

Cran. Only they which participate Chriſt be of the myſtical Body
But the evil Men are not of the myſtical Body.
Ergo, They do not participate Chriſt.

Weſt. Your wonderful gentle Behaviour and Modeſty, good Mr. Doctor Cranmer, is worthy much Commendation: And that I may not deprive you of your right and juſt Deſerving, I give you moſt hearty Thanks in my own Name, and in the Name of all my Brethren. At which Saying all the Doctors gently put off their Caps. Then Dr. Weſton did oppoſe the Reſpondent on this wiſe.

Weſt. Tertullian doth call the Sacrament the Sign and Figure of the Lord.

St. Auguſtine ad Dardanum ſaith, The Lord did not ſtick to ſay, this is my Body, when he gave a Sign of his Body.

Auguſt. de doctrina Chriſtiana

Beſides this, he gave Rules how to underſtand the Scriptures, ſaying: If the Scriptures ſeem to command ſome heinous Thing, then it is figurative, as by Example; To eat the Fleſh, and drink the Blood, is a tropical Speech.

Harpſ. Tertullian did write in that Place againſt Marcion, an Heretick, who denied Chriſt to have a true Body, and ſaid, He had only a fantaſtical Body. He went about to ſhew, that we had Chriſt both in Heaven and in Earth; and though we have the true Body in the Sacrament, yet he would not go about ſo to confound him, as to ſay, That Chriſt was truly in the Sacrament: For that Heretick would have thereat rather marvelled, than believed it. Therefore he ſhewed him, that it was the Figure of Chriſt: And a Figure cannot be but of a Thing that is or hath been extant.

To the next of Auguſtine, the Church hath never taught the contrary. There is an outward Thing in the Sacrament, which ſometimes hath ſundry Names. For it may be called a Figure in this Declaration, That Body which is in the Sacrament, is a Figure of Chriſt dwelling in Heaven.

To the third, That which is brought by

Anno 1554. Augustine for Example, about the understanding of the Scriptures, is thus to be understood, as tending to a general Manner of eating; so, To eat the Flesh, and drink the Blood, may be a figurative Speech to exclude Anthropophagiam, that is, the eating of Man's Flesh. The which is, when we eat Man's Flesh cut in Morsels, as we eat common Meat? so as we neither have, nor eat Christ in the Sacrament.

West. I understand your short and learned Answer, which doth sufficiently content me. But now to the second Question, which is of Transubstantiation.

The second Question.

The Scripture calleth it Bread.

Ergo, It is Bread.

Harps. In the Name of Bread all is signified which we do eat.

West. Theodoret an antient Writer, in his first Dialogue, saith; That Christ changed not the Nature, but called it his Body.

Harps. He doth there speak De Symbolo, which is the outward Form of the Sacrament. He meaneth that that doth tarry in his own Nature. Moreover, as it was reported, he brought for his Answer Augustinum in sententiis prosperi.

West. Theodoret also in his second Dialogue of those Kinds of Bread and Wine, saith, They go not out of their own Nature, but they tarry in their own Substance.

Harps. They are understood to be of the same Substance wherein they are * turned.

* And how are they turned if they remain in their former Substance.

West. But what say you to this? They remain in their former Substance.

Harps. Symbola manent, that is, The outward Signs do tarry.

West. But what is meant here by this Word Symbolum?

Harps. The outward Form or Shape only of the Nature.

West. Then you cannot call them a Substance.

Harps. Yes, Sir, every Thing hath a certain Substance in his Kind.

West. That is true, but Accidents are not Substances in their Kind.

Harps. Sunt quid in suo genere. Of this they contended much.

West. Chrysostom to Cæsareus the Monk, saith, Like as before it is consecrated, it is Bread; so after it is consecrated, it is delivered from the Name of Bread, and is indued with the Name of the Lord's Body, whereas the Nature doth remain.

Harps. Where read you this Place, I pray you?

West. Here in Peter Martyr I find it; I have his Book in my Hand.

Harps. The Author shall be of more Credit before that I make so much of him as to frame an Answer unto it.

West. Indeed I know not well where he findeth it. But Gelasius saith, That the Nature of Bread and Wine do tarry.

Harps. What is that Gelasius?

West. A Bishop of Rome.

Harps. Then he allowed the Mass.

West. Yea, and oftentimes said it; and Purgatory he also allowed, and so Prayer for the Dead, Relicks, and Invocation to Saints.

Harps. Belike then he meant nothing against Transubstantiation.

Origen. in Mat. c. 15.

West. It doth appear so indeed. But Origen saith, That the material Bread doth tarry, and is conveyed into the Privy, and is eaten of Worms.

Harps. Tush, tush, this Place appertaineth unto holy Bread.

West. What, doth it appertain to holy Bread?

Harps. Yea, unto holy Bread.

West. By what Means can you shew how this miraculous Work bringeth Christ into the Sacrament?

Harps. By the Scriptures I prove that, which saith, This is my Body.

West. It doth rejoice us all not a little, that you have so well maintained the sound Doctrine of the Sacrament of the Altar, wherein you have faithfully cleaved to the Catholick Church, as an only Stay of our Religion; by which Means you have proved yourself meet to be authorised further towards the practising of the Scripture.

And here, I do openly witness, that I do throughly consent with you, and have for Disputation's Sake only, brought these Arguments against you, which you have right learnedly satisfied: And now all Things being done, after our Form and Manner, we will end this Disputation, saying, In oppositum est sacra theologia, In oppositum est, &c.

Thus have ye heard in the aforesaid Disputations about the holy Supper of the Lord, the Reasons and Arguments of the Doctors, the Answers and Resolutions of the Bishops, and the Triumph of the Prolocutor, triumphing before the Victory, with, The Truth hath overcome; who rather in my Mind, should have exclaimed, Power have overcome; as it happeneth always, where the greater Part overcometh the better. For else if Power had not helped the Prolocutor more than Truth, there had been a small Victory. But so it is where Judgments be partial, there all Things turn to Victory, though it be never so mean and simple, as in this Disputation doth well appear.

For first, of the Opponents Part, there was scarce any Argument rightly framed in true Mood and Figure; neither could the Answerers be permitted to speak for themselves: And if they answered any Thing, it was condemned before they began to speak. Again, such Disturbance and Confusion (more like a Conspiration than any Disputation, without all Form and Order) was in the Schools during the Time of their answering, that the Answerers could not have Place to utter their Minds, neither would the Opponents be satisfied with any Reasons. Concerning which Disturbance of that misruled Disputation, you shall hear what Doctor Ridley himself reporteth by his own Description, in the following Narration.

The Report of Mr. Ridley, concerning the mis-ordered Disputation against him and his Fellow-Prisoners at Oxford.

I Never yet since I was born, saw or heard any thing done or handled more vainly or tumultuously, than the Disputation which was with me in the Schools at Oxford. Yea, verily, I could never have thought that it had been possible to have found amongst Men accounted to be of Knowledge and Learning in this Realm, any so brazen-faced and shameless, so disorderly and vainly to behave themselves, more like Stage-Players in Interludes to set forth a Pageant, than to grave Divines in Schools to dispute. The sorbonical Clamours (which at Paris I have seen in Times past, when Popery most reigned) might be worthily thought (in Compariſon of this thraſonical Oſtentation) to have had much Modeſty. And no great Marvel, ſeeing they which ſhould have been Moderators, and Overſeers of others, and which ſhould have given good Examples in Words and Gravity; they themſelves, above all other, gave worſt Example, and did as it were, blow the Trump to the reſt, to rave, roar, rage, and cry out. By Reaſon whereof, good Chriſtian Reader. manifeſtly it may appear, that they never ſought for any Truth or Verity, but only for the Glory of the World, and their own bragging Victory. But leſt by the innumerable Railings and reproachful Taunts, wherewith I was baited on every Side, our Cauſe, yea rather God's Cauſe and his Churches, ſhould be evil ſpoken of, and ſlandered to the World through falſe Reports, and untrue Examples given out of our Diſputation, and ſo the Verity might ſuſtain ſome Damage, I thought it no leſs than my Duty to write mine Anſwers; to the Intent, that whoſoever is deſirous to know the Truth thereof, may by this perceive as well thoſe Things which were chiefly objected, as ſummarily that which was anſwered of me unto every of them. However (good Reader) I confeſs this to be moſt true, that it is impoſſible to ſet forth either all that was, God knoweth, tumultuouſly and confuſedly objected of their Parts, being ſo many, ſpeaking many Times altogether ſo thick, that one could not well hear another, neither all that was anſwered on my Behalf to them ſo ſundry and divers Opponents.

No Verity but Glory ſought for in this Diſputation.

Moreover a great Part of the Time appointed for the Diſputations was vainly conſumed in opprobrious Checks and reviling Taunts, with hiſſing and clapping of Hands, and that in the Engliſh Tongue, to procure the Peoples Favour withal. All which Things, when I with great Grief of Heart did behold, proteſting openly, that ſuch exceſſive and outragious Diſorder was unſeemly for thoſe Schools, and Men of Learning and Gravity, and that they which were the Doers and Stirrers of ſuch Things, did nothing elſe but betray the Slenderneſs of their Cauſe, and their own Vanities: I was ſo far off by this my humble Complaint, from doing any Good at all, that I was inforced to hear ſuch Rebukes, Checks, and Taunts for my Labour, as no Perſon of any Honeſty, without bluſhing, could abide to hear the like ſpoken of a moſt vile Varlet, againſt a moſt wretched Ruffian.

Taunts and Revilings uſed in this Diſputation.

At the firſt Beginning of the Diſputation, when I would have confirmed mine Anſwer to the firſt Propoſition in few Words, and that (after the Manner and Law of Schools) afore I could make an End of my firſt Probation, which was not very long, even the Doctors themſelves cried out, He ſpeaketh Blaſphemies, he ſpeaketh Blaſphemies. And when I on my Knees beſought them, and that heartily, that they would vouchſafe to hear me to the End, (whereat the Prolocutor being moved, cried out on high, Let him read it, let him read it) Yet, when I began to read again, there followed immediately ſuch Shouting, ſuch a Noiſe and Tumult, ſuch Confuſion of Voices, crying Blaſphemies, Blaſphemies, as I to my Remembrance, never heard or read the like, except it be that one, which was in the Acts of the Apoſtles, ſtirred up of Demetrius the Silverſmith, and other of his Occupation, crying out againſt Paul, Great is Diana of the Epheſians, Great is Diana of the Epheſians: And except it be a certain Diſputation which the Arians had againſt the Orthodox, and ſuch as were of godly Judgment in Africa, where it is ſaid, that ſuch as the Preſident and Rulers of the Diſputations were, ſuch was the End of the Diſputations. All were in a hurly-burly, and ſo great were the Slanders which the Arians caſt out, that nothing could quietly be heard. This writeth Victor in the ſecond Book of his Hiſtory. Anno 1554.

Dr. Ridley could not be ſuffered to read forth his Proteſtation.

The Cries and Tumults of them againſt me ſo prevailed, that, will I, nill I, I was inforced to leave off reading of my Probations, although they were ſhort. If any Man doubt of the Truth hereof, let the ſame aſk any one that was there, and utterly perverted in Popery, and I am aſſured, he will ſay, I ſpeak the leaſt. But to complain of theſe Things further, I will ceaſe.

And further ſpeaking of this Diſputation, he concludeth with theſe Words: And thus was ended this moſt glorious Diſputation of the moſt holy Fathers, Sacrificers, Doctors and Maſters, which fought moſt manfully, as ye may ſee, for their God and Goods, for their Faith and Felicity,, for their Country and Kitchin, for their Beauty and Belly, with triumphant Applauſes and Favour of the whole Univerſity.

After the Diſputation of Mr. Latimer was ended, on the Friday following, April 20. the Commiſſioners ſat in St. Mary's Church, and Dr. Weſton uſed particular Diſſuaſions with every one of them, and would not ſuffer them to anſwer in any wiſe, but directly and peremptorily, as his Words were, to ſay whether they would ſubſcribe or no. And firſt to Dr. Cranmer he ſaid, He was overcome in Diſputations. To whom the Biſhop anſwered, That whereas Dr. Weſton ſaid, he hath anſwered and oppoſed, and could neither maintain his own Errors, nor impugn the Verity; all that he ſaid was falſe: For he was not ſuffered to oppoſe as he would, nor could anſwer as he was required, unleſs he would have brawled with them, ſo thick their Reaſons came one after another, four or five frequently interrupring him, that he could not ſpeak. Mr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer were aſked what they would do: They replied, that they would ſtand to that they had ſaid. Then were they all called together, and Sentence read over them, that they were no Members of the Church: And therefore they, their Favourers and Patrons, were condemned as Hereticks. And in reading of it, they were aſked, Whether they would turn or no. But they bade them read on in the Name of God, for they were not minded to turn. So they were all three condemned.

The three Priſoners at Oxford called before the Commiſſioners.

Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Mr. Latimer condemned.

After which Sentence of Condemnation being awarded againſt them, they anſwered again each in his Turn, in Manner and Effect of Words as followeth: The Archbiſhop ſpeaking firſt.

Dr. Cranmer. From this your Judgment and Sentence I appeal to the juſt Judgment of God Almighty, truſting to be preſent with him in Heaven, for whoſe Preſence in the Altar I am thus condemned.

Dr. Ridley. Although I be not of your Company, yet doubt I not but my Name is written in another Place, whither this Sentence will ſend us ſooner, than we ſhould by the Courſe of Nature have come.

Mr. Latimer, I thank God moſt heartily that he hath prolonged my Life to this End, that I may in this Caſe glorify God by that Kind of Death.

Dr. Weſton's Anſwer unto Latimer. If you go to Heaven in this Faith, then I will never come thither, as I am thus perſuaded.

After Sentence was pronounced, they were ſeparated one from another, namely, the Arch-Biſhop was returned to * Bocardo, Dr. Ridley to the Sheriff's Houſe, Mr. Latimer to the Bailiff's. On Saturday following, they had a Maſs with a general Proceſſion and great Solemnity. Dr. Cranmer was cauſed to behold the Proceſſion out of Bocardo, Dr. Ridley out of the Sheriff's Houſe. Latimer alſo being brought to ſee it from the Bailiff's Houſe, thought that he ſhould have gone to burning, and ſpake to one Auguſtine Cooper, a Catch-pole, to make a quick Fire. But when he came to † Carfox, and ſaw the Matter, he ran as faſt as his old Bones would carry him, to one Spencer's Shop, and would not look towards it. Laſt of all Dr. Weſton carried the Sacrament, and four Doctors carried the Canopy over him.

* The Name of a Priſon in Oxford.

Immediately after the Sentence was given, Dr. Ridley writeth to the Prolocutor in the following Manner:

Dr. Ridley's Letter to the Prolocutor.

MR. Prolocutor, you remember, I am ſure, how you promiſed me openly in the Schools, after my Proteſtation, that I ſhould ſee how my Anſwers were there taken and written by the Notaries whom ye appointed (Me fateor neminem recuſare) to write what ſhould be ſaid, and to have had Licenſe to have added unto them, or to have altered them, as upon more Deliberation ſhould have ſeemed me beſt. Ye granted me alſo, at the Delivery of my Anſwer unto your firſt Propoſition, a Copy of the ſame. Theſe Promiſes are not performed. If your ſudden Departure be any Part of the Cauſe thereof, yet I pray you remember that they may be performed; for Performance of Promiſe is to be looked for at a righteous Judge's Hands. Now I ſend you here my Anſwers in Writing, to your ſecond and third Propoſitions, and do deſire and require earneſtly a Copy of the ſame, and I ſhall by God's Grace procure the Pains of the Writer to be paid for, and ſatisfied accordingly. Maſter Prolocutor, in the Time of my anſwering in the Schools, when I would have confirmed my Sayings with Authorities and Reaſons, ye ſaid then openly, that I ſhould have Time and Place to ſay and bring whatſoever I could, another Time, and the ſame your Saying was then and there confirmed by others of the Commiſſioners: Yea, and (I dare ſay) the Audience alſo thought then that I ſhould have had another Day, to have brought and ſaid what I could for the Declaration and Confirmation of mine Aſſertions. Now that this was not done, but ſo ſuddenly Sentence given before the Cauſe was perfectly heard, I cannot but marvel, &c.

Papiſts have ſmall Conſcience in performing of Promiſes.

April 23. On Monday next enſuing, April 23. Dr. Weſton took his Journey up to London, with the Letters certificatory from the Univerſity to the Queen, by whom the Archbiſhop directed his Letters ſupplicatory unto the Council; which Letters after the Prolocutor had received, and had carried them well near Half-way to London, by the Way he opened the ſame, and ſeeing the Contents thereof, ſent them back again, refuſing to carry them. Likewiſe Biſhop Ridley hearing of the Prolocutor's going to London, writeth to him his Letters, wherein he deſireth him to carry his Anſwers up to certain Biſhops in London, the Form of which Letters followeth here in Order.

Biſhop Ridley's Letter to the Prolocutor.

MR. Prolocutor, I deſire you, and in God's Name require you, that you truly bring forth and ſhew all mine Anſwers, written and ſubſcribed with mine own Hand, unto the higher Houſe of the Convocation, and eſpecially to my Lord Chancellor, my Lords of Durham, Ely, Worceſter, Norwich, and Chicheſter; and alſo to ſhew and exhibit this my Writing unto them, which in theſe few Lines here I write unto you: and that I did make this Requeſt unto you by this my Writing, know ye, that I did take Witneſs of them by whom I ſend you this Writing, and alſo of thoſe which were then with them preſent, viz. The two Bailiffs of Oxford, and of Mr. Iriſh, Alderman, then there called to be a Witneſs,

By me NICHOLAS RIDLEY,
April 13, 1554.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Letter to the Council.

IN right humble wiſe ſheweth unto your honourable Lordſhips, Thomas Cranmer late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, beſeeching the ſame to be a Means for me unto the Queen's Highneſs for her Mercy and Pardon. Some of you know by what Means I was brought and trained unto the Will of our late Sovereign Lord King Edward the ſixth, and what I ſpake againſt the ſame, wherein I refer me to the Reports of your Honours and Worſhips. Furthermore, this is to ſignify unto your Lordſhips, that upon Monday, Tueſday and Wedneſday laſt paſt, were open Diſputations here in Oxford againſt me, M. Ridley, and Mr. Latimer, in three Matters concerning the Sacrament: Firſt, Of the real Preſence. Secondly, Of Tranſubſtantiation. And thirdly, Of the Sacrifice of the Maſs. Upon Monday againſt me; upon Tueſday againſt Dr. Ridley; and upon Wedneſday againſt Mr. Latimer. How the other two were ordered, I know not, for we were ſeparated, ſo that none of us knoweth what the other ſaid, nor how they were ordered. But as concerning myſelf I can report: Dr. Chedſey was appointed to diſpute againſt me, but the Diſputation was ſo confuſed that I never knew the like, every Man bringing forth what him liked without Order: and ſuch Haſte was made, that no Anſwer could be ſuffered to be taken fully to any Argument, before another brought a new Argument. And in ſuch weighty Matters the Diſputation muſt needs be ended in one Day, which can ſcantly be ended in three Months. And when we had anſwered them, they would not appoint us one Day to bring forth our Proofs, that they might anſwer us, being required by me thereunto, whereas I myſelf have more to ſay, than can be well diſcuſſed, as I ſuppoſe, in twenty Days. The Means to reſolve the Truth, had been to have ſuffered us to anſwer fully to all that they could ſay, and then they again to anſwer as fully to all that we can ſay. But why they would not anſwer us, what other Cauſe can there be, but that either they feared their Matter, that they were not able to anſwer us, or elſe for ſome Conſideration they made ſuch Haſte, not to ſeek the Truth, but to condemn us, that it muſt be done in Poſt-haſte before the Matters could be throughly heard, for in Haſte we were all three condemned of Hereſy. Thus much I thought good to signify unto your Lordships, that you may know the indifferent Handling of Matters, leaving the Judgment thereof unto your Wisdoms. And I beseech your Lordships to remember me, a poor Prisoner, unto the Queen's Majesty, and I shall pray, as I do daily unto God, for the long Preservation of your good Lordships in all Godliness and Felicity. April 23.

The Arch-Biſhop not ſuffered to anſwer fully to any Argument.

Dr. Ridley to Dr. Cranmer.

I Wish ye might have seen these mine Answers before I had delivered them, that ye might have corrected them. But I trust, in the Substance of the Matter we do agree fully, both led by one Spirit of Truth, and both walking after one Rule of God's Word. It is reported, that Serjeant Morgan, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, is gone mad. It is said also, that Justice Hales hath recanted, perverted by Dr. Moreman. Item, That Master Rogers, Dr. Crome, and Master Bradford shall be had to Cambridge, and there be disputed with, as we were here; and that the Doctors of Oxford shall go likewise thither, as Cambridge Men came hither. When you have read mine Answers, send them again to Austen, except ye will put any Thing to them. I trust the Day of our Delivery out of all Miseries, and of our Entrance into perpetual Rest, and unto perpetual Joy and Felicity, draweth nigh: The Lord strengthen us with his mighty Spirit and Grace. If you have not to write with, you must make your Man your Friend. And this Bearer deserveth to be rewarded; so he may, and will do your Pleasure. My Man is trusty, but it grieveth both him and me, that when I send him with any Thing to you, your Man will not let him come up to see you, as he may to Master Latimer, and yours to me. I have a Promise to see how my Answers were written in the Schools, but as yet I cannot come by it. Pray for me, I pray for you, and so shall I for you. The Lord have Mercy of his Church, and lighten the Eyes of the Magistrates, that God's extream Plagues light not on this Realm of England. TURN OR BURN.

This Justice Morgan gave Sentence against Lady Jane.

These Disputations being thus ended, now let us return again to the prosecuting of our Story, concerning other Things likewise that happened in other Parts of the Realm, in this tumultuous Time of Queen Mary. And because so many Things happened in that Time that it is hard to keep a perfect Order in reciting them all; to the Intent therefore to insert Things left out before, or else to prosecute the same more at large, we have thought here a little to interrupt the Order of Time, returning again to the Month of July the Year before, viz. 1553, in which Month of July I shewed before, how the Duke of Northumberland was apprehended by the Guard, and brought to London by the Earl of Arundel, and other Lords and Gentlemen appointed for that Purpose, on St. James's Day, being July 25, and so to the Tower, where he remained. These be the Names of them which were committed to the Tower with the Duke.

The Names of them that were committed to the Tower with the Duke of Northumberland.

The Earl of Warwick, the Earl of Huntington, Lord Ambrose and Lord Henry Dudley, Lord Hastings, who was delivered again the same Night; Sir John Gates, Sir Henry Gates, Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir Thomas Palmer, and Dr. Sands Chancellor of Cambridge.

July 26. The Lord Marquis of Northampton, the Bishop of London, Lord Robert Dudley, and Sir Richard Corbet were brought and committed to the Tower. Anno 1554.

July 27. The Lord Chief Justice of England, and the Lord Mountacute Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, were committed to the Tower.

July 28. The Duke of Suffolk and Sir John Cheek were committed to the Tower.

July 30. The Lord Russel was committed to the Sheriff of London's Custody.

July 31. The Earl of Rutland was committed to the Fleet; and on the same Day the Duke of Suffolk was delivered out of the Tower again. The Duke of Suffolk delivered out of the Tower.

Upon Thursday August 3. The Queen entered into the City of London at Aldgate, and so to the Tower, where she remained seven Days, and then removed to Richmond.

August 4. Dr. Day was delivered out of the Fleet; and the Day after the Lord Ferris was committed to the Tower, and Dr. Bonner delivered out of the Marshalsea. Bonner set at Liberty The same Day at Night, Dr. Cocks was committed to the Marshalsea, and one Mr. Edward Underhill to Newgate. Also the same Day Dr. Tonstal and Stephen Gardiner were delivered out of the Tower, and Gardiner received into the Queen's Privy Council, and made Lord Chancellor.

On Monday August 7. Dirige in Latin was sung within the Tower by all the King's Chappel, and the Bishop of Winchester was chief Minister, the Queen being present and most of the Council.

On Tuesday August 8. The King's Body was brought to Westminster, and there buried: where Dr. Day Bishop of Chichester preached. The same Day a Mass of Requiem was sung within the Tower by the Bishop of Winchester, who had on his Mitre; and did all Things as in Times past was done; the Queen being present. King Edward's Body buried.

On Wednesday August 16. Mr. Bradford, Mr. Beacon, and Mr. Vernon, were committed to the Tower: with whom also Mr. Sampson should have been committed, and was sought for the same Time at Mr. Elsing's House in Fleet Street, where Mr. Bradford was taken: and because he was not found, the Bishop of Winchester was greatly displeased with the Messenger. Mr. Bradford and others committed to the Tower.

August 18. The Duke of Northumberland, the Marquis of Northampton, and the Earl of Warwick, were arraigned at Westminster, and condemned the same Day.

August 19. Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir John Gates, Sir Henry Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer, were arraigned at Westminster, and condemned the same Day.

Upon which Day a Letter was sent unto Sir Henry Tirril, Anthony Brown and Edmund Brown, Esquires, praying them to commit to Ward all such as shall contemn the Queen's Order of Religion, or shall keep themselves from Church, there to remain until they be conformable, and to signify their Names to the Council.

Upon Sunday August 20. Dr. Watson, the Bishop of Winchester's Chaplain preached at Paul's Cross, at whose Sermon was present the Marquis of Winchester, the Earl of Bedford the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Rich, and 200 of the Guards with their Halberds, lest the People should have made any Stir against the Preacher. Dr. Watson preached at Paul's Cross.

Upon Monday, August 21, the Duke of Northumberland, the Marquis of Northampton, Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir John Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer, heard a Mass within the Tower, and after Mass they all five received the Sacrament in one Kind only, as in the Popish Time was used. On which Day also Queen Mary set forth Anno 1554. forth a Proclamation, ſignifying to the People, that ſhe could not hide any longer the Religion which ſhe from her Infancy had profeſſed, &c. inhibiting in the ſaid Proclamation, Printing, and Preaching; the Tenor whereof read before, Page 4.

Upon Tueſday Auguſt 22, the Duke of Northumberland, Sir John Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer, were beheaded at Tower Hill, as hath been before mentioned.

Upon Sunday Auguſt 27. Dr. Chedſey preached at Paul's Croſs, and the ſame Day the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Sir Thomas Smith, and the Dean of Paul's were cited to appear the Week following before the Queen's Commiſſioners, in the Biſhop's Conſiſtory within Paul's.

In the mean Time it was noiſed abroad by running Rumors falſly and craftily deviſed, either to eſtabliſh the Credit of the Maſs, or elſe to bring Thomas Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury out of Credit, that he, to curry Favour with Queen Mary, ſhould promiſe to ſay Dirige Maſs after the old Cuſtom for King Edward, and that he had already ſaid Maſs at Canterbury, &c. Wherefore to ſtop the Slanders of thoſe Rumours, the ſaid Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the ſeventh Day of September ſet forth a Letter, which was alſo printed, in Purgation of himſelf, the Copy of which Letter here followeth.

A Purgation of Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, againſt certain Slanders falſely raiſed upon him.

AS the Devil, Chriſt's ancient Adverſary, is a Lyar, and the Father of Lies, even ſo hath he ſtirred up his Servants and Members to perſecute Chriſt and his true Word and Religion with lying: which he ceaſeth not to do moſt earneſtly at this preſent Time. For whereas the Prince of famous Memory King Henry the eighth, ſeeing the great Abuſes of the Latin Maſs, reformed ſome Things therein in his Life Time, and after our late Sovereign Lord King Edward the ſixth, took the ſame wholly away, for the manifold and great Errors and Abuſes of the ſame, and reſtored in the Place thereof Chriſt's holy Supper, according to Chriſt's own Inſtitution, and as the Apoſtles uſed the ſame in the Primitive Church, the Devil goeth about now by Lying to overthrow the Lord's Supper again, and to reſtore his Latin ſatisfactory Maſs, a Thing of his own Invention and Device. And to bring the ſame more eaſily to paſs, ſome have abuſed the Name of me Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, bruting abroad, that I have ſet up the Maſs at Canterbury, and that I offered to ſay Maſs at the Burial of our late Sovereign Prince King Edward the ſixth, and that I offered to ſay Maſs before the Queen's Highneſs, and at Paul's Church, and I wot not where. And although I have been well exerciſed theſe twenty Years to ſuffer and bear evil Reports and Lyes, and have not been much grieved thereat, but have born all Things quietly: yet when untrue Reports and Lies turn to the Hinderance of God's Truth, they are in no wiſe to be ſuffered. Wherefore theſe be to ſignify unto the World, that it was not I that ſet up the Maſs at Canterbury, but it was a falſe, flattering, lying and diſſembling Monk, which cauſed Maſs to be ſet up there without mine Advice or Council; Reddat illi dominus in die illo. And as for offering myſelf to ſay Maſs before the Queen's Highneſs, or in any other Place, I never did it as her Grace well knoweth. But if her Grace will give me Leave, I ſhall be ready to prove, againſt all that will ſay the contrary, that all that is contained in the holy Communion, ſet out by the moſt innocent and godly Prince King Edward the ſixth, in his high Court of Parliament, is conformable to that Order which our Saviour Chriſt did both obſerve, and command to be obſerved, and which his Apoſtles, and the primitive Church uſed many Years; whereas the Maſs, in many Things, not only hath no Foundation of Chriſt, his Apoſtles, nor the primitive Church, but is manifeſtly contrary to the ſame, and containeth many horrible Abuſes in it. And although many, either unlearned or malicious, do report, that Mr. Peter Martyr is unlearned, yet if the Queen's Highneſs will grant thereunto, I, with the ſaid Mr. Peter Martyr, and other four or five, which I ſhall chuſe, will by God's Grace, take upon us to defend, not only the common Prayers of the Church, the Miniſtration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies, but alſo all the Doctrine and Religion ſet out by our Sovereign Lord King Edward the ſixth, to be more pure, and according to God's Word, than any other that hath been uſed in England theſe 1000 Years: ſo that God's Word may be Judge, and that the Reaſons and Proofs of both Parties may be ſet out in Writing, to the Intent, as well that all the World may examine and judge thereon, as that no Man ſhall ſtart back from his Writing. And where they boaſt of the Faith, that hath been in the Church theſe 1500 Years, we will joyn with them in this Point; and that the ſame Doctrine and Uſage is to be followed, which which was in the Church 1500 Years paſt: And we ſhall prove, that the Order of the Church, ſet out at this preſent in this Realm by Act of Parliament, is the ſame that was uſed in the Church 1500 Years paſt, and ſo ſhall they be never able to prove theirs.

This Monk was Dr. Thornton, of whoſe horrible End ye ſhall read hereafter, partly alſo in the Life of Cranmer.

On Thurſday, September 7. Lord Mountacute, Chief Juſtice, and Lord Chief Baron, were delivered out of the Tower.

September 13. the reverend Father Maſter Hugh Latimer was committed to the Tower.

September 14. the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was commited to the Tower.

September 26. one Mr. Gray of Cambridge, called before him one Mr. Garth, for that he would not ſuffer a Boy of Peter-houſe to help him to ſay Maſs in Pembroke-hall, which was before any Law was eſtabliſhed for that Behalf.

On Thurſday, September 28. the Queen came to the Tower of London, and upon the Saturday following, ſhe rode from the Tower thro' the City, where were made many Pageants to receive her, and ſo ſhe was triumphantly brought to Whitehall.

Upon Sunday, October 1. the Queen's Highneſs went from Whitehall to Weſtminſter Abby, accompanied with the moſt Part of the Nobility of this Realm; namely, theſe, The Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Arundel, the Earl of Shrewſbury, the Marquis of Wincheſter, the Earls of Derby, Bedford, Worceſter, Cumberland, Weſtmoreland, Oxford, Suſſex, Devonſhire, Pembroke, the Lord Dacres of the North, Lord Ferris, Lord Cobham, Lord Abergavenny, Lord Wentworth, Lord Scroope, Lord Rich, Lord Vaus, Lord Howard, Lord Conias, Lord Morley, Lord Paget, and the Lord Willoughby; with other Nobles, and all the Ambaſſadors of divers Countries, the Mayor of London, with all the Aldermen. Alſo out of the Abby, to receive her coming, came three Silver Croſſes, and to the Number of about fourſcore Singing Men, all in very rich and gorgeous Copes.

Amongſt whom was the Dean of Weſtminſter, and divers of the Queen's Chaplains, which bare every one ſome Enſign in their Hands, and after them followed ten Biſhops, all mitred, and their Croſier Staves in their Hands, and rich Copes upon them every one. And in this Order they returned from Weſtminſter-hall before the Queen to the Abbey, where ſhe was crowned by Stephen Gardiner, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Lord Chancellor of England. At the Time of the Coronation, Dr. Day, Biſhop of Chicheſter, made a Sermon to the Queen's Majeſty, and to the reſt of the Nobility.

Queen Mary crowned Dr. Day preacheth.

Alſo there was a general Pardon proclaimed within the Abby at the Time of her Coronation, out of which Proclamation all the Priſoners of the Tower and of the Fleet were excepted, and 62 more; whereof Mr. Whitchurch and Mr. Grafton were two.

General Pardon at the Queen's Coronation.

October 3. the Vice-chancellor of Cambridge, did challenge one Mr. Pierſon, for that he miniſtred ſtill the Communion in his own Pariſh, and did receive Strangers of other Pariſhes to the ſame, and would not ſay Maſs. Whereupon within two Days after, he was diſcharged from farther miniſtring in his Cure.

Upon the Wedneſday following, the Archbiſhop of York was committed to the Tower.

Upon Thurſday, October 5. 1554. the Queen rode to the Parliament in her Robes, and all the Nobility with her, and when they were ſet in the Parliament-Houſe, the Biſhop of Wincheſter made to them a ſolemn Oration, and Serjeant Pollard was choſen Speaker. The ſame Day the Biſhops of Lincoln, Hereford, and Weſtcheſter, were diſcharged from the Parliament and Convocation.

Queen Mary rideth to the Parliament-Houſe.

Alſo October 10. the Earl of Huntington was delivered out of the Tower.

The Earl of Huntington delivered out of the Tower.

Upon Sunday after, October 15. Mr. Laurence Saunders preached at Alhallows in Bread-ſtreet in the Morning; where he fully declared the Abomination of the Maſs, with divers other Matters; whereof more ſhall be heard by God's leave hereafter when we come to his Story. In which his doing, as he ſhewed himſelf to be God's faithful Miniſter, ſo is he ſure not to be defrauded of God's faithful Promiſe, who ſaith, Mat. 10. Whoſoever ſhall confeſs me before Men, him will I confeſs alſo before my Father which is in Heaven. But about Noon of the ſame Day, he was ſent for by the Biſhop of London, and committed to the Marſhalſea.

Mr. Saunders for preaching againſt the Maſs, committed to the Marſhalſea.

Upon the Sunday following, October 20. Dr. Weſton preached at Paul's-Croſs. Who in the Beginning of his Sermon willed the People to pray for the Souls departed, on this wiſe: You ſhall pray for all them that be departed, that be neither in Heaven nor Hell, but in a Place not yet ſufficiently purged to come to Heaven, that they may be relieved by your devout Prayers. He named the Lord's Table an Oyſter-board. He ſaid, that the Catechiſm in Latin, lately ſet out, was abominable Hereſy, and likened the Setters out of the ſame Catechiſm to Julian the Apoſtate, and the Book to a Dialogue ſet out by the ſaid Julian, wherein Chriſt and Pilate were the Speakers, with many other Things.

Dr. Weſton's Sermon at Paul's-Croſs.

In the Week following the Diſputations began in the Convocation-Houſe in Paul's Church, whereof ſufficient hath been before declared.

October 26. the Vice-chancellor of Cambridge went to Clare-Hall, and in the Preſence of Dr. Walker, diſplaced Dr. Madew, and placed Mr. Swyborne in the Maſterſhip there, by Virtue of the Lord Chancellor's Letters, for that he was, as they termed it, Uxoratus, that is, married.

Anno 1554.

October 28. the Papiſts in the King's College in Cambridge (not tarrying the making of any Law, but of their blind Zeal) had their whole Service again in Latin Tongue, contrary to the Law then in Force.

October 31. the Vice-chancellor of Cambridge did ſharply reprove and threaten one Mr. Thrackold, for that he challenged the ſaid Vice-chancellor, who had ſuffered Mr. Bovell (contrary to the Statutes then in Force) to depart quietly without Puniſhment, notwithſtanding that he refuſed to ſwear to the Supremacy of the Queen, and the Abrogation of the Biſhop of Rome.

November 3. the Vice-chancellor ſent for the Curate of the round Pariſh in Cambridge, commanding him not to miniſter any more in the Engliſh Tongue, ſaying, he would have one uniform Order of Service throughout the Town, and that in Latin, with Maſs, which was eſtabliſhed the twelfth Day of this Month.

The Queen's Proceedings maintained in Cambridge before the Law.

November 6. Mr. Pollard preached at St. Michael's, and in his Sermon approved Purgatory.

November 28. the Archdeacon's Official viſited in Hinton, where he gave in Charge to preſent all ſuch as did diſturb the Queen's Proceedings, in hindering the Latin Service, the ſetting up of their Altars, and ſaying of Maſs, or any Part thereof.

December 15. there were two Proclamations at London; the one for the repealing of certain Acts made by King Edward, and for the ſetting up of Maſs the 20th of December then next following. The other was, that no Man ſhould interrupt any of thoſe that would ſay Maſs.

King Edward's Acts repealed.

The Parliament beginning about the 5th of October, continued till the 5th of December. In which Parliament were diſſolved as well all the Statutes made of Premunire in the Time of King Henry VIII, &c. as alſo other Laws and Statutes concerning Religion and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, decreed under King Edward VI. In which Parliament was appointed, that on December 20. then next enſuing the ſame Year, 1553, the old Form and Manner of Church-Service uſed in the laſt Year of King Henry, ſhould now again be reſtored.

On December 31. the Lord Marquis of Northampton was delivered out of the Tower.

About this Time a Prieſt of Canterbury ſaid Maſs on one Day, and the next Day after, he came into the Pulpit, and deſired all the People to forgive him; for he ſaid he had betrayed Chriſt, not as Judas did, but as Peter did, and there made a long Sermon againſt the Maſs.

A Prieſt of Canterbury repenting his ſaying of Maſs.

About this Time a great Number of new Biſhops, Deans, &c. were choſe, more than were made at one Time ſince the Conqueſt; namely, Dr. Holyman, Biſhop of Briſtol; Dr. Coates, Biſhop of Weſt-cheſter; Dr. Hopton, Biſhop of Norwich; Dr. Bourne, Biſhop of Bath; Dr. White, Biſhop of Lincoln; Dr. Mores, Biſhop of Rocheſter; Dr. Morgan, Biſhop of St. David's; Dr. Poole, Biſhop of St. Aſaph; Dr. Brooks, Biſhop of Glouceſter; Dr. Moreman, Coadjutor to the Biſhop of Exeter, and after his Deceaſe Biſhop of Exeter; Dr. Glin, Biſhop of Bangor; Mr. Fecknam, Dean of Paul's; Dr. Reynolds, Dean of Briſtol, with others.

New Biſhops made.

January 12. the Vice-chancelior of Cambridge called a Congregation General, wherein amongſt other Things he ſhewed, that the Queen would have there a Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt upon the 18th of February then next following, for that it

Anno 1554. it was her Birth-day; which was fulfilled the Day appointed, and that very ſolemnly.

Dr. Crome committed to the Fleet. On Saturday, January 13. Dr Crome was committed to the Fleet: Alſo the Sunday following one Mr. Addington was committed to the Tower. The ſame Sunday likewiſe the Biſhop of Wincheſter declared openly in the Court, that the Marriage between the Queen's Majeſty and the King of Spain was concluded; and the Day following, January 15, the Mayor with the Aldermen and certain Commons were at Court, and there they were commanded by the Lord Chancellor to prepare the City ready to receive the ſaid King of Spain.

The Marriage of Queen Mary.

On Thurſday Night following, January 25. the Lord Marquis of Northampton was again committed to the Tower, and Sir Edward Warner with him; who were brought to the Tower by the Mayor.

Juſtice Hales committed to the Marſhalſea, Mr. Rogers committed to Newgate.

On Saturday following, January 26. Juſtice Hales was committed to the Marſhalſea, and the ſame Day Mr. Rogers was committed to Newgate.

Strange Sights ſeen before the coming in of King Philip, and Subverſion of Religion.

And thus paſſing to the Month of February, here is to be noted, that upon the 15th Day of the ſaid Month, being Thurſday, within the City of London, about Nine of the Clock in the Forenoon ſtrange Sights were ſeen. Two Suns both ſhining at once, the one a good way diſtant from the other; at the ſame Time was alſo ſeen a Rainbow turned contrary, and a great deal higher than hath been accuſtomed. The common Standing of the Rainbow is thus ◠ but this ſtood thus ◡ with the Head downward, and the Feet as it were upward. Both theſe Sights were ſeen as well at Weſtminſter, in Cheapſide, on the South Side of St. Paul's, as in many other Places, and that by a great Number of honeſt Men. Alſo certain Aldermen went out of Guildhall to behold the Sight.

As touching the riſing of Mr. Wyat, with Sir William Cobham, and others in Kent; alſo of the Queen's coming to Guildhall, and her Oration there made; likewiſe of the Apprehenſion of the Duke of Suffolk with his Brother Lord John Gray; and the next Day after of the beheading of the Lord Gilford and Lady Jane, which was February 12. all which was in the Month of February; becauſe moſt of theſe Matters have been briefly touched upon before, I will ceaſe to make any further Mention of them: Having ſomewhat notwithſtanding to declare concerning the Arrraignment and Death of the Duke of Suffolk.

The Duke of Suffolk arraigned.

Upon Saturday, February 17. the Duke of Suffolk was arraigned at Weſtminſter, and the ſame Day condemned to die by his Peers; the Earl of Arundel was chief Judge for this Day: And on the 23d of the ſame Month he was beheaded at Tower-Hill, the Order of whoſe Death here followeth.

The devout Behaviour of the Duke of Suffolk at his Death. Dr. Weſton the Duke's Ghoſtly Father againſt the Duke's Will.

On Friday, February 23, about Nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, the Lord Henry Gray, Duke of Suffolk, was brought forth of the Tower of London unto the Scaffold on Tower-Hill, with a great Company, &c. and in his coming thither, there accompanied him Dr. Weſton as his Ghoſtly Father, notwithſtanding, as it ſeemed, againſt the Will of the ſaid Duke. For when the Duke went up to the Scaffold, the ſaid Weſton being on the Left Hand, preſſed to go up with him; the Duke with his Hand, put him down again off the Stairs; and Weſton taking hold of the Duke, forced him down likewiſe. And as they aſcended the ſecond Time, the Duke again put him down. Then Weſton ſaid, that it was the Queen's Pleaſure he ſhould ſo do. Wherewith the Duke caſting his Hands abroad, aſcended up the Scaffold, and pauſed a pretty while after. And then he ſaid: Maſters, I have offended the Queen, and her Laws, and thereby am juſtly condemned to die, and am willing to die, deſiring all Men to be obedient, and I pray God that this my Death may be an Enſample to all Men, beſeeching you all to bear me Witneſs, that I die in the Faith of Chriſt, truſting to be ſaved by his Blood only, which died for me, and for all them that truly repent, and ſtedfaſtly truſt in him. And I do repent, deſiring you all to pray to God for me; and that when you ſee my Breath depart from me, you will pray to God that he may receive my Soul. And then he deſired all Men to forgive him, ſaying, that the Queen had forgiven him. The Words of the Duke to the People.

Then Dr. Weſton declared with a loud Voice, that the Queen's Majeſty had forgiven him. With that ſeveral of the Standers by ſaid with good and audible Voices: Such Forgiveneſs God ſend thee, meaning Dr. Weſton. Then the Duke kneeled down upon his Knees, and ſaid the Pſalm, Miſerere mei Deus unto the End, holding up his Hands, and looking up to Heaven. And when he had ended the Pſalm, he ſaid, Into thy Hands, O Lord, I commend my Spirit, &c. Then he aroſe and ſtood up, and delivered his Cap and his Scarf unto the Executioner. Then the ſaid Executioner kneeled down, and aſked the Duke Forgiveneſs. And the Duke ſaid, God forgive thee, and I do; and when thou doeſt thine Office, I pray thee do it well, and bring me out of this World quickly, and God have Mercy to thee. Then ſtood there a Man and ſaid, My Lord, how ſhall I do for the Money that you do owe me? And the Duke ſaid, Alaſs, good Fellow, I pray thee trouble me not now, but go thy Way to my Officers. Then he knit a Kercher about his Face, and kneeled down and ſaid, Our Father which art in Heaven, &c. unto the End. And then he ſaid, Chriſt have Mercy upon me, and laid down his Head on the Block, and the Executioner took the Ax, and at the firſt Chop ſtruck off his Head, and held it up to the People, &c. The Duke prayeth. The Duke prepareth himſelf to Death. The End of the Duke of Suffolk.

The ſame Day a Number of Priſoners had their Pardon, and came thro' the City with their Halters about their Necks. There were in * Number about 200.

Upon Saturday, February 24. Sir William Stenlow was committed as Priſoner to the Maſter of the Horſe to be kept. This Sir William was at this Time one of the Lady Elizabeth's Gentlemen.

Upon Sunday, February 25. Sir John Rogers was committed to the Tower.

In this Week, all ſuch Prieſts within the Dioceſs of London as were married, were divorced from their Livings, and commanded to bring their Wives within a Fortnight, that they might be likewiſe divorced from them. This the Biſhop did of his own Power.

Upon Tueſday in the ſame Week, February 27. certain Gentlemen of Kent were ſent into Kent, there to be executed. Their Names were theſe, the two Mantels, two Knevets, and Bret; with theſe Mr. Rudſton alſo and certain others were condemned, and ſhould have been executed, but they had their Pardon.

As concerning the foreſaid Mr. Mantel the elder, here is to be noted, that as he was led to Execution, and at his firſt caſting under the Gallows, the Rope brake. Then they would have had him recanted the Truth, and received the Sacrament of the Altar (as they term it) and then they ſaid he ſhould have had the Queen's Pardon: But Mr. Mantel refuſed their Counſel, and choſe rather to die.

March 17. every Houſholder in London was commanded to appear before the Aldermen of their Ward, and there were commanded, that they, their Wives and Servants, ſhould prepare themſelves to Confeſſion, and receive the Sacrament at Eaſter, and that neither they, nor any of them, ſhould depart out of the City until Eaſter was paſt.

Lady Elizabeth brought to the Tower.

Upon the Sunday following, March 18. the Lady Elizabeth, the Queen's Siſter, of whom Mention was made before, was brought to the Tower.

Upon Eaſter Eve, March 24. the Lord Marquis of Northampton, the Lord Cobham, and Sir William Cobham were delivered out of the Tower.

The Pyx riſen out of the Sepulchre from all the Watchmen at St. Pancraſe Church.

March 25. being Eaſter-day in the Morning, at St. Pancraſe in Cheap, the Crucifix with the Pyx [the Veſſel in which the Hoſt was kept] were taken out of the Sepulchre, before the Prieſt roſe to the Reſurrection: So that when after his accuſtomed Manner he put his Hand into the Sepulchre, and ſaid very devoutly, He is riſen, He is not here; he found his Words true, for he was not there indeed. Whereupon being half diſmayed, they conſulted among themſelves whom they thought to be the likelieſt to do this Thing: In which Conſultation they remembred one Marſh, which a little before had been put from that Parſonage becauſe he was married, to whoſe Charge they laid it. But when they could not prove it, being brought before the Mayor, they then burthened him to have kept Company with his Wife, ſince that they were by Commandment divorced. Whereto he anſwer'd, That he thought the Queen had done him Wrong, to take from him both his Living and his Wife; which Words were then noted, and taken very grievouſly, and he and his Wife were both committed to ſeveral Compters, notwithſtanding that he had been very ſick.

A Cat hanged with a ſhaven Crown upon the Gallows in Cheapſide.

The 8th of April there was a Cat hanged upon a Gallows at the Croſs in Cheapſide, apparelled like a Prieſt ready to ſay Maſs, with a ſhaven Crown: Her two fore-Feet were tied over her Head, and a round Paper like a Wafer-cake put between them; which cauſed great Anger againſt the City of London. For the Queen and the Biſhops were very angry; and the ſame Afternoon there was a Proclamation iſſued, that whoſoever could bring forth the Party that did hang up the Cat, ſhould have twenty Nobles, which was afterwards increaſed to twenty Marks, but none could or would earn it.

Sir James Croft, Mr. Winter, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton arraign'd at Guildhall.

Upon Tueſday, April 17. Sir James Croft and Mr. Winter were brought to Guildhall, with whom alſo was brought Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, and there arraigned of Treaſon, for that he was ſuſpected to be of the Conſpiracy with the Duke of Suffolk and the reſt, againſt the Queen; where he ſo learnedly and wiſely behaved himſelf, (as well in clearing his own Caſe, as alſo in opening ſuch Laws of the Realm as were then alledged againſt him) that the Queſt which was charged with this Matter, could not in Conſcience but find him not guilty; for which, the ſaid twelve Perſons of the Queſt, being ſubſtantial Men of the City, were each bound in the Sum of 500 Pounds, to appear before the Queen's Council at a Day appointed, there to anſwer ſuch Things as ſhould be laid againſt them. Which Queſt appeared accordingly before the Council in the Star-Chamber upon Wedneſday, April 25. From whence, after certain Queſtioning, they were committed to Priſon, Emanuel Lucar and Mr. Whetſtone were committed to the Tower, and the other ten to the Fleet. Anno 1554.

Lord Thomas Gray beheaded.

April 27. the Lord Thomas Gray, Brother to the late Duke of Suffolk, was beheaded at Tower-hill.

On Saturday, April 28. Sir James Croft and Mr. Winter were again brought to Guildhall, where Sir James Croft was arraigned and condemned; and becauſe the Day was far ſpent, Mr. Winter was not arraigned.

William Thomas condemned.

Upon Thurſday, May 17. William Thomas was arraigned at Guildhall, and the ſame Day condemned, who the next Day after was hanged, drawn and quartered. His Accuſation was, for conſpiring the Queen's Death; which how true it was I have not to ſay.

In the Month of May it was given out, that a ſolemn Diſputation ſhould be held at Cambridge (as ye heard before in Dr. Ridley's Letter, page 80) between Mr. Bradford, Mr. Saunders, Mr. Rogers, and others of that Side, and the Doctors of both the Univerſities on the other Side, like as had been before in Oxford. Whereupon the Preachers who were in Priſon having Notice thereof, albeit they were deſtitute of their Books, and were not ignorant of the Purpoſe of their Adverſaries, and how the Cauſe was prejudiced before, alſo how the Diſputations were confuſedly handled at Oxford; nevertheleſs they thought not to refuſe the Offer of Diſputation, ſo that they might be quietly and indifferently heard; and therefore wiſely pondering the Matter with themſelves, by a publick Conſent directed out of Priſon a Declaration of their Mind by Writing, the 8th of May, which is here inſerted.

The Preachers in Priſon refuſe not to diſpute before indifferent Judges.

BEcauſe we hear that it is determined of the Magiſtrates, and ſuch as be in Authority, eſpecially of the Clergy, to ſend us ſpeedily out of the Priſons of the King's-Bench, the Fleet, the Marſhalſea, and Newgate, where at this Preſent we are, and of long Time ſome of us have been, not as Rebels, Traitors, ſeditious Perſons, Thieves, or Tranſgreſſors of any Laws of this Realm, Inhibitions, Proclamations, or Commandments of the Queen's Highneſs, or of any of the Councils (God's Name be praiſed therefore) but only for the Conſcience we have to God, and his moſt holy Word and Truth, upon moſt certain Knowledge: Becauſe we ſay, we hear that it is determined, we ſhall be ſent to one of the Univerſities of Cambridge or Oxford, there to diſpute with ſuch as are appointed in that Behalf: In that we purpoſe not to diſpute otherwiſe than by Writing, except it may be before the Queen's Highneſs and her Council, or before the Parliament-Houſes; and therefore perchance it will be bruted abroad, that we are not able to maintain by the Truth of God's Word, and the Conſent of the true and catholick Church of Chriſt, the Doctrine we have generally and ſeverally taught, and ſome of us have written and ſet forth, where through the Godly and Simple may be offended, and ſomewhat weakened: we have thought it our bounden Duty now whilſt we may, by writing to publiſh and notify the Cauſes why we will not diſpute otherwiſe than is aboveſaid, to prevent the Offences which might come thereby.

The Cauſes why they will not otherwiſe diſpute than before indifferent Judges.

Firſt, Becauſe it is evidently known unto the whole World; that the Determinations of both the Univerſities in Matters of Religion, eſpecially wherein we ſhould diſpute, are directly againſt God's Word, yea, againſt their own Determinations in the Time of our late Sovereign Lord and moſt godly Prince, King Edward: and further it is known they be our open Enemies, and have already condemned our Cauſes, before any Diſputation had of the ſame.

The ſecond Cauſe.

Secondly, Becauſe the Prelates and Clergy do not ſeek either us or the Verity, but our Deſtruction and their Glory. For if they had ſought us (as Charity requireth) then would they have called us forth hereabouts before their Laws were ſo made, that frankly and without Peril we might have ſpoken our Conſciences. Again, If they had ſought for the Verity, they would not have concluded of Controverſies before they had been diſputed; ſo that it eaſily appeareth, that they ſeek their own Glory and our Deſtruction, and not us and the Verity: And therefore we have good Cauſe to refuſe Diſputation, as a Thing which ſhall not further prevail than to the ſetting forth of their Glory, and Suppreſſion of the Verity.

The third Cauſe. The Judges of the Diſputation profeſſed Enemies againſt the Truth.

Thirdly, Becauſe the Cenſors and Judges (as we hear who they be, are manifeſt Enemies to the Truth, and that which worſe is, obſtinate Enemies, before whom Pearls are not to be caſt, by the Commandment of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and by his own Example. That they be ſuch, their Doings of late at Oxford, and in the Convocation Houſe, in October laſt paſt, do moſt evidently appear.

The fourth Cauſe. Want of Books neceſſary for Diſputation.

Fourthly, Becauſe ſome of us have been in Priſon theſe eight or nine Months, where we have had no Books, no Paper, no Pen, no Ink, or convenient Place for Study, we think we ſhould do evil, thus ſuddenly to deſcend into Diſputation with them, which may alledge, as they liſt, the Fathers and their Teſtimonies, becauſe our Memories have not that which we have read ſo readily, as to reprove, when they ſhall report and wreſt the Authors to their Purpoſe, or to bring forth that we may have there for our Advantage.

The fifth Cauſe.

Fifthly, Becauſe in Diſputation we ſhall not be permitted to proſecute our Argument, but be ſtopt when we ſhould ſpeak; one ſaying this, another that, the third his Mind, &c. As was done to the learned Fathers, eſpecially Dr. Ridley at Oxford, who could not be permitted to declare his Mind and Meaning of the Propoſitions, and had oftentimes half a Dozen at once ſpeaking againſt him, always hindering him to proſecute his Argument, and to anſwer accordingly: we will not ſpeak of the hiſſing, ſcoffing, and taunting, which wonderfully then was uſed. If on this Sort, and much worſe, they handled theſe Fathers, much more will they be ſhameleſs bold with us, if we ſhould enter into Diſputation with them.

The ſixth Cauſe.

Sixthly, Becauſe the Notaries, that ſhall receive and write the Diſputations ſhall be of their Appointment, and ſuch as either do not or dare not favour the Truth, and therefore muſt write either to pleaſe them, or elſe they themſelves (the Cenſors and Judges we mean) at their pleaſure will put to, and take from that which is written by the Notaries; who cannot, or muſt not have in their Cuſtody that which they write, longer than the Diſputation endureth, as their Doing at Oxford declareth. No Copy nor Scroul could any Man have by their good Will. For the Cenſors and Judges will have all delivered into their Hands. Yea, if any Man was ſeen there to write, as the Report is, the ſame Man was ſent for, and his Writings taken from him: ſo muſt the Diſputation ſerve only for the Glory, not of God, but of the Enemies of his Truth.

For theſe Cauſes we all think it ſo neceſſary not to diſpute with them, as if we did diſpute we ſhould do that which they deſire and purpoſely ſeek, to promote the Kingdom of Antichriſt, and to ſuppreſs (as much as may be) the Truth. We will not ſpeak of the Offence that might come to the Godly, when they ſhould hear by the Report of our Enemies, our Anſwers and Arguments framed (you may be ſure) for their Fantaſies, to the ſlandering of the Verity.

Therefore we publiſh, and by this Writing notify unto the whole Congregation and Church of England, that for theſe aforeſaid Cauſes we will not diſpute with them otherwiſe than with the Pen, unleſs it be before the Queen's Highneſs and her Council, or before the Houſes of the Parliament, as is above ſaid. If they will write we will anſwer, and by writing confirm and prove out of the infallible Verity, even the very Word of God, and by the Teſtimony of the good and moſt antient Fathers in Chriſt's Church, this our Faith and every Piece thereof, which hereafter we, in a Sum do write and ſend abroad purpoſely, that our good Brethren and Siſters in the Lord may know it: and to ſeal up the ſame, we are ready through God's Help and Grace to give our Lives to the Halter or Fire, or otherwiſe, as God ſhall appoint: humbly requiring, and in the Bowels of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt beſeeching all that fear God, to behave themſelves as obedient Subjects to the Queen's Highneſs and the Superiour Powers, which are ordained of God under her, rather after our Example to give their Heads to the Block, than in any Point to rebel, or once to mutter againſt the Lord's anointed; we mean our Sovereign Lady Queen Mary, into whoſe Heart we beſeech the Lord of Mercy plentifully to pour the Wiſdon and Grace of his Holy Spirit, now and for ever. Amen.

Conditions aſſigned how they would diſpute.

The Confeſſion and Faith of the impriſoned Preachers.

Firſt, We confeſs and believe all the canonical Books of the Old Teſtament, and all the Books of the New Teſtament, to be the very true Word of God, and to be written by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, and are therefore to be heard accordingly, as the Judge in all Controverſies and Matters of Religion.

The Catholick Church.

Secondly, We confeſs and believe, that the Catholick Church, which is the Spouſe of Chriſt, as a moſt obedient and loving Wife, doth embrace and follow the Doctrine of theſe Books in all Matters of Religion, and therefore is ſhe to be heard accordingly; ſo that thoſe which will not hear this Church thus following and obeying the Word of her Husband, we account as Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, according to this Saying, If he will not hear the Church, let him be to thee as a Heathen.

The Creed.

Thirdly, We believe and confeſs all the Articles of Faith and Doctrine ſet forth in the Symbol of the Apoſtles, which we commonly call the Creed, and in the Symbols of the Council of Nice, kept in the Year 324. of Conſtantinople, in the Year 384. of Epheſus, in the Year 432.

of Chalcedon, in the Year 454. of Toletum the firſt and fourth. Alſo in the Symbols of Athanaſius, Ireneus, Tertullian, and of Damaſus, which was about the Year of our Lord 376. We confeſs and believe (we ſay) the Doctrine of the Symbols generally and particularly; ſo that whoſoever doth otherwiſe, we hold the ſame to err from the Truth.

Juſtification by Faith only in Chriſt.

What Faith is.

Fourthly, We believe and confeſs concerning Juſtification, that as it cometh only from God's Mercy thro' Chriſt, ſo it is perceived and had of none, who be of Years of Diſcretion, otherwiſe than by Faith only: which Faith is not an Opinion, but a certain Perſwaſion wrought by the Holy Ghoſt in the Mind and Heart of Man, where-thro' as the Mind is illuminated, ſo the Heart is ſuppled to ſubmit itſelf to the Will of God unfeignedly, and ſo ſheweth forth an inherent Righteouſneſs, which is to be diſcerned in the Articles of Juſtification, from the Righteouſneſs which God endueth us withal, juſtifying us, although inſeparably they go together. And this we do not for Curioſity or Contention ſake, but for Conſcience ſake, that it might be quiet, which it can never be, if we confound without Diſtinction, Forgiveneſs of Sins, and Chriſt's Juſtice imputed to us, with Regeneration and inherent Righteouſneſs. By this we diſallow papiſtical Doctrine of Free-will, of Works of Supererrogation, of Merits, of the Neceſſity of auricular Confeſſion and Satisfaction to God-wards.

The Doctrine of free Juſtification defended not for Curioſity, but for Quiet of Conſcience.

Service in the vulgar Tongue.

Fifthly, We confeſs and believe concerning the exteriour Service of God, that it ought to be according to the Word of God; and therefore in the Congregation all Things publick ought to be done in ſuch a Tongue as may be moſt to edify, and not in Latin, where the People underſtand not the ſame.

Invocation to God alone.

Sixthly, We confeſs and believe that God only by Chriſt Jeſus is to be prayed unto and called upon; and therefore we diſallow Invocation or Prayer to Saints departed this Life.

Seventhly, We confeſs and believe, that as a Man departeth this Life, ſo ſhall he be judged in the laſt Day generally, and in the mean Seaſon is entered either into the State of the Bleſſed for ever, or Damned for ever; and therefore is either paſt all Help, or elſe needs no Help of any in this Life. By Reaſon whereof we affirm Purgatory, Maſſes of Scala cæli, Trentals, and ſuch Suffrages as the Popiſh Church doth obtrude as neceſſary, to be the Doctrine of the Antichriſt.

Purgatory and Maſſes ſuffragatory denied.

Two Sacraments.

Eighthly, We confeſs and believe the Sacraments of Chriſt, which be Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, that they ought to be miniſtred according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, concerning the ſubſtantial Parts of them: and that they be no longer Sacraments, than they be had in Uſe, and uſed to the End for which they were inſtituted.

And here we plainly confeſs, that the Mutilation of the Lord's Supper, and the Subtraction of the one Kind from the lay People, is antichriſtian. And ſo is the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation of the ſacramental Bread and Wine after the Words of Conſecration, as they be called.

Againſt Tranſubſtantiation.

Againſt Adoration of the Sacrament.

Item, The Adoration of the Sacrament with Honour due unto God: the Reſervation and carrying about of the ſame.

The Maſs to be no propitiatory Sacrifice.

Item, The Maſs to be a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead, or a Work that pleaſeth God.

All theſe we believe and confeſs to be Antichriſt's Doctrine: as is the Inhibition of Marriage as unlawful to any State. And we doubt not by God's Grace, but we ſhall be able to prove all our Confeſſions here to be moſt true by the Verity of God's Word, and Conſent of the Catholick Church, which followeth and hath followed the Governance of God's Spirit, and the Judgment of his Word. Anno 1554.

And this thro' the Lord's Help we will do, either in Diſputation by Word before the Queen's Highneſs and her Council, either before the Parliament Houſes, of whom we doubt not but to be indifferently heard, or elſe with our Pens, whenſoever we ſhall be thereto by them that have Authority, required and commanded.

In the mean Seaſon, as obedient Subjects, we ſhall behave ourſelves towards all that be in Authority, and not ceaſe to pray to God for them, that he would govern them all, generally and particularly, with the Spirit of Wiſdom and Grace, and ſo we heartily deſire and humbly pray all Men to do, in no Point conſenting to any Kind of Rebellion or Sedition againſt our Sovereign Lady the Queen's Highneſs: but where they cannot obey, but they muſt diſobey God, there to ſubmit themſelves with all Patience and Humility to ſuffer as the Will and Pleaſure of the high Powers ſhall judge: as we are ready, through the Goodneſs of the Lord, to ſuffer whatſoever they ſhall adjudge us unto, rather than we will conſent to any Doctrine contrary to this which we here confeſs, unleſs we ſhall be juſtly convinced thereof, either by writing or by Word, before ſuch Judges as the Queen's Highneſs and her Council, or the Parliament Houſes ſhall appoint. For the Univerſities and Clergy have condemned our Cauſes already by the greater, but not by the better Part, without all Diſputation of the ſame: and therefore moſt juſtly we may, and do appeal from them to be our Judges in this Behalf, except it may be in writing, that to all Men the Matter may appear. The Lord of Mercy endue us all with the Spirit of his Truth and Grace of Perſeverence therein unto the End. Amen.

Exhortation againſt Rebellion.

Appeal from the Univerſity Doctors, as not indifferent Judges.

And thus much concerning this preſent Declaration ſubſcribed by theſe Preachers which was on the 8th Day of May.

Furthermore, the 19th of the ſaid Month, the Lady Elizabeth, the Queen's Siſter, was brought to the Tower, and committed to the Cuſtody of Sir John Williams, afterwards Lord Williams of Tame, by whom her Highneſs was courteouſly treated: who afterwards was had to Woodſtock, and there committed to the Keeping of Sir Henry Benifield, Knight, of Oxborough in Norfolk; who, on the other Side, both forgetting her Eſtate, and his own Duty, ſhewed himſelf more hard and ſtreight unto her, than either Cauſe was given of her Part, or Reaſon of his own Part would have led him.

Lady Elizabeth committed to the Cuſtody of Sir John Williams.

Afterwards to Sir Henry Benifield's Keeping.

Anno 1354. On Friday, July 20. King Philip arrived at Southampton. The Prince himſelf was the firſt that landed; who immediately as he ſet Foot upon the Land, drew out his Sword, and carried it naked in his Hand. A little without the Town the Mayor of Southampton, with certain Commoners, met him, and delivered the Keys of the Town unto the Prince, who removed his Sword, naked as it was, out of his Right Hand into his Left, and ſo received the Keys of the Mayor without any Word ſpeaking, or Countenance of Thankfulneſs, and after a while delivered the Keys to the Mayor again. At the Town Gate the Earl of Arundel and the Lord Williams met him, and ſo he was brought to his Lodging.

Upon Wedneſday following, July 25. being St. James's Day, Philip Prince of Spain, and Mary Queen of England, were ſolemnly married in the Cathedral Church at Wincheſter, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, in the Preſence of a great Number of Noblemen of both the Realms. At the Time of this Marriage, the Emperor's Ambaſſador being preſent, openly pronounced, that in Conſideration of that Marriage, the Emperor had granted and given unto his Son the Kingdom of Naples, &c.

Marriage between King Philip and Queen Mary.

Whereupon the firſt of Auguſt following, there was a Proclamation, that from that Time forth the Style of all Manner of Writings ſhould be altered, and this following uſed.

Philip and Mary, by the Grace of God, King and Queen of England, France, Naples, Jeruſalem and Ireland, Defenders of the Faith, Princes of Spain and Sicily, Archdukes of Auſtrich, Dukes of Milan, Burgundy, and Brabant, Counties of Haſpurge, Flanders and Tyrol.

Of this Marriage as the Papiſts chiefly ſeemed to be very glad, ſo ſeveral of them, after divers Studies to ſhew forth their inward Affections, made Interludes and Pageants, ſome drew forth Genealogies, deriving his Pedigree from Edward the third, and John of Gaunt. Amongſt others, Mr. White, then Biſhop of Lincoln, made certain verſes; a Tranſlation whereof we have here inſerted.

Theſe Verſes were in Latin in the other Editions, but now tranſlated into Engliſh, by Mr. Rawlinſon Corpſe.

After the Conſummation of the Marriage, the King and Queen removed from Wincheſter to ſeveral other Places, and by eaſy Journeys came to Windſor-caſtle, where he was inſtalled in the Order of the Garter, upon Sunday, Auguſt 12. From thence they both removed to Richmond, and from thence by Water to London, and landed at the Biſhop of Wincheſter's Houſe, through which they paſſed both into Southwark-Park, and ſo to Southwark-Houſe called Suffolk-Place, where they lay that Night, being the 18th of Auguſt.

King Philip cometh to London.

The next Day the King and Queen rode from Suffolk-Place (accompanied with a great Number, as well of Noblemen as Gentlemen) thro' the City of London to Whitehall, and at London-Bridge, as he entered at the Draw-bridge, was a vain great Spectacle ſet up, two Images repreſenting two Giants, one named Corineus, and the other Gogmagog, holding between them certain Latin Verſes. Anno 1554.

Vain Pageants of London.

From London-Bridge they paſſed the Conduit in Gracious-ſtreet, which was finely painted, and among other Things, the nine Worthies, whereof King Henry VIII. was one. He was painted in Harneſs, having in one Hand a Sword, and in the other Hand a Book; whereon was written Verbum Dei, delivering the ſame Book, as it were to his Son King Edward, who was painted in a Corner by him.

Wincheſter cannot abide the Book called Verbum Dei.

But this gave great Offence; for the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Lord Chancellor, ſent for the Painter, and not only called him Knave, for painting a Book in King Henry's Hand, and ſpecially for writing thereupon Verbum Dei, but alſo rank Traitor and Villain, ſaying to him, that he ſhould rather have put the Book into the Queen's Hand, who was alſo painted there, for that ſhe had reformed the Church and Religion, with other Things according to the pure and ſincere Word of God indeed. The Painter anſwered, and ſaid, That if he had known that had been the Matter whereof his Lordſhip ſent for him, he could have remedied it, and not have troubled his Lordſhip. The Biſhop anſwered, That it was the Queen's Majeſty's Will and Commandment that he ſhould ſend for him: And ſo commanding him to wipe out the Book and Verbum Dei too, he ſent him home. The Painter departed, but fearing leſt he ſhould leave ſome Part either of the Book, or of Verbum Dei in King Henry's Hand, he wiped away a Piece of his Fingers withal.

But one Thing by the Way I cannot let paſs, touching the * Rood newly ſate up againſt this Time, to welcome King Philip into St. Paul's Church. Anno 2 Mariæ, Bonner in his Royalty, and all his Prebendaries about him in Paul's Quire, the Rood laid along upon the Pavements, and alſo the Doors of St. Paul's being ſhut, the Biſhop with others ſung divers Prayers by the Rood: That being done, they anointed the Rood with Oil in divers Places, and after the anointing, kiſſed it. After that, they took the ſaid Rood, aud weighed him up, and ſet him in his old accuſtomed Place, and all the while they were doing thereof, the whole Quire ſang Te Deum.

The erecting up of the Rood at Paul's.

The Prince thus being in the Church of Paul's, after Dr. Harpsfield had finiſhed his Oration in Latin, ſet forward through Fleet-ſtreet, and ſo came to Whitehall, where he with the Queen remained four Days after, and from thence removed unto Richmond.

After this, all the Lords had leave to depart into their Countries, with Commandment to bring all their Harneſs and Artillery into the Tower of London with all Speed. Now remained there no Engliſh Lord at the Court, but the Biſhop of Wincheſter. From Richmond they removed to Hampton-Court, where the Hall-door within the Court was continually ſhut, ſo that no Man might enter, unleſs his Errand were firſt known, which ſeem'd ſtrange to Engliſhmen that had not been uſed thereto.

September 17. was a Proclamation in London, That all Vagabonds and maſterleſs Men, as well Strangers as Engliſhmen, ſhould depart the City within five Days; and ſtraitly charging all Innholders, Victuallers, Taverners, and Alehouſe-keepers, with all others that ſell Victuals, that they after the ſaid five Days ſhould not ſell any Meat, Drink, or any Kind of Victual to any Serving-man whatſoever, unleſs he brought a

About the ſame Time, upon Corpus-Chriſti Day, the Proceſſion being made in Smithfield, where after the Manner the Prieſt with his Box went under the Canopy, by chance there came by the Way a certain ſimple Man, named John Street, a Joyner of Coleman-ſtreet, who having ſome Haſte in his Buſineſs, and finding no other Way to paſs through, by chance went under the Canopy by the Prieſt. The Prieſt ſeeing the Man ſo to preſume to come under the Canopy, being belike afraid, and worſe feared than hurt, for fear let his Pyx fall down. The poor Man being ſtraitways apprehended, was had to the Compter, the Prieſt accuſing him unto the Council, as though he had come to ſlay him; when as the poor Man, as himſelf hath ſince declared unto us, had no ſuch Thought ever in his Mind. Then from the Compter he was had unto Newgate, where he was caſt into the Dungeon, there chained to a Poſt, where he was cruelly and miſerably handled, and ſo extreamly dealt withal, that being but ſimple before, he was now ſcared out of his Wits altogether, and ſo upon the ſame had to Bedlam.

About the 5th of October, divers as well Houſholders as Servants and Prentices were apprehended and taken, and committed to ſundry Priſons, for having and ſelling of certain Books which were ſent into England by the Preachers that fled into Germany and other Countries; which Books nipped a great Number ſo near, that within one Fortnight there were little leſs than threeſcore impriſoned for this Matter: Among whom was Mr. Brown a Goldſmith, Mr. Spark a Draper, Randal Tirer a Stationer, Mr. Beſton a Merchant, with many others.

Men priſoned for Books.

Upon Friday, October 26. certain Men whereof I ſpake before, which were of Mr. Throgmorton's Queſt, being in Number eight (for the other four were delivered out of Priſon, for that they ſubmitted themſelves, and ſaid they had offended, not conſidering Truth to be Truth, but for Fear ſaid ſo) theſe eight Men, I ſay, whereof Mr. Emanuel Lucas, and Mr. Whetſtone were chief, were called before the Council in the Star-Chamber; where they all affirmed that they had done all Things in that Matter according to their Knowledge, and with good Conſciences, even as they ſhould anſwer before God at the Day of Judgment. When Mr. Lucas ſaid openly before all the Lords, that they had done in the Matter like honeſt Men, and true and faithful Subjects, and therefore they humbly beſought the Lord Chancellor, and the other Lords, to be Means to the King and Queen's Majeſties that they might be diſcharged and ſet at liberty, and ſaid that they were all contented humbly to ſubmit themſelves to their Majeſties, ſaving and reſerving their Truth, Conſciences, and Honeſty: Some of the Lords ſaid, that they were worthy to pay 1000 Pounds apiece, and others ſaid, that Mr. Lucas and Mr. Whetſtone were worthy to pay 1000 Marks a piece, and the reſt 500 l. apiece. In concluſion, Sentence was given by the Lord Chancellor, that they ſhould pay 1000 Marks apiece, and be ſent to Priſon again, there to remain till further Order were taken for their Puniſhment.

The Trouble of the good Men which were of Mr. Throgmorton's Queſt.

On Sunday, November 4. five Prieſts did Penance at Paul's Croſs, which were content to put away their Wives, and take upon them again to miniſter. Every one of them had a Taper in his Hand, and a Rod, wherewith the Preacher did diſpel them.

Upon Wedneſday, November 7. the Lord Paget, and Sir Edward Haſtings, Maſter of the Horſe, were ſent as Ambaſſadors, as it was adjudged, to Cardinal Poole, who lay all the Summer before at Bruſſels; and it was thought they were ſent to accompany and conduct him into England, where at that Time he was nominated Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Cardinal Poole nominated Archbiſhop of Canterbury

Upon Friday, November 9. Mr. Barlow late Biſhop of Bath, and Mr. Cardmaker, were brought before the Council in the Star-Chamber, where after Communication they were commanded to the Fleet.

Upon Saturday, November 10. the Sheriffs of London had Commandment to take an Inventory of every one of their Goods which were of Maſter Throgmorton's Queſt, and to ſeal up their Doors, which was done the ſame Day. Mr. Whetſtone, Mr. Lucas, Mr. Kytely, were judged to pay 1000 Pounds apiece, the reſt 1000 Marks apiece, to be paid within one Fortnight after. From this Payment were exempted thoſe four which confeſſed a Fault, and ſubmitted themſelves, whoſe Names are theſe, Mr. Loe, Mr. Poynter, Mr. Beſwicke, and Mr. Carter.

Edmund Bonner Biſhop of London about this Time goeth in his Viſitation; for the better Preparation whereof were ſet forth certain Articles to the Number of 37; which Articles, partly for the Tediouſneſs of them, partly for that Mr. Bale in a certain Treatiſe hath ſufficiently painted out the ſame in their Colours, I ſkip them over, proceeding in the Progreſs of this Biſhop in his Viſitation in the County of Eſſex. Who paſſing through the ſaid County of Eſſex, being attended with divers worſhipful of the Shire (for ſo they were commanded) arrived at Sterford in Hertfordſhire, where he reſted certain Days, ſolacing himſelf with his Attendants aforeſaid at the Houſe of one Parſons his Nephew, whoſe Wife he commonly called his fair Neice. After ſome Days were paſſed, he proceeded in his Viſitation toward Hadham, his own Houſe and Pariſh, not paſt two Miles from Sterford, being there moſt ſolemnly rung out, as in all other Places where he paſſed. At length drawing near unto Hadham, when he heard no ſtirring there in Honour of his Holineſs, he grew into ſome Choler, and the nearer he approached the hotter was his Fit; and the quieter the Bells were, the unquieter was his Mood. Thus rode he on chafing and fuming with himſelf: What meaneth, ſaith he, that Knave the Clerk that he ringeth not? and the Parſon that he meeteth me not? with other paſſionate Expreſſions. There this patient Prelate, coming to the Town, alighted, calling for the Key of the Church, which was then all unready, for that, as they then pretended, he had prevented his Time by two Hours, whereupon he grew from Choler to plain Melancholy, ſo as no Man willingly would deal with him to qualify the raging Humour ſo far incorporated in his Breaſt. At laſt, the Church-door being opened, the Biſhop entred, and finding no Sacrament hanged up, no Rood-loft decked after the popiſh Precept (which had commanded about the ſame Time a well favoured Rood, and of tall Stature univerſally in all Churches to be ſet up) curtailed his ſmall Devotions, and fell from all Choler and Melancholy to flat Madneſs in the greateſt Degree, ſwearing and raging with an hunting Oath or two, that in his own Church, where he hoped to have ſeen beſt Order, he found moſt Diſor-der, to his Honour's moſt heavy Diſcomfort, as he ſaid, calling the Parſon (whoſe Name was Dr. Bricket) Knave, and Heretick. Who there humbled himſelf, and yielded, as it were, to his Fault, ſaying, He was ſorry his Lordſhip was come before that he and his Pariſh looked for him, and therefore could not do their Duties to receive him accordingly: And as for thoſe Things which were lacking, he truſted in ſhort Time hereafter he ſhould compaſs that which hitherto he could not bring about. Therefore if it pleaſed his Lordſhip to come to his poor Houſe, where his Dinner was prepared, he would ſatisfy him in thoſe Things which his Lordſhip thought amiſs. Yet this reaſonable Anſwer neither could ſatisfy or aſſwage his unreaſonable Paſſion. For the Catholick Prelate utterly defied him and his Chear, commanding him out of his Sight, ſaying, as his by-word was, Before God thou art a Knave, avant Heretick; and therewithal, whether thruſting or ſtriking at him, ſo it was that with his Hand he gave Sir Thomas Joſſelin, Knight, (who was then amongſt the reſt, and ſtood next the Biſhop) a good Blow upon the Upper Part of the Neck, even under his Ear, as ſome ſay which ſtood by; but, as he himſelf ſaid, he hit him full upon the Ear; whereat he was ſomewhat aſtoniſhed at the Suddenneſs of the Quarrel for that Time. At laſt he ſpake and ſaid, What meaneth your Lordſhip? have you been trained in Will. Summer's School, to ſtrike him that ſtandeth next you? The Biſhop ſtill in Rage either heard not, or would not hear.

Dr. Bricket Parſon of Hadham, called Knave by Bonner.

Bp. Bonner ſtriketh Sir Thomas Joſſelin.

Then Mr. Fecknam, Dean of Paul's, ſeeing the Biſhop ſtill in this bitter Rage, ſaid, O Mr. Joſſelin, you muſt bear with my Lord, for truly his long Impriſonment in the Marſhalſea, and the miſuſing of him there hath altered him, that in theſe Paſſions he is not Ruler of himſelf, nor it booteth any Man to give him Council until his Heat be paſt, and then aſſure yourſelf Mr. Joſſelin, my Lord will be ſorry for thoſe Abuſes that now he cannot ſee in himſelf. Whereupon he merrily replied, So it ſeems Mr. Fecknam, for now that he is come forth of the Marſhalſea, he is ready to go to Bedlam. At which merry Conceit ſome laughed, and ſome ſmiled, becauſe the Nail was ſo truly hit upon the Head. The Biſhop nothing abaſed at his own Folly, gave a deaf Ear; and it was no Marvel, that he was not aſhamed to ſtrike a Stranger, who ſpared not the burning of ſo many good Men.

Fecknam excuſeth Bp. Bonner.

Sir Thomas Joſſelin's Apothegm touching Bp. Bonner.

After this worthy Combat thus finiſhed, this martial Prelate preſently taketh him to his Horſe again, notwithſtanding he at firſt intended to ſtay at Hadham three or four Days, and had made Proviſion in his own Houſe accordingly; but leaving his Dinner he rode that Night with a ſmall Company of his Houſhold to Ware, to the great Wonder of all the Country, who looked not for his coming till 3 Days after.

At this haſty poſting away of the Biſhop, his whole Train of Attendants there left him; alſo his Doctors and Chaplains, a few excepted, tarried behind, and dined at Dr. Bricket's as merrily as the Biſhop rode toward Ware chafingly; which Dinner was prepared for the Biſhop himſelf.

A Story of a Rood or Croſs ſet up in Lancaſhire.

In this Viſitation of Biſhop Bonner above-mentioned, ye ſee how the Biſhop took on for not ſetting up the Rood, and ringing the Bells at Hadham. Ye heard alſo of the Precept, which commanded in every Pariſh a Rood to be erected, both well favoured and of a tall Stature. By occaſion whereof it cometh in Mind, and not out of Place, what happened in a certain Town in Lancaſhire near to Lancaſter, called Cockram, where the Pariſhioners and Church-wardens, having at the ſame Time a like Charge for the erecting of a Rood in their Pariſh Church, had made their Bargain and were at a Price with one that could cunningly carve and paint ſuch Idols for the framing of their Rood: Who, according to his Promiſe made them one, and ſet it up in their Church. This done, he demanded his Money; but they miſliking his Workmanſhip, refuſed to pay him, whereupon he arreſted them, and the Matter was brought before the Mayor of Lancaſter, who was a very fit Man for ſuch a Purpoſe, and an old Favourer of the Goſpel, which is rare in that Country. Then the Carver began to declare how they covenanted with him for the making of a Rood with the Appurtenances, ready carved and ſet up in their Church, which he according to his Promiſe had done; and now demanding his Money, they refuſed to pay him. Is this true, quoth the Mayor to the Wardens? Yea Sir, ſaid they. And why do you not pay the poor Man his due, quoth he? And it pleaſe you, maſter Mayor, quoth they, becauſe the Rood we had before was a well-favoured Man, and he promiſed to make us ſuch another; but this that he hath ſet us up now, is the worſt favoured Thing that ever you ſet your Eyes on, gaging and grinning in ſuch Sort, that none of our Children dare once look him in the Face, or come near him. The Mayor thinking it was good enough for that Purpoſe if it had been worſe; my Maſters, quoth he, howſoever the Rood like you, the poor Man's Labour hath been never the leſs, and it is a Pity that he ſhould have any Hindrance or Loſs thereby. Therefore I will tell you what you ſhall do: Pay him the Money ye promiſed him, and go your ways home and look on it, and if it will not ſerve for a God, make no more ado, but clap a Pair of Horns on his Head, and ſo he will make an excellent Devil. This the Pariſhoners took well in worth: The poor Man had his Money, and divers laughed well thereat; but ſo did not the Babyloniſh Prieſts.

This Mayor above-mentioned continued a Proteſtant almoſt 50 Years, and was the only Reliever of Mr. Marſh the Martyr, (whoſe Story followeth hereafter) with Meat, Drink and Lodging, while he lay in Lancaſter-caſtle, the Space of three Quarters of a Year, before he was had to Cheſter to be burned, &c.

The Mayor of Lancaſter a good Man.

About this Time there came a Precept or Mandate from Bonner Biſhop of London, to all Prieſts and Curates within his Dioceſs, for the aboliſhing of ſuch Scriptures and Writings as had been painted upon Church Walls in King Edward's Days. The Copy of which Precept or Mandate we thought good to inſert here, that the World may ſee the wicked Proceedings of their impious Zeal, or rather their malicious Rage againſt the Lord and his Word, and againſt the edifying of chriſtian People; whereby it might appear, by this blotting out of the Scriptures, not only how blaſphemouſly they ſpake againſt the holy Scriptures of God, but alſo how ſtudiouſly they ſought by all Manner of Means to keep the People ſtill in Ignorance.

Anno 1554.

A Mandate of Biſhop Bonner, to aboliſh the Scriptures and Writings painted upon the Church-Walls.

EDMUND by God's Permiſſion Biſhop of London, to all and every Parſons, Vicars, Clerks, and lettered, within the Pariſh of Hadham, or within the Precinct of our Dioceſs of London, whereſoever being, ſendeth greeting, Grace and Benediction.

The Scriptures painted on Church-Walls razed out.

Becauſe ſome Children of Iniquity, given up to carnal Deſires and Novelties, have by many Ways enterprized to baniſh the antient Manner and Order of the Church, and to bring in and eſtabliſh Sects and Hereſies; taking from thence the Picture of Chriſt, and many Things beſides inſtituted and obſerved of antient Time laudibly in the ſame, placing in the room thereof ſuch Things, as in ſuch a Place it behoved them not to do; and alſo have procured as a Stay to their Hereſies, (as they thought) certain Scriptures wrongly applied to be painted upon the Church-walls, all which Perſons tend chiefly to this End; that they might uphold the Liberty of the Fleſh, and Marriage of Prieſts, and deſtroy as much as lay in them, the reverent Sacrament of the Altar, and might extinguiſh and enervate Holy-Days, Faſting-Days, and other laudible Diſcipline of the Catholick Church, opening a Window to all Vices, and utterly cloſing up the Way to all Virtue: Wherefore we being moved with a chriſtian Zeal, judging that the Premiſes are not to be longer ſuffered, do for Diſcharge of our Duty, commit unto you joyntly and ſeverally, and by the Tenor hereof do ſtraightly charge and command you, that at the Receipt hereof, with all ſpeed convenient, you do warn, or cauſe to be warned, firſt, ſecond, and third Time, and peremptorily, all and ſingular Church-wardens and Pariſhioners whoſoever, within our foreſaid Dioceſs of London, whereſoever any ſuch Scriptures or Paintings have been attempted, that they aboliſh and extinguiſh ſuch Manner of Scriptures, ſo that by no Means they be either read or ſeen, and therein to proceed moreover as they ſhall ſee good and laudible in this Behalf. And if after the ſaid Monition, the ſaid Church-wardens and Pariſhioners ſhall be found remiſs and negligent, or culpable, then you jointly and ſeverally ſhall ſee the foreſaid Scriptures to be razed, aboliſhed and extinguiſhed forthwith: Citing all and ſingular thoſe Church-wardens and Pariſhioners (whom we alſo for the ſame do cite here by the Tenor hereof) that all and ſingular the Church-wardens, Pariſhioners, being ſlack and negligent, culpable therein, ſhall appear before us, our Vicar general and principal Official, or our Commiſſary ſpecial in our Cathedral Church of St. Paul at London, in the Conſiſtory there, at the Hour appointed for the ſame, the ſixth Day next after their Citation, if it be a Court-day, or elſe at the next Court-day after enſuing, whereas either we or our Official or Commiſſary ſhall ſit; there to ſay and alledge for themſelves ſome reaſonable Cauſe, if they have or can tell of any, why they ought not to be excommunicated, or otherwiſe puniſhed for their ſuch Negligence, Slackneſs and Fault, to ſay and to alledge, and further to do and receive, as Law and Reaſon requireth. And what you have done in the Premiſſes, do you certify us, or our Vicar, principal Official, and ſuch our Commiſſary, diligently and duly in all Things, and through all Things, or let him among you thus certify us, which hath taken upon him to execute this Mandate: In witneſs whereof we have ſet our Seals to theſe Preſents. Dated in the Biſhop's Palace at London the 25th Day of the Month of October, in the Year of our Lord 1554, and of our Tranſlation the 16th.

Note well theſe Cauſes, Reader, why the Scriptures ſhould be razed out.

Abour this Time the Lord Chancellor ſent Mr. Chriſtopherſon unto the Univerſity of Cambridge, with theſe three Articles, which he enjoyned them to obſerve.

Mr. Chriſtopherſon ſent to Cambridge with Gardiner's Inſtructions.

The Firſt, That every Scholar ſhould wear his Apparel according to his Degree in the Schools.

The Second was touching the Pronunciation of the Greek Tongue.

The Third, That every Preacher there ſhould declare the whole Stile of the King and Queen in their Sermons.

In this Univerſity of Cambridge, and alſo of Oxford, by Reaſon of the bringing of theſe Things, and eſpecially for the Alteration of Religion, many wiſe and learned Men departed the Univerſities; of whom, ſome of their own Accord gave over, ſome were thruſt out of their Fellowſhips, ſome were miſerably handled: Inſomuch that in Cambridge, in the College of St. John, there were 24 Places void together, in whoſe Rooms were taken in 24 others, which neither in Virtue nor Religion were to be compared to thoſe that were before. And no leſs miſerable was the Eſtate of Oxford, by Reaſon of the Time, and the ſtrait-dealing of the Viſitors, who for ſetting forward their papiſtical Proceedings, had no Regard or Reſpect to the Forwardneſs of good Wits, and the Maintenance of good Letters, beginning then more and more to flouriſh in that Univerſity.

In Cambridge were 24 Places void at one Time in one College.

But to proceed where we left off, being in the Month of November, on the 22d Day of the ſaid Month, being Monday, the Parliament began at Weſtminſter, in the Beginning whereof both the King and the Queen rode in their parliament Robes, having two Swords born before them. The Earl of Pembroke bare the King's Sword, and the Earl of Weſtmoreland the Queen's. They had two Caps of Maintenance born before them, whereof the Earl of Arundel bare one, and the Earl of Shrewsbury the other.

Cardinal Poole landed at Dover upon Wedneſday November 21, on which day one Act paſſed in the Parliament for his Reſtitution in Blood, utterly repealing, as falſe and moſt ſlanderous, that Act made againſt him in the Reign of King Henry VIII. and on the next Day, November 22. the King and Queen came to the Parliament-Houſe to give their Royal Aſſent, and to eſtabliſh this Act againſt his coming.

On Saturday, November 24. the ſaid Cardinal came by Water to London, and ſo to Lambeth-houſe, which was ready prepared againſt his coming.

On Wedneſday, November 28. there was a general Proceſſion in Paul's, for Joy that the Queen was conceived and quick with Child, as it was declared in a Letter ſent from the Council to the Biſhop of London. At this Proceſſion ten Biſhops, and all the Prebendaries of Paul's were preſent, and alſo the Lord Mayor with the Aldermen, and a great Number of Commons of the City in their beſt Array. The Copy of the Council's Letter here followeth.

A Letter from the Council to Edmund Bonner Biſhop of London, concerning Queen Mary's conceiving with Child.

AFTER our hearty Commendations unto your good Lordſhip: Whereas it hath pleaſed Almighty God among other his infinite Benefits of late moſt graciouſly poured upon us and this whole Realm, to extend his Benediction upon the Queen's Majeſty in ſuch Sort, as ſhe is conceived and * quick of Child; where by her Majeſty (being our natural Leige Lady, Queen, and undoubted Inheritor of this Imperial Crown) good Hope of certain Succeſſion in the Crown is given unto us, and conſequently the great Calamities (which for want of ſuch Succeſſion might otherwiſe have fallen upon us and our Poſterity) ſhall by God's Grace be well avoided, if we thankfully acknowledge this Benefit of Almighty God, endeavouring ourſelves with earneſt Repentance to thank, honour, and ſerve him, as we be moſt bounden: Theſe be not only to advertize you of this good News, to be by you publiſhed in all Places within your Dioceſs, but alſo to pray and require you, that both yourſelf do give God Thanks with us for this his eſpecial Grace, and alſo give Order that Thanks may be openly given by ſinging of Te Deum in all the Churches within your ſaid Dioceſs; and that likewiſe all Prieſts and other eccleſiaſtical Miniſters, in their Maſſes and other Divine Services, may continually pray to Almighty God ſo to extend his holy Hand over her Majeſty, the King's Highneſs, and this whole Realm, as that this Thing being by his omnipotent Power graciouſly thus begun, may by the ſame be well continued and brought to good Effect, to the Glory of his Name. Whereunto albeit we doubt not ye would of yourſelf have had ſpecial Regard without theſe our Letters, yet for the earneſt Deſire we have to have this Thing done out of Hand, and diligently continued, we have always ſo written theſe our Letters, to put you in Remembrance; and ſo bid your Lordſhip moſt heartily well to Fare. From Weſtminſter, November 27, 1554. Your aſſured loving Friends.

Alſo the ſame Day in the Afternoon Cardinal Poole came to the Parliament Houſe, which at that Time was kept in the great Chamber of the Court at White Hall, becauſe the Queen was then ſick, and could not go abroad: where the King and Queen's Majeſty ſitting under the Cloth of State, and the Cardinal ſitting on the Right Hand, with all the other Eſtates of the Parliament being preſent, the Biſhop of Wincheſter, being Lord Chancellor, began in this Manner:

Wincheſter's Words for receiving of Cardinal Poole.

MY Lords of the upper Houſe, and you my Maſters of the nether Houſe, here is preſent the right reverend Father in God my Lord Cardinal Poole, come from the Apoſtolick See of Rome, as Ambaſſador to the King and Queen's Majeſties, upon one of the weightieſt Cauſes that ever happened in this Realm, and which pertaineth to the Glory of God, and your universal Benefit. The which Ambaſſage their Majeſties Pleaſure is to be ſignified unto you all by his own Mouth, truſting that you will receive and accept it in as benevolent and thankful wiſe as their Highneſſes have done, and that you will give an intent and inclinable Ear unto him. Anno 1554.

The Lord Chancellor having ended, the Cardinal began his Oration, wherein he declared the Cauſes of his coming, and what were his Deſires and Requeſts. In the mean Time the Court Gate was kept ſhut till he had made an End.

The Cardinal's Oration in the Parliament Houſe.

MY Lords all, and you that are the Commons of this preſent Parliament aſſembled, which in Effect is nothing elſe but the State and Body of the whole Realm. As the Cauſe of my Repair hither hath been moſt wiſely and gravely declared by my Lord Chancellor, ſo, before that I enter to the Particularities of my Commiſſion, I have ſomewhat touching myſelf, and to give moſt humble and hearty Thanks to the King and Queen's Majeſties, and after them, to you all, which of a Man exiled and baniſhed from his Common-wealth, have reſtored me to be a Member of the ſame; and of a Man having no Place neither here, or elſewhere within this Realm, have admitted me in a Place, where to ſpeak and be heard. This I proteſt unto you all, that though I was exiled my native Country without juſt Cauſe, as God knoweth, yet the Ingratitude could not pull from me the Affection and Deſire that I had to profit and do you good. If the Offer of my Service might have been received, it was never to ſeek, and where that could not be taken, you never failed of my Prayer, nor ever ſhall.

But leaving the Rehearſal thereof, and coming more near to the Matter of my Commiſſion, I ſignify unto you all; That my principal Travel is for the Reſtitution of this noble Realm to the ancient Nobility, and to declare unto you, that the See apoſtolick, from whence I come, hath a ſpecial Reſpect to this Realm above all other *, and not without Cauſe, ſeeing that God himſelf, as it were by Providence, hath given this Realm Prerogative of Nobility above other: which to make more plain unto you, it is to be conſidered, that this Iſland firſt of all Iſlands received the Light of Chriſt's Religion. For as Stories teſtify, it was Prima provinciarum quæ amplexa eſt fidem Chriſti.

* More for the Advantage that was hoped by it, than any great Love.

England was the firſt of all Iſlands that received the Faith of Chriſt.

For the Britains being firſt Inhabitants of this Realm (notwithſtanding the Subjection of the Emperor and heathen Princes) did receive Chriſt's Faith from the apoſtolick See univerſally, and not in Parts as other Countries, nor by one and one, as Clocks increaſe their Hours by Diſtinction of Times, but altogether at once, as it were in a Moment. But after that their ill Merits or Forgetfulneſs of God had deſerved Expulſion, and that Strangers being Infidels, had poſſeſſed this Land, yet God of his Goodneſs not leaving where he once loved, ſo illuminated the Hearts of the Saxons, being heathen Men, that they forſook the Darkneſs of heathen Errors, and embraced the Light of Chriſt's Religion: ſo that within a ſmall Space Idolatry and heathen Superſtition was utterly abandoned in this Iſland.

That the Faith of the Britains came firſt from Rome, doth not agree with our Hiſtories; and if it did ſo, yet the Faith and Doctrine of the Romaniſts was not ſuch then as it is now.

This was a great Prerogative of Nobility, the Benefit whereof, though it be to be aſcribed to God, yet the mean Occaſion of the ſame came from the Church of Rome. In the Faith of which Church we have ever ſince continued and conſented with the reſt of the World in Unity of Anno 1554. Religion. And to ſhew further the fervent Devotion of the Inhabitants of this Iſland towards the Church of Rome, we read that divers Princes in the Saxons Time, with great Travel and Expences, went perſonally to Rome, as Offa and Adulphus, who thought it not enough to ſhew themſelves obedient to the ſaid See, unleſs that in their own Perſons they had gone to that ſame Place from whence they had received ſo great a Grace and Benefit.

In the Time of Carolus Magnus, who firſt founded the Univerſity of Paris, he ſent into England for Alcuinus a great learned Man, who firſt brought Learning to that Univerſity; whereby it ſeemeth, that the greateſt Part of the World fetch'd the Light of Religion from England.

Adrian the fourth, being an Engliſh Man, converted Norway from Infidelity; which Adrian afterwards, upon great Affection and Love that he bare to this Realm, being his native Country, gave to Henry the Second, King of England, the Right and Seignory of the Dominion of Ireland, which pertained to the See of Rome.

I will not rehearſe the manifold Benefit that this Realm hath * received from the Apoſtolick See, nor how ready the ſame hath been to relieve us in our Neceſſities. Nor will I rehearſe the manifold Miſeries and Calamities that this Realm hath ſuffered by ſwerving from that Unity. And even as in this Realm, ſo alſo in all other Countries, which refuſing the Unity of the Catholick Faith have followed fantaſtical Doctrine, the like Plagues have happened. Let Aſia and the Empire of Greece be a Spectacle unto the World, who by  ſwerving from the Unity of the Church of Rome, are brought into Captivity and Subjection to the Turk. All Stories be full of like Examples: And to come unto the latter Time, look upon our Neighbours in Germany, who by ſwerving from this Unity, are miſerably afflicted with Diverſities of Sects, and divided into Factions.

What ſhall I rehearſe unto you the Tumults and Effuſion of Blood that hath happened there of late Days? or trouble you with the Rehearſal of thoſe Plagues that have happened ſince this Innovation of Religion, whereof you have felt the Bitterneſs, and I have heard the Report? of all which Matters I can ſay no more, but ſuch was the Miſery of the Time. And ſee how far forth this Fury went. For thoſe that live under the Turk † may freely live after their Conſcience, and ſo it was not lawful here.

If Men examine well upon what Grounds theſe Innovations began, they will find that the Root of this, as of many other Miſchiefs, was Avarice, and that the Luſt and carnal Affection of one Man, confounded all Laws both divine and human. And notwithſtanding all theſe Devices and Policies practiſed within this Realm againſt the Church of Rome, they needed not to have loſt you, but that they thought rather as Friends to reconcile you, than as Enemies to infeſt you. For they wanted not great Offers of the moſt mighty Potentates in all Europe to have aided the Church in that Quarrel. Then mark the Sequel: There ſeemed by theſe Changes to riſe a great Face of Riches and Gain, which in Proof came to great Miſery and Lack. See how God then can confound the Wiſdom of the Wiſe, and turn unjuſt Policy to meer Folly; and that Thing which ſeemed to be done for Relief, was cauſe of plain Ruin and Decay. Yet ſee that Goodneſs of God, which at no Time failed us, but moſt benignly offered his Grace, when it was of our Parts leaſt ſought and worſe deſerved.

* Nay rather what Riches and Treaſures the See of Rome hath ſuck'd out of England, it is incredible.

 The Cauſe of their Subjection to the Turk, cannot be proved to come by ſwerving from the Unity of the Church of Rome, for they never fully joined unto it.

† And why do ye more cruelly than the Turk perſecute others for their Conſcience?

And when all Light of true Religion ſeemed utterly extinct, the Churches defaced, the Altars overthrown, the Miniſters corrupted: Even like as in a Lamp the Light being covered, yet it is not quenched, even ſo in a few remained the Confeſſion of Chriſt's Faith, namely, in the Breaſt of the Queen's Excellency, of whom, to ſpeak without Adulation, the Saying of the Prophet may be verified, Ecce quaſi derelicta.

And ſee how miraculouſly God of his Goodneſs preſerved her Highneſs, contrary to the Expectation of Man, that when Numbers conſpired againſt her, and Policies were deviſed to diſinherit her, and armed Power prepared to deſtroy her; yet ſhe being a Virgin helpleſs, naked and unarmed, prevailed and had the Victory of Tyrants; which is not to be aſcribed to any Policy of Man, but to the almighty great Goodneſs and Providence of God, to whom the Honour is to be given. And therefore it may be ſaid, Give Glory to God. For in Man's Judgment, on her Grace's Part was nothing in Appearance but Deſpair.

What Policy is this to make a Promiſe to get Strength, and to break it as the Queen did?

And yet for all theſe Practices and Devices of ill Men, here you ſee her Grace eſtabliſhed in her Eſtate, being your lawful Queen and Governeſs, born amongſt you; whom God hath appointed to reign over you for the Reſtitution of true Religion, and Extirpation of all Errors and Sects. And to confirm her Grace the more ſtrongly in this Enterprize, lo! how the Providence of God hath joined her in Marriage with a Prince of like Religion; who being a King of great Might, Armor, and Force, yet uſeth towards you neither Armor nor Force, but ſeeketh you by the Way of Love and Amity: In which Reſpect great Cauſe you have to give Thanks to Almighty God, that hath ſent you ſuch a catholick Governeſs. It ſhall be therefore your Part again to love, obey, and ſerve them.

And as it was a ſingular Favour of God to join them in Marriage, ſo it is not to be doubted but that he ſhall ſend them Iſſue, for the Comfort and Surety of this Common-wealth.

The Cardinal here appeareth to be a falſe Prophet.

Of all Princes in Europe, the Emperor hath travelled moſt in the Cauſe of Religion, as it appeareth by his Acts in Germany; yet haply, by ſome ſecret Judgment of God, he hath not atchieved the End. With whom in my Journey hitherwards I had Conference touching my Legation; whereof when he had Underſtanding, he ſhewed a great Appearance of moſt earneſt Joy and Gladneſs, ſaying, That it rejoiced him no leſs of the Reconcilement of this Realm unto chriſtian Unity, than that his Son was placed by Marriage in the Kingdom; and moſt glad he was of all, that the Occaſion thereof ſhould come by me being an Engliſhman born, which is (as it were) to call home ourſelves. I can well compare him to David, which though he were a Man elect of God, yet, for that he was contaminate with Blood and War, he could not build rhe Temple of Jeruſalem, but left the finiſhing thereof to Solomon, who was Rex pacificus. So may it be thought, that the appeaſing of Controverſies of Religion in Chriſtianity, is not appointed to this Emperor, but rather to his Son, who ſhall perform the Building that his Father had begun. Which Church cannot be perfectly built, unleſs univerſally in all Realms we adhere to one Head, and do acknowledge him to be the Vicar of God, and to have Power from above. For all Power is of God, according to the Saying, Non eſt poteſtas, niſi a Deo. And therefore I conſider that all Power being in God, yet, for the Conſervation of Quiet and godly Life in the World, he hath derived that Power from above into the Parts here in Earth: Which is, into the Imperial and Eccleſiaſtical. And theſe two Powers, as they be ſeveral and diſtinct, ſo have they two ſeveral Effects and Operations. For ſecular Princes, to whom the temporal Sword is committed, be Miniſters of God to execute Vengeance upon Tranſgreſſors and Evil-livers, and to preſerve the Well doers and Innocents from Injury and Violence. Which Power is repreſented in theſe two moſt excellent Perſons, the King and Queen's Majeſty here preſent, who have this Power committed unto them immediately from God, without any Superior in that Behalf.

Charles the Emperor compared to David.

The other Power is of Miniſtration, which is the Power of the Keys, and Order in the eccleſiaſtical State, which is by the Authority of God's Word, Examples of the Apoſtles, and of all old holy Fathers from Chriſt hitherto, attributed and given to the apoſtolick See of Rome, by ſpecial Prerogative. From which See I am here deputed Legate and Ambaſſador, having full and ample Commiſſion from thence, and have the Keys committed to my Hands: I confeſs to you that I have the Keys, not as mine own Keys, but as the Keys of him that ſent me, and yet cannot open; not for want of Power in me to give, but for certain Impediment in you to receive, which muſt be taken away before my Commiſſion can take Effect. This I proteſt before you, my Commiſſion is not of Prejudice to any Perſon. I come not to deſtroy, but to build; I come to reconcile, not to condemn; I am not come to compel, but to call again; I am not come to call any Thing in Queſtion already done, but my Commiſſion is of Grace and Clemency to ſuch as will receive it. For as touching all Matters that be paſt, they ſhall be as Things caſt into the Sea of Forgetfulneſs.

The Pope's Keys ſent by the Cardinal.

But the Means whereby you ſhall receive this Benefit, is to revoke and repeal thoſe Laws and Statutes, which be Impediments, Blocks and Bars, to the Execution of my Commiſſion. For like as I myſelf had neither Place nor Voice to ſpeak here among you, but was in all Reſpects a baniſhed Man, till ſuch Time as ye had repealed thoſe Laws that lay in my Way, even ſo cannot you receive the Benefits and Grace offered from the apoſtolick See, until the Abrogation of ſuch Laws, whereby you have disjoined and diſſevered yourſelves from the Unity of Chriſt's Church.

The Pope's Keys cannot work in England before the Lock of good Laws be changed.

It remaineth therefore that you, like true Chriſtians, and provident Men for the Weal of your Souls and Bodies, ponder what is to be done in this ſo weighty a Cauſe; and ſo to frame your Acts and Proceedings, as they may firſt tend to the Glory of God, and next to the Conſervation of your Common-wealth, Surety and Quietneſs.

The next Day after the three Eſtates aſſembled again in the great Chamber of the Court at Weſtminſter; where the King, Queen, and the Cardinal being preſent, they did exhibit (all kneeling on their Knees) a Supplication to their Highneſſes, the Tenor whereof followeth.

The Supplication and Submiſſion of the Lords and Commons, to the King and Queen's Majeſties.

WE the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons of this preſent Parliament aſſembled, repreſenting the whole Body of the Realm of England and Dominions of the ſame, in our own Names particulrrly, and alſo of the ſaid Body univerſally, in this Supplication directed to your Majeſties with moſt humble Suit, that it may, by your gracious Interceſſion and Means, be exhibited to the Moſt Reverend Father in God, the Lord Cardinal Poole, Legate, ſent ſpecially hither from our moſt holy Father Pope Julius the Third, and the See Apoſtolick of Rome, do declare ourſelves very ſorry and repentant for the Schiſm and Diſobedience committed in this Realm and Dominions of the ſame, againſt the ſaid See apoſtolick, either by making, agreeing or executing any Laws, Ordinances or Commandments againſt the Supremacy of the ſaid See, or otherwiſe doing or ſpeaking that might impugn the ſame: Offering ourſelves, and promiſing by this our Supplication, that for a Token and Acknowledgement of our ſaid Repentance, we be, and ſhall be alway ready, under and with the Authority of your Majeſties, to the uttermoſt of our Power, to do that which ſhall be in us for the Abrogation and repealing of the ſaid Laws and Ordinances in this preſent Parliament; as well for ourſelves, as for the whole Body whom we repreſent. Anno 1554.

O great Sorrow and deep Repentance!

Whereupon we moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſties, as Perſons undefiled in the Offence of this Body towards the ſaid See, which nevertheleſs God by his Providence hath made ſubject unto your Majeſties, ſo to ſet forth this our moſt humble Suit, that we may obtain from the See apoſtolick, by the ſaid moſt reverend Father, as well particularly as univerſally, Abſolution, Releaſe and Diſcharge from all Danger of ſuch Cenſures and Sentences, as by the Laws of the Church we be fallen in; and that we may as Children repentant, be received into the Boſom and Unity of Chriſt's Church; ſo as this noble Realm, with all the Members thereof, may in Unity and perfect Obedience to the See apoſtolick, and Pope for the Time being, ſerve God and your Majeſties, to the Furtherance and Advancement of his Honour and Glory. Amen.

The Pope's Abſolution cannot come, but by Interceſſion of Kings and Queens.

The Supplication being read, the King and Queen deliver'd the ſame unto the Cardinal, who (perceiving the Effects thereof to anſwer his Expectation) did receive the ſame moſt gladly from their Majeſties: And after he had in few Words given Thanks to God, and declared what great Cauſe he had to rejoice above all others, that his coming from Rome into England had taken ſuch happy Succeſs, he, by the Pope's Authority, did give them this Abſolution following:

The Supplication given up by the King and Queen to the Cardinal.

OUR Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which with his moſt precious Blood hath redeemed and waſhed us from all our Sins and Iniquities, that he might purchaſe unto himſelf a glorious Spouſe without Spot or Wrinkle, and whom the Father hath appointed Head over all his Church, he by his Mercy abſolve you. And we by apoſtolick Authority given unto us, (by the moſt holy Lord Pope Julius the Third, his Vicegerent in Earth) do abſolve and deliver you, and every of you, with the whole Realm and Dominions thereof, from all Hereſy and Schiſm, and from all and every Judgment, Cenſures and Pains, for that Cauſe incurred; and alſo we do reſtore you again unto the Unity of our Mother the holy Church, as in our Letters more plainly it ſhall appear: In the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

An Abſolution from the Pope given to the Realm of England.

Chriſt's Abſolution not ſufficient, without the Pope's be joined withal.

When all this was done, they went into the Chappel, and there ſinging Te Deum, with great Solemnity declared the Joy and Gladneſs that for this Reconciliation was pretended. The Report of this was with great Speed ſent unto Te Deum ſung, but with heavy Hearts, God knoweth.

Anno 1555. unto Rome. Whereupon the Pope cauſed there Proceſſions to be made at Rome, and Thanks to be given to God with great Joy for the Converſion of England to his Church; and therefore praiſing the Cardinal's Diligence, and the Devotion of the King and Queen, on Chriſtmaſs-Eve, by his Bulls he ſet forth a general Pardon to all ſuch as did truly rejoice for the ſame.

Great Joy at Rome for the Converſion of England, and good Cauſe why.

About this Time a Meſſenger was ſent from the whole Parliament to the Pope, to deſire him to confirm and eſtabliſh the Sale of Abby-Lands and Chauntry-Lands: For the Lords and the Parliament would grant nothing in the Pope's Behalf, before their Purchaſes were fully confirmed.

The Clergy abſolved by the Cardinal.

On Thurſday, December 6. the whole Convocation, both Biſhops and others, were ſent for to Lambeth to the Cardinal, who the ſame Day forgave them all their Perjurations, Schiſms and Hereſies, and they all there kneeled down and received his Abſolution, and after an Exhortation and Gratulation for their Converſion to the Catholick Church, made by the Cardinal, they departed.

The Queſtmen of Mr. Throgmorton put to their Fine, and delivered.

On Wedneſday, December 12. five of the eight Men which lay in the Fleet, that were of Mr. Throgmorton's Queſt, were diſcharged, and ſet at Liberty upon paying their Fine, which was 220 Pound a-piece; and the other three put up a Supplication, therein declaring, that their Goods did not amount to the Sum that they were appointed to pay; and ſo upon that Declaration paying 40 Pound a-piece, they were delivered out of Priſon on the 21ſt of December.

On Saturday, December 22. the Parliament had a ſtrict Command, that none of them ſhould depart into the Country this Chriſtmas, nor before the Parliament were ended. Which Command was very contrary to their Expectations; for as well many of the Lords, as alſo many of the Commons had ſent for their Horſes, and had them brought hither.

Mr. Roſe with thirty Perſons taken at a Communion at Bow-Church-Yard.

On New-years Day at Night, ſeveral honeſt Men and Women of this City, to the Number of thirty, and Mr. Roſe, a Miniſter, with them, were taken as they were in a Houſe in Bow-Church-yard at the Communion, and the ſame Night were all committed to Priſon. And on the Third of January following Mr. Roſe was before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Lord Chancellor, and from thence the ſame Day committed to the Tower, after ſome Communication between the Biſhop and him.

The Act of Supremacy paſſed in the Parliament.

The ſame Day the Act of Supremacy paſs'd in the Parliament. Alſo the ſame Day at Night a great Tumult was at Weſtminſter, between ſome Spaniards and Engliſhmen, whereof a great Miſchief had like to have enſued, by Means of a Spaniſh Friar, who got into the Church and rung Alarum. The Occaſion was about two Whores which were at the Cloiſter at Weſtminſter with ſome Spaniards, whereof whilſt ſome played the Knaves with them, others kept the Entry of the Cloiſter with Dags in Harneſs. In the mean Time ſome of the Dean's Men came into the Cloiſter, and the Spaniards diſcharged their * Dags, and hurt ſome of them. By and by the Noiſe of this Doing came into the Streets, ſo that the whole Town was up almoſt, but never a Stroke was ſtricken.

A Stir between the Spaniards and Engliſhmen at Weſtminſter.

* Hand-Guns.

Ye heard a little before the Council's Letter ſent to Biſhop Bonner, ſignifying the good News of Queen Mary to be not only conceived, but alſo quick with Child, which was the 28th of November. Of this Child great Talk was at this Time in every Man's Mouth, eſpecially amongſt ſuch as ſeemed to carry Spaniſh Hearts in Engliſh Bodies. In which Number here is not to be forgotten, nor defrauded of his condign Commendation for his worthy Affection toward his Prince and her Iſſue, one Sir Richard Southwell, who being the ſame Time in the Parliament-Houſe, when as the Lords were occupied in other Affairs and Matters of Importance, ſuddenly ſtarting up, for Fulneſs of Joy burſt out in theſe Words following: Tuſh, my Maſters, quoth he, what talk ye of theſe Matters? I would have you take ſome Order for our Maſter that is now coming into the World apace, leſt he find us unprovided, &c. By which Words, and alſo by the aforeſaid Letters of the Council, and the common Talk abroad, it may appear what an aſſured Opinion was then conceived in Men's Heads, of Queen Mary to be conceived and quick with Child. Inſomuch that at the ſame Time, and in the ſame Parliament there was a Bill exhibited, and an Act made upon the ſame, the Words whereof, for the more Evidence, I thought good here to exemplify, as followeth.

The Words of Sir Rich. Southwell in the Parliament-Houſe.

The Words of the Act.

Ex. ſtat. an. 1. & 2 Phil. & Mar.

Albeit we the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, have firm Hope and Confidence in the Goodneſs of Almighty God, that like as he hath hitherto miraculouſly preſerved the Queen's Majeſty from many great imminent Perils and Dangers; even ſo he will of his infinite Goodneſs give her Highneſs Strength, the rather by our continual Prayers, to paſs well the Danger of Deliverance of Child, wherewith it hath pleaſed him (to all our great Comforts) to bleſs her: Yet foraſmuch as all Things of this World be uncertain, and having before our Eyes the dolorous Experience of this inconſtant Government, during the Time of the Reign of the late King Edward the Sixth, do plainly ſee the manifold Inconveniencies, great Dangers and Perils that may enſue in this whole Realm, if Foreſight be not uſed to prevent all evil Chances, if they ſhould happen: For the eſchewing hereof, we the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, for and in Conſideration of a moſt ſpecial Truſt and Confidence that we have and repoſe in the King's Majeſty, for and concerning the politick Government, Order and Adminiſtration of this Realm in the Time of the young Years of the Iſſue or Iſſues of her Majeſty's Body to be born, if it ſhould pleaſe God to call the Queen's Highneſs out of this preſent Life, during the tender Years of ſuch Iſſue or Iſſues (which God forbid) according to ſuch Order and Manner, as hereafter in this preſent Act his Highneſs moſt gracious Pleaſure is, ſhould be declared and ſet forth, have made our humble Suit, by the Aſſent of the Queen's Highneſs, that his Majeſty would vouchſafe to accept and take upon him the Rule, Order, Education, and Government of the ſaid Iſſue or Iſſues to to be born, as is aforeſaid. Upon which our Suit, being of his ſaid Majeſty moſt graciouſly accepted, it hath pleaſed his Highneſs not only to declare, that like as for the moſt Part his Majeſty verily truſted that Almighty God (who hath hitherto preſerved the Queen's Majeſty, to give this Realm ſo good an Hope of certain Succeſſion in the Blood Royal of the ſame Realm) will aſſiſt her Highneſs with his Graces and Benedictions, to ſee the Fruit of her Body well brought forth, live, and able to govern (whereof neither all this Realm, nay all the World beſides, ſhould or could receive more Comfort than his Majeſty ſhould and would) yet if ſuch

The Judgment of the Parliamen deceived in God's Bleſſing.

Order taken by Parliament for Queen Mary's Child.

Truſt diſappointed.

ſuch Chance ſhould happen, his Majeſty at our humble Deſires is pleaſed and contented, not only to accept and take upon him the Cure and Charge of the Education, Rule, Order and Government of ſuch Iſſues as of this moſt happy Marriage ſhall be born between the Queen's Highneſs and him; but alſo, during the Time of ſuch Government, would by all Ways and Means, ſtudy, travel and imploy himſelf to advance the Weal both publick and private of this Realm and Dominion thereunto belonging, according to the ſaid Truſt in his Majeſty repoſed, with no leſs Good-will and Affection, than if his Highneſs had been naturally born amongſt us. In Conſideration whereof, be it Enacted by the King and Queen's moſt excellent Majeſties, by the Aſſent of the Lord's Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, &c.

Thus much I thought fit to rehearſe out of the Act and Statute, to the Intent the Reader may underſtand not ſo much how Parliaments may ſometimes be deceived (as by this Child of Queen Mary may appear) as rather what Cauſe we Engliſhmen have to render moſt earneſt Thanks unto Almighty God, who ſo mercifully, againſt the Opinion, Expectation, and working of our Adverſaries, hath helped and delivered us in this Caſe, which otherwiſe might have opened ſuch a Window to the Spaniards to have repleniſhed this Land, that peradventure by this Time Engliſhmen ſhould have enjoyed no great Quiet in their own Country: The Lord therefore make us perpetually mindful of his Benefits. Amen.

Thus we ſee then how Man doth purpoſe, but God diſpoſeth as pleaſeth him. For all this great Labour, Proviſion and Order taken in the Parliament-houſe for their young Maſter long look'd for, coming ſo ſurely into the World, in the End appeared neither young Maſter, nor young Miſtreſs, that any Man yet to this Day can hear of. Furthermore, as the Labour of the Lay-ſort was herein deluded; ſo no leſs ridiculous it was to behold, what little Effect the Prayers of the Papiſts had with Almighty God, who travelled no leſs with their Proceſſions, Maſſes and Collects, for the happy Deliverance of this young Maſter to come, as here followeth to be ſeen.

The Prayers of the Papiſts, of what little Effect they are with God.

A Prayer made by Dr. Weſton, Dean of Weſtminſter, daily to be ſaid for the Queen's Deliverance.

A Prayer for Queen Mary and her Child, turned out of Latin into Engliſh.

O Moſt righteous Lord God, which for the Offence of the firſt Woman, hath threatned unto all Women a common, ſharp, and inevitable Malediction, and hath enjoyned them that they ſhould conceive in Sin, and being conceived, ſhould be ſubject to many and grievous Torments; and finally, be delivered with the Danger and Jeopardy of their Lives; we beſeech thee for thine exceeding great Goodneſs and bottomleſs Mercy; to mitigate the Strictneſs of that Law. Aſſwage thine Anger for a while, and cheriſh in the Boſom of thy Favour and Mercy, our moſt gracious Queen Mary, being now at the Point of being delivered. So help her, that without Danger of her Life ſhe may overcome the Sorrow, and in due Seaſon bring forth a Child, in Body beautiful and comely, in Mind noble and valiant. So that afterward, ſhe, forgetting the Trouble, may with Joy, laud and praiſe the Bountifulneſs of thy Mercy, and, together with us, praiſe and bleſs both thee and thy holy Name World without End. This, O Lord, we deſire thee, we beſeech thee, and moſt heartily crave of thee. Hear us, O Lord, and grant us our Petition: let not the Enemies of thy Faith, and of thy Church ſay, Where is their God. Anno 1554.

A ſolemn Prayer made for King Philip and Queen Mary's Child, that it may be a Male-Child, well-favoured and witty, &c.

O Moſt mighty Lord God, which regardeſt the Prayer of the Humble, and deſpiſeſt not their Requeſt; bow down from thine high Habitation of the Heavens, the Eyes of thy Mercy unto us wretched Sinners, bowing the Knees of our Hearts, and with many and deep Sighs bewailing our Sins and Offences, humbly with Eyes intent, and Hands diſplayed, praying and beſeeching thee, with the Shield of thy Protection, to defend Mary thy Servant, and our Queen, who hath none other Helper but thee, and whom, through thy Grace, thou haſt willed to be conceived with Child: and at the Time of her Travail graciouſly with the Help of thy right Hand deliver her, and from all Danger, with the Child in her conceived, mercifully preſerve.

It hath ſeemed Good in thy Sight, merciful Father, by thy Servant Mary to work theſe Wonders; that is to ſay, in her Hands to vanquiſh and overthrow the ſtout Enemy, and to deliver us, thy People, out of the Hands of Hereticks, Infidels, Enemies to thee, and to the Croſs of thy beloved Son Jeſus Chriſt, that of thy Servant thou mighteſt ſpeak in far Countries. Therefore for theſe wonderful Works, which thou doſt to thy Servants, thou art magnified Lord God, for ever, and we thy People bleſs thee, the God of Heaven, which hath wrought upon us this great Mercy. and hath excluded from us the Heretick, the Enemy of Truth, the Perſecutor of thy Church. We know, we know, that we have grievouſly (Lord) ſinned, that we have been grievouſly deceived by Vanity, and that we have forſaken thee our God. Our Iniquities be multiplied on our Head, and our Sins be increaſed up to Heaven: and we ourſelves having offended, and our Princes and our Prieſts, for theſe our Sins, have deſerved an Hypocrite to our Prince, our Sins have deſerved a Tyrant to our Governor, that ſhould bring our Life to Bitterneſs. We be not worthy to have ſo gentle and merciful a Queen, ſo godly a Ruler, and finally, ſo virtuous a Prince; at the very Beginning of whoſe Reign, a new Light, as it were, of God's Religion ſeemed to us for to ſpring and riſe. The Jews did bleſs the Widow Judith with one Voice, ſaying, Thou art the Glory of Jeruſalem, thou art the Joy of Iſrael, thou art the Honour of our People, for that thou haſt loved Chaſtity, and thou ſhall be bleſſed for ever.

* * The Papiſts call the Proteſtants Hereticks, and Enemies to the Croſs of Chriſt, even as Ahab called Elijah the Diſturber of Iſrael, when he was the only Diſturber himſelf.

Queen Mary compared by the Papiſts to the Widow Judith.

And we the Engliſh People with one agreeable Conſent do cry; Thou Mary art the Glory of Engalnd, our Joy, the Honour of thy People, for that thou haſt embraced Chaſtity; thine Heart is ſtrengthened, for the Hand of our Lord hath comforted thee, and therefore thou ſhalt be bleſſed for ever. But bow down, O moſt merciful Father, thine Ear, and open thine Eyes, and behold our Affliction, and our humble Confeſſion.

Mark how forgetting his Prayer, he falleth to the praiſing of Q. Mary.

Anno 1554.

feſſion. Thou knoweſt, Lord, that againſt Philip, not by human, but by thy Ordinance our King, and againſt thy Servant Mary, by thy Providence our Queen, the Reſtorers and Maintainers of thy Teſtament of the Faith, and moſt conſtant Defenders of thy Church: Thou knoweſt, I ſay, that againſt theſe our two Governors, the Enemies of our holy * Teſtament, and of the Church thy Spouſe, be moſt rank Rebels and ſpiteful Murmurers, walking after their Luſts, whoſe Mouth ſpeaketh Words of Pride, to the End they may ſet up the Kingdom of Hereticks and Schiſmaticks. By the Power of their Hands they † would change thy Promiſes, and deſtroy thine Inheritance, and ſtop and ſhut up the Mouths of them that praiſe thee, and extinguiſh the Glory of thy Catholick Church and Altar.

* The Teſtament ſetteth up only the the Glory of Chriſt.

† If the changing of God's Promiſes, deſtroying his Inheritance, ſtopping the Mouths of God's People, if Contentions, Wars and Schiſms be Tokens of Hereticks, who ſo great Hereticks as the Papiſts?

It is manifeſt and plain, how many Contentions, how many Conſpiracies and Seditions, how great Wars, what Tumults, how many and how great troubleſome Vexations, how many Hereſies and Schiſms (for theſe be the moſt ready Devices, and evident Tokens of Hereticks) for our Sins do hang over us, if thy Servant be taken from this Life: For we acknowledge that our Lord is omnipotent, who hath pitched his Dwelling-place in the Midſt of his People, to the Intent to deliver us out of the Hands of our Enemies. Turn therefore thy Countenance unto us, ſhew unto us, O Lord, thy Face. Puniſh us for our Sins according to thy Will and Pleaſure, only now deliver us. We bowing the Knees of our Heart, beſeech thee, that thou wilt not reſerve unto us Puniſhment for ever, and we ſhall praiſe thee all the Days of our Life. Hear our Cry, and the Prayer of thy People, and open to them the Treaſure of thy Mercy, thy gracious Favour, the Spring of lively Water. Thou that haſt begun, make in the Hand of thy Servant a perfect Work. Suffer not, we pray thee, the * faithleſs Rebels to ſay of thy Servant and her Counſellors, that they have deviſed Matters which they cannot perform. And grant unto thy Servant an happy and eaſy Travel. For it is not impoſſible to thy Power, nor indecent to thy Juſtice, nor unwonted to thy Mercy.

* Cry up louder you Prieſts, peradventure your God is aſleep.

The Lord gave a Promiſe to Sarah and Elizabeth, ſo did he not to Q. Mary.

It is well known unto us, how marvellouſly thou didſt work in Sarah of the Age of 90 Years, and in Elizabeth the Barren, and alſo far ſtricken in Age: for thy Counſel is not in the Power of Men. Thou Lord that art the Searcher of Hearts and Thoughts, thou knoweſt that thy Servant never luſted after Man, never gave herſelf to wanton Company, nor made herſelf Partaker with them that walk in Lightneſs: but ſhe conſented to take an Husband with thy Fear, and not with her Luſt. Thou knoweſt that thy Servant took an Huſband not for carnal Pleaſure, but only for the Deſire and Love of Poſterity, wherein thy Name might be bleſſed for ever and ever. Give therefore unto thy Servants, Philip our King, and Mary our Queen, a Male iſſue, which may ſit in the Seat of thy Kingdom. Give unto our Queen thy Servant, a little Infant, in Faſhion and Body comely and beautiful, in pregnant Wit notable and excellent.

† It is not beſt ſuch a one to be granted unto you, for being like Abraham, Joſeph, Moſes and Solomon, he may chance to ſmell out your corrupt Doctrine, and to deteſt your bloody Tyranny, &c.

Grant the ſame to be in Obedience like † Abraham, in Hoſpitality like Lot, in Chaſtity and brotherly Love like Joſeph, in Meekneſs and Mildneſs like Moſes, in Strength and Valour like Sampſon. Let him be found faithful as David after thy Heart. Let him be wiſe among Kings as the moſt wiſe Solomon. Let him be like Job, a ſimple and an upright Man, fearing God, and eſchewing Evil. Let him finally be garniſhed with the Comelineſs of all virtuous Conditions, and in the ſame let him wax old and live, that he may ſee his Childrens Children to the third and fourth Generation. And give unto our Sovereign Lord and Lady, King Philip and Queen Mary, thy Bleſſings and long Life upon Earth; and grant that of them may come Kings and Queens, which may ſtedfaſtly continue in Faith, Love, and Holineſs. And bleſſed be their Seed of our God, that all Nations may know, thou art only God in all the Earth, which art bleſſed for ever and ever. Amen.

Another Prayer for the ſame.

O Almighty Father, which didſt ſanctify the bleſſed Virgin and Mother Mary in her Conception, and in the Birth of Chriſt our Saviour thine only Son: alſo by thine omnipotent Power didſt ſafely deliver the Prophet Jonas out of the Whale's Belly: defend, O Lord, we beſeech thee, thy Servant Mary our Queen, with Child conceived, and ſo viſit her in and with thy godly Gift of Health, that not only the Child thy Creature, within her contained, may joyfully come from her into this World, and receive the bleſſed Sacraments of Baptiſm and confirmation, enjoying therewith daily Increaſe of all princely and gracious Gifts both of Body and Soul; but that alſo ſhe the Mother, through thy ſpecial Grace and Mercy, may in Time of her Travail avoid all exceſſive Dolour and Pain, and abide perfect and ſure from all Peril and Danger of Death, with long and proſperous Life, thro' Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

It followeth now further in Proceſs of the Story, that upon Tueſday January 8, nineteen of the lower Houſe of the Parliament, with the Speaker, came to Whitehall to the King, and offered him the Government of the Realm and of the Iſſue, if the Queen ſhould fail, which was confirmed by Act of Parliament within ten Days after.

The Pope's Supremacy eſtabliſhed by Parliament.

On Wedneſday January 16, the Parliament was diſſolved. In this Parliament the Biſhop of Rome was eſtabliſhed, and all ſuch Laws as were made againſt him ſince the twentieth Year of King Henry the eighth, were repealed, and alſo Cardinal Poole, Biſhop Pates, Lilly, and others were reſtored to their Blood. Alſo there was an Act made for ſpeaking of Words; that whoever ſhould ſpeak any Thing againſt the King or Queen, or that might move any Sedition or Rebellion, at the firſt Time to have one of his Ears cut off, or to forfeit an hundred Marks; and at the ſecond Time, to have both his Ears cut off, or elſe to forfeit an hundred Pound; and whoſoever ſhould write, cypher, or print any of the Premiſes, to have their Right Hand cut off.

Matters concluded in Parliament.

Three Statutes againſt Hereticks revived.

Alſo in this Parliament three Statutes were revived for the Trial of Hereſy: one made the fifth Year of Rich. II. another in the ſecond Year of Hen. IV. and the third in the ſecond Year of Hen. V. Alſo the doing of Mr. Roſe, and the others that were with him, was communed of in this Parliament, and upon that Occaſion an Act was made, That certain evil Prayers ſhould be Treaſon againſt the Queen's Highneſs. The Prayers of theſe Men were thus: God turn the Heart of Queen Mary from Idolatry, or elſe ſhorten her Days.

Gentlemen delivered out of the Tower by the Queen's Pardon.

On Friday, January 18, all the Council went unto the Tower, and there the ſame Day ſet at Liberty all the Priſoners of the Tower, or the moſt Part of them, namely, the late Duke of Northumberland's Sons, Ambroſe, Robert and Henry; Sir Andrew Dudly, Sir John Rogers, Sir James Crofts, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, Sir Nicholas Arnal, Sir George Harper, Sir Edward Warner, Sir William Sentlow, Sir Gawen Carew, Mr. Gebbes, Cuthbert Vaughan, with many others.

The Preachers called before the Biſhop of Wincheſter at St. Mary Overies.

On Tueſday January 22, all the Preachers that were in Priſon were called before the Biſhop of Wincheſter Lord Chancellor, and certain others, at the Biſhop's Houſe at St. Mary Overies. From whence (after Communication, being asked, whether they would convert and enjoy the Queen's Pardon, or elſe ſtand to that they had taught; they all anſwered, that they would ſtand to that they had taught) they were committed to ſtraighter Priſon than before, with Charge that none ſhould ſpeak with them. Among which Number, one James George the ſame Time died in Priſon; who therefore was exempted to be buried in the Popiſh Church-yard, and was buried in the Fields.

James George died in Priſon, and was buried in the Fields.

Upon Wedneſday, January 23. all the Biſhops with the reſt of the Convocation Houſe were before the Cardinal at Lambeth, where he deſired them to repair every Man where his Cure and Charge lay, exhorting them to entreat their Flock with all Gentleneſs, and to endeavour to win the People rather by Gentleneſs than by Extremity and Rigour, and ſo let them depart.

General Proceſſion for Joy of the Realm's Converſion.

Upon Friday January 25. and the Day of the Converſion of St. Paul, there was a general and ſolemn Proceſſion thro' London, to give God Thanks for their Converſion to the Catholick Church: wherein (to ſet out their glorious Pomp) there were 90 Croſſes, 160 Prieſts and Clerks, who had every one of them Copes upon their Backs. There followed alſo for the better Eſtimation of the Sight, eight Biſhops, and laſt of all came Bonner the Biſhop of London, carrying the Popiſh Pyx under a Canopy.

Beſides, there was alſo preſent the Mayor, Aldermen, and all the Livery of every Occupation. Moreover the King alſo himſelf, and the Cardinal came to Paul's Church the ſame Day. From whence after Maſs they returned to Weſtminſter again. As the King was entering the Church, at the Steps going up to the Choir, all the Gentlemen that of late were ſet at Liberty out of the Tower, kneeled before the King, and offered unto him themſelves and their Services.

Anno 1555.

Upon Monday January 28, the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and the other Biſhops, had Commiſſion from the Cardinal to ſit upon, and order, according to the Laws, all ſuch Preachers and Hereticks (as they term'd them) as were in Priſon, and according to this Commiſſion, the ſame Day the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and the other Biſhops, with certain of the Council, ſate in St. Mary Overy's Church, and called before them theſe three, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Cardmaker, who were brought thither by the Sheriffs; from whence after Communication they were committed to Priſon till the next Day, but Cardmaker this Day ſubmitted himſelf unto them.

Commiſſion from the Cardinal to ſit upon the perſecuted Preachers for Religion.

Upon Tueſday January 29, Hooper, Rogers, Dr. Taylor, and Bradford were brought before them, where Sentence of Excommunication, and Judgment eccleſiaſtical was pronounced upon Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, who ſate as Judge in Caiaphas's Seat, who drave them out of the Church, according to their Law and Order. Dr. Taylor and Bradford were committed to Priſon tlll the next Day.

Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers condemned.

Upon Wedneſday January 30, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Crome, Mr. Bradford, Mr. Saunders, and Dr. Ferrar, ſometime Biſhop of St. Davids, were before the ſaid Biſhops, where three of them, Dr. Taylor, Mr. Saunders, and Mr. Bradford, were likewiſe excommunicated, and Sentence pronounced upon them, and ſo committed to the Sheriffs. Dr. Crome deſired two Months Reſpite, and it was granted him; and Mr. Ferrar was again committed to Priſon till another Time.

Mr. Bradford, Dr. Taylor and Mr. Saunders condemned.

After the Examination and Condemnation of theſe Good Men and Preachers above recited, Commiſſions and Inquiſitors were ſent abroad likewiſe into all Parts of the Realm: by Reaſon whereof, a great Number of moſt pious Chriſtians (out of all the Quarters of the Realm, but eſpecially Kent, Eſſex, Norfolk, and Suffolk) were apprehended, brought up to London, caſt into Priſon, and afterwards (moſt of them) either conſumed cruelly by Fire, or elſe thro' evil Handling died in Priſons, and were buried on the Dunghills abroad in the Fields, or in ſome Backſide of the Priſon. Of all which Matters, concerning the tragical Handling of the bleſſed Martyrs and Witneſſes of Jeſus Chriſt, of all the bloody Perſecution of this Time, now followeth more particularly in this next Book in Order to be declared.

The End of the Firſt Book.

BOOK II.

The Life and Martyrdom of Mr. John Rogers, Vicar of St. Sepulchre's, and Reader of St. Paul's in London.

Anno 1555.

JOHN ROGERS was brought up in the Uninerſity of Cambridge, where he profited much in good Learning, and at length was choſe by the Merchants Adventurers to be their Chaplain at Antwerp in Brabant, whom he ſerved many Years to their great Satisfaction. He chanced there to fall in Company with that worthy Servant and Martyr of God, William Tindal, and with Miles Coverdale, both of whom, for the Hatred they bare to popiſh Superſtition and Idolatry, and Love to true Religion, had forſaken their native Country. In conferring with them the Scriptures, he came to great Knowledge in the Goſpel of God, inſomuch that he caſt off the heavy Yoke of Popery, perceiving it to be impure and filthy Idolatry, and joined with them in that painful and moſt profitable Labour of tranſlating the Bible into the Engliſh Tongue, which is intituled, The Tranſlation of Thomas Matthew. He knowing by the Scriptures, that unlawful Vows may lawfully be broken, and that Matrimony is both honeſt and honourable among all Men, joined himſelf in lawful Matrimony, and ſo went to Wittenberg in Saxony, where he with much Soberneſs of Living did not only greatly increaſe in all good Learning, but alſo ſo much profited in the Knowledge of the Dutch Tongue, that the Charge of a Congregation was orderly committed to his Cure.

M. Rogers Chaplain to the Merchants-Adventurers at Antwerp.

Mr. Rogers brought to the Goſpel by Mr. Tindal and Mr. Coverdale.

Mr. Rogers goeth to Wittenberg.

In which Miniſtry he diligently and faithfully ſerved many Years, until ſuch Time as it pleaſed God, by the faithful Travel of his choſen and dear Servant, King Edward VI. utterly to baniſh all Popery out of England, and to receive in the true Religion. He then being orderly called, having both a Conſcience and a ready good Will to help forward the Work of the Lord in his native Country, left his Living in Saxony,

Mr. Rogers returneth to England in King Edward's Time.

Saxony, and came into England to preach the Gospel, without Certainty of any Condition. In which Office, after he had a while diligently travelled, Nicholas Ridley then Bishop of London, gave him a Prebend in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's; and the Dean and Chapter chose him to be the Reader of the Divinity Lesson there, where he continued, until such Time as Queen Mary obtained the Crown.

Mr. Rogers Reader and Prebendary of St. Paul's.

After the Queen was come to the Tower of London, Mr. Rogers preached at Paul's-Cross; confirming such true Doctrine as he and others had there taught in King Edward's Days, exhorting the People constantly to remain in the same, and to beware of Popery, Idolatry and Superstition. The Council being then overmatched with popish and bloody Bishops, called him to Account for his Sermon: To whom he made a bold, wise, and pious Answer, and yet in such Sort handled himself, that at that Time he was clearly dismissed. But after that Proclamation was set forth by the Queen to prohibit true Preaching, he was called again before the Council; for the Bishops thirsted after his Blood. The Council quarrelled with him concerning his Doctrine, and in Conclusion commanded him, as Prisoner, to keep his own House, and so he did; where he remained a Prisoner a long Time, till at length, through the Procurement of Bonner Bishop of London, he was removed from his own House to the Prison of Newgate, where he was lodged a great while among Thieves and Murderers: During which Time, what Business he had with the Adversaries of Christ, all is not known, neither yet any Certainty of his Examinations, further than he himself did leave in Writing, which here followeth.

Mr. Rogers called to Account for his Sermon at Paul's-Cross.

Mr. Rogers sent to Newgate.

The Examination and Answer of Mr. John Rogers, made to the Lord Chancellor, and the rest of the Council, January 22. 1555.

FIRST, the Lord Chancellor said unto me thus: Sir, ye have heard the State of the Realm in which it standeth now.

Rogers. No, my Lord, I have been kept in close Prison, and except there have been some general Things said at the Table when I was at Dinner or Supper, I have heard nothing; and there have I heard nothing whereupon any special Thing might be grounded.

Then said the Lord Chancellor; General Things, general Things, mockingly: Ye have heard of my Lord Cardinal's coming, and that the Parliament hath received his Blessing, not one resisting unto it, but one Man which did speak against it. Such an Unity, and such a Miracle hath not been seen. And all they, of which there are eight score in one House, (said one that was by, whose Name I know not) have with one Assent and * Consent received Pardon of their Offences, for the Schism that we have had in England, in refusing the holy Father of Rome to be Head of the Catholick Church. How say ye? are ye content to unite and knit yourself to the Faith of the Catholick Church with us, in the State in which it is now in England? will ye do that?

* Full sore against their Wills, if they could otherwise have chose.

Rog. The Catholick Church I never did nor will dissent from.

L. Chan. Nay, but I speak of the State of the Catholick Church, in that wise in which we stand now in England, having received the Pope to be supream Head. Anno 1555.

Rog. I know none other Head but Christ of his Catholick Church, neither will I acknowledge the Bishop of Rome to have any more Authority than any other Bishop hath by the Word of God, and by the Doctrine of the old and pure Catholick Church four hundred Years after Christ. No Head of the Catholick Church but Christ.

L. Chan. Why didst thou then acknowledge King Henry the Eighth to be supream Head of the Church, if Christ be the only Head? The Supremacy of King Henry VIII. how it is to be taken.

Rog. I never granted him to have any Supremacy in spiritual Things, as are the Forgiveness of Sins; giving of the Holy Ghost; Authority to be a Judge above the Word of God.

L. Chan. Yea, said he, and Tonstall Bishop of Durham, and N. Bishop of Worcester, if thou hadst said so in his Days (and they nodded the Head at me with a Laughter) thou hadst not been alive now. Tonstal Bp. of Durham, N. Bishop of Worcester.

Rog. Which Thing I denied, and would have told how he was said and meant to be supream Head. But they looked and laughed one upon another, and made such a Business, that I was constrained to let it pass. There lieth also no great Weight thereupon; for all the World knoweth what the Meaning was. The Lord Chancellor also said to the Lord William Haward, that there was no Inconvenience therein, to have Christ to be supream Head and the Bishop of Rome also: And when I was ready to have answer'd, that there could not be two Heads of one Church, and have more plainly declared the Vanity of that his Reason, the Lord Chancellor said, What say'st thou? make us a direct Answer whether thou wilt be one of this Catholick Church or not, with us in that State in which we are now? The Meaning why King Henry was tituled supream Head.

Rog. My Lord, without fail I cannot believe, that ye yourselves do think in your Hearts that he is supream Head in forgiving of Sin, &c. (as is before said) seeing you, and all the Bishops of the Realm have now twenty Years long preached, and some of you also written to the contrary, and the Parliament hath so long agone condescended unto it. And there he interrupted me thus: The Bishops contrary to their former Doings and Writings.

L. Chan. Tush, that Parliament was with most great Cruelty constrained to abolish and put away the Primacy from the Bishop of Rome.

Rog. With Cruelty? why then I perceive that you take a wrong Way with Cruelty to persuade Men's Consciences. For it should appear by your Doings now, that the Cruelty then used hath not persuaded your Consciences. How would you then have our Consciences persuaded with Cruelty?

L. Chan. I talk to thee of no Cruelty, but that they were so often and so cruelly called upon in that Parliament, to let the Act go forward; yea, and even with Force driven thereunto, whereas in this Parliament it was so uniformly received, as is aforesaid.

Rog. Here my Lord Paget told me more plainly, what my Lord Chancellor meant. Unto whom I answered; my Lord, what will ye conclude thereby; that the first Parliament was of less Authority, because but few condescended unto it? and this last Parliament was of great Authority, because more condescended unto it? it goeth not my Lord, by more or lesser Part, but by the wiser, truer, and more godly Part: And I would have said more, but the Lord Chancellor interrupted me with this Question, Truth goeth not by Number, nor by the greater Part.

willing

willing me once again to answer him. For, said he, we have more to speak with than thou, which must come in after thee. And so there were indeed ten Persons more out of Newgate, besides two that were not called. Of which ten, one was a Citizen of London, which granted unto them, and nine were contrary: Who all came to Prison again, and refused the Cardinal's Blessing, and the Authority of his holy Father's Church, saving that one of these nine was not asked the Question, otherwise than thus, whether he would be an honest Man as his Father was before him, and he answering Yea, he was so discharged by the Friendship of my Lord William Haward, as I have understood. He bade me tell him what I would do; whether I would enter into the one Church with the whole Realm as it is now, or not? No, said I, I will first see it proved by the Scriptures. Let me have Pen, Ink, and Books, &c. and I shall take upon me plainly to set out the Mattter, so that the contrary should be proved to be true, and let any Man that will, confer with me by Writing.

Stephen Gardiner refused to have the Truth to be tried by Learning.

L Chan. Nay, that shall not be permitted thee; thou shalt never have so much proffered thee as thou hast now, if thou refuse it; and will not now condescend and agree to the Catholick Church. Here are two Things, Mercy and Justice: If thou refuse the Queen's Mercy now, then shalt thou have Justice ministred unto thee.

The Bishops neither will stand by their Assertion, nor yet will suffer other Men so to do.

Rog. I never offended, nor was disobedient unto her Grace, and yet I will not refuse her Mercy. But if this shall be denied me to confer by Writing, and to try out the Truth, then it is not well, but too far out of the Way. Ye yourselves (all the Bishops of the Realm) brought me to the Knowledge of the pretended Primacy of the Bishop of Rome, when I was a young Man twenty Years past; and will ye now without Collation have me to say and do the contrary? I cannot be so persuaded.

A fair Pretence to excuse your Ignorance.

L. Chan. If thou wilt not receive the Bishop of Rome to be supream Head of the Catholick Church, then thou shalt never have her Mercy thou mayest be sure. And as touching confering and Trial, I am forbidden by the Scriptures to use any confering and Trial with thee. For St. Paul teacheth me, that I should shun and eschew an Heretick after one or two Monitions, knowing that such an one is overthrown, and is faulty, insomuch as he is condemned by his own Judgment.

Rog. My Lord, I deny that I am an Heretick: Prove ye that first, and then alledge the aforesaid Text. But still the Lord Chancellor played on one String, saying:

Gardiner will compel to that which he cannot teach to be true.

L. Chan. If thou wilt enter into one Church with us, &c. tell us that, or else thou shall never have so much proffered thee again as thou hast now.

Rog. I will find it first in the Scripture, and see it tried thereby, before I receive him to be supream Head.

Wor. Why? do ye not know what is in your Creed: I believe the holy Catholick Church.

The Pope's Church proved not to be Catholick.

Rog. I find not the Bishop of Rome there. For (catholick) signifieth not the Romish Church: It signifieth the Consent of all true teaching Churches of all Times, and all Ages. But how should the Bishop of Rome's Church be one of them, which teacheth so many Doctrines that are plainly and directly against the Word of God? Can that Bishop be the true Head of the Catholick Church that doth so? that is not possible.

L. Chan. Shew me one of them, one, let me hear one.

Rog. I remembred myself, that amongst so many I were best to shew one, and said, I will shew you one.

L. Chan. Let me hear that, let me hear that.

Rog. The Bishop of Rome and his Church, say, read, and sing, all that they do in their Congregations, in Latin, which is directly and plainly against the First to the Corinthians, the fourteenth Chapter. Latin Service.

L. Chan. I deny that, I deny that that is against the Word of God. Let me see you prove that; how prove you that?

Rog. Thus I began to say the Text from the Beginning of the Chapter, Qui loquitur lingua, &c. To speak with Tongue, said I, is to speak with a strange Tongue, as Latin or Greek, &c. and so to speak, is not to speak unto Men, but to God. But ye speak in Latin, which is a strange Tongue, wherefore ye speak unto Men, but unto God (* meaning God only at the most.) This he granted, that they speak not unto Men, but unto God. Speaking in a strange Tongue against St. Paul. * Impersection.

L. Chan. Well, then it is in vain unto Men.

Rog. No, not in vain. For one Man speaketh in one Tongue, and another in another Tongue, and all well.

L. Chan. Nay, I will prove then, that he speaketh neither to God nor to Man, but unto the Wind.

Rog. I was willing to have declared how and after what Sort these two Texts do agree (for they must agree, they be both the Sayings of the Holy Ghost, spoken by the Apostle Paul) as to wit, to speak not to Men, but unto God, and to speak into the Wind: And so to have gone forward with the Proof of my Matter begun, but here arose a Noise and Confusion. Then said the Lord Chancellor: 1 Cor. 14. To speak to God only. To speak both to God and Man. To speak neither to God nor Man, but the Wind.

L. Chan. To speak unto God, and not unto God, were unpossible.

Rog. I will prove them possible.

L. Haward. No, said my Lord Haward to my Lord Chancellor: Now will I bear you Witness that he is out of the Way: For he granted first, that they which speak in a strange Speech speak unto God; and now he saith the contrary, that they speak neither to God nor to Man.

Rog. I have not granted nor said (turning me to my Lord Haward) as you report. I have alledged the one Text, and now I am come to the other. They must agree, and I can make them to agree. But as for you, you understand not the Matter.

L. Haward. I understand so much, that that is not possible.

This is a Point of Sophistry, quoth Secretary Bourne.

Then the Lord Chancellor began to tell the Lord Haward, that when he was in High-Dutchland, they at Hale, which had before prayed and used their Service all in Dutch, began then to turn Part into Latin, and Part into Dutch. A City in Swaven.

Worcest. Yea, and at Wittenberg too.

Rog. Yea, (but I could not be heard for the Noise) in an University, where Men for the most Part understand the Latin, and yet not all in Latin. And I would have told the Order, and have gone forward both to have answered my Lord, and to have proved the Thing that I had taken in Hand, but perceiving their Mr. Rogers could not be heard to speak.

Talk and Noiſe to be too noiſome, I was fain to think this in my Heart, ſuffering them in the mean while to talk one of them one Thing, and another another. Alas! neither will theſe Men hear me if I ſpeak, neither yet will they ſuffer me to write. There is no Remedy, but let them alone, and commit the Matter to God. Yet I began to go forward, and ſaid that I would make the Texts to agree, and to prove my Purpoſe well enough.

L. Chan. No, no, thou canſt prove nothing by the Scripture. The Scripture is dead: it muſt have a lively Expoſitor.

Rog. No, the Scripture is alive. But let me go forward with my Purpoſe.

Wor. All Hereticks have alledged the Scriptures for them, and therefore we muſt have a lively Expoſitor for them.

Rog. Yea, all Hereticks have alledged the Scriptures for them: but they were confuted by the Scriptures, and by none other Expoſitor.

Wor. But they would not confeſs that they were overcome by the Scriptures, I am ſure of that.

Rog. I believe that: and yet were they overcome by them, and in all Councils they were diſputed with and overthrown by the Scriptures. And here I would have declared how they ought to proceed in theſe Days, and ſo have come again to my Purpoſe, but it was impoſſible: for one asked one Thing, another ſaid another, ſo that I was fain to hold my Peace, and let them talk. And even when I would have taken hold on my Proof, the Lord Chancellor bade to Priſon with me again; and away, away, ſaid he, we have more to talk withal: if I would not be reformed (ſo he termed it) away, away. Then up I ſtood, for I had kneeled all the while.

Confuſed Talk without Order.

Then Sir Richard Southwell, who ſtood by in a Window, ſaid to me, Thou wilt not burn in this Gear, when it cometh to the Purpoſe, I know well that.

Rog. Sir, I cannot tell, but I truſt in my Lord God, yes, lifting up mine Eyes unto Heaven.

Then my Lord of Ely told me much of the Queen's Majeſties Pleaſure and Meaning, and ſet it out with large Words, ſaying, That ſhe took them that would not receive the Pope's Supremacy, to be unworthy to have her Mercy, &c.

Rog. I ſaid I would not refuſe her Mercy, and yet I never offended her in all my Life: and that I beſought her Grace, and all their Honours, to be good to me, reſerving my Conſcience.

Divers ſpeak at once.

Divers ſpake at once. No? quoth they then, a great many of them, and eſpecially Secretary Bourne, a married Prieſt, and have not offended the Law!

Rog. I ſaid, I had not broken the Queen's Law, nor yet any Point of the Law of the Realm therein: for I married where it was lawful.

Divers ſpeak at once.

Divers at once. Where was that, ſaid they? thinking that to be unlawful in all Places.

Lawfulneſs of Prieſts Marriage. Mr. Rogers brought eight Children into England.

Rogers. In Dutchland. And if ye had not here in England made an open Law that Prieſts might have had Wives, I would never have come home again; for I brought a Wife and eight Children with me: which Thing ye might be ſure that I would not have done, if the Laws of the Realm had not permitted it before.

Then there was a great Noiſe, ſome ſaying that I was come too ſoon with ſuch a Sort; I ſhould find a ſour Coming of it: and ſome one Thing, and ſome another. And one ſaid (I could not well perceive who) that there was never a Catholick Man or Country, that ever granted that a Prieſt might have a Wife. Anno 1555.

Rogers. I ſaid, the Catholick Church never denied Marriage to Prieſts, nor yet to any other Man; and therewith was I going out of the Chamber, the Serjeant which brought me thither having me by the Arm.

Then the Biſhop of Worceſter turned his Face towards me, and ſaid, that I knew not where that Church was or is.

Mr. Rogers had away to Priſon.

Rogers. I ſaid, yes, that I could tell where it was, but therewith the Serjeant went with me out of the Door.

This was the very true Effect of all that was ſpoken unto me, and of all that I anſwered thereunto.

January 27, at Night.

The ſecond Examination of Mr. John Rogers, January 28, 29. 1555.

FIRST, being aſked again by the Lord Chancellor, whether I would come into one Church with the Biſhops and whole Realm, as now was concluded by Parliament (in which all the Realm was converted to the Catholick Church of Rome) and ſo receive the Mercy before proffered me, ariſing again with the whole Realm out of the Schiſm and Error in which we had long been, with Recantation of my Errors. I anſwered, that before I could not tell what his Mercy meant, but now I underſtand that it was a Mercy of the antichriſtian Church of Rome, which I utterly refuſed, and that the Riſing which he ſpake of, was a very Fall into Error and falſe Doctrine. Alſo that I had and would be able, by God's Grace to prove that all the Doctrine which I had ever taught was true and Catholick, and that by the Scriptures and the Authority of the Fathers that lived 400 Years after Chriſt's Death. He anſwered, that ſhould not, might not, nor ought not to be granted me: for I was but a private Man, and might not be heard againſt the Determination of the whole Realm. Should, quoth he, when a Parliament hath concluded a Thing, one, or any private Perſon have Authority to diſcuſs, whether they had done right or wrong? No, that may not be.

Winchefter's Mercy, what it meaneth.

To riſe to the Pope is to fall from Chriſt.

Whatſoever is once concluded in a Parliament, ought not be reformed afterward by Doctrine, nor the Word of God, by the Biſhop of Winchefter's Divinity.

I anſwered ſhortly, That all the Laws of Men might not, neither could rule the Word of God, but that they all muſt be diſcuſſed and judged thereby, and obey thereto: and neither my Conſcience, nor any Chriſtian Man's, could be ſatisfied with ſuch Laws as diſagreed from that Word: and ſo I was willing to have ſaid much more. But the Lord Chancellor began a long Tale to a very ſmall Purpoſe, concerning mine Anſwer, to have defaced me; that there was nothing in me, wherefore I ſhould be heard, but Arrogancy, Pride and Vain-glory. I alſo granted my Ignorance to be greater than I could expreſs, or than he took it; but yet that I feared not, by God's Aſſiſtance and Strength, to be able by writing to perform my Word, neither was I (I thanked God) ſo utterly ignorant as he would make me; but all was of God, to whom be Thanks rendered therefore. Proud Man was I never, nor yet vain glorious. All the World knew well, where and on which Side Pride, Arrogancy, and Vain-glory was. It was a poor Pride that was or is in us, God it knoweth.

Then, ſaid he, that I at the firſt Daſh condemned

Anno 1555. demned the Queen and the whole Realm to be of the Church of Antichriſt, and burdened me highly therewithal. I anſwered, That the Queen's Majeſty, (God ſave her Grace) would have done well enough, if it had not been for his Council. He ſaid, the Queen went before him, and it was her own Motion. I ſaid, without fail I neither could, nor would I ever believe it.

Dr. Aldrife witneſſeth with the Biſhop of Wincheſter. Then ſaid Dr. Aldrife the Biſhop of Carliſle, that they the Biſhops would bear him Witneſs. Yea, quoth I, that I believe well; and with that the People laughed: for that Day there were many, but on the Morrow they kept the Doors ſhut, and would let none in, but the Biſhop's Adherents and Servants in a Manner, yea, and the firſt Day the thouſand Man came not in. Then Mr. Comptroller and Secretary Bourne would have ſtood up alſo to bear Witneſs, and did.

I ſaid it was no great Matter: and to ſay the Truth, I thought that they were good Helpers thereunto themſelves: but I ceaſed to ſay any more therein, knowing that they were too ſtrong and mighty of Power, and that they ſhould be believed before me; yea, and before our Saviour Chriſt, and all his Prophets and Apoſtles too in theſe Days.

Then after many Words, he aſked me what I thought concerning the bleſſed Sacrament, and ſtood up, and put off his Cap, and all his Fellow Biſhops, (of which there were a great Number, new Men, of whom I knew few) whether I believed in the Sacrament to be the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, that was born of the Virgin Mary, and hanged on the Croſs, really and ſubſtantially.

The Opinion of Mr. Rogers, touching the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt, required.

I anſwered, I had often told him that it was a Matter in which I was no Medler, and therefore ſuſpected of my Brethren to be of a contrary Opinion. Notwithſtanding, even as the moſt Part of your Doctrine in other Points is falſe, and the Defence thereof only by Force and Cruelty: ſo in this Matter I think it to be as falſe as the reſt. For I cannot underſtand (really and ſubſtantially) to ſignify otherwiſe than corporally; but corporally Chriſt is only in Heaven, and ſo cannot Chriſt be corporally alſo in your Sacrament. And here I ſomewhat ſet out his Charity after this Sort: my Lord, quoth I, ye have dealt with me moſt cruelly: for ye have put me in Priſon without Law, and kept me there now almoſt a Year and a Half. For I was almoſt half a Year in my Houſe, where I was obedient to you, God knoweth, and ſpake with no Man. And now I have been a full Year in Newgate at great Coſts and Charges, having a Wife and ten Children to find, and I had never a Penny of my Livings, which was againſt the Law.

Acts 3.

Cruelty ſhewed without a Cauſe.

Mr. Rogers a Year and a Half in durance.

He anſwered, that Dr. Ridley which had given them me, was an Uſurper; and therefore I was the unjuſt Poſſeſſor of them.

Was the King then an Uſurper, quoth I, which gave Dr. Ridley the Biſhoprick?

Yea, quoth he, and began to ſet out the Wrongs that the King had done to the Biſhop of London, and to himſelf alſo. But yet I do miſuſe my Terms, quoth he, to call the King Uſurper. But the Word was gone out of the Abundance of the Heart before: and I think that he was not very ſorry for it in Heart. I might have ſaid more concerning that Matter, but I did not.

Steph. Gardiner calleth King Edward an Uſurper.

I aſked him wherefore he put me in Priſon? He ſaid, becauſe I preached againſt the Queen.

I anſwered that it was not true: and I would be bound to prove it, and to ſtand to the Trial of the Law, that no Man ſhould be able to diſprove it, and thereupon would ſet my Life. I preached (quoth I) a Sermon at the Croſs, after the Queen came to the Tower; but therein was nothing ſaid againſt the Queen, I take Witneſs of all the Audience, which was not ſmall. I alleged alſo that he had, after Examination, let me go at Liberty after the Preaching of that Sermon.

Yea, but thou didſt read thy Lectures after, quoth he, againſt the Commandment of the Council.

That did I not, quoth I, let that be proved, and let me die for it. Thus have you now againſt the Law of God and Man handled me, and never ſent for me, never conferred with me, never ſpoke of any Learning, till now that ye have gotten a Whip to whip me with, and a Sword to cut off my Neck, if I will not condeſcend to your Mind, This Charity doth all the World underſtand.

Mr. Rogers impriſon'd againſt all Law and Right.

I might and would have added, if I could have been ſuffered to ſpeak, that it had been Time enough to take away Mens Livings, and thereto to have impriſoned them, after that they had offended Laws: for they be good Citizens that break not Laws, and worthy of Praiſe, and not of Puniſhment. But their Purpoſe is to keep Men in Priſon, until they may catch them in their Laws, and ſo kill them. I could and would have added the Example of Daniel, who by a crafty deviſed Law was caſt into the Lion's Den. Item, I might have declared, that I moſt humbly deſired to be ſet at Liberty, ſending my Wife to him with a Supplication, being great with Child, and with her eight honeſt Women, or thereabouts, to Richmond, at Chriſtmas was a Twelve-month, while I was yet in my Houſe.

Mr. Rogers puniſhed before any Law was broken.

Ittm, I wrote two Supplications to him out of Newgate, and ſent my Wife many Times to him. Mr. Goſnold alſo that worthy Man, who is now departed in the Lord, laboured for me, and ſo did divers other worthy Men alſo take Pains in the Matter. Theſe Things declare my Lord Chancellor's antichriſtian Charity, which is, that he hath and doth ſeek my Blood, and the Deſtruction of my poor Wife and my ten Children.

Mr. Goſnold laboured for Mr. Rogers

This is a ſhort Sum of the Words which were ſpoken on the 28th of January in the Afternoon, after that Mr. Hooper had been the firſt, and Mr. Cardmaker the ſecond in Examination before me. The Lord grant us Grace to ſtand together, fighting lawfully in his Cauſe, till we be ſmitten down together, if the Lord's Will be ſo to permit it. For there ſhall not a Hair of our Heads periſh againſt his Will, but with his Will. Whereunto the ſame Lord grant us to be obedient unto the End, and in the End, Amen: ſweet, mighty, and merciful Lord Jeſus, rhe Son of David and of God: Amen, Amen, let every true Chriſtian ſay and pray.

Then the Clock being, as I gueſſed, about four, the Lord Chancellor ſaid, that he and the Church muſt yet uſe Charity with me (what Manner of Charity it is, all true Chriſtians do well underſtand, as to wit, the ſame that the Fox doth with the Chickens, and the Wolf with the Lambs) and gave me Reſpite till To-morrow, to ſee whether I would remember myſelf well To-morrow, and whether I would return to the Catholick Church (for ſo he called his antichriſtian falſe Church) again, and repent, and they would receive me to Mercy, Great Mercy of Wincheſter, no leſs than the Fox hath to the Chickens, or the Wolf to ſuck the Blood of Lambs.

I ſaid that I was never out of the true catholick Church, nor would be; but into his Church would I, by God's Grace, never come.

The Pope's Church is the Church of Antichriſt.

Well, quoth he, then is our Church falſe and Antichriſtian?

Yea, quoth I.

And what is the Doctrine of the Sacrament?

Falſe, quoth I, and caſt my Hands abroad.

Then ſaid one, that I was a Player. To whom I anſwered not; for I paſſed not upon his Mock.

Mr. Rogers warned to appear the next Day.

Come again, quoth the Lord Chancellor, to Morrow between Nine and Ten.

I am ready to come again whenever ye call, quoth I.

And thus was I brought up by the Sheriffs to the Compter in Southwark, Mr. Hooper going before me, and a great Multitude of People being preſent, ſo that we had much to do to go in the Streets.

Thus much was done January 28.

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hooper brought again before the Chancellor.

The ſecond Day, which was January 29. we were ſent for in the Morning about Nine of the Clock, and by the Sheriffs fetched from the Compter in Southwark to the Church again, as to wit, to St. Mary Overies, where we were the Day before in the Afternoon, as is ſaid. And when Mr. Hooper was condemned, as I underſtood afterward, then ſent they for me. Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid unto me:

Gardiner's Words to Mr. Rogers.

Rogers, quoth he, here thou waſt Yeſterday, and we gave thee Liberty to remember thyſelf this Night, whether thou wouldſt come to the holy Catholick Church of Chriſt again or not. Tell us now what thou haſt determined, whether thou wilt be repentant and ſorry, and wilt return again and take Mercy.

Anſwer of Mr. Rogers to the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

My Lord, quoth I, I have remembred myſelf right well what you Yeſterday ſaid unto me, and deſire you to give me Leave to declare my Mind, what I have to ſay thereunto; and that done, I ſhall anſwer you to your demanded Queſtion.

Mr. Rogers not ſuffered here to defend himſelf by Writing.

When I Yeſterday deſired that I might be ſuffered by the Scripture and Authority of the firſt, beſt, and pureſt Church to defend my Doctrine by Writing (meaning not only of the Primacy, but alſo of all the Doctrine that ever I had preached) ye anſwered me, that it might not, nor ought not to be granted me, for I was a private Perſon; and that the Parliament was above the Authority of all private Perſons, and therefore the Sentence thereof might not be found faulty and valueleſs by me, being but a private Perſon. And yet my Lord, quoth I, I am able to ſhew Examples, that one Man hath come into a general Council, and after the whole had determined and agreed upon an Act or Article, ſome one Man coming in afterward, hath by the Word of God declared ſo pithily that the Council had erred in decreeing the ſaid Article, that he cauſed the whole Council to change and alter their Act or Article before determined. And of theſe Examples, ſaid I, I am able to ſhew two. I can alſo ſhew the Authority of St. Auguſtine; that when he diſputed with an Heretick, he would neither himſelf, nor yet have the Heretick to lean unto the Determination of the two former Councils, of which the one made for him, and the other for the Heretick that diſputed againſt him: But ſaid, that he would have the Scriptures to be their Judge, which which were common and indifferent for them both, and not proper to either of them.

Whole Councils turned by private Perſons.

Contra Maxent. l. 3. c. 14.

Item. I could ſhew, ſaid I, the Authority of a learned Lawyer Panormitanus, which ſaith, That unto a ſimple Lay-man that bringeth the Word of God with him, there ought more Credit to be given, than to a whole Council gathered together. By theſe Things will I prove that I ought not to be denied to ſay my Mind, and to be heard againſt a whole Parliament, bringing the Word of God for me, and the Authority of the old Church 400 Years after Chriſt, albeit that every Man in the Parliament had willingly and without reſpect of Fear and Favour agreed thereunto, which Thing I doubt not a little of; eſpecially ſeeing the like had been permitted in the old Church, even in general Councils, yea, and that in one of the chiefeſt Councils that ever was, unto which neither any Acts of this Parliament, nor yet any of the late general Councils of the Biſhops of Rome ought to be compared. For, ſaid I, if Henry VIII. were alive, and ſhould call a Parliament and begin to determine a Thing (and here I would have alledged the Example of the Act of making the Queen a Baſtard, and of making himſelf the ſuperior Head; but I could not, being interrupted by one whom God forgive) then will ye (pointing to my Lord Chancellor) and ye, and ye, and ſo ye all (pointing to the reſt of the Biſhops) ſay, Amen: Yea, and it like your Grace, it is meet that it be ſo enacted.

Anno 1555.

Extrav. de appel. cap. ſignificaſti.

A Caſe put to the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

This was Sir Anthony Browne.

Here my Lord Chancellor would ſuffer me to ſpeak no more; but bade me ſit down mockingly, ſaying, That I was ſent for to be inſtructed of them, and I would take upon me to be their Inſtructor.

Mr. Rogers not ſuffered to ſpeak.

My Lord, quoth I, I ſtand, and ſit not: Shall I not be ſuffered to ſpeak for my Life?

Shall we ſuffer thee to tell a Tale, and to prate, quoth he? And with that he ſtood up, and began to face me, after his old arrogant proud Faſhion, for he perceived that I was in a Way to have touched them ſomewhat, which he thought to hinder by daſhing me out of my Tale, and ſo he did: For I could never be ſuffered to come to my Tale again, no not to one Word of it; but he had much like Communication with me as he had the Day before, and as his Manner is, Taunt upon Taunt, and Check upon Check. For in that Caſe, being God's Cauſe, I told him he ſhould not make me afraid to ſpeak.

Mark here the Spirit of this Prelate.

L. Chan. See what a Spirit this Fellow hath, ſaid he, finding Fault at mine accuſtomed Earneſtneſs, and hearty Manner of ſpeaking.

Rogers. I have a true Spirit, quoth I, agreeing and obeying the Word of God, and would further have ſaid, that I was never the worſe but the better, to be earneſt in a juſt and true Cauſe, and in my Maſter Chriſt's Matters; but I could not he heard. And at length he proceeded towards his Excommunication and Condemnation, after that I had told him, that his Church of Rome was the Church of Antichriſt, meaning the falſe Doctrine and tyrannical Laws, which the Maintenance thereof by cruel Perſetions uſed by the Biſhops of the ſaid Church (of which the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and the reſt of his Fellow Biſhops that are now in England, are the chief Members:) Of Laws I mean, quoth I, and not all Men and Women which are in the Pope's Church. Likewiſe when I was ſaid to have denied their Sacrament (whereof he made his wonted reverent Mention, more to maintain his Kingdom thereby, than for the true Reverence of Chriſt's Inſtitution; more for his own and his popiſh Generation's Sake, than for Religion or God's Sake: I told him after what Order I did ſpeak of it (for the Manner of his

The Church of Rome to be the Church of Antichriſt, meaning the Laws and Doctrine now uſed in Rome.

Anno 1555. ſpeaking was not agreeing to my Words, which are before recited in the Communication that we had January 28.) wherewith he was not contented, but he aſked the Audience, whether I had not ſimply denied the Sacrament. They would have ſaid, and did what he deſired, for moſt of them were of his own Servants at that Day, the 29th of January I mean. At laſt I ſaid, I will never deny that I ſaid, that is, that your Doctrine of the Sacrament is falſe; but yet I tell you after what Order I ſaid it.

To be ſhort, he read my Condemnation before me, particularly mentioning therein but two Articles; firſt, that I affirmed the Romiſh Catholick Church to be the Church of Antichriſt; and that I denied the Reality of their Sacrament. He cauſed me to be degraded and condemned, and put into the Hands of the Laity, and ſo he gave me over into the Sheriffs Hands.

The Copy of Mr. Rogers his Condemnation I thought good here to inſert in Engliſh, to the Intent that the ſame being here once expreſſed, may ſerve to be referred to for all condemnatory Sentences thro' the whole Story.

The Sentence condemnatory againſt Mr. Rogers.

The definitive Sentence againſt Mr. Rogers.

IN the Name of God, Amen. We Stephen, by the Permiſſion of God, Biſhop of Winchester, lawfully and rightly proceeding with all godly Favour, by Authority and Virtue of our Office, againſt thee John Rogers, Prieſt, otherwiſe called Matthew, before us perſonally here preſent, being accuſed and detected, and notoriouſly ſlandered of Hereſy, having heard, ſeen, and underſtood, and with all diligent Deliberation weighed, diſcuſſed, and conſidered the Merits of the Cauſe, all Things being obſerved, which by us in this Behalf in Order of Law ought to be obſerved, ſitting in our Judgment-ſeat, the Name of Chriſt being firſt called upon, and having only God before our Eyes, becauſe by the Acts enacted, propounded, and exhibited in this Matter, and by thine own Confeſſion judicially made before us, we do find that thou haſt taught, holden, and affirmed, and obſtinately defended divers Errors, Hereſies, and damnable Opinions, contrary to the Doctrine and Determination of the holy Church, as namely theſe; That the Catholick Church of Rome is the Church of Antichriſt. Item, That in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not ſubſtantially nor really the natural Body and Blood of Chriſt. The which aforeſaid Hereſies and damnable Opinions, being contrary to the Law of God, and Determination of the univerſal and apoſtolical Church, thou haſt arrogantly, ſtubbornly, and wittingly maintained, held and affirmed, and alſo defended before us, as well in this Judgment, as alſo otherwiſe, and with the like Obſtinacy, Stubbornneſs, Malice and Blindneſs of Heart, both wittingly and willingly haſt affirmed, that thou wilt believe, maintain and hold, affirm and declare the ſame: We therefore Stephen Winchester, Biſhop, Ordinary, and Dioceſan aforeſaid, by the Conſent and Aſſent as well of our reverend Brethren, the Lords Biſhops here preſent and aſſiſtant, as alſo by the Counſel and Judgment of divers worſhipful Lawyers and Profeſſors of Divinity, with whom we have communicated in this Behalf, do declare and pronounce thee the ſaid John Rogers, otherwiſe called Matthew, through thy Demerits, Tranſgreſſions, Obſtinacies, and Willfulneſs (which through manifold Ways thou haſt incurred by thine own wicked and ſtubborn Obſtinacy) to have been and to be guilty of the deteſtible, horrible, and wicked Offences of heretical Pravity and execrable Doctrine, and that thou haſt before us ſundry Times, ſpoken, maintained, and wittingly and ſtubbornly defended the ſaid curſed and execrable Doctrine in the ſundry Confeſſions, Aſſertions and Recognitions here judicially before us oftentimes repeated, and yet ſtill doſt maintain, and affirm and believe the ſame, and that thou haſt been and art lawfully and ordinarily convicted in this Behalf: We therefore, I ſay, albeit following the Example of Chriſt, Which would not the Death of a Sinner, but rather that he ſhould convert and live; we have gone about oftentimes to correct thee, and by all lawful Means that we could, and all wholeſome Admonitions that we did know, to reduce thee again unto the true Faith and Unity of the univerſal Catholick Church, notwithſtanding have found thee obſtinate and ſtiff-necked, willingly continuing in thy damnable Opinions and Hereſies, and refuſing to return again unto the true Faith and Unity of the holy mother Church; and as the Child of Wickedneſs and Darkneſs ſo to have hardened thy Heart, that thou wilt not underſtand the Voice of thy Shepherd, which with a fatherly Affection doth ſeek after thee, nor wilt be allured with his fatherly and godly Admonitions: We therefore, Stephen, the Biſhop aforeſaid, not willing that thou which art wicked ſhouldeſt now become more wicked, and infect the Lord's Flock with thine Hereſy (which we are greatly afraid of) with Sorrow of Mind and Bitterneſs of Heart do judge thee, and definitively condemn thee the ſaid John Rogers, otherwiſe called Matthew, thy Demerits and Faults being aggravated through thy damnable Obſtinacy, as guilty of moſt deteſtable Hereſies, and as an obſtinate impertinent Sinner, refuſing penitently to return to the Lap and Unity of the holy mother Church, and that thou haſt been and art by Law excommunicate, and do pronounce and declare thee to be an excommunicate Perſon. Alſo we pronounce and declare thee, being an Heretick, to be caſt out from the Church, and left unto the Judgment of the ſecular Power, and now preſently ſo do leave thee as an obſtinate Heretick, and a Perſon wrapped in the Sentence of the great Curſe, to be degraded worthily for thy Demerits (requiring them notwithſtanding, in the Bowels of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that this Execution and Puniſhment worthily to be done upon thee, may ſo be moderated, that the Rigour thereof be not too extream, nor yet the Gentleneſs too much mitigated, but it may be to the Salvation of thy Soul, to the Extirpation, Terror, and Converſion of the Hereticks to the Unity of the Catholick Faith) by this our Sentence definitive which we here lay upon and againſt thee, and do with Sorrow of Heart promulgate in this Form aforeſaid.

His Articles.

These Murderers pretend Sorrow of Heart, and yet they will not ceaſe from murdering

After this Sentence was read, he ſent us (Mr. Hooper, I mean, and me) to the Clink, there to remain till Night; and when it was dark, they carried us, Mr. Hooper, going before with one Sheriff. and I coming after with the other, with Bills and Weapons enow, out of the Clink, and led us through the Biſhop's Houſe, and St. Mary Overy's Church-yard, and ſo into Southwark, and over the Bridge on Proceſſion to Newgate through the City. But I muſt ſhew you this alſo, that when the Biſhop had read the Condemnation, he declared that I was in the great Curſe, and what a dangerous Matter it was to eat and drink with us that were accurſed, or to give us any Thing; for all that did ſo, ſhould be partakers of the ſame great Curſe.

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hooper ſent to Newgate.

A dangerous Thing to be in the Pope's Curſe.

Mr. Rogers's Words to the Biſhop of Winchester.

Well, my Lord, quoth I, here I ſtand before God and you, and all this honourable Audience, and take him to witneſs, that I never wittingly or willingly taught any falſe Doctrine; and therefore have I a good Conſcience before God and all good Men: I am ſure that you and I ſhall come before a Judge that is righteous, before whom I ſhall be as good a Man as you; and I nothing doubt but that I ſhall be found there a true Member of the true Catholick Church of Chriſt, and everlaſtingly ſaved. And as for your falſe Church, ye need not to excommunicate me forth of it, I have not been in it theſe twenty Years, the Lord be thankful therefore. But now ye have done what ye can, my Lord, I pray you yet grant me one Thing.

What is that, quoth he?

Mr. Rogers's Requeſt, that his Wife might come to him while he lived, could not be granted

That my poor Wife, being a Stranger, may come and ſpeak with me ſo long as I live: for ſhe hath ten Children that are hers and mine, and ſomewhat I would counſel her, what were the beſt for her to do.

No, quoth he, ſhe is not thy Wife.

Yes my Lord, quoth I, and hath been theſe 18 Years.

Should I grant her to be thy Wife, quoth he?

Chuſe you, quoth I, whether ye will or not; ſhe ſhall be ſo nevertheleſs.

She ſhall not come at thee, quoth he.

Then I have tried out all your Charity, ſaid I. You make yourſelf highly diſpleaſed with the Matrimony of Prieſts, but you maintain open Whoredom: as in Wales, quoth I, where every Prieſt hath his Whore openly dwelling with, and lying by him: even as your holy Father ſuffereth all the Prieſts in Dutchland and in France to do the like. Thereto he anſwered not, but looked as it were a ſquint at it: and thus I departed, and ſaw him laſt.

Mr. Rogers warned to prepare for Death.

On the 4th of February 1555, Mr. Rogers was ſuddenly warned by the Keeper of Newgate's Wife, to prepare himſelf to the Fire; who being then found aſleep, could ſcarce be awaked. At length being raiſed and awaked, and bid to make haſte, then, ſaid he, if it be ſo, I need not tye my Points. And ſo was had down firſt to Biſhop Bonner to be degraded: which being done, he craved of Bonner but one Petition: and Bonner aſking what that ſhould be? Mr. Rogers replied, that he might ſpeak a few Words with his Wife before his burning. But that could not be obtained of him. Then, ſaid he, you declare what your Charity is: and ſo he was brought into Smithfield by Mr. Cheſter and Mr. Woodroofe, then Sheriffs of London, there to be burnt; where he ſhewed moſt conſtant Patience, not uſing many Words, for he could not be permitted, but only exhorting the People conſtantly to remain in that Faith and true Doctrine which he before had taught, and they had learned, and for the Confirmation whereof he was not only content patiently to ſuffer and bear all ſuch Bitterneſs and Cruelty as had been ſhewed him, but alſo moſt gladly to reſign up his Life, and to give his Fleſh to the conſuming Fire, for the Teſtimony of the ſame.

Mr. Rogers degraded.

Biſhop Bonner would not ſuffer Mr. Rogers to ſpeak to his Wife before his burning.

Briefly, and in few Words to comprehend the whole Order of his Life, and Martyrdom: Firſt, this good Man, Mr. Rogers, was committed to Priſon, as is aboveſaid, and there continued a Year and Half. In Priſon he was merry and earneſt in all he went about. He wrote much, his Examinations he penned with his own Hand, which elſe had never come to Light. Anno 1555.

Furthermore, this alſo may be added, that he ſpake, being then in Priſon, to the Printer of this preſent Book, who then alſo was laid up for like Cauſe of Religion; Thou, ſaid he, ſhalt live to ſee the Alteration of this Religion, and the Goſpel to be freely preached again: and therefore have me commended to my Brethren, as well in Exile as others, and bid them be circumſpect in diſplacing the Papiſts, and putting good Miniſters into Churches, or elſe their End will be worſe than ours. And for Lack of good Miniſters to furniſh Churches, his Device was, (Mr. Hooper alſo agreeing to the ſame) that for every ten Churches ſome one good and learned Super-intendent ſhould be appointed, which ſhould have under him faithful Readers, ſuch as might well be got, ſo that Popiſh Prieſts ſhould clean be put out, and the Biſhop once a Year to overſee the Profiting of the Pariſhes; and if the Miniſter did not his Duty, as well in profiting himſelf in his Book, and his Pariſhioners in good Inſtructions, ſo that they may be trained by little and little to give a Reckoning how they do profit, then he to be expelled, and another put in his Place: And the Biſhop to do the like with the Super-intendent: This was his Counſel and Requeſt; ſhewing moreover, and proteſting in his Commendations to his Brethren by the Printer aforeſaid, that if they would not ſo do, their End, he ſaid, would be worſe than theirs.

Mr. Rogers's Counſel in placing good Miniſters.

To proceed now further in deſcribing the Doings of this Man; during the Time he remained Priſoner in Newgate, he was to the Priſoners beneficial and liberal; for whom he had thus deviſed, that he with his Fellows ſhould have but one Meal a Day, they paying notwithſtanding for the Charges of the whole; the other Meal ſhould be given to them that lacked on the other Side of the Priſon. But Alexander their Keeper, a ſtrait Man, and a right Alexander, a Copperſmith indeed, would in no Caſe ſuffer that, of whoſe Doings more ſhall be ſaid, God willing, hereafter. The Sunday before Mr. Rogers ſuffered, he drank to Mr. Hooper being then underneath him, and bade them commend him unto him, and tell him, there was never little Fellow better would ſtick to a Man, than he would ſtick to him; preſuppoſing they ſhould both be burned together, although it happened otherwiſe, for Mr. Rogers was burnt alone. And thus much briefly concerning the Life and ſuch Acts of Mr. Rogers, as I thought worthy noting.

Proviſion for the Priſoners in Newgate, made by Mr. Rogers.

Alexander Andrew, Goaler of Newgate, compared to Alexander the Copperſmith.

Now when the Time came, that he being delivered to the Sheriffs ſhould be brought out of Newgate to Smithfield, the Place of his Execution, Mr. Woodroofe, one of the aforeſaid Sheriffs, firſt came to Mr. Rogers, and aſked him, if he would revoke his abominable Doctrine, and his evil Opinion of the Sacrament of the Altar? Mr. Rogers anſwered, That which I have preached I will ſeal with my Blood. Then Mr. Woodroofe ſaid, Thou art an Heretick. That ſhall be known, quoth Rogers, at the Day of Judgment. Well, ſaid Mr. Woodroofe, I will never pray for thee. But I will pray for you, ſaid Mr. Rogers; and ſo was brought the ſame Day, which was Monday the fourth of February, by the Sheriffs towards Smithfield, ſaying the Pſalm Miſerere by the Way, all the People wonderfully rejoicing at his Conſtancy, with great Praiſes and Thanks to God for the ſame. And there, in the Preſence of Mr. Rocheſter, Comptroller of the Queen's Houſhold, Anno 1555. Houſhold, Sir Richard Southwell, both the Sheriffs, and a great Number of People, he was burnt to Aſhes. A little before his burning, his Pardon was brought, if he would have recanted, but he utterly refuſed it. He was the firſt Martyr of all the bleſſed Company that ſuffered in Queen Mary's Time. His Wife and Children, being eleven in Number, ten able to go, and one ſucking at her Breaſt, met him by the Way at he went towards Smithfield: This ſorrowful Sight of his own Fleſh and Blood could nothing move him, but that he conſtantly and chearfully took his Death with wonderful Patience, in the Defence and Quarrel of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

Mr. Rogers offered his Pardon if he would recant, but he refuſed it.

The Life and Martyrdom of Mr. Laurence Saunders, who was burnt at Coventry, February 8. 1555.

AFTER that Queen Mary, by publick Proclamation in the firſt Year of her Reign, had inhibited the ſincere preaching of God's holy Word, as is before declared, ſeveral pious Miniſters, who had the Cure and Charge of Souls committed to them, did notwithſtanding, according to their bounden Duty, feed their Flock faithfully, not as Preachers authorized by publick Authority, (as the Order of the Realm was in the happy Days of bleſſed King Edward) but as the private Paſtors of particular Flocks, among whom Laurence Saunders was one, a Man of worſhipful Parentage. His bringing up was in Learning from his Youth, in Places meet for that Purpoſe, as namely in the School of Eaton. From whence he was choſen to go to the King's College in Cambridge, where he continued Scholar of the College three whole Years, and there profited in Knowledge and Learning very much for that Time: Shortly after that, he forſook the Univerſity, and went to his Parents, upon whoſe Advice he minded to become a Merchant, for that his Mother, who was a Gentlewoman of good Eſtimation, being left a Widow, and having a good Portion for him among his other Brethren, ſhe thought to ſet him up wealthily, and ſo he coming up to London, was bound Apprentice with a Merchant, named Sir William Cheſter (who afterward chanced to be Sheriff of London the ſame Year that Saunders was burnt at Coventry,) Thus by the Mind of his Friends, Laurence ſhould needs have been a Merchant; but Almighty God, who hath his ſecret Working in all Things, ſaw better for his Servant, as it fell out in the End: For although that Saunders was bound by Indenture to be a Merchant, yet the Lord ſo wrought inwardly in his Heart, that he could find no liking to that Vocation: So that when his other Fellows were buſily occupied about that Kind of Trade, he would ſecretly withdraw himſelf into ſome privy Corner, and there fall into his ſolitary Lamentations, as one not pleaſed with that Kind and Trade of Life.

Scholars are taken out of Eaton College, into the King's College at Cambridge.

Mr. Saunders firſt bound Prentice with Mr. Cheſter.

Mr. Saunders appointed to the Trade of Merchandize, could not away with that Kind of Life.

It happened that his Maſter, being a good Man, and hearing his Prentice thus in his ſecret Prayers inwardly to mourn by himſelf, called him unto him, to know what the Cauſe was of that his Solitarineſs and Lamentation: Who then perceiving him not to fancy that Kind of Life, (for ſo Saunders declared unto him) and perceiving alſo his whole Purpoſe to be bent to the Study of his Book, and ſpiritual Contemplation, like a good Man directed his Letters immediately unto his Friends, and giving him his Indenture, ſet him free: And thus Laurence Saunders being raviſhed with the Love of Learning, and eſpecially with the reading of God's Word, tarried not long in the Traffick of Merchandize, but ſhortly returned to Cambridge again to his Study, where he began to couple to the Knowledge of the Latin, the Study of the Greek Tongue, wherein he profited very much in a little Time; therewith alſo he joined the Study of the Hebrew. Then he gave himſelf wholly to the Study of the holy Scripture, to furniſh himſelf to the Office of a Preacher.

Mr. Saunders returneth to his Study.

In the Beginning of King Edward's Reign, when God's true Religion was began to be reſtored, after Licence obtained, he began to preach, and was ſo well liked of them which then had Authority, that they appointed him to read a Divinity Lecture in the College at Fothringa, where by Doctrine and Life he edified the Pious, drew many Ignorant to the true Knowledge of God, and ſtopped the Mouth of the Adverſaries. He married about that Time, and in the married Eſtate led a Life unblameable before all Men. The College of Fothringa being diſſolved, he was placed to be Reader in the Minſter at Lichfield; where he ſo behaved himſelf in Teaching and Living, that his very Adverſaries did give a full Report as well of his Learning, as of his Piety. After a certain Space, he departed from Lichfield to a Benefice in Leiceſterſhire, called Church-langton, where he keeping Reſidence, taught diligently, and kept a liberal Houſe. From thence he was orderly called to take a Benefice in the City of London, named Alhallows in Breadſtreet. Then he was minded to give over his Cure in the Country; and therefore after he had taken Poſſeſſion of his Benefice in London, he departed from thence into the Country, clearly to diſcharge himſelf thereof. And even at that Time began the Broil about the Claim that Queen Mary made to the Crown, by reaſon whereof he could not accompliſh his Purpoſe.

Mr. Saunders, Reader in the College of Fothringa.

Saunders after Reader at Lichfield.

In this Trouble, and even among the Beginners of it, (ſuch I mean as were for the Queen) he preached at Northampton, nothing medling with the State, but boldly uttered his Conſcience againſt popiſh Doctrine and Antichriſt's damnable Errors, which were like to ſpring up again in England, as a juſt Plague for the little Love which the Engliſh Nation did bear to the bleſſed Word of God, which had been ſo plentifully offered unto them. The Queen's Men which were there and heard him, were highly diſpleaſed with him for his Sermon, and for it kept him among them as Priſoner. But partly for Love of his Brethren and Friends, who were chief Doers for the Queen among them, partly becauſe there was no Law broken by his Preaching, they diſmiſſed him. He, ſeeing the dreadful Days at hand, inflamed with the Fire of godly Zeal, preached with Diligence at both thoſe Benefices, as Time could ſerve him, ſeeing he could reſign neither of them now, but into the Hand of a Papiſt.

The conſtant Purpoſe of Mr. Saunders.

Thus paſſed he to and fro preaching, until that Proclamation was put forth, of which Mention is made in the Beginning; at which Time he was at his Benefice in the Country, where he, (notwithſtanding the Proclamation aforeſaid) taught diligently God's Truth, confirming the People therein, and arming them againſt falſe

Doctrine,

Doctrine, until he was not only commanded to ceaſe, but alſo with Force reſiſted, ſo that he could not proceed there in Preaching. Some of his Friends, perceiving ſuch fearful menacing, counſelled him to fly out of the Realm, which he refuſed to do. But ſeeing he was with Violence kept from doing good in that Place, he returned towards London to viſit the Flock, of which he had there the Charge.

Mr. Saunders refuſeth to fly the Realm.

On Saturday, October 14. as he was coming nigh to the City of London, Sir John Mordant a Counſellor to Queen Mary, overtook him, and aſked him whither he went. I have, ſaid Saunders, a Cure in London, and now I go to inſtruct my People, according to my Duty. If you will follow my Counſel, quoth Mr. Mordant, let them alone, and come not at them. To this Saunders anſwered: How ſhall I then be diſcharged before God, if any be ſick, and deſire Conſolation, if any want good Counſel, and need Inſtruction? or if any ſhould ſlip into Error, and receive falſe Doctrine? Did you not, quoth Mordant, preach ſuch a Day, and named the Day, in Breadſtreet in London? Yes verily, ſaid Saunders, that ſame is my Cure. I heard you myſelf, quoth Mr. Mordant: And will you preach there again? If it pleaſe you, ſaid Saunders, to Morrow you may hear me again in that ſame Place, where I will confirm, by the Authority of God's Word, all that I ſaid then, and whatſoever before that Time I taught them.

I would counſel you, quoth the other, not to preach. If you can and will forbid me by lawful Authority, then muſt I obey, ſaid Saunders. Nay, quoth he, I will not forbid you, but I do give you Counſel. And thus entred they both the City, and departed each from other. Mr. Mordant went to give Warning to Bonner Biſhop of London, that Saunders would preach in his Cure the next Day. Saunders reſorted to his Lodging with a Mind bent to do his Duty.

Mr. Mordant diſſuadeth Laurence Saunders from Preaching.

The next Day, which was Sunday in the Forenoon, he made a Sermon in his Pariſh, treating on that Place which Paul writeth to the Corinthians, 2 Cor. 11. I have coupled you to one Man, that ye ſhould make yourſelves a chaſte Virgin unto Chriſt. But I fear leſt it come to paſs, that as the Serpent beguiled Eve; even ſo your Wits ſhould be corrupt from the Singleneſs which ye had towards Chriſt. He recited a Sum of that true Chriſtian Doctrine, thro' which they were coupled to Chriſt, to receive of him free Juſtification thro' Faith in his Blood. The papiſtical Doctrine he compared to the Serpent's deceiving: And leſt they ſhould be deceived by it, he made a Compariſon between the Voice of God, and the Voice of the popiſh Serpent; deſcending to more particular Declaration thereof, as it were to let them plainly ſee the Difference that is between the Order of the Church-Service, ſet forth by King Edward in the Engliſh Tongue, and comparing it with the popiſh Service then uſed in the Latin.

Mr. Saunders's Sermon at Alhallows.

The firſt he ſaid was good, becauſe it was according to the Word of God, 1 Cor. 14. and the Order of the primitive Church. The other he ſaid was evil, and though in that Evil, be intermingled ſome good Latin Words, yet was it but as a little Honey or Milk mingled with a great deal of Poiſon, to make them drink up all. This was the Sum of his Sermon.

In the Afternoon he was ready in his Church to have given another Exhortation to his People. But the Biſhop of London interrupted him by ſending an Officer for him. This Officer charged him, upon pain of Diſobedience and Contumacy, forthwith to come to the Biſhop his Maſter. Thus, as the Apoſtles were brought out of the Temple, where they were teaching, unto the Rulers of the Prieſts, ſo was Laurence Saunders brought before the Biſhop of London, who had in his Company the aforeſaid Sir John Mordant and ſome of his Chaplains. The Biſhop laid no more to Laurence Saunders's Charge, but Treaſon for breaking the Queen's Proclamation, Hereſy and Sedition for his Sermon.

Mr. Saunders apprehended by Biſhop Bonner's Command.

Anno 1555.

Sir John Mordant accuſeth Laurence Saunders.

The Treaſon and Sedition, his Charity was content to let ſlip until another Time. But an Heretick he would now prove him, and all thoſe, he ſaid, who did teach and believe that the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and all Orders of the Church are moſt pure, which do come moſt nigh to the Order of the primitive Church. For the Church was then but in her Infancy, and could not abide that Perfection which was afterward to be furniſhed with Ceremonies. And for this Cauſe Chriſt himſelf, and after him the Apoſtles, did in many Things bear with the Rudeneſs of that Church. To this Laurence Saunders anſwered with the Authority of St. Auguſtine, That Ceremonies were even from the Beginning invented and ordained for the rude Infancy and weak Infirmity of Man, and therefore it was a Token of the more Perfection of the primitive Church, that it had few Ceremonies, and of the Rudeneſs of the papiſtical Church, becauſe it had ſo many Ceremonies, partly blaſphemous, partly unſavory and unprofitable.

Preaching of God's Word made Treaſon by Biſhop Bonner.

After much Talk concerning this Matter, the Biſhop deſired him to write what he believed of Tranſubſtantiation. Laurence Saunders did ſo, ſaying, my Lord, ye do ſeek my Blood, and ye ſhall have it: I pray God that ye may be ſo baptized in it, that ye may thereafter loath Blood-ſucking, and become a better Man. This Writing the Biſhop kept for his Purpoſe, even to cut the Writer's Throat, as ſhall appear hereafter. The Biſhop, when he had his Will, ſent Laurence Saunders to the Lord Chancellor, as Annas ſent Chriſt to Caiaphas; and like Favour found Saunders as Chriſt his Maſter did before him. But the Chancellor being not at home, Saunders was conſtrained to tarry for him the Space of four Hours, in the outer Chamber, where he found a Chaplain of the Biſhop's very merrily diſpoſed, with certain Gentlemen playing at Tables, with divers others of the ſame Family or Houſe occupied there in the ſame Exerciſe.

Biſhop Bonner ſeeketh the Blood of Mr. Saunders.

All this Time Saunders ſtood very modeſty and ſoberly at the Screen or Cupboard bareheaded, Sir John Mordant his Guide or Leader walking up and down by him; who (as I ſaid before) was then one of the Council. At laſt the Biſhop returned from the Court, whom, as ſoon as he was entred, a great many Suiters met and received; ſo that before he could get out of one Houſe into another, half an Hour was paſſed. At laſt he came into the Chamber where Saunders was, and went through into another Chamber; where in the mean Time, Sir John Mordant gave him a Writing, containing the Cauſe, or rather the Accuſation of the ſaid Saunders: Which when he had peruſed, where is the Man, ſaid the Biſhop? Then Saunders, being brought forth to the Place of Examination, firſt moſt lowly and meekly kneeled down, and made Courteſy before the Table where the Biſhop did ſit; unto whom the Biſhop ſpake on this wiſe:

How happeneth it, ſaid he, that notwith-

ſtanding the Queen's Proclamation to the contrary, you have enterpriſed to preach?

Saunders denied not that he did preach; ſaying, that foraſmuch as he ſaw the perilous Times now at hand, he did but (according as he was admoniſhed, and warned by Ezekiel the Prophet) exhort his Flock and Pariſhioners to perſevere and ſtand ſtedfaſtly in the Doctrine which they had learned; ſaying alſo, that he was moved and pricked forward thereunto by the Place of the Apoſtle, wherein he was commanded rather to obey God than Man; and moreover, that nothing more moved or ſtirred him thereunto, than his own Conſcience.

A goodly Conſcience ſurely, ſaid the Biſhop. This your Conſcience could make our Queen a Baſtard, or miſbegotten; would it not, I pray you?

A privy Nip to Winchester.

Winchester's Book De vera obedientia.

Then ſaid Saunders, We, ſaid he, do not declare or ſay that the Queen is baſe, or miſbegotten, neither go about any ſuch Matter. But for that let them care whoſe Writings are yet in the Hands of Men, witneſſing the ſame, not without the great Reproach and Shame of the Author; privily taunting the Biſhop himſelf, who had before, (to get the Favour of Henry VIII.) written and ſet forth in Print, a Book of true Obedience; wherein he had openly declared Queen Mary to be a Baſtard: Now Mr. Saunders going forwards in his Purpoſe, ſaid, We do only profeſs and teach the Sincerity and Purity of the Word; which, albeit it be now forbidden us to preach with our Mouths, yet notwithſtanding, I do not doubt, but that our Blood hereafter ſhall manifeſt the ſame. The Biſhop being in this Sort prettily nipped and touched, ſaid; carry away this frenzy Fool to Priſon. Unto whom Mr. Saunders anſwered, that he did give God Thanks, which had given him at the laſt a Place of Reſt and Quietneſs, where he might pray for the Biſhop's Converſion.

Note how Winchester confuteth Mr. Saunders.

Mr. Saunders a Year and three Months in Priſon.

Mr. Saunders continued in Priſon a Year and three Months. In all which Space he ſent ſeveral Letters to divers Men; as one to Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer; another to his Wife, and alſo to others, certifying them both of the publick Calamity of the Time, and alſo of his private Affiictions. In the mean Time the Chancellor, after this little Talk with Mr. Saunders (as is aforeſaid) ſent him to the Priſon of the Marſhalſea, &c. For the Caiaphas (Winchester I mean) did nothing but bait him with ſome of his churliſh Eloquence, and ſo committed him to the Priſon of the Marſhalſea, where he was kept Priſoner one Year and a Quarter.

A Letter of Mr. Saunders to his Wife.

GRace, Mercy, and Peace in Chriſt our Lord. Entirely beloved Wife, even as unto mine own Soul and Body, ſo do I daily in mine hearty Frayer wiſh unto you; for I do daily, twice at the leaſt, in this Sort remember you. And I do not doubt, dear Wife, but that both I and you, as we be written in the Book of Life, ſo we ſhall together enjoy the ſame everlaſtingly, through the Grace and Mercy of God our dear Father, in his Son our Chriſt. And for this preſent Life, let us wholly appoint ourſelves to the Will of our good God, to glorify him either by Life or by Death; and even that ſame merciful Lord make us worthy to honour him either Way as pleaſeth him, Amen. I am merry, I thank my God and my Chriſt, in whom and through whom I ſhall (I know) be able to fight a good Fight, and finiſh a good Courſe, and then receive the Crown which is laid up in Store for me, and all the true Soldiers of Chriſt. Wherefore, Wife, let us, in the Name of our God, fight luſtily to overcome the Fleſh, the Devil, and the World. What our Harneſs and Weapons be in this Kind of Fight, look in the ſixth Chapter unto the Epheſians, and pray, pray, pray. I would that you make no Suit for me in any wiſe. Thank you know whom, for her moſt ſweet and comfortable putting me in Remembraoe of my Journey whither I am paſſing. God ſend us all good Speed, and a joyful Meeting. I have too few ſuch Friends to further me in that Journey, which is indeed the greateſt Friendſhip. The Bleſſing of God be with you all, Amen.

1 Tim 4.

Mr. Saunders would have no Suit made for him.

A Priſoner in the Lord,

L. Saunders.

This his Conſtancy is ſufficiently commended and declared by his valiant buckling with two mighty Enemies, Antichriſt and Death. To neither of theſe did he give Place; but by ſuffering their Malice got the Victory over them both. One of the Conflicts which he had with Antichriſt and his Members, I have gathered out of a Letter of his own Hand-Writing. It was with Dr. Weſton, a Man whom though I ſhould praiſe, yet would all good Men worthily diſpraiſe. Of this the ſaid Laurence Saunders thus writeth in a Letter which he ſent to one of his Friends, who wrote to him to know what Dr. Weſton did at the Marſhalſea: Whereunto he thus anſwered:

Dr. Weſton came to confer with Mr. Grimoald: What he hath concluded with him I know not: I wiſh it may be to God's Glory, Amen, Amen. Mr. Weſton of his Gentleneſs viſited me, and offered me Friendſhip in his worldly wily Sort, &c. I had not ſo much good Manners as to take it at his Hand; for I ſaid, that I was well enough, and ready chearfully to abide the Extremity, to keep thereby a good Conſcience. Ye be aſleep in Sin, ſaid he. I would awake, quoth I, and do not forget Vigilate & Orate, that is, Watch and Pray. What Church was there thirty Years paſt, ſaid he? What Church was there, quoth I, in Elias's Time? Joan of Kent, ſaid he, was of your Church. No, ſaid I, we did condemn her as an Heretick. Who was of your Church, ſaid he, thirty Years paſt? Such, quoth I, as the Romiſh Antichriſt, and his Rabble, have reputed and condemned as Hereticks. Wickliff, ſaid he, Thorp, Oldcaſtle, &c. Yea, quoth I, with many more, as Stories do tell. The Biſhop of Rome hath, ſaid he, a long Time played a Part in your railing Sermons, but now be ye ſure, he muſt play another Manner of Part. The more pity, ſaid I, and yet ſome Comfort it is to ſee, how that the beſt learned, wiſeſt, and holieſt of you all, have heretofore had him to play a Part likewiſe in your Sermons and Writings; though now to pleaſe the World, you do turn with the Weather-cock. Did you ever, ſaid he, hear me preach againſt the Biſhop of Rome? No, ſaid I, for I never heard you preach. But I believe you have been no wiſer than others, &c. with more about the Sacrament. Pray, pray, God keep your Family, and bleſs it.

This Dr. Weſton and Mr. Grimoald died both about the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

The Church goeth not always by Number.

Another Letter of Mr. Saunders to his Wife.

Mr. Saunder's Letter to his Wife.

GRace and Comfort in Chriſt Jeſus, our only Comfort in all extream Aſſaults, Amen. Fain would this Fleſh make ſtrange of that which the Spirit doth embrace; Oh! Lord, how loth is this loitering Sluggard to paſs forth in God's Path? It phantaſieth forſooth much Fear of Fray-hugs: and were it not for the Force of Faith which pulleth it forward by the Rein of God's moſt ſweet Promiſe, and of Hope which pricketh on behind, great Adventures there were of fainting by the Way. But bleſſed and everlaſtingly bleſſed be that heavenly Father of ours, who in his Chriſt, our ſufficient Saviour, hath vouchſafed to ſhine in our Hearts, that he giveth us the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt: and having this Treaſure in our earthen Veſſels, that the Excellency of the Power might be God's and not ours; we are, (according to his good Will) troubled on every Side, yet are we not without Shift; we are in Poverty; but yet not without that is ſufficient; we ſuffer Perſecution, but are not forſaken therein; we are caſt down, nevertheleſs we periſh not; we bear in the Body the Dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the Life of Jeſus might alſo appear in our Body. Wherefore by the Grace of our Chriſt we ſhall not be wearied, neither be diſmay'd by this our Probation through the Fire of Affliction, as tho' ſome ſtrange Thing had happened unto us: but by his Power we ſhall rejoice, inaſmuch as we are Partakers of Chriſt's Paſſion, that when he doth appear, we may be merry and glad, knowing that our Tribulation, which is momentary and light, prepareth an exceeding and eternal Weight of Glory unto us, while we look not on the Things which are ſeen, but on the Things which are not ſeen. They that ſow in Tears, ſhall reap in Joy. For he that goeth on his Way weeping and ſcattering his good Seed, ſhall doubtleſs come again with Joy, and bring his whole Sheaves with him. Then, then ſhall the Lord wipe away all Tears from our Eyes. Then, then ſhall be brought to paſs that Saying which is written, Death is ſwallowed up in Victory. Death, where is thy Sting? Hell, where is thy Victory? yea, Thanks be to God, which hath given us the Victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

In the mean Seaſon it remaineth for us to follow St. Peter's Advice; Let them (ſaith he) that are troubled, according to the Will of God, commit their Souls to him with well-doing, as a faithful Creator and Maker. He is our Maker, we are his handy Work and Creatures, whom now when he hath made, he doth not leave and forſake, as the Shipwright doth the Ship, leaving it at all Adventures to be toſſed in the Tempeſt, but he comforteth us his Creatures, and in him we live, we move, and have our Being: yea not only that, but now that he hath in his dear Chriſt repaired us, being before utterly decayed, and redeemed us, purging us unto himſelf as a peculiar People by the Blood of his Son, he hath put on a moſt tender good Will and fatherly Affection towards us, never to forget us: unto whom by ſuch Promiſes he hath plighted ſuch Faith, that though it were poſſible that the Mother could forget her Infant, and not be tender hearted to the Child of her Womb, yet may not it be, that his faithful Believers ſhould be forgotten of him. He exhorteth us, to caſt our Care on him, and ſaith, that aſſuredly he careth for us. And what tho' for a Seaſon he doth ſuffer us to be turmoiled in the turbulent Tempeſts of Temptation, and ſeemeth as in much Anger to have given us over, and forgotten us? let not us for all that leave off to put our Truſt in him, but let us with godly Job conclude in ourſelves and ſay, Even though he kill me, yet will I put my Truſt in him. Let us with the bleſſed Abraham in Hope, even contrary to Hope, by Belief, lean unto that our loving Lord, who tho' for our Probation, he ſuffereth us to be afflicted, yet will he not be always chiding, neither keepeth he his Anger for ever, for he knoweth whereof we be made; he remembreth that we are but Duſt. Wherefore, look how high the Heaven is in Compariſon of the Earth, ſo great is his Mercy towards them which fear him. Look how wide the Eaſt is from the Weſt, ſo far hath he ſet our Sins from us. Yea, like as a Father, pitieth his own Children, even ſo is the Lord merciful unto them that fear him. Oh! what great Cauſe of rejoicing have we in our moſt gracious God? We cannot but burſt forth in the praiſing of ſuch a bountiful Benefactor, and ſay with the ſame Pſalmiſt; Praiſe the Lord, O my Soul, and all that is within me praiſe his holy Name. Praiſe the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his Benefits.

Dear Wife, Riches I have none to leave behind me, wherewith to endow you after the worldly Manner: but that Treaſure of Taſting how ſweet Chriſt is unto hungry Conſciences, (whereof, I thank my Chriſt, I do feel Part, and would feel more) that I bequeath unto you, and to the reſt of my beloved in Chriſt, to retain the ſame in Senſe of Heart always. Pray, pray. I am merry, and I truſt I ſhall be merry, in Spite of all the Devils in Hell. I utterly refuſe myſelf, and reſign myſelf unto my Chriſt, in whom I know I ſhall be ſtrong, as he ſeeth needful. Pray, pray, pray.

Laurence Saunders.

Mr. Saunders's Legacy to his Wife.
Experience of the Comforts of Chriſt in Priſon.

As the ſaid Mr. Saunders was in Priſon, a ſtrict Charge was given to the Keeper that no Perſon ſhould ſpeak with him. His Wife yet came to the Priſon Gate with her young Child in her Arms, to viſit her Huſband. The Keeper, though for his Charge he durſt not ſuffer her to come into the Priſon, yet did he take the little Babe out of her Arms, and brought him unto his Father: Laurence Saunders ſeeing him, rejoiced greatly, ſaying, that he rejoiced more to have ſuch a Boy, than he ſhould if two thouſand Pounds were given him. And unto the Standers by, which praiſed the Goodlineſs of the Child, he ſaid, what Man fearing God, would not loſe his Life preſent, rather than by prolonging it here, he ſhould adjudge this Boy to be a Baſtard, his Wife a Whore, and himſelf a Whoremonger? yea, if there were no other Cauſe, for which a Man of my Eſtate ſhould loſe his Life, yet who would not give it to vouch this Child to be legitimate, and his Marriage to be lawful and holy?

Mr. Saunders's Wife not ſuffered to ſpeak with him in Priſon.

I do, good Reader, recite this Saying, not only to let thee ſee what he thought of Prieſts Marriage: but chiefly to let all married Couples and Parents learn to bear in their Boſom true Affections: natural, but yet ſeaſoned with the true Salt of the Spirit, unfeignedly and throughly mortified to do the natural Works and Offices of married Couples and Parents. ſo long as with their Doing they may keep Chriſt with a free confeſſing Faith in a clear Conſcience: otherwiſe

Anno 1555. wiſe both they and their own Lives are ſo to be forſaken, as Chriſt required them to be denied, and given in his Cauſe.

Mr. Saunders brought to Examination. And now to come to the Examination of this good Man, after that the Biſhops had kept him one whole Year and a Quarter in Priſon, at length they called him, as they did the Reſt of his Fellows, openly to be examined. The Effect and Purport of his firſt Examination here followeth.

The Examination of Mr. Saunders.

PRaiſed be our gracious God who preſerveth his from evil, and doth give them Grace to avoid all ſuch Offences as might hinder his Honour, or hurt his Church, Amen.

The firſt Examination of Mr. Saunders. Being convened before the Queen's moſt honourable Council, ſundry Biſhops being preſent, the Lord Chancellor began to ſpeak in ſuch Form as followeth:

L. Chan. It is not unknown that you have been a Priſoner, for ſuch abominable Hereſies and falſe Doctrine as hath been ſown by you; and now it is thought good that Mercy be ſhewed to ſuch as ſeek for it. Wherefore if now you will ſhew yourſelf conformable, and come home again, Mercy is ready. We muſt ſay that we have fallen in Manner all: but now we be riſen again, and returned to the Catholick Church; you muſt riſe with us, and come home unto it. Give us forthwith a direct Anſwer.

Saund. My Lord, and my Lords all, may it pleaſe your Honours to give me Leave to anſwer with Deliberation.

Chan. Leave off your Painting and Pride of Speech: for ſuch is the Faſhion of you all, to pleaſe yourſelves in your glorious Words. Anſwer, yea, or nay.

Saund. My Lord, it is no Time for me now to paint. And as for Pride, there is no great Cauſe why it ſhould be in me: my Learning I confeſs to be but ſmall; and as for Riches or worldly Wealth, I have none at all. Notwithſtanding it ſtandeth me in Hand to anſwer to your Demand circumſpectly, conſidering that one of theſe two extream Perils are like to fall upon me: the loſing of a good Conſcience, or the loſing of this my Body and Life. And I tell you Truth, I love both Life and Liberty, if I could enjoy them without the Hurt of my Conſcience.

* Of this dividing ſpeaketh St. Paul, 2 Cor. 6. 17. Iſa. 52. 11. Come out and divide yourſelves from them, &c. Argument Conſcience ought never to ſtand upon Things uncertain. Time and Authority be Things of themſelves always uncertain: Ergo, Conſcience ought never to ſtand upon Time and Authority Chanc. Conſcience? you have none at all, but Pride and Arrogancy, * dividing yourſelves by Singularity from the Church.

Saund. The Lord is the Knower of all Men's Conſciences. And where your Lordſhip layeth to my Charge this dividing myſelf from the Church (as you do mean, and is now among you concluded upon, and I do underſtand) I do aſſure you that I live in the Faith wherein I have been brought up ſince I was fourteen Years old: being taught that the Power of the Biſhop of Rome is but uſurped, with many other Abuſes ſpringing thereof. Yea, this I have received even at your Hands that are here preſent, as a Thing agreed upon by the Catholick Church and publick Authority.

Chanc. Yea marry, but I pray you, have you received by Conſent and Authority all your Hereſies of the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar.

Saund. My Lord, it is leſs Offence to cut off an Arm, Hand, or Joynt of Man, than to cut off the Head. For the Man may live though he do lack an Arm, Hand or Joynt, and ſo he cannot without his Head. But you, all the whole Sort of you have agreed to cut off the Supremacy of the Biſhop of Rome, whom now you will have to be the Head of the Church again.

Biſhop of London. And if it like your Lordſhip, I have his Hand againſt the bleſſed Sacrament. How ſay you to that?

Saund. What I have written, that I have written, and farther I will not accuſe myſelf. Nothing have you to burthen me withal, for breaking of your Laws ſince they were in Force.

Chan. Well, you be obſtinate, and refuſe Liberty.

Saund. My Lord, I may not buy Liberty at ſuch a Price: but I beſeech your Honours to be Means to the Queen's Majeſty for ſuch a Pardon for us, that we may live and keep our Conſciences unclogged, and we ſhall live as moſt obedient Subjects. Otherwiſe, I muſt ſay for myſelf, that by God's Grace I will abide the moſt Extremity that Man may do againſt me, rather than do againſt my Conſcience.

A lawful Requeſt, but it could not be heard.

Chan. Ah Sirrah, you will live as you liſt. The Donatiſts did deſire to live in Singularity; but indeed they were not meet to live on Earth: no more be you, and that ſhall you underſtand within theſe ſeven Days; and therefore away with him.

To live as the Scripture leadeth us, is not to live as we liſt.

Saund. Welcome be it, whatſoever the Will of God ſhall be, either Life or Death. And I tell you truly, I have learned to die. But I exhort you to beware of ſhedding of innocent Blood. Truly it will cry. The Spirit of God reſt upon all your Honours, Amen. This is the Sum and Form of my firſt Examination, Pray, &c.

The Papiſt deſire the Pope, the Proteſtants Chriſt only to be their Head: now which of theſe two be moſt like the Donatiſts?

This Examination being ended, the Officers led him out of the Place, and ſtayed until the reſt of his Fellows were likewiſe examined, that they might have them altogether to Priſon. Laurence Saunders ſtanding among the Officers, ſeeing there a great Multitude of People, opened his Mouth and ſpake freely, warning them all of that, which by their falling from Chriſt to Antichriſt they deſerv'd; and therefore exhorting them by Repentance to riſe again, and to embrace Chriſt with ſtronger Faith, to confeſs him to the End, in the Defiance of Anti-Chriſt, Sin, Death and the Devil; ſo ſhould they retain the Lord's Favour and Bleſſing.

Mr. Saunders freely preacheth Chriſt.

The Copies of his other Examination and Excommunication came to the Hands of ſuch as do keep them ſtill in Secret. But in them, as he defended Chriſt's Cauſe ſtoutly, ſo warned he the phariſaical Biſhops and Papiſts of their Hypocriſy and Tyranny freely, and cleared himſelf of their unjuſt Quarrellings truly. After he was excommunicated and delivered to the ſecular Power, he was brought by the Sheriff of London to the Priſon called the Compter, in his own Pariſh in Bread-ſtreet: whereat he rejoiced greatly, both becauſe he found there a fellow Priſoner, Mr. Cardmaker, with whom he had chriſtian and comfortable Conference, and alſo becauſe out of Priſon, as before out of a Pulpit, he might preach to his Pariſhioners.

His ſecond Examination is loſt

Mr. Saunders delivered to the ſecular Power.

The fourth Day of February, the Biſhop of London came to the Priſon where he was, to degrade him: which when he had done, Laurence Saunders ſaid to him, I thank God I am none of your Church.

The Day following in the Morning, the Sheriff of London delivered him to ſome of the Queen's Guard, who were appointed to carry him to the City of Coventry, there to be burned. The firſt Night they came to St. Albans, where where Mr. Grimoald (a Man who had more Store of good Gifts than of great Conſtancy) did ſpeak with him.

After Mr. Saunders had given him a Leſſon meet for his Lightneſs, he took a Cup in his Hand, and aſked him if he would pledge him of that Cup, of which he would begin to him. Grimoald, by his ſhrugging and ſhrinking ſhewing what he was, ſaid, of that Cup which is in your Hand I will pledge you: but of that other which you mean, I will not promiſe you. Well, ſaid Mr. Saunders, my dear Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath begun to me of a more bitter Cup than mine ſhall be, and ſhall I not pledge my moſt ſweet Saviour? yes, I hope.

A good Shoemaker of Coventry.

After they were come to Coventry, the ſame Night a poor Shoemaker, who was wont to ſerve him with Shoes, came to him after this Manner and ſaid: O my good Maſter, God ſtrengthen and comfort you. Gramercies, good Shoemaker, quoth Mr. Saunders, and I pray thee to pray for me; for I am the unmeeteſt Man for this high Office, that ever was appointed to it; but my gracious God and dear Father is able to make me ſtrong enough. That ſame Night he was put into the common Goal among other Priſoners, where he ſlept little, but ſpent the Night in Prayer, and inſtructing of others.

Mr. Saunders put in the common Goal in Coventry.

February 8. Mr. Saunders brought to the Place of Execution.

The next Day which was the eighth of February, he was led to the Place of Execution in the Park without the City, going in an old Gown and a Shirt, barefooted, and oftentimes fell flat on the Ground and prayed. When he was come nigh to the Place, the Officer appointed to ſee the Execution done, ſaid to Mr. Saunders, that he was one of them which corrupted the Queen's Realm with falſe Doctrine and Hereſy, for which, ſaid he, thou haſt deſerved Death, but yet if thou wilt revoke thine Hereſies, the Queen hath pardoned thee; if not, yonder Fire is prepared for thee. To whom Mr. Saunders anſwered, It is not I, nor my fellow Preachers of God's Truth, that have hurt the Queen's Realm; but it is yourſelf, and ſuch as you are, which have always reſiſted God's holy Word; it is you which have and do corrupt the Queen's Realm. I do hold no Hereſies, but the Doctrine of God, the bleſſed Goſpel of Chriſt; that hold I, that believe I, that have I taught, and that will I never revoke. With that this Tormentor cried, Away with him. And away from him Mr. Saunders went with a merry Courage towards the Fire. He fell to the Ground, and prayed; he roſe up again, and took the Stake to which he ſhould be chained in his Arms, and kiſſed it, ſaying: Welcome the Croſs of Chriſt, welcome everlaſting Life: and being faſtened to the Stake, and Fire put to him, full ſweetly he ſlept in the Lord.

Strength to ſtand in Chriſt, cometh not of ourſelves, but is the Gift of God.

And to the Intent to give the Reader to underſtand what the Grace of Chriſt worketh in his Servants; and again, how feeble and weak Man is of himſelf without this Grace given from above, though otherwiſe he ſeem never ſo ſtout, we have here therefore added to the aforeſaid Story of Mr. Saunders, the Communication between him and Dr. Pendleton, by the Example whereof, ſuch as ſtand may learn to take Heed with due Fear, and not to brag; to rely on the Grace of God, and not to preſume in themſelves.

Anno 1555.

Dr. Pendleton a ſtout Preacher of the Goſpel in King Edward's Time.

AT the Change of Religion in this Realm, in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, Dr. Pendleton and Mr. Saunders, Men known to the World, not only to be learned, but alſo earneſt Preachers of God's Word in the Time of bleſſed King Edward, met together in the Country, where by Occaſion they were at that Time, and as the Caſe required, (by reaſon of the Perſecution that was then at hand) fell to Debate what was beſt for them to do in ſo dangerous a Seaſon. Whereunto Mr. Saunders, whether through very Frailty of his weak Fleſh, that was loth to taſte the bitter Cup, though his Spirit were ready thereunto; or whether it were upon the Miſtruſt of his own Strength, that he might receive the greater Power from above: Or whether it were not for any one of the ſaid Cauſes alone, but for both together, or ſuch like; ſeemed ſo fearful and feeble ſpirited, that he ſhewed himſelf in Appearance, like either to fall quite from God and his Word, which he had taught, or at leaſt to betake him to his Heels, and to fly the Land, rather than to ſtick to his Profeſſion and abide by his Tackle: So as Dr. Pendleton (who on the contrary Side appeared not ſo big of Body, but as bold in Courage, nor ſo earneſt before in Pulpit, but as ready now to ſeal the ſame with his Blood) took upon him to comfort Mr. Saunders all that he might, admoniſhing him, as he could do it very well, not to forſake cowardly his Flock when he had moſt need to defend them from the Wolf; neither having put his Hand to God's Plough, to ſtart now aſide and give it over, nor yet (that is worſt of all) having once forſaken Antichriſt, to fall either himſelf, or ſuffer others by his Example to return to their Vomit again.

Mr. Saunders timerous in Chriſt's Cauſe at the firſt Beginning

After which and ſuch like Perſuaſions bidding him be of good Comfort, and to take a good Heart unto him; What, Man, quoth he, there is a great deal more Cauſe in me to be afraid than in you, foraſmuch as you ſee, I carry a greater Maſs of Fleſh upon my Back than you do, and being ſo laden with a heavier Lump of this vile Carcaſs, ought therefore of Nature to be more frail than you: And yet, ſaid he, I will ſee the utmoſt Drop of this Greaſe of mine molten away, and the laſt Gobbet of this Fleſh conſumed to Aſhes, before I will forſake God and his Truth. Whereunto the other anſwered but little, wiſhing that Almighty God would give him more Strength than he preſently felt in himſelf, acknowledging his own Weakneſs; but conſented notwithſtanding, though it were ſomewhat faintly, to join with him in the Profeſſion of the Goſpel, and ſo to go up to London. and ſet forth the ſame; whereupon they gave each other their Hands.

The ſtout Brags of Dr. Pendleton at the firſt Beginning.

God giveth Strength where Feebleneſs is.

Now when they were come to London, Lord, what a great Change was there between theſe two Perſons! The poor, feeble, faint hearted Saunders, by the Goodneſs of Almighty God, taking Heart of Grace to him, ſeeking the ſame in Humility, boldly and ſtoutly confirming his Flock out of the Pulpit, where his Charge lay, mightily beating down Antichriſt, and zealouſly preaching Chriſt his Maſter, for which he afterward ſuffered moſt willingly, as is before declared. Whereas, on the other Side, Dr. Pen- dleton the Proud (who as it appeared by the Sequel, had been more ſtout in Words than conſtant in Deeds, and a greater Bragger than a good Warriour) followed Peter ſo juſtly in Cracks, howſoever he did in Repentance (which God only knoweth) that he no ſooner came to London but he changed his Mind, and played the Apoſtate, preaching inſtead of ſound Doctrine, nothing almoſt but Errors and Lies, advancing Antichriſt, and overthrowing Chriſt with all his Main: ſo his former Boldneſs came to nothing, unleſs it were a contrary Key, becoming of a faithful Paſtor, a falſe Runnagate; and of a true Preacher, a ſworn Enemy to God's everlaſting Teſtament; to the great Offence of his Brethren, the Hurt of his Flock, and the utter undoing, without God's greater Mercy, of his own Soul. Wherein are eſpecially to be conſidered the deep and marvellous Judgment of God, who as he can and doth make ſtrong whom he pleaſeth, when he ſeeth his Time, and moſt commonly ſuch as appear moſt feeble; ſo on the other Hand he throweth down others, ſeem they never ſo ſtout, ſtand they never ſo much in their own Conceits. Wherefore let him that ſtandeth take Heed he fall not, and let us pray continually to Almighty God, though we have Faith, that he will help and increaſe our Faith, that in him it may be made ſtrong, which of itſelf is ſo weak, that it is ſoon overthrown.

Anno 1555. Example how feeble Man is of himſelf without the Lord ſupports him.

He that ſtandeth let him take Heed he fall not. 1 Cor. 10. 12.

The Life and Martyrdom of Mr. John Hooper, Biſhop of Worceſter and Gloceſter, who was burnt at Gloceſter, February 9. 1555.

JOHN HOOPER, Student and Graduate in the Univerſity of Oxford, after the Study of the Sciences, wherein he had abundantly profited and proceeded, thro' God's ſecret Vocation was ſtirred with fervent Deſire to the Love and Knowledge of the Scriptures. In the reading and ſearching whereof, as there lacked in him no Diligence joined with earneſt Prayer; ſo neither wanted unto him the Grace of the Holy Ghoſt to ſatisfy his Deſire, and to open unto him the Light of true Divinity.

Thus Mr. Hooper growing more and more, by God's Grace, in Ripeneſs of ſpiritual underſtanding, and ſhewing withal ſome Sparkles of his fervent Spirit, being then about the Beginning of the ſix Articles, in the Time of King Henry VIII. quickly fell into Diſpleaſure and Hatred of certain Rabbins in Oxford, who by and by began to ſtir Coals againſt him, whereby, and eſpecially by the Procurement of Dr. Smith, he was compelled to quit the Univerſity; and removing from thence, was retained in the Houſe of Sir Thomas Arundel, and there was his Steward, till the Time that Sir Thomas Arundel, having Intelligence of his Opinions and Religion, which he in no Caſe did favour, but yet exceedingly pleaſed with the Perſon and Conditions of the Man, found Means to ſend him in a Meſſage to the Biſhop of Winchеſter, writing his Letter privily to the Biſhop, by Conference of Learning to do ſome good upon him, but requiring him in any Caſe to ſend home his Servant to him again.

Mr. Hooper ſent to the Biſhop of Winchеſter.

The Biſhop of Winchеſter, after a long Conference with Mr. Hooper, four or five Days together, when he at length perceived, that he neither could do that Good which he thought to him, nor that he would take any Good at his Hand, according to Mr. Arundel's Requeſt, he ſent home his Servant again, right well commending his Learning and Wit, but yet bearing a Grudge againſt Mr. Hooper.

It followed not long after this, as Malice is always working Miſchief, that Intelligence was given to Mr. Hooper to provide for himſelf, for Danger that was working againſt him. Whereupon Mr. Hooper leaving Mr. Arundel's Houſe, and borrowing a Horſe of a Friend, took his Journey to the Sea Side to go to France, ſending back the Horſe again by one, who indeed did not deliver him to the Owner. Mr. Hooper being at Paris, did not tarry there long, but in ſhort Time returned into England again, and was retained of Mr. Sentlow, till the Time that he was again moleſted and ſought for: whereby he was compelled (under the Pretence of being Captain of a Ship going to Ireland) to take the Seas, and ſo he eſcaped (although not without extream Peril of drowning) through France to the higher Parts of Germany. Where he, entering Acquaintance with the learned Men, was by them friendly and lovingly entertained, both at Baſil, and eſpecially at Zurich, by Mr. Bullinger, his ſingular Friend. Where alſo he married his Wife, who was a Burgonian, and applied very ſtudiouſly to the Hebrew Tongue.

Mr. Hooper forced to leave the Houſe of Sir Thomas Arundel.

Mr. Hooper flieth out of England.

Great Friendſhip between Mr. Bullinger and Mr. Hooper

At length, when God ſaw it good to ſtay the bloody Time of the ſix Articles, and to give us King Edward to reign over this Realm with ſome Peace and Reſt unto the Goſpel, amongſt many other Engliſh Exiles which then repaired homeward, Mr. Hooper alſo, moved in Conſcience thought not to abſent himſelf, but ſeeing ſuch a Time and Occaſion, offered tō help forward the Lord's Work to the uttermoſt of his Ability. And ſo coming to Mr. Bullinger, and others of his Acquaintance in Zurich, (as Duty required) to give them Thanks for their ſingular Kindneſs and Humanity towards him many Ways declared, with like Humanity again purpoſed to take his Leave of them at his departing, and ſo he did. Unto whom Mr. Bullinger (who had always a ſpecial Favour to Mr. Hooper) ſpake on this wiſe; Mr. Hooper, ſaith he; although we are ſorry to part with your Company for our own Cauſe, yet much greater Cauſe have we to rejoice, both for your Sake, and eſpecially for the Cauſe of Chriſt's true Religion, that you ſhall now return out of long Baniſhment into your native Country again, where not only you may enjoy your own private Liberty; but alſo the Cauſe and State of Chriſt's Church by you may fare the better, as we doubt not but it ſhall. Another Cauſe moreover, why we rejoice with you and for you, is this; that you ſhall remove not only out of Exile into Liberty, but you ſhall leave here a barren, a ſowre, and an unpleaſant Country, rude and ſavage, and ſhall go into a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, repleniſh'd with all Pleaſure and Fertility. Notwithſtanding with this our rejoicing one Fear and Care we have, leſt you being abſent and ſo far diſtant from us, or elſe coming to ſuch Abundance of Wealth and Felicity, in your new Welfare and Plenty of all Things, and in your flouriſhing Honours, where ye ſhall come peradventure to be a Biſhop, where ye ſhall find ſo many new Friends, you will forget us your old Acquaintance and Well-wiſhers. Nevertheleſs, howſoever you ſhall forget and ſhake us off, yet this perſuade yourſelf, that we will not forget our our old Friend and Fellow Mr. Hooper. And if you will pleaſe not to forget us, then I pray you let us hear from you.

Mr. Bullinger's Words to Mr. Hooper at his departing from Zurich.

The Anſwer of Mr. Hooper to Mr. Bullinger.

Whereunto Mr. Hooper anſwering again, firſt gave to Mr. Bullinger and the reſt hearty Thanks, for that their ſingular good Will and undeſerved Affection, appearing not only now, but at all Times towards him; declaring moreover, that as the principal Cauſe of his removing to his Country was the Matter of Religion; ſo touching the Unpleaſantneſs and Barrenneſs of that Country of theirs, there was no Cauſe therein why he could not find in his Heart to continue his Life there, as ſoon as in any Place in the World, and rather than in his own native Country, if there were nothing elſe in his Conſcience that moved him ſo to do. And as touching the forgetting of his old Friends, although, ſaid he, the Remembrance of Man's Country naturally doth delight him, neither could he deny but God had bleſſed his Country of England with many great Commodities; yet neither the Nature of Country, nor Pleaſure of Commodities, nor Newneſs of Friends ſhould ever induce him to the Oblivion of ſuch Friends and Benefactors, whom he was ſo intirely bound unto; and therefore you ſhall be ſure, ſaid he, from Time to Time to hear from me, and I will write unto you how it goeth with me. But the laſt News of all I ſhall not be able to write; for there, ſaid he, (taking Mr. Bullinger by the Hand) where I ſhall take moſt Pains, there ſhall you hear of me to be burned to Aſhes; and that ſhall be the laſt News, which I ſhall not be able to write unto you, but you ſhall hear of me, &c.

Mr. Hooper propheſieth of himſelf.

To this alſo may be added another like prophetical Demonſtration, foreſhewing before the Manner of his Martyrdom wherewithal he ſhould glorify God, which was this; when Mr. Hooper being made Biſhop of Worceſter and Gloceſter, ſhould have his Arms given him by the Herald, as the Manner is here in England, every Biſhop to have his Arms aſſigned unto him, (whether by the Appointment of Mr. Hooper, or by the Herald, I have not certainly to ſay,) but the Arms which were to him allotted was this, A Lamb in a fiery Buſh, and the Sun Beams from Heaven deſcending down upon the Lamb, rightly denoting, as it ſeemed, the Order of his Sufferings, which afterward followed.

A Note of Mr. Hooper's Arms preſignifying his Martyrdom.

But to proceed in our Story. When Mr. Hooper had taken his farewel of Mr. Bullinger and his Friends in Zurich, he made his Repair again into England in the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, where coming to London he uſed continually to preach, moſt Times twice, at leaſt once every Day, and never failed.

Mr. Hooper returneth again into England.

The notable Diligence of Mr. Hooper in preaching.

In his Sermons, according to his accuſtomed Manner, he corrected Sin, and ſharply inveighed againſt the Iniquity of the World, and corrupt Abuſes of the Church; the People in great Flocks and Companies daily came to hear his Voice, as the moſt melodious Sound and Tune of Orpheus's Harp, as the Proverb ſaith; inſomuch, that oftentimes when he was preaching, the Church would be ſo full, that many could not enter further than the Doors thereof. In his Doctrine he was earneſt, in Tongue eloquent, in the Scriptures perfect, in Pains indefatigable.

The ſingular Virtues of Mr. Hooper deſcribed.

Moreover, beſides his other Gifts and Qualities, this is in him to be marvelled, that even as he began, ſo he continued ſtill unto his Life's End. For neither could his Labour and Painstaking break him, neither Promotion change him, neither dainty Fare corrupt him. His Life was ſo pure and good, that no Kind of Slander (although ſome went about to reprove it) could faſten any Fault upon him. He was of Body ſtrong, his Health whole and ſound, his Wit very pregnant, his invincible Patience able to ſuſtain whatſoever ſiniſter Fortune and Adverſity could do. He was conſtant of Judgment, a good Juſtice, ſpare of Diet, ſparer of Words, and ſpareſt of Time. In Houſe-keeping very liberal, and ſometime more free than his Living would extend unto. Briefly, of all thoſe Virtues and Qualities required of St. Paul in a good Biſhop, in his Epiſtle to Timothy, I know not one in this good Biſhop lacking. He bare in Countenance and Talk always a certain ſevere and grave Grace, which might peradventure be wiſhed ſome Time to have been a little more popular and vulgar-like in him; but he knew what he had to do beſt himſelf. Anno 1555.

This by the way I thought to note, for that there was once an honeſt Citizen, and to me not unknown, which having in himſelf a certain Conflict of Conſcience, came to his Door for Counſel, but being abaſhed at his auſtere Behaviour, durſt not come in, but departed, ſeeking Remedy for his troubled Mind at other Mens Hands, which he afterward, by the Help of Almighty God, did find and obtain. Therefore, in my Judgment, ſuch as are appointed and made Governors over the Flock of Chriſt, to teach and inſtruct them, ought ſo to frame their Life, Manners, Countenance, and external Behaviour, as neither they ſhew themſelves too familiar and light, whereby to be brought into Contempt; nor on the other Side again, that they appear not more lofty and rigorous,, than appertaineth to the edifying of the ſimple Flock of Chriſt. Nevertheleleſs, as every Man hath his peculiar Gift wrought in him by Nature, ſo this Diſpoſition of fatherly Gravity in this Man neither was exceſſive, neither did he bear that Perſonage that was in him, without great Conſideration. For it ſeemed to him peradventure, that this licentious and unbridled Life of the common Sort ought to be chaſtned, not only with Words and Diſcipline, but alſo with the grave and ſevere Countenance of good Men.

Direction how Miniſters and Preachers ought to behave themſelves.

After he had thus practiſed himſelf in this popular and common Kind of Preaching; at length, he was called to preach before the King's Majeſty, and ſoon after made Biſhop of Gloceſter by the King's Commandment. In that Office he continued two Years, and behaved himſelf ſo well, that his very Enemies could find no Fault with him, and after that he was made Biſhop of Worceſter.

Mr. Hooper made Biſhop of Gloceſter and Worceſter.

But I cannot tell what ſiniſter and unlucky Contention concerning the ordering and Conſecration of Biſhops, and of their Apparel, with ſuch other like Trifles, began to diſturb the proſperous Beginning of this good Biſhop. For notwithſtanding that godly Reformation of Religion that begun in the Church of England, beſides other Ceremonies more ambitious than profitable, or tending to Edification, they uſed to wear ſuch Garments and Apparel as the popiſh Biſhops were wont to do: Firſt a Chymere, and under that a white Rochet, then a mathematical Cap with four Angles, dividing the whole World into four Parts. Theſe Trifles, tending more to Superſtition than otherwiſe, as he could never abide, ſo in no wiſe could he be perſuaded to wear them. For this Cauſe he made Supplication to the King's Majeſty, moſt humbly deſiring his Highneſs, either to diſcharge him of the Biſhoprick, or elſe to diſ-

The King's Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and other Biſhops.

The King's Letter to the Archbiſhop in Behalf of Mr. Hooper.

RIGHT Reverend Father, and Right Truſty and Well-beloved, We greet you well. Whereas we, by the Advice of our Council, have called and choſen our right wellbeloved and well worthy, Mr. John Hooper, Profeſſor of Divinity, to be our Biſhop of Gloceſter, as well for his great Knowledge, deep Judgment, and long Study both in the Scriptures, and prophane Learning, as alſo for his good Diſcretion, ready Utterance, and honeſt Life for that Kind of Vocation: To the Intent all our loving Subjects, which are in his ſaid Charge, and elſewhere, might by his ſound and true Doctrine learn the better their Duty towards God, their Obedience towards us, and Love towards their Neighbours: From conſecrating of whom we underſtand you do ſtay, becauſe he would have you omit and let paſs certain Rites and Ceremonies offenſive to his Conſcience, whereby ye think ye ſhould fall in Premunire of Laws; we have thought good, by the Advice aforeſaid, to diſpenſe and diſcharge you of all Manner of Dangers, Penalties and Forfeitures you ſhall run and be in any Manner of Way, by omitting any of the ſame. And theſe our Letters ſhall be your ſufficient Warrant and Diſcharge therefore.

Given under our Signet at our Caſtle of Windſor, the 5th of Auguſt, the 4th Year of our Reign.

Beſides this Letter of the King's, the Earl of Warwick alſo (who was afterward Duke of Northumberland) joined his Letter to the aforeſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to this Purpoſe and Effect, that Mr. Hooper might not be burdened with the Oath uſed then commonly in the Conſecration of Biſhops, which was againſt his Conſcience, as by the Purport of the Letter here is to be ſeen, as followeth.

The Earl of Warwick's Letter to the Archbiſhop in the Behalf of Mr. Hooper.

AFTER my moſt hearty Commendations to your Grace, theſe may be to deſire the ſame, that in ſuch reaſonable Things, wherein this Bearer, my Lord elect of Gloceſter, craveth to be borne withal at your Hands, you would vouchſafe to ſhew him your Grace's Favour, the rather at this my Inſtance: Which Thing partly, I have taken in hand by the King's Majeſty's own Motion. The Matter is weighed by his Highneſs, none other but that your Grace may eaſily condeſcend unto. The principal Cauſe is, that you would not charge this ſaid Bearer with an Oath burdenous to his Conſcience. And ſo for lack of Time I commit your Grace to the Tuition of Almighty God. From Weſtminſter, July 23. 1550.

Your Grace's moſt aſſured loving Friend, J. Warwick.

Neither the King's Requeſt nor the Earl's could take Effect.

But notwithſtanding this Grant of the King, and alſo the Earl's Letter aforeſaid, the Biſhops ſtill ſtood earneſtly in the Defence of the aforeſaid Ceremonies, ſaying, it was but a ſmall Matter, and that the Fault was in the Abuſe of the Things, and not in the Things themſelves; adding moreover, that he ought not to be ſo ſtubborn in ſo light a Matter, and that his Wilfulneſs therein was not to be ſuffered.

In Concluſion, this theological Contention came to this End, that the Biſhops having the upper hand, Mr. Hooper was fain to agree to this Condition, that ſometimes he ſhould in his Sermon ſhew himſelf apparelled as the other Biſhops were. Which, though it was againſt his own Opinion and Judgment, yet it reſpect of the publick Profit of the Church, which he only ſought, he bare and ſuffered patiently. And I would to God in like Manner, they which took upon them the other Part of that Diſpute, had yielded their private Cauſe, whatſoever it was, to the publick Concord and edifying of the Church; for no Man in all the City was one Hair the better for that Contention.

Mr. Hooper fain to agree with the Biſhops.

I will name no body, partly for that his Oppoſers being afterwards joined in the moſt ſtrict Bond of Friendſhip with him, in one and for one Cauſe ſuffered Martyrdom; and partly for that I commonly uſe, according to my accuſtomed Manner, to keep my Pen from preſumptuous judging of any Perſon, yet I thought to note the Thing for this Conſideration, to admoniſh the Reader hereby, how wholeſome and neceſſary the Croſs of Chriſt is ſometimes in the Church of Chriſt, as by the Sequel hereof did afterward appear.

Note, how Diſcord and Reconciliation happeneth many Times amongſt good Men.

And thus by the Way thou haſt heard, good Reader, the Frailties of theſe good Men (plainly and ſimply as the Truth was) declared unto thee, to the End their Fall may miniſter Occaſion to us either of avoiding the like, or elſe to take Heart and Comfort in the Frailties incident to us. Now again, on the other hand, it remaineth to record, after the aforeſaid Diſpute, the godly Reconciliations of theſe good Men in Time of Perſecution, who afterwards were firmly reconciled when impriſoned for the Truth's Sake, as appears by the following Letter ſent by Biſhop Ridley to the ſaid Biſhop of Gloceſter. The Copy whereof, as it was written with his own Hand in Latin, here followeth tranſlated into Engliſh.

To my dear Brother and Reverend Fellow Elder in Chriſt, John Hooper, Grace and Peace.

MY dearly beloved Brother and Fellow-Elder, whom I reverence in the Lord, pardon me, I beſeech you, that hitherto ſince your Captivity and mine, I have not ſaluted you by my Letters; whereas I do indeed confeſs, I have received from you (ſuch was your Gentleneſs) two Letters at ſundry Times: But yet at ſuch Time as I could not be ſuffered to write to you again; or if I might, yet was I in doubt how my Letters might ſafely come into your Hands. But now, my dear Brother, foraſmuch as I underſtand by your Works, which I have but ſuperficially ſeen, that we throughly agree and wholly conſent together in thoſe Things which are the Grounds and ſubſtantial Points of our Religion, againſt which the World ſo furiouſly rageth in theſe our Days, howſoever in Time paſt by certain by-Matters and Circumſtances of Religion, your Wiſdom and my Simplicity (I grant) hath a little jarred, each of us following the Abundance of his own Senſe and Judgment: Now, I ſay, be you aſſured, that even with my whole Heart, God is my Witneſs, in the Bowels of Chriſt I love you in the Truth and for the Truth's Sake, which abideth in us, and, as I am perſuaded, ſuaded, ſhall, by the Grace of God, abide in us for evermore.

And becauſe the World, as I perceive, Brother, ceaſeth not to play its Pageant, and buſily conſpireth againſt Chriſt our Saviour, with all poſſible Force and Power, exalting high Things againſt the Knowledge of God; let us join Hands together in Chriſt, and if we cannot overthrow, yet to our Power, and as much as in us lieth, let us ſhake thoſe high Altitudes, not with carnal, but with ſpiritual Weapons: And withal, Brother, let us prepare ourſelves to the Day of our Diſſolution, by the which, after the ſhort Time of this bodily Affliction, by the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt we ſhall triumph together with him in eternal Glory.

I pray you, Brother, ſalute in my Name your reverend Fellow Priſoners, and venerable Father D. C. by whom, ſince the firſt Day that I heard of his moſt godly and fatherly Conſtancy, in confeſſing the Truth of the Goſpel, I have conceived great Conſolation and Joy in the Lord. For the Integrity and Uprightneſs of that Man, his Gravity and Innocency, all England, I think, hath known long ago. Bleſſed be God therefore, which in ſuch Abundance of Iniquity and Decay of all Godlineſs, hath given unto us, in this reverend old Age, ſuch a Witneſs for the Truth of his Goſpel. Miſerable and hard-hearted is he, whom the Godlineſs and conſtant Confeſſion of ſo worthy, ſo grave and innocent a Man, will not move to acknowledge and confeſs the Truth of God.

I do not now, Brother, require you to write any thing to me again; for I ſtand much in fear leſt your Letters ſhould be intercepted before they can come to my Hands. Nevertheleſs know you, that it ſhall be to me great Joy to hear of your Conſtancy and Fortitude in the Lord's Quarrel. And albeit I have not hitherto written unto you, yet have I twice, as I could, ſent you my Mind touching the Matter which in your Letters you required to know. Neither can I yet, Brother, be otherwiſe perſuaded: I ſee methinks ſo many Perils, whereby I am earneſtly moved to counſel you not to haſten the publiſhing of your Works, eſpecially under the Title of your own Name. For I fear greatly, leſt by this Occaſion both your Mouth ſhould be ſtopped hereafter, and all Things taken away from the reſt of the Priſoners, whereby otherwiſe, if it ſo pleaſe God, they may be able to do good to many. Farewel in the Lord, my moſt dear Brother; and if there be any more in Priſon with you for Chriſt's Sake, I beſeech you, as you may, ſalute them in my Name. To whoſe Prayers I do moſt humbly and heartily commend myſelf and my Fellow Priſoners and Concaptives in the Lord, and yet once again, and for ever in Chriſt, my moſt dear Brother, farewel.

N. Ridley.

Mr. Hooper, after he had ſuſtain'd all theſe Troubles and Vexations about his inveſting and princely Veſtures, at length entring into his Dioceſs, did imploy his Time under King Edward's Reign with ſuch Diligence, as may be a Spectacle to all Biſhops who ſhall ever hereafter ſucceed him, not only in that Place, but in whatſoever Dioceſs thro' the whole Realm of England: ſo careful was he in his Cure, that he left no Pains untaken, nor Ways unſought, how to train up the Flock of Chriſt in the true Word of Salvation, continually labouring in the ſame. Other Men commonly are wont, for Lucre or Promotion's ſake, to aſpire to Biſhopricks, ſome hunting for them, and ſome purchaſing or buying them, as Men uſe to purchaſe Lordſhips; and when they have them are loth to leave them, and thereupon alſo loth to commit that Thing by worldly Laws, whereby to loſe them. Anno 1555.

But Mr. Hooper was of a contrary Mind, who abhorred nothing more than Gain, labouring always to ſave and preſerve the Souls of his Flock. Who, being Biſhop of two Dioceſſes, ſo ruled and guided either of them, and both together, as though he had in Charge but one Family. No Father in his Houſhuold, no Gardener in his Garden, no Husbandman in his Vineyard, was more or better occupied, than he in his Dioceſs amongſt his Flock, going about his Towns and Villages in teaching and preaching to the People there. The diligent Care of Biſhop Hooper.

The Time that he had to ſpare from preaching, he beſtowed either in hearing publick Cauſes, or elſe in private Study, Prayer, and viſiting of Schools: with his continual Doctrine he adjoined due and diſcreet Correction, not ſo much ſevere to any, as to them which for Abundance of Riches and wealthy State, thought they might do what they pleaſed. And doubtleſs he ſpared no kind of People, but was indifferent to all, as well rich as poor, to the great Shame of many Men now-a-days; whereof we ſee many ſo addicted to the pleaſing of great and rich Men; that in the mean Time they have no Regard to the meaner Sort, whom Chriſt hath bought as dearly as the other.

But now again we will return to Mr. Hooper, all whoſe Life, in fine, was ſuch, that to the Church and all Churchmen, it might be a Light and Example, to the reſt a perpetual Leſſon and Sermon. Finally, how vertuous and good a Biſhop he was, ye may conceive and know evidently by this, that even as he was hated by none but of them which were evil, yet the worſt of them all could not reprove his Life in any one Jot. Mr. Hooper a Light to all Churchmen.

I have now declared his Uſage and Behaviour abroad in the publick Affairs of the Church; and certainly there appeared in him at home no leſs Example of a worthy Prelate's Life. For tho' he beſtowed and converted the moſt Part of his Care upon the publick Flock and Congregation of Chriſt, for which alſo he ſpent his Blood: yet nevertheleſs there was nothing wanting in him to bring up his own Children in Learning and good Manners; inſomuch that ye could not diſcern whether he deſerved more Praiſe for his fatherly Uſage at home, or for his Biſhop-like Doings abroad. For every where he kept one Religion in one uniform Doctrine and Integrity. So that if you entered into the Biſhop's Palace, you would ſuppoſe yourſelf to have entered into ſome Church or Temple. In every Corner thereof there was ſome Smell of Virtue, good Example, honeſt Converſation, and reading of the holy Scriptures. There was not to be ſeen in his Houſe any courtly Rioting or Idleneſs; no Pomp at all, no diſhoneſt Word, no Swearing could there be heard. The Care of Mr. Hooper in inſtructing his Family.

As for the Revenues of both his Biſhopricks, altho' they did not greatly exceed, as the Matter was handled, yet if any Thing ſurmounted thereof, he ſaved nothing, but beſtowed it in Hoſpitality. Twice I was, as I remember, in his Houſe in Worceſter, where, in his common Hall, I ſaw a Table ſpread with Store of Meat, and beſet full of Beggars and poor People: And I aſking his Servants what this meant, they told me, that every Day, their Lord and Maſter's Manner was, to have at Dinner a certain Number of poor Folks of the ſaid City by Courſe, who were ſerved by four at a Meſs, with wholeſome Meats: And when they were ſerved (be- The Hoſpitality of Mr. Hooper.

Anno 1555.

ing before examined by him or his Deputies, of the Lord's Prayer, the Articles of their Faith, and Ten Commandments) then he himſelf ſate down to Dinner, and not before.

After this Manner Mr. Hooper executed the Office of a moſt careful and vigilant Paſtor, for the Space of two Years and more, ſo long as the State of Religion in King's Edward's Time did ſafely flouriſh and take Place. After this, King Edward being dead, and Mary being crowned Queen of England, Religion being ſubverted and changed, this good Biſhop was one of the firſt that was ſent for by a Purſevant to be at London; and that for two Cauſes.

Mr. Hooper called up to London at Queen Mary's coming in.

Firſt, To anſwer to Dr. Heath, then appointed Biſhop of that Dioceſs, who was depriv'd thereof in King Edward's Days for being a Papiſt.

Secondly, To render an Account to Dr. Bonner Biſhop of London, for that he in King Edward's Time was one of his Accuſers, in that he ſhewed himſelf not conformable to ſuch Ordinances as were preſcribed to him by the King and his Council, openly at Paul's-Croſs. And altho' the ſaid Mr. Hooper was not ignorant of the Evils that ſhould happen towards him, (for he was admoniſhed by certain of his Friends to get him away, and ſhift for himſelf) yet he would not prevent them, but tarried ſtill, ſaying: Once I did flee, and take me to my Feet; but now, becauſe I am called to this Place and Vocation, I am throughly perſuaded to tarry, and to live and die with my Sheep.

Mr. Hooper cometh to London.

And when at the Day of his Appearance, which was the Firſt of September, he was come to London, before he could come to the aforeſaid Dr. Heath and Dr. Bonner, he was intercepted, and commanded violently againſt his Will to appear before the Queen and her Council, to anſwer to certain Bonds and Obligations, wherein they ſaid he was bound unto her. And when he came before them, the Biſhop of Wincheſter received him very opprobiouſly, railing and rating of him, and accuſed him of his Religion. He again freely and boldly told his Tale, and cleared himſelf. But in Fine it came to this Concluſion, that by them he was committed to Priſon (it being declared unto him at his Departure, that the Cauſe of his Impriſonment was only for certain Sums of Money, for which he was indebted to the Queen, and not for Religion.) This, how falſe and untrue it was, ſhall in its Place more plainly appear.

Mr. Hooper charged to anſwer before the Queen.

Mr. Hooper commanded to Priſon.

The next Year, being 1554. March 19. he was called again to appear before Wincheſter, and others of the Queen's Commiſſioners. Where, what for the Biſhop, and what for the unruly Multitude, when he could not be permitted to plead his Cauſe, he was deprived of his Biſhopricks. Which how, and in what Order it was done, here followeth to be ſeen by the Teſtimony and Report of one, who being preſent at the Doing, committed the ſame to Writing.

Mr. Hooper deprived of his Biſhopricks.

A Letter, declaring the Order of Mr. Hooper's Deprivation from his Biſhopricks. March 19. 1554.

FOraſmuch as a Rumour is ſpread abroad of the Talk had at my Lord Chancellor's, between him with other Commiſſioners there appointed, and Mr. Hooper, quite contrary to the Truth thereof, and therefore to be judged rather to be riſen of Malice, for the diſcrediting of the Truth by falſe Suggeſtions and evil Reports, than otherwiſe: I thought it my Duty, being preſent thereat myſelf, in Writing to ſet forth the whole Effect of the ſame; partly that the Verity thereof may be known to the doubtful People; and partly alſo to advertiſe them, how uncharitably Mr. Hooper was handled at their Hands, who with all Humility uſed himſelf towards them, deſiring, that with Patience he might have been permitted to ſpeak; aſſuring all Men, that where I ſtood in a mammering and Doubt, which of theſe two Religions to have credited, either that ſet forth by the King's Majeſty that is dead, or elſe that now maintained by the Queen's Majeſty; their unreverend Behaviour towards Mr. Hooper doth move me the rather to credit his Doctrine, than that which they with Railing and cruel Words defended, conſidering that Chriſt was ſo handled before. And that this which I have written here, was the Effect of their Talk, as I acknowledge it to be true myſelf: So I appeal to all the Hearers Conſciences that were then preſent (ſo they put Affection away) for the Witneſs of the ſame.

The Biſhops of Wincheſter, of London, of Durham, of Landaff, of Chicheſter, ſate as Commiſſioners.

AT Mr. Hooper's coming in, the Lord Chancellor aſked, whether he was married.

Mr. Hooper examined before the Commiſſioners.

Hooper. Yea, my Lord, and will not be unmarried, till Death unmarry me.

Durham. That is Matter enough to deprive you.

Hooper. That it is not, my Lord, except ye do againſt the Law.

The Matter concerning Marriage was no more talked of then for a great Space: But as well the Commiſſioners, as ſuch as ſtood by, began to make ſuch Outcries, and laughed, and uſed ſuch Geſture as was unſeemly for the Place, and for ſuch a Matter. Dr. Day Biſhop of Chicheſter, called Mr. Hooper Hypocrite, with vehement Words, and ſcornful Countenance. Biſhop Tonſtal called him Beaſt; ſo did Smith, one of the Clerks of the Council, and ſeveral others that ſtood by. At length the Biſhop of Wincheſter ſaid, that all Men might live chaſte that would, and brought in this Text, There be that have gelded themſelves for the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. 19. 12.

Bleſſed are ye when Men ſhall ſpeak reviling Words againſt you for my Name's Sake.

Mr. Hooper ſaid, that Text proved not that all Men could live chaſte, but ſuch to whom it was given; and read that which goeth before in the Text. But there was a Clamour and Cry, mocking and ſcorning, with calling him Beaſt, that the Text could not be examined. Then Mr. Hooper ſaid, that it did appear by the old Canons, that Marriage was not forbidden unto Prieſts, and named the Decrees. But the Biſhop of Wincheſter ſent for another Part, namely, the Clementines, or the Extravagants. But Biſhop Hooper ſaid, that Book was not it which he named.

Prieſts Marriage not forbid by the old Canons.

Then the Biſhop of Wincheſter ſaid, You ſhall not have any other, until ye be judged by this. And then began ſuch a Noiſe, Tumult, and ſpeaking together of a great many that favoured not the Cauſe, that nothing was done or ſpoke orderly or charitably. Afterwards Judge Morgan began to rail at Mr. Hooper a long Time, with many opprobrious and foul Words of his Doing at Gloceſter, in puniſhing of Men, and ſaid, there was never ſuch a Tyrant as he was. After that Dr. Day Biſhop of Chicheſter

Judge Morgan ſhortly after fell into a Frenzy and Madneſs and died of the ſame.

ſaid, that the Council of Ancyra, which was before the Council of Nice, was againſt the Marriage of Prieſts.

Then the Lord Chancellor cried out, and many with him, that Mr. Hooper had never read the Councils.

The Council of Nice permitted Prieſts Marriage.

Yea, my Lord, quoth Mr. Hooper, and my Lord of Chicheſter, Dr. Day, knoweth, that the great Council of Nice, by the Means of one Paphnutius, decreed, That no Miniſter ſhould be ſeparate from his Wife. But ſuch Clamours and Cries were uſed, that the Council of Nice was not ſeen.

After this long Talk, Tonſtal Biſhop of Durham aſked Mr. Hooper, whether he believed the corporal Preſence in the Sacrament. And Mr. Hooper ſaid plainly, that there was none ſuch, neither did he believe any ſuch Thing.

Then the Biſhop of Durham would have read out of a Book, for his Purpoſe belike, (what Book it was I cannot tell) but there was ſuch a Noiſe and confuſed Talk on every Side, that he did not read it. Then the Biſhop of Wincheſter aſked Mr. Hooper, What Authority moved him not to believe the corporal Preſence? He ſaid, the Authority of God's Word, and alledged this Text, Whom Heaven muſt hold until the latter Day.

The corporal Preſence. Acts 3. 21.

Then the Biſhop of Wincheſter would have made that Text to ſerve nothing for his Purpoſe, and ſaid, he might be in Heaven, and in the Sacrament alſo.

Mr. Hooper would have ſaid more to have opened the Text, but all thoſe that ſtood next about the Biſhop, allowed his Saying with Clamours and Cries, that Mr. Hooper was not permitted to ſay any more againſt the Biſhop. Whereupon they bade the Notaries write, That he was married, and ſaid, that he would not go from his Wife; and that he believed not the corporal Preſence in the Sacrament; wherefore he was worthy to be deprived of his Biſhoprick.

Articles taken againſt Mr. Hooper.

This is the Truth of the Matter (as far as I can truly remember) of the confuſed and troubled Talk that was between them, and except it were haſty and uncharitable Words, this is the whole of their Diſcourſe at that Time.

The true Report of Mr. Hooper's Entertainment in the Fleet, written with his own Hand, Jan. 7. 1554.

THE Firſt of September, 1553, I was committed unto the Fleet from Richmond, to have the Liberty of the Priſon; and within ſix Days after I paid five Pounds Sterling to the Warden for Fees, for my Liberty; who immediately upon Payment thereof, complained unto Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, and ſo I was committed to cloſe Priſon one Quarter of a Year in the Tower-chamber of the Fleet, and uſed very extremely. Then by the Means of a good Gentlewoman, I had Liberty to come down to Dinner and Supper, not ſuffered to ſpeak with any of my Friends; but as ſoon as Dinner and Supper was done, to repair to my Chamber again. Notwithſtanding whilſt I came down thus to Dinner and Supper, the Warden and his Wife picked Quarrels with me, and complained untruly of me to their great Friend the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

This good Gentlewoman is thought to be Mrs. Wilkinſon.

Babington Warden of the Fleet, a wicked Tyrant.

After one Quarter of a Year and ſomewhat more, Babington the Warden, and his Wife, fell out with me for the wicked Maſs: And thereupon the Warden reſorted to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and obtained to put me into the Wards where I have continued a long Time, having nothing appointed to me for my Bed, but a little Pad of Straw and a rotten Covering, with a Tick and a few Feathers therein, the Chamber being vile and ſtinking, until by God's Means good People ſent me Bedding to lie on. On one Side of which Priſon is the Sink and Filth of the Houſe, and on the other the Town Ditch, ſo that the Stench of the Houſe hath infected me with ſundry Diſeaſes. Anno 1555.

During which Time I have been ſick, and the Doors, Bars, Haſps, and Chains being all cloſed, and made faſt upon me, I have mourned, called and cried for Help, but the Warden when he hath known me many Times ready to die, and when the poor Men of the Wards have called to help me, hath commanded the Doors to be kept faſt, and charged that none of his Men ſhould come at me, ſaying, let him alone, it were a good Riddance of him. And, amongſt many other Times, he did thus October 18. 1553. as many can witneſs. The barbarous Cruelty of the Warden of the Fleet to Mr. Hooper.

I paid always like a Baron to the ſaid Warden, as well in Fees, as for my Board, which was 20 Shillings a Week, beſides my Man's Table, untill I was wrongfully deprived of my Biſhoprick, and ſince that Time, I have paid him as the beſt Gentleman doth in his Houſe; yet hath he uſed me worſe, and more vilely, than the verieſt Slave that ever came to the Hall Commons.

William Downton Mr. Hooper's Man.

The ſaid Warden hath alſo impriſoned my Man William Downton, and ſtripped him out of his Cloaths to ſearch for Letters, and could find none but only a little Remembrance of good People's Names, that gave me their Alms to relieve me in Priſon; and to undo them alſo, the Warden delivered the ſame Bill unto the ſaid Stephen Gardiner, God's Enemy and mine.

Mr. Hooper almoſt 18 Months in Priſon.

I have ſuffered impriſonment almoſt eighteen Months, my Goods, Livings, Friends, and Comfort taken from me; the Queen owing me by juſt Account fourſcore Pounds or more. She hath put me in Priſon, and giveth nothing to keep me, neither is there ſuffered any one to come at me whereby I might have Relief. I am with a wicked Man and Woman, ſo that I ſee no Remedy (ſaving God's Help) but I ſhall be caſt away in Priſon before I come to Judgment. But I commit my juſt Cauſe to God, whoſe Will be done, whether it be by Life or Death.

Thus much wrote he himſelf of this Matter.

Another Examination of Mr. Hooper.

THE Twenty-ſecond of January, 1555. Babington the Warden of the Fleet was commanded to bring Mr. Hooper before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, with other Biſhops and Commiſſioners at the ſaid Wincheſter's Houſe at St. Mary Overies: Where the Biſhop of Wincheſter in the Name of himſelf and the reſt, moved Mr. Hooper earneſtly to forſake the evil and corrupt Doctrine (as he termed it) preached in the Days of King Edward the Sixth, and to return to the Unity of the Catholick Church, and to acknowledge the Pope's Holineſs to be Head of the ſame Church, according to the Determination of the whole Parliament, promiſing, that as he himſelf, with other his Brethren, had received the Pope's Bleſſing, and the Queen's Mercy; even ſo Mercy was ready to be ſhewed to him and others, if he would ariſe with them, and condeſcend to the Pope's Holineſs.

Mr. Hooper again carried before the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

He exhorteth Mr. Hooper to return to the Pope's Church.

Mr. Hooper anſwered, that foraſmuch as the Pope

Anno 1555. Pope taught Doctrine altogether contrary to the Doctrine of Chriſt, he was not worthy to be accounted a Member of Chriſt's Church, much leſs to be Head thereof; wherefore he would in no wiſe condeſcend to any ſuch uſurped Juriſdiction, neither eſteemed he the Church, whereof they call him Head, to be the catholick Church of Chriſt: For the Church only heareth the Voice of her Spouſe Chriſt, and flieth the Strangers. Howbeit (ſaith he) if in any Point to me unknown, I have offended the Queen's Majeſty, I ſhall moſt humbly ſubmit myſelf to her Mercy, if Mercy may be had with Safety of Conſcience, and without the Diſpleaſure of God.

The Pope not worthy to be a Member of Chriſt's Church.

Anſwer was made, that the Queen would ſhew no Mercy to the Pope's Enemies. Whereupon Babington was commanded to carry him to the Fleet again: Who did ſo, and ſhifted him from his former Chamber into another, near to the Warden's own Chamber, where he remained ſix Days: And in the mean Time his former Chamber was ſearched by Dr. Martin and others, for Writings and Books, which Mr. Hooper was thought to have made, but none was found.

Queen Mary will ſhew no Mercy but to the Pope's Friends.

Another Examination of Mr. Hooper.

THE Twenty-eighth of January, the Biſhop of Wincheſter and other Commiſſioners ſate in Judgment at St. Mary Overies, where Mr. Hooper appeared before them in the Afternoon, and there, after much Reaſoning and Diſputation to and fro, he was commanded aſide, till Mr. Rogers (who was then come) had been likewiſe examined. Examinations being ended, the two Sheriffs of London were commanded, about four of the Clock, to carry them to the Compter in Southwark, there to remain till the Morrow at Nine a Clock, to ſee whether they would relent and come home again to the Catholick Church. So Mr. Hooper went before with one of the Sheriffs, and Mr. Rogers came after with the other, and being out of the Church Door, Mr. Hooper looked back, and ſtayed a little till Mr. Rogers drew near, unto whom he ſaid; Come Brother Rogers, muſt we two take this Matter firſt in hand, and begin to fry theſe Faggots? Yea, Sir, ſaid Mr. Rogers, by God's Grace. Doubt not, ſaid Mr. Hooper, but God will give Strength. So going forwards, there was ſuch a Preſs of People in the Streets, who rejoiced at their Conſtancy, that they had much ado to paſs.

Another Examination of Mr. Hooper before the Biſhop of Wincheſter and other Commiſſioners.

Mr. Hooper's Words to Mr. Rogers.

By the Way, the Sheriff ſaid to Mr. Hooper, I wonder that ye were ſo haſty and quick with my Lord Chancellor, and did uſe no more Patience: He anſwered, Mr. Sheriff, I was nothing at all impatient, altho' I was earneſt in my Maſter's Cauſe, and it ſtandeth me ſo in hand, for it goeth upon Life and Death, not the Life and Death of this World only, but alſo of the World to come. Then were they committed to the Keeper of the Compter, and appointed to ſeveral Chambers, with Command that they ſhould not be ſuffered to ſpeak one with another, neither any other permitted to come to them that Night.

Mr. Hooper earneſt in his Maſter's Cauſe.

The third and laſt Examination of Mr. Hooper.

Upon the next Day following, January 29. at the Hour appointed they were brought again by the Sheriffs before the ſaid Biſhop and Commiſſioners in the Church, where they were the Day before. And after long and earneſt Talk, when they perceived that Mr. Hooper would by no Means condeſcend unto them, they condemned him to be degraded, and read unto him his Condemation. That done, Mr. Rogers was brought before them, and treated in like Manner; and then were both delivered to the ſecular Power, the two Sheriffs of London, who were ordered to carry them to the Clink, a Priſon not far from the Bioſhp of Winchester's Houſe, and there to remain till Night.

Mr. Hooper condemned.

When it was dark, Mr. Hooper was led by one of the Sheriffs, with many Bills and Weapons, through the Biſhop Winchester's Houſe, and over London-Bridge, through the City to Newgate, and by the Way ſome of the Serjeants were ſent before, to put out the Coſtermonger's Candles, who uſed to ſet with Lights in the Streets: Either fearing, of Likelihood, that the People would have made ſome Attempt to have taken him away from them by Force, if they had ſeen him go to that Priſon; or elſe, being burdened with an evil Conſcience, they thought Darkneſs to be a moſt fit Seaſon for ſuch a Buſineſs.

But notwithſtanding this Device, the People having ſome Foreknowledge of his coming, many of them came forth of their Doors with Lights, and ſaluted him, praiſing God for his Conſtancy in the true Doctrine which he had taught them, and deſiring God to ſtrengthen him in the ſame to the End. Mr. Hooper paſſed by, and required the People to make their earneſt Prayers to God for him, and ſo went thro' Cheapſide to the Place appointed, and was delivered as cloſe Priſoner to the Keeper of Newgate, where he remained ſix Days, no body being permitted to come to him, or talk with him, ſaving his Keepers, and ſuch as ſhould be appointed thereto.

The People rejoicing at the Conſtancy of Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Hooper ſent to Newgate.

During this Time, Bonner Biſhop of London, and others at his Appointment, as Fecknam, Chedſey, and Harpsfield, &c. reſorted ſeveral Times to him, to try if by any Means they could perſuade him to relent, and become a Member of their Church. All the Ways they could deviſe, they attempted. For, beſides the Diſputations and Allegations of Teſtimonies of the Scriptures, and of antient Writings wreſted to a wrong Senſe, according to their accuſtomed Manner, they uſed alſo all outward Gentleneſs and Significations of Friendſhip, with many great Promiſes of worldly Wealth, not omitting alſo moſt grievous Threatnings, if with Gentleneſs they could not prevail; but they found him always the ſame Man, ſtedfaſt and immoveable. When they perceived that they could by no Means reclaim him to their Purpoſe, with ſuch Perſuaſions and Offers as they uſed for his Converſion, then went they by falſe Rumours and Reports of Recantations (for it is well known that they and their Servants did firſt ſpread it abroad) to bring him and the Doctrine of Chriſt which he profeſſed, in Diſcredit with the People. Which being thus ſpread abroad, and believed by ſome of the weaker Sort, by reaſon of the often Reſort of the Biſhop of London and others, it increaſed more, and at laſt came to Mr. Hooper's Ears; who was greatly grieved thereat, that the People ſhould give Credit to ſuch falſe Rumours, having ſo ſimple a Ground; as may appear by the following Letter, which he wrote upon that Occaſion.

Biſhop Bonner and his Chaplains reaſon with Mr. Hooper in Priſon.

Falſe Rumours of Mr Hooper's Recantation.

Mr. Hooper's Letter for preventing certain Rumours ſpread abroad of his Recantation.

THE Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with all them that unfeignedly look for the coming of our Saviour Chriſt. Amen.

Dear Brethren and Siſters in the Lord, and my Fellow Priſoners for the Cauſe of God's Goſpel, I do much rejoice and give Thanks unto God for your Conſtancy and Perſeverance in Affliction, unto whom I wiſh Continuance unto the End. And as I do rejoice in your Faith and Conſtancy in Afflictions that be in Priſon; even ſo do I mourn and lament to hear of our dear Brethren that yet have not felt ſuch Dangers for God's Truth, as we have, and do feel, and be daily like to ſuffer more, yea, the very extreme and vile Death of the Fire: Yet ſuch is the Report abroad (as I am credibly informed) that I John Hooper, a condemned Man for the Cauſe of Chriſt, ſhould now after Sentence of Death, (being Priſoner in Newgate, and looking daily for Execution) recant and abjure that which heretofore I have preached. And this Talk ariſeth from this, that the Biſhop of London and his Chaplains reſort unto me. Doubtleſs, if our Brethren were as godly as I could wiſh them, they would think, that in Caſe I did refuſe to talk with them, they might have juſt Occaſion to ſay that I were unlearned, and durſt not ſpeak with learned Men, or elſe proud and diſdained to ſpeak with them. Therefore to avoid juſt Suſpicion of both, I have, and do daily ſpeak with them when they come, not doubting but they report, that I am neither proud nor unlearned. And I would wiſh all Men to do as I do in this Point. For I fear not their Arguments, neither is Death terrible unto me, praying you to make true Report of the ſame, as Occaſion ſhall ſerve; and that I am more confirmed in the Truth which I have heretofore preached, by their coming.

The Occaſion of this Rumour, how it riſeth.

Therefore, ye that may ſend to the weak Brethren, pray them that they trouble me not with ſuch Reports of Recantations as they do. For I have hitherto left all Things of the World, and ſuffered great Pains and Impriſonment, and I thank God I am as ready to ſuffer Death, as a mortal Man may be. It were better for them to pray for us, than to credit or report ſuch Rumours that be untrue. We have Enemies enough of ſuch as know not God truly. But yet the falſe Report of weak Brethren is a double Croſs. I wiſh you eternal Salvation in Jeſus Chriſt, and alſo require your continual Prayers, that he which hath begun in us, may continue it unto the End.

False Reports a grievous Croſs.

I have taught the Truth with my Tongue, and with my Pen heretofore, and hereafter ſhortly ſhall confirm the ſame by God's Grace with my Blood. From Newgate, February 2. 1554.

Your Brother in Chriſt,

John Hooper.

Upon Monday Morning the Biſhop of London came to Newgate, and degraded Mr. Hooper, the Sentence of his Degradation here followeth:

The Sentence of Degradation againſt Mr. Hooper, tranſlated into Engliſh.

IN the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, Amen. Whereas by a definitive Sentence from the reverend Father in Chriſt, Stephen, by divine Permiſſion, Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter, againſt you John Hooper, Preſbyter of his Juriſdiction, on account of Hereſy and Offence notoriouſly committed within his Dioceſs of Wincheſter, and of late juſtly and legally proved: It plainly appears to us, Edmund, Biſhop of London, that you the aforeſaid John Hooper have been and ſtill continue to be an open, obſtinate, and incorrigible Heretick, and it alſo appears by the aforeſaid Sentence, that you have been declared and pronounced an Heretick of this Sort, and have likewiſe incurr'd the Sentence of the greater Excommunication, and it plainly and fully appears that you are to be depoſed and degraded from your Order, and for theſe your Demerits are to be delivered to the ſecular Power, according to the Tenor of the aforeſaid Sentence to which we refer ourſelves in this Affair. We therefore the aforeſaid Edmund, Biſhop of London, as it concerns us and the Univerſity to do our alternate Endeavours, in whoſe Dioceſs you John Hooper have committed the ſame Hereſy then and oftentimes both before and after; for theſe I ſay and the aforeſaid Conſiderations, and that we may execute the aforeſaid Sentence in a better and more efficacious Manner, have thought fit to proceed to the actual Degradation of you the aforeſaid John Hooper (your Crime and Juſtice ſo requiring) and ſo we do really proceed according to the Direction of the Law, and the laudible Cuſtom of former Times, that we may rightly and legally deliver you to the ſecular Power, who are unwilling to continue in the Pale of the Church, and that this ought to be done, we do by theſe Preſents declare and pronounce in this our Sentence. Anno 1555.

After the Sentence of the Degradation thus declared, now let us ſee the Form and Manner of their degrading, which here followeth. But firſt here is to be noted, that they degrading this bleſſed Biſhop, did not proceed againſt him as a Biſhop, but only as againſt a Prieſt, as they termed him; for ſuch as he was, theſe Baalamites accounted no Biſhop.

The Form and Manner uſed in the Degrading of Biſhop Hooper.

THE fourth Day of February, the Year above mentioned, in the Chappel of Newgate, the Biſhop of London there ſitting with his Notary and ſeveral other Witneſſes, Alexander Andrew the Goaler came in, bringing with him Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers, being condemned before by the Lord Chancellor, where the ſaid Biſhop of London, at the Requeſt of the aforeſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter, proceeded to the Degradation of Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers, after this Form and Manner: Firſt, he put upon him all the Veſtures and Ornaments belonging to a Prieſt, with all other Things to the ſame Order appertaining, as tho' (being reveſted) they ſhould ſolemnly execute their Office. They being thus apparelled and reveſted, the Biſhop beginneth to pluck off, firſt the uttermoſt Veſture, and ſo by Degree and Order coming down to the loweſt Veſture, which they had only in taking Benet and Collet; and ſo being ſtript and depoſed, he deprived them of all Order, Benefit, and Privilege belonging to the Clergy; and conſequently that being done, pronounced, decreed, and declared the ſaid Parties ſo degraded, to be given perſonally to the ſecular Power, as the Sheriffs being for that Year, Mr. Davy Woodrooffe, and Mr. William Cheſter; who receiving firſt the ſaid Mr. Rogers at the Hands of the Biſhop, had him away with them, bringing him to the Place of Execution where he ſuffered. The Witneſſes there preſent

Mr. Hooper and Mr. Rogers degraded together.

Anno 1555. were Mr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of London, Robert Coſin, and Robert Willerton, Canons of St. Paul's, Thomas Montague, and George How, Clerks, Triſtram Swadock, and Ricnard Clumney, Sumner, &c.

Mr. Hooper glad that he ſhould ſuffer among his own Flock.

The ſame Monday at Night, February 4. his Keeper gave him an Inkling that he ſhould be ſent to Gloceſter to ſuffer Death, whereat he rejoiced very much, lifting up his Eyes and Hands unto Heaven, and praiſing God that he ſaw it good to ſend him amongſt the People, over whom he was Paſtor, there to confirm with his Death the Truth which he had before taught them; not doubting but the Lord would give him Strength to perform the ſame to his Glory: And immediately he ſent to his Servant's Houſe for his Boots, Spurs, and Cloak, that he might be in Readineſs to ride when he ſhould be called.

The next Day following, about Four of the Clock in the Morning, the Keeper with others came and ſearched him, and the Bed wherein he lay, to ſee if he had written any Thing, and then he was led by the Sheriffs of London, and their Officers, from Newgate to a Place appointed, not far from St. Dunſtan's Church in Fleetſtreet, where ſix of the Queen's Guard were appointed to receive him, to carry him to Gloceſter, there to be delivered unto the Sheriff, who with the Lord Shandois, Mr. Wicks, and other Commiſſioners, were appointed to ſee Execution done. Which Guard brought him to the Angel, where he brake his Faſt with them, eating his Meat at that Time more liberal than he had uſed to do a good while before. About break of Day he went to Horſe, and leapt chearfully on Horſeback without Help, having a Hood upon his Head under his Hat that he ſhould not be known, and ſo took his Journey joyful towards Gloceſter; and by the Way the Guard enquired of him where he was accuſtomed to bait or lodge, but always carried him to another Inn.

Mr. Hooper carried to Gloceſter to be burnt.

Upon Thurſday following, he came to a Town in his Dioceſs called Cirenceſter, 15 Miles from Gloceſter, about Eleven of the Cloek, and there dined at a Woman's Houſe who had always ſpoken all the Evil ſhe could of Mr. Hooper. This Woman, perceiving the Cauſe of his coming, ſhewed him all the Friendſhip ſhe could, and lamented his Caſe with Tears, confeſſing that ſhe before had often reported, that if he were put to the Trial, he would not ſtand to his Doctrine.

Mr. Hooper cometh to Gloceſter.

After Dinner he rode forwards, and came to Gloceſter about Five of the Clock, and a Mile without the Town was much People aſſembled, who cried and lamented his Eſtate; inſomuch that one of the Guard rode poſt into the Town, to require Aid of the Mayor and Sheriffs, fearing leſt he ſhould have been taken from them. The Officers and their Retinue repaired to the Gate with Weapons, and commanded the People to keep their Houſes, &c. but there was no Man that once gave any Signification of any ſuch Reſcue or Violence. He lodged at one Ingram's Houſe in Gloceſter, and ſlept his firſt Sleep ſoundly, as it was reported by them of the Guard and others. After his firſt Sleep he continued the remaining Part of the Night in Prayer till the Morning, and then deſired that he might go into the next Chamber (for the Guard were alſo in the Chamber where he lay) that there being private, he might pray to God: So that all the Day, ſaving a little at Meat, and when he talked at any Time with ſuch as the Guard licenſed to ſpeak with him, he beſtowed in Prayer.

The quiet Mind of Mr. Hooper.

Amonſt others that ſpake with him, Sir Anthony Kingſton, Knight, was one, Who, ſeeming in Time paſt his true Friend, was then appointed by the Queen's Letters, to be one of the Commiſſioners, to ſee Execution done upon him. Mr. Kingſton being brought into the Chamber, found him at his Prayers: And as ſoon as he ſaw Mr. Hooper, he burſt forth in Tears. Mr. Hooper at the firſt knew him not. Then, ſaid Mr. Kingſton, Why, my Lord, do you not know me an old Friend of yours, Anthony Kingſton.

Sir Anthony Kingſton cometh to Mr. Hooper.

Yes, Mr. Kingſton, I do now know you well, and am glad to ſee you in Health, and do praiſe God for the ſame.

But I am ſorry to ſee you in this Caſe, ſaid Mr. Kingſton, for I underſtand you be come hither to die. But, alas, conſider that Life is ſweet, and Death is bitter. Therefore ſeeing Life may be had, deſire to live; for Life hereafter may do good.

Sir Anthony Kingſton's Perſuaſions.

Indeed it is true, Mr. Kingſton, I am come hither to end this Life, and to ſuffer Death here, becauſe I will not gainſay the former Truth that I have heretofore taught amongſt you in this Dioceſs, and elſewhere; and I thank you for your friendly Counſel, altho' it be not ſo friendly as I could have wiſhed it. True it is, Mr. Kingſton, that Death is bitter, and Life is ſweet: But, alas, conſider that the Death to come is more bitter, and the Life to come is more ſweet. Therefore for the Deſire and Love I have to the one, and the Terror and Fear of the other, I do not ſo much regard this Death, nor eſteem this Life, but have ſettled myſelf, thro' the Strength of God's Holy Spirit, patiently to paſs thro' the Torments and Extremities of the Fire now prepared for me, rather than to deny the Truth of his Word deſiring you and others, in the mean Time, to commend me to God's Mercy in your Prayers.

Mr. Hooper replieth.

Well, my Lord, then I perceive there is no Remedy, and therefore I will take my Leave of you: And I thank God that ever I knew you, for God did appoint you to call me, being a loſt Child: And by your good Inſtructions, where before I was both an Adulterer and a Fornicator, God hath brought me to the forſaking and deteſting of the ſame.

Sir Anthony Kingſton converted by Mr. Hooper.

If you have had Grace ſo to do, I do highly praiſe God for it: And if you have not, I pray God ye may have, and that you may continually live in his Fear. After theſe and many other Words, the one took Leave of the other, Mr. Kingſton with bitter Tears, Mr. Hooper with Tears alſo trickling down his Cheeks. At his Departure, Mr. Hooper told him, that all the Troubles he had ſuſtained in Priſon, had not cauſed him to utter ſo much Sorrow.

Mr. Hooper.

A blind Boy cometh to Mr. Hooper.

The ſame Day in the Afternoon, a blind Boy, after long Interceſſion made to the Guard, obtained Licenſe to be brought unto Mr. Hooper's Speech. The ſame Boy not long before had ſuffered Impriſonment at Gloceſter for confeſſing of the Truth. Mr. Hooper, after he had examined him of his Faith, and the Cauſe of his Impriſonment, beheld him ſtedfaſtly, and (the Water appearing in his Eyes) ſaid unto him, Ah poor Boy, God hath taken from thee thy outward Sight, for what Reaſon he beſt knoweth; but he hath given thee another Sight much more precious, for he hath endued thy Soul with the Eye of Knowledge and Faith. God give thee Grace continually to pray unto him, that thou loſe not that Sight, for then ſhouldeſt thou be blind both in Body and Soul.

After that another came to him whom he knew to be a Papiſt, and a wicked Man, who appear'd to pity him, ſaying; Sir, I am ſorry to ſee you thus. To ſee me? why, ſaid he, art thou ſorry? To ſee you, ſaid the other, in this Caſe. For I hear ſay, you are come hither to die, for which I am ſorry. Be ſorry for thyſelf Man, ſaid Mr. Hooper, and lament thine own Wickedneſs; for I am well, I thank God, and Death to me for Chriſt's Sake, is welcome.

Mr. Hooper committed to the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of Gloceſter.

The ſame Night he was committed by the Guard, their Commiſſion being then expired, into the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of Gloceſter. The Name of the one was Jenkins, the other Bond, who with the Mayor and Aldermen repaired to Mr. Hooper's Lodging, and at the firſt Meeting ſaluted him, and took him by the Hand. Unto whom Hooper ſpake on this Manner.

The Words of Mr. Hooper to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Gloceſter.

Mr. Mayor, I give moſt hearty Thanks to you, and to the reſt of your Brethren, that you have vouchſafed to take me a Priſoner and condemned Man by the Hand; whereby to my rejoicing it is ſomewhat apparent that your old Love and Friendſhip towards me is not altogether extinguiſhed: And I truſt alſo that all the Things I have taught you in Times paſt are not utterly forgotten, when I was here appointed to be your Biſhop and Paſtor. For which moſt true Doctrine, becauſe I will not now account it Falſehood and Hereſy, as many other Men do, I am ſent hither by the Queen's Command, to die, and am come where I taught it, to confirm it with my Blood. And now Mr. Sheriffs, I underſtand by theſe good Men, and my very Friends (meaning the Guards) at whoſe Hands I have found ſo much Favour and Gentleneſs by the Way hitherward, as a Priſoner could reaſonably require (for which alſo I moſt heartily thank them) that I am committed to your Cuſtody, as unto them that muſt ſee me brought To-morrow to the Place of Execution. My

Mr. Hooper's Petition to the Sheriffs.

Requeſt therefore to you ſhall be only, that there may be a quick Fire, ſhortly to make an End; and in the mean Time I will be as obedient unto you, as yourſelves would wiſh. If you think I do amiſs in any Thing, hold up your Finger, and I have done. For I am not come hither as one inforced or compelled to die; for it is well known, I might have had my Life with worldly Gain; but as one willing to offer and give my Life for the Truth, rather than to conſent to the Religion of the Biſhop of Rome, received and ſet forth by the Magiſtrates in England, and I truſt by God's Grace To-morrow to die a faithful Servant of God, and an obedient Subject to the Queen.

Theſe and ſuch-like Words in Effect uſed Mr. Hooper to the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Aldermen, whereat many of them mourned and lamented. Notwithſtanding the two Sheriffs went aſide to conſult, and were determined to have lodged him in the common Goal of the Town, called Northgate, if the Guard had not made earneſt Interceſſion for him; who declared at large, how quietly, mildly, and patiently he had behaved himſelf in the Way, adding thereto, that any Child might keep him well enough, and that they themſelves would rather take Pains to watch with him, than that he ſhould be ſent to the common Priſon. So it was determined at length that he ſhould ſtill remain in Robert Ingram's Houſe; and the Sheriffs and Serjeants and other Officers did appoint to watch with him that Night themſelves. His Deſire was, that he might go to Bed that Night betimes, ſaying, that he had many Things to remember: And ſo he did at Five of the Clock, and ſlept one Sleep ſoundly, and beſtowed the reſt of the Night in Prayer. After he got up in the Morning, he deſired that no Man ſhould be ſuffered to come into the Chamber, that he might be private till the Hour of Execution.

Anno 1555.

Mr. Hooper ſpendeth the Night in Prayer.

About Eight of the Clock came Sir John Bridges, Lord Shandois, with a great Band of Men, Sir Anthony Kingſton, Sir Edmund Bridges, and other Commiſſioners appointed to ſee Execution done. At Nine of the Clock Mr. Hooper was ordered to prepare himſelf to be in a Readineſs, for the Time was at hand. Immediately he was brought down from his Chamber by the Sheriffs, who were accompanied with Bills, Glieves, and Weapons. When he ſaw the Multitude of Weapons, he ſpake to the Sheriffs on this wiſe; Mr. Sheriffs (ſaid he) I am no Traitor, neither needed you to have made ſuch a Buſineſs to bring me to the Place where I muſt ſuffer; for if ye had deſired me, I would have gone alone to the Stake, and have troubled none of you all. Afterward looking upon the Multitude of People that were aſſembled, being by Eſtimation to the Number of 7000 (for it was Market-day, and many alſo came to ſee his Behaviour at his Death) he ſpake unto thoſe that were about him, ſaying: Alas, why be theſe People aſſembled and come together? peradventure they think to hear ſomething of me now, as they have in Times paſt, but alas Speech is prohibited me. Notwithſtanding the Cauſe of my Death is well known unto them. When I was appointed here to be their Paſtor, I preached unto them true and ſincere Doctrine, and that out of the Word of God: Becauſe I will not now account the ſame to be Hereſy and Untruth, this Kind of Death is prepared for me.

Sir John Bridges, Lord Shandois, Sir Edmund Bridges, Sir Anthony Kingſton, Commiſſioners.

So he went forward led between the two Sheriffs in a Gown of his Hoſt's, his Hat upon his Head, and a Staff in his Hand to ſtay himſelf withal. For the Grief of the Sciatica, which he had taken in Priſon, cauſed him ſomewhat to halt. All the Way, being ſtraitly charged not to ſpeak, he could not be perceived once to open his Mouth: but beholding the People all the Way, who mourned bitterly for him, he would ſometimes lift up his Eyes towards Heaven, and look very chearfully upon ſuch as he knew: And he was never known, during the Time of his being amongſt them, to look with ſo chearful and ruddy a Countenance as he did at that preſent. When he came to the Place appointed where he ſhould die, he ſmilingly beheld the Stake and Preparation made for him, which was near unto the great Elm-tree overagainſt the College of Prieſts, where he was wont to preach. The Place round about the Houſes, and the Boughs of the Tree were filled with Spectators; and in the Chamber over the College Gate ſtood the Prieſts of the College. Then he kneeled down (foraſmuch as he could not be ſuffered to ſpeak unto the People) to Prayer, and beckned ſix or ſeven Times unto one whom he knew well, to hear the ſaid Prayer, to make Report thereof in Time to come; wherein he continued the Space of half an Hour. Now after he was ſomewhat entered into his Prayer, a Box was brought and laid before him upon a Stool, with his Pardon (or at leaſt-wiſe it was feigned to be his Pardon) from the Queen, if he would turn. At the Sight whereof he cried, If you love my Soul, away with it; If you love my Soul, away with it. The Box being

Anno 1555. being taken away, the Lord Shandois ſaid, Seeing there is no Remedy, diſpatch him quickly. Mr. Hooper reply'd, Good my Lord, I truſt your Lordſhip will give me Leave to make an End of my Prayers.

Then the Lord Shandois ſaid to Sir Edward Bridges's Son, who gave Ear before to Mr. Hooper's Prayer at his Requeſt: Edmund, take Heed that he do nothing elſe but pray; if he do, tell me, and I ſhall quickly diſpatch him. While this Talk was, there ſtepped one or two uncalled, who heard him ſpeak theſe Words following:

Mr. Hooper's Prayer. LORD, ſaid he, I am Hell, but thou art Heaven; I am Swill and a Sink of Sin, but thou art a gracious God and a merciful Redeemer. Have Mercy therefore upon me moſt miſerable and wretched Offender, after thy great Mercy, and according to thine ineſtimable Goodneſs. Thou art aſcended into Heaven, receive me hence to be Partaker of thy Joys, where thou ſitteſt in equal Glory with thy Father. For well knoweſt thou, Lord, wherefore I am come hither to ſuffer, and why the Wicked do perſecute this thy poor Servant; not for my Sins and Tranſgreſſions committed againſt thee, but becauſe I will not allow their wicked Doings, to the contaminating of thy Blood, and to the Denial of the Knowledge of thy Truth, wherewith it did pleaſe thee by thy Holy Spirit to inſtruct me; which with as much Diligence as a poor Wretch might (being thereto called) I have ſet forth to thy Glory. And well ſeeſt thou, my Lord and God, what terrible Pains and cruel Torments be prepared for thy Creature: Such, Lord, as without thy Strength none is able to bear, or patiently to paſs. But all Things that are impoſſible with Man, are poſſible with thee. Therefore ſtrengthen me of thy Goodneſs, that in the Fire I break not the Rules of Patience; or elſe aſſwage the Terror of the Pains, as ſhall ſeem moſt to thy Glory.

As ſoon as the Mayor had eſpied theſe Men who made Report of the foregoing Words, they were commmanded away, and could not be ſuffered to hear any more. Prayer being done, he prepared himſelf for the Stake, and put off his Hoſt's Gown, and delivered it to the Sheriffs, requiring them to ſee it reſtored unto the Owner, and put off the reſt of his Apparel, unto his Doublet and Hoſe, wherein he would have burned. But the Sheriffs would not permit that, (ſuch was their Greedineſs) unto whoſe Pleaſures, good Man, he very obediently ſubmitted himſelf; and his Doublet, Hoſe, and Waiſtcoat were taken off. Then being in his Shirt, he took a Point from his Hoſe himſelf, and truſſed his Shirt between his Legs, where he had a Pound of Gun-powder in a Bladder, and under each Arm the like Quantity delivered him by the Guard. So deſiring the People to ſay the Lord's Prayer with him, and to pray for him (who performed it with Tears during the Time of his Pains) he went up to the Stake. Now when he was at the Stake, three Irons, made to bind him to the Stake, were brought; one for his Neck, another for his Middle, and the Third for his Legs. But he refuſing them, ſaid, Ye have no need thus to trouble yourſelves. For I doubt not but God will give Strength ſufficient to abide the Extremity of the Fire, without Bands: Notwithſtanding, ſuſpecting the Frailty and Weakneſs of the Fleſh, but having aſſured Confidence in God's Strength, I am content ye do as ye ſhall think good.

Mr. Hooper undreſſeth himſelf to the Fire.

So the Hoop of Iron prepared for his Middle was brought, which being made ſomewhat too ſhort (for his Belly was ſwoln with Impriſonment) he ſhrank and put in his Belly with his Hand, until it was faſtened: And when they offered to have bound his Neck and Legs with the other two Hoops of Iron, he utterly refuſed them, and would have none, ſaying, I am well aſſured I ſhall not trouble you. Mr. Hooper bound to the Stake.

Thus being ready, he looked upon the People, of whom he might be well ſeen (for he was both tall, and ſtood alſo on an high Stool) and beheld round about him: And in every Corner there was nothing to be ſeen but weeping and ſorrowful People. Then lifting up his Eyes and Hands to Heaven, he prayed to himſelf. By and By, he that was appointed to make the Fire, came to him, and aſk'd him Forgiveneſs. Of whom he aſked why he ſhould forgive him, ſaying, that he never knew any Offence he had committed againſt him. O Sir, ſaid the Man, I am appointed to make the Fire. Therein, ſaid Mr. Hooper, thou doſt nothing offend me; God forgive thee thy Sins, and do thine Office I pray thee. Then the Reeds were caſt up, and he received two Bundles of them in his own Hands, embraced them, kiſſed them, and put one of them under each Arm, and ſhewed with his Hand how the reſt ſhould be beſtowed, and pointed to the Place where any was wanting. The People weep at Mr. Hooper's burning. He forgiveth the Executioner.

Then Command was given that the Fire ſhould be kindled, and ſo it was. But becauſe there were put no fewer green Faggots than two Horſes could carry upon their Backs, it kindled not ſpeedily, and was a pretty while alſo before it took the Reeds upon the Faggots. At length it burned about him, but the Wind having full Strength in that Place, (it was a lowering and cold Morning) it blew the Flame from him, ſo that he was in a Manner little more than touch'd by the Fire. Fire put to Mr. Hooper.

Within a Space after, a few dry Faggots were brought, and a new Fire kindled with Faggots (for there were no more Reeds) and that burned at the nether Parts, but had ſmall Power above, becauſe of the Wind, ſaving that it did burn his Hair, and ſcorch his Skin a little. In the Time of which Fire, even as at the firſt Flame, he prayed, ſaying mildly, and not very loud, (but as one without Pains) O Jeſus, the Son of David, have Mercy upon me, and receive my Soul. After the ſecond Fire was ſpent, he wiped both his Eyes with his Hands, and beholding the People, he ſaid with an indifferent loud Voice; For God's Love, good People, let me have more Fire: And all this while his nether Parts did burn: For the Faggots were ſo few, that the Flame did not burn ſtrongly at his upper Parts. Another Fire kindled. Mr. Hooper called for more Fire.

The third Fire was kindled within a while after, which was more extream than the other two: And then the Bladders of Gun-powder brake, which did him little good, they were ſo placed, and the Wind had ſuch Power. In which Fire he prayed with a loud Voice, Lord Jeſus have Mercy upon me, Lord Jeſus have Mercy upon me; Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit. And theſe were the laſt Words he was heard to utter. But when he was black in the Mouth, and his Tongue ſwoln, that he could not ſpeak, yet his Lips went till they were ſhrunk to the Gums: And he knocked his Breaſt with his Hands, until one of his Arms fell off, and then knocked ſtill with the other, while the Fat, Water, and Blood dropped out at his Finger's Ends, until by renewing of the Fire his Strength was gone, and his Hand did cleave faſt in knocking The bleſſed Martyr long tormented in the Fire.

ing to the Iron upon his Breaſt. So immediately, bowing forwards, he yielded up his Spirit.

Thus was he three Quarters of an Hour or more in the Fire. Even as a Lamb, patiently bearing the Extremity thereof, neither moving forwards, backwards, or to any Side; but having his nether Parts burned, and his Bowels fallen out, he died as quietly as a Child in his Bed: And he now reigneth as a bleſſed Martyr in the Joys of Heaven, prepared for the Faithful in Chriſt before the Foundations of the World: For whoſe Conſtancy all Chriſtians are bound to praiſe God.

A Poem made by Conrade Geſner, on the Martyrdom of Mr. John Hooper.

HOOPER, unvanquiſh'd by Rome's Cruel- [ties,
(Confeſſing Chriſt in his laſt Moments) dies:
Whilſt Flames his Body rack, his Soul doth fly,
Inflam'd with Faith, to Immortality:
His Conſtancy on Earth hath rais'd his Name,
And gave him Entrance at the Gates of Fame,
Which neither Storms, nor the cold North Wind's [Blaſt,
Nor all-devouring Time ſhall ever waſte:
For he whom God protects ſhall ſure attain
That Happineſs, which Wordlings ſeek in vain.
Example take by him, you who profeſs
Chriſt's holy Doctrines; ne'er the World careſs,
In Hopes of Riches; or if Fortune frown
With inauſpicious Looks be not caſt down;
For Man ne'er ſaw, nor can his Heart conceive,
What God beſtows on them that righteous live.

Mr. Hooper's Letter to Mr. Ferrar, Biſhop of St. David's, Dr. Taylor, Mr. Bradford, and Mr. Philpot, Priſoners in the King's-Bench in Southwark.

THE Grace of God be with you all, Amen. I am advertiſed by divers, as well ſuch as love the Truth, as alſo by ſuch as yet be not come unto it, that ye and I ſhall be carried ſhortly to Cambridge, there to diſpute for the Faith, and for the Religion of Chriſt (which is moſt true) that we have and do profeſs. I am (as I doubt not ye be) in Chriſt ready, not only to go to Cambridge, but alſo to ſuffer, by God's Help, Death itſelf in the Maintenance thereof. Weſton and his Complices have obtained forth the Commiſſion already, and ſpeedily (moſt like) he will put it in Execution. Wherefore, dear Brethren, I do advertiſe you of the Thing before for divers Cauſes. The one to comfort you in the Lord, that the Time draweth near, and is at hand, that we ſhall teſtify before God's Enemies, God's Truth. The next, that ye ſhould prepare yourſelves the better for it. The third, to ſhew you what Ways I think ourſelves were beſt to uſe in this Matter, and alſo to hear of you your better Advice, if mine be not good. Ye know ſuch as ſhall be Cenſors and Judges over us, breathe and thirſt for our Blood, and whether we, by God's Help, overcome after the Word of God, or by Force and Subtilty of our Adverſaries be overcome, this will be the Concluſion; our Adverſaries will ſay, they overcome, and ye perceive how they report of thoſe great learned Men and godly Perſonages at Oxford.

Commiſſion given out for Mr. Hooper and others to diſpute at Cambridge.

Wherefore I mind never to anſwer them, except I have Books preſent, becauſe they uſe not only falſe Allegation of the Doctors, but alſo a Piece of the Doctors againſt the whole Courſe of the Doctor's Mind. The next, that we may have ſworn Notaries, to take Things ſpoken indifferently: Which will be very hard to have, for the Adverſaries will have the Overſight of all Things, and then make theirs better than it was; and ours worſe than it was. Then if we ſee that two or three, or more will ſpeak together, or with Scoffs and Taunts illude and mock us: I ſuppoſe it were beſt to appeal, to be heard before the Queen and the whole Council, and that would much ſet forth the Glory of God. For many of them know already the Truth, many of them err rather of Zeal than Malice, and the others that be indurate ſhould be anſwered fully to their Shame (I doubt not) altho' to our Smart and Blood-ſhedding. For of this I am aſſured, that the Commiſſioners appointed to hear us and judge us, mean nothing leſs than to hear the Cauſe indifferently; for they be Enemies unto us and our Cauſe, and be at a Point already to give Sentence againſt us: So that if it were poſſible with St. Stephen to ſpeak ſo that they could not reſiſt us, or to uſe ſuch Silence and Patience as Chriſt did, they will proceed to revenging. Anno 1555.

Wherefore, my dear Brethren, in the Mercy of Jeſus Chriſt, I would be glad to know your Advice this Day or to Morrow; for ſhortly we ſhall be gone, and I verily ſuppoſe that we ſhall not company together, but be kept one abroad from another. They will deny our Appeal, yet let us challenge the Appeal, and take Witneſs thereof of ſuch as be preſent, and require for Indifferency of hearing and Judgment, to be heard either before the Queen and the Council, or elſe before all the Parliament, as they were uſed in King Edward's Days. Further, for my Part I will require both Books and Time to anſwer. We have been Priſoners now three Quarters of a Year, and have lacked our Books; and our Memories, by cloſe keeping and Ingratitude of their Parts, be not ſo preſent and quick as theirs be. I truſt God will be with us, yea, I doubt not but he will, and teach us to do all Things in his Cauſe godly and conſtantly. If our Adverſaries, that ſhall be our Judges, may have their Purpoſe, we ſhall diſpute one Day, be condemned the next Day, and ſuffer the third Day. And yet there is no Law to condemn us (as far as I know) and ſo one of the Convocation-Houſe ſaid this Week to Dr. Weſton. To whom Weſton made this Anſwer, It forceth not, quoth he, for a Law, we have Commiſſion to proceed with them; when they be diſpatched let their Friends ſue the Law.

The Counſel of Mr. Hooper, how and upon what Cautions to diſpute with Adverſaries.

Note how the Papiſts proceed againſt all Order and Law.

Now how ſoon a Man may have ſuch a Commiſſion at my Lord Chancellor's Hand, you know. It is as eaſy to be obtained as an Indictment for Chriſt at Caiaphas's hand. Beſides that the Biſhops having the Queen ſo upon their Sides, may do all Things both without the Advice and alſo the Knowledge of the reſt of the Lords of the Temporality, who at this preſent have found out the Mark that the Biſhops ſhot at, and doubtleſs be not pleaſed with their Doings. I pray you help, that our Brother Saunders and the reſt in the Marſhalſea may underſtand theſe Things, and ſend me your Anſwer betime. Judas ſleepeth not; neither know we the Day nor the Hour. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt with his Holy Spirit comfort and ſtrengthen us all. Amen. May 6. 1554.

Yours, and with you unto Death in Chriſt,

Anno 1555. Henry Bullinger, chief Superintendent in the City of Zurich. Of whoſe ſingular Love and tender Affection towards Mr. Hooper, ye heard before in the Beginning of Mr. Hooper's Life.

To the moſt reverend Father, Mr. John Hooper, Biſhop of Worceſter and Gloceſter, and now Priſoner for the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, my Fellow-Elder, and moſt dear Brother in England.

A Letter of Mr. Bullinger to Mr. Hooper, tranſlated out of Latin into Engliſh.

THE heavenly Father grant unto you, and to all thoſe which are in Bands and Captivity for his Name's Sake, Grace and Peace thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, with Wiſdom, Patience, and Fortitude of the Holy Ghoſt.

I have received from you two Letters, my moſt dear Brother, the former in the Month of September of the Year paſt, the latter in the Month of May in this preſent Year, both written out of Priſon. But I doubting leſt I ſhould make Anſwer to you in vain, whilſt I feared that my Letters ſhould never come into your Hands, or elſe increaſe and double your Sorrow, did refrain from the Duty of Writing. In which Thing I doubt not but you will have me excuſed, eſpecially ſeeing you did not vouchſafe, no not once in a whole Year, to anſwer to my whole Libels rather than Letters, whereas I continued ſtill notwithſtanding in writing unto you: As alſo at this preſent, after I heard you were caſt in Priſon, I did not refrain from continual Prayer, beſeeching our heavenly Father, through our only Mediator Jeſus Chriſt, to grant unto you and to your Fellow-Priſoners Faith and Conſtancy unto the End. Now is that Thing happened unto you, my Brother, which we did oftentimes prophecy unto ourſelves, at your being with us, ſhould come to paſs, eſpecially when we did talk of the Power of Antichriſt, and of his Felicity and Victories. For you know the Saying of Daniel, His Power ſhall be mighty, but not his Strength, and he ſhall wonderfully deſtroy and make Havock of all Things, and ſhall proſper and practiſe, and he ſhall deſtroy the mighty and the holy People after his own Will. You know what the Lord warned us of before-hand, by Matthew, in chap. 10. by John in chap. 15. 16. and alſo what that choſen Veſſel St. Paul hath written in the Second of Timothy and third Chapter. Wherefore I do nothing doubt (by God's Grace) of your Faith and Patience, whilſt you know that thoſe Things which you ſuffer are not unlooked for, or come by Chance; but that you ſuffer them in the beſt, trueſt, and moſt holy Quarrel: For what can be more true and holy than our Doctrine, which the Papiſts, thoſe Worſhippers of Antichriſt, do perſecute? All Things touching Salvation we attribute unto Chriſt alone, and to his holy Inſtitutions, as we have been taught of him and of his Diſciples: But they would have even the ſame Things to be communicated as well to their Antichriſt, and to his Inſtitutions. Such we ought no leſs to withſtand than we read that Elias withſtood the Baalamites, for if Jeſus be Chriſt, then let them know, that he is the Fulneſs of his Church, and that perfectly: But if Antichriſt be King and Prieſt, then let them exhibit unto him that Honour. How long do they halt on both Sides? can they give unto us any one that is better than Chriſt? or who ſhall be equal with Chriſt, that may be compared with him, except it be he whom the Apoſtle calleth the Adverſary? But if Chriſt be ſufficient for his Church, what needeth this Patching and Piecing? But I know well enough, I need not to uſe theſe Diſputations with you which are ſincerely taught, and have taken Root in Chriſt, being perſuaded that you have all Things in him, and that we in him are made perfect.

The Power of Antichriſt deſcribed in Daniel, chap. 8.

The Doctrine of Proteſtants what it is, wherefore they are perſecuted.

Epheſ. 1. 2 Theſſ. 2.

Go forwards therefore conſtantly to confeſs Chriſt, and to defy Antichriſt, being mindful of this moſt holy and moſt true Saying of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; He that overcometh ſhall poſſeſs all Things, and I will be his God, and he ſhall be my Son: But the Fearful, and the Unbelieving, and the Murderers, and Whoremongers, and Sorcerers, and Idolaters, and all Liars, ſhall have their Part in the Lake which burneth with Fire and Brimſtone, which is the ſecond Death. The firſt Death is ſoon overcome, altho' a Man muſt burn for the Lord's Sake: For they ſay well that do affirm this our Fire to be ſcarcely a Shadow of that which is prepared for Unbelievers, and them that fall from the Truth. Moreover, the Lord granteth unto us, that we may eaſily overcome by his Power the firſt Death, which he himſelf did taſte and overcome; promiſing withal ſuch Joys as never ſhall have End, unſpeakable, and paſſing all Underſtanding, which we ſhall poſſeſs ſo ſoon as ever we do depart hence. For ſo again ſaith the Angel of the Lord; if any Man worſhip the Beaſt and his Image, and receive his Mark in his Forehead, or on his Hand, the ſame ſhall drink of the Wrath of God; yea, of the Wine which is poured into the Cup of his Wrath, and he ſhall be tormented in Fire and Brimſtone, before the holy Angels, and before the Lamb: and the Smoak of their Torment ſhall aſcend evermore, and they ſhall have no Reſt Day nor Night which worſhip the Beaſt and his Image, and whoſoever receiveth the Print of his Name. Here is the Patience of Saints; here are they that keep the Commandments of God, and the Faith of Jeſus. To this he added by and by; I heard a Voice ſaying to me, write, bleſſed are the Dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth, or ſpeedily, they be bleſſed, John 5. even ſo ſaith the Spirit; for they reſt from their Labours, but their Works follow them: for our Labour ſhall not be fruſtrate or in vain.

Rev. 21.

Rev. 14. God's Wrath upon the Beaſt, and them that take his Mark.

In this Time of Antichriſt is the Patience and Faith of God's Children tried, whereby they ſhall overcome all his Tyranny.

Therefore ſeeing you have ſuch a large Promiſe, be ſtrong in the Lord, fight a good Fight, be faithful to the Lord unto the End: Conſider that Chriſt the Son of God is your Captain, and fighteth for you, and that all the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Martyrs, are your Fellow-Soldiers. They that perſecute and trouble us, are Men ſinful and mortal, whoſe Favour a wiſe Man would not buy with the Value of a Farthing: And beſides that our Life is frail, ſhort, brittle and tranſitory. Happy are we if we depart in the Lord, who grant unto you, and to all your Fellow-Priſoners, Faith and Conſtancy. Commend me to the moſt reverend Fathers and holy Confeſſors of Chriſt, Dr. Cranmer Biſhop of Canterbury, Dr. Ridley Biſhop of London, and the good old Father Dr. Latimer. Them and all the reſt of the Priſoners with you for the Lord's Cauſe, ſalute in my Name, and in the Name of all my Fellow Miniſters, which do ſpeak unto you the Grace of God, and Conſtancy in the Truth.

Read Matth. 24.

Concerning the State of our Church, it remaineth even as it was when you departed from us into your Country. God grant we may be thankful to him, and that we do not only profeſs the Faith with Words, but alſo expreſs the ſame effectually with good Works, to the Praiſe of our Lord. The Word of God increaſeth daily in that Part of Italy that is near unto us, and in France.

In the mean while the godly ſuſtain grievous Perſecutions, and with great Conſtancy and Glory, through Torments they go unto the Lord. I and all my Houſhold, with my Son-in-law and Kinſmen, are in good Health in the Lord. They do ſalute you, and pray for your Conſtancy, being ſorrowful for you and the reſt of the Priſoners. There came to us Engliſhmen Students, both godly and learned. They be received of our Magiſtrate. Ten of them dwell together, the reſt remain here and there with good Men. Amongſt others, Mr. Thomas Lever is dear unto me, and familiar. If there be any Thing wherein I may do any Pleaſure to your Wife and Children, they ſhall have me wholly at Commandment: Whereof I will write alſo to your Wife, for I underſtand ſhe abideth at Frankfort. Be ſtrong and merry in Chriſt, waiting for his Deliverance, when, and in what Sort it ſhall ſeem good unto him. The Lord Jeſus ſhew Pity upon the Realm of England, and illuminate the ſame with his Holy Spirit, to the Glory of his Name, and the Salvation of Souls. The Lord Jeſus preſerve and deliver you from all Evil, with all them that call upon his Name. Farewel, and farewel eternally. October 10. 1554. From Zurich.

The Life and Acts of Dr. Rowland Taylor, who ſuffered Martyrdom February 9. 1555.

THE Town of Hadley was one of the firſt that received the Word of God in all England, at the Preaching of Mr. Thomas Bilney; by whoſe Induſtry the Goſpel of Chriſt had ſuch good Succeſs, and took ſuch Root there, that a great Number in that Pariſh became exceeding well learned in the holy Scriptures, as well Women as Men, ſo that a Man might have found among them many, that had often read the whole Bible through, and that could have ſaid a great Part of St. Paul's Epiſtles by heart. Their Children and Servants were alſo brought up and trained ſo diligently in the right Knowledge of God's Word, that the whole Town ſeemed rather an Univerſity of the Learned, than a Town of Cloth-making, or labouring People. And what is moſt to be commended, they were for the moſt Part faithful Followers of God's Word in their Living.

Dr. Taylor a Doctor in both Laws, and a Divine.

In this Town Dr. Rowland Taylor, Doctor in both the Civil and Canon Laws, was Miniſter. Who at his firſt entering into his Benefice, did not let out his Benefice to a Farmer, that ſhall gather up the Profits, and ſet in an ignorant unlearned Prieſt to ſerve the Cure, and ſo they have the Fleece, little or nothing care for feeding the Fock: But on the contrary, he left Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canierbury, in whoſe Family he before lived, and made his perſonal Abode and Dwelling in Hadley among the People committed to his Charge. Where he, as a good Shepherd, abiding and dwelling among his Sheep, gave himſelf wholly to the Study of the holy Scriptures, moſt faithfully endeavouring himſelf to fulfil that Charge which the Lord gave unto Peter, ſaying; Peter, loveſt thou me? Feed my Lambs, feed my Sheep, feed my Sheep. This Love of Chriſt ſo wrought in him, that no Sunday or Holy-Day paſſed, nor other Time when he might get the People together, but he preached to them the Word of God, the Doctrine of their Salvation.

A good Shepherd and his Conditions. John 21. Feed with Word.

Anno 1555.

Nor only was his Word a preaching unto them, but all his Life and Converſation was an Example of unfeigned Chriſtian Life and true Holineſs. He was void of all Pride, humble and meek as any Child; ſo that none were ſo poor but they might boldly, as unto their Father, reſort unto him; neither was his Lowlineſs childiſh or fearful, but as Occaſion, Time, and Place required, he would be ſtout in rebuking the ſinful and evil Doers; ſo that none was ſo rich but he would tell him plainly his Fault, with ſuch earneſt and grave Rebukes as became a good Curate and Paſtor. He was a Man very mild, void of all Rancour, Grudge, or evil Will, ready to do good to all Men, readily forgiving his Enemies, and never ſought to do Evil to any.

Feed with Example.

To the Poor that were blind, lame, ſick, Bed-rid, or that had many Children, he was a very Father, a careful Patron, and diligent Provider; inſomuch that he cauſed the Pariſhioners to make a general Proviſion for them; and he himſelf (beſides the continual Relief that they always found at his Houſe) gave an honeſt Portion yearly to the common Alms-Box. His Wife alſo an honeſt, diſcreet, and ſober Matron, and his Children well nurtured, brought up in the Fear of God and good Learning.

Feed with Alms.

Commendation of Dr. Taylor's Wife and Children.

To conclude, he was a right and lively Pattern of all thoſe virtuous Qualities deſcribed by St. Paul in a true Biſhop, a good Salt of the Earth, ſavourly, biting the corrupt Manners of evil Men, a Light in God's Houſe ſet upon a Candleſtick for all good Men to imitate and follow.

Thus continued this good Shepherd among his Flock, governing and leading them through the Wilderneſs of this wicked World, all the Days of the pious King of bleſſed Memory, Edward the Sixth. But after it pleaſed God to take King Edward from this Vale of Miſery unto his moſt bleſſed Reſt, the Papiſts, who ever diſſembled, both with King Henry the Eighth and King Edward his Son, now ſeeing the Time convenient for their Purpoſe, uttered their falſe Hypocriſy, openly refuſing all good Reformation made by the ſaid two Kings; and contrary to what they had in theſe two Kings Days preached, taught, written, and ſworn, they violently overthrew the true Doctrine of the Goſpel, and perſecuted with Sword and Fire all thoſe that would not agree to receive again the Romiſh Biſhop as ſupream Head of the Univerſal Church, and allow all the Errors, Superſtitions, and Idolatries, that before by God's Word were diſproved and juſtly condemned, as though now they were good Doctrine, virtuous, and true Religion.

The Papiſts and their Nature.

In the Beginning of this Rage of Antichriſt, a certain petty Gentleman after the Sort of a Lawyer, called Foſter, being a Steward and Keeper of Courts, a Man of no great Skill, but a bitter Perſecutor in thoſe Days, with one John Clerk of Hadley, which Foſter had ever been a ſecret Favourer of all Romiſh Idolatry, conſpired with the ſaid Clerk to bring in the Pope and his Idolatry again into Hadley Church. For as yet Dr. Taylor, as a good Shepherd, had retained and kept in his Church the Church-Service and Reformation made by King Edward, and moſt earneſtly preached againſt the popiſh Corruptions, which had infected the whole Country round.

Foſter a Lawyer, and John Clerk of Hadley, two notorious Papiſts.

Therefore the aforeſaid Foſter and Clerk hired

Anno 1555. one John Averth, Parſon of Aldam, a popiſh Idolater, and an open Whoremonger, a very fit Miniſter for their Purpoſe, to come to Hadley, and there to give the Onſet to begin again the popiſh Maſs.

John Averth a right popiſh Prieſt. Mark how unwilling the People were to receive the Papacy again.

To this Purpoſe they built up the Altar with all Haſte poſſible, intending to bring in their Maſs about Palm Monday. But this their Device took no Effect; for in the Night the Altar was beaten down. Wherefore they built it up again the ſecond Time, and ſet a diligent Watch leſt any ſhould again break it down.

On the Day following came Foſter and John Clerk, bringing with them their popiſh Sacrificer, who brought with him all his Implements and Garments to play the popiſh Pageant, whom they and their Men guarded with Swords and Bucklers, leſt any Man ſhould diſturb him in his miſſal Sacrifice.

Dr. Taylor's Cuſtom to ſtudy.

When Dr. Taylor, who (according to his Cuſtom) ſate at his Book, ſtudying the Word of God, heard the Bells ring, he aroſe and went into the Church, ſuppoſing ſomething had been there to be done, according to his paſtoral Office: And coming to the Church, he found the Church Doors ſhut and faſt barred, ſaving the Chancel Door, which was only latched. Where he entering in, and coming in the Chancel, ſaw a popiſh Sacrificer in his Robes, with a broad new ſhaven Crown, ready to begin his popiſh Sacrifice, beſet round about with drawn Swords and Bucklers, leſt any Man ſhould approach to diſturb him.

Maſs brought into Hadley with Sword and Buckler.

Dr. Taylor rebuketh the popiſh Prieſt.

Then ſaid Dr. Taylor, Thou Devil, who made thee ſo bold to enter into this Church of Chriſt, to profane and defile it with this abominable Idolatry? With that Foſter ſtarts up, and with an angry and furious Countenance ſaid to Dr. Taylor; Thou Traitor, what doeſt thou here, to hinder and diſturb the Queen's Proceedings? Dr. Taylor anſwered, I am no Traitor, but I am the Shepherd that God my Lord Chriſt hath appointed to feed this his Flock; wherefore I have good Authority to be here: And I command thee, thou popiſh Wolf, in the Name of God, to avoid hence, and not to preſume here with ſuch popiſh Idolatry to poiſon Chriſt's Flock.

The Papiſts call all their Trumpery the Queen's Proceedings. For you muſt remember that Antichriſt reigneth by another Arm and not by his own Power.

Then ſaid Foſter, wilt thou traiterouſly, Heretick, make a Commotion, and reſiſt violently the Queen's Proceedings?

Dr. Taylor there playeth a right Elias. 1 Kings 18.

Dr. Taylor anſwered, I make no Commotion, but it is you Papiſts that make Commotions and Tumults. I reſiſt only with God's Word, againſt your popiſh Idolatries, which are againſt God's Word, the Queen's Honour, and tend to the utter Subverſion of this Realm of England. And further, thou doſt againſt the Law, which commandeth, that no Maſs be ſaid but at a conſecrate Altar.

* Super-Altare, is a Stone conſecrated by the Biſhops, commonly of a Foot long, which the Papiſts carry inſtead of an Altar, when they Maſs for Money in Gentlemens Houſes.

When the Parſon of Aldam heard that, he began to ſhrink back, and would have left his ſaying of Maſs: Then ſtarts up John Clerk, and ſaid, Maſter Averth, be not afraid, you have a * Super Altare, go forth with your Buſineſs Man.

Then Foſter, with his armed Men, took Dr. Taylor, and led him with ſtrong Hand out of the Church, and the popiſh Prieſt proceeded in his Romiſh Idolatry. Dr. Taylor's Wife, who followed her Huſband into the Church, when ſhe ſaw her Huſband thus violently thruſt out, kneeled down and held up her Hands, and with a loud Voice ſaid; I beſeech God the righteous Judge to avenge the Injury, that this popiſh Idolater this Day doth to the Blood of Chriſt. Then they thruſt her out of the Church alſo, and ſhut the Doors; for they feared that the People would have rent their Sacrificer in Pieces. Notwithſtanding one or two threw in great Stones at the Windows, and miſſed very little the popiſh Maſſer.

Within a Day or two after, with all Haſte poſſible, this Foſter and Clerk made a Complaint of Dr. Taylor, by a Letter written to Stephen Gardiner, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Lord Chancellor.

Dr. Taylor cited by a Letter miſſive.

When the Biſhop heard this, he ſent a Letter miſſive to Dr. Taylor, commanding him within certain Days to come and appear before him upon his Allegiance, to anſwer ſuch Complaints as were made againſt him.

When Dr. Taylor's Friends heard of this, they were exceeding ſorry; foreſeeing to what End the Matter would come, ſeeing that all Truth and Juſtice were trodden under Foot, and Falſhood with cruel Tyranny bore the Sway: His Friends, I ſay, came to him, and earneſtly counſelled him to fly, alledging unto him, that he could neither be indifferently heard to ſpeak his Conſcience and Mind, nor yet look for Juſtice or Favour from the ſaid Chancellor, who, as it was well known, was moſt fierce and cruel; but muſt needs (if he went up to him) wait for Impriſonment and cruel Death at his Hands.

Then ſaid Dr. Taylor to his Friends, Dear Friends, I moſt heartily thank you, that you have ſo tender a Care over me. And although I know that there is neither Juſtice nor Truth to be looked for at my Adverſaries Hands, but rather Impriſonment and cruel Death; yet know I my Cauſe to be ſo good and righteous, and the Truth ſo ſtrong upon my Side, that I will by God's Grace go and appear before them, and to their Beards reſiſt their falſe Doing.

Then ſaid his Friends, Maſter Doctor, we think it not beſt ſo to do. You have ſufficiently done your Duty, and teſtified the Truth both by your godly Sermons, and alſo in reſiſting the Parſon of Aldam, with others that came hither to bring again the popiſh Maſs. And foraſmuch as our Saviour Chriſt willeth us, that when they perſecute us in one City, we ſhould fly unto another; we think in flying at this Time ye would do beſt, keeping yourſelf againſt another Time, when the Church ſhall have great need of ſuch diligent Teachers. Matth. 10.

Oh, quoth Dr. Taylor, what will ye have me to do? I am old, and have already lived too long to ſee theſe terrible and moſt wicked Days. Fly you, and do as your Conſcience leadeth you; I am fully determined, with God's Grace, to go to the Biſhop, and tell him to his Face, that he doth naught: God ſhall well hereafter raiſe up Teachers of his People, who ſhall with much more Diligence and Fruit teach them than I have done. For God will not forſake his Church, tho' now for a Time he trieth and correcteth us, and not without a juſt Cauſe. As for me, I believe before God, I ſhall never be able to do God ſo good Service, as I may do now; nor ſhall I ever have ſo glorious a Calling as I now have, nor ſo great Mercy of God proferred me, as is now at this preſent. For what chriſtian Man would not gladly die againſt the Pope and his Adherents? I know that the Papacy is the Kingdom of Antichriſt, altogether full of Lies, altogether full of Falſhood, ſo that all their Doctrine, even from Chriſt's * Croſs be my ſpeed, and St. Nicholas unto the End of their Apocalypſe, is nothing but Idolatry, Superſtition, Errors, Hypocriſy, and Lies.

Dr. Taylor refuſeth to fly.

* Meaning from the Croſs in the Beginning of the Hornbook to the laſt Word in the Revelations.

Where-

Wherefore I befeech you, and all other my Friends, to pray for me, and I doubt not but God will give me Strength and his Holy Spirit, that all mine Adverſaries ſhall have Shame of their Doings.

When his Friends ſaw him ſo conſtant, and fully determined to go, they, with weeping Eyes, commended him to God; and he within a Day or two prepared himſelf to his Journey, leaving his Cure with a Pious old Prieſt, named Sir Richard Yoeman, who afterwards was burnt at Norwich.

John Alcork of Hadley, caſt into Priſon, where he died.

There was alſo in Hadley one Alcock, a very pious Man, well learned in the Holy Scriptures, who after Sir Richard Yoeman was driven away, uſed daily to read a Chapter, and to ſay the Engliſh Litany in Hadley Church: But him they fetcht up to London, and caſt him in Priſon in Newgate; where after a Year's Impriſonment he died.

But let us return to Dr. Taylor again; who being accompanyed with a Servant of his own, named John Hull, took his Journey towards London. By the Way, this John Hull laboured to counſel and perſwade him very earneſtly to fly, and not come to the Biſhop, and proferred himſelf to go with him to ſerve him, and in all Perils to venture his Life for him, and with him.

Dr. Taylor again adviſed to fly, but he refuſed ſo to do.

But in no wiſe would Dr. Taylor conſent or agree thereunto, but ſaid, Oh John, ſhall I give Place to this thy Counſel and worldly Perſwaſion, and leave my Flock in this Danger? Remember the good Shepherd Chriſt, who not only fed his Flock, but alſo died for his Flock. Him muſt I follow, and with God's Grace will do. Therefore good John, pray for me, and if thou ſeeſt me weak at any Time, comfort me, and diſcourage me not in this my godly Enterpriſe and Purpoſe. Thus they came up to London, and ſhortly after

The firſt meeting between Wincheſter and Dr. Taylor.

Dr. Taylor preſented himſelf to Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, then Lord Chancellor of England.

Now when Biſhop Gardiner ſaw Dr. Taylor, he, according to his common Cuſtom, reviled him, calling him Knave, Traitor, Heretick, with many other Names, which Dr. Taylor heard patiently, and at laſt ſaid unto him:

My Lord, quoth he, I am neither Traitor nor Heretick, but a true Subject, and a faithful chriſtian Man, and am come, according to your Commandment, to know what is the Cauſe that your Lordſhip hath ſent for me.

Then, ſaid the Biſhop, art thou come, thou Villain? how dareſt thou look me in the Face for Shame? knoweſt thou not who I am?

Yes, quoth Dr. Taylor, I know who you are. Ye are Dr. Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Lord Chancellor, and yet but a mortal Man I trow. But if I ſhould be afraid of your lordly Looks; why fear you not God, the Lord of us all? how dare ye for Shame look any Chriſtian Man in the Face, ſeeing ye have forſaken the Truth, denied our Saviour Chriſt and his Word, and done contrary to your own Oath and Writing; with what Countenance will ye appear before the Judgment Seat of Chriſt, and anſwer to your Oath made firſt unto King Henry the Eighth, and afterward unto King Edward the Sixth, his Son?

The notable Anſwer of Dr. Taylor to the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Here the Biſhop confeſſeth unlawful Oaths ought not to be kept.

The Biſhop anſwered, Tuſh, Tuſh, that was Herod's Oath, unlawful; and therefore worthy to be broken: I have done well in breaking it; and I thank God, I am come home again to our Mother the Catholick Church of Rome, and ſo I would thou ſhouldeſt do.

Dr. Taylor anſwered, Should I forſake the Church of Chriſt which is founded upon the true Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, to approve thoſe Lies, Errors, Superſtition, and Idolatries, that the Popes and their Company at this Day ſo blaſphemouſly do approve? Nay, God forbid. Let the Pope and his return to our Saviour Chriſt and his Word, and thruſt out of the Church ſuch abominable Idolatries as he maintaineth, and then will chriſtian Men turn unto him. You wrote truly againſt him, and were ſworn againſt him. Anno 1555.

I tell thee, quoth the Biſhop of Wincheſter, it was Herod's Oath, unlawful; and therefore ought to be broken, and not kept: And our Holy Father the Pope hath diſcharged me of it.

Then ſaid Dr. Taylor, But you ſhall not ſo be diſcharged before Chriſt, who doubtleſs will require it at your Hands, as a lawful Oath made to our Leige and Soveraign Lord the King, from whoſe Obedience no Man can quit you, neither the Pope nor any of his.

I ſee, quoth the Biſhop, thou art an arrogant Knave, and a very Fool.

Railing Words become not a Magiſtrate.

My Lord, quoth Dr. Taylor, leave your unſeemly railing at me, which is not ſeemly for ſuch an one in Authority as you are. For I am a chriſtian Man, and you know, that He that ſaith to his Brother, Racha, is in danger of a Council, and he that ſaith, Thou Fool, is in danger of Hell Fire, Mat. 5. 22.

The Biſhop anſwered, Ye are falſe, and Liars all the Sort of you. Nay, quoth Dr. Taylor, we are true Men, and know that it is written, The Mouth that lieth, ſlayeth the Soul: And again, Lord God, thou ſhalt deſtroy all that ſpeak Lies. And therefore we abide by the Truth of God's Word, which ye, contrary to your own Conſciences, deny and forſake.

Marriage objected to Dr. Taylor. Marriage defended.

Thou art married, ſaid the Biſhop. Yea, quoth Dr. Taylor, that I thank God I am, and have had nine Children, and all in lawful Matrimony, and bleſſed be God that ordained Matrimony, and commanded that every Man, that hath not the Gift of Continency, ſhould marry a Wife of his own, and not live in Adultery or Whoredom.

One Idolater holdeth with another.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Thou haſt reſiſted the Queen's Proceedings, and wouldeſt not ſuffer the Parſon of Aldam, a very virtuous and devout Prieſt, to ſay Maſs in Hadley. Dr. Taylor anſwered, My Lord, I am Parſon of Hadley, and it is againſt all Right, Conſcience, and Laws, that any Man ſhould come into my Charge, and preſume to infect the Flock committed to me, with Venom of the Popiſh idolatrous Maſs.

With that the Biſhop waxed very angry, and ſaid, Thou art a blaſphemous Heretick indeed, that blaſphemeſt the bleſſed Sacrament (and put off his Cap) and ſpeakeſt againſt the holy Maſs, which is made a Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead. Dr. Taylor anſwered, Nay, I blaſpheme not the Bleſſed Sacrament which Chriſt inſtituted, but I reverence it as a true chriſtian Man ought to do, and confeſs, that Chriſt ordained the holy Communion in the Remembrance of his Death and Paſſion, which when we keep according to his Ordinance, we, through Faith, eat the Body of Chriſt, and drink his Blood, giving Thanks for our Redemption, and this is our Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead, to give Thanks for his merciful Goodneſs ſhewed to us, in that he gave his Son Chriſt unto the Death for us.

The true Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead, what it is.

Thou ſay'ſt well, ſaid the Biſhop. It is all that thou haſt ſaid, and more too; for it is a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead. Then anſwered Dr. Taylor, Chriſt gave himſelf himſelf to die for our Redemption upon the Croſs, whoſe Body there offered was the propitiatory Sacrifice full, perfect, and ſufficient unto Salvation for all them that believe in him. And this Sacrifice did our Saviour Chriſt offer in his own Perſon himſelf once for all, neither can any Prieſt any more offer him, nor need we any more propitiatory Sacrifice: And therefore I ſay with Chryſoſtom, and all the Doctors; Our Sacrifice is only memorative, in the Remembrance of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion, a Sacrifice of Thankſgiving; and therefore the Fathers called it Euchariſtia: And no other Sacrifice hath the Church of God.

Propitiatory Sacrifice offered never more than once.

Our Sacrifice is only memorative.

It is true, quoth the Biſhop, the Sacrament is called Euchariſtia, a Thankſgiving, becauſe we there give Thanks for our Redemption, and it is alſo a Sacrifice propitiatory for the Quick and the Dead, which thou ſhalt confeſs e're thou and I have done. Then the Biſhop called his Men, and ſaid, Have this Fellow hence, and carry him to the King's-Bench, and charge the Keeper he be ſtraitly kept.

Winchester's ſtrong Argument carry him to Priſon.

Then Dr. Taylor kneeled down, and held up both his Hands, and ſaid, Good Lord, I thank thee; and from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and all his deteſtable Errors, Idolatries, and Abominations, good Lord deliver us: And God be praiſed for good King Edward. So they carried him to Priſon to the King's-Bench where he lay Priſoner almoſt two Years.

This is the Sum of their firſt Talk, as I ſaw it mentioned in a Letter that Dr. Taylor wrote to a Friend of his, thanking God for his Grace, that he had confeſſed his Truth, and was found worthy for Truth to ſuffer Priſon and Bands, beſeeching his Friends to pray for him, that he might perſevere conſtant unto the End.

The Behaviour and Converſation of Dr. Taylor in Priſon.

Being in Priſon, Dr. Taylor ſpent all his Time in Prayer, Reading the Holy Scriptures, Writing, Preaching, and exhorting the Priſoners, and ſuch as reſorted to him, to Repentance and Amendment of Life.

Dr. Taylor brought forth to be deprived.

After that Dr. Taylor had lain ſome Time in Priſon, he was cited to appear in the Arches at Bow-church, to anſwer unto ſuch Matter as ſhould there be objected againſt him. At the Day appointed he was led thither, his Keeper waiting upon him. Where when he came, he ſtoutly and ſtrongly defended his Marriage, affirming by the Scriptures of God, by the Doctors of the primitive Church, by both Laws Civil and Canon, that it is lawful for Prieſts to marry, and that ſuch as have not the Gift of Continency are bound in pain of Damnation to marry. This he did ſo plainly prove, that the Judge could give no Sentence of Divorce againſt him, but gave Sentence he ſhould be deprived of his Benefice, becauſe he was married.

Dr. Taylor defendeth Marriage of Prieſts.

Dr. Taylor deprived of his Benefice becauſe of his Marriage.

You do me wrong then, quoth Dr. Taylor, and alledged many Laws and Conſtitutions for himſelf, but all prevailed not. For he was again carried to Priſon, and his Livings taken away, and given to another. As for Hadley Benefice, it was given or ſold, I know not which, to one Mr. Newealle, whoſe great Virtues were altogether unlike to Dr. Taylor his Predeceſſor, as the poor Pariſhioners full well have found.

After a Year and three Quarters, or thereabouts, in which Time the Papiſts got certain old Laws which were put down by King Henry the Eighth, and by King Edward, to be again reviewed by Parliament; ſo that now they might, Ex officio, cite whom they would, upon their own Suſpicion, and charge him with what Articles they pleaſed, and except they in all Things agreed to their Purpoſe, burn them: When theſe Laws were once eſtabliſhed, they ſent for Dr. Taylor with ſeveral other Priſoners, who were again convened before the Chancellor and other Commiſſioners about January. The Purport and Effect of which Talk between them, becauſe it is ſufficiently deſcribed by himſelf in his own Letter written to a Friend of his, I have annexed the ſaid Letter as followeth.

Dr. Taylor brought again before the Biſhop of Winchester.

A Letter of Dr. Taylor, relating the Diſcourſe between him and the Lord Chancellor, and other Commiſſioners, January 22.

WHereas you would have me write the Talk between the King and Queen's moſt honourable Council and me on Tueſday January 22. ſo far as I remember: Firſt my Lord Chancellor ſaid, You among others are at this preſent Time ſent for, to enjoy the King's and Queen's Majeſty's Favour and Mercy, if you will riſe again with us from the Fall which we generally have received in this Realm, from which (God be praiſed) we are now clearly delivered, miraculouſly. If you will not riſe with us now, and receive Mercy now offered, you ſhall have Judgment according to your Demerit. To this I anſwered, That ſo to riſe ſhould be the greateſt Fall that ever I could receive; for I ſhould ſo fall from my dear Saviour Chriſt to Antichriſt: For I do believe, that the Religion ſet forth in King Edward's Days, was according to the Vein of the Holy Scripture, which containeth fully all the Rules of our chriſtian Religion, from which I do not intend to decline ſo long as I live, by God's Grace.

The Parſons profered.

Note this Anſwer.

Then Mr. Secretary Bourne ſaid; Which of the Religions mean ye of in King Edward's Days? For ye know there were divers Books of Religion ſet forth in his Days. There was a Religion ſet forth in a Catechiſm by my Lord of Canterbury. Do you mean that you will ſtick to that?

I anſwered, My Lord of Canterbury made a Catechiſm to be tranſlated into Engliſh, which Book was not of his own making; yet he ſet it forth in his own Name: And truly that Book for the Time did much good. But there was after that ſet forth by the moſt Innocent King Edward (for whom God be praiſed everlaſtingly) the whole Church-ſervice, with great Deliberation, and the Advice of the beſt learned Men in the Realm, and authorized by the Parliament, and received and publiſhed gladly by the whole Realm: Which Book was never reformed but once, and yet by that one Reformation it was ſo fully perfected, according to the Rules of our chriſtian Religion in every behalf, that no chriſtian Conſcience could be offended with any thing therein contained; I mean of that Book reformed.

A Teſtimony of the Book of Service ſet out in King Edward's Days.

Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Didſt thou never read the Book that I ſet forth of the Sacrament?

I anſwered, that I had read it.

Then he ſaid, How likeſt thou that Book? With that one of the Council (whoſe Name I know not) ſaid, My Lord, that is a good Queſtion; for I am ſure that Book ſtoppeth all their Mouths. Then ſaid I, My Lord, I think many Things be far wide from the Truth of God's Word in that Book.

Then my Lord ſaid, Thou art a very Varlet.

To that I anſwered, That is as ill as Racha, or Fool.

Then my Lord ſaid, Thou art an ignorant Beetle-brow. To that I anſwered, I have read over and over again the holy Scriptures, and St. Auguſtine's Works through, St. Cyprian, Euſebius, Origen, Gregory Nazianzen, with ſeveral other Books through; once therefore, I thank God, I am not utterly ignorant. Beſides theſe, my Lord, I profeſſed the civil Laws, as your Lordſhip did, and I have read over the canon Law alſo.

Dr. Taylor learned in Divinity, and alſo in the civil Law.

Then my Lord ſaid, With a corrupt Judgment thou readeſt all Things: Touching my Profeſſion, it is Divinity, in which I have written ſeveral Books. Then ſaid I, My Lord, ye did write one Book, De Vera Obedientia; I would you had been conſtant in that: For indeed you never did declare a good Conſcience that I heard of but in that one Book.

Gardiner's Book De vera Obedientia.

Then my Lord ſaid, Tut, tut, tut, I wrote gainſt Bucer in Prieſts Marriages: But ſuch Books pleaſe not ſuch Wretches as thou art, who haſt been married many Years.

To that I anſwered, I am married indeed, and I have had nine Children in holy Matrimony, I thank God: And this I am ſure of, that your Proceedings now at this Time againſt Prieſts Marriages, is the Maintenance of the Doctrine of Devils, againſt natural Law, civil Law, canon Law, general Councils, Canons of the Apoſtles, ancient Doctors, and God's Laws.

Prieſts Marriage confirmed by Dr. Taylor.

Then my Lord of Durham ſpake, ſaying, You have profeſſed the civil Law, as you ſay. Then you know that Juſtinian writeth, That Prieſts ſhould at their taking of Orders, ſwear that they were never married; and he bringeth in to prove that, Canones Apoſtolorum.

To that I anſwered, That I did not remember any ſuch Law of Juſtinian. But I am ſure, that Juſtinian writeth in Titulo de indicta viduitate, in God. That if one would bequeath to his Wife in his Teſtament a Legacy, under a Condition that ſhe ſhould never marry again, and take an Oath of her for accompliſhing the ſame, yet ſhe may marry again if he die, notwithſtanding the aforeſaid Conditions, and Oath taken and made againſt Marriage: And an Oath is another manner of Obligation made to God, than is a papiſtical Vow made to Man.

Juſtinian's Law approveth Marriage, and condemneth Oaths againſt it.

Moreover, in the Pandects it is contained, that if a Man doth ſet free his Handmaid, under a Condition that ſhe ſhall never marry; yet ſhe may marry, and her Patron ſhall loſe Jus Patronatus, for his adding of the unnatural and unlawful Condition againſt Matrimony.

Tonſtal thoroughly anſwered by the civil Law.

Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Thou ſayeſt that Prieſts may be married by God's Law. How proveſt thou that?

Scripture approveth Prieſts Marriage, but the Pope muſt be heard before the Scripture. Chryſoſtom calleth it an Hereſy to ſay that a Prieſt may not be married.

I anſwered, By the plain Words and Sentences of St. Paul, both to Timothy, and to Titus, where he ſpeaks moſt evidently of the Marriage of Prieſts, Deacons, and Biſhops. And St. Chryſoſtom writing upon the Epiſtle to Timothy, ſaith, It is an Hereſy to ſay that a Biſhop may not be married.

Then ſaid my Lord Chancellor, Thou lieſt of Chryſoſtom. But thou doſt as all thy Companions do, bely ever without Shame both the Scriptures and the Doctors. Didſt thou not alſo ſay, that by the canon Law, Prieſts may be married? which is moſt untrue, and the contrary is moſt true.

Canon Law approveth Prieſts Marriages.

I anſwered, We read in the Decrees, that the Four general Councils, Nicene, Conſtantinopolitan, Epheſine, Chalcedon, have the ſame Authority that the four Evangeliſts have. And we read in the ſame Decrees (which is one of the chief Books of the canon Law) the Council of Nice, by the Means of one Paphnutius, did allow Prieſts and Biſhops Marriages: Therefore by the beſt Part of the canon Law, Prieſts may be married. Anno 1555.

Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Thou falſifieſt the general Council. For there is expreſs Mention in the ſaid Decree, That Prieſts ſhould be divorced from their Wives, which be married.

Then ſaid I, if thoſe Words be there, as you ſay, then am I content to loſe this great Head of mine; let the Book be fetched.

Then ſpake my Lord of Durham; Though they be not there, yet they may be in Eccleſiaſtica Hiſtoria, which Euſebius wrote, out of which Book the Decree was taken.

To that ſaid I, It is not like that the Pope ſhould leave out any ſuch Sentence, having ſuch Authority, and making ſo much for his Purpoſe.

Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Gratian was but a Patcher, and thou art glad to ſnatch up ſuch a Patch as maketh for thy Purpoſe.

I anſwered, my Lord, I cannot but marvel, that you do call one of the chief Papiſts that ever was, but a Patcher.

Then my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Nay I call thee a Snatcher and Patcher. To make an end, wilt thou not return again with us to the Catholick Church; and with that he roſe.

And I ſaid, by God's Grace I will never depart from Chriſt's Church. Then I required that I might have ſome of my Friends to come to me in Priſon; and my Lord Chancellor ſaid, Thou ſhalt have Judgment within this Week: And ſo was I delivered again unto my Keeper. My Lord of Durham would that I ſhould believe as my Father and my Mother did. I alledged St. Auguſtine, that we ought to prefer God's Word before all Men.

Dr. Taylor ſent again to Priſon.

And thus much was contained in the aforeſaid Letter of Dr. Taylor for that Matter.

The Conſtancy of theſe Men.

The laſt Day of January following, Dr. Taylor, Mr. Bradford, and Mr. Saunders, were again called to appear before the Biſhops of Winchester, Norwich, London, Saliſbury, and Durham, and there were again charged with Hereſy and Schiſm, and therefore a determinate Anſwer was required, Whether they would ſubmit themſelves to the Roman Biſhop, and abjure their Errors, or elſe they would according to their Laws proceed to their Condemnation.

When Dr. Taylor and his Fellows, Mr. Bradford and Mr. Saunders heard this, they anſwered ſtoutly and boldly, that they would not depart from the Truth which they had preached in King Edward's Days, neither would they ſubmit themſelves to the Romiſh Antichriſt; but they thanked God for ſo great Mercy, that he would call them to be worthy to ſuffer for his Word and Truth.

When the Biſhops ſaw them ſo boldly, conſtantly, and unmoveably fixed in the Truth, they read the Sentence of Death upon them, which when they had heard, they moſt joyfully gave God Thanks, and ſtoutly ſaid unto the Biſhops: We doubt not but God the righteous Judge will require our Blood at your Hands; and the Proudeſt of you all ſhall repent this receiving again of Antichriſt, and your Tyranny that ye now ſhew againſt the Flock of Chriſt.

Sentence of Death given upon Innocents.

Dr. Taylor being condemned, was committed to the Clink, and the Keepers were charged to keep him ſtraitly: For ye have now another manner of Charge, quoth the Lord Chancellor, than ye had before; therefore look ye, take heed to it.

Anno 1555.

When the Keeper brought him toward the Priſon, the People flocked out to gaze upon him; unto whom he ſaid, God be praiſed, good People, I am come away from them undefiled, and will confirm the Truth with my Blood. He was confined in the Clink till it was toward Night, and then he was removed to the Compter by the Poultry.

Dr. Taylor removed from the Clink to the Compter by Night.

When Dr. Taylor had lain in the ſaid Compter in the Poultry a Seven-night or thereabouts Priſoner, Edmund Bonner Biſhop of London, with others, came to the ſaid Compter to degrade him. Being come, he called for the ſaid Dr. Taylor to be brought unto him; the Biſhop being then in the Chamber where the Keeper of the Compter and his Wife lay. So Dr. Taylor was brought down from the Chamber above that, to the ſaid Bonner. And at his coming the Biſhop ſaid, Maſter Doctor, I wiſh you would remember yourſelf, and turn to your Mother holy Church, ſo may you do well enough, and I will ſue for your Pardon. Whereunto Dr. Taylor anſwered, I wiſh you and your Fellows would turn to Chriſt. As for me, I will not turn to Antichriſt. Well, ſaid the Biſhop, I am come to degrade you: Wherefore put on theſe Veſtures. No, ſaid Dr. Taylor, I will not. Wilt thou not, ſaid the Biſhop? I ſhall make thee e'er I go. Quoth Dr. Taylor, You ſhall not by the Grace of God. Then he charged him upon his Obedience to do it, but he would not.

Biſhop Bonner cometh to the Compter to degrade Dr. Taylor.

So he ordered another to put them upon his Back, and when he was throughly furniſhed therewith, he ſet his Hands to his Side, walking up and down, and ſaid; How ſay you, my Lord, am not I a goodly Fool? How ſay you, my Maſters? If I were in Cheapſide, ſhould I not have Boys enough to laugh at theſe apiſh Toys, and toying Trumpery? So the Biſhop ſcraped his Fingers, Thumbs, and the Crown of his Head, and did the reſt of ſuch like deviliſh Obſervances.

At the laſt, when he ſhould have given Dr. Taylor a Stroke on the Breaſt with his Croſier-Staff, the Biſhop's Chaplain ſaid, My Lord, ſtrike him not, for he will ſure ſtrike again. Yea, by St. Peter will I, quoth Dr. Taylor. The Cauſe is Chriſt's, and I were no good Chriſtian, if I would not fight in my Maſter's Quarrel. So the Biſhop laid his Curſe upon him; but ſtruck him not. Then Dr. Taylor ſaid, Though you do curſe me, yet God doth bleſs me. I have the Witneſs of my Conſcience, that ye have done me Wrong and Violence, and yet I pray God, if it be his Will, forgive you. But from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and his deteſtable Enormities, good Lord deliver us. And in going up to his Chamber, he ſtill ſaid, God deliver me from you, God deliver me from you. And when he came up, he told Mr. Bradford (for they both lay in one Chamber) that he had made the Biſhop of London afraid; for, ſaid he, laughingly, his Chaplain gave him Counſel not to ſtrike me with his Croſier-Staff, for that I would ſtrike again; and by my troth, ſaid he, rubbing his Hands, I made him believe I would do ſo indeed.

Dr. Taylor prayeth againſt the Pope and his deteſtable Enormities.

Bonner afraid of Dr. Taylor.

The Night after he was degraded, his Wife and his Son Thomas reſorted unto him, and were by the Gentleneſs of the Keepers permitted to ſup with him. For this Difference was ever found between the Keepers of the Biſhops Priſons, and the Keepers of the King's Priſons: That the Biſhops Keepers were evet cruel, blaſphemous, and tyrannous like their Maſters; but the Keepers of the King's Priſons ſhewed, for the moſt Part, as much Favour as they poſſibly might.

So came Dr. Taylor's Wife, his Son, and John Hull his Servant, to ſup with him: And at their coming in afore Supper, they kneeled down and prayed, ſaying the Litany.

After Supper walking up and down, he gave God Thanks for his Grace, that had ſo called him, and given him Strength to abide by his holy Word: And turning to his Son Thomas, My dear Son, ſaid he, Almighty God bleſs thee, and give thee his holy Spirit, to be a true Servant of Chriſt, to learn his Word, and conſtantly to ſtand by his Truth all thy Life long. And, my Son, ſee that thou fear God always. Flee from all Sin, and wicked Living: Be virtuous, ſerve God with daily Prayer, and apply thy Book. In any wiſe ſee that thou be obedient to thy Mother, love her and ſerve her: Be ruled by her now in thy Youth, and follow her good Counſel in all Things. Beware of lewd Company, of young Men that fear not God, but follow their lewd Luſts and vain Appetites. Fly from Whoredom, and hate all filthy Living, remembring, that I thy Father do die in the Defence of holy Marriage. Another Day, when God ſhall bleſs thee, love and cheriſh the poor People, and count that thy chief Riches is, to be rich in Alms: And when thy Mother is waxed old, forſake her not; but provide for her to thy Power, and ſee that ſhe lack nothing: For ſo will God bleſs thee, and give thee long Life upon Earth and Proſperity; which I pray God to grant thee.

Dr. Taylor's pious Exhortation to his Son, worthy to be marked by all Youths.

Then turning to his Wife, My dear Wife, quoth he, continue ſtedfaſt in the Fear and Love of God; keep yourſelf undefiled from their popiſh Idolatries and Superſtitions. I have been unto you a faithful Yoke-fellow, and ſo have you been unto me; for which I pray God to reward you, and doubt not, dear Wife, but God will reward it. Now the Time is come that I ſhall be taken from you, and you diſcharged of the Wedlock Bond towards me: Therefore I will give you my Counſel what I think moſt expedient for you. You are yet a Child-bearing Woman, and therefore it will be moſt convenient for you to marry. For doubtleſs you ſhall never be at a convenient Stay for yourſelf and our poor Children, nor out of Trouble till you be married. Therefore as ſoon as God will provide it, marry with ſome honeſt faithful Man that feareth God. Doubt you not, God will provide an honeſt Huſband for you, and he will be a merciful Father to your and my Children: Whom I pray you bring up in the Fear of God, and in Learning, to the uttermoſt of your Power, and keep them from the Romiſh Idolatry. When he had thus ſaid, they with weeping Tears prayed together, and kiſſed one another: And he gave to his Wife a Book of the Church-Service, ſet out by King Edward, which he in the Time of his Impriſonment, daily uſed. And unto his Son Thomas he gave a Latin Book containing the notable Sayings of the old Martyrs, gathered out of the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; and in the End of that Book he wrote his Teſtament and laſt Farewel, as hereafter followeth.

Dr. Taylor counſelleth his Wife.

His laſt Token to his Wife and his Son.

The

The last Will and Testament of Dr. Rowland Taylor, Parson of Hadley.

I Say to my Wife, and to my Children; The Lord gave you unto me, and the Lord hath taken me from you, and you from me; blessed be the Name of the Lord. I believe that they are blessed which die in the Lord. God careth for Sparrows, and for the Hairs of our Heads. I have ever found him more faithful and favourable, than is any Father or Husband. Trust ye therefore in him by the Means of our dear Saviour Christ's Merits: Believe, love, fear, and obey him: Pray to him, for he hath promised to help. Count me not dead, for I shall certainly live, and never die. I go before, and you shall follow after, to our long Home. I go to the rest of my Children, Susan, George, Ellen, Robert, and Zachary: I have bequeathed you to the only Omnipotent.

Job 1. 2. Apoc. 14. Luke 12.

I say to my dear Friends of Hadley, and to all others which have heard me preach; that I depart hence with a quiet Conscience, as touching my Doctrine, for which I pray you thank God with me. For I have after my little Talent, declared to others those Lessons that I gathered out of God's Book, the blessed Bible. Therefore if I, or an Angel from Heaven should preach to you any other Gospel than that ye have received, God's great Curse upon that Preacher.

A grave Warning against Popery.

Beware for God's Sake that ye deny not God, neither decline from the Word of Faith, lest God decline from you, and so ye do everlastingly perish. For God's Sake beware of Popery, for though it appear to have in it Unity, yet the same is Vanity and Antichristianity, and not in Christ's Faith and Verity.

Beware of the Sin against the Holy Ghost, now after such a Light opened so plainly and simply, truly, throughly and generally to all England.

The Lord grant all Men his good and holy Spirit, Increase of his Wisdom, contemning the wicked World, hearty Desire to be with God and the heavenly Company, through Jesus Christ, our only Mediator, Advocate, Righteousness, Life, Sanctification, and Hope, Amen, Amen. Pray, pray.

Rowland Taylor departing hence in sure Hope, without all doubting of eternal Salvation, I thank God my heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ my certain Saviour. Amen.

February 5. 1555.

The Lord is my light and my salvation: whom then shall I fear? Psal. 27. 1.

God is he that justifieth: who is he that can condemn? Rom. 8. 33, 34.

In thee, O Lord, have I trusted, let me never be confounded. Psal. 31. 1.

On the next Morning, after that Dr. Taylor had supped with his Wife in the Compter, as is before expressed, which was the fifth Day of February, the Sheriff of London with his Officers came to the Compter by Two of the Clock in the Morning, and so brought forth Dr. Taylor, and without any Light led him to the Woolpack, an Inn without Aldgate. Dr. Taylor's Wife, suspecting that her Husband would that Night be carried away, watched all Night in St. Botolph's Church porch, without Aldgate, having with her two Children, the one named Elizabeth of thirteen Years of Age (who being left without Father or Mother, Dr. Taylor had charitably brought up from three Years old,) the other named Mary, Dr. Taylor's own Daughter. Anno 1555.

Dr. Taylor led from the Compter by Night towards Hadley.

Now when the Sheriff and his Company came against St. Botolph's Church, Elizabeth cried saying, O my dear Father; Mother, Mother, here is my Father led away. Then his Wife said, Rowland, Rowland, where art thou? For it was a very dark Morning, that the one could not see the other. Dr. Taylor answered, Dear Wife, I am here, and stayed. The Sheriffs Men would have led him forth; but the Sheriff said, Stay a little Masters, I pray you, and let him speak to his Wife, and so they stayed.

Dr. Taylor taking Leave of his Wife and Children. This Sheriff was Mr. Chester.

Then she came to him, and he took his Daughter Mary in his Arms; and he, his Wife, and Elizabeth, kneeled down and said the Lord's Prayer. At which Sight the Sheriff wept apace, and so did several others of the Company. After they had prayed, he rose up and kissed his Wife, and shook her by the Hand, and said, Farewel my dear Wife, be of good Comfort, for I am quiet in my Conscience. God shall stir up a Father for my Children. And then he kissed his Daughter Mary, and said, God bless thee, and make thee his Servant: And kissing Elizabeth, he said, God bless thee. I pray you all stand strong and stedfast unto Christ and his Word, and keep you from Idolatry. Then said his Wife, God be with thee, dear Rowland, I will with God's Grace meet thee at Hadley.

Dr. Taylor brought to the Sign of the Woolpack.

And so he was led forth to the Woolpack, and his Wife followed him. As soon as they came to the Woolpack, he was put into a Chamber, wherein he was kept with four Yeomen of the Guard, and the Sheriffs Men. Dr. Taylor as soon as he was come into the Chamber, fell down on his Knees, and gave himself wholly to Prayer. The Sheriff then seeing Dr. Taylor's Wife there, would in no Case grant her to speak any more with her Husband, but gently desired her to go to his House and take it as her own, and promised her she should lack nothing, and sent two Officers to conduct her thither. Notwithstanding she desired to go to her Mother's, whither the Officers led her, and charged her Mother to keep her there till they came again.

The Sheriff's Gentleness shewed to Dr. Taylor's Wife.

Dr. Taylor remained at the Woolpack, kept by the Sheriff and his Company, till Eleven of the Clock; at which Time the Sheriff of Essex was ready to receive him: And so they set him on Horseback within the Inn, the Gates being shut.

At coming out of the Gates, John Hull before spoken of, stood at the Rails with Thomas, Dr. Taylor's Son. When Dr. Taylor saw them, he called them, saying, Come hither my Son Thomas. And John Hull lifted the Child up, and set him on the Horse before his Father: And Dr. Taylor put off his Hat, and said to the People that stood there looking on him, Good People, this is mine own Son, begotten of my Body in lawful Matrimony; and God be blessed for lawful Matrimony. Then he lifted up his Eyes towards Heaven and prayed for his Son, laid his Hat upon the Child's Head, and blessed him, and so delivered the Child to John Hull, whom he took by the Hand and said, Farewel John Hull, the faithfullest Servant that ever Man had. And so they rode forth, the Sheriff of Essex with four Yeomen of the Guard, and the Sheriff's Men leading him.

Dr. Taylor taketh his Leave of his Son Thomas, and John Hull.

When they were come almost at Burntwood, one Arthur Faysy, a Man of Hadley, who before Anno 1555. fore Time had been Dr. Taylor's Servant, met with them, and he, ſuppoſing him to have been at Liberty, ſaid, Maſter Doctor, I am glad to ſee you again at Liberty, and came to him and took him by the Hand. Soft Sir, quoth the Sheriff, he is a Priſoner; what haſt thou to do with him? I cry your Mercy, ſaid Arthur, I knew not ſo much, and I thought it no Offence to talk to a true Man. The Sheriff was very angry with this, and threatned to carry Arthur with him to Priſon; notwithſtanding he bade him get quickly away, and ſo they rode forth to Burntwood; where they cauſed to be made for Dr. Taylor a cloſe Hood, with two Holes for his Eyes to look out at, and a Slit for his Mouth to breath at. This they did, that no Man ſhould know him, nor he ſpeak to any Man. Which Practice they uſed alſo with others. Their own Conſciences told them, that they led innocent Lambs to the Slaughter. Wherefore they feared, leſt if the People ſhould have heard them ſpeak, or have ſeen them, they might have been much more ſtrengthened by their pious Exhortations to ſtand ſtedfaſt in God's Word, and to fly the Superſtitions and Idolatries of the Papacy.

A cloſe Hood made for Dr. Taylor, that no Man ſhould know him.

All the Way Dr. Taylor was joyful and merry, as one that accounted himſelf going to a moſt pleaſant Banquet or Marriage. He ſpake many notable Things to the Sheriffs and Yeomen of the Guard that conducted him, and often moved them to weep thro' his earneſt calling upon them to repent, and to amend their evil and wicked Living. Oftentimes alſo he cauſed them to wonder and rejoice, to ſee him ſo conſtant and ſtedfaſt, void of all Fear, joyful in Heart, and glad to die. Of theſe Yeomen of the Guard, Three uſed Dr. Taylor friendly, but the Fourth (whoſe Name was Homes) uſed him very unkindly and churliſhly.

Dr. Taylor is joyful in his Way.

At Chelmsford the Sheriff of Suffolk met them, there to receive him, and to carry him forth into Suffolk. And being at Supper, the Sheriff of Eſſex perſwaded him to return to the Popiſh Religion, thinking with fair Words to perſwade him, and ſaid, Good maſter Doctor, we are right ſorry for you, conſidering what the Loſs is of ſuch a One as ye might be, if ye would: God hath given you great Learning and Wiſdom, wherefore ye have been in great Favour and Reputation in times paſt with the Council and Higheſt of this Realm. Beſides this, ye are a Man of goodly Perſonage, in your beſt Strength, and by Nature like to live many Years, and without doubt, ye ſhould in time to come be in as good Reputation as ever ye were, or rather better: For ye are well beloved of all Men, as well for your Virtues as your Learning: And methinks it were great Pity you ſhould caſt away yourſelf willingly, and ſo come to ſuch a painful and ſhameful Death. Ye ſhould do much better to revoke your Opinions, and return to the Catholick univerſal Church of Rome, acknowledge the Pope's Holineſs to be the ſupream Head of the Church, and reconcile yourſelf to him. You may do well yet, if you will: Doubt ye not but ye ſhall find Favour at the Queen's Hands, I and all theſe your Friends will be Suiters for your Pardon: Which no doubt, ye ſhall obtain. This Counſel I give you, good Mr. Doctor, of a good Heart, and good Will towards you: And thereupon I drink to you. In like Manner ſaid all the Yoemen of the Guard; upon that Condition, Mr. Doctor, we will all drink to you.

The Sheriff of Eſſex perſwadeth Dr. Taylor to return to Popery.

When they had all drank to him, and the Cup was come to him, he ſtayed a little, as one ſtudying what Anſwer he might give. At laſt he thus anſwered and ſaid, Mr. Sheriff, and my Maſters all, I heartily thank you for your good Will, I have hearkened to your Words, and marked well your Counſels. And to be plain with you, I do perceive that I have been deceived myſelf, and am like to deceive a great many at Hadley of their Expectation. With that Word they all rejoiced. Yea, good Maſter Doctor, quoth the Sheriff, God's Bleſſing on your Heart: Hold you there ſtill. It is the comfortableſt Word that we have heard you ſpeak yet. What ſhould ye caſt away yourſelf in vain? Play a wiſe Man's Part, and I dare warrant it, ye ſhall find Favour. Thus they rejoiced very much at the Word, and were very merry.

Dr. Taylor maketh a Jeſt of Death, with a fit Anſwer for ſuch Doctors and Counſellors.

At laſt, good Mr. Doctor, quoth the Sheriff, what meant ye by this, that ye ſay ye think ye have been deceived yourſelf, and think ye ſhall deceive many one in Hadley? Would ye know my Meaning plainly, quoth he? Yes, quoth the Sheriff, good Mr. Doctor, tell it us plainly.

Then ſaid Dr. Taylor, I will tell you how I have been deceived, and as I think, I ſhall deceive a great many. I am, as you ſee, a Man that hath a very great Carcaſs, which I thought ſhould have been buried in Hadley Church-yard, if I had died in my Bed, as I well hoped I ſhould have done; but herein I ſee I was deceived: And there are a great Number of Worms in Hadley Church-yard, which ſhould have had jolly feeding upon this Carrion, which they have looked for many a Day. But now I know we be deceived, both I and they; for this Carcaſs muſt be burnt to Aſhes, and ſo ſhall they loſe their Bait and Feeding, that they looked to have had of it.

When the Sheriff and his Company heard him ſay ſo, they were amazed and looked at one another, marvelling at the Man's conſtant Mind, that thus without all Fear made but a Jeſt at the cruel Torment and Death now at hand prepared for him. Thus was their Expectation clean diſappointed.

But let us return to Dr. Taylor, who at Chelmsford was delivered to the Sheriff of Suffolk, and by him conducted to Hadley, where he ſuffered. When they were come to Lanham, the Sheriff ſtayed there two Days; and thither came to him a great Number of Gentlemen and Juſtices upon great Horſes which all were appointed to aid the Sheriff. Theſe Gentlemen laboured earneſtly with Dr. Taylor, to reduce him to the Romiſh Religion, promiſing him his Pardon, which, ſaid they, we have here for you. They promiſed him great Promotions, yea a Biſhoprick, if he would take it: But all their Labour and flattering Words were in vain.

Lanham is a Town in Suffolk.

After two Days, the Sheriff and his Company led Dr. Taylor towards Hadley, and coming within two Miles of Hadley, he deſired to alight off his Horſe to make Water; which done, he leapt, and ſet a Friſk or Twain, as Men commonly do in dancing. Why Maſter Doctor, quoth the Sheriff, how do you now? He anſwered, Well, God be praiſed, good Maſter Sheriff. Never better: For now I know I am almoſt at Home. I lack not paſt two Stiles to go over, and I am even at my Father's Houſe. But Maſter Sheriff, ſaid he, ſhall we not go thro' Hadley? Yes, ſaid the Sheriff, you ſhall go through Hadley. Then ſaid he, O good Lord, I thank thee, I ſhall yet once e're I die ſee my Flock, whom thou, Lord, knoweſt I have moſt heartily loved, and truly taught. Good Lord bleſs them, and keep them ſtedfaſt in thy Word and Truth.

When they were now come to Hadley, and came riding over the Bridge, at the Bridge-foot waited a poor Man with five ſmall Children; who when he ſaw Dr. Taylor, he and his Children fell down upon their Knees, and held up their Hands, and cried with a loud Voice, and ſaid, O dear Father and good Shepherd, Dr. Taylor, God help and ſuccour thee, as thou haſt many a Time ſuccoured me and my poor Children. Such Witneſs had this Servant of God of his virtuous and charitable Alms given in his Life time. For God would now the Poor ſhould teſtify of his good Deeds to his ſingular Comfort, to the Example of others, and Confuſion of his Perſecutors and tyrannous Adverſaries. For the Sheriff and others that led him to Death, were wonderfully aſtoniſhed at this: And the Sheriff rebuked the poor Man for ſo crying. The Streets of Hadley were beſet on both ſides the Way with Men and Women of the Town and Country, who waited to ſee him: Whom when they beheld ſo led to Death, with weeping Eyes and lamentable Voices they cried, ſaying one to another, Ah good Lord! there goeth our good Shepherd from us, that ſo faithfully hath taught us, ſo fatherly hath cared for us, and ſo godly hath governed us: O merciful God! what ſhall we poor ſcattered Lambs do? What ſhall come of this wicked World? Good Lord ſtrengthen him, and comfort him: With ſuch other moſt lamentable and piteous Voices. Wherefore the People were ſore rebuked by the Sheriffs and Catchpoles his Men, that led him. And Dr. Taylor always ſaid to the People; I have preached to you God's Word and Truth, and am come this Day to ſeal it with my Blood.

A poor Man with five Children comforted Dr. Taylor.

The People lament Dr. Taylor.

Dr. Taylor confeſſeth the Truth, and confirmeth the ſame with his Blood.

Coming againſt the Almſhouſes, which he well knew, he caſt Money to the poor People, which remained of what had been given him in the Time of his Impriſonment: As for his Living, they took it from him at his firſt going to Priſon, ſo that he was ſuſtained all the Time of his Impriſonment by the charitable Alms of good People that viſited him.

Therefore the Money that now remained he put in a Glove, ready for the ſame Purpoſe, and as is ſaid gave it to the poor Almſmen ſtanding at their Doors to ſee him. And coming to the laſt of the Almſhouſes, and not ſeeing the Poor that dwelt there, ready at their Doors, as the others were, he asked; Is the blind Man and blind Woman that dwelt here, alive? It was anſwered, Yea, they are within. Then he threw the Glove and all in at the Window, and ſo rode forth.

Thus this good Father and Provider for the Poor now took his Leave of thoſe, for whom all his Life he had a ſingular Care and Study. For it was his Cuſtom, once in a Fortnight at leaſt, to call upon Sir Anthony Doyl, and others of the rich Cloth-makers, to go with him to the Almſhouſes, and there to ſee how the Poor lived; what they lacked in Meat, Drink, Cloathing, Bedding, or any other Neceſſaries. The like did he alſo to other poor Men that had many Children, or were ſick. Then would he exhort and comfort them, and where he found Cauſe, rebuke the unruly, and what they wanted, that gave he after his Power: And what he was not able, he cauſed the rich and wealthy Men to miniſter unto them. Thus ſhewed he himſelf in all Things an Example to his Flock, worthy to be followed; and taught by his Deeds, what a great Treaſure Alms is to all ſuch as chearfully for Chriſt's Sake do it.

At laſt, coming to Aldham Common, the Place aſſigned where he ſhould ſuffer, and ſeeing a great Multitude of People gathered thither, he asked, What Place is this, and what meaneth it that ſo much People are gathered hither? It was anſwered, It is Aldham Common, the Place where you muſt ſuffer: And the People are come to look upon you. Then ſaid he, Thanked be God, I am even at Home, and ſo alighted from his Horſe, and with both his Hands rent the Hood from his Head.

Anno 1555.

Aldham Common.

But when the People ſaw his reverend and ancient Face, with a long white Beard, they burſt out with weeping Tears, and cried, ſaying, God ſave thee, good Dr. Taylor; Jeſus Chriſt ſtrengthen thee, and help thee; the Holy Ghoſt comfort thee; with ſuch other like good Wiſhes. Then would he have ſpoken to the People, but the Yeomen of the Guard were ſo buſy about him, that as ſoon as he opened his Mouth, one or other thruſt a Tipſtaff into his Mouth, and would in no wiſe permit him to ſpeak.

The People wiſh God to help him.

Dr. Taylor could not be ſuffered to ſpeak to the People.

Then he deſired Licence of the Sheriff to ſpeak; but the Sheriff denied it to him, and bad him remember his Promiſe to the Council.

Well, quoth Dr. Taylor, Promiſe muſt be kept. What this Promiſe was, is unknown: But the common Fame was, that after he and others were condemned, the Council ſent for them, and threatned them they would cut their Tongues out of their Heads, except they would promiſe, that at their Deaths they would keep Silence, and not ſpeak to the People. Wherefore they, deſirous to have the Uſe of their Tongues, to call upon God as long as they might live, promiſed Silence.

Dr. Taylor perceiving that he could not be ſuffered to ſpeak, ſat down, and ſeeing one named Soyce, he called him, and ſaid, Soyce, I pray thee come and pull off my Boots, and take them for thy Labour: Thou haſt long looked for them, now take them. Then he roſe up, and put off his Clothes unto his Shirt, and gave them away. Which done, he ſaid with a loud Voice, Good People, I have taught you nothing but God's Holy Word, and thoſe Leſſons that I have taken out of God's Bleſſed Book, the Holy Bible: And I am come hither this Day to ſeal it with my Blood. With that Word, Homes, Yeoman of the Guard aforeſaid, who had uſed Dr. Taylor very cruelly all the Way, gave him a great Stroke upon the Head with a Waſter, and ſaid, Is that the keeping of thy Promiſe, thou Heretick? Then he, ſeeing they would not permit him to ſpeak, kneeled down and prayed, and a poor Woman that was among the People ſtepped in and prayed with him; but her they thruſt away, and threatned to tread her down with their Horſes: Notwithſtanding ſhe would not remove, but abode and prayed with him. When he had prayed, he went to the Stake, and kiſſed it, and ſet himſelf into a Pitch-barrel, which they had ſet for him to ſtand in, and ſo ſtood with his Back upright againſt the Stake, with his Hands folded together, and his Eyes towards Heaven, and ſo he continually prayed.

Dr. Taylor confeſſeth the Truth.

Dr. Taylor prayeth.

Then they bound him with Chains, and the Sheriff called one Richard Donningham a Butcher, and commanded him to ſet up the Faggots: But he refuſed to do it, and ſaid, I am lame, Sir, and not able to lift a Faggot. The Sheriff threatned to ſend him to Priſon; notwithſtanding he would not do it.

Then he appointed one Mulleine of Carſey, a Man

Anno 1555. Man for his Virtues fit to be a Hangman, and Soyce a very Drunkard, and Warwick, who, in the Commotion-time in King Edward's Days, loſt one of his Ears for his ſeditious Talk, amongſt whom alſo was one Robert King, a Deviſer of Enterludes.

Theſe four were appointed to ſet up the Faggots, and to make the Fire, which they moſt diligently did; and this Warwick cruelly caſt a Faggot at him, which ſtruck him on his Head, and brake his Face, that the Blood ran down. Then ſaid Dr. Taylor, O Friend, I have Harm enough, what needed that?

Dr. Taylor is patient.

Furthermore, Sir John Shelton there ſtanding by as Dr. Taylor was ſpeaking, and ſaying the Pſalm Miſerere in Engliſh, ſtruck him on the Lips; Ye Knave, ſaid he, ſpeak Latin, I will make thee. At laſt they kindled the Fire, and Dr. Taylor, holding up both his Hands, called upon God, and ſaid, Merciful Father of Heaven, for Jeſus Chriſt my Saviour's Sake, receive my Soul into thy Hands. So ſtood he ſtill without either crying or moving, with his Hands folded together, till Soyce with an Halberd ſtruck him on the Head that the Brains fell out, and the Corps fell down into the Fire.

Dr. Taylor's laſt Words.

Soyce ſtrikeeth him down with an Halberd.

Thus rendred the Man of God his bleſſed Soul into the Hands of his merciful Father, and to his moſt dear and certain Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, whom he moſt intirely loved, faithfully and earneſtly preached, obediently followed in Living, and conſtantly glorified in Death.

The Proceedings of the Papiſts in maintaining their Religion.

After that Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, had got the Laws, and the ſecular Arm on his Side, with full Power and Authority to rule as he pleaſed, and had brought theſe pious Biſhops and reverend Preachers under Foot, namely, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Dr. Ridley Biſhop of London, Mr. Latimer, Mr. Hooper Biſhop of Worceſter and Gloceſter, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Saunders, Dr. Taylor, and Mr. Bradford, all which he had now preſently condemned, and ſome alſo burned; he ſuppoſed now all had been cock-ſure, and that Chriſt had been conquered for ever, ſo that the People, being terrified with the Example of theſe learned Men condemned, never would, nor durſt once ſpeak againſt their Religion: Not much unlike the Manner of the Turks, who when they cannot maintain their Sect by good Learning and Truth of God's Word, think by Violence of Sword to force whom they can to their Belief; and that done, afterward make Laws, no Man under pain of Hereſy to diſpute, or once to call in Queſtion any of their Proceedings. Even ſo Stephen Gardiner and his Fellows, when they ſee they cannot prevail by Trial of God's Word, neither are diſpoſed ſimply to ſeek for Truth where it is to be found, they take Exceptions againſt God's Word, affirming it to be intricate, obſcure, and inſufficient to be its own Judge, and therefore that of Neceſſity it muſt be judged by the Pope's Church; and ſo having Kings and Queens on their Side, they ſeek not to perſuade by the Word of God, nor to win by Charity, but inſtead of the Law of God, they compel Men by Death, Fire, and Sword, to believe that in very Deed they think not. And thus condemned they theſe pious learned Preachers and Biſhops aforeſaid, ſuppoſing, as I ſaid, that all the reſt would ſoon be quailed by their Example. But they were deceived: For within eight or nine Days after that Stephen Gardiner had given Sentence againſt Mr. Hooper, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Saunders, Dr. Taylor, and Mr. Bradford, being the Eighth of February, ſix other good Men were brought likewiſe before the Biſhops for the ſame Cauſe of Religion, to be examined, whoſe Names were, William Pigot, Butcher, Stephen Knight, Barber, Thomas Tomkins, Weaver, Thomas Haukes, Gentleman, John Laurence, Prieſt, William Hunter, Apprentice.

The Manner of Proceeding alike in the Catholicks and Turks.

Stephen Gardiner ſeeing thus his Device diſappointed, and that Cruelty in this Caſe would not ſerve his Expectation, gave over the Matter as utterly diſcouraged, and from that Day meddled no more in ſuch Kind of Condemnations, but referred the whole Doing thereof to Bonner Biſhop of London; who cruelly ſupplied that Part, as in the further Proceſs of this Hiſtory will evidently appear. This Biſhop Bonner, taking the Matter in Hand, called before him in his Conſiſtory at St. Paul's (the Lord Mayor and ſeveral Aldermen ſitting with him) the ſix Perſons aforenamed, upon the eighth Day of February in the Year aforeſaid, and on the next Day, being the Ninth of February, read the Sentence of Condemnation upon them, as appeareth in Bonner's own Regiſters: Such quick Speed theſe Men could make in diſpatching their Buſineſs at once. Notwithſtanding, becauſe the Death of theſe condemned Martyrs did not follow till the next Month of March, I will defer the proſecuting of their Matter, till I come to the Time of their Suffering.

Stephen Gardiner giveth over his murdering Office to Biſhop Bonner.

Six Men condemned by Biſhop Bonner.

In the mean Time, what was the Cauſe that their Execution was ſo long deferred after their Condemnation, I have not preciſely to ſay, unleſs peradventure the Sermon of Alphonſus the Spaniſh Frier, and the King's Confeſſor, did ſome good. For ſo I find, that when thoſe ſix Perſons aforeſaid were caſt upon Saturday the Ninth of February, upon Sunday following, which was the Tenth of February, the ſaid Alphonſus, a Gray Frier, preached before the King; in which Sermon he did earneſtly inveigh againſt the Biſhops for burning of Men, ſaying plainly that they learned it not in Scripture, to burn any for his Conſcience; but the contrary, that they ſhould live and be converted: With many other Things more to the ſame Purport.

Alphonſus, King Philip's Confeſſor, preaching againſt the burning of Hereticks.

Upon February 14, Mr. Robert Ferrar, Biſhop of St. David's, was ſent towards St. David's, there to be condemned and executed. Concerning whoſe Martyrdom, foraſmuch as it fell not before the Month of March, we will defer the Hiſtory thereof till we come to the Day and Time of his Suffering.

Furthermore the fourteenth Day of February aforeſaid, the Lord Chancellor and other Biſhops, cauſed the Image of Thomas Becket to be ſet over the Mercers Chappel Door in Cheapſide London, in the Form and Shape of a Biſhop, with Miter and Croſier. Howbeit within two Days after his Erection, his two bleſſing Fingers were firſt broken away, and on the next Day (being the Seventeenth of February) his Head alſo was ſtricken off: Whereupon aroſe great Trouble, and many were ſuſpected; among whom one Mr. John Barnes, Mercer, dwelling over-againſt the ſame Chappel, was vehemently by the Lord Chancellor charged withal, as the Doer thereof, and the rather, for that he was a Profeſſor of the Truth. Wherefore he and three of his Servants were committed to Priſon; and at his Delivery (although it could not be proved upon him) he was bound in a great Sum of Money, as well to build it up again as often as it ſhould be broke down, as alſo to watch and keep the ſame. And therefore at this his compelled Charges the Image was again ſet up the ſecond Day of March then next enſuing; but the fourteenth Day of the ſame Month in the Night, the Head was again the ſecond Time broke off: Which Thing was ſo heinouſly taken, that the next Day, being the 15th Day, there was a Proclamation made in London, that whoſoever would tell who did ſtrike off his Head (though he were of Counſel, and not the principal Doer) he ſhould have not only his Pardon, but alſo One hundred Crowns of Gold, with hearty Thanks. But it was not known who did it.

Thomas Becket's Image ſet up at Mercer's Chappel.

The Head of the Image broke off.

Mr. John Barnes, Mercer, troubled for it.

Becket's Image again broke down.

The 18th of February, Queen Mary at length, after long Delay, made full Anſwer to the King of Denmark's Letters, who had written before two Letters to the ſaid Queen, in the Behalf of Mr. Coverdale for his Deliverance, who at that Time went under Sureties, and was in great Danger, had he not been reſcued by the great Suit and Letters of the ſaid King of Denmark.

The Matter and Copy of which his Suit and Letters, as they came to our Hands, we have here ſet forth and expreſt, whereby the ſingular Love of this good King, towards the Truth of God's Word, and the Profeſſors thereof, might the better appear to the World.

Firſt, This pious King Chriſtianus, hearing of the Captivity of Miles Coverdale, of whom he had had ſome Knowledge before (being there in Denmark in King Henry the Eighth's Time) and lamenting his dangerous Caſe, and partly thro' the Interceſſion of Mr. Machabæus, Superintendent in Denmark, who was partly * Kin to Mr. Coverdale's Wife, made Interceſſion by Letters to Queen Mary, deſiring and requeſting the ſaid Miles Coverdale to be ſent unto him. The Date of which his Letters was about the Kalends of May, 1554. The Copy whereof, now tranſlated into Engliſh, here followeth.

* Mr. Machabæus and Mr. Coverdale married two Siſters.

CHRISTIANUS by the Grace of God King of Denmark, Norway, &c. To the moſt noble and moſt mighty Princeſs and Lady MARY, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, our moſt dearly beloved Couſin, wiſheth Proſperity.

MOST noble Princeſs, and dearly beloved Couſin, conſidering the mutual Affinity and Alliance, not only of our Royal Name, but alſo of our Kindred, eſpecially for that it has for a long Continuance of Time been propagated and preſerv'd on both Sides in theſe our Realms, as well as for the mutual Commerce and Faithfulneſs which has been kept up by us in all kind Offices; We cannot but write to your Majeſty in Regard to the Piety and excellent Literature of the truly reverend Mr. John Machabæus, Doctor, and egregious Profeſſor of Divinity, our well beloved Subject and Miniſter, being mov'd hereto by his humble Supplications and Intreaties; who has declared to us, that in the late Diſorder and Commotion of the Kingdom of England (which that it has happened we are heartily ſorry, and now hope it will prove for the better) one Miles Coverdale, late of the Dioceſs of Exon, of pious and laudible, Memory, conſtituted Biſhop by the Authority of the laſt King your Majeſty's Brother, and our dearly beloved Couſin, that he (the ſaid Miles Coverdale) is now involv'd in moſt dreadful Calamities, in Priſon, and Danger of his Life, for no heinous Offence committed, but by Reaſon of the fatal Deſtruction of the Times. Which Things this our truſty Subject Machabæus, being a-kin to him, and (which is more grievous) like him in Piety, Learning and Morality, as a kind Brother, reckons to appertain to himſelf. And therefore he implores our Aſſiſtance to beſtow upon him that Favour and Kindneſs he deſerves, by endeavouring to to rid him from his Afflictions becauſe he is innocent. We are indeed (and not without Reaſon) mov'd with Compaſſion on the Man, whom for his Merit we greatly reſpect, and chiefly for the Teſtimony he gives of the Innocence and Integrity of the impriſoned Prelate: Of which indeed there's ſo much the more Reaſon to hope, becauſe tho' many guilty Perſons have already ſuffer'd Death, you have ſtill preſerv'd him alive. Wherefore we have been eaſily perſuaded earneſtly to beſeech your Majeſty for our Sake to deal gently with your Priſoner Mr. Coverdale, and that it may pleaſe you to deliver him as well from the Imputation of Villany, as from the Fierceneſs of Puniſhment, and that the Offences of the Times, whereat it's likely he is alſo troubled, through our Intreaty, eſpecially this being the firſt Time, may be by you graciouſly forgiven: So far at leaſt, that if peradventure in this State of Affairs his Preſence ſeems grievous to you, he may with his Friends be ſafely diſmiſs'd to our Dominions. The granting of which will be taken as a very great Favour by us, and will redound to the Praiſe of your Majeſty's Clemency throughout your flouriſhing Kingdoms: Which that they may be always proſperous, and profitable to your Majeſty we heartily pray; and will do our Endeavour, when we have underſtood what Regard you pay to our Royal Amity and Friendſhip, the more earneſtly to labour to retaliate thoſe Favours, by expreſſing our Gratitude in all kind Offices to your Majeſty and your whole Realm. Anno 1555.

God grant that for his Glory and the publick Safety, your Majeſty may be crown'd with proſperous Succeſs in all Things, and may your ſelf be in perpetual Security.

Given at our Tower at Colding,

Your Couſin, Brother, and Friend,

CHRISTIANUS, R.

To this Letter of the King, Queen Mary anſwered again, declaring that the ſaid Miles Coverdale was not impriſoned for Religion, but for a certain Debt; ſo neither plainly granting, or expreſly denying his Requeſt, but uſing a colourable Excuſe for ſhifting off the Matter, as appeareth by his ſecond Letter ſent to the Queen, dated September 24, as followeth.

CHRISTIANUS by the Grace of God King of Denmark, Norway, &c. To the moſt noble Princeſs and Lady, MARY, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, our moſt dearly beloved Siſter and Couſin, wiſheth Proſperity with good and lucky Succeſs of all Things.

WE have received your Majeſty's Letter, whereby Anſwer is rendered, and that very graciouſly, unto our Petition which we made for the Safeguard of Mr. Coverdale, late called Biſhop of Exon. So that we perceive, though he be in Danger for another Cauſe than was ſignified unto us before, yet your Majeſty will ſo regard our Interceſſion, that Coverdale himſelf ſhall under-

Anno 1555. ſtand it to have done him good. To which regal Promiſe, ſeeing we, (as Reaſon would we ſhould do) attribute ſo much, that truſting upon the ſame, we doubt not, whereas he being in Captivity, his Friends, whom we eſpecially tender, are therefore in Heavineſs and Care, your good Promiſe doth call them from ſuch Sorrow and Solicitude, to the Hope and Expectation of his aſſured Welfare: We could not do otherwiſe, but render Thanks unto your Majeſty for ſuch your ready and gracious Goodwill, not only in reſpect of this Benefit, but alſo of the Conſervation and keeping of perpetual Amity between us and our Realms, and ſo, as much as in us lieth, to omit nothing that might conduce to the nouriſhing and Continuance of theſe fortunate Beginnings. Neither had we ever any Doubt concerning the Clemency and Moderation of your Goodneſs, whom we heartily beſeech Almighty God ever more and more to proſper, unto the Glory of his Name, and Profit of the Common-wealth. Wherefore, ſeeing your Majeſty writeth, that Mr. Coverdale is in Danger for certain Accompts of Money, and not for any other more grievous Offence, we have Cauſe on his Behalf to rejoice: And therefore we doubt ſo much the leſs, that at our Requeſt he ſhall graciouſly have his Deliverance given him, and be out of Danger. For as touching the Biſhoprick, by reaſon whereof he came in Debt, we underſtand he yielded it up, that no Payment might thereof be required, ſpecially ſeeing he is reputed neither to have enjoyed it long, neither to have had at any Time ſo great Commodity of it. Moreover, tho' it be poſſible to find ſome Perplexity in the Account, or haply ſome other Cauſe, yet your Majeſty's Letters, offering ſuch Favour and Benignity, have taken from us all Carefulneſs and Doubt: Inſomuch, that we think your Majeſty, as much as may be, will have more reſpect unto our Honour, than to that which might of him be required. And therefore we purpoſe not to trouble your Majeſty by repeating of our Petition, but to declare how greatly we eſteem it, that your Majeſty would gratify us herein: Whereof we plainly hope for an End, that Coverdale himſelf ſhall ſhortly in our Preſence make Declaration concerning the Benefit of his Welfare obtain'd of your Majeſty. And of this we deſire your Majeſty to be ſpecially aſſured again, that we will not only omit no Occaſion or Opportunity to requite this Benefit, but alſo to eſtabliſh and amplify our mutual Love and Amity between us and our Realms on either Side. Almighty God preſerve your Majeſty in proſperous Health and Felicity.

Given at our City at Otton,
September 24. 1554.

Your Brother and Couſin,

CHRISTIANUS, R.

It was a great while before the Queen made Anſwer to theſe Letters. At length after great Suit made, the next Year, February 18. ſhe anſwered again on this wiſe.

To the moſt ſerene Prince CHRISTIAN, by the Grace of God, King of Denmark, &c. Duke of Sleſwick, &c. Earl of Oldenburgh, &c. Our moſt dear Brother and Friend.

MARY, by the Grace of God, Queen of England, France, Naples, Jeruſalem, and Ireland, &c. To the moſt ſerene Prince CHRISTIAN by the ſame Grace of God, King of Denmark, Norway, and of the Vandals; Duke of Sleſwick, Holſton, Stormar, and Detmarſh; Earl of Oldenburgh and Delmenhorſt, &c. our moſt dear Friend and Brother, wiſheth Health and Increaſe of Proſperity. When we underſtood by your Letters (which this Meſſenger has brought us) your Deſire of obtaining Leave of Mr. Coverdale to depart from our Kingdom into yours, we readily granted your Deſire, and altho' he is our born Subject, and is not as yet diſcharged from a Debt which he lawfully owes to our Exchequer, yet we have regarded your Deſire before our own Debt, and ſhall for our mutual Friendſhip at all Times when Opportunity ſerves, endeavour to gratify your Majeſty; may God long preſerve your Serene Highneſs in Health.

Mr. Coverdale delivered and ſent to the King of Denmark.

February 18, 1555.

The Effect of Biſhop Bonner's Intimation ſent into his Dioceſs, to receive the Cardinal's Abſoluiton, and to be reconciled to the Pope in Lent next following.

On February 19. there was a certain Intimation ſet forth and printed in the Name of Biſhop Bonner, wherein was contained a general Monition, and ſtrict Charge given to every Man and Woman within his Dioceſs, to prepare themſelves againſt Lent then near approaching, to receive the glad Tidings of Peace and Reconciliation ſent from the Pope Julius III, by Poole, his Cardinal and Legate de Latere, and ſo receive alſo the joyful Benefit of Abſolution, being ſent firſt from the Cardinal to Bonner, and from him to every of his Archdeacons, to be miniſtred to every private Perſon within his Dioceſs, that would come the ſaid holy Time of Lent to his Paſtor or Curate to be confeſſed, and to receive of him wholſome Counſel, Penance, and Abſolution: Signifying moreover, that as he was authorized by the aforeſaid Cardinal, ſo he for the ſame Purpoſe had indued with the like Authority all and ſingular Paſtors and Curates within his Dioceſs, to reconcile and abſoil from their former Hereſy and Schiſm, and from the Cenſures of the Church, ſuch as would reſort unto them. And leſt any Scruple or Doubt, riſing peradventure in their Conſciences, ſhould be any Stay or Hindrance in this Behalf, he hath aſſigned and deputed therefore through his Dioceſs certain learned Men, to whom they might reſort, or elſe might open their Griefs to any of his Archdeacons, or elſe come to his own Perſon, and ſo ſhould be reſolved.

And therefore all Manner of Doubts and Obſtacles ſet aſide, he ſtraitly willed and commanded every Man and Woman to come to Confeſſion, and to enjoy this Benefit of Reconciliation, and Abſolution, againſt the firſt Sunday next after Eaſter enſuing, and not to fail. For which Purpoſe he had ſpecially commanded the Paſtors and Curates of every Pariſh to certify up in Writing the Names of every Man and Woman ſo reconciled, and ſo forth. The Copy of which Intimation here followeth:

The Declaration of the Biſhop of London, to be publiſhed to the Lay-People of his Dioceſs, concerning their Reconciliation.

EDMUND, by the Permiſſion of God, Biſhop of London, unto all and ſingular the Lay-people of his Dioceſs, doth ſend greeting in our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Whereas this noble Realm of England, dividing itſelf from the Unity of the Catholick Church, and from the Agreement in Religion with all other chriſtian Realms, hath been, beſides many other Miſeries and Plagues, which God's Indignation hath poured upon it, grievouſly alſo vexed, and ſore infected with many and ſundry ſorts of Sects of Hereticks, as Arians, Anabaptiſts, Libertines, Zuinglians, Lutherans, and many others, all which Sects be moſt repugnant, and contrary one againſt another, and all againſt God's Truth, and Chriſt's catholick Faith; whereupon hath grown ſuch Slander to the Realm, ſuch Malice and Diſagreement among ourſelves, the Inhabitants thereof, ſuch Treaſons, Tumults, and Inſurrections againſt our Prince, ſuch Blaſphemy and Diſhonour unto God, as no Man's Tongue or Pen is able to expreſs: It hath pleaſed the Goodneſs of God to caſt his Eye of Mercy and Clemency upon us, and to move the Pope's Holineſs to ſend his moſt godly Meſſenger, the moſt Reverend Father in God, the Lord Cardinal Poole, Legate de Latere, to bring us the glad Tidings of Peace and Reconciliation, and to reduce and bring home unto the Fold the loſt Sheep that were gone aſtray: Whoſe Meſſage, as it hath been honourably received of the King and Queen's Majeſties, even ſo the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons at the laſt Parliament have received it, revoking all Laws which in the Time of Schiſm were promulgate againſt the Authority of the Pope's Holineſs, and reſtoring the ſame, and the Church of Rome to all that Power which they had in this Realm before the ſaid Schiſm, which Reconciliation was alſo moſt gladly and joyfully embraced, as well of all the Clergy and Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, as alſo of many other Perſons, and being ſo great and neceſſary to be extended to every Perſon of the Realm, it hath pleaſed the Lord Legate's Grace to give and impart unto me the ſaid Biſhop of London, for my ſaid Dioceſe, and to all ſuch as I ſhall appoint in that Behalf, Power and Authority to abſolve and reconcile all and every Perſon thereof, as well of the Clergy as of the Laity, and as well Men as Women, who will renounce their Errors, and, being penitent, will humbly require to be reſtored to the Unity of the catholick Church, as by the Letters of the ſaid Lord Legate's Grace ſent unto me, and from me ſent unto every of the Archdeacons within my Dioceſe, more at large may and doth appear. And foraſmuch as in mine own Perſon, as well for the Multitude of People, as Diſtance of Places, I cannot miniſter this Benefit unto every private Perſon myſelf, and for that alſo the holy Time of Lent is now at hand, in which every true chriſtian Man ought to come unto his own Paſtor and Curate, to be of him confeſſed, and to receive at his Hand wholeſome Counſel, Penance, and Abſolution; theſe are therefore as well to give Knowledge unto every one of you, as alſo to ſignify and declare, that for that Purpoſe, I have by the ſaid Authority choſen, named, and deputed, and ſo by theſe Preſents do chuſe and depute all and ſingular Paſtors and Curates, having Cure of Souls within my Dioceſs, and being themſelves reconciled herein, that they and every of them by Authority hereof, ſhall have full Power and Authority to abſolve all ſuch as be Lay perſons of their Pariſhes from Hereſy and Schiſm, and from the Cenſures of the Church, into which they be fallen by occaſion thereof alſo, and to reconcile to the Church all ſuch who ſhall declare themſelves penitent, and deſirous to enjoy the Benefit of the ſaid Reconciliation. And whereas divers Paſtors and Curates in ſundry Pariſhes peradventure be not able to ſatisfy the Minds, and to appeaſe the Conſciences of ſome of their Pariſhioners in Caſes that ſhall trouble them, I have therefore given alſo Authority to every Archdeacon of my Dioceſs within his archdeaconry, to name and appoint certain certain of the beſt Learned in every Deanary of their Archdeaconry, to ſupply that lack, ſo that every Man ſo troubled, may repair to any one of them within the ſaid Deanary, whom he ſhall like beſt, to be inſtructed and appeaſed in that Behalf. And alſo I have appointed, that if this being done, there ſhall yet remain any Scruple in the Party's Conſcience, and himſelf not ſatisfied, then the ſaid Party ſhall repair unto one of mine Archdeacons or Chaplains, unto whom his Mind ſhall be moſt inclined, or elſe to repair unto mine own ſelf, to be reſolved in his ſaid Scruple or Doubt, and to receive and take ſuch Order therein, as to one of the ſaid Archdeacons, or unto me, ſhall therein appear to be moſt expedient. Anno 1555.

Further certifying and declaring unto you, that I have given Commandment herein to all my Archdeacons, that they admoniſh and command every Paſtor and Curate within their Archdeaconries, that they, having Knowledge hereof, do on the firſt Holiday next then following, at the Maſs-time, when the Multitude of People is preſent, declare all theſe Things unto their Pariſhioners, and exhort them that they eſteem this Grace accordingly, and reconcile themſelves to the Church before the firſt Sunday after Eaſter next enſuing: Which thing I alſo do command by the Tenor hereof, with Intimation that the ſaid Time being once paſt, and they not ſo reconciled, every one of them ſhall have Proceſs made againſt him, according to the Canons, as the Cauſe ſhall require: For which Purpoſe the Paſtors and Curates of every Pariſh ſhall be commanded by their Archdeacon, to certify me in writing of every Man and Woman's Name that is not ſo reconciled.

Further, herewith I do ſignify and declare unto you, that our Holy Father the Pope Julius III. of that Name, like a moſt tender and natural Father, hearing of the Return and Recovery of his prodigal Child, this Realm of England, hath himſelf made much Joy and Gladneſs hereat, and alſo other true chriſtian Realms have done the like. Exhorting you therefore in our Lord not to be unthankful yourſelves, or negligent in this Behalf, but diligently to ſeek for it, joyfully to embrace it, and fruitfully to uſe it, remembring withal the Monition and Charge which came from me the laſt Year, concerning your coming to Confeſſion in Lent, and receiving the Sacrament at Eaſter: Which Monition to all Effects and Purpoſes I have now here repeated and renewed, charging you, and alſo all your Curates therewith. And becauſe all our Duties is earneſtly and devoutly to pray for the proſperous Eſtate of our Soveraigns, the King and the Queen of this Realm, I do finally require and pray you, as heartily as I can, to pray for their Majeſties accordingly; and eſpecially that it may pleaſe Almighty God, to ſend unto her Grace a good Time, and to make her a glad Mother, which cannot be but unto us all great Joy, much Comfort and ineſtimable Preſit.

Given at London the nineteenth Day of February, in the Year of our Lord God, after the Computation of the Church of England, 1554. and of my Tranſlation the 16th.

The Form of Abſolution to be kept by the Paſtors and Curates in private Confeſſions, concerning this Reconciliation.

The Abſolution of Biſhop Bonner to be uſed in his Dioceſs.

OUR Lord Jeſus Chriſt abſolve you, and by the apoſtolick Authority to me granted and committed,

Anno 1555. committed, I abſolve you from the Sentences of Excommunication, and from all other Cenſures and Pains, into which you be fallen by reaſon of Hereſy, or Schiſm, or any other Ways: And I reſtore you unto the Unity of our holy Mother the Church, and the Communion of all Sacraments, diſpenſing with you for all Manner of Irregularity; and by the ſame Authority I abſolve you from all your Sins, in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. Amen.

The lamentable Hiſtory of Judge Hales.

IN the Life of Mr. Hooper mention was made of Judge Hales, of whom we will more particularly ſpeak in this Place; beginning with the Communication between the Biſhop of Wincheſter and him, declaring withal how falſe and untrue the Excuſe is of the Papiſts, who ſo preciſely by the Law defend themſelves, and ſay, that in all their Doings they did nothing but by the Law, to bear them out. Which if it be ſo, how did they then to Anne Aſkew? What Law had they, when they had condemned her firſt for a dead Woman, then afterwards to rack her? By what Law did they call up Mr. Hooper, and impriſon him for the Queen's Debt, when the Queen in very Deed did owe him fourſcore Pounds; and kept him a Year and a half in Priſon, and gave him never a Penny? By what Law did Biſhop Bonner condemn and burn Richard Mekins, a Lad of 15 Years, when the firſt Jury had acquitted him, and he at the Stake revoked all Hereſies, and praiſed the ſaid Bonner to be a good Man; and alſo having him in Priſon, would not ſuffer his Father and Mother to come to him, to comfort their own Child? What Law had they to put Mr. Rogers in Priſon, when he did neither preach nor read Lecture after the Time of the Queen's Inhibition, and when they had kept him in his own Houſe half a Year, being not deprived of his Living, yet would not let him have an half Penny of his own Livings to relieve him, his Wife, and eleven Children? By what Law was Thomas Tomkins's Hand burnt, and afterward his Body conſumed to Aſhes? What good Law or Honeſty was there to burn the three poor Women at Guernſey, with the infant Child falling out of the Mother's Womb, when as they all before their Death recanted their Words and Opinions, and were never abjured before? So here likewiſe in this Caſe, what Order or Right of Laws did Stephen Gardiner follow in troubling and impriſoning Judge Hales, when he had done nothing neither againſt God's Law nor Man's, in proceeding by Order of Law againſt certain preſumptuous Perſons, who both before the Law, and againſt the Law then in force, took upon them to ſay their Maſs? as ye ſhall hear in theſe his Anſwers and Communication had with Stephen Gardiner hereunder enſuing.

The Catholicks proved to do againſt the Law in Queen Mary's Time.

The Communication between the Lord Chancellor and Judge Hales, in Weſtminſter-hall, being there among other Judges, to take his Oath, Oct. 6. 1553.

Lord Chan. MR. Hales, ye ſhall underſtand, that like as the Queen's Highneſs hath heretofore conceived good Opinion of you, eſpecially for that ye ſtood both faithfully and lawfully in her Cauſe of juſt Succeſſion, refuſing to ſet your Hand to the Book among others that were againſt her Grace in that Behalf; ſo now, through your own late Deſerts againſt ſome of her Highneſs's Proceedings, ye ſtand not well in her Graces Favour; and therefore before you take any Oath it will be neceſſary for you to clear yourſelf.

Hales. I pray you my Lord, for what Cauſe?

L. Chan. Information is given, that ye have indicted ſeveral Prieſts in Kent for ſaying Maſs.

Hales. My Lord, it is not ſo, I indicted none; but indeed certain Indictments of the like Nature were brought before me at the laſt Aſſizes there held, and I gave Order therein as the Law required. For I have profeſſed the Law, againſt which, in Caſes of Juſtice, I will never, God willing proceed, nor in any wiſe diſſemble, but with the ſame ſhew forth my Conſcience, and if it were to do again, I would do no leſs than I did.

L. Chan. Yes, Mr. Hales, your Conſcience is known well enough, I know you lack no Conſcience.

Hales. My Lord, you may do well to ſearch your own Conſcience, for mine is better known to myſelf than to you: And to be plain, I did as well uſe Juſtice in your ſaid Maſs-caſe by my Conſcience, as by Law, wherein I am fully bent to ſtand in Trial to the uttermoſt that can be objected. And if I have therein done any Injury or Wrong, let me be judged by the Law; for I will ſeek no better Defence, conſidering chiefly that it is my Profeſſion.

L. Chan. Why Mr. Hales, although you had the Rigour of the Law on your Side, yet ye might have had regard to the Queen's Highneſs preſent doings in that Caſe. And further, although ye ſeem to be more than preciſe in the Law, yet I think ye would be very loth to yield to the Extremity of ſuch Advantage as might be gathered againſt your Proceedings in the Law, as ye have ſome time taken upon you in place of Juſtice, and if it were well tried, I believe ye ſhould not well be able to ſtand honeſtly thereto.

Hales. My Lord, I am not ſo perfect, but I may err for lack of Knowledge. But both in Conſcience, and ſuch Knowledge of the Law as God hath given me, I will do nothing but I will maintain it, and abide in it: And if my Goods and all that I have be not able to counterpoiſe the Caſe, my Body ſhall be ready to ſerve the Turn; for they be all at the Queen's Highneſs's Pleaſure.

Chan. Ah Sir, ye be very quick and ſtout in your Anſwers. But as it ſhould ſeem, that which you did was more of a Will favouring the Opinion of your Religion againſt the Service now uſed, than for any Occaſion or Zeal for Juſtice, ſeeing the Queen's Highneſs doth ſet it forth as yet, wiſhing all her faithful ſubjects to embrace it accordingly: And where you offer both Body and Goods in your Trial, there is no ſuch matter required at your Hands, and yet ye ſhall not have your own Will neither.

Hales. My Lord, I ſeek not wilful Will, but to ſhew myſelf as I am bound in Love to God and Obedience to the Queen's Majeſty, in whoſe Cauſe willingly for Juſtice ſake, all other Reſpects ſet apart, I did of late, as your Lordſhip knoweth, adventure as much as I had. And as for my Religion, I truſt it be ſuch as pleaſeth God, wherein I am ready to adventure as well my Life as my Subſtance, if I be called thereunto. And ſo in in lack of mine own Power and Will, the Lord's Will be fulfilled.

Chan. Seeing you be at this Point, Mr. Hales, I will presently make an End with you. The Queen's Highness shall be informed of your Opinion and Declaration. And as her Grace shall thereupon determine, ye shall have Knowledge. Until such Time ye may depart as ye came, without your Oath, for as it appeareth, ye are scarce worthy the Place appointed.

Hales. I thank your Lordship: And as for my Vocation, being both a Burden and a Charge more than ever I desired to take upon me; whensoever it shall please the Queen's Highness to ease me thereof, I shall most humbly, with due Contentation obey the same; and so he departed from the Bar.

A few Days after this Communication in Westminster-Hall, which was Oct. 6, 1553, Mr. Hales at the Command of the Bishop, was committed to the King's Bench, where he remained until Lent; then he was removed to the Compter in Breadstreet, and from thence to the Fleet.

Mr. Hales committed to the King's Bench.

Being in the Fleet, what it was that he had granted to the Bishops, by their fraudulent Persuasions (namely, of Dr. Day Bishop of Chichester, and of Judge Portman, as it is thought, overcome at last) I have not to say.

This is certain, that shortly after, calling himself better to Remembrance, he was brought to great Repentance and Terror of Conscience: Insomuch, that for very Anguish of Heart he was ready to kill himself with his Penknife when he was in Prison, and, doubtless, had done so, had not the merciful Providence of God miraculously prevented him, as ye shall hear.

It happened when Supper-time came that he should be called down, but he having little or no Stomach to eat or drink, went immediately to bed, where he lay all Night sobbing and groaning, and took little Rest or Sleep. At length, when Morning came, about Six of the Clock he sent his Servant for a Cup of Beer, under Pretence as though he were thirsty and desirous to drink; whether this Cause were true or feigned it is unknown; but this followed, his Man was scarce got out of the Chamber, when he with his Penknife had wounded himself in divers Places of his Body, and, no doubt, intended to destroy himself, had not the Goodness of God given present Help in Time of Opportunity. Whereby it is evident for all Men to understand, that God's Favour was not absent from him, altho' he thought himself utterly forsaken for his Denial, as by the Sequel may appear.

Mr. Hales about to kill himself in Prison.

For as soon as he had sent his Man out of his Chamber, even before the Chamber-door the Butler met him; who being desired to fill the Drink, and taking the Cup, the other returned again unto his Master, at the very Time when he was working his own Destruction; whereby Mr. Hales at that Time was hindred of his Purpose. When the Bishop of Winchester had Knowledge of it, he straitway took Occasion thereby to blaspheme the Doctrine of the Gospel, which he openly in the Star-Chamber called Doctrine of Desperation. Mr. Hales being within a while after recovered of those Wounds, and delivered out of Prison, return'd home to his House; where he, either for the Greatness of his Sorrow, or Want of good Counsel, or for that he would avoid the Necessity of hearing Mass, having all Things set in Order, a good while before that, pertaining to his last Will and Testament, casting himself into a shallow River, was drowned therein. Anno 1555.

Judge Hales drowned himself.

The unhappy Chance of this worthy Judge was the Cause of great Sorrow to all good Men, and it likewise gave Occasion to some Divines to doubt with themselves, whether he were reprobate or saved, about which Matter it is not for me to determine; for he that is our Judge, the same shall be his Judge; and he it is that will lay all Things open when the Time cometh. This in the mean Time is certain, that the Deed of the Man in my Mind ought in no wise to be allowed, which if he did wittingly, then do I discommend the Man's Reason. But if he did it in Frenzy, and as being out of his Senses, then do I greatly pity his Case.

The Cause of Judge Hales's drowning considered.

A Verse on J. Hales.

Had Faith with Piety sincere conjoin'd,
Adorn'd the moral Virtues of thy Mind,
Thy Body sound and strong would yet remain,
And thou 'mongst Saints the chiefest Place would gain,
But whoso leads his Life from Sin so free,
That all his Actions unpolluted be?
Then seeing Blemishes deform the best,
Thy own Endeavour do, commit to God the rest.

The History of Thomas Tomkins, a Weaver.

Mention was made before of six Prisoners, brought and examined before Bishop Bonner the eighth of February, whose Names were Tompins, Pigot, Knight, Haukes, Laurence, and Hunter. All which, though they received their Condemnation together the Seventh of February, yet because the Time of their Execution was put off from February till the Month of March, I did therefore refer the Story of them to this Place. Of which six, Thomas Tomkins was first burned in Smithfield, the Sixteenth of March, 1555.

This Thomas Tomkins, was a Weaver by his Occupation, and dwelt in Shoreditch, in the Dioceses of London, and was of a pious Conversation and Disposition. This also is recorded of him, that Dr. Bonner Bishop of London kept the said Tomkins with him in Prison half a Year: During which Time the said Bishop was so rigorous to him, that he beat him bitterly about the Face, whereby his Face was swelled. Whereupon the Bishop caused his Beard to be shaven, and gave the Barber Twelve-pence.

Tomkins maketh the Bishop's Hay.

Touching which shaving of Thomas Tomkins's Beard, this is more to be added; Bishop Bonner having Tomkins Prisoner with him at Fulham, in the Month of July, did set him with his other Work-folks to make Hay. And seeing him to labour so hard, the Bishop sitting down, said, Well, I like thee well, for thou labourest well: I trust thou wilt be a good Catholick. My Lord, said he, St. Paul saith, He that doth not labour, is not worthy to eat. Bonner said, Ah, St. Paul is a * great Man with thee. And so after such other Talk, the Bishop wished that Tomkins's Beard was off, saying, that so he would look like a Catholick. My Lord, said Tomkins, before my Beard grew, I was, I trust, a good Christian, and so I trust to be my Beard being on. But Bonner in fine sent for the Barber, and caused his Beard to be shaven off. The very

The Martyrdom of Dr. Taylor who was burnt on Aldham Common.

The Burning of Thomas Tomkins's Hand by Bishop Bonner.

Anno 1555.

Cauſe was, becauſe Bonner had pluck'd off a Piece of his Beard before.

The Rage of this Biſhop was not ſo great againſt him, but his Conſtancy was much greater with Patience to bear it: Who although he had not the Learning as others have, yet he was ſo indued with God's Spirit, and ſo planted in the perfect Knowledge of God's Truth, that by no Means could he be removed from the Confeſſion of Truth to Impiety and Error. Whereupon Biſhop Bonner being greatly vexed againſt the poor Man, when he ſaw that by no Perſuaſions he could prevail with him, deviſed another Practice not ſo ſtrange as cruel, further to try his Conſtancy, to the Intent, that ſeeing he could not by Argument convince him, yet he might overcome him by ſome fore-feeling and Terror of Death. So having with him Mr. Harpsfield, Mr Pembleton, Dr. Chedſey, Mr. Willerton, and others ſtanding by, he called for Thomas Tomkins, who coming before the Biſhop, and ſtanding as he was wont in Defence of his Faith, the Biſhop fell from beating to burning. Who having there a Taper or Wax Candle of three or four Wicks ſtanding upon the Table, thought there to repreſent unto us as it were the old Image of King Porſenna; for as he burned the Hand of Scævola, ſo this catholick Biſhop took Tomkins by the Fingers, and held his Hand directly over the Flame, ſuppoſing that being terrified by the Smart and Pain of the Fire, he would leave off the Defence of the Doctrine which he had received.

Biſhop Bonner burneth Tomkin's Hand with a wax Taper.

Tomkins thinking no otherwiſe but there preſently to die, began to commend himſelf unto the Lord, ſaying, O Lord, into thy Hands I commend my Spirit, &c. In the Time that his Hand was burning, the ſame Tomkins afterward reported to one James Hinſe, that his Spirit was ſo wrapt, that he felt no Pain. In which burning he never ſhrunk, till the Veins ſhrunk, and the Sinews burſt, and the Water did ſpirt in Mr. Harpsfield's Face: Inſomuch that the ſaid Mr. Harpsfield, moved with Pity, deſired the Biſhop to ſtay, ſaying that he had tried him enough. This burning was in the Hall at Fulham.

And where the Biſhop thought by that Means to drive him from his Opinions, it proved much otherwiſe: For this chriſtian Scævola ſo valiantly did deſpiſe, abide, and endure that burning, that we have leſs Cauſe hereafter to marvel at the Manfulneſs of the Roman Scævola: I would to God the other had as well followed the Example of that Hetruſcan Tyrant. For he, after the left Hand of Scævola was half burned, either ſatisfied with his Puniſhment, or overcome by his Manhood, or driven away by Fear, ſent him home ſafe unto his People: Whereas Bonner not contented with the burning of his Hand, reſted not until he had conſumed his whole Body into Aſhes in Smithfield.

But before we come to his Suffering, we will firſt treat of ſome Part of his Examination and Articles, with his Anſwers and Confeſſion thereunto annexed.

The firſt Examination of Thomas Tomkins.

AFTER that Thomas Tomkins had been half a Year in Priſon, about the Eighth of February he was brought with ſeveral others before Biſhop Bonner ſitting in his Conſiſtory, to be examined. To whom firſt was brought forth a certain Bill or Schedule ſubſcribed (as appeareth) with his own Hand, the fifth Day of the ſame Month, containing theſe Words following:

Thomas Tomkins of Shoreditch, and of the Dioceſs of London, hath believed and doth believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is not the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt in Subſtance, but only a Token and Remembrance thereof, the very Body and Blood of Chriſt being only in Heaven, and no where elſe.

By me Thomas Tomkins.

The Confeſſion of Tomkins, ſubſcribed with his own Hand.

Whereupon he was aſked, whether he did acknowledge the ſame Subſcription to be of his owa Hand. To which he granted, confeſſing it ſo to be. This being done, the Biſhop went about to perſuade him, with Words, rather than with Reaſons, to relinquiſh his Opinions, and to return again to the Unity of the catholick Church, promiſing if he would do ſo, to remit all that was paſt. But he conſtantly denied ſo to do. When the Biſhop ſaw he could not ſo convince him, he brought forth and read to him another Writing, containing Articles and Interrogatories, whereunto he ſhould come the next Day and anſwer; in the mean Time he ſhould deliberate with himſelf what to do: And ſo the next Day, at Eight of the Clock in the Morning to be preſent at the ſame Place again, to give his determinate Anſwer what he would do in the Premiſes, and then either to revoke and reclaim himſelf, or elſe in the Afternoon the ſame Day to come again and have Juſtice (as he called it) adminiſtred unto him. The Copy of which Articles here followeth.

Articles objected and adminiſtred againſt Thomas Tomkins, with his own Hand ſubſcribing to the ſame.

THOU doſt believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is not, by the Omnipotent Power of Almighty God, and his holy Word, really, truly and in very Deed, the very true and natural Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, as touching the Subſtance thereof, which was conceived in the Womb of the Virgin Mary, and hanged upon the Croſs, Suffering, Paſſion, and Death there for the Life of the World.

Tranſubſtantiation denied.

I do ſo believe.

Thou doſt believe, that after the Conſecration of the Bread and Wine prepared for the Uſe of the Sacrament of the Altar, there doth remain the Subſtance of material Bread and material Wine, not changed nor altered in Subſtance by the Power of Almighty God, but remaining as it did before.

Subſtance of Bread remained in the Sacrament.

I do ſo believe.

Thou doſt believe, that it is an untrue Doctrine, and a falſe Belief, to think or ſay, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is, after Conſecration of the Bread and Wine, the Subſtance of Chriſt's natural Body and Blood, by the omnipotent Power of Almighty God, and his holy Word.

The natural Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament denied.

I do ſo believe.

Thou doſt believe, that thy Parents, Kinsfolks, Friends and Acquaintance, and alſo thy Godfathers ond Godmothers, and all People did err, and were deceived, if they did believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there was, after Conſecration, the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and that there did not remain the Subſtance of material Bread and Wine.

I do ſo believe.

By me Thomas Tomkins.

The ſecond Examination of Thomas Tomkins.

THE next Day at Eight of the Clock before Noon, the ſaid Thomas Tomkins (according to the former Commandment) was brought again into the Place aforenamed, before the Biſhop and his other Aſſiſtants, where the aforeſaid Articles were propounded unto him: Whereunto he anſwered as followeth:

Anſwer of Tomkins to the Articles.

To the firſt he ſaid, that he did ſo believe, as in the ſame is contained.

To the Second he ſaid, that it was only Bread and a Participation of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion, and ſo do the Scriptures teach.

To the Third he ſaid and did believe, it was a falſe Doctrine, to believe and think as is contained in this Article.

To the Fourth, he did alſo believe the ſame.

After this Anſwer, he did alſo ſubſcribe his Name to the ſaid Articles. Whereupon, the Biſhop drawing out of his Boſom another Confeſſion ſubſcribed with Tomkins's own Hand, and alſo that Article that was the firſt Day objected againſt him, cauſed the ſame to be openly read, and then willed him to revoke and deny his ſaid Opinions; which he utterly refuſed to do; and therefore he was commanded to appear before the Biſhop again in the ſame Place at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon.

The Names of them that ſate upon Thomas Tomkins at this Seſſions were theſe; Edmund Bonner Biſhop of London, John Fecknam Dean of St. Paul's, John Harpsfield Archdeacon of London, John Morven Maſter of Arts, Thomas Morton Parſon of Fulham, Triſtram Swadell, Thomas Moore, Thomas Bekinſaw, James Cline, Clerks.

The laſt Appearance of Thomas Tomkins before Biſhop Bonner and the Commiſſioners.

THE ſame Day and Place at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, he was the laſt Time brought before the Biſhops of London, Bath, and St. David's, with others; where he was earneſtly exhorted by the ſaid Biſhop of Bath to revoke and leave off his Opinions. Unto whom he anſwered, My Lord, I was born and brought up in Ignorance until now of late Years, and now I know the Truth I will continue therein unto Death.

Then Bonner cauſed all his Articles and Confeſſion to be again openly read, and ſo in his accuſtomed Manner perſuaded him to recant. To whom he finally ſaid, My Lord, I cannot ſee but that you would have me forſake the Truth, and to fall into Error and Hereſy. The Biſhop ſeeing he would not recant, did proceed in his Law, and ſo gave Sentence of Condemnation upon him.

Sentence of Condemnation read againſt him

Then he delivered him to the Sheriff of London, who ſtraitway carried him to Newgate, where he remained moſt joyful and conſtant until the 16th of March following: On which Day he was conveyed by the ſaid Sheriff into Smithfield, and there ſealed up his Faith in the flaming Fire, to the Glory of God's holy Name, and Confirmation of the Weak.

Anno 1555.

T. Tomkins burnt in Smithfield, March 16.

The Hiſtory of William Hunter, a young Man of Nineteen Years.

THE 26th of March, the Year aforeſaid, followed the Martyrdom of William Hunter, a pious young Man, nineteen Years of Age, born of good Parents; by whom he was not only inſtructed in true Religion and Piety, but alſo confirmed by them unto Death, after a rare and ſtrange Example, worthy to be noted and had in Admiration by all Parents.

William Hunter, being an Apprentice in London in the firſt Year of Queen Mary, was commanded at the Eaſter next following to receive the Communion at a Maſs, by the Prieſt of the Pariſh where he dwelt, called Coleman-ſtreet; which becauſe he refuſed to do, he was very much threatned that he ſhould be therefore brought before the Biſhop of London. Wherefore William Hunter's Maſter, one Thomas Taylor a Silk Weaver, required William Hunter to go and depart from him, leſt that he ſhould come in Danger becauſe of him, if he continued in his Houſe. For which Cauſe, William Hunter took leave of his ſaid Maſter, and went to Burntwood where his Father dwelt, with whom he afterward remained about the Space of half a Quarter of a Year.

W. Hunter Apprentice in Coleman-ſtreet with Mr. Taylor.

His Maſter deſires him to depart from him.

He takes leave of his Maſter, and goes to his Father to Burntwood.

After this it happened within five or ſix Weeks, that William going into the Chappel of Burntwood, and finding there a Bible lying on a Deſk, did read therein. In the mean Time there came in one Father Atwell a Sumner, who hearing William read in the Bible, ſaid to him, Why meddleſt thou with the Bible? Knoweſt thou what thou readeſt? and canſt thou expound the Scriptures?

Talk between Father Atwell and W. Hunter concerning the Bible.

To whom William anſwered and ſaid, Father Atwell, I take not upon me to expound the Scriptures, except I were diſpenſed withal; but finding the Bible here when I came, read in it to my Comfort. To whom Father Atwell ſaid, It was never merry World ſince the Bible came abroad in Engliſh.

To which Words William anſwered, ſaying, Father Atwell, ſay not ſo for God's Sake: For it is God's Book, out of which every one that hath Grace may learn to know both what Things pleaſe God, and alſo what diſpleaſeth him. Then ſaid Father Atwell, Could we not tell before this Time as well as now, how God was ſerved? William anſwered, No, Father Atwell, nothing ſo well, as we may now, if that we might have his bleſſed Word amongſt us ſtill as we have had. It is true, ſaid Father Atwell, if it be as you ſay.

Well, ſaid William Hunter, it pleaſeth me very well, and I pray God that we may have the bleſſed Bible amongſt us continually. To which Words Father Atwell ſaid, I perceive your Mind well enough, you are one of them that miſliketh the Queen's Laws; and therefore you came from London, I hear ſay: You learned theſe Ways at London. But for all that, ſaid Father Atwell, you muſt turn another Leaf, or elſe you, and a great many more Hereticks will broil broil for it, I warrant you. To which Words William ſaid, God give me Grace, that I may believe his Word, and confeſs his Name, whatſoever come thereof. Confeſs his Name! quoth old Atwell; No, no, ye will go to the Devil all of you, and confeſs his Name.

Anno 1555.

Father Atwell not able to reaſon, but he is able to accuſe the Innocent.

What! ſaid William, you ſay not well Father Atwell: At which Words he went out of the Chappel in a great Fury, ſaying, I am not able to reaſon with thee: But I will fetch one ſtraightway which ſhall talk with thee, I warrant thee, thou Heretick. And he leaving William Hunter reading in the Bible, immediately brought one Thomas Wood, who was then Vicar of Southwell, which was at an Ale-houſe over againſt the ſaid Chappel; who hearing old Atwell ſay, that William Hunter was reading of the Bible in the Chappel, came by and by to him, and finding him reading in the Bible, took the Matter very heinouſly, ſaying; Sirrah, who gave thee Leave to read in the Bible, and to expound it?

The Vicar of Southwell angry with W. Hunter for reading in the Bible.

Then William anſwered, I expound not the Scriptures, Sir, but read them for my Comfort. What meddleſt thou with them at all, ſaid the Vicar? It becometh not thee, nor none ſuch to meddle with the Scriptures.

But William anſwered, I will read the Scriptures, God willing, while I live; and you ought, Maſter Vicar, not to diſcourage any Man for that Matter, but rather exhort Men diligently to read the Scriptures for your Diſcharge and their own.

Unto which the Vicar reply'd, It becometh thee well to tell me what I have to do. I ſee thou art an Heretick by thy Words. William ſaid, I am no Heretick for ſpeaking the Truth. But the Vicar ſaid, It is a merry World when ſuch as thou art ſhall teach us what is the Truth. Thou art medling, Father Atwell tells me, with the Sixth of John, wherein thou mayſt perceive how Chriſt ſaith, Except that ye eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you. William ſaid, I read the Sixth of St. John indeed; howbeit, I made no Expoſition on it.

The Papiſts in no wiſe will be controuled.

Then ſaid Father Atwell, When you read it, I ſaid, that you there might underſtand how that in the Sacrament of the Altar is Chriſt's very natural Body and Blood; unto which you anſwered, how that you would take the Scriptures as they are, and that you would meddle with no great Expoſition, except that ye were diſpenſed withal.

W. Hunter examined of the Sacrament.

Ah, ſaid the Vicar, What ſay you to the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? Believeſt thou not in it, and that the Bread and Wine is tranſubſtantiated into the very Body and Blood of Chriſt? William anſwered, I learn no ſuch Thing in the Sixth of John as you ſpeak of. Why, ſaid the Vicar, doſt thou not believe in the Sacrament of the Altar? I believe, ſaid William Hunter, all that God's Word teacheth. Why, ſaid the Vicar, thou mayſt learn this which I ſay, plainly in the Sixth of John.

Then ſaid William, You underſtand Chriſt's Words much like the carnal Capernaites, which thought, that Chriſt would have given them his Fleſh to feed upon: Which Opinion our Saviour Chriſt corrected, where he ſaid, The Words which I ſpeak to you, are Spirit and Life.

Hereſy miſtaken with the Papiſts.

Now, quoth the Vicar, I have found you out: Now I ſee that thou art an Heretick indeed, and that thou doſt not believe in the Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid William Hunter, whereas you doubt my Belief, I would it were tried whether that you or I would ſtand faſter in our Faith. Yea, thou Heretick, ſaid the Vicar, wouldſt thou have it ſo tried? William Hunter anſwered, That which you call Hereſy, I ſerve my Lord God withal.

Then ſaid the Vicar, Canſt thou ſerve God with Hereſy? But William anſwered, I would that you and I were even now faſt tied to a Stake, to prove whether that I or you would ſtand ſtrongeſt to our Faith. But the Vicar anſwered, It ſhall not be ſo tried. No, quoth William, I think ſo; for if I might, I think I know who would ſooneſt recant; for I durſt ſet my Foot againſt yours, even to Death. That we ſhall ſee, quoth the Vicar, and ſo they departed; the Vicar threatning William much, how that he would complain of him; with other Communication which they had together.

The Vicar complaineth to Juſtice Brown of William Hunter.

Immediately after, this Vicar of Welde told Mr. Brown of the Communication which William Hunter and he had together. Which when Mr. Brown underſtood, immediately he ſent for William's Father and the Conſtable, one Robert Salmon. For immediately after William Hunter and the Vicar had reaſoned together, he took his Leave of his Father and fled, becauſe Wood the Vicar threatned him. Now when the Conſtable and William's Father were come, and were before Mr. Brown, he asked where William Hunter was. His Father anſwered, ſaying, If it pleaſe you, Sir, I know not were he is gone: No, quoth Maſter Brown? I will make thee tell where he is, and fetch him forth alſo e're I done with thee. Sir, ſaid William's Father, I know not where he is, nor where to ſeek for him.

Juſtice Brown ſendeth for Hunter's Father.

Then ſaid Mr. Brown, Why didſt thou not bring him when thou hadſt him? I promiſe thee if thou wilt not fetch him, I will ſend thee to Priſon, till I ſhall get him. Wherefore ſee that thou promiſe me to fetch him, or elſe it is not beſt to look me in the Face any more, nor you to reſt in Burntwood. Well, quoth Mr. Brown to William's Father, ſee that thou ſeek him forth, and bring him to me.

An unreaſonable Requeſt of Juſtice Brown.

William's Father anſwered, Sir, would you have me ſeek my Son to be burned? If thou bring him to me, quoth Mr. Brown, I will deal well enough for that Matter, thou ſhalt not need to care for the Matter. Fetch him, and thou ſhalt ſee what I will do for him. Moreover, if thou lackeſt Money, quoth he, thou ſhalt have ſome, and bade the Conſtable Mr. Salmon to give him a Crown, but William's Father would not take it. Howbeit Mr. Brown would never reſt, till William's Father had promiſed him to ſeek out his Son. And thus Mr. Brown ſent the Conſtable Home again, and William's Father, commanding him to ſeek out his Son, and then come again and bring him to him.

The Father pretends to ſeek the Son.

The Son meeteth with him in the Way.

After that old Father Hunter had rode two or three Days Journey to ſatisfy Mr. Brown's Expectation, it happened that William met with his Father in the High-way as he travelled, and he firſt ſeeing his Father, came to him and ſpake to him, and told him, that he thought he ſought for him: And then his Father confeſſing it, wept ſore, and ſaid, that Mr. Brown charged him to ſeek him, and bring him to him; Howbeit, ſaid he, I will return Home again, and ſay I cannot find you. But William ſaid, Father, I will go Home with you, and ſave you harmleſs, whatſoever cometh of it.

The working of Nature between the Father and Son.

And thus they came Home together; but William, as ſoon as he was come Home, was taken by the ſaid Conſtable, and laid in the Stocks till the Day. Mr. Brown hearing that William Hunter was come Home, ſent for him to the Conſtable, who brought him immediately to Mr. Brown.

Now

W. Hunter brought before Juſtice Brown.

Now when William' was come, Mr. Brown ſaid to him, Ah Sirrah, are ye come? and then by and by he commanded the Bible to be brought, and opened it, and then began to reaſon with William on this Manner, ſaying, I hear ſay you are a Scripture-man, and can reaſon much of the Sixth of John, and expound as pleaſeth you; and turned the Bible to the Sixth of St. John, and then he laid to his Charge what an Expoſition he made, when the Vicar and he talked together. And William ſaid, He urged me to ſay ſo much as I did.

Talk between W. Hunter and Juſtice Brown about the Sacrament.

Well, quoth Mr. Brown, becauſe you can expound that Place ſo well, how ſay you to another Place, turning to the 22d. of St. Luke? and Mr. Brown ſaid, Look here, for Chriſt ſaith, that the Bread is his Body.

To which William anſwered, The Text ſaith, how Chriſt took Bread, but not that he changed it into another Subſtance, but gave that which he took, and brake that which he gave, which was Bread, as is evident by the Text: For elſe he ſhould have had two Bodies, which to affirm I ſee no Reaſon, ſaid William.

At which Anſwer Mr. Brown was very angry, and took up the Bible, and turned the Leaves, and then flung it down again in ſuch a Fury, that William could not well find the Place again whereof they reaſoned.

Then Mr. Brown ſaid, Thou naughty Boy, wilt thou not take Things as they are, but expound them as thou wilt? Doth not Chriſt call the Bread his Body plainly, and thou wilt not believe, that the Bread is his Body after the Conſecration? Thou goeſt about to make Chriſt a Lyar.

But William Hunter anſwered, I mean not ſo, Sir, but rather more earneſtly to ſearch what the Mind of Chriſt is in that holy Inſtitution, wherein he commendeth unto us the Remembrance of his Death, Paſſion, Reſurrection, and coming again, ſaying, This do in the Remembrance of me. And alſo though Chriſt call the Bread his Body, as he doth alſo ſay that he is a Vine, a Door, &c. yet is not his Body turned into Bread, no more than he is turned into a Door or Vine. Wherefore Chriſt called the Bread his Body by a Figure.

How Chriſt called Bread his Body.

Juſtice Brown in a Rage.

At that Word Mr. Brown ſaid, Thou art a Villain indeed. Wilt thou make Chriſt a Lyar yet ſtill? And was in ſuch a Fury with William, and raged ſo, that William could not ſpeak a Word, but he croſſed him, and ſcoffed at every Word. Wherefore William ſeeing him in ſuch Fury, deſired him that he would either hear him quietly, and ſuffer him to anſwer for himſelf, or elſe ſend him away. To which Mr. Brown anſwered, Indeed I will ſend thee to Morrow to my Lord of London, and he ſhall have thee under Examination: And thus left off the Talk, and wrote a Letter immediately, and ſent William Hunter with the Conſtable to Bonner Biſhop of London, who received William.

Mr. Brown ſendeth up W. Hunter to Biſhop Bonner.

After that he had read the Letter, and the Conſtable returned Home again, the Biſhop cauſed William to be brought into a Chamber, where he began to reaſon with him in this Manner: I underſtand William Hunter, quoth he, by Mr. Brown's Letter, how that you have had certain Communication with the Vicar of Welde, about the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and how that ye could not agree; whereupon Mr. Brown ſent for thee to bring thee to the Catholick Faith, from which, he ſaith, that thou art gone. Howbeit if thou wilt be ruled by me, thou ſhalt have no harm for any thing that thou haſt ſaid or done in this Matter.

Bonner's Words to W. Hunter.

William anſwered, ſaying; I am not fallen from the Catholick Faith of Chriſt, I am ſure, but do believe it, and confeſs it with all my Heart.

Why, quoth the Biſhop, how ſayeſt thou to the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? Wilt thou not recant thy Saying, which thou confeſſedſt before Mr. Brown, how that Chriſt's Body is not in the Sacrament of the Altar, the ſame that was born of the Virgin Mary?

To which William anſwered, ſaying, My Lord, I underſtand that Mr. Brown hath certified you of the Talk which he and I had together, and thereby ye know what I ſaid to him, which I will not recant by God's Help. Then ſaid the Biſhop, I think thou art aſhamed to bear a Faggot, and recant openly; but if thou wilt recant thy Sayings, I will promiſe thee that thou ſhalt not be put to open Shame: But ſpeak the Word here now between me and thee, and I will promiſe thee it ſhall go no further, and thou ſhalt go Home again without any hurt.

Bonner's fair Promiſes to Hunter.

William anſwered and ſaid, My Lord, if you will let me alone, and leave me to my Conſcience, I will go to my Father and dwell with him, or elſe with my Maſter again, and ſo if no Body will diſquiet nor trouble my Conſcience, I will keep my Conſcience to myſelf.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, I am content, ſo that thou wilt go to the Church, and receive, and go to Confeſſion, and ſo continue a good Catholick Chriſtian. No, quoth William, I will not do ſo for all the good in the World.

Then, quoth the Biſhop, if you will not do ſo, I will make you ſure enough, I warrant you. Well, quoth William, you can do no more than God will permit you. Well, quoth the Biſhop, wilt thou not recant indeed by no Means? No, quoth William, never while I live, God willing.

W. Hunter refuſes to recant.

Then the Biſhop (this Talk ended) commanded his Men to put William in the Stocks in his Gate-houſe, where he ſate two Days and Nights, only with a Cruſt of brown Bread and a Cup of Water.

Bonner commandeth Will. Hunter to the Stocks, where he ſate two Days and two Nights, only with a Cruſt of Bread and a Cup of Water.

At the two Days End the Biſhop came to him, and finding the Cup of Water and the Cruſt of Bread ſtill by him upon the Stocks, ſaid to his Men; Take him out of the Stocks, and let him break his Faſt with you. Then they let him forth of the Stocks, but would not ſuffer him to eat with them, but called him Heretick. And he ſaid, he was as loth to be in their Company, as they were to be in his.

After Breakfaſt the Biſhop ſent for William, and demanded whether he would recant or no. But William made him Anſwer, how that he would never recant that which he had confeſſed before Men, as concerning his Faith in Chriſt.

Then the Biſhop ſaid that he was no Chriſtian, but he denied the Faith in which he was baptized. But William anſwered, I was baptized in the Faith of the Holy Trinity, which I will not go from, God aſſiſting me with his Grace.

Hunter ſent to Priſon and loaded with Irons.

Then the Biſhop ſent him to the Convict Priſon, and commanded the Keeper to lay Irons upon him as many as he could bear; and moreover aſked him, how old he was; and William ſaid that he was nineteen Years of Age.

Well, ſaid the Biſhop, you will be burned e'er you be twenty Years old, if you will not yield yourſelf better than you have done yet. William anſwered, God ſtrengthen me in his Truth: And then he parted, and the Biſhop allowing him a Halfpenny a Day to live on in Bread and Drink.

Thus

Anno 1555.

Thus he continued in Priſon three Quarters of a Year. In which Time he had been before the Biſhop five Times, beſides the Time when he was condemned in the Conſiſtory in St. Paul's the ninth Day of February; at which Time his Brother Robert Hunter was preſent, when and where I heard the Biſhop condemn him and five others.

Theſe five were Tomkins, Pigot, Knight, Hauks, and Lanrence.

And then the Biſhop called William, aſked him if he would recant, and ſo read to him his Examination and Confeſſion, as is above rehearſed; and then rehearſed how that William confeſſed that he did believe, that he received Chriſt's Body ſpiritually, when he did receive the Communion. Doſt thou mean, quoth the Biſhop, that the Bread is Chriſt's Body ſpiritually?

William anſwered, I mean not ſo, but rather when I receive the holy Communion rightly and worthily, I do feed upon Chriſt ſpiritually through Faith in my Soul, and am made Partaker of all the Benefits which Chriſt hath brought unto all Faithful Believers through his precious Death, Paſſion, and Reſurrection, and not that the Bread is his Body, either ſpiritually or corporally.

Then ſaid the Biſhop to William, Doſt thou not think (holding up his Cap) that for Example here of my Cap, thou may'ſt ſee the Squareneſs and Colour of it, and yet that not to be the Subſtance, which thou judgeſt by the Accidents?

William anſwered, If you can ſeparate the Accidents from the Subſtance, and ſhew me the Subſtance without the Accidents, I could believe. Then ſaid the Biſhop, Thou wilt not believe that God can do any thing above Man's Capacity. Yes, ſaid William, I muſt needs believe that; for daily Experience teacheth all Men that Thing plainly: But our Queſtion is not what God can do, but what he will have us to learn in his holy Supper.

Then the Biſhop ſaid, I always have found thee at this Point, and I ſee no Hope in thee to reclaim thee unto the catholick Faith, but thou wilt continue a corrupt Member, and then pronounced Sentence upon him, how that he ſhould go from that Place to Newgate for a Time, and ſo from thence to Burntwood, where, ſaid he, thou ſhalt be burned.

Then the Biſhop called for another, and ſo when he had condemned them all, he called for William Hunter, and reaſoned with him, ſaying, if thou wilt yet recant, I will make thee a Freeman in the City, and give thee forty Pound in good Money to ſet up thine Occupation withal; or I will make thee Steward of my Houſe, and ſet thee in Office; for I like thee well, thou haſt Wit enough, and I will prefer thee if thou recant.

The large Offer of Biſhop Bonner to William Hunter.

But William anſwered, I thank you for your great Offers: Notwithſtanding, my Lord, ſaid he, if you cannot perſuade my Conſcience with Scriptures, I cannot find in my Heart to turn from God for the Love of the World; for I count all worldly Things but Loſs and Dung, in reſpect of the Love of Chriſt.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, if thou dieſt in this Mind thou art condemned for ever. William anſwered, God judgeth righteouſly, and juſtifieth them whom Man condemneth unjuſtly.

W. Hunter ſent down to Burntwood to be burnt.

Thus William and the Biſhop departed, William and the reſt to Newgate, where they remained about a Month, who afterward were ſent down, William to Burntwood, and the others into divers Places of the Country. Now when William was come down to Burntwood, which was the Saturday before the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary that followed on the Monday after, William remained till the Tueſday after, becauſe they would not put him to Death then, for the Holineſs of the Day.

In the mean Time William's Father and Mother came to him, and deſired heartily of God that he might continue to the End in that good Way which he had begun, and his Mother ſaid to him, that ſhe was glad that ever ſhe was ſo happy to bear ſuch a Child, which could find in his Heart to loſe his Life for Chriſt's Name's Sake.

His Father and Mother exhort him to be conſtant.

Then William ſaid to his Mother, for my little Pain I ſhall ſuffer, which will ſoon be at an End, Chriſt hath promiſed me, Mother, ſaid he, a Crown of Joy; may you not be glad of that? With that his Mother kneeled down on her Knees, ſaying, I pray God ſtrengthen thee, my Son, to the End: Yea, I think thee as well beſtowed as any Child that ever I bare.

At which Words Mr. Higbed took her in his Arms, ſaying, I rejoice (and ſo ſaid the others) to ſee you in this Mind, and you have a good Cauſe to rejoice. And his Father and Mother both ſaid, that they always were of that Mind, and praying for him, that as he had begun to confeſs Chriſt before Men, he might likewiſe continue ſo to the End. William's Father ſaid, I was afraid of nothing but that my Son ſhould have been killed in the Priſon by Hunger and Cold, the Biſhop was ſo hard to him. But William confeſſed, after a Month that his Father was charged with his Board, that he lacked nothing, but had Meat and Cloathing enough, yea even out of the Court, both Money, Meat, Cloaths, Wood, and Coals, and all Things neceſſary.

Mark here whether Bonner did nothing but by the Law.

Thus they continued in their Inn, being the Swan in Burntwood, whither reſorted many People of the Country, to ſee thoſe good Men which were there; and many of William's Acquaintance came to him, and reaſoned with him, and he with them, exhorting them to come away from the Abomination of popiſh Superſtition and Idolatry.

Thus paſſing away Saturday, Sunday and Monday, on Monday at Night it happened, that William had a Dream, wich was this: That he was at the Place where the Stake was pitch'd, where he ſhould be burned, which (as he thought in his Dream) was at the Town's End where the Butts ſtood, which was ſo indeed; and alſo he dreamed, that he met with his Father as he went to the Stake, and alſo that there was a Prieſt at the Stake, who went about to have him recant. To whom he ſaid (as he thought in his Dream) Away falſe Prophet; that he exhorted the People to beware of him, and ſuch as he was: Which Things came to paſs indeed. It happened that William made a Noiſe to himſelf in his Dream, which cauſed Mr. Higbed and the others to awake him out of his Sleep, to know what he wanted. When he awaked, he told them his Dream in order as is ſaid.

W. Hunter led to the Place of Martyrdom.

Next Morning the Sheriff Mr. Brocket called to ſet forward to the burning of William Hunter; and the Sheriff's Son came to him, and embraced him in his Right Arm, ſaying, William, be not afraid of theſe Men which are here preſent with Bows, Bills and Weapons, ready prepared to bring you to the Place where you ſhall be burned. To whom he replied, I thank God I am not afraid; for I have reckoned what it will coſt me already. Then the Sheriff's Son could ſpeak no more to him for weeping.

William Hunter then plucked up his Gown, and went forward chearfully, the Sheriff's Servant taking him by one Arm, and his Brother by another; and going along he met with his Father according to his Dream, and he ſpake to his Son weeping, God be with thee, Son William.

His Words to his Father.

And William ſaid, God be with you, good Father, and be of good Comfort; for I hope we ſhall meet again when we ſhall be merry. His Father ſaid, I hope ſo, William, and ſo departed. He then went to the Place where the Stake ſtood, even according to his Dream, where all Things were not ready; and taking a wet Broom Faggot, he kneeled down thereon, and read the fifty firſt Pſalm, till he came to theſe Words, The Sacrifice of God is a contrite Spirit, a contrite and a broken Heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe.

Then ſaid Mr. Tyrill of the Braches, called William Tyrill, Thou lieſt, ſaid he, thou readeſt falſe; for the Words are an humble Spirit. But William ſaid, The Tranſlation ſaith a contrite Heart. Yea, quoth Mr. Tyrill, the Tranſlation is falſe, ye tranſlate Books as ye pleaſe yourſelves, like Hereticks. Well, quoth William, there is no great difference in thoſe Words. Then ſaid the Sheriff, Here is a Letter from the Queen: If thou wilt recant thou ſhalt live; if not, thou ſhalt be burned. No, quoth William, I will not recant, God willing. William then roſe up and went to the Stake, and ſtood upright to it. When came one Richard Ponde a Bailiff, and made the Chain faſt about William.

W. Hunter refuſeth the Queen's Pardon.

Then ſaid Mr. Brown, Here is not Wood enough to burn a Leg of him: then ſaid William, Good People pray for me; and make ſpeed and diſpatch me quickly: And pray for me while you ſee me alive, good People, and I will pray for you likewiſe.

No, quoth Mr. Brown, pray for thee, I will pray no more for thee, than I will pray for a Dog. To whom William anſwered, Mr. Brown, now you have that which you ſought for, and I pray God it be not laid to your Charge in the laſt Day; howbeit I forget you. Then Mr. Brown ſaid, I aſk no Forgiveneſs of thee. Well, ſaid William, if God forgive you, I ſhall not require my Blood at your Hands.

Then ſaid William, Son of God ſhine upon me; and immediately the Sun in the Element ſhone out of a dark Cloud ſo full in his Face, that he was conſtrained to look another Way; whereat the People muſed, becauſe it was ſo dark a little Time afore. Then William took up a Faggot of Broom, and embraced it in his Arms.

The End and Martyrdom of W. Hunter, March 26.

Then the Prieſt, which William dreamed of, came to his Brother Robert with a Popiſh Book to carry to William, that he might recant, which Book his Brother would not meddle withal.

William then ſeeing the Prieſt, and perceiving how he would have ſhewed him the Book, ſaid, Away thou falſe Prophet. Beware of them, good People, and come away from their Abominations, leſt that you be Partakers of their Plagues. Then the Prieſt ſaid, look how thou burneſt here, ſo ſhalt thou burn in Hell. William anſwered, Thou lieſt thou falſe Prophet; away thou falſe Prophet away.

Hunter's Words to a Popiſh Prieſt.

There was a Gentleman preſent which ſaid, I pray God have Mercy upon his Soul. The People ſaid, Amen, Amen. Immediately the Fire was made.

Then William caſt his Pſalter into his Brother's Hand, who ſaid, William, think on the holy Paſſion of Chriſt, and be not afraid of Death.

Hunter comforted by his Brother Robert.

And William anſwer'd, I am not afraid. Then lift he up his Hands to Heaven, and ſaid, Lord, Lord, Lord, receive my Spirit; and caſting down his Head again into the ſmothering Smoak, he yielded up his Life for the Truth, ſealing it with his Blood to the Praiſe of God. Anno 1555.

The Hiſtory of Mr. Higbed and Mr. Cauſton, who were burned in Eſſex, March 26. 1555.

Although the Condemnation of Mr. Higbed and Mr. Cauſton followed after the Condemnation of thoſe Martyrs who were condemned with Tomkins and Hunter above mentioned, yet becauſe the Time of their Execution was before the Burning of the aforeſaid four Martyrs, ſuffering the ſame Day that William Hunter did, which was the twenty ſixth of March, I thought fit therefore here to place the ſame.

This Mr. Higbed and Mr. Cauſton, two worſhipful Gentlemen in the County of Eſſex, the one at Hornden on the Hill, the other of the Pariſh of Thundurſt, being zealous and religious in the true Service of God; as they could not diſſemble with the Lord their God, nor flatter with the World, ſo in time of blind Superſtition and wretched Idolatry, they could not long lye hid and obſcure in ſuch a Number of malignant Adverſaries, Accuſers, and Servants of this World, but at length they were perceived, and diſcovered to the aforeſaid Edmund Bonner Biſhop of London, by whoſe Command they were committed to the Officers of Colcheſter to be ſafely kept, and with them alſo a Servant of Thomas Cauſton, who was nothing inferiour to his Maſter in true Piety.

Mr. Higbed and Mr. Cauſton detected to Bonner.

Biſhop Bonner perceiving theſe two Gentlemen to be of good Eſtate, and of great Eſtimation in that Country, leſt any Tumult ſhould thereby ariſe, came thither himſelf, accompanied with Mr. Fecknam and ſeveral others, thinking to reclaim them to his Religion.

Biſhop Bonner goeth to Colcheſter.

In fine, when nothing could prevail to make them aſſent to their Doings, at length they came to this Point, that they required certain Reſpite to conſult with themſelves what was beſt to do. Which time of Deliberation being expired, and they remaining ſtill conſtant in their profeſſed Doctrine, and ſetting out alſo their Confeſſion in writing, the Biſhop ſeeing no good to be done in tarrying any longer there, departed thence, and carried them both with him to London, and with them certain other Priſoners alſo, who about the ſame Time were apprehended in thoſe Parts.

Mr. Higbed and Mr. Cauſton carried to London.

It was not long after this, but theſe Priſoners being at London committed to ſtrait Priſon, and there attempted ſundry Ways by the Biſhop and his Chaplains to revoke their Opinions; at length when no Perſuaſions would ſerve, they were brought forth to open Examination at the Conſiſtory in St. Paul's, February 17, 1555. where they were demanded as well by the ſaid Biſhop, as alſo by the Biſhop of Bath and others, whether they would recant their Errors and perverſe Doctrine, as they termed it, and ſo come to the Unity of the Popiſh Church. But on their refuſing ſo to do, the Biſhop aſſigned them to appear again the next Day, being the 18th of February.

On which Day, among many other Things, he read unto them ſeverally certain Articles, and gave them reſpite until the next Day to anſwer Anno 1555. unto the ſame, and ſo committed them again to Priſon. The Copy of which Articles hereunder followeth.

Articles laid by Biſhop Bonner to Mr. Higbed and Cauſton.

Firſt, That thou Thomas Cauſton (or Thomas Higbed) haſt been and art of the Dioceſs of London, and alſo of the Juriſdiction now of me Edmund Biſhop of London.

Item, That thou waſt in time paſt, according to the Order of the Church of Englund, baptied and chriſtened.

Item, That thou hadſt Godfathers and Godmother, according to the ſaid Order.

Item, That the ſaid Godfathers and Godmother did then promiſe for thee, and in thy Name, the Faith and Religion that then was uſed in the Realm of England.

Item, That that Faith and Religion which they did profeſs and make for thee, was accounted and taken to be the Faith and Religion of the Church, and of the Chriſtian People: And ſo it was in very deed.

Item, Thou coming to the Age of Diſcretion, that is to ſay, to the Age of fourteen Years, didſt not miſlike nor diſallow that Faith, that Religion, or Promiſe then uſed and approved, and promiſed by the ſaid Godfathers and Godmother, but for a Time didſt continue in it, as others (taking themſelves for chriſtian People) did likewiſe.

Item, That at that Time, and alſo before, it was taken for a Doctrine of the Church, Catholick and True, and every where in Chriſtendom then allowed for Catholick and True, and to be the Profeſſion of chriſtan Men, to believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, after the Conſecration, there was and is by the omnipotent Power and Will of Almighty God, and his Word, without any Subſtance of Bread and Wine there remaining, the True and Natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt in Subſtance, which was born of the Virgin Mary, and ſuffered upon the Croſs, really, truly, and in very Deed.

Item, That at that Time thy Father and Mother, all thine Anceſtors, all thy Kindred, Acquaintance and Friends, and thy ſaid Godfathers and Godmother did then ſo believe, and think in all the ſame as the ſaid Church did therein believe.

Item, That thyſelf haſt had no juſt Cauſe or lawful Ground to depart or ſwerve from the ſaid Religion or Faith, nor any Occaſion at all, except thou wilt follow and believe the erroneous Opinion or Belief, that hath been againſt the common Order of the Church, brought in by certain diſordered Perſons of late, at the uttermoſt within theſe thirty or forty Years laſt paſt.

Item, That thou doſt know, or credibly haſt heard, and doſt believe, that Dr. Robert Barnes, John Frith, Thomas Gerrard, Hierome Laſſels, Anne Aſkew, John Hooper late Biſhop of Glouceſter, Sir Laurence Saunders Prieſt, John Bradford, Sir John Rogers Prieſt, Sir Rowland Taylor Prieſt, Sir John Laurence Prieſt, William Pigot, Stephen Knight, William Hunter, Thomas Tomkins, and Thomas Haukes, have been heretofore reputed, taken, and accounted as Hereticks, and alſo condemned as Hereticks, and ſo pronounced openly and manifeſtly; eſpecially in holding and believing certain damnable Opinions, againſt the Verity of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar, and all the ſame Perſons, ſaving John Bradford, Sir John Laurence, W. Pigot, Stephen Knight, W. Hunter, Thomas Tomkins, and Thomas Haukes, have ſuffered Pains of Death by Fire, for the Maintenance and Defence of their ſaid Opinions and miſbelief.

Alſo Sir Edmund Bonner, Prieſt, before the Death of Cromwel, to be of that Opinion, and was ſworn twice againſt the Pope.

Item, That thou doſt know, or credibly haſt heard, and doſt believe, that Thomas Cranmer late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Nicholas Ridley, naming himſelf Biſhop of London, Robert Ferrar late Biſhop of St. David's, and Hugh Latimer ſometime Biſhop of Worceſter, have been, and are at this preſent reputed, accounted, and taken as Hereticks and Miſbelievers, in maintaining and holding certain damnable Opinions againſt the Verity of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar.

Verity taken for Hereſy by miſbeleving Hereticks.

Item, That thou haſt commended and praiſed all the ſaid Perſons ſo erring and believing, (or at leaſtwiſe ſome of them) ſecretly, and alſo openly, taking and believing them to be faithful and catholick People, and their ſaid Opinions to be good and true, and the ſame to the beſt and uttermoſt of thy Power thou haſt allowed, maintained and defended at ſundry Times.

Item, That thou having heard, known and underſtood all the Premiſſes thus to be as is aforeſaid, haſt not regarded all or any Part thereof, but contrary to the ſame and every Part thereof, haſt attempted and done, condemning, tranſgreſſing, and breaking the Promiſe, Faith, Religion, Order and Cuſtom aforeſaid, and haſt become, and art an Heretick and Miſbeliever in the Premiſſes, denying the Verity of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar, and obſtinately affirming, That the Subſtance of the materal Bread and Wine are there remaining, and that the Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, taken of the Virgin Mary, are not there in the ſaid Sacrament really and truly being.

Item, That all the Premiſſes be true, notorious, famous and manifeſt, and that upon all the ſame, there have and be amongſt the ſaid good People of the City of London, and Dioceſs of the ſame, in great Multitude, commonly and publickly, a common and publick Fame and Opinion, and alſo in all Places where thou haſt been, within the ſaid Dioceſs of London.

Theſe Articles being given to them in Writing by the Biſhop, the next day following was aſſigned to them to give up and exhibit their Anſwers unto the ſame.

On the firſt Day of March the ſaid Thomas Cauſton and Thomas Higbed, Gentlemen, being brought before the Biſhop in the Conſiſtory, they there exhibited their Anſwers to the Articles aforeſaid; the Tenor of which Anſwers here followeth:

The Anſwers of Thomas Cauſton and Thomas Higbed, to the foreſaid Articles.

To the Firſt, they anſwer and confeſs the ſame to be true.

To the Second, they anſwer and believe the ſame to be true.

To the Third, they anſwer and believe the ſame to be true.

To the Fourth, they anſwer and think the ſame to be true.

To the Fifth, until this Clauſe [and ſo was it in very Deed] they anſwer and believe the ſame to be true. And unto that Clauſe [and ſo was it in very Deed] they anſwer negatively, and believe that it was not in very Deed.

To the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth, they anſwer and believe the ſame to be true.

To the Ninth, they anſwer and ſay, that they think they have a juſt and lawful Cauſe and Ground to ſwerve and go from the ſaid Faith and Religion, becauſe they have now read more Scripture, Scripture, than either themſelves, or their Parents and Kinsfolk, Godfathers or Godmothers have read or ſeen heretofore in that Behalf.

To the Tenth, they anſwer, ſay, and believe, that the ſaid Perſons articulate have been named, taken, and counted for Hereticks, and ſo condemned for Hereticks; yet about three Years paſt, they were taken for good chriſtian Perſons. And foraſmuch as theſe Reſpondents did never hear them preach concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, they ſay that they preached well, in that they ſaid and preached that Chriſt is not preſent really and truly in the Sacrament, but that there is remaining the Subſtance of Bread and Wine.

Tranſubſtantiation denied.

To the Eleventh, they anſwer and ſay, that howſoever other Folks do repute and take the ſaid Perſons articulate, yet theſe Reſpondents themſelves did never, nor yet do ſo account and take them. And further they ſay, that in caſe the ſaid Perſons articulate named in this Article have preached, that in the Sacrament of the Altar is very material Wine, and not the Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood under the Forms of Bread and Wine, when they preached well and truly, and theſe Reſpondents themſelves do ſo believe.

To the Twelfth, they anſwer and ſay, that where other Folk have diſpraiſed the ſaid Perſons articulate, and diſallowed their Opinions, theſe Reſpondents (for ought that they at any Time have heard) did like and allow the ſaid Perſons, and their Sayings.

To the Thirteenth, they anſwer and ſay, that they have not broken or condemned any Promiſe made by their Godfathers and Godmothers for them at their Baptiſm, and that they are no Hereticks nor Miſbelievers, in that they believe that there remaineth only Bread and Wine in the Sacrament of the Altar, and that Chriſt's natural Body is not there, but in Heaven; for they ſay, that the Scriptures ſo teach them.

To the Fourteenth, they anſwer and believe, that the Premiſſes before by them confeſſed be true, notorious, and manifeſt.

After theſe Anſwers exhibited and peruſed, the Biſhop ſpake unto them after this Sort, beginning firſt with Thomas Cauſton: Becauſe ye ſhall not be ſuddenly trapped, and that Men ſhall not ſay that I go about to ſeek Snares to put you away: I have hitherto reſpited you, that you ſhould weigh and conſider with yourſelf your State and Condition; and that you ſhould, while ye have Time and Space, acknowledge the Truth, and return to the Unity of the catholick Church. Then the Biſhop, reading their former Articles and Anſwers to the ſame, aſked them if they would recant: Which when they had denied, they were again diſmiſſed, and commanded to appear the Wedneſday after, at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, there to receive their definitive Sentence: Which (as it ſeemeth) was yet deferred.

Another Examination of Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed.

THE next Friday, being the Eighth Day of March, the ſaid Thomas Cauſton was firſt called to Examination before the Biſhop, Mr. Fecknam and Dr. Stempe being in his Palace, and there had read unto him his aforeſaid Articles with his Anſwers thereunto, and after ſome Exhortations to recant his former Profeſſion, and to be conformable to the Unity of their Church, they promiſed him, (ſo doing) willingly to receive him again thereunto. To whom he anſwered, you go about to catch us in Snares and Gins. But mark, by what Meaſure ye meaſure us, look you to be meaſured with the ſame again at God's Hands. The Biſhop ſtill perſuading him to recant. To whom he anſwered, No, I will not abjure. Ye ſaid that the Biſhops that were lately burned be Hereticks: But I pray God make me ſuch an Heretick as they were.

Anno 1555.

Mr. Cauſton denieth to recant.

The Biſhop then leaving Mr. Cauſton, calleth for Mr. Higbed: Uſing with him the like Perſuaſions that he did with the other: But he anſwered, I will not abjure. For I have been of this Mind and Opinion that I am now, theſe ſixteen Years, and do what ye can, ye ſhall do no more than God will permit you to do, and with what Meaſure you meaſure us, look for the ſame again at God's Hands.

Mr. Higbed called forth, denieth to abjure.

There Fecknam aſked him his Opinion in the Sacrament of the Altar. To whom he anſwered, I do not believe that Chriſt is in the Sacrament as ye will have him, which is of Man's making: Both their Anſwers thus ſeverally made, they were again commanded to depart for that Time, and to appear the next Day in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's, between the Hours of One and Three of the Clock at Afternoon.

Mr. Fecknam ſtill buſy with the Matter of the Sacrament.

The laſt Appearance of Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed before Bonner.

THE ninth of March, they were both brought thither: Where the Biſhop cauſed Mr. Thomas Cauſton's Articles and Anſwers firſt to be read openly, and after perſuaded him to recant and abjure his heretical Opinions, and to come home now at the laſt to their Mother the catholick Church, and ſave himſelf.

But Mr. Thomas Cauſton anſwered again, and ſaid, No, I will not abjure; for I came not hither for that Purpoſe: And therewithal did exhibit in Writing unto the Biſhop (as well in his own Name, as alſo in Thomas Higbed's Name) a Confeſſion of their Faith, to which they would ſtand; and required Leave to read the ſame, which (after great Suit) was obtained, and ſo he read it openly in the Hearing of the People, as followeth:

Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed do exhibit a Confeſſion of their Faith.

The Confeſſion of Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed.

Firſt, We believe and profeſs in Baptiſm, to forſake the Devil and all his Works and Pomps, and the Vanities of the wicked World, with all the ſinful Luſts of the Fleſh.

2. We believe all the Articles of our chriſtian Faith.

3. We believe, that we are bound to keep God's holy Will and Commandments, and to walk in the ſame all the Days of our Life.

4. We believe, that there is contained in the Lord's Prayer all Things neceſſary both for Body and Soul, and that we are taught thereby to pray to our heavenly Father, and no other Saint or Angel.

5. We believe, that there is a catholick Church, even the Communion of Saints, Built upon the Foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles (as St. Paul ſaith) Chriſt being the head Corner-ſtone. For which Church Chriſt gave himſelf, to make it to himſelf a glorious Congregation without Fault in his Sight.

6. We believe, that this Church of herſelf, and by her own Merits is ſinful, and muſt needs ſay, ſay, Father forgive us our Sins: But thro' Chriſt and his Merits, ſhe is freely forgiven: For he in his own Perſon (ſaith St. Paul) hath purged her Sins, and made her faultleſs in his Sight. Beſides whom, there is no Saviour, ſaith the Prophet: Neither is there Salvation, ſaith St. Peter, in any other Name.

Anno 1555.

7. We believe as he is our only Saviour, ſo he is our only Mediator. For the Apoſtle St. Paul ſaith, There is one God, one Mediator between God and Man, even the Man Jeſus Chriſt. Wherefore ſeeing none hath this Name God and Man but Jeſus Chriſt, therefore there is no Mediator but Jeſus Chriſt.

8. We believe that this Church of Chriſt is and hath been perſecuted, by the Words of Chriſt, ſaying, As they have perſecuted me, ſo ſhall they perſecute you: For the Diſciple is not above his Maſter. For it is not only given unto you to believe in Chriſt, ſaith St. Paul, but alſo to ſuffer for his Sake. For all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt ſuffer Perſecution.

9. We believe, that the Church of Chriſt teacheth the Word of God truly and ſincerely, putting nothing to, nor taking any Thing from: And alſo doth miniſter the Sacrments according to the primitive Church.

The true Church forbiddeth none to read the Scriptures.

10. We believe, that this Church of Chriſt ſuffereth all Men to read the Scriptures, according to Chriſt's Commandment, ſaying, Search the Scriptures, for they teſtify of me. We read alſo in the Acts, that when St. Paul preached, the Audience daily ſearched the Scriptures, whether he preached truly or no. Alſo the Prophet David teacheth all Men to pray with Underſtanding: For how ſhall the Unlearned, ſaith St. Paul, ſay Amen, at the giving of Thanks, when they underſtand not what is ſaid? And what is more allowed than true Faith, which, St. Paul ſaith, cometh by hearing of the Word of God?

11. We believe, that the Church of Chriſt teacheth that God ought to be worſhipped according to his Word, and not after the Doctrine of Men. For in vain, ſays Chriſt, ye worſhip me, teaching nothing but the Doctrine of Men.

God's Precepts to be followed, and not the Conſtitutions of Men.

Alſo we are commanded of God by his Prophet, ſaying, Walk not in the Traditions and Precepts of your Elders: But walk, ſaith he, in my Precepts: Do that I command you: Put nothing thereunto, neither take any Thing from it. Likewiſe ſaith Chriſt, You ſhall forſake Father and Mother, and follow me. Whereby we learn, that if our Elders teach otherwiſe than God commanded, in that Point we muſt forſake them.

The Lord's Supper is not to be changed from the Inſtitution of Chriſt.

12. We believe, that the Supper of the Lord ought not to be altered and changed, foraſmuch as Chriſt himſelf, being the Wiſdom of the Father, did inſtitute it. For it is written, Curſed is he that changeth my Ordinances, and departeth from my Commandments, or taketh any Thing from them.

Now we find by the Scriptures, that this holy Supper is ſore abuſed.

Firſt, In that it is given in one Kind, where Chriſt gave it in both.

Secondly, In that it is made a private Maſs, where Chriſt made it a Communion: For he gave it not to one alone, but to all the Apoſtles in the Name of the whole Church.

Thirdly, In that it is made a Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead, whereas Chriſt ordained it for a Remembrance of the everlaſting Sacrifice which was in his own Body offered on the Altar of the Croſs once for all, as the holy Apoſtle ſaith, Even the full and perfect Price of our Redemption: And where there is Remiſſion of Sin, ſaith he, there is no more Sacrifice for Sin.

Fourthly, In that it is worſhipped contrary to the Commandment, ſaying, Thou ſhalt worſhip nothing that is made with Hands.

Fifthly, In that it is given in an unknown Tongue, whereby the People are ignorant of the right Uſe thereof, how Chriſt died for our Sins, and roſe again for our Juſtification, by whom we be ſet at Peace with God, and received to his Favour and Mercy by his Promiſe, whereof this Sacrament is a ſure Seal and Witneſs.

Beſides this, it is hanged up, and ſhut in a Box; yea, many Times ſo long, that Worms breed in it, and ſo it putrifieth: Whereby the rude People have an Occaſion to ſpeak unreverently thereof, which otherwiſe would ſpeak reverently.

Therefore they that thus abuſe it, bring up the Slander, and not we, which pray daily to God to reſtore it to the right Uſe, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Chriſt's Words, This is my Body, not denied, but expounded.

Now concerning Chriſt's Words, This is my Body, we deny them not; but we ſay, that the Mind of Chriſt in them muſt be ſearched out by other open Scriptures, whereby we may come to the ſpiritual Underſtanding of them, which ſhall be moſt to the Glory of God: For as the holy Apoſtle ſaith, There is no Scripture that hath any private Interpretation. Beſides this, the Scriptures are full of the like figurative Speeches: As for Example; Chriſt ſaith, This Cup is the New Teſtament in my Blood. The Rock is Chriſt, ſaith St. Paul. Whoſoever receiveth a Child in my Name, ſaith our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, receiveth me. Which Sentences muſt not be underſtood after the Letter, leſt we do err as the Capernaites did, which thought that Chriſt's Body ſhould have been eaten with their Teeth, when he ſpake of the eating thereof. Unto whom Chriſt ſaid, Such a fleſhly eating of my Body profiteth nothing; it is the Spirit that quickeneth; the Fleſh profiteth nothing: For my Words are Spirit and Life.

The Words of the Sacrament ought to be taken ſpiritually and not literally.

Thus we ſee that Chriſt's Words muſt be underſtood ſpiritually, and not literally. Therefore he that cometh to this worthy Supper of the Lord, muſt not prepare his Jaw, but his Heart; neither Tooth nor Belly; but, Believe, ſaith St. Auguſtine, and thou haſt eaten it; ſo that we muſt bring with us a ſpiritual Hunger, and as the Apoſtle ſaith, Try and examine ourſelves, whether our Conſciences do teſtify unto us, that we do truly believe in Chriſt, according to the Scriptures; whereof if we be truly certified, being new born from our old Converſation in Heart, Mind, Will, and Deed, then may we boldly with this Marriage Garment of our Faith come to the Feaſt.

In Conſideration whereof we have invincible Scriptures, as of Chriſt himſelf; This do in Remembrance of me. And St. Paul; As often, ſaith he, as ye eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall remember the Lord's Death until he come. Here is no Change, but Bread ſtill. And St. Luke affirmeth the ſame. Alſo Chriſt hath made a juſt Promiſe, ſaying; Me you ſhall not have always with you, I leave the World, and go to my Father; for if I ſhould not depart, the Comforter which I will ſend, cannot come unto you. So according to his Promiſe he aſcended as the Evangeliſts teſtify. Alſo St. Peter ſaith, That Heaven ſhall keep him until the laſt Day alſo.

Now as touching his omnipotent Power, we confeſs and ſay with St. Auguſtine, that Chriſt is both God and Man. In that he is God, he is every where; but in that he is Man, he is in Heaven, and can occupy but one Place; whereunto the Scriptures do agree. For his Body was not in all Places at once when he was here; for it was not in the Grave, when the Woman ſought it, as the Angel ſaith: Neither was it at Bethany where Lazarus died, by Chriſt's own Words, ſaying, I am glad I was not there. And thus we conclude with the Scriptures, that Chriſt is in his holy Supper ſacramentally and ſpiritually in all them that worthily receive it, and corporally in Heaven, both God and Man.

Chriſt's Body but in one Place at once.

And further, we make here our Proteſtation before God (whom we call to record in this Matter) that this which we have ſaid, is neither of Stubbornneſs, nor wilful Mind, as ſome judge of us; but even of very Conſcience, truly (we truſt) grounded on God's holy Word. For before we took this Matter in hand, we beſought God from the Bottom of our Hearts, that we might do nothing contrary to his holy and bleſſed Word. And in that he hath thus ſhewed his Power in our Weakneſs, we cannot worthily praiſe him, unto whom we give hearty Thanks, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Amen.

When they had thus delivered and read their Confeſſion, the Biſhop ſtill perſiſting ſometimes in fair Promiſes, ſometimes threatning to pronounce Judgment, aſked them whether they would ſtand to this their Confeſſion, and other Anſwers? To whom Cauſton ſaid, Yea, we will ſtand to our Anſwers written with our Hands, and to our Belief therein contained. After which Anſwer the Biſhop began to pronounce Sentence againſt him.

Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed conſtant to Death in their Confeſſion.

Then he ſaid, that it was much Raſhneſs, and without all Love and Mercy to give Judgment without anſwering to their Confeſſion by the Truth of God's Word, whereunto they ſubmitted themſelves moſt willingly. And therefore I, ſaid Cauſton (becauſe I cannot have Juſtice at your Hand, but that ye will thus raſhly condemn me) do appeal from you to my Lord Cardinal.

Mr. Cauſton appealeth to the Cardinal.

Then Dr. Smith ſaid, that he would anſwer their Confeſſion. But the Biſhop not ſuffering him to ſpeak, ordered Mr. Harpsfield to ſpeak his Mind for the Stay of the People; who taking their Confeſſion in his Hand, neither touched nor anſwered one Sentence thereof.

Sentence pronounced againſt Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed.

Which done, the Biſhop pronounced Sentence, firſt againſt the ſaid Thomas Cauſton, and then calling Thomas Higbed, cauſed his Articles and Anſwers likewiſe to be read. In the reading whereof Mr. Higbed ſaid, Ye ſpeak Blaſphemy againſt Chriſt's Paſſion, and ye go about to trap us with your Subtilties and Snares. And though my Father, Mother, and Kinsfolk did believe as you ſay, yet they were deceived in ſo believing.

And further, where you ſay, that my Lord, named Cranmer, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and others ſpecify'd in the ſaid Articles, be Hereticks, I do wiſh that I were ſuch an Heretick as they were and be. Then the Biſhop aſked him again, whether he would turn from his Error, and come to the Unity of their Church: To whom he ſaid, No, I would ye ſhould recant; for I am in the Truth, and you in Error.

Well, quoth the Biſhop, if you will return, I will gladly receive you.

No, ſaid Mr. Higbed, I will not return as you will have me, to believe in the Sacrament of the Altar your God.

Whereon the Biſhop proceeded, and gave Judgment upon him, as he had done before upon Thomas Cauſton. When this was ended, they were both delivered to the Sheriffs, and by them ſent to Newgate, where they remained for the Space of fourteen Days. Anno 1555.

Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed condemned and ſent to Newgate.

Theſe fourteen Days being expired, they were, the Twenty-third of March, fetched from Newgate at four of the Clock in the Morning, and ſo led thro' the City to Aldgate, where they were delivered unto the Sheriff of Eſſex, and there being faſt bound in a Cart, were ſhortly after brought to their ſeveral appointed Places of burning; that is to ſay, Thomas Higbed to Hornden on the Hill, and Thomas Cauſton to Rayly, (both in the County of Eſſex) where they did moſt conſtantly, the Twenty-ſixth Day of the ſame Month, ſeal their Faith with ſhedding of their Blood by moſt cruel Fire, to the Glory of God, and great Rejoicing of all good Men.

Mr. Cauſton and Mr. Higbed are brought from Newgate into Eſſex.

William Pygot, Stephen Knight, and John Laurence, with their Examinations and Martyrdom.

IN the Story of Thomas Tomkins and his Fellows, we made mention of Six who were examined, and condemned together by Biſhop Bonner, the ninth Day of February: Of which Six condemned Perſons, two, which were Tomkins and William Hunter were executed, the one upon the twenty ſixth of February, and the other upon the twenty ſixth of March. The other Three, to wit, William Pygot and Stephen Knight, ſuffered upon the twenty eighth Day, and John Laurence the twenty ninth of the ſaid Month of March.

Concerning which three Martyrs, we have now ſomething to ſay of their Examinations: It was firſt demanded of them, what their Opinion was of the Sacrament of the Altar. Whereunto they ſeverally anſwered, and alſo ſubſcribed, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is not the very Subſtance of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, but a ſpecial partaking of the Body and Blood of Chriſt; the very Body and Blood of Chriſt being only in Heaven, and no where elſe. This Anſwer thus made; the Biſhop cauſed certain Articles to be read unto them, tending to the ſame Effect, as did the Articles before of Tomkins and of Mr. Cauſton. The Tenor whereof here followeth.

Articles objected by the Biſhop of London to William Pygot, Stephen Knight, and John Laurence, Febr. 8. 1555.

WHether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe that it is a catholick, faithful, chriſtian, and true Doctrine, to teach, preach, and ſay, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is without any Subſtance of Bread and Wine there remaining, by the Ominpotent Power of Almighty God, and his Holy Word, really, truly, and in very Deed the True and Natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, the ſelf ſame in Subſtance (though not in outward Form and Appearance) which was born of the Virgin Mary, and and ſuffered upon the Croſs, Yea, or Nay?

Anno 1555.

Whether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe, that your Parents, Kinsfolk, Friends, and Acquaintance, here in this preſent Realm of England, before your Birth a great while, and alſo after your Birth, profeſſing and believing the ſaid Doctrine and Faith, concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, had a true chriſtian Faith, and were Faithful and True chriſtian People, or no?

Whether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe, that your Godfathers and Godmother, profeſſing and believing the ſaid Doctrine and Faith, concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, had a true chriſtian Faith, and were faithful and true chriſtian People, or no?

Whether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe that your ownſelf in times paſt, being of the Age of fourteen Years and above, did think and believe concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar in all Points, as your ſaid Parents, Kinſfolks, Friends, Acquaintance, Godfathers, and Godmother, did then think and believe them, or no?

Whether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe, that our Sovereigns the King and the Queen of this Realm of England, and all the Nobility, Clergy, and Laity of this Realm, profeſſing and believing the ſaid Doctrine and Faith, as other chriſtian Realms do, concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, have a True chriſtian Faith, and believe as the catholick and true Church of Chriſt hath always believed, preached, and taught, or no?

Whether do you think, and ſtedfaſtly believe, that our Saviour Chriſt and his holy Spirit hath been, is, and ſhall be with his catholick Church, even to the World's End, governing and ruling the ſame in all Things, eſpecially in the neceſſary Points of chriſtian Religion, not ſuffering the ſame to err, or be deceived therein?

The real Preſence and Tranſubſtantiation.

Whether is it true, that you being ſuſpected, or infamed to be culpable and faulty in ſpeaking againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, and againſt the very true Preſence of Chriſt's natural Body, and the Subſtance thereof in the ſaid Sacrament, and thereupon called before me upon Complaint made to me againſt you, have not been a good Space in my Houſe, having freely Meat and Drink, and alſo divers Times inſtructed and informed, as well by one being our Ordinary, as alſo by my Chaplains, and divers other learned Men, ſome whereof were Biſhops, ſome Deans, and ſome Archdeacons, and every one of them learned in Divinity, and minding well unto you, and deſiring the Safeguard of your Soul, and that you ſhould follow and believe the Doctrine of the catholick Church as afore concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, and whether you did not at all Times ſince your ſaid coming to me, utterly refuſe to follow and believe the ſaid Doctrine concerning the ſaid Sacrament?

Whether can you now find in your Heart and Conſcience, to conform yourſelf in all Points to the ſaid Faith and catholick Church concerning the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, faithfully, truly, and plainly, without any Diſſimulation, believing therein, as our ſaid Sovereigns, with the Nobility, Clergy, and Laity of this Realm, and other chriſtian Realms: And other Perſons aforeſaid, and alſo the ſaid catholick Church, have and do ſo believe in that Behalf?

In caſe you ſo cannot, what Ground have you to maintain your Opinion, and who is of the ſame Opinion with you, and what Conference have you had therein with any, what Comfort and what Relief have you had therein by any of them, and what are their Names, Surnames, and their dwelling Places?

Their Anſwers to theſe Articles were not much different from Tomkins, and other Martyrs before mentioned, as here followeth to not ſeen.

The Anſwers of Stephen Knight and William Pygot, to the aforeſaid Articles.

To the firſt Article, they believe, that the Contents of this Article is not agreeable to Scripture.

To the Second, they anſwer and believe, that their Parents and others expreſſed in the ſaid Article, and ſo believing as is contained in the ſame, were deceived.

To the Third, they anſwer, that they ſo believed, but they were deceived therein, as they now believe.

To the Fourth, they ſay, that they have heretofore believed as is contained in the ſaid Article, but now they do not ſo believe.

To the Fifth, they ſay, that if they ſo believe, they are deceived.

To the Sixth, they believe the ſame to be true.

To the Seventh, they anſwer, and believe the Contents of the ſame to be true.

To the Eighth, they anſwer, that they can no whit conform themſelves to the Faith and Doctrine contained and ſpecified in this Article, until it be proved by Scripture.

To the Ninth, they ſay, that they have no Ground to maintain their ſaid Opinions, but the Truth, which (as they ſaid) hath been perſwaded by learned Men, as Dr. Taylor of Hadley, and ſuch other.

Theſe Anſwers being made and exhibited, they were commanded to appear again the next Day, at eight of the Clock in the Morning, and in the mean while to bethink themſelves what they would do.

Another Appearance of the ſaid Priſoners before Biſhop Bonner.

THE next Morning, being the ninth of February, before their open Appearance, the Biſhop ſent for William Pygot and Stephen Knight into his great Chamber in his Palace, where he exhorted them to recant, and deny their former Profeſſion.

Who anſwered, that they were perſwaded in their Conſciences not to return and abjure their Opinions, whereunto they had ſubſcribed. Within a while after, they were all three (with Thomas Tomkins and William Hunter beforenamed) brought openly into the Conſiſtory, the ninth Day of February aforeſaid, and there had the ſame Articles propounded unto them, which were before propounded unto the afore ſaid Thomas Tomkins, and thereto alſo ſubſcribed theſe Words; I do ſo believe.

Talk between Bonner and John Laurence, Prieſt.

The Biſhop alſo diſcourſed with John Laurence only; whereunto he anſwered in this Manner; That he was a Prieſt, and was conſecrated and made a Prieſt about eighteen Years paſt, and that he was ſometime a black Frier profeſſed; that alſo he was aſſured unto a Maid, whom he intended to have married.

John Laurence ſometime a Frier.

And being again demanded his Opinion upon the Sacrament, he ſaid, that it was a Remembrance of Chriſt's Body, and that many have been deceived in believing the true Body of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, and that that all ſuch as do not believe as he doth, do err. And after this Talk and other fair Words and Threatnings, they were all of them commanded to appear again in the Afternoon.

The Third and laſt Appearance.

At which Hour they came thither again, and there after the accuſtomed Manner, were exhorted to recant and revoke their Doctrine, and receive the Faith. To which they conſtantly anſwered they would not, but would ſtick to that Faith that they had declared and ſubſcribed to, for that they did believe it was no Error which they believed; but that the contrary thereof was very Hereſy.

Stephen Knight, William Pygot, and John Laurence condemned.

When the Biſhop ſaw that neither his fair Flatterings, nor yet his cruel Threatnings would prevail, he gave them ſeverally their Judgments. And becauſe John Laurence had been one of their anointed Prieſts, he was by the Biſhop there (according to their Order) ſolemnly degraded, the Manner whereof you may ſee in the Hiſtory of Mr. Hooper before-mentioned.

John Laurence degraded.

Their Sentence of Condemnation, and this Degradation once ended, they were committed to the Cuſtody of the Sheriffs of London, who ſent them to Newgate, where they remained with Joy together, until they were carried down into Eſſex, and there the twenty eighth Day of March, the ſaid William Pygot was burned at Braintree, and Stephen Knight at Mauldon.

The Martyrdom of John Laurence, Prieſt at Colcheſter.

The next Day, being the twenty ninth Day of March, the ſaid John Laurence was brought to Colcheſter, and there being not able to go (for his Legs were much worn with heavy Irons in Priſon, and alſo his Body weakned with evil keeping) was borne to the Fire in a Chair, and ſo ſitting, was in his conſtant Faith conſumed with Fire.

The Hiſtory of Dr. Robert Farrar, Biſhop of St. David's, who ſuffered March 30. 1555.

THE next Day after, Dr. Robert Farrar Biſhop of St. David's in Wales, was the next Biſhop that ſuffered after Mr. Hooper; who was firſt called and promoted to that Dignity by the Favour and good Will of the Duke of Somerſet, the Lord Protector in King Edward's Time. This Man I may well call twice a Martyr, not only for the cruel Death of the Fire, which he moſt conſtantly ſuffered in the Days of Queen Mary, but alſo for ſeveral other Injuries and Moleſtations in King Edward's Time, which he no leſs firmly than unworthily ſuſtained at the Hands of his Enemies after the Fall of the Duke of Somerſet.

After whoſe Fall he found few Friends to ſupport him againſt ſuch as hunted after his Biſhoprick; but at length after the Deceaſe of King Edward, by the coming in of Queen Mary, the State of Religion begun to be changed and altered: Whereby a new Trouble roſe upon him, being now accuſed and examined, not for any matter of Præmunire, but for his Faith and Doctrine. Whereupon he was called before the Biſhop of Wincheſter, with Mr. Hooper, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Bradford, Mr. Saunders, and others, the Fourth of February. On which Day he ſhould alſo with them have been condemned; but becauſe Leiſure did not ſo well then ſerve the Biſhop, his Condemnation was deferred, and he ſent to Priſon again, where he continued till February 14. What his Examinations and Anſwers were before the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter, ſo much as remained and came to our Hands, I have here annexed. Anno 1555.

At his firſt coming and kneeling before my Lord Chancellor, the Biſhop of Durham, and the Biſhop of Worceſter, who ſate at the Table; and Mr. Rocheſter, Mr. Southwel, Mr. Bourne, and others ſtanding at the Tables End, the Lord Chancellor ſaid unto him on this Sort:

Wincheſter. Now Sir, have you heard how the World goeth here?

Farrar. If it like your Honour, I know not.

Winch. What ſay you? do you not know things Abroad, notwithſtanding you are a Priſoner?

Far. No, my Lord, I know not.

Winch. Lo, what a froward Fellow is this?

Far. If it pleaſe your Lordſhip, how ſhould I know any thing Abroad, being a Priſoner?

Winch. Have you not heard of the Coming in of the Lord Cardinal?

Far. I know not my Lord Cardinal; but I heard that a Cardinal was come in, but I did not believe it, and I believe it not yet.

I pray your Lordſhip (ſaid the Biſhop of Worceſter) tell him yourſelf, that he may know what is done.

Biſhop Farrar charged with the Quren's Debt.

Winch. The Queen's Majeſty and the Parliament hath reſtored Religion into the ſame State it was in at the Beginning of the Reign of King Henry VIII. Ye are in the Queen's Debt, and her Majeſty will be good unto you, if you will return to the catholick Church.

Far. In what State I am concerning my Debts to the Queen's Majeſty in the Court of Exchequer, my Lord Treaſurer knoweth: And the laſt Time that I was before your Honour, and the firſt Time alſo, I ſhewed you that I had made an Oath, never to conſent nor agree, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould have any Power or Juriſdiction within this Realm: And further I need not rehearſe to your Lordſhip, you know it well enough.

Biſhop Farrar refuſeth the Pope.

Mr. Bourne layeth to Biſhop Farrar falſly to have abjured at Oxford.

You were once abjured for Hereſy (ſaid Mr. Bourne) in Oxford.

Far. That was I not.

Bourne. You were.

Far. I was not never, it is not true.

Bourne. You went from St. David's to Scotland.

Far. That I did not.

Bourne. You did.

Far. That did I never, but I went from York into Scotland.

Bourne. Ah, ſo ſaid I; you went with Barlow.

Far. That is true, but never from St. David's.

Bourne. You carried Books out of Oxford, to the Archbiſhop of of York, L. Lee.

Far. That did I not.

Bourne. You did.

Far. I did not, but I carried old Books from S. Oſwald's to the Archbiſhop of York.

Biſhop Farrar falſly charged to have ſupplanted his Maſter, whom indeed he defended from Danger.

Bourne. You ſupplanted your Maſter.

Far. That did I never in my Life.

Bourne. By my Faith you did.

Far. Forſooth, I did not, never in my Life, but did ſhield and ſave my Maſter from Danger, and that I obtained of King Henry the Eighth, for my true Service, I thank God therefore.

My Lord, (ſaid Mr. Bourne to my Lord Chancellor) he hath an ill Name in Wales as ever had any.

Far.

Anno 1555.

Far. That is not ſo. Whoſoever ſaith ſo, they ſhall never be able to prove it.

Bourne. He hath deceived the Queen in divers Sums of Money.

Far. This is utterly untrue, I never deceived King nor Queen of one Penny in my Life, and you ſhall never be able to prove that you ſay.

Winch. Thou art a falſe Knave.

Then Biſhop Farrar ſtood up unbidden (for all that while he kneeled) and ſaid, No, my Lord, I am a true Man, I thank God for it. I was born under King Henry the Seventh, I ſerved King Henry the Eighth, and King Edward the Sixth truly, and have ſerved the Queen's Majeſty, that now is, truly with my poor Heart and Word: More I could not do, and I was never falſe, nor ſhall be by the Grace of God.

Biſhop Farrar ſtoutly ſtandeth upon his Truth.

Winch. How ſay'ſt thou, wilt thou be reformable?

Far. My Lord if it pleaſe your Honour, I have made an Oath to God, and to King Henry the Eighth, and alſo to King Edward, and in that to the Queen's Majeſty, which I can never break while I live, to die for it.

Biſhop Farrar ſtandeth to his Oath made to the King againſt the Pope.

Durham. You have made another Oath before.

Far. No, my Lord, I never made another Oath before.

Durham. You made a Vow.

Far. That did I not.

Winch. You made a Profeſſion to live without a Wife.

Far. No, my Lord, if it pleaſe your Honour that did I never; I made a Profeſſion to live chaſt, not without a Wife.

Worceſter. You were ſworn to him that was Maſter of your Houſe.

Far. That was I never.

Winch. Well, you are a froward Knave: We will have no more to do with you, ſeeing that you will not come; we will be ſhort with you, and that you ſhall know within this Sevennight.

Winchester's Perjury touch'd.

Far. I am as it pleaſeth your Honour to call me; but I cannot break my Oath which your Lordſhip yourſelf made before me, and gave in Example, which confirmed my Conſcience. Then I can never break that Oath whilſt I live to die for it.

Durham. Well, ſaid he, he ſtandeth upon his Oath: Call another.

My Lord Chancellor then did ring a little Bell, and Mr. Farrar ſaid, I pray God ſave the King and Queen's Majeſty's long to continue in Honour to God's Glory and their Comforts, and the Comfort of the whole Realm; and I pray God ſave all your Honours, and ſo departed.

After theſe Examinations thus ended, Biſhop Farrar remained in Priſon uncondemned, till the Fourteenth Day of February, and then was ſent down into Wales, there to receive Sentence of Condemnation. Who then upon the Six and twentieth of February, in the Church of Carmarthen, being brought by Griffith Leyſon, Eſq; Sheriff of the County of Carmarthen, was there perſonally preſented before Henry Biſhop of St. David's, and Conſtantine the publick Notary: Which Henry there and then diſcharged the ſaid Sheriff, and received him into his own Cuſtody, further committing him to the Keeping of Owen Jones, and thereupon declared unto the ſaid Mr. Farrar, the great Mercy and Clemency that the King and Queen's Highneſs's Pleaſure was to be offered unto him, which he there did offer unto the ſaid Mr. Farrar; that is to ſay, That if he would ſubmit himſelf to the Laws of this Realm, and conform himſelf to the Unity of the univerſal catholick Church, he ſhould be received and pardoned: After that, ſeeing the ſaid Mr. Farrar to give no Anſwer to the Premiſſes, the ſaid Biſhop miniſtred unto him theſe Articles following.

Biſhop Farrar brought before Dr. Morgan, pretenſed Biſhop of St. David's

1. Firſt, Whether he believeth the Marriage of Prieſts lawful by the Laws of God, and holy Church, or no?

Articles objected againſt Biſhop Farrar.

2. Item, Whether he believeth, that in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, after the Words of Conſecration duly pronounced by the Prieſt, the very Body and Blood of Chriſt is really and ſubſtantially contained, without the Subſtance of Bread and Wine?

Unto which Articles the ſaid Biſhop required the ſaid Mr. Farrar to anſwer upon his Allegiance.

To which he ſaid, he would anſwer when he ſaw a lawful Commiſſion, and would make no further Anſwer at that Time. Whereupon the ſaid Biſhop taking no Advantage upon the ſame Anſwer, committed him to the ſaid Keeper, to be kept in Priſon until a new Monition, and in the mean Time to deliberate with himſelf for his further Anſwer to the Premiſſes.

The Anſwer of Biſhop Farrar.

Another Examination of Biſhop Farrar, the laſt of February, 1555.

MORGAN the pretenſed Biſhop of St. David's ſitting as Judge, miniſtred unto Biſhop Farrar, there perſonally preſent before him, certain Articles and Interrogatories in Writing: Which being openly read and miniſtred unto him, the ſaid Biſhop Farrar refuſed to anſwer, till he might ſee his lawful Commiſſion and Authority. Whereupon the aforeſaid pretenſed Biſhop of St. David's, did pronounce him as Contumax, and for the Puniſhment of his Contumacy to be counted pro confeſſo, and ſo did pronounce him in Writing. Which being done, he committed the ſaid Biſhop to the Cuſtody of Owen Jones, until Monday next, being the Fourth of March, then to be brought again into the ſame Place, between One and Two.

Another Appearance of Biſhop Farrar.

The Day and Place appointed, the ſaid Biſhop appearing again before the pretenſed Biſhop, humbly ſubmitting himſelf as ready to anſwer to the Articles and Poſitions aforementioned, gently required the Copy of the Articles, and a competent Term to be aſſigned unto him, to anſwer for himſelf: Which being granted unto him, and the Thurſday next being aſſigned unto him between One and Three, to anſwer preciſely and fully; ſo he was committed again to Cuſtody, as above.

Another Appearance of Biſhop Farrar.

On Thurſday, as was appointed, which was the Seventh of March, the Biſhop perſonally again appeared, where he exhibited a certain Bill in Writing, containing in it his Anſwer unto certain Articles objected and miniſtred unto him before. Then after Henry the pretenſed Biſhop of St. David's offered him again the ſaid Articles as before: The Tenor whereof tendeth to this Effect:

Articles again miniſtred againſt Biſhop Farrar.

Firſt, That he willed him, being a Prieſt, to renounce Matrimony.

Secondly, To grant the natural Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, under the Forms of Bread and Wine.

Thirdly, That the Maſs is a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead.

Fourthly, That general Councils lawfully congregated never did, nor can err.

Fifthly, That Men are not juſtified before God by Faith only, but that Hope and Charity are alſo neceſſarily required to Juſtification.

Sixthly, That the catholick Church, which only hath Authority to expound Scriptures, and to define Controverſies of Religion; and to ordain Things appertaining to publick Diſcipline, is viſible, and like unto a City ſet upon a Mountain for all Men to underſtand.

Biſhop Farrar denieth to ſubſcribe to the Articles.

To theſe Articles thus objected to him, he refuſed to ſubſcribe, affirming that they were invented by Man, and pertain nothing to the catholick Faith. After this, the Biſhop abovenamed, delivered unto him the Copy of the Articles, aſſigning him Monday next following, to anſwer and ſubſcribe to the ſame either affirmatively or negatively.

Another Appearance of Biſhop Farrar.

Upon which Monday, March 11, he appearing again before the Biſhop, and the aforeſaid Notary, George Conſtantine, exhibited in a written Paper his Mind and Anſwer to the aforeſaid Articles, which the Biſhop had twice now objected againſt him before, to which Articles and Anſwers he did ſo ſubſcribe, adding theſe Words, as Tenens ſe de æquitate & juſtitia eſſe Epiſcopum Menevenſem, that the Biſhop aſſigned the next Wedneſday, in the Afternoon, to hear his final and definitive Sentence.

The laſt Appearance of Biſhop Farrar.

On which Day the ſaid Biſhop Dr. Farrar, perſonally there appearing, was demanded by Henry the pretenſed Biſhop of St. David's, whether he would renounce and recant his Hereſies, Schiſms, and Errors (as he called them) which hitherto he had maintained, and if he would ſubſcribe to the catholick Articles, otherwiſe than he had done before.

After this the ſaid Biſhop, Dr. Farrar, did exhibit a certain Schedule written in Engliſh, and remaining in the Acts; appealing withal by expreſs Word of Mouth from the Biſhop, as from an incompetent Judge, to Cardinal Pool, &c.

Sentence pronounced againſt Biſhop Farrar.

Notwithſtanding all which, the ſaid Biſhop proceeding in his Rage, pronounced the definitive Sentence againſt him contained in Writing, and there left in the Acts: By which Sentence he pronounced him as an Heretick excommunicate, and to be given up forthwith to the ſecular Power, namely, to Mr. Leyſon Sheriff of the Town of Carmarthen.

Biſhop Farrar brought to the Place of Execution.

This good Biſhop being condemned and degraded, was committed to the ſecular Power, and not long after was brought to the Place of Execution in the Town of Carmarthen, where he in the Market-place, in the South-ſide of the Market-croſs, the thirteenth Day of March, being Saturday next before Paſſion-Sunday, moſt conſtantly ſuſtained the Torments of the Fire.

Concerning whoſe Conſtancy, this is moreover to be added, that one Richard Jones, a Knight's Son, coming to Dr. Farrar a little before his Death, ſeemed to lament the Painfulneſs of the Death he had to ſuffer; unto whom the Biſhop anſwered again to this Effect, ſaying, That if he ſaw him once to ſtir in the Pains of his Burning, he ſhould then give no Credit to his Doctrine. And as he ſaid, ſo he right well performed the ſame; for ſo patiently he ſtood, that he never moved, till one Richard Gravell with a Staff daſhed him upon the Head and ſo ſtruck him down. Anno 1555.

The Hiſtory of Rawlins White, burned at Cardiffe in Wales about the Month of March.

FOraſmuch as we have here related the Hiſtory of Dr. Farrar, burned at the Town of Carmarthen in Wales, I thought to adjoin and accompany with the ſame the Hiſtory alſo of Rawlins White, a Fiſher-man, who both in the like Cauſe, and in the ſame Month of March, and Year aforeſaid, was burned at Cardiffe.

Rawlins White was by his Occupation a Fiſherman, continuing in the ſaid Trade for the Space of twenty Years at leaſt, in the Town of Cardiffe, being one of a very good Name, and well accounted amongſt his Neighbours. As touching his Religion at firſt, it cannot otherwiſe be known, but that he was a great Partaker of the Superſtition and Idolatry that then was uſed, I mean in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth. But after that God of his Mercy had raiſed up the Light of his Goſpel, in the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, Rawlins White began partly to miſlike that which before he had embraced, and to have ſome good Opinion of that which before by the Iniquity of the Time had been concealed from him: And the rather to bring this good Purpoſe and Intent of his to paſs, he began to be a diligent Hearer, and a great Searcher out of the Truth.

But becauſe the good Man was altogether unlearned, he knew no ready Way how he might ſatisfy his great Deſire. At length it came in his Mind to take a ſpecial Remedy to ſupply his Neceſſity, which was this: He had a little Boy which was his own Son, which Child he ſent to School to learn to read Engliſh; now after the little Boy could read indifferently well, his Father every Night after Supper, Summer and Winter, would have the Boy to read part of the Holy Scripture, and now and then of ſome other good Book. In which kind of virtuous Exerciſe the old Man had ſuch Delight and Pleaſure, that, as it ſeemed, he rather practiſed himſelf in the Study of the Scripture, than in the Trade or Science which before time he had uſed: So that within few Years in the ſaid Time of King Edward, thro' the Help of his little Son, and thro' much Conference beſides, profited and went forward in ſuch ſort, that he was able not only to reſolve himſelf touching his own former Blindneſs and Ignorance, but was alſo able to admoniſh and inſtruct others: And therefore when Occaſion ſerved, he would go from one Place to another viſiting ſuch as he had beſt Hope in. By which his doing he became in that Country, both a notable and open Profeſſor of the Truth, being at all Times and in all ſuch Places, not without the Company of his little Boy, whom (as I have ſaid) he uſed as an Aſſiſtant to this good Purpoſe. And to this his great Induſtry and Endeavour in the Holy Scripture, God did alſo add in him a ſingular Gift of Memory, ſo that by the Benefit thereof he would and could do that in vouching and rehearſing of the Text, which Men of riper and more profound Knowledge, by their Notes and other helps of Memory could very hardly accompliſh. Inſomuch that he, upon the alledging of Scripture, Rawlins White by the Means of his young Son came to the Knowledge of the Scripture.

The Gift of Memory in Rawlins White.

Anno 1555. ture, very often would cite the Book, the Leaf, yea and the very Sentence; ſuch was the wonderful working of God in this ſimple and unlearned Man.

Now when he had thus continued in his Profeſſion the Space of five Years, King Edward died, upon whoſe Deceaſe Queen Mary ſucceeded, and with her all kind of Superſtition crept in. Which being once perceived, Rawlins White did not altogether uſe open Inſtruction and Admonition (as before he was wont) and therefore oftentimes in ſome private Place or other he would call his truſty Friends together, and with earneſt Prayer and great Lamentation paſs away the Time, ſo that by his virtuous Inſtruction, he converted a great Number, which Number had greatly increaſed, had not the cruel Storm of Perſecution been. The Extremity and Force whereof at laſt ſo purſued this good Man, that he looked every Hour to go to Priſon; whereupon many of thoſe who had received Comfort by his Inſtructions, did reſort unto him, and by all Means poſſible began to perſwade him to ſhift for himſelf, and to diſpoſe his Goods by ſome reaſonable Order to the Uſe of his Wife and Children, and by that Means he ſhould eſcape that Danger, which was imminent over his Head.

He is exhorted to ſhift for himſelf.

But Rawlins nothing abaſhed for his own part thro' the Iniquity of the Time, and nothing at all moved with theſe their Perſwaſions, thanked them moſt heartily for their good Will, and told them plainly that he had learned one good Leſſon touching the Confeſſion and Denial of Chriſt; advertiſing them, that if he upon their Perſwaſions ſhould preſume to deny his Maſter Chriſt, Chriſt in the laſt Day would deny and utterly condemn him: And therefore (ſaid he) I will, by his Grace, confeſs and bear Witneſs of him before Men, that I may find him in everlaſting Life.

Notwithſtanding which Anſwer, his Friends were very importunate with him. Howbeit he continued ſtill in his good Purpoſe ſo long, till at laſt he was taken by the Officers of the Town, as a Man ſuſpected of Hereſy; upon which Apprehenſion he was convented before the Biſhop of Landaffe that then was, the ſaid Biſhop lying then at his Houſe near Chepſtow: By whom after divers Combats and Conflicts with him and his Chaplains, this good Father Rawlins White was committed to Priſon in Chepſtow.

Rawlins White apprehended and convented before the Biſhop of Landaffe named Anthony Racbin.

From thence he was removed to the Caſtle of Cardiffe, where he remained for the Space of one whole Year. After which time the aforenamed Biſhop of Landaffe cauſed him to be brought again from the Caſtle of Cardiffe unto his own Houſe near Chepſtow, and whilſt he continued there, the Biſhop endeavoured by various Means to reduce him to ſome Conformity. But when they found their threatning Words and flattering Promiſes ineffectual, the Biſhop deſired him to adviſe, and determine with himſelf, either to recant his Opinions, or elſe to ſuffer the Rigour of the Law, and thereupon gave him a Day of Determination: Which Day being come, the Biſhop with his Chaplains went into his Chapel, with a great Number of the Neighbours that had the Curioſity to ſee their Proceedings. When the Biſhop and his Retinue were placed in Order, Rawlins White was brought before them. The Biſhop made a long Diſcourſe to him, declaring the Cauſe of his being ſent for, which was, that he was a Man well known to hold heretical Opinions, and that by his Inſtruction many were led into Error. In the End, he exhorted him to conſider his preſent Circumſtances: For (ſaid the Biſhop) Rawlins, you have often times ſince your firſt Trouble, both here in my Houſe, and elſewhere ſuffered much for your Opinions, and yet notwithſtanding ye ſeem altogether obſtinate and wilful. Now hereupon we thought good to ſend to you, to ſee if there be any Conformity in you: So that the Matter is come to this Point, That if you will repent of that which you have done againſt the Laws of God and the Prince, we are ready to uſe Favour towards you; but if we can by no Means prevail upon you to reform, we are minded at this time to miniſter the Law unto you, and therefore adviſe with yourſelf what you will do.

Rawlins White a whole Year in Priſon.

He is brought before the Biſhop of Landaffe in open Judgment.

When the Biſhop had ended his Tale, Father Rawlins ſpake boldly to him, and ſaid, My Lord, I thank God I am a chriſtian Man, and I hold no Opinions contrary to the Word of God; and if I do, I deſire to be reformed out of the Word of God, as a Chriſtian ought to be. Many more Words paſſed between the Biſhop and Rawlins White, which this Reporter doth not well remember. But in the End, when Rawlins would in no wiſe recant his Opinions, the Biſhop told him plainly, that he muſt proceed againſt him by the Law, and condemn him as an Heretick.

The Biſhop of Landaffe proceedeth with Prayer in Condemnation of Rawlins which commonly the Popiſh perſecutors are not wont to do.

Proceed in your Law in God's Name, ſaid Rawlins; but for an Heretick you ſhall never condemn me while the World ſtandeth. But ſaid the Biſhop to his Company, before we proceed any further with him, let us pray unto God that he would ſend ſome Spark of Grace upon him, (meaning Rawlins) and it may ſo chance, that God through our Prayer will here turn and convert his Heart. When Rawlins heard the Biſhop ſay ſo; Ah, my Lord, quoth he, now you deal well, and like a good Biſhop, and I thank you moſt heartily for your great Charity and Gentleneſs. Chriſt ſaith, Where two or three are gathered together in my Nume I will be in the midſt of them: And there be more than two or three of you. Now if it be ſo that your Requeſt be godly and lawful, and that ye pray as ye ſhould pray, without doubt God will hear you. And therefore my Lord go to, do you pray to your God, and I will pray to my God, I know that my God will both hear my Prayer, and perform my Deſire.

By and by the Biſhop with his Company went to Prayers. And Rawlins, turning himſelf to a Pew that ſtood near him, fell down upon his Knees, covering his Face with his Hands: And when they had prayed a while, the Biſhop with his Company aroſe from Prayer. And then alſo aroſe Rawlins, and came before the Biſhop.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Now Rawlins, how is it with thee? Wilt thou revoke thy Opinions, or no? My Lord, ſaid he, Rawlins you left me, and Rawlins you find me, and, by God's Grace, Rawlins I will continue. Certainly if your Petitions had been juſt and lawful, God would have heard them: But you honour a falſe God, and pray not as ye ſhould pray; and therefore God hath not granted your Deſire. But I am one poor ſimple Man, as you ſee, and God hath heard my Complaint, and I truſt he will ſtrengthen me in his own Cauſe.

When the Biſhop perceived that this took no Effect, he began to reprove him with ſharp Words, and forthwith was ready to read the Sentence. However, upon ſome Advice given to him by his Chaplains that were there preſent, he thought beſt firſt to have a Maſs, thinking that by ſo doing, ſome wonderful Work ſhould be wrought in Rawlins, and thereupon a Prieſt began the Maſs.

A Maſs ſaid for Converſion of Rawlins White.

In the mean Time poor Rawlins betook himſelf ſelf to Prayer in a Place hard by, till ſuch time as the Prieſt came to the Sacring, as they term it, which is a principal Point of their Idolatry. When Rawlins heard the Sacring-bell ring (as the Uſe was) he roſe out of his Place, and came to the Quire-door, and there ſtanding a while, turned himſelf to the People, ſpeaking theſe Words, Good People, if there be any Brethren amongſt you, or at leaſt, if there be but one Brother amongſt you, the ſame One bear Witneſs at the Day of Judgment, that I bow not to this Idol (meaning the Hoſt that the Prieſt held over his Head).

The Maſs being ended, Rawlins was immediately called for. To whom the Biſhop uſed many Perſwaſions; but the good Man continued ſo ſtedfaſt in his former Profeſſion, that the Biſhop's Talk was altogether in vain, and to no purpoſe. Whereupon the Biſhop cauſed the definitive Sentence to be read. Which being ended, Rawlins was diſmiſſed, and from thence he was by the Biſhop's Commandment, carried again to Cardiffe, there to be put into the Priſon of the Town, called Cockmarel, a very dark, loathſome, and moſt vile Priſon.

Sentence read againſt Rawlins White.

Rawlins in the mean Time paſſed away the Time in Prayer, and chiefly in ſinging of Pſalms: Which kind of Exerciſe he always uſed, both at Cardiffe-caſtle, and in all other Places.

Now after he had thus continued a Priſoner in Cockmarel Priſon at Cardiffe (as is aforeſaid) a good Space, about three Weeks before he ſuffered, the head Officers of the Town, that had the Charge of his Execution, were determined to burn him, becauſe they would be ſooner rid of him; having not indeed a Writ of Execution awarded, as by the Law they ſhould have. Whereupon one H. Lewis, the Recorder of the Town that then was, ſeeing that they went about to burn him without any Warrant by Writ, came to them and told them, That if they did burn him before they had the Writ, De Hæreticis comburendis, the Wife of the ſaid Rawlins would upon juſt Cauſe, by Law, call their Doings into Queſtion.

The Officers intending to burn Rawlins without a Writ.

Immediately upon this Advertiſement, they ſent to London for the Writ above-named; upon the Receipt whereof they made ſome Speed to the Execution of the ſaid Rawlins. Now when the Day was come, wherein the good Father ſhould perform and accompliſh the laſt Act of this his worthy Conflict, he was the Night before ordered to prepare himſelf.

The Writ awarded for burning of Rawlins White.

Now when he perceived his Time was no leſs near than was reported to him, he ſent forthwith to his Wife, and willed her by the Meſſenger, that in any wiſe ſhe ſhould make ready and ſend unto him his wedding Garment, meaning a Shirt, which afterward he was burned in. Which Requeſt of his, his Wife with great Sorrow and Grief of Heart did perform, and early in the Morning ſent it to him, which he received moſt gladly.

Now when the Hour of his Execution was come, Rawlins White was brought out of Priſon, having on his Body the long Shirt, which he called his wedding-Garment, and an old Ruſſet Coat which he was wont to wear. Beſides this, he had upon his Legs an old pair of Leather-buſkins, which he had uſed long before. And thus being brought out of Priſon, he was guarded, with a great Company of Bills and Gleaves. Which when he beheld, Alas, ſaid he, what meaneth all this? All this needeth not. By God's Grace I will not ſtart away: But I with all my Heart and Mind give unto God moſt hearty Thanks, that he hath made me worthy to abide all this for his holy Name's Sake.

Rawlins White going to the Place of Execution.

Anno 1555.

So he came to a Place in his Way, where his poor Wife and Children ſtood weeping, and making a great Lamentation; the ſudden Sight of whom ſo pierced his Heart that the Tears trickled down his Face. But he ſoon after, as tho' he had miſliked this Infirmity of his Fleſh, began to be as it were altogether angry with himſelf; inſomuch, that ſtriking his Breaſt with his Hand, he uſed theſe Words, Ah Fleſh, ſtayeſt thou me ſo? wouldeſt thou fain prevail? Well, I tell thee do what thou canſt, thou ſhalt not, by God's Grace, have the Victory. By this Time this poor Innocent came to the very Altar of his Sacrifice (I mean the Place appointed for his Death) and there found a Stake ready ſet up, with ſome Wood toward the making of the Fire. Which when he beheld, he ſet forward himſelf very boldly: But in going toward to the Stake, he fell down upon his Knees and kiſſed the Ground; and in riſing again, a little Earth ſticking on his Noſe, he ſaid theſe Words, Earth unto Earth, and Duſt unto Duſt: Thou art my Mother, and unto thee I ſhall return. Then went he chearfully and very joyfully, and ſet his Back cloſe unto the Stake; and when he had ſtood there a while, he caſt his Eye upon this Reporter, and called him unto him, and ſaid, I feel a great Fighting between the Fleſh and the Spirit, and the Fleſh would very fain have his Swing; and therefore I pray you, when you ſee me any thing tempted, hold your Finger up to me, and I truſt I ſhall remember myſelf.

He is moved at the Sight of his Wife and Children.

As he was thus ſtanding with his Back cloſe unto the Stake, a Smith came with a great Chain of Iron; whom when he ſaw, he caſt up his Hand with a loud Voice, and gave God great Thanks. Then the Smith caſt a Chain about him, and as he was making it faſt on the other Side, Rawlins ſaid unto him, I pray you good Friend knock in the Chain faſt; for it may be that the Fleſh would ſtrive mightily, but God of his great Mercy give me Strength and Patience to abide the Extremity.

Now when the Smith had made him ſure to the Stake, the Officers began to lay on more Wood, with a little Straw and Reed: Wherein the good old Man was no leſs occupied than the beſt; for as far as he could reach his Hands, he would pluck the Straw and Reed, and lay it about him in Places moſt convenient for his ſpeedy Diſpatch. Which Thing he did with ſuch a chearful Countenance, that all Men there preſent were aſtoniſhed at it.

The Chearfulneſs of Rawlins White at his Death.

Thus when all Things were ready, ſo that there lacked nothing but kindling the Fire, directly over againſt the Stake, in the Face of Rawlins White, there was a Standing erected, whereon ſtept up a Prieſt, addreſſing himſelf to ſpeak to the People, which were many in Number, becauſe it was Market-Day. When Rawlins perceived him, and conſidered the Cauſe of his coming, he reached a little Straw unto him, and made two little Stays, and ſet them under his Elbows. Then went the Prieſt forward in his Sermon, wherein he ſpake of many Things touching the Authority of the Church of Rome. In the mean Time Rawlins gave ſuch good Ear and Attention, that he ſeemed nothing at all moved or diſquieted. At laſt, the Prieſt came to the Sacrament of the Altar, and there he began to inveigh againſt Rawlins's Opinions; in which his Invection he cited the common Place of Scripture, and thereupon made a learned Interpretation.

The Martyrdom of Rawlins White.

Ah thou Naughty Hypocrite

The description of a Popish Priest who when he had taken away the Glory & Office of Christ, fell down Suddenly & dyed

I am Cleansed from my Sins

Anno 1555. Now when Rawlins perceived that he went about not only to preach and teach the People false Doctrine, but also to confirm it by Scripture, he suddenly started up, and beckoned his Hands to the People, saying twice; Come hither good People, and hear not a false Prophet preaching: And then said unto the Preacher, Ah thou naughty Hypocrite, dost thou presume to prove thy false Doctrine by Scripture? Look in the Text what followeth; Did not Christ say, Do this in Remembrance of me? After which Words, the Priest being rather amazed than interrupted, forthwith held his Peace.

His Words to the popish Priest.

Then some that stood by cried out, Put Fire; Set to Fire; which being done, the Straw and Reed, cast up a great and sudden Flame. In which Flame this good Man bathed his Hands so long until such Time as the Sinews shrunk, and the Fat dropped away, saving that once he did, as it were, wipe his Face with one of them. All this while, which was somewhat long, he cried with a loud Voice, O Lord, receive my Soul; O Lord, receive my Spirit, until he could not open his Mouth. At last, the Extremity of the Fire was so vehement against his Legs, that they were consumed almost before the rest of his Body was burned, which made the whole Body fall over the Chain into the Fire sooner than it would have done. Thus died this good old Man for the Testimony of God's Truth, being now rewarded, no doubt, with the Crown of eternal Life. He was at the Time of his Death about 60 Years of Age.

Before I pass over this Month of March, I shall take a cursory Notice of some of the Deeds and Acts of Pope Julius III. who died about the latter End of this Month. Under this Julius flourished the Archbishop of Beneventanus, a Florentine, named Johannes a Casa, Dean of the Pope's Chamber, and chief Legate to the Venetians: Who well declaring the Fruit of that filthy See, so far forgot both Honesty and Nature, that he was not ashamed to play the filthy Sodomite himself, and to boast openly of the same; but also took upon him most impudently in Italian Metre, to all Men's Ears, to set forth the Praise and Commendation of that beastly Iniquity, saying, That he himself never used other; and this Book was printed at Venice by one Trojanus Navus; and yet the Pope could suffer this so great Iniquity and shameless Beastliness, even under his Nose in his own Chamber, who could not abide the true Doctrine of Christ in christian Books.

The Death of Pope Julius the Third.

Amongst other Deeds of the aforesaid Pope, in his Jubilee, and in the Synod of Trent, and in confirming of the Idol of Lauretane, this is also reported of him in his Life, that he delighted greatly in Pork-flesh and Peacocks. Upon a Time when he was admonished by his Physician to abstain from all Swines-Flesh, for that it was noisom for his Gout, and yet would not follow his Counsel; the Physician afterward gave Warning to his Steward or Orderer of his Diet, that he should set no more Pork-flesh before him. Whereupon when the Pope perceived the said Pork-flesh to be lacking in his accustomed Service: Where, said he, is my Pork? And when his Steward had answered, that his Physician had forbidden any Pork to be served: The Pope bursted out into a great Rage, and said these Words, Bring me, said he, my Pork-flesh, in the Despight of God.

Monstrous Blasphemy in the Pope.

At another Time, he sitting at Dinner, pointing to a Peacock upon his Table, which he had not touched; Keep, said he, this cold Peacock for me against Supper, and let me sup in the Garden; for I shall have Guests. So when Supper came, and amongst other hot Peacocks, he saw not his cold Peacock brought to his Table: The Pope, after his wonted Manner, most horribly blaspheming God, fell into an extream Rage, &c. Whereupon one of his Cardinals sitting by, desired him, saying, Let not your Holiness, I pray you, be moved with a Matter of so small a Weight. Then Pope Julius answering again, What, said he, if God was so angry for an Apple, that he cast our first Parents out of Paradise for the same; why may not I, being his Vicar, be angry then for a Peacock, since a Peacock is a greater Matter than an Apple? Behold here, good Reader, by this Pope, the Holiness of that blasphemous See: And yet thou shalt see here what Affection was borne to this Pope here in England, by the * Diriges, Hearses, and Funerals commanded to be had and celebrated in all Churches by the Queen and her Council, as may appear by the Copy of their Letters here following.

Pope Julius blasphemeth God for a Peacock.

* A Service for the Dead used by the Papists.

A Letter from the Bishop of Winchester to Bonner Bishop of London, concerning the celebrating of the Pope's Funeral.

AFTER my hearty Commendations to your good Lordship. The King and Queen's Majesty having certain Knowledge of the Death of the Pope's Holiness, thought good there should be as well solemn Obsequies said for him throughout the Realm, as also these Prayers (which I send you here enclosed) used at Mass-time in all Places at this Time of Vacation; and therefore ordered me to signify their Pleasures unto you in this Behalf, that thereupon ye might proceed to the full Accomplishment thereof, by putting the same in due Execution within your own Dioceses, and sending Word to the rest of the Bishops, to do the like in theirs.

Thus doubting not but that your Lordship will use such Diligence in this Matter at this Time, as shall be necessary, I bid your Lordship heartily well to fare. From my House at Asher, the 10th of April, 1555.

Your assured Friend and Brother,

STEPHANUS WINTON, Chancel.

Prayers commanded to be used in the Funeral Masses for the Pope, the Apostolick See being vacant.

WE beseech thee, O Lord, of thy great Pity to grant to the holy Roman Church a Bishop, whose Care towards us may be always acceptable to thee, and that he may be revered by thy People for his good Government, to the Glory of thy Name, thro' our Lord.

A Secret Prayer.

MAY thy abundant Pity, O Lord, towards us, grant that we may rejoice to have obtain'd a Bishop of our holy Mother Church acceptable to thy Majesty, thro' our Lord.

After the Communion.

MAY thy wonderful Grace, O Lord, rejoice us (being refresh'd with the Sacrament of thy precious Body and Blood) in the Choice of a Bishop who may instruct thy People in all Virtue, thro' our Lord.

Upon this Command, on Wedneſday in Eaſter Week there were Hearſes ſet up, and Diriges ſung for the ſaid Julius in divers Places. At which Time a Woman going into St. Magnus Church at the Bridge-foot in London, and there ſeeing an Hearſe and other Preparation, aſked what it meant: Some that ſtood by, ſaid that it was for the Pope, and that ſhe muſt pray for him. Nay, ſaid ſhe, that will I not, for he needeth not my Prayers; and ſeeing he could forgive us all our Sins, I am ſure he is clean himſelf: therefore I need not to pray for him. She was heard to ſpeak theſe Words by ſome that ſtood by: Who by and by carried her unto the Cage at London-Bridge, and bid her cool herſelf there.

A Woman of St. Magnus impriſoned for not praying for the Pope.

Almighty God by many and ſundry Ways hath admoniſhed Men of all Nations in theſe latter Years to embrace, and not violently to reſiſt the Light of his Goſpel: As firſt, by preaching of his Word: Secondly, by the Blood of the Martyrs: And thirdly, by terrible Examples from Time to Time ſhewed upon his Adverſaries. In the Number of whom cometh here to be remembred the notable Working of God's Hand upon a certain Prieſt in Kent, named Nightingal, Parſon of Crondal near Canterbury, who upon Shrove-Sunday, which was about the third Day of the ſaid Month of March, rejoycing greatly at this Alteration of Religion, began to make a Sermon to his Pariſhioners, taking his Theme out of the Words of St. John; He that ſaith that he hath no Sin, is a Liar, and the Truth is not in him, &c. and upon the ſame very impertinently declared to them all ſuch Articles as were ſet forth by the Pope's Authority, ad by the Commandment of the Biſhops of this Realm; ſaying moreover unto the People in this wiſe, Now Maſters and Neighbours rejoice and be merry, for the prodigal Son is come home. For I know that moſt Part of you be as I am, for I know your Hearts well enough. And I ſhall tell you what hath happened in this Week paſt: I was before my Lord Cardinal Poole, and he made me as free from Sin as I was at the Font-ſtone: And on Thurſday laſt being before him, he hath appointed me to notify (I thank him for it) the ſame unto you. And I will tell you what it is. And ſo reading the Pope's Bull of Pardon that was ſent into England, he ſaid, he thanked God that he had lived to ſee that Day; adding moreover, that he believed by the Virtue of that Bull he was clean from Sin, as the Night that he was born: And immediately upon the ſame fell ſuddenly down out of the Pulpit, and never ſtirred Hand nor Foot. Teſtified by Robert Auſten of Chatham, who both heard and ſaw the ſame, and is witneſſed alſo by the Country round about.

A Spectacle for all Chriſtians to behold, and to take Heed of the Pope's blaſphemous Doctrine.

The ſudden Death of Mr. Nightingal, Parſon of Crondal in Kent, who was made chief Penitentiary of that Deanery, by Cardinal Pool's Authority.

On the ſecond Day of April, John Awcock died in Priſon, and was buried in the Fields, as the Manner of the Papiſts was, to deny their Chriſtian Burial to ſuch as died out of their Church.

Having now entred into the Month of April, we will ſet down in Order out of the publick Records what happened in the ſaid Month. The firſt Day of April, 1555, a Letter was ſent to the Sheriff of Kent, to apprehend Thomas Woodgate and William Maynard, for preaching ſecretly, and to ſend them up to the Council.

The ſeventh Day of the ſaid Month, another Letter was ſent to the ſaid Sheriff for the Apprehenſion of one Harwich, who went about with a Boy with him, preaching from Place to Place. Anno 1555.

The Fifteenth of April a Letter was directed to Sir Nicholas Hare, and Sir Thomas Cornwallis, requiring them to examine Mr. Flower, alias Branch, what he meant to wear about his Neck written, Deum time, Idolum fuge, and whom elſe he knew to wear the like; praying them alſo to ſpeak to Bonner Biſhop of London, ſpeedily to proceed againſt him for his Religion according to the Laws, and that the Juſtices of Peace of Middleſex ſhould likewiſe proceed againſt him for ſhedding of Blood in the Church according to the Statute; ſo as if he continued in his Opinion, he might be executed at the fartheſt by the latter End of this Week, and that his Right Hand be ſtricken off the Day before his Execution, or the ſame Day.

The 22d of April there was a like Letter ſent to the Juſtices of Peace of Middleſex, with a Writ for the Execution of the ſaid Flower, commanding them to ſee his Hand ſtricken off before his Burning.

The 29th of April, Mr. Robert Horneby, Servant then to the Lady Elizabeth, was convented before the Council for his Religion; and ſtanding conſtantly to the Truth, notwithſtanding their Threats and other Perſuaſions, was therefore committed to the Marſhalſea.

A Declaration of the Life, Examination, and Burning of George Marſh, who ſuffered at Weſt-Cheſter, the 24*th of* April 1555.

George Marſh was born in the Pariſh of Deane in the County of Lancaſter, and was well brought up in Learning and honeſt Trade of Living by his Parents; who afterwards about the 25th Year of his Age took to Wife an honeſt Maiden of the Country; with whom he continued, earning their Living upon a Farm, having Children between them lawfully begotten: And then God taking his Wife out of this World, he (leaving his Houſhold and Children in good Order) went unto the Univerſity of Cambridge, where he ſtudied, and much increaſed in Learning, and was a Miniſter of God's holy Word and Sacraments, and for a while was Curate to Laurence Saunders. In which Condition of Life he continued for a Space, earneſtly ſetting forth God's true Religion, to the defacing of Antichriſt's falſe Doctrine, by his Sermons, as well there and in the Pariſh of Deane, as elſewhere in Lancaſhire.

At length he was apprehended, and kept cloſe Priſoner in Cheſter, by George Cotes then Biſhop of that See, within the Precinct of the Biſhop's Houſe, about the Space of four Months, being not permitted to have Relief and Comfort of his Friends; but Charge being given unto the Porter, to mark who they were that aſked for him, and to ſignify their Names unto the Biſhop, as by the particular Deſcription of his Story, recorded with his own Pen, more evidently may appear in the Proceſs hereunder following.

Dr. Cotes Biſhop of Cheſter, a Perſecutor of George Marſh.

The

Anno 1555.

The Examination of George Marſh, written by himſelf.

ON Monday before Palm-Sunday, which was the 12th of March, it was told me at my Mother's Houſe, that Roger Wrinſtone, with others of Mr. Barton's Servants, did make diligent Search for me in Bolton, and when they perceived that I was not there, they gave ſtrict Charge to Robert Ward and Robert Marſh, to find and bring me to Mr. Barton the Day next following, with others to be brought before the Honourable Earl of Darby, to be examined in matters of Religon, &c.

I knowing this, by relation of divers of my Friends was diverſly affected; my Mother and ſome of my Friends adviſing me to fly, and to avoid the Peril, which thing I had intended before after a Week then next enſuing, if this in the mean while had not chanced; ſeeing that if I were taken, and would not recant in matters of Religion (as they thought I would not, and as God ſtrengthening and aſſiſting me with his Holy Spirit I never will) it would not only have put them to great Sorrow, Heavineſs, and Loſſes, with Coſts and Charges, to their Shame and Rebuke in this World, but alſo mine own ſelf, after Troubles and painful Impriſonment, unto ſhameful Death.

Mr. Marſh adviſed by his Friends to fly.

This conſidered, they adviſed and counſelled me to depart and fly the Country, as I had intended to have done, if this had not happened. To whoſe Counſel my weak Fleſh would gladly have conſented, but my Spirit did not fully agree; thinking and ſaying thus to myſelf, that if I fled away, it would be thought, reported, and ſaid, that I did not only fly the Country, and my neareſt and deareſt Friends: But much rather from Chriſt's Holy Word, according as theſe Years paſt I had with my Heart, or at leaſt with mine outward living profeſſed, and with my Mouth and Word taught, according to the ſmall Talent given me of the Lord. I being thus with their Counſel and Advice, and the Cogitations and Counſels of mine own Mind drawn as it were divers Ways, went from my Mother's Houſe, ſaying, I would come again at Evening.

Mr. Marſh in a perplexity whether to fly or to tarry.

In the mean Time I ceaſed not by earneſt Prayer to ask and ſeek Counſel of God (who is the Giver of all good Gifts) and of other my Friends, whoſe pious Judgments and Knowledge I much truſted to. After this I met with one of my ſaid Friends on Dean-moor, about Sun going down; and after we had conſulted together of my Buſineſs, not without hearty Prayer kneeling on our Knees, we departed. I not fully determining what to do, but taking my Leave with my Friend, ſaid; I doubted not but God would give me ſuch Wiſdom and Counſel, as ſhould be moſt to his Honour and Glory, the Profit of my Neighbours and Brethren in the World, and obtaining of mine eternal Salvation by Chriſt in Heaven.

This done, I returned to my Mother's Houſe again, where ſeveral of Mr. Barton's Servants had been ſeeking after me; who, when they could not find me, ſtrictly charged my Brother and William Marſh to ſeek me that Night, and to bring me to Smethehils the next Day: Who being ſo charged, were gone to ſeek me in Adderton, or elſewhere I know not. Thus intending before to have been all Night with my Mother, but then conſidering that my tarrying there would diſquiet her with her Houſhold, I departed from thence, and went beyond Dean Church, and there tarried all Night with an old Friend of mine, taking ill Reſt, and conſulting much with myſelf of my Trouble.

Mr. Marſh's Brethren charged to ſeek him.

At my firſt awaking, one came to me from a faithful Friend of mine with Letters, who ſaid this: My Friend's Advice was that I ſhould in no wiſe fly, but abide and boldly confeſs the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt. At whoſe Words I was ſo confirmed and eſtabliſhed in my Conſcience, that from thenceforth I conſulted no more, whether it were better to fly or to tarry; but was at a Point with myſelf, that I would not fly, but to go to Mr. Barton who did ſeek for me, and there preſent myſelf, and patiently bear ſuch Croſs as it ſhould pleaſe God to lay upon my Shoulders. Whereupon my Mind before being much diſquieted was now merry and at eaſe.

I aroſe early in the Morning, and after I had ſaid the Engliſh Litany (as my Cuſtom was) with other Prayers, kneeling on my Knees by my Friend's Bed ſide, I prepared myſelf to go toward Smethehils; and as I was going thither, I went into the Houſes of Henry Widdowes, of my Mother-in-law, of Ralph Yeton, and of the Wife of Thomas Richardſon, deſiring them to pray for me, and have me commended to all my Friends, and to comfort my Mother, and be good to my little Children; for (as I ſuppoſed) they ſhould not ſee my Face any more before the laſt Day; and ſo took my Leave of them, not without Tears ſhed on both Parts, and came to Smethehils about nine of the Clock, and preſented myſelf before Mr. Barton: Who ſhewed me a Letter from the Earl of Darby, wherein he was commanded to ſend me with others to Lathum.

Taketh his Leave of his Friends.

Whereupon he charged my Brother and William Marſh to bring and deliver me the next Day by ten of the Clock, before the ſaid Earl or his Council. I made earneſt Sute with other ſpecial Friends, which I had there at the ſame Time, to Mr. Barton, that he would take ſome one of them, or them all bound by Recognizance or otherwiſe, for mine appearing before the ſaid Earl or his ſaid Council, that my Brother and William Marſh might be at Home, becauſe it was the chiefeſt Time of ſeeding, and their Ploughs could not go if they were not at Home; but nothing could be obtained.

Then we went to my Mother's, and there I dined and ſhifted part of my Cloaths; and ſo praying, took my Leave of my Mother, the Wife of Richard Marſh, and both their Houſholds, they and I both weeping, and departed from them, and went toward Lathum, and were all Night a Mile and an half on this ſide Lathum. The next Day, which was Wedneſday, we aroſe, prayed, and came to Lathum betimes, and tarried there till Four of the Clock in the Afternoon.

Then was I called by Roger Mekinſon to my Lord and his Council, and brought into the Chamber of Preſence, where was preſent Sir William Nores, Sir Pierce Alee, Mr. Sherburn the Parſon of Grapnal, Mr. More, with others. Where when I had tarried a little while, my Lord turned towards me, and aſked what was my Name: I anſwered, Marſh.

Then he ask'd, whether I was one of thoſe that ſowed evil Seed and Diſſention amongſt the People. Which thing I denied, deſiring to know mine Accuſers, and what could be laid againſt me; but that I could not know.

Mr. Marſh examined before the Earl of Darby.

Then he ſaid, he would with his Council examine me themſelves, and asked me whether I was was a Prieſt; I ſaid no. Then he asked me what had been my Living. I anſwered I was a Miniſter, ſerved a Cure, and taught a School. Then ſaid my Lord to his Council, this is a wonderful Thing. Before he ſaid he was no Prieſt, and now he confeſſeth himſelf to be one. I anſwered, by the Laws now uſed in this Realm (as far as I do know) I am none.

Then they asked me who gave me Orders, or whether I had taken any at all. I anſwered, I received Orders of the Biſhop of London and Lincoln.

Then ſaid they one to another, thoſe be of theſe new Hereticks, and asked me what Acquaintance I had with them? I anſwered, I never ſaw them but at the Time when I received Orders.

They asked me how long I had been Curate, and whether I had miniſtred with a good Conſcience; I anſwered, I had been Curate but one Year, and had miniſtred with a good Conſcience, I thanked God, and if the Laws of the Realm would have ſuffered me, I would have miniſtred ſtill; and if the Laws at any Time hereafter would ſuffer me to miniſter after that ſort, I would miniſter again.

At which they murmured, and the Parſon of Grapnal ſaid, this laſt Communion was the moſt deviliſh Thing that ever was deviſed. Then they asked me what my Belief was.

I anſwered, I believed in God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, according as the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtaments do teach, and according as the four Symbols or Creeds, that is to wit, the Creed commonly called the Apoſtles, the Creed of the Council of Nice, of Athanaſius, and of Auſtin, and Ambroſe do teach.

And after a few Words, the Parſon of Grapnal ſaid; But what is thy Belief in the Sacrament of the Altar?

Mr. Marſh's Belief in the Sacrament.

I anſwered, I believed that whoſoever, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, did receive the holy Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, did eat and drink Chriſt's Body and Blood with all the Benefits of his Death and Reſurrection to their eternal Salvation; for Chriſt, ſaid I, is ever preſent with his Sacrament.

Then they asked me, whether the Bread and Wine, by the virtue of the Words pronounced by the Prieſt, were changed into the Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt, and that the Sacrament, whether it were received or reſerved, was the very Body of Chriſt;

Mr. Marſh loth to anſwer to the Queſtion of Tranſubſtantiation.

Whereunto I made anſwer, I knew no further than I had ſhewed already. For my Knowledge is imperfect ſaid I; deſiring them not to aſk me ſuch hard and unprofitable Queſtions, whereby to bring my Body into danger of Death, and to ſuck my Blood. Whereat they were not a little offended, ſaying, they were no Blood-ſuckers, and intended nothing to me but to make me a good Chriſtian.

So after many other Queſtions which I avoided as well as I could, remembring the Saying of St. Paul, Fooliſh and unlearned Queſtions avoid, knowing they do but ingender Strife; my Lord commanded me to come to the Board, and gave me Pen and Ink in my Hand, and commanded me to write mine Anſwers to the Queſtions of the Sacrament above-named; and I wrote as I had anſwered before. Whereat he being much offended, commanded me to write a more direct Anſwer, ſaying, I ſhould not chuſe but do it.

Mr. Marſh commanded by the Earl of Darby to write his Anſwers.

Then I took the Pen and wrote, that further I knew not. Whereat he being ſore grieved, after many Threatnings ſaid, I ſhould be put to a ſhameful Death like a Traitor, with other like Words; and ſometimes giving me fair Words if I would turn and be conformable as others were, how glad he would be. Anno 1555.

In Concluſion, after much ado, he commanded me to ward in a cold, windy Stone Houſe, where was little Room; where I lay two Nights without any Bed, ſaving a few great Canvas Tent Cloaths, I had a Pair of Sheets, but no Woollen Cloaths, and ſo continued till Palm-Sunday, occupying myſelf as well as I could in Meditation, Prayer and Study; for no Man could be ſuffered to come to me but my Keeper twice a Day when he brought me Meat and Drink.

The Earl of Darby commandeth Marſh into Priſon.

Another Examination of Geo. Marſh.

ON Palm-Sunday after Dinner I was ſent for to my Lord and his Council (ſaving Sir William Nores and Sir Pierce Alee were not then preſent) among whom was Sir John Beram, and the Vicar of Preſcot. So they examined me yet once again of the Sacrament. And after I had communed apart with the Vicar of Preſcot a good Space concerning that Matter, he returned with me to my Lord and his Council, ſaying, That Anſwer which I had made before, and then did make (as it is above written) was ſufficient for a Beginner, and as one which did not profeſs a perfect Knowledge in that Matter, until ſuch Time as I had learned further. Wherewith the Earl was very well pleaſed, ſaying, he doubted not but by the Means and Help of the Vicar of Preſcot I would be conformable in other Things: And after many fair Words he commanded I ſhould have a Bed, with Fire, and Liberty to go amongſt his Servants, ſo that I would do no Harm with my Communication amongſt them.

Marſh again examined about the Sacrament

And ſo after much other Communication I departed, much more troubled in my Mind than before, becauſe I had not with more Boldneſs confeſſed Chriſt, but in ſuch Sort as mine Adverſaries thereby thought they ſhould prevail againſt me; whereat I was much grieved: For hitherto I went about as much as in me lay, to rid myſelf out of their Hands; if by any Means, without open denying of Chriſt and his Word that could be done.

Mr. Marſh troubled in his Conſcience for being no more bold touching the Sacrament.

This conſidered, I cried more earneſtly to God by Prayer, deſiring him to ſtrengthen me with his holy Spirit, with Boldneſs to confeſs him; and to deliver me from their enticing Words, and that I were not ſpoiled thro' their Philoſophy and deceitful Vanity, after the Tradition of Men and Ordinances of the World, and not after Chriſt.

A Day or two after I was ſent for to the Vicar of Preſcot, and the Parſon of Grapnal; where our Communication was concerning the Maſs: And he aſked what offended me in the Maſs. I anſwered, the whole Maſs did offend me, firſt becauſe it was in a ſtrange Language, whereby the People were not edified, contrary to St. Paul's Doctrine, 1 Cor. 14. and becauſe of the manifold and intolerable Abuſes and Errors contained therein, contrary to Chriſt's Prieſthood and Sacrifice.

Mr. Marſh again examined before the Biſhop's Chaplains

Then they aſked me in what Place thereof, and I named ſome Places; which Places they went about with gentle and far ſought Interpretations to mitigate, ſaying thoſe Places were underſtood far otherwiſe than the Words did purport, or than I did take them.

I anſwered, I did underſtand them as they did purport, and as their own Books do comment and gloſs upon them.

Anno 1555.

Sacrifice of the Maſs expounded by the Papiſts, to be nothing elſe but the Sacrifice only of Thankſgiving.

They ſaid, Sacrificium or Oblatio did not in the Maſs ſignify any thing elſe, than either a Sacrifice of Praiſe and Thankſgiving, or elſe a Memorial of a Sacrifice of Oblation. So they cauſed a Maſs-book to be ſent for, and ſhewed me wherein ſome Places of the Maſs was written, Sacrificium laudis. Whereto I anſwered, that it followed not therefore that in all Places it ſignified a Sacrifice or Oblation of Praiſe or Thankſgiving; and altho' it did, yet was not a Sacrifice of Praiſe or Thankſgiving to be offered for the Sins of the People, for that did Chriſt by his own Paſſion once offer on the Croſs: Where the Words of the Maſs were, that the Prieſt did offer an Oblation and Sacrifice for the Sins and Offences both of himſelf and of the People; for them that were dead, and for the Salvation of the Living; and that the Commixtion of the Body and Blood of Chriſt was Health both of Body and Soul.

The Vicar anſwered, that was to be underſtood of the Commixtion of Chriſt's Body and Blood with his Church or People. So after much Exhortation unto me, that I ſhould be conformable to the true catholick Church (which, as they meant, was the Romiſh Church) I departed, not conſenting unto them.

The Articles of Dr. Crome's Recantation brought to Mr. Marſh.

Within a Day or two Mr. More came to me, bringing with him certain Articles, to which Dr. Crome had conſented and ſubſcribed in the Preſence of certain Witneſſes in the Days of King Henry the Eighth, and deſired me to read them over, and aſked me whether I would conſent and ſubſcribe unto thoſe Articles. And after Communication had of one or two of the ſaid Articles, I confeſſed plainly I would not conſent and ſubſcribe to thoſe Articles: For then I did againſt mine own Conſcience: And ſo he departed.

So within a ſhort Space after, the ſaid Parſon and Vicar ſent for me again, ſaying, my Lord would be at a ſhort Point with me; for if I would not conſent and ſubſcribe unto four Articles drawn out of the Articles aforeſaid, I muſt go to Priſon ſtraitways.

Four popiſh Articles for Marſh to ſubſcribe unto.

The Firſt was, Whether the Maſs now uſed in the Church of England was according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, and with Faith, Reverence and Devotion to be heard and ſeen?

The Second, Whether the Almighty, by the Words pronounced by the Prieſt, did change the Bread and Wine after the Words of Conſecration into the Body and Blood of Chriſt, whether it were received or reſerved?

Thirdly, Whether the Lay-people ought to receive but under the Form of Bread only, and that the one Kind was ſufficient for them.

Fourthly, Whether Confeſſion to the Prieſt now uſed in England were godly and neceſſary?

Theſe four Queſtions or Articles they delivered me in Writing, and bade me go to my Chamber and ſubſcribe mine Anſwers with mine own Hand, and come again; and within one half Hour I came to them again, and delivered them the Queſtions with mine Anſwers. The Firſt I denied. The Second I anſwered, as I did to my Lord before, and as is above-written. To the Third I anſwered, that the Lay-people by Chriſt's Inſtitution ought to receive under both Kinds, and that it ſufficeth them not to receive under one Kind only. Fourthly, that though Confeſſion auricular were a commodious Means to inſtruct the rude People, yet it was not neceſſary nor commanded of God.

He denieth the Articles.

They much exhorted me then to leave mine Opinions, ſaying, I was much deceived, underſtanding the Scriptures amiſs, and counſelled me to follow the catholick Church of Chriſt, and to do as others did. I anſwered, my Faith in Chriſt conceived by his holy Word I neither could nor would deny, alter, or change, for any living Creature whatſoever he were, deſiring them to ſpeak to my Lord, that during my Life and Impriſonment my poor Friends might be ſuffered to relieve me with neceſſary Things according to their Powers. And ſo after much Exhortation of them, to do and believe as the catholick Church did, we departed; I from thenceforth continuing in the Porter's Ward, not coming forth of my Chamber, except at Noon and Night while I dined and ſupped.

Upon one of the Eaſter Holy-Days, Mr. Sherburn and Mr. More ſent for me, perſuading me much to leave mine Opinions; ſaying, all the Bringers up and Favourers of that Religion had evil Luck, and were either put to Death or in Priſon, and in Danger of Life. Again the Favourers of the Religion now uſed had wondrous good Luck and Proſperity in all Things: With many other worldly Reaſons of Man's Wiſdom; for as for the Scriptures Mr. Sherburn confeſſed himſelf ignorant.

God's Truth is not to be eſteemed by Proſperity or Adverſity.

I anſwered, that I believed and leaned only to the Scriptures, not judging Things by Proſperity or Adverſity: But they earneſtly adviſed me to recant mine Opinions, and not to be hindered for any worldly Shame.

I anſwered, that that which I did, I did not for the avoiding of any worldly Shame: Neither yet did I it for any vain Praiſe of the World, but in the reverent Fear of God.

Then Mr. More queſtioned with me of receiving the Sacrament under one Kind. I ſaid, Chriſt's Inſtitution was plain, that all Men ſhould drink of the Cup. Then he told me of the 24th of St. Luke, and the 20th of the Acts, where was Mention of breaking Bread only: From which he gathered, that they received the Sacrament but under one Kind.

Chriſt breaking of Bread, Luke 24. proveth not the receiving under one Kind.

That I denied, ſaying, thoſe Places either did not ſpeak of the Celebration of the Lord's Supper, or elſe under the Name of breaking Bread was ſignified and meant the receiving of the Sacrament, both of the Body and Blood of Chriſt according to his Inſtitution. So after much Communication of that Matter, Mr. Sherburn ſaid, It was great Pity that I being a well-favoured young Man, and one that might have good Living and do Good, would ſo fooliſhly caſt myſelf away, ſticking ſo hard to ſuch fooliſh Opinions.

I anſwered as I had done before to my Lord and to his Council, that my Life, Mother, Children, Brethren, Siſters, and Friends, with other Delights of Life, were as dear and ſweet unto me as unto any other Man, and that I would be as loth to loſe them as another would, if I might hold them with a good Conſcience, and without the Ignominy of Chriſt; and ſeeing I could not do that, my Truſt was, that God would ſtrengthen me with his Holy Spirit to loſe them all for his Sake: For I take myſelf, ſaid I, for a Sheep appointed to be ſlain, patiently to ſuffer what Croſs ſoever it ſhall pleaſe my merciful Father to lay on me. And ſo after I had deſired them, that if I were committed to Priſon my Friends might be ſuffered to relieve me, they departed.

Mr. More after this brought unto me a Book of one Alphonſus a Spaniſh Friar, of all Hereſies wherewith the Church of Rome, which he called Chriſt's true Church, had been troubled ſince Chriſt's Time, willing me to read and take Counſel of that Book; and appointed me a Place where this Author did write againſt them that ſay, the Lay-people ought to receive under both Kinds.

This Author I perceived did vehemently write againſt Luther, Melanæthon, Pelican, and other Germans of this our Time, in all Points defending the blaſphemous Abuſes and Enormities of the Romiſh Church, condemning as deteſtable Hereſies whatſoever was written, taught, or believed contrary to the ſame, uſing for his ſtrongeſt Arguments, the Conſent, Agreement and Determination of the Romiſh Church. After a few Days Mr. More came to me again, aſking me how I liked the Book. I ſaid the Author of the Book did in all Points, being a Papiſt, allow the Rites and Abuſes of the Romiſh Church; and ſhewed him further, that this Author without Authority, and contrary both to the Scriptures and old Doctors, did condemn for Hereſy the Lay-people receiving of this Sacrament under both Kinds, whereas this Author witneſſeth his ownſelf, Chriſt's Church nine hundred Years after Chriſt uſed the contrary.

His Judgment of Alphonſus's Book.

In Concluſion he rebuked me, ſaying I was unlearned, and erred from the catholick Faith, ſtubborn, and ſtood altogether in mine own Conceit. I anſwered, for my Learning, I acknowledge myſelf to know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt, even him that was crucified, and that my Faith was grounded upon God's holy Word only, and ſuch as, I doubted not, pleaſed God, and as I would ſtand in until the laſt Day, God aſſiſting me, and that I did not ſay or do any Thing either of Stubbornneſs, Self-wilfulneſs, Vain-glory, or any other worldly Purpoſe, but with good Conſcience, and in the Fear of God: And deſired him to ſpeak to my Lord and his Council, that I might find ſome Gentleneſs and Mercy at their Hands. He made me ſhort Anſwer. Then I ſaid, I commit my Cauſe unto God, who hath numbred the Hairs of my Head, and appointed the Days of my Life, ſaying; I am ſure God which is a righteous Judge, would make Inquiſition for my Blood, according as he hath promiſed. Then he took his Book from me and departed.

I continued ſtill in Ward until Low-Sunday, and after Dinner my Keeper Richard Scot came to me into my Chamber, and told me that two young Men were come to carry me to Lancaſter, and he delivered me unto them, a great Company both of my Lord's Servants and others, accompanying and bringing me on the Way, unto Richard Adderton's.

Mr. Marſh carried to Lancaſter-caſtle.

To whom I made plain Anſwer, that in Matters of Faith I would give Place to no earthly Creature. So they comforted me, and ſaid that they were ſorry for me; ſaying, If I knew mine Opinion to be good, I did well, and ſo they departed, willing my Bringers to treat me kindly.

My Bringers by the Way ſhewed me they were ordered and adviſed to bind me, and that they deſired firſt to ſee me: And after they had looked on me ſitting at Dinner, they anſwered they would take Charge of me being looſe, for they ſaid I ſeemed to be an honeſt Man.

The firſt Night we were at Broughton, and the ſecond Day we came to Lancaſter betimes in the Afternoon, and they kept me all Night with them of their Gentleneſs, and in the Morning delivered me to the Jailor, who brought me into the higheſt Priſon where I do remain.

After that, the ſaid George came to Lancaſter-caſtle, and there, being brought with other Priſoners unto the Seſſions, was made to hold up his Hand with the Malefactors. The Earl of Derby had this Communication with him as here followeth.

Mr. Marſh cauſed to hold up his Hand at Lancaſter among other Priſoners.

Communication between Geo. Marſh, and the Earl of Derby.

I Said unto my Lord, I had not dwelled in the Country theſe three or four Years paſt, and came home but lately to viſit my Mother, Children, and others of my Friends, and to have departed out of the Country before Eaſter then next, and to have gone out of the Realm. Wherefore I truſted, ſeeing nothing could be laid againſt me, wherein I had offended againſt the Laws of this Realm, his Lordſhip would not with captious Queſtions examine me, to bring my Body into Danger of Death, to the great Diſcomfort of my Mother, but ſuffer me to avoid peaceably, ſeeing I might have fled out of the Country, and yet of mine own Will came to his Lordſhip.

He ſaid to his Council, he had heard tell of me above at London; and intended to make Search for me, and take me either in Lancaſhire or above at London, and aſked me into what Land I would have gone.

I anſwered, I would have gone either into Almain, or elſe into Denmark. He ſaid to his Council, in Denmark they uſed ſuch Hereſy as they have done in England; but as for Almain, he ſaid the Emperor had deſtroyed them.

The Earl of Derby chargeth the Realm of Denmark of Hereſy.

So after ſuch like Words, I ſaid unto him, my Truſt was, that his Lordſhip being of the honourable Council of the late King Edward, conſenting and agreeing to Acts concerning Faith toward God and Religion, under great Pain, would not ſo ſoon after conſent to put poor Men to ſhameful Death, as he had threatned me for embracing the ſame with ſo good a Conſcience.

He anſwered, that he, with the Lord Windſor and Lord Dacres, with one more whoſe Name I have forgotten, did not conſent to thoſe Acts, and that the Names of them four would be to be ſeen, as long as the Parliament-Houſe ſtood. Then my Lord did rehearſe the evil Luck of the Dukes of Northumberland and Suffolk, with others, becauſe they favoured not the true Religion; and again the good Hap and Proſperity of the Queen's Highneſs, becauſe ſhe favoured the true Religion, thereby gathering the one to be good, and of God; and the other to be wicked, and of the Devil; and ſaid, that the Duke of Northumberland confeſſed ſo plainly.

The Earl of Derby, Lord Windſor, and Lord Dacres in King Edward's Time agreed not to the Acts of Religion.

George Marſh to the Reader.

FOraſmuch as not only when I was at Lathum, but alſo ſince I departed thence, I hear that there be divers and ſundry Reports and Opinions of the Cauſe of mine Impriſonment, as well at Lathum as at Lancaſter (as I am informed by credible Perſons) ſome ſaying it was only becauſe I would not do open Pennance, and ſome becauſe I could not agree with my Lord and his Council concerning the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and the Manner of Chriſt's Preſence there, ſome becauſe I would not grant it ſufficient

Mr. Marſh writeth his own Examination.

Anno 1555. ficient, and according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, the Lay-people to receive the ſaid Sacrament under one Kind only: I thought it good, dearly beloved in Chriſt, and my bounden Duty, to certify you by mine own Hand-writing, of mine Examination and Handling at Lathum, and to tell you the Truth as near as I could, to quiet your Mind in this Behalf; and therefore I have here written with mine own Hand the Certainty of thoſe Things, as near as I could, here above expreſſed, not omitting any thing at all concerning Religion, whereof they did examine me: Howbeit I perceive in ſome Things I keep not the ſame Order in writing that Thing which was aſked by them, and anſwered by me before or after, as it was in very Deed in all Points, ſaving this, telling the Truth as near as I can, deſiring you to accept in good Worth this my good Will, and to pray for me and all them that be in Bonds, that God would aſſiſt us with his Holy Spirit; and that we may with Boldneſs confeſs his Holy Name; and that Chriſt may be magnified in our Bodies, that we may ſtand full and perfect in all the Will of God; to whom be all Honour and Glory World without End, Amen.

And thus you have heard the Trouble which George Marſh ſuſtained both at Lathum, and alſo at Lancaſter, teſtified and written with his own Hand, whereto he addeth moreover, and ſaith:

While I was, ſaith he, in Ward at Lathum divers at ſundry Times came to me. Some ſaid unto me that all my Fellows had recanted, and were gone Home, whereas indeed that was not ſo; for I ſaw ſeveral of them divers Times after. Others ſaid, that it was reported amongſt my Lord's Houſhold, that I had conſented and agreed in all Things with my Lord and his Council.

While I was at Lancaſter, at this Seſſion many came to talk with me, ſome out of good Will, but without Knowledge, gave me ſuch like Counſel as Peter gave Chriſt as he went up to Jeruſalem, when he took him aſide and began to rebuke him, ſaying; Maſter, favour thyſelf, this Thing ſhall not be unto thee. But I anſwered with Chriſt's ſharp Anſwer unto Peter, Come after me Satan: And perceiving that they were an hindrance unto me, and that they ſavoured not the Things which are of God, but the Things that are of Men, I made them a plain Anſwer, that I neither could nor would follow their Counſel, but that by God's Grace I would both live and die with a pure Conſcience, and according as hitherto I had believed and profeſſed. For we ought in no wiſe to flatter and bear with them, tho' they love us never ſo well, who go about to pluck us away from the Obedience that we owe unto God and to his Word, but after Chriſt's Example ſharply to rebuke them for their Counſel.

Peter's Counſel to Chriſt to ſave himſelf.

Some others, yea even Strangers alſo came to me far unlike unto theſe, who after ſober Communication had, conſented with me in all Things, lamenting much my troublous Eſtate, giving me comfortable Words, and ſome Money too, and reſorted to me oftentimes, for the Space of two, three, or four Days. There came alſo many Prieſts to me, by two, three, four, five, or ſix at once, whoſe Mouths it was eaſy enough to ſtop; for the Prieſts (which is much to be lamented) be not always the greateſt Scholars, and beſt learned in the Law of God. At their departing they either conſented with me, or elſe had nothing to ſay againſt me, ſaying they could find no Fault with my Words. My Communication with them was about the Sacrament. There came alſo into the Priſon to me Mr. Weſtby, Mr. Aſhton of Hill, Mr. Aſhton of Chaterton, and many more, both Gentlemen and others, to my great Comfort. Unto whom I had good Occaſion to utter a great Part of my Conſcience; for God ſo ſtrengthened me with his Spirit of Boldneſs, according to my humble Requeſt and Prayer before (everlaſting Thanks be given him therefore) that I was nothing afraid to ſpeak to any that came to me, no not even to the Judges themſelves, before whom I was thrice arraigned at the Bar, among the Thieves, with Irons on my Feet, and put up my Hand as others did; but yet with Boldneſs I ſpake unto them ſo long as they would ſuffer me.

They alſo ſent for me the fourth Time into their Chamber, where amongſt other Things they laid it ſtraitly to my Charge, that I had reported, that I knew a great many good Gentlemen in Lancaſhire of mine Opinions, and ſtraitly charged me, upon pain of Allegiance to the Queen's Grace, to ſhew who they were. But I denied that I had ſpoken any ſuch thing (as it was indeed a forged Lie of ſome wicked Wretches). After that, they threatned and rebuked me, for my preaching to the People out of the Priſon, as they called it, and for my Praying and Reading ſo loud, that the People in the Streets might hear. The Truth is, I and my Fellow priſoner Warbarton, every Day upon our Knees, did read Morning and Evening Prayer, with the Engliſh Litany every Day twice, both before Noon and after, with ſome other Prayers, and alſo read every Day certain Chapters of the Bible, commonly towards Night: And we read alſo theſe Things with ſo high and loud a Voice, that the People without in the Streets might hear us, and would oftentimes, namely in the Evenings, come and ſit down in our Sight under the Windows and hear us read, wherewith others being offended, complained.

Mr. Marſh reproved for his loud praying and reading in Priſon.

All this while George Marſh was not yet brought before the Biſhop, whoſe Name was Dr. Cotes, placed the ſame Time in the Biſhoprick of Cheſter. Of whoſe coming then into Lancaſter, the ſaid George Marſh reporteth as followeth.

The Biſhop being at Lancaſter, there ſet up and confirmed all blaſphemous Idolatry, as Holy-water caſting, Proceſſion, Gadding, Matins mumbling, Children confirming, Maſs hearing, Idols up ſetting, with ſuch heatheniſh Rites forbidden by God; but no Goſpel-preaching, which Chriſt, God's Son, ſo earneſtly commanded. He was informed of me, and willed to ſend for me and examine me. Which thing he refuſed to do, ſaying he would have nothing to do with Hereticks ſo haſtily: So haſty in Judgment, and calling Men Hereticks, are our Biſhops in their lordly Dignities, before they hear or ſee what is to be amended or commended, contrary to the expreſs Commandment of God's Word, which ſaith, Condemn no Man before thou haſt tried out the Truth of the Matter; and when thou haſt made Inquiſition, then reform righteouſly. Give no Sentence before thou haſt heard the Cauſe, but firſt let Men tell out their Tale: And he that giveth Sentence in a Matter before he hear it, is a Fool, and worthy to be confounded.

Dr. Cotes Biſhop of Cheſter's coming to Lancaſter, and ſetting up Idolatry.

The Biſhop judgeth Mr. Marſh to be an Heretick before he heareth him.

And inſtead of his Liberality towards me poor Priſoner, he ſent for the Jaylor, and rebuked him becauſe he ſuffered me to fare ſo well, ordering him to have me more ſtrictly kept and dieted: But if his Lordſhip were tabled but one Week with me, I do think he would judge our Fare but ſlender enough.

The unmerciful Strictneſs of the Biſhop towards Mr. Marſh in Priſon.

Alſo he, and his Chaplains and Chancellor did find Fault with the Schoolmaſter and others, for ſpeaking to me as to a moſt heinous Heretick, tick, and alſo with the Jaylor for ſuffering them.

Examples of perſecuting Biſhops in the old Time.

But it is no new Thing for the Biſhops to perſecute the Truth, and the Prophets of the Lord, for their Conſtancy in preaching of the true Faith; for ſo did their phariſaical Forefathers, if ye remark well the Hiſtories of the Holy Bible. Paſhur was the head Biſhop of the Temple, the Ring-leader of falſe Prophets, the chief Heretick Taker, that is as much as to ſay, the Out-thruſter of true Piety. After that the Dignity of Prieſthood was given unto him, he abuſed it. For he taught not, neither reproved by the Word, but affrighted the Godly with Cruelty. He not only ſtruck, but alſo impriſoned the Holy Prophet Jeremy, though he withſtood him not, but preſently looked for the Help of God, ſtedfaſtly preaching the Truth of God.

Jer. 20.

What Miſchief the ungracious Biſhop Jaſon wrought among the Jews, deſtroying all Piety, and ſetting up abominable idolatrous Laws, ye may read in the Fourth Chapter of the Second of Maccabees. How the execrable and blind Biſhops, Annas and Caiaphas, which never ſpake the Truth of God themſelves, unleſs it were againſt their Wills, unwittingly to their utter Deſtruction, how, I ſay, they oppreſſed the Truth in Chriſt and his Apoſtles, is ſo well known that I need not to rehearſe it.

And thus much hitherto concerning the Impriſonment of George Marſh, and his examinations before the Earl of Darby and his Deputies above-named. Now proceeding further in the troubleſome Perſecution of this good Man, let us likewiſe conſider the latter Part of his Troubles and Examinations which followed under the Biſhop of the ſame Dioceſs, which was Dr. Cotes; the Effect whereof being drawn out of his own Writing, here briefly followeth.

The Examination of George Marſh by Dr. Cotes Biſhop of Cheſter.

YE heard before how George Marſh being firſt impriſoned at Lathum, and afterward carried unto Lancaſter, was troubled by the Earl. Again, within few Days after, the ſaid Marſh was removed from Lancaſter, and coming to Cheſter, was ſent for by Dr. Cotes, the Biſhop, to appear before him in his Hall, no Body elſe being preſent; and then he aſked him certain Queſtions concerning the Sacrament: Who made ſuch Anſwers as the Biſhop ſeemed therewith to be content, ſaving that he utterly denied Tranſubſtantiation, and allowed not the Abuſe of the Maſs, nor that the Lay-people ſhould receive under one kind only, contrary to Chriſt's Inſtitution; in which Point the Biſhop went about to perſwade him: Howbeit all in vain. Much other talk he had with him, to move him to ſubmit himſelf to the univerſal Church of Rome; and when he ſaw he could not prevail, he ſent him to Priſon again: And after being there, came to him divers Times one Maſſy, a fatherly old Man, one Wrench the Schoolmaſter, one Henſham the Biſhop's Chaplain, and the Archdeacon, with many more; who with all probability of Words and Philoſophy, or worldly Wiſdom and deceitful Vanity, after the Tradition of Men, and the beggarly Ordinances and Laws of the World, but not after Chriſt, went about to perſwade him to ſubmit himſelf to the Church of Rome, and to acknowledge the Pope to be head thereof, and to interpret the Scriptures no otherwiſe than that Church did; with many ſuch like Arguments and Perſwaſions of fleſhly Wiſdom.

Great Labour to make Mr. Marſh recant.

Anno 1555.

To whom the ſaid George Marſh anſwered, that he did acknowledge and believe (though much Evil be withal annexed) one Holy catholick and apoſtolick Church, without which there is no Salvation, and that this Church is but one, becauſe it ever hath, doth, and ſhall confeſs and believe one only God, and him only worſhip, and one only Meſſiah, and in him only truſt for Salvation: Which Church alſo is ruled and led by one Spirit, one Word, and one Faith, and that this Church is univerſal and catholick, becauſe it ever hath been ſince the World's Beginning, is, and ſhall endure to the World's End, and comprehending within it all Nations, Kindreds, and Languages, Degrees, States, and Conditions of Men; and that this Church is built only upon the Foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the head Corner-ſtone, and not upon the Romiſh Laws and Degrees, the Biſhop of Rome being the ſupream Head.

The Nature, Condition, and Notes of the true Church.

And where they ſaid, the Church did ſtand in ordinary Succeſſion of Biſhops, being ruled by general Councils, holy Fathers, and the Laws of holy Church, and ſo had continued by the Space of fifteen hundred Years and more; he made Anſwer, that the holy Church, which is the Body of Chriſt, and therefore moſt worthy to be called Holy, was before any Succeſſion of Biſhops, general Councils, or Romiſh Decrees; neither yet was bound to any Time or Place, ordinary Succeſſion, general Councils, or Traditions of Fathers, either had any Supremacy over Empires and Kingdoms: But that it was a poor ſilly Flock, diſperſed and ſcattered Abroad, as Sheep without a Shephered in the midſt of Wolves, or as a Flock of Orphans and fatherleſs Children; and that this Church was led and ruled by the only Laws, Counſels, and Word of Chriſt, he being the ſupream Head of this Church, and aſſiſting, ſuccouring, and defending her from all Aſſaults, Errors, Troubles, and Perſecutions, wherewith ſhe is ever encompaſſed about.

The Nature, Condition, and Notes of the falſe Church.

He ſhewed and proved unto them alſo by the Flood of Noah, the Deſtruction of Sodom, the Iſraelites departing out of Egypt; by the Parables of the Sower, of the King's Son's Marriage, of the great Supper, and by other plain Sentences of Scripture, that this Church was of no Eſtimation, and of little in Compariſon of the Church of Hypocrites and wicked Wordlings.

He was thruſt at with all Violence of Craft and Subtilty, but yet the Lord upheld him and delivered him. Everlaſting Thanks be to that merciful and faithful Lord, who ſuffereth us not to be tempted above our Might, but in the midſt of our Troubles ſtrengtheneth us with his moſt Holy Spirit of Comfort and Patience, giveth us a Mouth and Wiſdom how and what to ſpeak, againſt which all his Adverſaries were not able to reſiſt.

Another Appearance of Geo. Marſh.

NOW after that the ſaid Biſhop had taken his Pleaſure in puniſhing this his Priſoner, and often reviling him, giving Taunts and odious Names of Heretick, &c. he cauſed him to be brought forth into a Chappel, in the cathedral Church of Cheſter, called our Lady-chappel, before him the ſaid Biſhop, at two of the Anno 1555. the Clock in the Afternoon, who was there placed in a Chair for that Purpose, and Fulk Dutton, Mayor of the said City, Dr. Wall, and other Priests assisting him, placed not far from the said Bishop, but somewhat lower, George Wensloe, Chancellor, and one John Getham, Register, sate directly over-against the said Bishop.

Mr. Marsh sworn to answer before the Bishop.

Then they caused the said George Marsh to take an Oath upon a Book, to answer truly unto such Articles as should be objected against him.

Upon which Oath taken, the Chancellor laid to his Charge, that he had preached and openly published most heretically and blasphemously within the Parish of Dean, Eccles, Bolton, Berry, and many other Parishes within the Bishop's Dioceſs, in the Months of January, February, or some other Time of the Year last, proceeding directly against the Pope's Authority and catholick Church of Rome, the blessed Mass, the Sacrament of the Altar, and many other Articles.

He clareth himself.

Unto all which he answered, that he neither heretically nor blasphemously preached, or spake against any of the said Articles; but simply and truly, as Occasion served, and (as it were thereunto forced in Conscience) maintained the Truth touching the same Articles, as he said all you now present did acknowledge the same in the Time of the late King Edward the Sixth.

The Bishop's Clergy more able to examine than to dispute.

Then they examined him severally of every Article, and bade him answer directly yea or nay, without Circumstance; for they were come to examine, and not to dispute at that present.

Then he answered them unto every Article very modestly, according to the Doctrine by publick Authority received, and taught in this Realm at the Death of the said King Edward: whose Answers were every one noted by the Register to the uttermost that could make against him; which cannot at this present be gotten. After this, the Company for that Time brake up, and he was returned to Prison again.

The last Appearance of George Marsh, before the Bishop.

The Chancellor's Oration.

Within three Weeks after this, or thereabouts, in the said Chappel, and in like Manner as before, the said Bishop and others before-named being there assembled, the said George Marsh was brought by the Keeper and others with Bills and other Weapons before them; where first the said Chancellor, by way of an Oration, declared unto the People present the said Bishop's Charge and burning Charity, who even like as a good Shepherd doth see to his Flock, that none of his Sheep have the Scab or other Disease for infecting other clean Sheep, but will save and cure the said scabbed Sheep; so his Lordship had sent for the said Geo. Marsh there present, as a scabbed Sheep, and had weeded him out for corrupting others, and had done what he could in shewing his charitable Disposition toward the said Marsh, to reduce him from his naughty Heresies; but all that he could do would not help: So that he was now determined, if the said Marsh would not relent and abjure, to pronounce and give Sentence definitive against him. Wherefore he bade the said George Marsh to be well advised what he would do, for it stood upon his Life: And if he would not at that present forsake his heretical Opinions, it would be (after the Sentence given) too late, though he would never so gladly desire it.

Interrogatories put to Mr. Marsh.

Then the said Chancellor first asked him, whether he were not of the Bishop's Dioceſs? To which he answered, that he knew not how large his Dioceſs was, for his Continuance was at Cambridge. But then they replied and asked, whether he had not lately been at Deane Parish in Lancashire, and there abode? He answered, Yea.

Then the Chancellor read all his former Answers that he made in that Place at his former Examination, and at every one he asked him, whether he would stick to the same or no? To which he answered again, Yea, yea.

How say ye then to this, quoth the Chancellor? In your last Examination, amongst many other damnable and schismatical Heresies, you said, That the Church and Doctrine taught and set forth in King Edward's Time, was the true Church, and the Doctrine of the true Church, and that the Church of Rome is not the true and catholick Church.

Note here the great Heresy of Mr. Marsh.

I so said indeed, quoth Marsh, and I believe it to be true. Here also others took Occasion to ask him (for that he denied the Bishop of Rome's Authority in England) whether Linus, Anacletus, and Clement, that were Bishops of Rome, were not good Men, and he answered, yes, and divers others; but, said he, they claimed no more Authority in England, than the Bishop of Canterbury doth at Rome; and I strive not, quoth he, with the Place, neither speak I against the Person of the Bishop, but against his Doctrine, which in most Points is repugnant to the Doctrine of Christ.

Argument. Linus and Anacletus were good Men: Ergo, the Pope is the supream Head of all Churches. Neither the Place nor Person of the Pope spoke against, but only his Doctrine.

Thou art an arrogant Fellow indeed then, said the Bishop. In what Article is the Doctrine of the Church of Rome repugnant to the Doctrine of Christ?

To whom George Marsh answered and said, O my Lord, I pray you judge not so of me: I stand now upon the Point of my Life and Death; and a Man in my Case hath no Cause to be arrogant, neither am I, God is my Record. And as concerning the Disagreement of the Doctrine, among many other Things, the Church of Rome erreth in the Sacrament. For where Christ in the Institution thereof did as well deliver the Cup, as the Bread, saying, Drink ye all of this; and St. Mark reporteth, that they did drink of it: In like Manner St. Paul delivered it unto the Corinthians. And in the same Sort also it was used in the primitive Church for the Space of many hundred Years. Now the Church of Rome doth take away one Part of the Sacrament from the Laity. Wherefore if I could be persuaded in my Conscience by God's Word that it were well done, I could gladly yield in this Point.

Wherein the Doctrine of the Church of Rome erreth.

Then said the Bishop, There is no disputing with an Heretick. And therefore when all his Answers were read, he asked him whether he would stand to the same; being as they were, said he, full of Heresy, or else forsake them, and come unto the catholick Church.

So saith the Turk in his Alcoran, that no Man must dispute of his Law.

To whom he made this full Answer, and said, That he held no heretical Opinion, but utterly abhorred all Kind of Heresy, although they most untruly so did slander him. And he desired all the People there to bear him Witness (if any hereafter should slander him, and say that he held any grievous Heresy) that in all Articles of Religion he held no other Opinion than was by Law established, and publickly taught in England at the Death of King Edward the Sixth, and in the same pure Religion and Doctrine he would, by God's Grace, stand, live and die.

And here the Chancellor ſpake to one Leach, who ſtood near to Marſh, and bade him ſtand further from him; for his Preſence did him no good.

Sentence of Condemnation read againſt Mr. Marſh.

This being done, the Biſhop took a Writing out of his Boſom, and began to read the Sentence of Condemnation: But when the Biſhop had read almoſt half thereof, the Chancellor called him, and ſaid, Good my Lord, ſtay, ſtay: For if ye proceed any farther, it will be too late to call it again, and ſo the Biſhop ſtayed. Then his Popiſh Prieſts, and many other of the ignorant People, called upon Marſh, with many earneſt Words, to recant, and amongſt others one Pulleyn a Shoe-maker ſaid to him, For Shame Man remember thyſelf, and recant. They bade him kneel down and pray, and they would pray for him: So they kneeled down, and he deſired them to pray for him, and he would pray for them.

The Biſhop then aſked him again, whether he would not have the Queen's Mercy in Time; and he anſwered, he did gladly deſire the ſame, and did love her Grace as faithfully as any of them; but yet he durſt not deny his Saviour Chriſt, for loſing his Mercy everlaſting, and ſo win everlaſting Death.

Then the Biſhop put his Spectacles again upon his Noſe, and read forward his Sentence about five or ſix Lines, and there again the Chancellor with flattering Words and ſmiling Countenance called to the Biſhop, and ſaid, Yet, good my Lord once again ſtay, for if that Word be ſpoken all is paſt, no relenting will then ſerve: and the Biſhop (pulling off his Spectacles) ſaid, I would ſtay, if it would be.

How ſay'ſt thou, quoth he, wilt thou recant?

Mr. Marſh exhorted to recant, but could not be turned.

Many of the Prieſts and ignorant People bade him do ſo, and call to God for Grace; and pulled him by the Sleeve, and bad him recant and ſave his Life. To whom he anſwered, I would as fain live as you, if in ſo doing I ſhould not deny my Maſter Chriſt, and again he ſhould deny me before his Father in Heaven.

Then the Biſhop read out his Sentence unto the End, and afterwards ſaid unto him, Now will I no more pray for thee, than I will for a Dog. And Marſh anſwered, That notwithſtanding he would pray for his Lordſhip: And after this the Biſhop delivered him unto the Sheriffs of the City. Then his late Keeper bad him farewel good George, with weeping Tears, which cauſed the Officers to carry him to a Priſon at the North-Gate, where he was very ſtrictly kept until the Time he went to his Death, during which Time he had ſmall Comfort or Relief of any worldly Creature.

Mr. Marſh delivered to the Sheriffs.

For being in the Dungeon, none that would do him good could ſpeak with him, or at leaſt durſt enterprize ſo to do for fear of Accuſation: And ſome of the Citizens which loved him, for the Goſpel's Sake, would ſometime in the Evening at a Hole upon the Wall of the City (that went into the ſaid dark Priſon) call to him, and ask him how he did. He would anſwer them moſt chearfully, that he did well, and thanked God moſt highly, that he would vouchſafe of his Mercy to appoint him to be a Witneſs of his Truth, and to ſuffer for the ſame, wherein he did moſt rejoice; beſeeching him that he would give him Grace not to faint under the Croſs, but patiently bear the ſame to his Glory and Comfort of his Church: With many other ſuch like Sayings at ſundry Times, as one that moſt deſired to be with Chriſt. Once or twice he had Money caſt in at the ſame Hole, about ten Pence at one Time, and two Shillings at another Time: For which he gave God Thanks, and uſed the ſame to his Neceſſity. Anno 1555.

When the Time appointed came that he ſhould ſuffer, the Sheriffs of the City, whoſe Names were Amry and Couper, with their Officers, and a great Number with Bills and Poll-Axes, went to the North-gate, and there took out the ſaid George Marſh, who came with them moſt humbly and meekly, with a Lock upon his Feet. And as he came upon the Way towards the Place of Execution, ſome Folks proffered him Money, and looked that he ſhould have gone with a little Purſe in his Hand (as the Manner of Felons was accuſtomed in that City in Times paſt, at their going to Execution) to the End to gather Money to give unto a Prieſt to ſay Maſſes for them after their Death, whereby they might, as they thought, be ſaved: But Marſh ſaid, he would not as then be troubled to receive Money, but deſired ſome good Man to take the Money, if the People were diſpoſed to give any, and to give it unto the Priſoners or poor People. So he went all the Way unto his Death with his Book in his Hand, looking upon the ſame; and many of the People ſaid, This Man goeth not unto his Death as a Thief, or as one that deſerveth to die.

Mr. Marſh led to his Martyrdom.

Now when he came to the Place of Execution without the City, near unto Spittle-Boughton, one Cawdrey being then a Deputy-chamberlain of Cheſter, ſhewed Marſh a Writing under a great Seal, ſaying, That it was a Pardon for him if he would recant. Whereat Marſh anſwered, That he would gladly accept the ſame (and ſaid further, that he loved the Queen) but foraſmuch as it tended to pluck him from God, he would not receive it upon that Condition.

Mr. Marſh not ſuffered to ſpeak to the People.

After that, he began to ſpeak to the People, ſhewing the Cauſe of his Death, and would have exhorted them to ſtick unto Chriſt. Whereupon one of the Sheriffs ſaid: George Marſh, we muſt have no ſermoning now. To whom he ſaid, Maſter, I cry you Mercy: And ſo kneeling down made his Prayers, and then put off his Clothes unto his Shirt, and then he was chained to the Poſt, having a Number of Faggots under him, and a Thing made like a Firkin, with Pitch and Tar in the ſame over his Head: And by reaſon the Fire was unſkilfully made, and that the Wind did drive the ſame to and fro, he ſuffered great Extremity in his Death, which notwithſtanding he abode very patiently.

The Martyrdom of Mr. Marſh at Weſt-Cheſter, April 29.

Wherein this is to be noted, That when he had been a long Time tormented in the Fire without moving, having his Fleſh ſo broiled and puffed up, that they which ſtood before him underneath could ſee the Chain wherewith he was faſtned, and therefore ſuppoſed no leſs but he had been dead, notwithſtanding ſuddenly he ſpead abroad his Arms, ſaying, Father of Heaven have Mercy upon me, and ſo yielded his Spirit into the Hands of the Lord.

His Patience at his Death.

Upon this, many of the People ſaid that he was a Martyr, and died marvellous patient. Which cauſed the Biſhop ſhortly after to make a Sermon in the cathedral Church, and therein affirmed, that the ſaid Marſh was an Heretick, burnt like an Heretick, and was a Fire-brand in Hell.

Anno 1555.

The Life of William Flower, who for ſtriking a Prieſt, was apprehended, firſt having his Hand cut off, and after martyred for his conſtant Adherence to the Truth.

WILLIAM FLOWER, otherwiſe named Branch, was born at Snowhill in the County of Cambridge, where he went to School ſome Years, and then came to the Abby of Ely; where, after he had remained a while, he was a profeſſed Monk according to the Order of the ſame Houſe where he remained, uſing and bearing the Habit of a Monk, and obſerving the Rules and Orders of the ſame Houſe, until he came to one and twenty Years of Age, or thereabout; and before he came to that Age, and being a profeſſed Monk, he was made a Prieſt alſo in the ſame Houſe, and there did celebrate and ſing Maſs a good Space together. After that, by reaſon of a Viſitation, and certain Injuctions given in the ſame Time by the Authority of King Henry the Eighth, he forſook the ſame Houſe, and caſting from him the ſaid Monks Habit and Religion aforeſaid, took upon him and uſed the Habit of a ſecular Prieſt, and returned to Snowhill, where he was born; and there he did celebrate and ſing Maſs, and taught Children their Primmer and Accidence about half a Year together.

William Flower firſt a Monk, then a Prieſt in the Houſe of Ely.

Then he went to Ludgate in Suffolk, and there ſerved as a ſecular Prieſt about a Quarter of a Year; and from thence he went to Stoniland, where he tarried and ſerved as a ſecular Prieſt alſo, until the coming out of the ſix Articles: And then he departed from thence, and went into Gloceſterſhire, where after he had made his Abode in the Country a while, at length in Tewkſbury, he married a Wife, with whom he ever after faithfully and honeſtly continued: And after his Marriage, he tarried in Tewkſbury about two Years together, and from thence he went to Broſley, where he tarried three Quarters of a Year, and practiſed Phyſick and Chirurgery, and from thence he removed to Northamptonſhire, where under a Gentleman he taught Children their Primmers, and to write and read. But departing from thoſe Parts he came to London, and there remained for a certain Space. After that, being deſirous to ſee his Country, he returned to Snowhill where he was born; from thence to Brankſtrey in Eſſex, then to Coxall; and ſo came to Lambeth near London, where he hired a Houſe, and placed his Wife, where he and his Wife did dwell together till this Time: Howbeit for the moſt Part he was always abroad, except once or twice in a Month, to viſit and ſee his Wife; where he being at home upon Eaſter Day about Ten or Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon of the ſame Day, came over the Water from Lambeth into St. Margaret's Church at Weſtminſter, where he ſeeing a Prieſt named John Cheltam adminiſtring and giving the Sacrament of the Altar to the People, and therewith being greatly offended in his Conſcience with the Prieſt for the ſame his Doing (for that he judged him not to be a catholick Miniſter, neither his Act to be catholick and laudable according to God's Word) did ſtrike and wound him upon the Head, and alſo upon the Arm and Hand with his Woodknife, the Prieſt having the ſame Time in his Hand a Chalice, with certain conſecrated Hoſts therein, which were ſprinkled with the Blood of the ſaid Papiſt.

Mr. Flower marrieth a Wife.

William Flower cometh to Lambeth.

William Flower ſtriketh a popiſh Prieſt at the Altar in Weſtminſter.

In which Action as indeed he did not well, ſo afterward, being examined before Biſhop Bonner, did no leſs confeſs his not well doing in the ſame, ſubmitting therefore himſelf willingly to Puniſhment, when it ſhould come. Howbeit touching his Belief in the Sacrament, and the popiſh Miniſtration; he neither would nor did ſubmit himſelf.

William Flower repenteth his Act in ſtriking.

Whereupon the aforeſaid William Flower, being firſt apprehended and laid in the Gatehouſe at Weſtminſter, with as many Irons as he could bear; afterward was ſummoned before Biſhop Bonner his Ordinary, April 19, 1555, where the Biſhop after he had ſworn him upon a Book according to his ordinary Manner) miniſtred Articles and Interrogatories to him. But before I ſpeak of the Articles, firſt we have here to ſet forth what Communication paſſed betwixt him and Robert Smith being then alſo there Priſoner with him, concerning his Fact done at Weſtminſter, the Tenor and Effect of which Communication here followeth.

W. Flower brought before Biſhop Bonner.

A Communication between Robert Smith and William Flower, concerning his Striking of the Prieſt at Weſtminſter.

Smith. FRiend, foraſmuch as I underſtand that you do profeſs the Goſpel, and alſo have ſo done a long Seaſon, I am bold to come unto you, and in the Way of Communication to demand and learn a Truth at your own Mouth, of certain Things by you committed, to the aſtoniſhing not only of me, but of divers others that alſo profeſs the Truth.

Flower. I praiſe God for his great Goodneſs, in ſhewing me the Light of his holy Word; and I give you hearty Thanks for your Viſitation, intending by God's Grace to declare all the Truth that ye ſhall demand lawfully of me, in all Things.

Smith. Then I deſire you to ſhew me the Truth of your Deed, committed on John Cheltam Prieſt in the Church, as near as you can, that I may hear from your own Mouth how it was.

Flower. I came from my Houſe at Lambeth over the Water, and entring into St. Margaret's Church, and there ſeeing the People falling down before a moſt ſhameful and deteſtable Idol, being moved with extream Zeal for my God, whom I ſaw before my face diſhonoured, I drew forth my Hanger, and ſtrake the Prieſt which miniſtred the ſame unto them: Whereupon I was immediately apprehended, and this is moſt true, as the Act is manifeſt.

Smith. Did ye not know the Perſon that ye ſtrake, or were ye not zealous upon him for any evil Will or Hatred between you at any Time.

Flower. No verily, I never to my Knowledge ſaw the Perſon before that preſent, neither ought him or any Man alive evil Will or Malice; for if he had not had it, another would, if I had any Time come where the like Occaſion had been miniſtred, if God had permitted me to do it.

Extraordinary Zeals are no general Rules to be followed.

Smith. Do ye think that Thing to be well done, and after the Rule of the Goſpel?

Flower. I do confeſs all Fleſh to be ſubject to the the Power of Almighty God, whom he maketh his Miniſters to do his Will and Pleaſure; as in Example, Moſes, Aaron, Phineas, Joſhua, Zimri, Jehu, Judith, Mattathiah, with many others, not only changing Degrees, but alſo planting Zeals to his Honour, againſt all Order and Reſpect of Fleſh and Blood. For, as St. Paul ſaith, His Works are paſt finding out: By whoſe Spirit I have alſo given my Fleſh at this preſent unto ſuch Order, as it ſhall pleaſe the Good-will of God to appoint, in Death, which before the Act committed I looked for.

Smith. Think you it convenient for me, or any other, to do the like by your Example?

Flower. No verily, neither do I know if it were to do again, whether I could do it again, or no: For I was up very early at St. Paul's Church upon Chriſt's Day in the Morning, to have done it in my Jealouſy; but when I came in Place I was no more able to do it, than now to undo that is done; and yet now being compelled by the Spirit, not only to come over the Water, and to enter the Church, but being in Mind fully content to die for the Lord, gave over my Fleſh willingly without all Fear, I praiſe God. Wherefore I cannot learn you to do the like. Firſt, becauſe I know not what is in you. Secondly, becauſe the Rules of the Goſpel commandeth us to ſuffer with Patience all Wrongs and Injury; yet nevertheleſs, if he make you worthy, that hath made me zealous, ye ſhall not be hindered, judged, nor condemned: For he doth in his People his unſpeakable Works in all Ages, which no Man can comprehend. I humbly beſeech you to judge the beſt of the Spirit, and condemn not God's Doings: For I cannot expreſs with my Mouth the great Mercies that God hath ſhewed on me in this Thing, which I repent not. †

† But he heartily repented of all this enthuſiaſtical Folly before he died.

Smith. Are ye not aſſured to have Death miniſtred unto you for the ſame Act committed, and even with Extremity?

Flower. I did before the Deed committed, adjudge my Body to die for the ſame: Whereupon I carried about me in Writing, mine Opinion of God and the holy Scriptures; that if it had pleaſed God to have given them Leave to have killed my Body in the Church, they might in the ſaid Writing have ſeen my Hope, which (I praiſe God) is laid up ſafe within my Breaſt, notwithſtanding any Death that may be miniſtred upon my Body in this World; being aſcertained of everlaſting Life through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and being moſt heartily ſorry for all mine Offences committed in this Fleſh, and truſting ſhortly through his Mercy, to ceaſe from the ſame.

Smith. It is no need to examine or commune with you of the Hope that ye have any further: For I perceive (God be praiſed) ye are in good Eſtate, and therefore I beſeech God for his Mercies ſpread his Wings over you, that as for his Love you have been zealous, even to the Loſs of this Life, ſo he may give you his Holy Spirit to conduct you out of this Death into a better Life, which I think will be ſhortly.

Flower. I hunger for the ſame (dear Friend) being fully aſcertained that they can kill but the Body, which I am aſſured ſhall receive Life again everlaſting, and ſee no more Death; entirely deſiring you and all that fear the Lord, to pray with me to Almighty God, to perform the ſame in me ſhortly. And thus Robert Smith departed, leaving him in the Dungeon, and went again to his Ward. And this (gentle Reader) is the Truth, as near as the ſaid Smith could report it. †

Anno 1555.

And thus much concerning the Talk between him and Robert Smith in Priſon, concerning his Fact in ſtriking the Prieſt. Now to return again to the Matter of his Examination, where we left: We ſhewed before how this William Flower, after his ſtriking the Prieſt, firſt was laid in the Gatehouſe; then, being examined before Biſhop Bonner, had Articles againſt him, the Copy whereof here followeth.

Articles objected by Bonner, againſt William Flower, late of Lambeth, in the County of Surrey.

1. THAT thou being of a lawful Age and Diſcretion, at the leaſt of ſeventeen Years old waſt a profeſſed Monk in the late Abby of Ely, wherein after thy Profeſſion thou remainedſt until the Age of One and twenty Years, uſing all the mean Time the Habit and Religion of the ſame Houſe, and was reputed and taken notoriouſly for ſuch a Perſon.

2. Item, That after the Premiſſes, thou waſt ordered and made Prieſt, according to the laudable Cuſtom of the catholick Church, and afterward thou didſt execute and miniſter as a Prieſt, and waſt commonly reputed, named, and taken for a Prieſt.

3. Item, That after the Premiſſes thou forgetting God, thy Conſcience, Honeſty, and the laudable Order of the catholick Church, didſt contrary to thy Profeſſion and Vow, take, as unto thy Wife, one Woman, commonly called Alice Pulton, in the Pariſh Church of Tewkſbury in the Dioceſs of Gloceſter, with whom thou haſt mutual Cohabitation, and carnal Copulation, as Man and Wife, and begat of her two Children.

In the latter Days certain ſhall depart from the Faith, forbidding Marriage, and eating of Meats. 1 Tim. 4.

4. Item, That thou being a religious Man and a Prieſt, didſt contrary to the Order of the eccleſiaſtical Laws, take upon thee to practiſe in divers Places within the Dioceſs of London, Phyſick and Chirurgery, when thou waſt not admitted, expert, nor learned.

A great Hereſy.

5. Item, That upon Eaſter Day laſt paſt, that is to wit, the fourteenth Day of this preſent Month of April, within the Pariſh Church of St. Margaret's at Weſtminſter, within the County of Middleſex and Dioceſs of London, thou didſt maliciouſly, outragiouſly, and violently pull out thy Weapon, that is to wit, thy Wood-knife or Hanger. And whereas the Prieſt and Miniſter there, called Sir John Chelton, was executing his Cure and Charge, eſpecially in doing his Service, and adminiſtring the Sacrament of the Altar to Communicants, then didſt thou wickedly and abominably ſmite with thy ſaid Weapon the ſaid Prieſt, firſt upon the Head very ſore, and afterwards upon his Hands or other Parts of his Body, drawing Blood abundantly from him; the ſaid Prieſt then holding the ſaid Sacrament in his Hand, and giving no Occaſion why thou ſhouldeſt ſo hurt him; the People being grievouſly offended therewith, and the ſaid Church polluted thereby, ſo that the Inhabitants were compelled to repair to another Church to communicate, and to receive the ſaid Sacrament.

6. Item, That by reaſon of the Premiſſes, thou waſt and art by the eccleſiaſtical Laws of the Church, amongſt other Penalties, excommunicated

Anno 1555. municated and accurſed, ipſo facto, and not to be accompanied withal, neither in the Church, nor otherwhere, but in ſpecial Caſes.

7. Item, That thou, concerning the Truth of Cnriſt's natural Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar, haſt been by the Space of theſe Years, 20, 19, 18, 17, 16, 15, 14, 13, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, and 1. or any one of them, and yet art at this preſent of this Opinion; that is to ſay, that in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, after the Words of Conſecration, there is not really, truly, and in very deed contained (under the Forms of Bread) the very true and natural Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

His Faith in the Sacrament.

8. Item, That thou for the Hatred and Diſdain that thou hadſt and didſt bear againſt the ſaid Sacrament, and the Virtue thereof, and againſt the ſaid Prieſt adminiſtring the ſame (as before) didſt ſmite, wound, and hurt him in Manner and Form as before is declared.

9. Item, That thou, over and beſides the Pains due unto thee for the doing of the cruel Fact, art alſo by the Order of the eccleſiaſtical Laws of the Churh, and the laudible Cuſtom and Ordinance of the ſame, to be reputed, taken, and adjudged (as thou art indeed) a very Heretick, and to be puniſhed by and with the Pains due for Hereſy, by reaſon of the ſaid Hereſy and damnable Opinion.

10. Item, That all the Premiſſes be true, manifeſt, notorious, and famous, and that upon the ſame, and every Part thereof, there was and is within the ſaid Pariſh of St. Margaret's and other Places thereabout, a publick Voice and Fame.

The Anſwer of William Flower, to the aforeſaid Articles.

TO the firſt Article he anſwereth and confeſſeth the ſame to be true in evety Part thereof, except that he ſaith and confeſſeth that he never conſented and agreed in his Heart to be a Monk.

To the ſecond Article he anſwereth and confeſſeth the ſame to be true in every Part thereof. Howbeit he ſaith, that he never did, nor yet doth eſteem the ſaid Order of Prieſthood, according to the Order of the ſaid catholick Church, becauſe he was offended therewith in his Conſcience.

Flower confeſſeth his Matrimony to be honeſt and lawful.

To the third Article he anſwereth and confeſſeth, That he intending to live in holy Matrimony, and not forgetting God, did marry with the ſaid Alice Pulton named in this Article, wherein he believed that he did well, and according to God's Laws. Further, confeſſing and believing, that all the Time when he was profeſſed Monk, and made Prieſt, he did thereby utterly forget God: But when he did ſo marry the ſaid Alice Pulton, and in continuing with her did beget three Children, he did remember God, as he ſaith, and believeth that he did then lawfully.

To the fourth Article he anſwereth and believeth the ſame to be true in every Part thereof.

To the fifth Article he anſwereth and confeſſeth, That his Conſcience being greatly offended with the ſaid Sir John Chelton, Prieſt, for adminiſtring the Sacrament of the Altar to the People at the Place and Time ſpecified in this Article, he did ſo ſmite and ſtrike the ſame Prieſt with his Hanger or Woodknife, as well upon his Head, as upon other Parts and Places of his Body, which he remembreth not, whereby the Blood ran out, and was ſhed in the ſaid Church, as he believeth, having, as he ſaith, none other Cauſe or Matter ſo to do, but only that his Conſcience was offended and grieved, in that the ſame Prieſt did ſo give and adminiſter the ſaid Sacrament to the People: Which People he believeth was greatly abaſhed and offended with his ſaid Fact and Doing, and were enforced and compelled to go out of the Church, and to repair to another to receive the ſaid Sacrament. And further, being then demanded and examined, whether he did then mind and intended to have killed the ſaid Prieſt, or not: He ſaid he would not anſwer thereunto. And being further examined, whether he did well or Evil in ſtriking the ſaid Prieſt; he would make no Anſwer thereunto.

Note that the ſaid W. Flower afterward in his next Appearance corrected and reformed this Anſwer.

To the Sixth he anſwereth and ſaith, That whether he be ſo excommunicate or accurſed, as is contained in this Article, he referreth himſelf herein to the eccleſiaſtical Laws.

To the Seventh he anſwereth and ſaith, That by the Space of ſix and twenty Years now paſt, he hath always been, and yet is of this Opinion touching the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, as followeth; namely, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, after the Words of Conſecration, there is not really, truly, and in very Deed contained under the Form of Bread, the very true and natural Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

To the Eighth he anſwereth and believeth the ſame to be true in every Part thereof.

To the Ninth he anſwereth, and herein he referreth himſelf to the ſaid Laws, Cuſtom, and Ordinance ſpecified in this Article, that is to ſay, the canonical Laws,

To the laſt he anſwereth and believeth, that thoſe Things before by him confeſſed be true, and thoſe which he hath denied be untrue; and that the ſaid common Voice and Fame hath and doth only labour and go upon thoſe Things by him before confeſſed.

By me William Flower, alias Branch.

W. Flower exhorted to recant.

After this Examination, the Biſhop began to inſtruct him, and to exhort him to return again to the Unity of his Mother the catholick Church, with ſuch Reaſons as he is commonly wont to uſe to others, promiſing many fair Things if he would do ſo, beſides the forgiving of what was paſt.

W. Flower refuſeth to revoke his Faith and Doctrine.

To this William Flower anſwering again, thanked him for his Offer: And where it was in his Power to kill or not to kill his Body, he ſtood therewith contented, let him do therein what he thought; yet over his Soul he had no ſuch Power, which being once ſeparated from the Body, is in the Hands of no Man, but only of God either to ſave or ſpill. As concerning his Opinion of the Sacrament, he ſaid he would never go from that he had ſpoken, do he with him what he would.

Another Appearance of W. Flower before Biſhop Bonner.

Then the Biſhop aſſigned him again to appear in the ſame Place in the Afternoon, betwixt Three and Four. In the mean Time to adviſe himſelf of his former Anſwers, whether he would ſtand to the ſame his Opinions or not; which if he ſo did, he would further proceed againſt him, &c.

In the Afternoon the ſaid William Flower appeared again before the ſaid Biſhop at the Hour and Place appointed. To whom the Biſhop ſit-ting in his Conſiſtory, ſpake theſe Words: Flower, ye were this Afternoon here before me, and made Anſwer to certain Articles; and thereupon I reſpited you till now, to the Intent that you ſhould conſider and weigh with yourſelf your State, and to remember while you have Time, both your abominable Act, and alſo that evil Opinion which ye have conceived touching the Verity of Chriſt's true and natural Body in the Sacrament of the Altar.

To whom the ſaid Flower anſwered as followeth: That which I have ſaid, I will ſtand to; and therefore I require that the Law may proceed againſt me. Whereupon the Biſhop commanded his Notary (Harward by Name) to read to him again his Articles, as before. Which being read, the ſaid William Flower ſtill perſiſting in his Sentence, anſwered to all Parts of the Articles, as in the Forenoon before, ſave only that he requeſted the Biſhop concerning the fifth Article, he might alter ſomething his Anſwer therein, after this Tenor and Manner of Words, to wit, and moreover confeſſeth and ſaith, that whereas he ſtruck the Prieſt on Eaſter Day laſt paſt, in St. Margaret's Church in Weſtminſter, he hath ſince that Time, and yet doth miſlike himſelf in that Doing, and doth now judge and believe that the ſame Act was evil and naught. Howbeit he ſaith and believeth, that for the Matter and Cauſe whereof he ſo ſtruck the ſaid Prieſt (which was for miniſtring of the Sacrament of the Altar, which he taketh and judgeth abominable) he neither did, nor doth miſlike himſelf at all therein.

M. Flower miſliked his own Act in ſtriking the Prieſt.

Moreover, he deſired of the ſaid Biſhop Licenſe to be granted him, to alter and take out ſome of the Ninth Article, and in Place thereof, theſe Words to be placed; to wit, Herein he referreth himſelf to the Laws, Cuſtom and Ordinance ſpecified in this Article, &c. At which Requeſt Bonner granted to the altering of both the Articles according as he deſired, and ſo put in the Acts.

After this, the Biſhop turning again to his old Manner of Exhorting, went about with Words to perſuade him to ſubmit himſelf to the Catholick Church, and to the Faith thereof. Notwithſtanding all his Perſuaſions, he ſtill remained in the Conſtancy of his Sentence, ſaying, that he would not be removed from that he had ſpoken, to die therefore. Whereupon the Biſhop aſſigned him the next Day (being the twentieth Day of April) to appear in the ſame Place, between eight and nine of the Clock in the Morning, then and there to hear the Sentence pronounced in Caſe he would not Relent, &c.

The laſt Appearance of W. Flower before Biſhop Bonner.

The next Morning the ſaid William Flower was brought by the Keeper belonging to the Warden of the Fleet, before Biſhop Bonner, who according to his uſual Manner, endeavour'd to reduce him to his Catholick Church and the Unity thereof, that is, from Chriſt to Antichriſt; ſometime alluring him with fair Promiſes, and ſometimes with Menaces, Terrors, and Threatnings. To which he anſwer'd, Do what ye will, I am at a Point: For the Heavens ſhall as ſoon fall, as I will forſake my Opinion, &c. Whereupon the Biſhop after he had commanded theſe Words to be Regiſtred, called for the Depoſitions of certain Witneſſes, produced for the better Information of this Matter, the Names of which Witneſſes were theſe: William Jennings, John Bray, Robert Graunt, Richard Dod, William Pampion, Robert Smalwood, the Pariſh Prieſt of St. Margaret's at Weſtminſter. The Sum and Effect of whole Depoſition here enſueth.

The Martyrdom of John Cardmaker & John Warne

The Burning of George Marsh.

The Burning of William Flower in St. Margarets Church-yard Westminster.

Anno 1555. day laſt paſt was preſent in the Church of St. Margaret's in Weſtminſter, where Flower ſtruck the ſaid Sir John Cheltam Prieſt, firſt upon the Head, and afterward upon his Arm, whereby the ſaid Prieſt is like to loſe his Hand. Alſo this Jurate depoſeth, that the ſaid Sir John Cheltam had a Chalice with certain conſecrated Hoſts therein in his Hand, which were ſprinkled with the Blood of the ſaid Prieſt, and after the ſaid Flower was apprehended by this Examinant and others, they carried him immediately to the Gatehouſe in Weſtminſter.

John Bray one of the Church-wardens of the Pariſh Church of St. Margaret's in Weſtminſter, ſworn and examined upon the ſaid Anſwers, ſaith and depoſeth, That he did hear and ſee the ſaid Flower acknowledge and recognize the ſaid Anſwers, and alſo ſubſcribe unto the ſame. And further depoſeth of Flower's ſtriking the Prieſt, in Effect, as the reſt of the Examinants do, and that this ſaid Jurate was preſent there at the doing thereof.

After the Depoſitions of theſe Witneſſes were taken, publiſhed, and denounced, the ſaid Biſhop ſpake to William Flower, and aſked him, if he knew any Matter or Cauſe why Sentence ſhould not be read, and he to be pronounced as an Heretick. Whereunto he anſwer'd as followeth; I have nothing at all to ſay, for I have already ſaid unto you all that I have to ſay; and that I have ſaid I will not go from; and therefore do what you will, &c.

Sentence of Condemnation and Degradation pronounced againſt William Flower.

Which when he had ſpoken, the Biſhop proceeded to the Sentence, condemning and excommunicating him for an Heretick, and after pronounced him alſo to be degraded, and ſo committed him to the ſecular Power. Upon the 24th Day of the aforeſaid Month of April, which was St. Mark's Eve, he was brought to the Place of Martyrdom, which was in St. Margaret's Church-yard at Weſtminſter, where the Fact was committed: And there coming to the Stake where he ſhould be burned, firſt he maketh his Prayer to almighty God, with a Confeſſion of his Faith, in Manner as followeth.

Mr. Flower's Prayer. O Eternal God, moſt mighty and merciful Father, who haſt ſent down thy Son upon the Earth, to ſave me and all Mankind, who aſcended up into Heaven again, and left his Blood upon the Earth behind him, for the Redemption of our Sins, have Mercy upon me, have Mercy upon me, for thy dear Son our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt's Sake, in whom I confeſs only to be all Salvation and Juſtification, and that there is no other Means, nor Way, nor Holineſs, in which or by which any Man can be ſaved in this World. This is my Faith, which I beſeech all Men here to bear Witneſs of.

Then he ſaid the Lord's Prayer, and ſo made an End.

Then Mr. Cholmeley came to him, deſiring him to recant his Hereſy, whereby he might do good to the People, or elſe he would be damned.

Flower anſwered as followeth: Sir I beſeech you for God's Sake to be contented: For that I have ſaid, I have ſaid, and I have been of this Faith from the Beginning; and I truſt to the living God he will give me his Holy Spirit to continue to the End. Then he deſired all the World to forgive him whom he had offended, as he forgave all the World.

This done, firſt his Hand being held up againſt the Stake, was ſtruck off, his left Hand being faſtned behind him. At which ſtriking off his Hand, ſome that were preſent, and purpoſely obſerving the ſame, credibly informed us, that he in no Part of his Body did once ſhrink at the ſtriking thereof, but once a little he ſtirred his Shoulders.

And thus Fire was ſet unto him, who burning therein, cried with a loud Voice, O the Son of God have Mercy upon me, O the Son of God receive my Soul, three Times, and ſo his Speech being taken from him, he ſpake no more, lifting up notwithſtanding his Stump with his other Arm as long as he could.

And thus he endured the Extremity of the Fire, being therein cruelly handled, by reaſon that the few Faggots that were brought being not ſufficient to burn him, they were fain to ſtrike him down into the Fire. Where he lying along (which was doleful to behold) upon the Ground, his lower Part was conſumed in the Fire, whilſt his upper Part was without the Fire, his Tongue in all Men's Sight ſtill moving in his Mouth.

May 1555.

The third of May a Letter was ſent to George Colt and Thomas Daniel, to make Search for and apprehend John Bernard and John Walſh, who uſed to repair to Sudbury, and carrying about with them the Bones of Pigot that was burned, do ſhew them to the People, perſuading them to be conſtant in his Religion, and upon Examination to commit them to further ordering, according to the Laws.

This Day Stephen Appes was committed to the Little-Eaſe in the Tower, there to remain two or three Days till further Examination.

The 12th Day Mr. Thomas Roſs Preacher, was by the Council's Letters delivered from the Tower to the Sheriff of Norfolk, to be conveyed and delivered to the Biſhop of Norwich, and he either to reduce him to Recant, or elſe proceed againſt him according to the Law.

The 16th a Letter was ſent to the Lord Treaſurer: Signifying what the Lord Lieutenant had done for Roſs; and that Order ſhould be given, according to his Lordſhip's Requeſt, for Letters to the Biſhops: And for Appes, whom the Lieutenant of the Tower reporteth to be Mad, his Lordſhip perceiving the ſame to be true, ſhould commit him to Bedlam, there to remain till their further Order.

The 26th a Letter was ſent to the Lord Treaſurer, to confer with the Biſhop of London, and the Juſtices of the Peace of that County, wherein they are to be executed that are already condemned for Religion, and upon Agreement of Places, to give Order for their Execution accordingly.

The 28th a Letter was ſent to the Lord Treaſurer, to cauſe ſpeedy Preparation to be made of ſuch Money as was appointed for ſuch Perſons as ſhould carry the joyful Tidings of Queen Mary's good Delivery of Child, to divers Princes, that they be not compelled to ſtay when the Time ſhall come. The Ambaſſadors were, the Lord Admiral to the Emperor, the Lord Fitzwalter to the French King, Sir Henry Sidney to the King of the Romans, Richard Shalley to the King of Portugal, whoſe free Paſſage through France Dr. Wotton was ordered to procure.

The 29th a Letter was directed to Sir Francis Ingleſield to make ſearch for one John D—— at London, and to apprehend him, and ſend him to the Council, and to make ſearch for ſuch Papers and Books as he thinketh may touch the ſame D —— or one Benger.

The

The Martyrdom of John Cardmaker, and John Warne, Upholſter, who ſuffered both together in Smithfield, May 30. 1555.

UPON the 30th Day of May John Cardmaker, otherwiſe called Taylor, Prebendary of the Church of Wells; and John Warne Upholſter, of the Pariſh of St. John in Walbrook ſuffer'd together in Smithfield. Of whom it remaineth now particularly to entreat, beginning with Mr. Cardmaker, who firſt was an obſervant Frier before the Diſſolution of the Abbeys: afterwards was a married Miniſter, and in King Edward's time appointed to be a Reader in St. Paul's. Mr. Cardmaker being apprehended in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, with Mr. Barlow Biſhop of Bath, was brought to London, and put in the Fleet Priſon, King Edward's Laws being yet in Force. But after the Parliament was ended, in which the Pope was again admitted as ſupream Head of the Church, and the Biſhops had alſo gotten Power and Authority, Ex officio, to exerciſe their Tyranny, theſe two were brought before the Biſhop of Wincheſter Lord Chancellor, and others appointed by Commiſſion (as before is mentioned) to examine the Faith of ſuch as were then Priſoners, and as unto others before, ſo now unto them the Chancellor offered the Queen's Mercy, if they would agree, and be conformable, &c.

Mr. Cardmaker Reader in St. Paul's.

Mr. Cardmaker with Mr. Barlow, apprehended and laid in the Fleet.

To this they both made ſuch an Anſwer, as the Chancellor with his fellow Commiſſioners allowed them for Catholicks. Whether they of Weakneſs ſo anſwered, or he of Subtilty would ſo underſtand their Anſwer, that he might have ſome forged Example of a ſhrinking Brother to lay in the Diſh of the reſt, which were to be examined; it may eaſily be perceived by this, that to all them which followed in Examination, he objected the Example of Barlow and Cardmaker, commending their Soberneſs, Diſcretion, and Learning. But whatſoever their Anſwer was, yet notwithſtanding Barlow was led again to the Fleet, from whence he afterwards being delivered, did by Exile conſtantly bear Witneſs to the Truth of the Goſpel. Cardmaker was conveyed to the Compter in Breadſtreet, the Biſhop of London procuring it to be publiſhed, that he ſhould ſhortly be delivered, after that he had ſubſcribed to Tranſubſtantiation and certain other Articles. To the ſame Priſon where Cardmaker was, Laurence Saunders was brought (after the Sentence of Excommunication and Condemnation was pronounced againſt him) where theſe two Priſoners had ſuch chriſtian Conference, that whatſoever the Breath of the Biſhop bluſtred, and the fickle Ears of the People too lightly believed, in the End they both ſhewed themſelves conſtant Confeſſors and worthy Martyrs of Chriſt: As of Laurence Saunders is already written. After whoſe Departure Cardmaker remained there Priſoner, to be baited by the Papiſts, who would needs ſeem to have a certain Hope that Cardmaker was become theirs. Continual and great Conference divers of them had with him, with Reaſonings, Perſwadings, Threatnings, and all to none Effect. To the End that their Doings might appear, he required them to put their Reaſons in writing, and promiſed by writing to anſwer them.

Conference between Laurence Saunders and John Cardmaker.

Dr. Martin, who bare alſo a Part in thoſe Pageants, took upon him to be the chief Doer by writing, whoſe long unſavoury Letters and ſimple Reaſons for Tranſubſtantiation, Mr. Cardmaker anſwered largely, learnedly, and ſubſtantially, confuting the ſame, opening the Falſhood of his Arguments, and delivering the Sentences of the Fathers (which Martin abuſed for his Purpoſe) to their true Underſtanding; which Anſwers I would had come to our Hands. Thus conſtantly abode this good Man all the Enemies Doings, as he did alſo the Death which he ſuffered in Smithfield in London: Whereof ye ſhall hear more anon. But firſt we will ſurvey the Matter and Manner of the Articles objected againſt him by Biſhop Bonner, with his Anſwers annex'd to the ſame, as followeth. Anno 1555.

Articles objected by Biſhop Bonner againſt John Taylor, alias Cardmaker.

1. I Edmund Biſhop of London, object againſt thee, Sir John Taylor, alias Cardmaker. that thou waſt and art of the City and Dioceſs of London, and ſo of the Juriſdiction of me Edmund Biſhop of London.

2. Item, That thou in Times paſt didſt profeſs the Rule of St. Francis, and didſt by Vow promiſe to keep Poverty, Chaſtity, and Obedience, according to the Rule of St. Francis.

3. Item, That thou in Times paſt didſt receive all the Orders of the Church then uſed: to wit, Tam majores quam minores.

4. Item, That thou after thy ſaid Entry into Religion and Profeſſion and Orders aforeſaid, didſt take to Wife a Widow, and with her hadſt carnal Copulation, and didſt get of her a Woman Child, breaking thereby thy Vow and Order, and alſo the Ordinance of the Church.

5. Item, That thou haſt believed and taught, and ſo doſt believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar under the viſible Signs there, that is to ſay, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is really and trully the true and very natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

6. Item, That the Belief of the Catholick Church is, that in having the Body and Blood of Chriſt really and truly contained in the Sacrament of the Altar, is to have (by the omnipotent Power of Almighty God) the Body and Blood of Chriſt there inviſibly and really preſent under the ſaid Sacrament, and not to make thereby a new God, or a new Chriſt, or a new Body of Chriſt.

The Belief of the Pope's Catholick Church.

7. Item, That it may ſtand well together, and ſo is the Faith of the catholick Church, that the Body of Chriſt is viſibly and truly aſcended into Heaven, and there is in the viſible Form of his Humanity; and yet the ſame Body in Subſtance is inviſibly and truly contained in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar.

8. Item, That Chriſt at his laſt Supper taking Bread into his Hands, bleſſing it, breaking it, giving it to his Apoſtles, and ſaying; Take, eat, this is my Body; did inſtitute a Sacrament there, * willing that his Body really and truly ſhould be contained in the ſaid Sacrament, no Subſtance of Bread and Wine there remaining, but only the Accidents thereof.

* That Chriſt never willed, neither can the Scriptures bear it.

Anno 1555.

Mr. Cardmaker's Anſwers to the aforeſaid Articles.

TO the firſt Article he anſwereth, and confeſſeth the ſame to be true in every Part thereof.

To the ſecond Article he anſwereth and confeſſeth, That he being under Age, did profeſs the ſaid Order and Religion, and afterward by the Authority of King Henry the Eighth, he was diſpenſed with for the ſame Religion.

Mr. Cardmaker's Anſwers to the Articles.

To the Third he anſwereth and confeſſeth the ſame to be true in every Part thereof.

To the Fourth he anſwereth and confeſſeth, the firſt Part thereof to be true; and to the ſecond Part of the ſame Article he anſwereth and ſaith, that in Marriage he brake no Vow, becauſe he was ſet at Liberty to marry, both by the Laws of this Realm, and alſo by the Laws and Ordinances of the Church of the ſame.

To the Fifth he anſwereth and confeſſeth, That he hath believed and taught as it is contained in this Article, but he doth not now ſo believe nor teach.

To the Sixth he anſwereth, That he doth not believe the ſame to be true in any Part thereof.

To the Seventh he anſwereth, That he doth not believe the ſame to be true in any Part thereof.

To the Eighth he anſwereth and doth believe, that it is true; that is to ſay, that Chriſt taking Bread at his laſt Supper into his Hands, bleſſing it, breaking it, giving it to his Diſciples, and ſaying, Take, eat, this is my Body, did inſtitute a Sacrament there. And to the other Part of this Article, namely, (willing that his Body really and truly ſhould be contained in the ſaid Sacrament, no Subſtance of Bread and Wine there remaining, but only the Accidents thereof) he anſwereth, that he doth not believe the ſame to be true,

By me John Cardmaker.

Mr. Cardmaker calling to mind afterwards the ready Cavillings of the Papiſts, and thinking himſelf not to have fully, and according to his true Meaning anſwered the latter Part of the laſt eighth Article, did the next Day after the aforeſaid Anſwers exhibit unto the Biſhop in a Schedule this hereafter following.

A more full Anſwer to the ſecond Part of the eighth Article.

Where in my Anſwer to your Articles I deny the Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, I mean not his ſacramental Preſence, for that I confeſs; but my Denial is of his carnal Preſence in the ſame. But yet further, becauſe this Word is oftentimes taken by the holy Fathers, not only for Bread and Wine, but alſo for the whole Adminiſtration and receiving the ſame according to Chriſt's Inſtitution: So I ſay, that Chriſt is preſent ſpiritually too, and in all them which worthily receive the Sacrament; ſo that my Denial is ſtill of the real, carnal and corporal Preſence in the Sacrament, and not of the ſacramental nor ſpiritual Preſence.

This I have thought good to add to my former Anſwer, becauſe no Man ſhould miſunderſtand it.

By me John Cardmaker.

Articles objected againſt John Warne Upholſter, of the Pariſh of St. John in Walbrook, with his Anſwers to the ſame.

FIRST, That thou John Warne, being of the Age of 29 Years, and of the Pariſh of St. John of Walbrook in London, haſt believed, and doſt believe firmly and ſtedfaſtly, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not the very true and natural Body of our Saviour Chriſt in Subſtance, under the forms of Bread and Wine.

Item, That thou haſt believed, and doſt believe, that after the Words of Conſecration ſpoken by the Prieſt, there is not (as the Church of England doth believe and teach) the Body of Chriſt; but that there doth only remain the Subſtance of material Bread, as it is before the Conſecration, or ſpeaking of the Words of Conſecration; and that the ſaid Bread is in no wiſe altered or changed.

Item, That thou haſt ſaid and doſt believe, that if the catholick Church do believe and teach, that there is in the Maſs, now uſed in England, and in other Places of Chriſtendom, a Sacrifice wherein there is a Sacrament containing the Body and Blood of Chriſt realy and truly; then that Belief and Faith of the Church is naught, againſt God's Truth and the Scripture.

Hereſy for laughing at a Spaniel ſhorn on the Head.

Item, That thou haſt ſaid, that about a Twelvemonth ago and more, a great rough Water Spaniel of thine was ſhorn on the Head, and had a Crown like a Prieſt made in the ſame, thou didſt laugh at it and like it, though thou didſt it not thyſelf, nor kneweſt who did it.

Item, That thou neither this Lent laſt paſt, nor at any Time ſince the Queen's Majeſty's Reign, haſt come into the Church, or heard Maſs, or been confeſſed, or received the Sacrament of the Altar; and haſt ſaid, that thou art not ſorry that thou haſt ſo done, but thou art glad becauſe thou haſt not therewith defiled thy Conſcience, which otherwiſe thou ſhouldſt have done.

Upon all which Articles John Warne being examined by the ſaid Biſhop Bonner, in Preſence of divers Witneſſes, May 23. 1555. did confeſs and believe the ſame, and ſubſcribe hereunto his Name with his own Hand.

By me John Warne.

It alſo was objected againſt the ſaid John Warne, by the aforeſaid Biſhop, as followeth.

Item, That thou John Warne waſt in Time paſt here in the City of London, convented in Guildhall for Hereſy againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, according to the Order of the Laws of this Realm of England in the Time of King Henry VIII. and when Alderman Barnes was Sheriff, and the Thurſday after that Anne Aſkew, was burnt in Smithfield; and thereupon thou waſt ſent a Priſoner to Newgate, to whom Edmund Biſhop of London did repair with his Chaplains, to inſtruct thee in the true Faith of Chriſt, touching the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, and to bring thee from thy Error, which was, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not the Body of Chriſt, nor any corporal Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood, under the Forms of Bread and Wine; but that in the ſaid Sacrament there is only material Bread and Wine, without any Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood at all:

and becauſe thou wouldſt not leave and forſake thy ſaid Hereſy therein, but perſiſt and abide obſtinately and wilfully therein, thou wert, according to the ſaid Laws condemned to Death and to be burnt; and thereupon Suit being made for thee to the King and others in the Court, thou hadſt a Pardon of King Henry the Eighth, and thereby didſt ſave thy Life.

John Warne pardoned by King Henry VIII

Nevertheleſs in thy Heart, Conſcience, and Mind, thou didſt both then, and alſo before believe no otherwiſe than at this preſent thou doſt believe; that is to ſay, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is neither the very true Body or Blood of Chriſt, nor no other Subſtance but the Subſtance of material Bread and Wine; and to receive the ſaid material Bread and Wine, and to break it, and to diſtribute it among the People, only is the true receiving of Chriſt's Body, and no otherwiſe: So that thy Faith and Belief is, that in the ſaid Sacrament there is no Subſtance of Chriſt's material Body and Blood; but all the Thing that is there is material Bread, and the receiving thereof as before; and that the Subſtance of the natural and true Body of Chriſt, born of the Virgin Mary, is only in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament of the Altar. In which thine Opinion thou haſt ever hitherto ſince continued, and ſo doſt continue at this preſent, thou confeſſing all this to be true, and in Witneſs thereof ſubſcribing thy Name thereunto, as followeth.

By me John Warne.

John Warne being examined upon the aforeſaid Articles by the Biſhop before certain Witneſſes, whoſe Names were John Roſwell, John Heywood, Robert Ravens, the 23d of May, did anſwer for the ſame, confeſſing and granting the Articles and the Contents thereof to be true, according as they were objected in every Part, ſubſcribing alſo the ſame with his Hand. Such Strength and Fortitude God's Holy Spirit wrought in him, to ſtand ſtoutly and confidently to the Defence of the ſincere Doctrine of his Son.

Whereupon the Biſhop exhorting him with many Words to leave his Hereſies (as he called them) and to return to the Boſom of his Mother the holy Church, commanding him to appear again the next Day, being the 24th of May.

The ſecond Seſſion againſt John Warne.

Who ſo doing (and anſwering as he did before) was ordered to come thither again in the Afternoon, and ſo he did: At which Time he was earneſtly exhorted by the ſaid Biſhop to recant his Opinions. To whom he anſwered, that he would not depart from his received Profeſſion, unleſs he were thereunto throughly perſuaded by the holy Scriptures.

The third Seſſion.

Upon which Anſwer he was ordered to come again the next Day, being the 25th of May, at One of the Clock in the Afternoon. At which Day and Hour the Biſhop examined him again upon all his former Articles before objected, to which he moſt conſtantly adhered, with this further Anſwer added thereunto: I am perſuaded (quoth he) that I am in the right Opinion, and I ſee no Cauſe to repent; for all Filthineſs and Idolatry is in the Church of Rome.

The Biſhop then ſeeing that notwithſtanding all his fair Promiſes, and terrible Threatnings he could not prevail, finiſhed his Examination with the definitive Sentence of Condemnation pronounced againſt the ſaid John Warne, and charged the Sheriffs of London with him, under whoſe Cuſtody he remained in the Priſon of Newgate, until the 30th Day of May.

Sentence given againſt John Warne.

Which Day being appointed for their Execution, John Cardmaker, with the ſaid John Warne, were brought by the Sheriffs to the Place where they ſhould ſuffer. Who being come to the Stake, firſt the Sheriffs called Mr. Cardmaker aſide, and talked with him ſecretly, ſo long, that in the mean Time Mr. Warne had made his Prayers, was chained to the Stake, and had Wood and Reed ſet about him, while Mr. Cardmaker was talking with the Sheriffs.

Anno 1555. Mr. Cardmaker and Mr. John Warne brought to Execution.

The People who before had heard that Mr. Cardmaker would recant, and beholding this, were greatly afflicted, thinking indeed that Mr. Cardmaker would now recant at the Burning of Mr. Warne. At length Mr. Cardmaker departed from the Sheriffs, and came towards the Stake, and kneeled down, and made a long Prayer in Silence to himſelf. His Prayers being ended, he roſe up, put off his Cloaths unto his Shirt, and went with a bold Courage to the Stake, and kiſſed it: And taking Mr. Warne by the Hand, he heartily comforted him, and ſo gave himſelf to be alſo bound to the Stake moſt gladly. The People ſeeing this ſo ſuddenly done, contrary to their Expectation, as Men delivered out of a great Doubt, cried out for Joy, ſaying, God be praiſed, the Lord ſtrengthen thee, Cardmaker, the Lord Jeſus receive thy Spirit. And this continued while the Executioner put Fire to them, and they both paſſed through the Fire to the bleſſed Reſt and Peace among God's holy Saints and Martyrs, to enjoy the Crown of Triumph and Victory prepared for the elect Soldiers and Warriors of Chriſt Jeſus in his bleſſed Kingdom. To whom be Glory and Majeſty for ever. Amen.

The People afraid of Mr. Cardmaker's recanting.

The rejoycing of the People at Cardmaker's Conſtancy.

The Confeſſion and Faith of Mr. John Warne, which he wrote the Day before he ſuffered, May 30, 1555.

I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth.

A Father, becauſe he is the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the everlaſting Word, whom before all Worlds he hath begotten of himſelf, which Word was made Fleſh, and therein alſo manifeſted to be his Son; in whom he hath adopted us to be his Children, the Inheritors of his Kingdom, and therefore he is our Father; an Almighty God, becauſe he hath of nothing created all Things viſible and inviſible, both in Heaven and in Earth, even all Creatures contained therein, and governeth them.

And in Jeſus Chriſt his only Son our Lord.

The eternal Word, perfect God with his Father, of equal Power in all Things, of the ſame Subſtance, of like Glory, by whom all Things were made, and have Life, and without whom nothing liveth: He was made alſo perfect Man, and ſo being very God, and very Man in one Perſon, is the only Saviour, Redeemer, and Ranſomer of them which were loſt in Adam our Forefather. He is the only Means of our Deliverance, the Hope of our Health, the Surety of our Salvation.

Which was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, born of the Virgin Mary.

According to the Father's moſt merciful Promiſe, this eternal Son of God, forſaking the heavenly Glory, humbled himſelf to take Fleſh of a Virgin, according to the Scriptures, uniting the Subſtance of the Godhead to the Subſtance of the Manhood, which he took of the Subſtance of that bleſſed Virgin Mary in one Perſon, to become therein the very Meſſiah, the anointed King and Prieſt, for ever appointed to pacify the Father's Wrath, which was juſtly gone out againſt us all for Sin.

Anno 1555.

Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried, and deſcended into Hell.

He was arraigned before Pontius Pilate the Ruler of Jewry, and ſo unjuſtly accuſed of many Crimes, that the Ruler judged him innocent, and ſought Means to deliver him; but contrary to known Juſtice, he did let go Barabbas who had deſerved Death, and delivered Chriſt to be crucified, who deſerved no Death: Which doth manifeſtly declare unto us, that he ſuffered for our Sins, and was buffetted for our Offences, as the Prophets do witneſs, thereby to have it manifeſted to all Men, that he is that Lamb of God that taketh away the Sins of the World. Therefore ſuffering for our Sins, he received and did bear our deſerved Condemnation, the Pains of Death, the Taſte of Abjection, the very Terror of Hell, yielding his Spirit to his Father, his Body to be buried in Earth.

The third Day he roſe again from Death to Life.

To make full and perfect the whole Work of our Redemption and Juſtification, the ſame crucified Body which was laid in the Grave, was raiſed up the third Day from Death, by the Power of his Father, and Glory of his Godhead: He became the firſt Fruits of the Reſurrection, and got the Victory of Death, that all by him might be raiſed up from Death. Thro' whom all true penitent Sinners may now boldly come unto the Father, and have Remiſſion of their Sins.

He aſcended into Heaven, and ſitteth on the Right Hand of God the Father Almighty.

The triumphant Victory over Death.

After that in his Death and Reſurrection he had conquered Sin, Death, and the Devil, and had been converſant forty Days in the Earth, being ſeen of the Apoſtles, and more than five hundred Brethren at once, in the ſame Body in which he wrought the Work of our Salvation, he aſcended into Heaven with eternal Triumph, for the Victory over Death, Sin and Hell, leaving the Paſſage open, by which all true Believers may and ſhall enter into his Kingdom, where he now ſitteth at his Father's Right Hand, that is to ſay, in Power and Glory equal, in Majeſty coeternal.

From thence he ſhall come to judge the Quick and the Dead.

He ſhall appear again in great Glory to receive his Elect unto himſelf, and to put his Enemies under his Feet, changing all living Men in a Moment, and raiſing up all that be dead, that all may be brought to his Judgment. In this ſhall he give to each Man according to his Deeds. They which have followed him in Regeneration, which have their Sins waſhed away in his Blood, and are clothed with his Righteouſneſs, ſhall receive the everlaſting Kingdom, and reign with him for ever; and they, which after the Race of the corrupt Generation of Adam have followed Fleſh and Blood, ſhall receive everlaſting Damnation with the Devil and his Agels.

I believe in the Holy Ghoſt.

I do believe that the Holy Ghoſt is God, the third Perſon in the Trinity, in Unity of the Godhead equal with the Father and the Son, given through Chriſt to inhabit our Spirits, by which we are made to feel and underſtand the great Power, Virtue, and loving Kindneſs of Chriſt our Lord. For he illuminateth, quickeneth, and certifieth our Spirit, that by him we are ſealed up unto the Day of Redemption, by whom we are regenerate and made new Creatures, ſo that by him and through him we do receive all the abundant Goodneſs promiſed us in Jeſus Chriſt.

The holy Catholick Church.

This is an holy Number of Adam's Poſterity, elected, gathered, waſhed, and purified by the Blood of the Lamb from the Beginning of the World, and is diſperſed thro' the ſame by the Tyranny of Gog and Magog; that is to ſay, the Turk and his Tyranny, and Antichriſt, otherwiſe named the Biſhop of Rome, and his Angels, as this Day alſo doth teach.

The Communion of Saints.

Which moſt holy Congregation (being as St. Paul teacheth, built upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Chriſt being the head Corner-ſtone) tho' it be by Tyranny of Satan and his Miniſters perſecuted, ſome by Impriſonment, ſome by Death, and ſome by other Afflictions and painful Torments; yet doth it remain in one perfect Unity, both in Faith and Fellowſhip: Which Unity is knit in an unſpeakable Knot, as well of them which are departed from this mortal Life, as of them which now be living, and hereafter ſhall be in the ſame, and ſo ſhall continue until they all do meet in the Kingdom, where the Head Jeſus Chriſt, with all his holy Members (of which Number thro' Chriſt I aſſuredly believe I am one) ſhall be fully compleat, knit, and united together for evermore.

The Forgiveneſs of Sins.

Remiſſion only thro' Chriſt.

I do believe that my Sins, and all their Sins which do rightly believe the holy Scripture, are forgiven only thro' Jeſus Chriſt, of whom only I do profeſs that I have my whole and full Salvation and Redemption, which St. Paul ſaith, cometh not through our Works and Deſervings, but freely by Grace, leſt any ſhould boaſt himſelf. Thro' the Blood of the Croſs all Things in Heaven and earth are reconciled, and ſet at Peace with the Father; without him no heavenly Life given, or Sin forgiven.

The Reſurrection of the Body.

I do believe, that by the ſame my Saviour Chriſt, I and all Men ſhall riſe again from Death; for he, as St. Paul ſaith, is riſen again from the Dead, and is become the firſt Fruits of them which ſleep. For by a Man came Death, and by a Man cometh the Reſurrection from Death. This Man is Chriſt, thro' the Power of whoſe Reſurrection I believe that we all ſhall riſe again in theſe our Bodies; the Godly cloathed with Immortality to live with Chriſt for ever; the Wicked alſo ſhall riſe immortally to live with the Devil and his Angels in Death everlaſting.

And the Life everlaſting.

Through the ſame Jeſus, and by none other, I am ſure to have Life everlaſting. He only is the Way and Entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven. For ſo God loved the World, that he did give his only Son Jeſus Chriſt, to the End that ſo many as do believe in him might have everlaſting Life. Which I am ſure to poſſeſs as ſoon as I am diſſolved, and departed out of this Tabernacle, and in the laſt Day both Body and Soul ſhall poſſeſs the ſame for ever, to which God grant all Men to come.

John 3. Life and Salvation only by Faith in Chriſt.

I believe, that the Sacrament, that is to ſay,

of Baptiſm and of the Lord's Supper, are Seals of God's moſt merciful Promiſes towards Mankind. In Baptiſm, as by the outward Creature of Water I am waſhed from the Filthineſs which hangeth on my Fleſh; ſo do I aſſuredly believe, that I am by Chriſt's Blood waſhed clean from my Sins, thro' which I have ſure Confidence of my certain Salvation. In the Partaking of the Lord's-ſupper, as I receive the Subſtance of Bread and Wine (the Nature of which is to ſtrengthen the Body) ſo do I by Faith receive the Redemption wrought in Chriſt's Body broken on the Croſs, Life by his Death, Reſurrection by his Reſurrection, and in ſum, all that ever Chriſt in his Body ſuffered for my Salvation, to the ſtrengthening of my Faith in the ſame. And I believe, that God hath appointed the eating and drinking of the Creatures of Bread and Wine in his holy Supper according to his Word, to move and to ſtir up my Mind to believe theſe Articles above written.

This is my Faith; this do I believe; and I am content by God's Grace to confirm and ſeal the Truth of the ſame with my Blood.

By me John Warne.

The Hiſtory of John Ardeley and John Simſon, of the Pariſh of Wigborow the Great in Eſſex.

JOHN ARDELEY and John Simſon was condemned for the ſame Cauſe and on the ſame Day with Mr. Cardmaker and John Warne, which was the 25th Day of May. But before we come to the Story of them, Firſt here is to be noted the Copy of the King and Queen's Letter directed from the Court the ſame Day, and ſent by a Poſt early in the Morning to Biſhop Bonner, in Tenor and Form as followeth.

King Philip and Queen Mary's Letter to Bonner Biſhop of London.

RIGHT Reverend Father in God, right truſty and welbeloved, we greet you well. And where of late we addreſſed our Letters to the Juſtices of Peace within every of the Counties of this Realm, whereby amongſt other Inſtructions given them for the good Order and quiet Government of the Country round about them, they are willed to have a ſpecial Regard unto ſuch diſordered Perſons as (forgetting their Duties towards God and us) do lean to any erroneous and heretical Opinions, refuſing to ſhew themſelves conformable to the catholick Religion of Chriſt's Church; wherein if they cannot by good Admonitions and fair Means reform them, they are willed to deliver them to the Ordinary, to be by him charitably travelled withal, and removed (if it may be) from their naughty Opinions, or elſe if they continue obſtinate, to be ordered according to the Laws provided in that behalf: Underſtanding now, to our no little marvel, that divers of the ſaid diſordered Perſons, being by the Juſtices of Peace for their Contempt and Obſtinacy, brought to the Ordinaries to be uſed as is aforeſaid, are either refuſed to be received at their Hands, or if they be received, are neither ſo travelled with, as chriſtian Charity requireth, nor yet proceeded withal according to the Order of Juſtice, but are ſuffered to continue in their Errors, to the Diſhonour of Almighty God, and dangerous Example of others; like as we find this Matter very ſtrange, ſo we have thought convenient both to ſignify our Knowledge, and therewith alſo to admoniſh you to have in this Behalf ſuch regard henceforth to the Office of a good Paſtor and Biſhop, as when any ſuch Offenders ſhall be by the ſaid Officers or Juſtices of the Peace brought unto you, you to uſe your good Wiſdom and Diſcretion in procuring to remove them from their Errors, if it may be, or elſe in proceeding againſt them (if they ſhall continue obſtinate) according to the Order of the Laws; ſo as thro' your good Furtherance, both God's Glory may be better advanced, and the Common-wealth more quietly governed. Given under our Signet, at our Manour of Hampton-court, the 24th of May, the firſt and ſecond Years of our Reign. Anno 1555.

This Letter coming from the Court to the Biſhop, made him the more earneſt and haſty to the Condemnation, as well of others, as of theſe Men, of whom we are now treating, namely, Mr. John Simſon and Mr. John Ardeley. Who being both of one Country, of one Town, and of one Trade, that is, being both Huſbandmen in the Town of Wigborow in Eſſex, and alſo almoſt both of one Age, Simſon being of the Age of 34, the other of 30, were brought up both together by the under Sheriff of Eſſex, to Bonner Biſhop of London, upon the Accuſation of Hereſy, as in that Time it was called.

John Ardeley and John Simſon, both Husbandmen in the Town of Wigborow.

As concerning the Order and Manner of their Examinations before the Biſhop, as the Articles objected againſt them were much alike, ſo their Anſwers again to the ſame were not much different in Manner and Form; as here followeth taken out of the Biſhop's own Regiſters.

Articles objected by Biſhop Bonner againſt John Simſon and John Ardeley, Husbandmen, at Fulham.

THAT thou John Simſon (or John Ardeley) Huſbandmen, of the Age of 34 Years or thereabouts, waſt and art of the Pariſh of great Wigborow, within the Dioceſs of London, and thou haſt not believed, nor doſt believe, that there is here in Earth one Catholick and Univerſal whole Church, which doth hold and believe all the Faith and Religion of Chriſt, and all the neceſſary Articles and Sacraments of the ſame.

2. Item, That thou haſt not believed, nor doſt believe, that thou art neceſſarily bounden, under the Pain of Damnation of thy Soul, to give full Faith and Credence unto the ſaid Catholick and Univerſal Church, and to the Religion of the ſame, in all neceſſary Points of the ſaid Faith and Religion, without wavering or doubting in the ſaid Faith or Religion, or in any Part thereof.

3. Item, That thou haſt not believed, nor doſt believe that that Faith and Religion, which both the Church of Rome, Italy, Spain, England, France, Ireland, Scotland, and all other Churches in Europe, being the Members and Parts of the ſaid Catholick and Univerſal Church, do believe and teach, is both agreeing with the ſaid Catholick and Univerſal Church, and the Faith and Religion of Chriſt, and alſo is the very true Faith and Religion which all Chriſtian People ought to believe, obſerve, follow, and keep: But contrariwiſe thou haſt believed, and doſt believe, that that Faith and Religion, which the ſaid Church of Rome, and all the other Churches aforeſaid have heretofore believed, and do now believe, is falſe, erroneous, and naught, and in no wiſe ought to be believed, obſerved, kept, and followed by any chriſtian Man.

4. Item, That albeit it be true, that in the Sacrament

Anno 1555. Sacrament of the Altar there is in Subſtance the very Body and Blood of Chriſt under the Forms of Bread and Wine, and albeit that it be ſo believed, taught, and preached undoubtedly in the ſaid Church of Rome, and all other the Churches aforeſaid, yet thou haſt not ſo believed, nor doſt ſo believe; but contrariwiſe thou haſt and doſt believe firmly and ſtedfaſtly, that there is not in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, under the ſaid Forms of Bread and Wine, the very Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, but that there is only the Subſtance of material and common Bread and Wine, with the Forms thereof; and that the ſaid material and common Bread and Wine, are only the Signs and Tokens of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and by Faith to be received, only for a Remembrance of Chriſt's Paſſion and Death, without any ſuch Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood at all.

Tranſubſtantiation denied. 5. Item, That thou haſt believed and taught, and thou haſt openly ſpoken, and to thy Power maintained and defended, and ſo doſt believe, think, maintain, and defend, that the very true receiving and eating of Chriſt's Body and Blood, is only to take material and common Bread, and to break it, and to diſtribute it amongſt the People, remembring thereby the Paſſion and Death of Chriſt only.

The Maſs abominable. 6. Item, That thou haſt likewiſe believed, taught, and ſpoken, that the Maſs now uſed in this Realm of England, and other the Churches aforeſaid, is abominable and naught, and full of Idolatry, and is of the Ordinance of the Pope, and not of the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and hath no Goodneſs in it, ſaving the Gloria in Excelſis, and the Epiſtle and the Goſpel, and that therefore thou haſt not, nor wilt not come to be preſent at the Maſs, nor receive the Sacrament of the Altar, or any other Sacrament of the Church, as they are now uſed in this Realm of England, and other the Churches aforeſaid.

7. Item, That thou haſt in Times paſt believed preciſely, and obſtinately affirmed and ſaid, and ſo doſt now believe and think, that auricular Confeſſion is not needful to be made unto the Prieſt, but it is a Thing ſuperfluous and vain, and ought only to be made to God, and to none other Perſon: And likewiſe thou haſt condemned as ſuperfluous, vain, and unprofitable, all the Ceremonies of the Church and the Service of the ſame, and haſt ſaid, that no Service in the Church ought to be ſaid but in the Engliſh Tongue, and if it be otherwiſe ſaid, it is unlawful and naught.

John Simſon and John Ardeley's Anſwers to the aforeſaid Articles.

TO the Firſt, they believe, that here in Earth there is one Catholick and Univerſal holy Church, which doth hold and believe as is contained in the firſt Article, and that this Church is diſperſed and ſcattered Abroad thro' out the whole World.

To the Second, they believe, that they be bound to give Faith and Credence unto it, as is contained in the ſecond Article.

To the Third, as concerning the Faith and Religion of the Church of Rome, of Italy, Spain, France, Ireland, Scotland, and other Churches in Europe, they ſay, they have nothing to do with that Faith and Religion: But as concerning the Faith and Religion of England, that if the ſaid Church of England be ruled and governed by the Word of Life, then the Church of England hath the Faith and Religion of the catholick Church, and not otherwiſe; and do ſay alſo, that if the Church of England were ruled by the Word of Life, it would not go about to condemn them and others of this Hereſy.

Tranſubſtantiation denied. To the Fourth they anſwer, that in the Sament, commonly called the Sacrament of the Altar, there is very Bread and very Wine, not altered nor changed in Subſtance in any wiſe, and that he that receiveth the ſaid Bread and Wine, doth ſpiritually and by Faith only receive the Body and Blood of Chriſt, but not the very natural Body and Blood of Chriſt in Subſtance under the Forms of Bread and Wine.

To the Fifth they ſay, they have anſwered, anſwering to the ſaid fourth Article, and yet nevertheleſs they ſay, that they have believed, and do believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not the very Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, but only the Subſtance of the Natural Bread and Wine.

The Maſs deteſted. To the Sixth they ſay, that they believe, that the Maſs is of the Pope, and not of Chriſt; and therefore it is not good, nor having in it any Goodneſs, ſaving the Gloria in Excelſis, the Epiſtle and Goſpel, the Creed, and the Pater noſter; and for this Cauſe they ſay they have not, nor will not come and hear Maſs.

To the Seventh, John Ardeley anſwereth and ſaith, That he believeth the Contents of the ſame to be true; but John Simſon doth anſwer, that he is not yet fully reſolved with himſelf, what Anſwer to make thereunto; and further, that as touching the common and daily Service ſaid and uſed in the Church, he ſaith, that he never ſaid, that Service in the Church ought to be ſaid but in the Engliſh Tongue, nor yet he never ſaid, that if it be otherwiſe ſaid and uſed than in Engliſh, it is unlawful and naught.

John Ardeley and John Simſon.

Another Appearance of John Simſon and John Ardeley before the Biſhop. Theſe Articles being thus objected to them, and their Anſwers made unto the ſame, as before, the Biſhop, according to his uſual Manner, reſpited them to the Afternoon, between the Hours of Two and Three. At which Time the Biſhop repeating again the ſaid Articles unto them, and beginning with John Ardeley, did urge and ſolicit him to recant.

The Words of John Ardeley to Biſhop Bonner. To whom John Ardeley anſwered in the following Words: My Lord, quoth he, neither you, nor any other of your Religion, is of the catholick Church; for you be of a falſe Faith: And I doubt not but you ſhall be deceived at length, bear as good a Face as ye can. Ye will ſhed the innocent Blood, and you have killed many, and yet go about to kill more, &c.

And added further, ſaying, If every Hair of my Head were a Man, I would ſuffer Death in the Opinion and Faith I now profeſs. Theſe with many other Words he ſpake. Then the Biſhop yet demanded if he would relinquiſh his erroneous Opinions (as he called them) and be reduced again to the Unity of the Church. He anſwered, No, God forbid that I ſhould ſo do, for then I ſhould loſe my Soul.

After this the ſaid Biſhop read the Sentence of Condemnation againſt him, as he alſo did againſt John Simſon, ſtanding likewiſe in the ſame Cauſe and Conſtancy with John Ardeley, after aſking them in his formal Manner, if they knew any Cauſe why Sentence ſhould not be pronounced againſt them: Which was done the 25th of May, and ſo were both committed to the ſecular Power, that is, to the Hands of the Sheriffs, to be conveyed to the Place were they ſhould be executed.

executed. But before I come to their Execution, I muſt not omit what happened in the cloſing up the Examination of theſe good Men, which is this.

At the Time of the Examination of John Simſon and John Ardeley aforeſaid, there were aſſembled ſuch a great Multitude of People, that becauſe the Conſiſtory was not able to hold them, they were fain to ſtand in the Church, near about the ſaid Conſiſtory, waiting to ſee the Priſoners when they ſhould depart. It happened in the mean Time, that the Biſhop being ſet in a Heat with the ſtout and bold Anſwers of the ſaid two Priſoners (eſpecially of John Simſon) burſt out in his loud and angry Voice, and ſaid, Have him away, have him away.

The People in the Church hearing theſe Words, and thinking (becauſe the Day was far ſpent) that the Priſoners had their Judgment, they being deſirous to ſee the Priſoners had to Newgate, ſevered themſelves, ſome running one Way, others another Way, which cauſed ſuch a Noiſe in the Church, that they in the Conſiſtory were all amazed, and marvelled what it ſhould mean: Wherefore the Biſhop alſo being ſomewhat afraid of this ſudden Stir, aſked what there was to do. The Standers by anſwering and ſaid, That there was like to be ſome Tumult, for they were together by the Ears.

When the Biſhop heard this, by and by his Heart was in his Heels, and leaving his Seat, he with the reſt of the Court betook them to their Legs, haſtning with all Speed poſſible to recover the Door that went into the Biſhop's Houſe: But the reſt being ſomewhat lighter of Foot than my Lord, did ſooner recover the Door, and thronging haſtily to get in, kept the Biſhop ſtill out, and cried, Save my Lord, Save my Lord; but meaning yet firſt to ſave themſelves if any Danger ſhould come, whereby they gave the Standers by good Matter to laugh at. But of this Matter enough.

John Simſon and John Ardeley ſent into Eſſex to be executed.

Now John Simſon and John Ardeley being delivered (as is aforeſaid) to the Sheriffs, were ſhortly after ſent down from London to Eſſex, where they were both put to death in one Day, but not in the ſame Place, for John Simſon ſuffered at Rochford, and John Ardeley at Railey.

For the better Conſideration of the rigorous Cruelty of theſe Days, this is furthermore worthy to be noted to all Poſterity, concerning the Examinations of John Ardeley and his Company, how that they being brought before the Commiſſioners, were by them greatly charged of Stubbornneſs and Vain-glory. Upon whom they anſwered in Defence of their own Simplicity, that they were content willingly to yield to the Queen all their Goods and Lands, that they might be ſuffered to live under her, in keeping their Conſcience free from all Idolatry and Popery. Yet this would not be granted, altho' they had offered all to their Heart Blood; ſo greedy and ſo thirſty be theſe Perſecutors of Chriſtian Blood. The Lord give them Repentance if it be his Will, and keep from them the juſt Reward of ſuch cruel Dealing. Amen.

Anno 1555.

The ridiculous Proceeding of Biſhop Bonner, againſt John Tooley, whoſe Body being taken up out of the Grave, was given to the ſecular Power, and ſo burned for an Heretick.

ABout the ſame Time of the Burning of theſe two aforeſaid, in the Beginning of the Month of June, fell out a ſolemn Proceſs, and much ado was made about the Pope's Spirituality, againſt John Tooley in a Caſe of Hereſy. The Story is this: There was about the Time that the Spaniards began firſt to make a Stir in England, one John Tooley a Citizen and Poulterer in London, who conſpired with others of his Society, to rob a Spaniard at St. James's: And although the Deed was heinous and wicked of itſelf, yet was it aggravated and made greater than it was by others, being committed againſt ſuch a Perſon, and againſt ſuch a Country, which both the Queen and her whole Court did highly favour. The Robbery being known, and brought into Judgment, John Tooley was found guilty, and judged to be hanged, whereas notwithſtanding in this Realm there are many more Thefts committed than Thieves executed.

The aforeſaid Tooley being led to the Gallows (which ſtood near Charing-Croſs) a little before he died, ſtanding upon the Cart, read a certain Prayer in a printed Book, and two other Prayers written in two ſeveral Papers: Who then having the Halter about his Neck, deſired the People there preſent to pray for him, and to bear him Witneſs that he died a true Chriſtian Man, and that he truſted to be ſaved only through the Merits of Chriſt's Paſſion, and ſhedding of his precious Blood, and not by any Maſſes, or Trentals, Images, or Saints, which were, as he ſaid, meer Idolatry and Superſtition, and deviſed by the Biſhop of Rome; and as the ſame Tooley, and two others his Fellows which were there hanged with him, did ſteal and rob for Covetouſneſs, ſo the Biſhop of Rome did ſell his Maſſes and Trentals, with ſuch Paltry, for Covetouſneſs, and there being in a great Anger (as appeared) againſt the Biſhop of Rome, ſpake with a loud Voice theſe Words following; From the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and all his deteſtable Enormities; from falſe Doctrine and Hereſy, and from the Contempt of thy Word and Commandment, good Lord deliver us.

And then adding further to the ſame, he ſpake unto the People; All you that be true chriſtian Men, ſay with me, Amen. And immediately thereupon three hundred Perſons and more, to the Judgment and Eſtimation of thoſe that were there preſent, anſwered and ſaid, Amen, three Times together at leaſt.

After this it happened, that when John Tooley had read the Bill the firſt Time, it fell from him, and a certain young Man (who was thought to be an Apprentice) ſtooped down and took up the Bill, and climbed up by the Cart, and delivered it to Tooley again, which he again did read to the People. That done, he delivered unto one of the Marſhal's Officers the Book aforeſaid, and deſired him to deliver it to one Mr. Haukes, ſaying, that it was his Book. Furthermore, he delivered one of the Prayers, written ten

Anno 1555. ten in a Paper, to one Robert Bromeley Serjeant, who deſired to have it of him; on the Top of which was written a Line, containing theſe Words, Beware of Antichriſt; and ſubſcribed underneath, Per me Thomas Harold, Priſoner in the Marſhalſea, Enemy to Antichriſt. For the Bill aforeſaid, Robert Bromely was afterward brought, and was fain to aſk Pardon of the Biſhop, and to deteſt all the Words of Tooley, and glad ſo to eſcape.

Thus while Tooley had made his Prayers, as is aboveſaid, to be delivered from the Pope's Tyranny, by the ſame Prayer he fell into great Tyranny. For ſo ſoon as the Report of this Fact came to the Ears of the Prieſts and mitred Prelates, they were not a little mad thereat, thinking it not tolerable that ſo great a Reproach ſhould be done againſt the holy Father. Calling therefore for a Council together, as tho' it had been a Matter of great Importance, Tooley's Talk at his Death was debated among them.

At laſt (after much pro and contra) they all conſented to thoſe Mens Judgment, who thought it meet that the violating the Pope's Holineſs ſhould be revenged with Fire and Faggot. And I do eaſily believe that Cardinal Poole was no ſmall Doer in this Sentence; for as Wincheſter and Bonner did always thirſt after the Blood of the Living, ſo Pool's Lightning was for the moſt Part kindled againſt the Dead; and he reſerved this Charge only to himſelf, I know not for what Purpoſe, except peradventure being loth to be ſo cruel as the other, he thought nevertheleſs by this Means to diſcharge his Duty towards the Pope. By the ſame Cardinal's Order the Bones of Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius, which had been almoſt two Years in their Graves, were taken up and burned at Cambridge, as Tooley's Carcaſs was here at London. And beſides this, becauſe he would ſhew ſome Token of his Diligence in both Univerſities, he cauſed Peter Martyr's Wife, a Woman of worthy Memory, to be digged out of the Church-yard, and to be buried on the Dunghil. Of theſe two prodigious Acts ye ſhall hear more hereafter. But now to our Purpoſe of Tooley, who having ended his Prayer, was hanged and put into his Grave, out of which he was digged again, by the Command of the Biſhops, and becauſe he was ſo bold to derogate the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, at the Time of his Death, it pleaſed them to judge and condemn him as an Heretick, upon the Commandment of the Council's Letter, as here appeareth.

Cardinal Pool a great Doer in burning dead Men's Bones.

Martin Bucer, Paulus Phagius, and John Tooley, burned for Hereticks after their Death.

The Council's Letter to Bp. Bonner.

The Council's Letter to Biſhop Bonner concerning Tooley.

AFTER our very hearty Commendations to your Lordſhip, underſtanding that of late amongſt others that have ſuffered about London for their Offences, one lewd Perſon that was condemned for Felony, died very obſtinately, profeſſing at the Time of his Death ſundry heretical and erroneous Opinions; like as we think it not convenient that ſuch a Matter ſhould be overpaſſed without ſome Example to the World, ſo we thought good to pray your Lordſhip to cauſe further Enquiry to be made thereof, and thereupon to proceed to the making out of ſuch Proceſs as by the eccleſiaſtical Laws is provided in that Behalf. And ſo we bid your Lordſhip heartily well to fare. From Hampton-Court, April 28, 1555.

Your Lordſhip's loving Friends,

Soon after a Citation was ſet up upon St. Paul's Church Door, under the Biſhop of London's Great Seal; the Tenor whereof here enſueth.

The Writ or Mandate of Biſhop Bonner, ſet up at Charing-Croſs, St. Paul's Church Door, and at St. Martins in the Fields, for the citing and further enquiring out of the Caſe of John Tooley.

Biſhop Bonner's Mandate ſet up at St. Paul's Church Door, &c.

EDmund, by the Sufferance of God, Biſhop of London, to all and ſingular Parſons, Vicars, Curates, and others, Clerks and learned Men, being within our Dioceſs of London, and eſpecially unto Richard Clony, our ſworn Sumner, greeting, Salutation, and Benediction. Foraſmuch as it is come to our Hearing by common Fame, and the Declaration of ſeveral creditable Perſons, that one John Tooley late Citizen and Poulterer of London, the Son of Perdition and Iniquity, coming to the Profundity of Malice at the ſelf ſame Time in which he ſhould go to hanging, according to the Laws of the Realm, for the great Theft lately by him committed, at which Time chiefly he ſhould have cared for the Wealth of his Soul, and to have died in the Unity of the catholick Church, did utter divers and ſundry damnable, blaſphemous and heretical Opinions and Errors, utterly contrary and repugnant to the Verity of the catholick Faith, and Unity of the ſame, and did exhort, ſtir up, and encourage the People, there ſtanding in great Multitude, to hold and defend the ſame Errors and Opinions: And moreover, certain of the People there ſtanding, as it did appear, affected with Errors and Hereſies, as Favourers and Defenders of the ſaid John, did confirm and give expreſs Conſent to the aforeſaid Words, Propoſitions, and Affirmations; which Thing we do utter with Sorrow and Bitterneſs of Heart.

We therefore the aforeſaid Edmund, and Biſhop aforeſaid, not being able, nor daring to paſs over in Silence, nor wink at the aforeſaid heinous Act, leſt by our Negligence and Slackneſs the Blood of them might be required at our Hands at the moſt terrible Day of Judgment, deſiring to be certified and informed whether the Premiſſes declared unto us, be of the Truth, and leſt that any ſcabbed Sheep, lurking amongſt the ſimple Flock of our Lord, do infect them with deadly Hereſy: To you therefore we ſtraitly charge and command, that you cite, or cauſe to be cited all and ſingular, having or knowing the Truth of the Premiſſes, by ſetting up this Citation upon the Church Door of St. Martins in the Fields, being within our Dioceſs of London, and alſo upon the Cathedral Church Door of St. Paul's in London, leaving there the Copy hereof, or by other Means or Ways, the beſt you can, that this Citation and Monition may come to their Knowledge.

All which and ſingular by the Tenor of theſe Preſents we cite and admoniſh that they appear, and every one of them do appear before us, our Vicar General, or Commiſſary, whatſoever he be in that Behalf, in our cathedral Church of St. Paul's in London, in the conſiſtory Place, upon Thurſday the ſecond Day of May, now next enſuing, betwixt the Hours of Nine and Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon the ſame Day, to bear Witneſs of the Truth in this Behalf, and to depoſe and declare faithfully the Truth that they know or have heard of the Premiſſes, and moreover to do and receive what Law and Reaſon doth require.

Further

Further we commit unto you as before, and ſtraitly enjoyning you do Command, that ye will generally cite the Wife of the ſaid Tooley that is dead, and his Children, and his Kindred by Father and Moiher, his Friends and his Familiars in eſpecial, and all other and every of them, if there be any perhaps that deſire to defend and purge the Remembrance of the Perſon in the Premiſſes, that ye admoniſh them after the Manner and Form aforeſaid, whom we likewiſe by the Tenor of theſe Preſents, do in ſuch Sort cite and admoniſh that they appear all, and that every one of them do appear (under pain to be compelled to keep ſilence for ever hereafter in this Behalf) before us, or our Vicar General in ſpiritual Matters, or ſuch our Commiſſary, at the Day, Hour, and Place aforeſaid, to defend the good Name and Remembrance of him that is dead, and to ſay, alledge, and propoſe in due Form of Law a Cauſe reaſonable, if they have or can tell of any, why the ſaid John Tooley, that is dead, ought not to be determined, and declared for ſuch an Heretick and excommunicate Perſon, and his Remembrance condemned, in the deteſting and condemning of ſo heinous a Deed and Crime, and his Body or Carcaſs to lack Church burial, as a rotten Member cut off from the Church, and the ſame to be committed to the Arm and Power ſecular, and they compelled hereafter for ever to hold their Peace.

The Carcaſs of Tooly cut off from chriſtian Burial.

And furthermore, to do, receive, and to ſuffer as Law and Reaſon will, and as the Quality of ſuch Matter, and the Nature themſelves do conſtrain and require; and moreover, that you cite and admoniſh, after the Manner aforeſaid, all and every of the Receivers, Favourers, and Creditors of the ſaid John Tooley that is dead, eſpecially if any of them do incline and give conſent to thoſe wicked and deteſtable Affirmations, Propoſitions, and Rehearſals aforeſaid, that on this ſide the ſaid Thurſday they return and ſubmit themſelves unto us, and to the Lap of the Mother holy Church: Which Thing if they do, we truſting upon the Mercy of Almighty God, do promiſe that we will receive them being penitent for ſuch their Errors and Faults, with Thanks, Benignity, Mercy, and Favour, to the Comfort and Health of their own Souls, and in that Behalf ſave their Honeſties to the uttermoſt our Power; otherwiſe, if they will not provide thus to come of their own accord, but to abide the ordinary Proceſs of the Law, let thoſe Men know that we will puniſh more ſeverely this Offence, according to the uttermoſt of the Law, and as far as the Law will bear it; and what ye ſhall do in the Premiſſes, let him among you, which ſhall execute this our preſent Mandate, certify us, or our Vicar General in ſpiritual Matters, either by his own Perſon, or by his Letters Patents, together with theſe authentically ſealed.

The Biſhop layeth his Bait to catch whom he may trouble.

Dated at London under our Seal, the laſt Day of April, 1555. and of our Tranſlation the 11th.

Tooly ſuſpended and excommunicated.

When the Time of this Citation was expired, and this Tooly being cited did not appear: Next in Order of Law came the Suſpenſion, and after that cometh the Excommunication, that is, that no Man ſhould eat and drink with him; or if any met him by the Way, he ſhould not bid him good morrow, and beſides that, he ſhould be excluded from the Communion of the Church. Theſe Things being prepared in ſuch a Manner, as in ſuch Caſes full wiſely they uſe to do, at length one ſtood up that made Anſwer to certain Articles, rehearſed in Judgment openly, and that in the Behalf of the dead Man. But when the poor dead Man could neither ſpeak for himſelf, nor did (as they ſaid) ſufficiently anſwer them by the other, to avoid the Name of an Heretick; firſt Witneſſes were provided againſt him, whoſe Names were Henry Clark, Eſquire; Thomas Way, Keeper of the Marſhalſea; Philip Andrew, Under-marſhal; William Holingworth, Fiſhmonger; William Gellard, William Walter, Chandler; Richard Longman, Merchant-taylor; Philip Briten, John Burton, Brewer; Thomas Smith, Serjeant. Then he was condemned for an Heretick, and ſo committed to the ſecular Power, namely to the Sheriffs of London, who with the like Diligence went about to execute their Charge. Therefore receiving the Man, being ſuſpended, excommunicated, condemned as an Heretick, and beſides that, dead, they laid him on the Fire to be burned, namely, for a continual Remembrance thereof: This was done the fourth Day of June.

The Life and Martyrdom of Thomas Haukes, Gentleman.

IMmediately after the Story of Dr. Taylor, mention was made of ſix Men brought before Biſhop Bonner upon the eighth Day of February, whoſe Names were Stephen Knight, W. Pigot, Thomas Tomkins, J. Laurence, William Hunter. In which Number was alſo Thomas Haukes, and condemned likewiſe with them the 9th Day of February. But becauſe his Execution did not ſo ſhortly follow with theirs, but was prolonged to the 10th Day of June, it followeth therefore now conſequently to enter Diſcourſe thereof; Firſt, beginning briefly with his pious Converſation and Inſtitution of Life, then ſhewing of his Troubles, alſo of his Examinations and Conflicts with the Biſhop and other Adverſaries, according as the Order of the Story doth require.

The Life and Converſation of Thomas Haukes.

As touching therefore his Education and Order of Life, Firſt he was of the County of Eſſex, born of an honeſt Stock, in Calling and Profeſſion a Courtier, brought up like a Gentleman. Beſides that, he was of ſuch Comlineſs and Stature, ſo well endued with excellent Qualities, that he might ſeem on every Side a Man (as it were) made for the Purpoſe. But his gentle Behaviour towards others, and eſpecially his fervent Study and ſingular Love unto true Religion and Piety did ſurmount all the reſt. Wherein as God did ſingularly adorn him; even ſo he, being ſuch a valiant Martyr of God, may ſeem to make famous the whole Company of other Holy Martyrs, and as a bright Star to make the Church of God and his Truth, of themſelves bright and clear, more glorioufly to ſhine by his Example.

Mr. Haukes firſt in Service with the Earl of Oxford.

But to the Declaration of the Matter: Firſt Mr. Haukes following the Faſhion of the Court, as he grew in Years, entered Service with the Lord of Oxford, where he remained a good Space, being there right well eſteemed by all the Houſhold, ſo long as Edward the Sixth lived. But he dying all Things began to go backward, Religion to decay, true Piety not only to wax cold, but alſo to be in Danger every where, and chiefly in the Houſes of great Men. Haukes miſliking the State of Things, and eſpecially in ſuch Mens Houſes, rather than he would change the Profeſſion of true Godlineſs, which he had taſted, thought to change the Place; and ſo, forſaking the Nobleman's Houſe, departed thence to his own Home, where more freely he might give himself to God, and use his own Conscience.

But what Place in this World shall a Man find so secret for himself, whither the old wicked Serpent cannot creep, whereby he may have some Matter to overthrow the Quietness of the Godly? Now in the mean Season (as it happened) Haukes keeping his House at Home, had born unto him a young Son, whose Baptism was deferred to the third Week, for that he would not suffer him to be baptized after the papistical Manner, which Thing the Adversaries not able to suffer, laying Hands upon him, did bring him to the Earl of Oxford, there to be reasoned with, as not found in Religion, in that he seemed to contemn the Sacraments of the Church.

Mr. Haukes sent up by the Earl to Bishop Bonner.

The Earl either intending not to trouble himself in such Matters, or else seeing himself not able to weigh with him in such Cases of Religion, sent him up to London with a Messenger, and Letters, and so, willing to clear his own Hands, put him in the Hands of Bonner Bishop of London; the Contents of which his Letter sent to Bonner, be these.

A Letter of the Earl of Oxford to Bishop Bonner.

MOST Reverend Father in God, be it known unto you, that I have sent you one Thomas Haukes, dwelling in the County of Essex, who hath a Child that hath remained unchristned more than three Weeks; who, being upon the same examined, hath denied to have it baptized, as it is now used in the Church, whereupon I have sent him to your good Lordship, to use as ye think best, by your good Discretion.

When the Bishop had perused this Letter, and afterwards read it to Mr. Haukes, he hearing the same, thought with himself that he should not be very well used, seeing he was put to his Discretion. Then wrote the Bishop a Letter again to him that sent the Prisoner, with many great Thanks for his Diligence in setting forth the Queen's Proceedings. Then the Bishop began to enter Communication with Mr. Haukes, first asking, what should move him to leave his Child unchristned so long? To whom Mr. Haukes answered thus again as followeth.

Private Conference between Mr. Haukes and Bishop Bonner.

Haukes. Because we be bound to do nothing contrary to the Word of God.

Bonner. Why? Baptism is commanded by the Word of God.

Haukes. His Institution therein I do not deny.

Bonner. What deny ye then?

Haukes. I deny all Things invented and devised by Man.

Man's Invention added to Baptism.

Bonner. What Things be those that be devised by Man, that ye be so offended withal?

Haukes. Your Oil, Cream, Salt, Spittle, Candle and conjuring of Water, &c.

Bonner. Will ye deny that which all the whole World, and your Fathers hath been contented withal?

Haukes. What my Father and all the whole World hath done, I have nothing to do withal: But what God hath commanded me to do, to that stand I.

Bonner. The catholick Church hath taught it.

Haukes. What is the catholick Church?

Bonner. It is the faithful Congregation, wheresoever it be dispersed throughout the whole World.

Haukes. Who is the Head thereof?

Bonner. Christ is the Head thereof.

Haukes. Are we taught in Christ, or in the Church now?

Bonner. Have ye not read in the Eighth of St. John where he said, He would send his Comforter which should teach you all Things?

Haukes. I grant you it is so, that he would send his Comforter, but to what End? Forsooth to this End, that he should lead you into all Truth and Verity, and that is not to teach a new Doctrine.

Bonner. Ah Sir, ye are a right Scripture-Man, For ye will have nothing but the Scripture. There is a great Number of your Countrymen of your Opinion. Do you know one Knight and Pigot?

Haukes. Knight I know, but Pigot I do not know.

Bonner. I thought ye were acquainted with him: It seemeth so by your Judgment. What Preachers do ye know in Essex.

Haukes. I know none.

Bonner. Do ye not know one Baget there?

Haukes. Yes forsooth, I know him.

Bonner. What Manner of Man is he?

Haukes. An honest Man so far as I know.

Bonner. Do you know him if ye see him?

Haukes. Yea that I do. Then said he to one of his Servants, Go call me Baget hither. And then he said to me. Ye seem to be a very proud Man and a stubborn. He that brought me up stood all this while by.

Haukes. What should move your Lordship so to say?

Bonner. Because I see in a Man that came with you much Humility and Lowliness.

Haukes. It seemeth your Lordship speaketh that to me, because I make no Courtesy to you: And with that came Baget. Then the Bishop said to Baget, How say ye, Sir, know ye this Man?

Mr. Baget brought to the Sight of Mr Haukes.

Baget. Yea forsooth my Lord; with that Baget and I shook Hands. Then said the Bishop to Baget, Sir, this Man hath a Child which hath lain three Weeks unchristned, (as I have Letters to shew) who refuseth to have it baptized, as it is now used in the Church: How say you thereto?

Baget. Forsooth, my Lord, I say nothing thereto (with low Courtesy to the hard Ground.)

Bonner. Say you nothing thereto? I will make you tell me whether it be laudible, and to be frequented and used in the Church or not.

Baget. I beseech your Lordship to pardon me, he is old enough, let him answer for himself.

Bonner. Ah sir Knave, are ye at that Point with me? Go call me the Porter, said he, to one of his Men, Thou shalt sit in the Stocks, and have nothing but Bread and Water. I perceive I have kept you too well. Have I made thus much of you, and have I you at this Point? Then came the Bishop's Man, and said, The Porter is gone to London: Then said the Bishop to Baget, Come with me, and he went away with him, and commanded me away, and bade one of his Gentlemen to talk with me (who was one of his own Teaching) who desiring amongst other Things to know of me, with whom I was acquainted in Essex, and what Men they were that were my Teachers.

Haukes. When I see your Commission, I will make you Answer. And then immediately came the Bishop again: But before he came, his Man and I had much Talk. Then the Bishop sat down under a Vine in his Orchard, and called Baget to him, whom he carried away, and brought again, and called me alſo, and ſaid to Baget: How ſay ye now Sir unto Baptiſm? Say whether it be to be frequented and uſed in the Church, as it is now, or no?

Mr. Baget taught to ſay after Biſhop Bonner.

Baget. Forſooth, my Lord, I ſay it is good.

Bonner. I befool your Heart, could ye not have ſaid ſo before? Ye have wounded this Man's Conſcience. Then the Biſhop turned to me, and ſaid; how ſay ye now, Sir, this Man is turned and coverted.

Mr. Haukes built his Faith upon no Man.

Haukes. I build not my Faith upon this Man, neither upon you, but only upon Chriſt Jeſus, who (as St. Paul ſaith) is the Founder and Author of all Men's Faith.

Bonner. I perceive ye are a ſtubborn Fellow. I muſt be glad to work another Way with you, to win you.

Haukes. Whatſoever ye do, I am ready to ſuffer it; for I am in your Hands to abide it.

Bonner. Well ye are ſo, come on your Ways, ye ſhall go in, and I will uſe you chriſtian-like: You ſhall have Meat and Drink, ſuch as I have in my Houſe: But in any wiſe talk not.

Haukes. I purpoſe to talk nothing but the Word of God and Truth.

Bonner. I will have no Hereſy talked on in my Houſe.

Haukes. Why, is the Truth become Hereſy? God hath commanded that we ſhould have none other Talk in our Houſes, in our Beds, at our Meat, and by the Way, but all Truth.

Bonner. If ye will have my Favour, be ruled by my Counſel.

Haukes. Then I truſt ye will grant me my Requeſt.

Bonner. What is that?

Haukes, That your Doctors and Servants give me no Occaſion: For if they do, I will ſurely utter my Conſcience. Then he commanded his Men to take in Baget, that Haukes and he might not have an Opportunity to talk together. And ſo thus we departed, and went to Dinner, and I dined at the Steward's Table.

After Dinner, his Chaplains and his Men began to talk with me. But amongſt others, there was one named Darbiſhire, Principal of Broadgates in Oxford, and the Biſhop's Kinſman, who ſaid to me, that I was too curious: For ye will have, ſaid he, nothing but your little pretty God's Book.

Talk between Darbiſhire and Mr. Haukes.

Haukes. And is it not ſufficient for my Salvation? Yea, ſaid he, it is ſufficient for our Salvation, but not for our Inſtruction.

Haukes. God ſend me the Salvation, and you the Inſtruction. And as we thus reaſoned came the Biſhop, who ſaid unto me; I gave you a Commandment that you ſhould not talk.

Haukes. And I deſired of you that your Doctors and Servants ſhould give me no Occaſion. Then we went into his Orchard again, he and I and his Doctors.

Talk between Mr. Haukes and Bonner.

Bonner. Would not ye be contented to have, that your Child ſhould be chriſtned after the Book that was ſet out by King Edward?

Haukes. Yes, with a good Will; it is the Thing that I deſire.

Bonner. I thought ſo: Ye would have the ſame Thing. The Principal is in the Name of the Father, the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, and in Neceſſity it may ſerve.

Haukes. Chriſt did uſe it without any ſuch Neceſſity: And yet we lack the chiefeſt Point.

Bonner. What is that?

Haukes. Go teach all Nations, baptizing them, &c. Anno 1555.

Bonner. Thou ſpeakeſt that becauſe I am no Preacher.

Haukes. I ſpeak the Text: I do not mean you. Then ſpake all the Doctors, and his Men that were with him; He ſpake it of you my Lord (with a great Noiſe that they made.)

Bonner. Will ye be content to tarry here, and your Child ſhall be baptized, and you ſhall not know of it, ſo that you will agree to it?

Haukes. If I would ſo have done, I needed not to have come to you; for I had the ſame Counſel given before.

Bonner. You ſeem to be a luſty young Man; you will not give your Head for the waſhing; you will ſtand in the Defence of it for the Honour of your Country. Do ye think that the Queen and I cannot command it to be done in Spite of your Teeth.

Haukes. What the Queen and you can do, I will not ſtand in it: But ye get my Conſent never the ſooner.

Bonner. Well, you are a ſtubborn young Man: I perceive I muſt work another Way with you.

Haukes. Ye are in the Hands of God, and ſo am I.

Bonner. Whatſoever you think, I will not not have you ſpeak ſuch Words unto me. And ſo we departed until Evenſong Time: And before Evenſong was begun, my Lord called for me to come to him in the Chappel, and ſaid, Haukes, thou art a proper young Man, and God hath done his Part unto thee; I would be glad to do thee Good. Thou knoweſt that I am thy Paſtor, and one that ſhould anſwer for thee. If I would not teach thee well, I ſhould anſwer for thy Soul.

Haukes. That I have ſaid, I will ſtand to it, God willing: There is no Way to remove it.

Bonner. Nay, nay, Haukes, thou ſhalt not be ſo wilful. Remember Chriſt bade two go into the Vineyard, the one ſaid he would, and went not; the other ſaid he would not, and went.

Haukes. The laſt went.

Bonner. Do thou likewiſe, and I will talk friendly with thee; how ſayeſt thou? It is in the Sixth of St. John; I am the Bread of Life, and the Bread that I will give is my Fleſh, which I will give for the Life of the World. And whoſoever eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath everlaſting Life. My Fleſh is very Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed. And he that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. Do ye believe this?

Biſhop Bonner talketh of the Sacrament.

Haukes. Yea, I muſt needs believe the Scriptures.

Bonner. Why then I truſt that you be ſound in the bleſſed Sacrament.

Haukes. I beſeech your Lordſhip to feel my Conſcience no farther than in that, that I was accuſed in unto you.

Bonner. Well, well, let us go unto Evenſong.

Haukes. With that I turned my back to go out of the Chappel.

Bonner. Why, will you not tarry Evenſong?

Haukes. No forſooth.

Bonner. And why?

Haukes. For I will not.

Bonner. And why will ye not?

Haukes. Becauſe I have no edifying thereby, for I underſtand no Latin.

Thomas Haukes refuſeth to hear Biſhop Bonner's Evenſong.

Bonner.

Anno 1555.

Bonner. Why, you may pray by yourſelf. What Books have ye?

Haukes. I have the New Teſtament, the Books of Solomon, and the Pſalter.

Bonner. Why I pray you tarry here, and pray you on the Pſalter.

Haukes. I will not pray in this Place, nor in any ſuch. Then ſaid one of his Chaplains; let him go my Lord, and he ſhall be no Partaker with us in our Prayers.

Haukes. I think myſelf beſt at Eaſe when I am fartheſt from you. And ſo the Biſhop went to Even-ſong, and I came down and walked between the Hall and the Chappel in the Court, and tarried there till Even-ſong was done; and within an Hour after that Even-ſong was done, the Biſhop ſent for me into his Chamber where he lay himſelf, and when I came, there was he and three of his Chaplains.

Thomas Haukes called for again by Biſhop Bonner.

Bonner. Ye know of the Talk that was between you and me, as concerning the Sacrament. You would not have your Conſcience ſought any farther, than in that ye were accuſed of.

Haukes. I thought you would not be both mine Accuſer and Judge.

Bonner. Well, ye ſhall anſwer me to the Sacrament of the Altar, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, the Sacrament of Penance, and the Sacrament of Matrimony.

Haukes. There is none of theſe, but I dare ſpeak my Conſcience in them.

Bonner. The Sacrament of the Altar ye ſeem to be found in.

Thomas Haukes knoweth no Sacrament of the Altar.

Haukes. In the Sacrament of the Altar? why Sir, I do not know it.

Bonner. Well, we will make you to know it, and believe in it too, before we have done with you.

Haukes. No, that ſhall ye never do.

Bonner. Yes, a Faggot will make you do it.

Haukes. No, no, a Fig for your Faggot. What God thinketh meet to be done, that ſhall ye do, and more ye ſhall not do.

Bonner. Do ye not believe that there remaineth in the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, after the Words of Conſecration be ſpoken, no more Bread, but the very Body and Blood of Chriſt? and at that Word he put off his Cap.

Haukes. I do believe as Chriſt hath taught me.

Bonner. Why? did not Chriſt ſay, "Take, "eat, this is my Body?"

Haukes. Chriſt ſaid ſo: But therefore it followeth not, that the Sacrament of the Altar is ſo as you teach, neither did Chriſt ever teach it ſo to be.

Bonner. Why? the catholick Church taught it ſo, and they were of Chriſt's Church.

Haukes. How prove you it? The Apoſtles never taught it ſo. Read the Acts, the Second and the Twentieth. Neither St. Peter nor St. Paul ever taught it, neither inſtituted it ſo.

Bonner. Ah Sir, ye will have no more than the Scripture teacheth, but even as Chriſt hath left it bare.

Haukes. He that teaches me any otherwiſe, I will not believe him.

Bonner. Why? then ye muſt eat a Lamb, if ye will have but Chriſt's Inſtitution only.

Haukes. Nay, that is not ſo, before that Chriſt did inſtitute the Sacrament, that Ceremony ceaſed, and then began the Sacrament.

Bonner. Alas, you know not how it began, neither of the Inſtitution thereof.

Haukes. Then I would be glad to learn.

Bonner. Marry, we will teach you: But you are ſo ſtubborn that ye will not learn.

Haukes. Except ye learn me by the Word of God, I will never credit you, nor believe you: And thus we concluded. Then the Biſhop and his Chaplains laughed and ſaid: Jeſu, Jeſu, what a Stubbornneſs and Arrogantneſs is this? and this was in his Chamber where he lay. Then ſaid the Biſhop to me, go ye down and drink, for it is faſting Day: It is Midſummer Eve, but I think ye love neither faſting nor praying.

A falſe conceived Opinion of Biſhop Bonner againſt the Proteſtants.

Haukes. I will never deny faſting neither praying, ſo that it be done as it ought to be done, and without Hypocriſy or vain Glory.

Bonner. I like you the better for that: And ſo we left for that Night.

Faſting and praying no Man denieth.

The next Day the Biſhop went to London: For Mr. Fecknam was made Dean that Day, and I tarried ſtill at Fulham.

Then did the Biſhop's Men deſire me to come to Maſs, but I did utterly refuſe it, anſwering them as I did their Maſter.

That Night the Biſhop came Home to Fulham again.

Talk between Mr. Harpsfield and Thomas Haukes.

Talk between Tho. Haukes and Mr. Harpſfield.

UPON Monday Morning very early, the Biſhop called for me. There was with him Mr. Harpſfield Archdeacon of London, to whom the Biſhop ſaid; This is the Man which I told you of, who would not have his Child chriſtned, nor will have any Ceremonies.

Harpsfield. Chriſt uſed Ceremonies. Did he not take Clay from the Ground, and took Spittle, and made the blind Man ſee?

Haukes. That I well know, but Chriſt did never uſe it in Baptiſm. If ye will needs have it, put it to the Uſe that Chriſt put it unto.

Harpsfield. Admit your Child die unchriſtned: What a heavy Caſe ſtand you in?

Haukes. I admit if it do, what then?

Harpſ. Marry then ye are damned, and your Child both.

Haukes. Judge you no farther than ye may by the Scriptures.

Harpſ. Do ye not know that your Child is born in original Sin?

Haukes. Yes that I do.

Harpſ. How is original Sin waſhed away?

Haukes. By true Faith and Belief in Chriſt Jeſus.

Harpſ. How can your Child being an Infant believe?

Haukes. The Deliverance of it from Sin ſtandeth in the Faith of his Parents.

Harpſ. How prove you that?

Haukes. By St. Paul, in the Seventh and the Firſt to the Corinthians, ſaying, "The unbe- "lieving Man is ſanctified by the believing Wo- "man, and the unbelieving Woman is ſanctified "by the believing Man, or elſe were your Chil- "dren unclean."

Harpſ. I will prove that they whom thou putteſt thy Truſt in, will be againſt thee in this Opinion.

Haukes. Who be thoſe?

Harpſ. Your great learned Men in Oxford.

Haukes. If they do it by the Scriptures, I will believe them.

Bonner. Recant, recant: Do ye not know that Chriſt ſaid, Except ye be baptized ye cannot be ſaved?

Chriſtianity ſtandeth not in outward Ceremonies.

Haukes. Doth Chriſtianity ſtand in outward Ceremonies, or no?

Bonner. Partly it doth: What ſay you to that?

Haukes. I ſay as St. Peter ſaith, "Not the "Waſhing of Water purgeth the Filthineſs of "the Fleſh, but a good Conſcience conſenting "unto God."

Harpſ. Beware of Pride, Brother beware of Pride.

Haukes. It is written, "Pride ſerveth not for "Men, nor yet for the Sons of Men."

Bonner. Let us make an End here. How ſay you to the Maſs, Sirrah?

Bp. Bonner cometh in with his Maſs.

Haukes. I ſay it is deteſtable, abominable, and profitable for nothing.

Bonner. What nothing profitable in it? what ſay you to the Epiſtle and Goſpel?

Haukes. It is good, if it be uſed as Chriſt left it to be uſed.

Bonner. Well, I am glad that ye ſomewhat recant: Recant all, recant all.

Haukes. I have recanted nothing, nor will do.

Bonner. How ſay you to Confiteor.

Haukes. I ſay it is abominable and deteſtable, yea, and a Blaſphemy againſt God and his Son Jeſus Chriſt, to call upon any, to truſt to any, or to pray to any, ſave only to Chriſt Jeſus.

Biſhop Bonner's Similitude to prove praying to Saints.

Bonner. To truſt to any, we bid you not: But to call upon them, and to pray to them, we bid you. Do ye not know when ye come into the Court ye cannot ſpeak with the King and Queen, unleſs ye call to ſome of the Privy Chamber that are next to the King and Queen?

Haukes. They that liſt receive your Doctrine. You teach me that I ſhould not believe nor truſt in any, but to call on them: And St. Paul ſaith, "How ſhould I call upon him on whom I be-"lieve not?

Bonner. Will you have no Body to pray for you when you be dead?

Haukes. No ſurely, except you can prove it by the Scriptures. Then the Biſhop pointed unto Harpsfield, and ſaid unto me; Is it not well done to deſire this Man to pray for me?

Haukes. Yes ſurely, ſo long as we live, Prayer of the righteous Man is available: But this Man's Prayers, you being dead, profiteth nothing at all.

Bonner. Will ye grant the Prayer of the righteous Man to prevail.

Haukes. I grant it doth for the Living, but not for the Dead.

Bonner. Not for the Dead?

Pſal. 49. 7, 8.

Haukes. No forſooth, for David ſaith, "No "Man can deliver his Brother from Death, nor "make Agreement unto God for him: For it "coſt more to redeem their Souls, ſo that ye "muſt let that alone for ever."

Ezekiel 14. 14, &c.

Alſo Ezekiel ſaith, "Tho' Noah, Daniel, or "Job dwelt among them, yet can they in their "Righteouſneſs exceed no farther than them-"ſelves." Then the Biſhop ſaid to Harpsfield, Sir, ye ſee this Man hath no need of our Lady, neither of any of the Bleſſed Saints. Well, I will trouble you no longer; I did call you hoping that you ſhould do ſome good on him, but it will not be. And he ſaid to me, Sir, it is time to begin with you; we will rid you away, and then we ſhall have one Heretick leſs.

Bp. Bonner when he cannot overcome by Doctrine, goeth about to oppreſs by Authority.

Harpſ. What Books have you.

Haukes. The New Teſtament, Solomon's Books, and the Pſalter.

Harpſ. Will you read any other Books?

Haukes. Latimer's Books, my Lord of Canterbury's Book, Bradford's Sermons, Ridley's Books.

Anno 1555.

Bonner. Away, away, he will have no Books but ſuch as maintain his Hereſies: And ſo they departed, for Harpsfield was booted to ride unto Oxford, and I went to the Porter's Lodge again.

The next Day came thither an old Biſhop, who had a Pearl in his Eye, and he brought with him to my Lord a Diſh of Apples, and a Bottle of Wine. For he had loſt his Living, becauſe he had a Wife. Then the Biſhop called me again into the Orchard, and ſaid to the old Biſhop: This young Man hath a Child, and will not have it chriſtned.

The Biſhop's Name was Bird, ſometime Biſhop of Cheſter, and Suffragan before of Coventry.

Haukes. I deny not Baptiſm.

Bonner. Thou art a Fool thou can'ſt not tell what thou wouldſt have, and that he ſpake with much Anger.

Haukes. A Biſhop muſt be blameleſs or faultleſs, ſober, diſcreet, no Chider, nor given to Anger.

Bp. Bonner reproved for his Anger.

Bonner. Thou judgeſt me to be angry: No by my Faith am I not, and ſtroke himſelf upon the Breaſt.

Then ſaid the old Biſhop, Alas good young Man, you muſt be taught by the Church, and by your Ancients, and do as your Forefathers have done before you.

Bonner. No, no, he will have nothing but the Scriptures, and God knows he doth not underſtand them. He will have no Ceremonies in the Church, no not one, what ſay you to holy Water?

Haukes. I ſay to it, as to the reſt, and to all that be of his making that made them.

Bonner. Why, the Scriptures do allow it?

Haukes. Where prove you that?

See how Bonner proveth holy Water by the Scripture.

Bonner. In the Book of the Kings, where Eliſha threw Salt into the Water.

Haukes. Ye ſay Truth; that it is written in the ſecond Book of Kings, the ſecond Chapter; the Children of the Prophets came to Eliſha, ſaying, "The dwelling of the City is pleaſant, but "the Waters be corrupted." This was the Cauſe that Eliſha threw Salt into the Water, and it became ſweet and good: And ſo when our Waters be corrupted, if ye can by putting in of Salt make them ſweet, clear, and wholeſome, we will the better believe your Ceremonies.

Eliſha put Salt in the Water, not to waſh away Sin, but only to make the Water ſweet.

Bonner. How ſay you to holy Bread?

Haukes. Even as I ſaid to the other. What Scripture have you to defend it?

Bonner. Have ye not read where Chriſt fed five thouſand Men, with five Loaves and three Fiſhes.

Haukes. Will ye make that holy Bread? There Chriſt dealt Fiſh with his holy Bread.

Bonner. Look I pray you how captious this Man is.

Haukes. Chriſt did not this Miracle, or other, becauſe we ſhould do the like Miracle, but becauſe we ſhould believe and credit his Doctrine thereby.

Bonner. We believe no Doctrine, but that which is wrought by Miracles.

Haukes. No forſooth, for Chriſt ſaith, "Theſe "Tokens ſhall follow them that believe in me: "They ſhall ſpeak with new Tongues, they ſhall "caſt out Devils, and if they drink any deadly "Poiſon, it ſhall not hurt them."

Bonner. With what new Tongues do ye ſpeak?

Haukes. Forſooth, where before that I came to the Knowledge of God's Word, I was a foul Blaſphemer Anno 1555. Blaſphemer and filthy Talker, ſince I came to the Knowledge thereof, I have lauded God, praiſed God, and given Thanks to God, even with the ſame Tongue, and is not this a new Tongue?

Bonner. How do you caſt out Devils?

Haukes. Chriſt did caſt them out by his Word, and he hath left the ſame Word, that whoſoever doth credit and believe it, ſhall caſt out Devils.

Bonner. Did you ever drink any deadly Poiſon?

Haukes. Yea, Forſooth, that I have; for I have drank of the peſtilent Traditions and Ceremonies of the Biſhop of Rome.

Bonner. Now you ſhew yourſelf to be a right Heretick?

Haukes. I pray you, what is Hereſy?

B. Bonner an Heretick by his own Definition.

Bonner. All Things that are contrary to God's Word.

Haukes. If I ſtand in any Thing contrary hereto, then am I worthy to be ſo called.

Bonner. Thou art one, and thou ſhalt be burned, if thou ſtand and continue in this Opinion. Ye think we are afraid to put one of you to Death: Yes, yes, there is a Brotherhood of you, but I will break it, I warrant you.

Haukes. Where prove you that Chriſt or his Apoſtles did kill any Man for his Faith?

Bonner. Did not Paul excommunicate?

Haukes. Yes my Lord, but there is a great Difference between excommunicating and burning.

Bonner. Have ye not read of the Man and the Woman in the Acts of the Apoſtles, whom Peter deſtroyed.

Haukes. Yes forſooth, I have read of one Ananias, and Sapphira his Wife, who were deſtroyed for lying againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which ſerveth nothing to your Purpoſe.

Bonner. Well you will grant one yet.

Haukes. Well, if you will have us to grant you to be of God, then ſhew Mercy, for that God requireth.

Bonner. We will ſhew ſuch Mercy unto you, as ye ſhewed unto us: For my Benefice or Biſhoprick was taken away from me, ſo that I had not one Penny to live upon.

Haukes. I pray ye my Lord, what do you give him now that was in the Biſhoprick or Benefice before that ye came again to it? Whereunto he anſwered me never a Word: For he turned his Back upon me, and talked with other Men, ſaying that he was very ſorry for me, but he truſted that I would turn with St. Paul, becauſe I was ſo earneſt; and ſo he departed and went to Dinner, and I to the Porter's Lodge again.

Mr. Haukes called for again to talk with the old Biſhop.

After Dinner I was called into the Hall again, and the Biſhop deſired the old Biſhop to take me into his Chamber; for I would be glad (ſaid he) if ye could convert him. So he took me into his Chamber, and ſate him down in a Chair, and ſaid to me; I would to God I could do you ſome good: Ye are a young Man, and I would not wiſh you to go too far, but learn of your Elders to bear ſomewhat.

Haukes. I will bear with nothing that is contrary to the Word of God. And I looked that the old Biſhop ſhould have made me an Anſwer, but he was faſt aſleep.

Then I departed out of the Chamber alone, and went to the Porter's Lodge again, and there ſaw I the old Biſhop laſt: I ſuppoſe he is not yet awake.

The next Day's Talk with Dr. Fecknam.

The next Day Dr. Fecknam came to me and ſaid, Are ye he that will have no Ceremonies?

Haukes. What mean you by that?

Fecknam. Ye will not have your Child chriſtned, but in Engliſh, and you will have no Ceremonies.

Haukes. Whatſoever the Scriptures commandeth to be done I refuſe not.

Fecknam. Ceremonies are to be uſed by the Scriptures.

Haukes. Which be thoſe?

Dr. Fecknam's Reaſon lieth in Paul's Breeches.

Fecknam. How ſay you by Paul's Breeches?

Haukes. I have read no ſuch Thing.

Fecknam. Have ye not read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, how Things went from Paul's Body, and they received Health thereby.

Haukes. I have read in the 19th of the Acts, how there went Handkerchiefs and Napkins from Paul's Body, is it that you mean?

Fecknam. Yea, the ſame 's it: What ſay you to thoſe Ceremonies?

Haukes. I ſay nothing to the Ceremonies: For the Text ſaith, that God did ſo work by the Hands of Paul, that there went Handkerchiefs and Napkins from him, &c. So that it ſeemed by the Text, that it was God that wrought, and not the Ceremonies.

Fecknam. How ſay ye to the Woman that came behind Chriſt, and touched the Hem of his Veſture? Did not her Diſeaſe depart from her by that Ceremony?

Dr. Fecknam taken ſhort in his own Tale.

Haukes. No forſooth; for Chriſt turned back and ſaid to Peter, Who is it that toucheth me? And Peter ſaith, Thou ſeeſt the People thruſt thee; and aſketh thou, Who touched me? Some body hath touched me, ſaith Chriſt; for Vertue hath gone out of me. I pray you, whether was it the Vertue that healed this Woman, or his Veſture?

Fecknam. Both.

Haukes. Then is not Chriſt true: For he ſaid, Go thy way, thy Faith hath made thee whole.

Bonner. Away, away, to the Sacrament, for theſe are but meer Trifles to that.

Fecknam. How ſay ye Sirrah? Chriſt took Bread, and brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body.

Haukes. I grant Chriſt ſaid ſo.

Fecknam. And is it not ſo?

Haukes. No Forſooth, I do not underſtand it ſo.

Fecknam. Why, then is Chriſt a Liar.

Haukes. I think ye will ſo prove him.

Fecknam. Will I? Why I have ſpoken the Words that Chriſt ſpake.

The Words of Chriſt are to be underſtood, not as he ſpake, but as he meant.

Haukes. Is every Word to be underſtood as Chriſt ſpake it? Chriſt ſaid, I am a Door, a Vine, I am a King, a Way, &c.

Fecknam. Chriſt ſpake theſe Words in Parables.

Haukes. And why ſpeaketh he this in Parables when he ſaid, I am a Door, a Vine, a King, a Way, &c. more than this when he ſaid, This is my Body? For after the ſame Phraſe of Speech, as he ſaith, This is my Body; ſo ſaith he, I am a Door, a Vine, a King, a Way; he ſaith not, I am like a Door, like a Vine, &c.

Then Fecknam ſtood up, and ſaid, I had ſuch a one before me this other Day. Alas, thoſe Places ſerve nothing for your Purpoſes. But I perceive ye hang and build on them that be at Oxford.

Haukes. What mean you by that?

Fecknam. I mean Latimer, Cranmer, and Ridley.

Haukes. I know nothing elſe by them, but that they be both godly and learned.

Dr: Feckenam falleth out of his Matter to railing.

Fecknam. Wilt thou truſt to ſuch Dolts? One of them hath written a Book, wherein he affirmeth a real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Haukes. What he hath done, I know not, but what he doth I know.

Fecknam. Ridley hath preached at Paul's-Croſs openly, that the Devil believeth better than you: For he believeth that Chriſt is able of Stones to make Bread, and ye will not believe Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament, and yet thou buildeſt thy Faith upon them.

M. Haukes buildeth his Faith upon no Man.

Haukes. I build my Faith upon no Man, and that ye well know: For if thoſe Men, and as many more as they be, ſhould recant, and deny that they have ſaid or done, yet will I ſtand to it, and by this ſhall ye know that I build my Faith upon no Man.

Bonnner. If any of thoſe recant, what will ye ſay to it?

Haukes. When they recant, I will make you an Anſwer.

Bonner. Then thou wilt ſay as thou doſt now for all that.

Haukes. Yea indeed will I, and that truſt to it, by God's Grace.

Bonner. I dare ſay, Cranmer would recant, ſo that he might have his Living. And ſo the Biſhop and Fecknam departed from me with great Laughing, and I went again to the Porter's Lodge.

Another Day's Talk with Dr. Chadſey.

The next Day Dr. Chadſey came to the Biſhop and him. They declared unto him that I had ſtood ſtubbornly in the Defence againſt the chriſtning of my Child, and againſt the Ceremonies of the Church, and that I would not have it chriſtned but in Engliſh.

Then ſaid Dr. Chadſey, Then he denieth the Order of the catholick Church.

Bonner. Yea, he thinketh that there is no Church but in England and in Germany.

Haukes. And ye think that there is no Church but the Church of Rome.

Chad. What ſay ye to the Church of Rome?

Haukes. I ſay it is a Church of a Sort of vicious Cardinals, Prieſts, Monks, and Friers, which I will never credit nor believe.

Chad. What ſay ye to the Biſhop of Rome?

Haukes. From him and all his deteſtable Enormities, good Lord deliver us.

Chad. Marry ſo may we ſay, From King Henry the Eighth, and all his deteſtable Enormities, good Lord deliver us.

Haukes. Where were ye whiles that he lived, that ye would not ſay ſo?

Chad. I was not far.

Haukes. Where were ye in his Son's Days?

Chad. In Priſon.

Haukes. It was not for your well doing.

Chadſey's Argument Chriſt never ſpake Engliſh: Ergo, we muſt not pray in Engliſh.

Bonner. He will by no Means come within my Chappel, nor hear Maſs: For neither the Maſs, nor the Sacrament of the Altar can he abide, neither will he have any Service but in Engliſh.

Chad. Chriſt never ſpake in Engliſh.

An Inſtance given againſt Chadſey.

Haukes. Neither ſpake he ever any Latin, but always in ſuch a Tongue as the People might be edified thereby. And St. Paul ſaith, That Tongues profit us nothing. He maketh a Similitude, between the Pipe and the Harp, and except it be underſtood what the Trumpet meaneth, who can prepare himſelf to the Battle: So if I hear the Tongue which I do not underſtand, what Profit have I thereby? no more than he hath by the Trumpet, that knoweth not what it meaneth. Anno 1555.

Chad. If he underſtand St. Paul's Saying, he ſpeaketh it under a Prophecy, If one prophecy to you in Tongues, &c.

Haukes. Forſooth St. Paul ſpeaketh plainly of Tongues: For Tongues ſerve not for them that believe.

Chad. I tell you St. Paul ſpeaketh altogether upon Prophecy.

Haukes. St. Paul maketh a Diſtinction between Prophecying and Tongues, ſaying, That if any Man ſpeak with Tongues, let it be by two or three at the moſt, and let another interpret it. But if there be no Interpreter, let them keep Silence in the Congregation, and let himſelf pray unto God: And then let the Prophets ſpeak two or three, and that by Courſe, and let the other judge: And if any Revelation be made to him that ſitteth by, let the firſt hold his Peace: So that it ſeemeth that St. Paul maketh a Diſtinction between Tongues and Prophecying.

Bonner. The Order was taken in the catholick Church that the Latin Tongue ſhould ſerve thro' the whole World, becauſe that they ſhould pray all generally together in one Tongue, and that to avoid all Contention and Strife, and to have one univerſal Order through the whole World.

Haukes. This did your Councils of Rome conclude.

Bonner. Underſtand ye what the general Councils of Rome mean?

Haukes. Indeed all your general Councils of Rome be in Latin, and I am an Engliſhman; therefore I have nothing to do with them.

Chad. Ye are to blame, being an unlearned Man, to reprove all the Councils throughout all the World.

Haukes. I reprove them not, but St. Paul rebuketh them, ſaying, If any Man preach any other Doctrine than that which I have taught, do you hold him accurſed.

Chad. Hath any Man preached any other Doctrine unto you?

Haukes. Yea, I have been taught another Goſpel ſince I came into this Houſe.

Chad. What Goſpel have ye been taught?

Other Doctrine taught in the Church of Rome than ever St. Paul taught.

Haukes. Praying to Saints, and to our Lady, and truſt in the Maſs, Holy Bread, Holy Water, and in Idols.

Chad. He that teaches you ſo, teaches you not amiſs.

Haukes. Curſed be he that teacheth me ſo; for I will not truſt him nor believe him.

Bonner. You ſpeak of Idols, and you know not what they mean.

Haukes. God hath taught us what they be: For whatſoever is made, graven, or deviſed by Man's Hand, contrary to God's Word, the ſame is an Idol. What ſay you to that?

Chad. What be thoſe that ye are ſo offended withal?

Haukes. The Croſs of Wood, Silver, Copper, or Gold, &c.

Bonner. What ſay ye to that?

Haukes. I ſay it is an Idol. What ſay you to it?

Bonner. I ſay every Idol is an Image, but every Image is not an Idol.

Haukes. I ſay, what Difference is there between an Idol and an Image?

Note here Bp. Bonner's Definition of an Idol.

Bonner. If it be a falſe God, and an Image made of him, that is an Idol: But if an Image be made of God himſelf, it is no Idol, but an Image, becauſe he is a true God.

Haukes. Lay your Image of your true God and Anno 1555. and of your falſe God together, and ye ſhall ſee the Difference. Have not your Images Feet and go not, Eyes and ſee not, Ears and hear not, Hands and feel not, Mouths and ſpeak not? And even ſo have your Idols.

Chad. God forbid, ſaith St. Paul, that I ſhould rejoice in any Thing elſe, but in the Croſs of Chriſt Jeſus.

Haukes. Do ye underſtand St. Paul ſo? Do ye underſtand St. Paul? Unto which he anſwered never a Word.

Bonner. Where can we have a godlier Remembrance when we ride by the Way, than to ſee the Croſs?

Haukes. If the Croſs were ſuch a Profit unto us, why did not Chriſt's Diſciples take it up and ſet it on a Pole, and carry it in Proceſſion, with Salve, feſta dies?

Chad. It was taken up.

Haukes. Who took it up? Helene, as ye ſay; for ſhe ſent a Piece of it to a Place of Religion, where I was with the Viſitors when that Houſe was ſuppreſſed, and the Piece of the holy Croſs (which the Religious had in ſuch Eſtimation, and had robbed many a Soul, committing Idolatry to it) was called for, and when it was proved, and all came to all, it was but a Piece of a Lath covered over with Copper, double gilded as it had been clean Gold.

The People ſeduced by falſe Pieces of the holy Croſs.

Bonner. Fie, fie, I dare ſay thou ſlandereth it.

Haukes. I know it to be true, and do not believe the contrary. And thus did the Biſhop and the Doctor depart in a great Fume: And Chadſey ſaid unto me, as he was about to depart, It is Pity that thou ſhouldeſt live, or any ſuch as thou art. I anſwered, In this Caſe I deſire not to live, but rather to die.

Chad. Ye die boldly, becauſe ye would glory in your Death, as Joan Butcher did.

Haukes. What Joan Butcher did, I have nothing to do withal: But I would my Part might be To-morrow. God make you in a better Mind, ſaid they both, and ſo they departed, and I went to the Porter's Lodge with my Keeper.

The next Day Dr. Chadſey preached in the Biſhop's Chappel, and did not begin his Sermon until all the Service was done: And then came the Porter for me, and ſaid, My Lord would have you come to the Sermon, and ſo I went to the Chappel Door, and ſtood without the Door.

Bonner. Is not this Fellow come?

Haukes. Yes I am here.

Bonner. Come in Man.

Haukes. No, that I will not. He called again, and I anſwered, I will come no nearer, and ſo I ſtood at the Door. Then ſaid the Biſhop, go to your Sermon.

Then Dr. Chadſey put the Stole about his Neck, and carried the holy Water-ſprinkle unto the Biſhop, who bleſſed him and gave him holy Water, and ſo he went to his Sermon.

Dr. Chadſey's Sermon.

The Text that he treated on was on the 16th of St. Matthew, Whom do Men ſay that I the Son of Man am? Peter ſaid, Some ſay that thou art Elias, ſome ſay that thou art John Baptiſt, ſome ſay that thou art one of the Prophets. But whom ſay ye that I am? Then ſaid Peter, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the living God. Then left he the Text there, and ſaid, Whoſe Sins ſoever ye bind, are bound: Which Authority, ſaid he, is left to the Heads of the Church, as my Lord here is one, and ſo unto all the reſt that be underneath him. But the Church hath been much kicked at ſince the Beginning: Yet kick the Hereticks, ſpurn the Hereticks never ſo much, the Church doth ſtand and flouriſh. And then he went ſtraitway to the Sacrament, and ſaid his Mind on it, exalting it above Heaven (as moſt of them do) and ſo returned to his Place again, ſaying, Whoſe Sins ye do remit, are remitted and forgiven: And ſo he applied to the Biſhops and Prieſts to forgive Sins, and ſaid, All that be of the Church will come and receive the ſame. And this he proved by St. John, Chap. 11. ſaying, that Chriſt came to raiſe Lazarus, who when he was riſen was bound in Bands: Then ſaid Chriſt to them that were in Authority (who were his Diſciples) go ye and looſe him, looſe him you. And this was the Effect of his Sermon, applying all to them, that they have the ſame Authority that Chriſt ſpake of to his Apoſtles; and ſo ended his Sermon, and they went to Dinner.

Another Communication between Thomas Haukes and the Biſhop.

AFTER Dinner I was called into the Chappel, where were ſeveral of the Queen's Servants, and other Strangers whom I did not know.

Bonner. Haukes, how like you the Sermon?

Haukes. As I like all the reſt of his Doctrine.

Bonner. What, are ye not edified thereby?

Haukes. No ſurely.

Bonner. It was made only becauſe of you.

Haukes. Why? then am I ſorry that ye had no more Hereticks here, as ye call them: I am ſorry that ye have beſtowed ſo much Labour on one, and ſo little regarded.

Bonner. Well, I will leave you here, for I have Buſineſs, I pray you talk with him: For if ye could do him good, (ſaid he) I would be glad.

This the Biſhop ſpake to the Queen's Men, who ſaid unto me, Alas, what mean you to trouble yourſelf about ſuch Matters againſt the Queen's Proceedings?

Haukes. Thoſe Matters have I anſwered before them that be in Authority: And unleſs I ſee you have a further Commiſſion, I will anſwer you nothing at all. Then ſaid the Biſhop's Men, (which were many) my Lord hath commanded you to talk with us.

Haukes. If my Lord will talk with me himſelf, I will anſwer him. They cried, Faggots, burn him, hang him, to Priſon with him, it is Pity that he liveth, lay Irons upon him; and with a great Noiſe they ſpake theſe Words. Then in the Midſt of all their Rage I departed from them, and went to the Porter's Lodge again.

Another Day's Talk between Haukes and Bonner.

The next Day the Biſhop called me into his Chamber, and ſaid, Ye have been with me a great while, and ye are never the better, but worſe and worſe: And therefore I will delay the Time no longer, but ſend you to Newgate.

Haukes. My Lord, you can do me no better Pleaſure.

Bonner. Why would you ſo fain go to Priſon?

Haukes. Truly I did look for none other when I came to your Hands.

Bonner. Come on your Ways, ye ſhall ſee what I have written. Then did he ſhew me certain Articles, and theſe are the Contents of them:

Whether the catholick Church do teach and believe, that Chriſt's real Preſence doth remain in the Sacrament or no, after the Words of Conſecration.

ſecration, according to the Words of St. Paul, which are theſe; Is not the Bread which we break the Partaking of the Body of Chriſt, and the Cup which we bleſs, the Partaking of the Blood of Chriſt? which if it were not ſo, St. Paul would never have ſaid it.

Haukes. What your Church doth I cannot tell: But I am ſure that the holy Catholick Church doth never ſo take it, nor believe it.

Bonner. Whether doth the catholick Church teach and believe the Baptiſm that now is uſed in the Church, or no?

Haukes. I anſwered to it as I did to the other Queſtion before. Then did the Biſhop with much Flattery counſel me to be perſuaded, and to keep me out of Priſon, which I utterly refuſed, and ſo we departed. And I ſuppoſed that the next Day I ſhould have gone to Priſon, and ſo I had, except for the Archdeacon of Canterbury, whoſe Name is Harpsfield, whom the Biſhop had deſired to talk with me, and began to perſuade me concerning the Sacrament and the Ceremonies: And after much talk he ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Altar was the ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, which did hang upon the Croſs.

Talk between Dr. Harpsfield, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and Mr. Haukes.

Haukes. He was upon the Croſs both alive and dead: which of them was the Sacrament?

Harpſ. The Archdeacon anſwered, alive.

Haukes. How do you prove that?

Harpſ. You muſt believe. Doth not St. John ſay, He is condemned aleady that believeth not?

Haukes. St. John ſaith, He that believeth not in the Son of God is already condemned, but he ſaith not, He that believeth not in the Sacrament is already condemned.

Harpſ. There is no talk with you: For ye are both without Faith and Learning, and therefore I will talk no more with you in Scripture.

Then two that ſtood by bade me enter further in talk with him; and I ſaid unto him, Why is the Rood-loft ſet betwixt the Body of the Church and the Chancel?

Harpſ. I cannot tell: For ye have asked a Queſtion which you cannot anſwer yourſelf.

Haukes. Yes that I can: For this ſaith one of your own Doctors, That the Body of the Church doth repreſent the Church Militant, and the Chancel the Church Triumphant: And ſo becauſe we cannot go from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant, but that we muſt bear the Croſs of Chriſt; this is the Cauſe of the Rood-loft being between the Body of the Church and the Chancel.

Harpsfield. This is well and learnedly concluded.

Haukes. As all the reſt of your Doctrine is; and ſo with many Perſuaſions on his Part we ended, and ſo departed: And I to the Porter's lodge again.

The next Day in the Morning which was the firſt Day of July, the Biſhop called me himſelf from the Porter's Lodge, commanding me to make myſelf ready to go to Priſon, and to take ſuch things with me as I had of my own. And I ſaid, I do neither intend to bribe, neither to ſteal, God willing. Then he did write my Warrant to the Keeper of the Gate-Houſe at Weſtminſter, and delivered it to Harpsfield, who with his own Man and one of the Biſhop's Men brought me to Priſon, and delivered the Warrant and me to the Keeper: And this was contained in the Warrant:

Mr. Haukes ſent to the Gatehouſe at Weſtminſter with the Biſhop's Warrant.

The Biſhop's Warrant.

I Will and Command you, that you receive him who cometh named in this Warrant, and that he be kept as a ſafe Priſoner, and that no Man ſpeak with him, and that ye deliver him to no Man, except it be the Council, or to a Juſtice: For he is a Sacramentary, and one that ſpeaketh againſt Baptiſm, a ſeditious Man, a perillous Man to be Abroad in theſe perillous Days. And thus was I rereceived, and they departed. And there I remained thirteen Days, and then the Biſhop ſent two of his Men unto me, ſaying, My Lord would be glad to know how ye do. I anſwered them, I do like a poor Priſoner. They ſaid, My Lord would know, whether ye be the ſame Man that ye were when ye departed. I ſaid, I am no changling. They ſaid, My Lord would be glad that ye ſhould do well. I ſaid, if my Lord will do me any good, I pray you deſire him to ſuffer my Friends to come to me. So they ſaid they would ſpeak for me, but I heard no more of them. Anno 1555.

This is the firſt Examination of me Thomas Haukes, being examined by Edmund Bonner, then Biſhop of London, and by his Chaplains and Doctors at Fulham, four Miles from London, where I lay, till I came to Priſon at Weſtminſter: And after his two Men had been with me, I heard no more of him till the third Day of September.

Here followeth the ſecond Time of mine Examination, which was the third Day of September, for the Biſhop did ſend his Men for me to come to his Palace of London; and ſo my Keeper and his Men brought me to his Palace the ſame Day.

THE Biſhop of Wincheſter, then being Chancellor, preached that Day at Paul's Croſs, and the Biſhop of London ſaid to my Keeper, I think your Man will not go to the Sermon to Day.

Haukes. Yes my Lord, I pray you let me go: And that that is good I will receive, and the reſt I will leave behind me, and ſo I went. And when the Sermon was done, I and my Keeper came to the Biſhop's Houſe, and there we remained till Dinner: And after Dinner the Biſhop called for me, and asked me, if I were the ſame Man that I was before.

Haukes. I am no changling, nor none will be.

Bonner. Ye ſhall find me no changling neither. And ſo he returned into his Chamber, and there he did write the Side of a Sheet of Paper, and all that while I ſtood in the great Chamber, and as many with me as might well ſtand in the Chamber. And as I ſtood there, Dr. Smith came unto me, (who once recanted, as it appeared in print) ſaying, That he would be glad to talk brotherly with me. I asked him what he was. Then ſaid they that ſtood by, he is Dr. Smith. Then ſaid I, Are you he that did recant? And he ſaid, it was no Recantation, but a Declaration.

Dr. Smith cometh to Mr. Haukes.

Haukes. You were beſt to term it well for your own Honeſty.

Smith. Shall I term it as it pleaſeth you?

Haukes. To be ſhort with you, I will know whether ye will recant any more or no, before that I talk with you, credit you, or believe you: And ſo I departed from him to the other Side of the Chamber. Then ſaid the Biſhop's Men and his Chaplains, that my Lord commanded me to talk with him. Then they that ſtood by cried with a great Noiſe, hang him, burn him; it is pity that he liveth, that diſobeyeth my Lord's Commandment.

Anno 1555.

Then ſaid one Miles Huggard, Where prove you that Infants were baptized?

Miles Huggard's Words to Thomas Haukes.

Haukes. Go teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. Sir, here is none excepted.

Mr. Huggard. What ſhall we go to teach Children?

Haukes. That Word doth trouble you; it might be left out full well: It is too much for you to teach. Is not your Name Miles Huggard?

Mr. Hug. So am I called.

Haukes. Be you not a Hoſier, and dwell in Pudding-lane?

Mr. Hug. Yes that I am, and there I do dwell.

Mr. Huggard more meet to eat a Pudding than to diſpute of Scripture.

Haukes. It ſhould ſeem ſo, for ye can better Skill to eat a Pudding, and make a Hoſe, than in the Scripture either to anſwer or oppoſe. With that he was in great Rage, and chafed up and down. Then I deſired that ſome Man would take ſome Pains to walk the Gentleman, he did fret ſo for Anger. Then one that ſtood by me (who was Parſon of Horn-Church and Rumford in Eſſex) ſaid, Alas, what do you mean? a young Man to be ſo ſtubborn? there ſeemeth too much Pride in you.

Haukes. Are ye not the Parſon of Horn-church.

Parſon. Yes that I am.

Haukes. Did you not ſet ſuch a Prieſt in your Benefice?

Parſon. Yes for a Shift.

Parſon of Hornchurch compared to the Weather-Cock of St. Paul's.

Haukes. Like will to like; ſuch Maſter, ſuch Man. For I know the Prieſt to be a very vile Man, as any could be. I aſked the Parſon, what kin he was to the Weather-cock of St. Paul's? and he fell into a great Laughter with the reſt of his Companions. He ſaid, that I did rail.

Then ſaid another that ſtood by unto me; What Books have you here? I anſwered, the New Teſtament. May I look in it, ſaid he? Yea, that ye may, ſaid I. And ſo he looked in my Book, and ſaid it was corrupt. I anſwered him, if the Things contained in it be true, then are ye falſe Prophets. He ſaid that he would oppoſe me in the firſt Word of the Teſtament ſaying, Here is a Generation of Chriſt: And, Iſaiah ſaith, No Man can tell his Generation.

Haukes. What meaneth Iſaiah by that?

I would learn of you, ſaid he.

Haukes. Ye would be angry if the Scholar ſhould teach the Maſter: But if ye will have me to teach you, I will tell you Iſaiah's Meaning.

Then ſaid he, No Man can tell the Generation between the Father and the Son: But you (I dare ſay) did know it before.

Haukes. Why then Iſaiah denieth not the Generation.

Then ſaid he, Why is Chriſt called Chriſt?

Haukes. Becauſe he is a Meſſias.

Then ſaid he, Why is he called a Meſſias?

Haukes. Becauſe he was ſo prophecied by the Prophets.

Then ſaid he, Why is your Book called a Book?

Haukes. Theſe Words do breed more Strife than godly edifying.

Beware, ſaid he, that ye do not decline from the Church, for if you do, you will prove your ſelf an Heretick.

Haukes. Even as you do call us Hereticks, that do incline to Chriſt's Church from your Church: So are ye all falſe Prophets that do decline from Chriſt's Church to your own Church. And by this ſhall all Men know you to be falſe Prophets, if ye ſay, This ſaith the Church: And will not ſay, This ſaith our Lord. And ſo he went his Way, as tho' he had a Flea in his Ear.

Then came another and ſaid unto me, He would talk with me; for he perceived (as he ſaid) that I was angry, and out of Patience.

Haukes. I will ſee your Commiſſion, before I talk with you, or with any Man more. For I knew not how to be rid of them, they came ſo thick about me. For I ſaid, that I came to talk with my Lord, and not with any of them.

Bp. Bonner writeth Haukes's Confeſſion.

With that came the Biſhop, bringing a Letter in his Hand, which he had written in my Name, and read it unto me after this Manner: I Thomas Haukes do here confeſs and declare before my ſaid Ordinary Edmund Biſhop of London, that the Maſs is abominable and deteſtable, and full of all Superſtition; and alſo as concerning the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt (commonly called the Sarcament of the Altar) that Chriſt is in no part thereof, but only in Heaven: This I have believed, and this I do believe, &c.

Haukes. Stop there my Lord: What I have believed, what have you to do withal? But what I do believe, to that ſtand I, and will. Then he took his Pen, and ſaid that he would ſcrape it out for my Pleaſure, and ſo he did to my thinking.

Then he went further with his Writing, and ſaid, I Thomas Haukes have talked with my ſaid Ordinary, and with certain good, godly, and learned Men. Notwithſtanding I ſtand ſtill in mine Opinion.

Haukes. Shall I grant you to be good, godly, and learned Men, and yet grant myſelf to ſtand in a contrary Opinion? No, I will not grant you to be good, godly, and learned Men.

Bonner. Ye will grant that ye have talked with us: The other I will put out for your Pleaſure. Then ſaid all his Doctors, If your Lordſhip be ruled by him, he will cauſe you to put out all together: And then read more to me. Here unto this Bill have I ſet my Hand; and then he offered me the Bill and his Pen, and bade me ſet my Hand to it.

Haukes. Ye ſhall not have my Hand to any thing of your making or deviſing.

Bonner. Wilt not thou ſet to thy Hand? It ſhall be to thy Shame for the denying of it.

T. Haukes denieth to ſet his Hand to Bonner's writing.

And then he called all his Doctors, and ſaid, he would have every Man's Hand to it that was in the Chamber; and ſo he had all their Hands to it, and ſaid; he that will not ſet his Hand to it, I would he were hanged; and ſo ſaid all his Chaplains and Doctors with a great Noiſe.

Then the Biſhop thruſt me on the Breaſt with great Anger; and ſaid he would be even with me, and with all ſuch proud Knaves in Eſſex.

Haukes. Ye ſhall do no more than God ſhall give you Leave.

Bonner. This jeer ſhall not be unpuniſhed, truſt to it.

Haukes. As for your Curſings, Railings and Blaſphemies, I care not for them: For I know the Moths and Worms ſhall eat you, as they eat Cloth or Wool.

Bonner. I will be even with you when time ſhall come.

Haukes. You may in your Malice deſtroy a Man: But when ye have done, ye cannot do ſo much as make a Finger; and ye be meetly even with ſome of us already.

Bonner.

Bonner. If I do thee any wrong, take the Law of me.

Haukes. Solomon ſaith, Go not to Law with a Judge; for he will judge according to his Honour.

Bonner. Solomon ſaith, Give not a Fool an Anſwer.

Haukes. What do you count me a Fool?

Bonner. Yea, by my troth do I, and ſo doſt thou me too: But God forgive thee, * and ſo do I.

* A little above he ſaid he would be even with him.

Haukes. Thought is free, my Lord. Then the Biſhop took the Bill and read it again; and when he ſaw that he could not have my Hand to it, then he would have had me to take it into my Hand, and to give it to him again.

Haukes. What needeth that Ceremony? neither ſhall it come into my Hand, Heart, or Mind. Then he wrapt it up, and put it in his Boſom, and went away in great Anger, and called for his Horſe, for the ſame Day he rode on his Viſitation into Eſſex: And ſo I went to Priſon again with my Keeper. This was the ſecond Time of my Examination.

The publick Examination of Mr. Haukes.

After all theſe private Conferences, and long Debates with Mr. Haukes in the Biſhop's Houſe, the Biſhop ſeeing no hope to win him, was fully ſet to proceed openly againſt him after the ordinary Courſe of his popiſh Law. Whereupon Mr. Haukes was ſhortly after cited with the reſt of his other Companions above-mentioned, namely, T. Tomkins, S. Knight, W. Pygot, J. Lawrence, and W. Hunter, to appear in the Biſhop's Conſiſtory, the eighth Day of February, this preſent Year 1555. Upon which Appearance was laid againſt him, in like Order as to the others, Firſt the Bill of his Confeſſion, written with Bonner's own Hand, to which Bill ye heard before how this worthy Man deny'd to ſubſcribe.

The firſt Days Seſſion againſt Thomas Haukes.

This Bill of Confeſſion being read, and he ſtanding ſtedfaſtly to the ſame, the Biſhop then aſſigned him with the other five the next Day following, which was the 9th of February, to appear before him again, to give a reſolute Anſwer what they would ſtick to. Which Day being come, and the aforeſaid ſix Priſoners being ſeverally called before the Biſhop, at the coming of Thomas Haukes, the Biſhop deſired him to remember what was ſaid to him Yeſterday, and now while he had time and ſpace, to adviſe with himſelf what he would anſwer, for he ſtood upon Life and Death. Well, ſaid Mr. Haukes again, I will willingly receive whatſoever ſhall be put upon me. Then certain other Interrogatories or Articles were commenced againſt him by the ſaid Biſhop, (in like manner as to the others) to the Number of four, with another Bill alſo which Biſhop Bonner brought out of his Boſom, containing private Matters againſt the ſaid Thomas Haukes, which the Biſhop called Hereſies and Errors, but we may better call them chriſtian Verities. To which Matter being read, the ſaid Haukes anſwered openly again, ſaying that it was true, and that he was glad it was ſo true as it was, with more Words to the like Effect. And this was in the Forenoon, the eleventh Day of February. In the Afternoon again the ſaid Haukes appearing and hearing the aforeſaid Bill of his Confeſſion, with the Articles and Interrogatories read unto him, with like Conſtancy in anſwering again to the Biſhop; My Lord (ſaith he) as you being my Friend have cauſed theſe my Sayings to be written; ſo do you cauſe them to be read: And yet I will never go from them. And then being exhorted by the Biſhop, with many fair Words, to return again to the Boſom of the mother Church: No my Lord (ſaid he) that will I not: For if I had an hundred Bodies, I would ſuffer them all to be torn in Pieces, rather than I will abjure or recant. And ſo continuing ſtill in the ſame Song, notwithſtanding that the Doctors and Lawyers were ever calling upon him to come again to the Unity of the Church, he ever kept them off with this Anſwer, that he would never go from the Belief he was in, ſo long as he believed. Whereupon Biſhop Bonner at laſt read the Sentence of Death upon him, and ſo was he condemned the ſame Day with the Reſidue of his Fellows, which was the ninth of February. Nevertheleſs his Execution was prolonged, and he remained in Priſon till the tenth Day of June. Then was he committed to the Hands and Charge of the Lord Rich, who, being ſufficiently aſſiſted with Power by the Worſhipful of the Shire, had the aforeſaid Thomas Haukes, down into Eſſex, with ſix other Fellow-priſoners whoſe Stories hereafter follows, there to ſuffer Martyrdom, Haukes at Coxehall, the others in ſeveral other Places. Anno 1555.

T. Haukes condemned by Biſhop Bonner.

Thomas Haukes by the Way uſed much Exhortation to his Friends, and whenſoever Opportunity ſerved to talk with them, he would familiarly admoniſh them.

A little before his Death there were ſeveral of his Familiar Acquaintance and Friends, who frequented his Company more familiarly, who ſeemed to be greatly confirmed both by the Example of his Conſtancy, and by his Talk; yet notwithſtanding, being feared with the Sharpneſs of the Puniſhment which he was going to ſuffer, privately deſired that in the midſt of the Flame he would ſhew them ſome Token, if he could, whereby they might be more certain, whether the Pain of ſuch burning were ſo great, that a Man might not therein keep his Mind quiet and patient. Which thing he promiſed them to do; and ſo ſecretly between them it was agreed, that if the Rage of the Pain were tolerable, and might be ſuffered, then he ſhould lift up his Hands above his Head toward Heaven, before he gave up the Ghoſt.

Mr. Haukes carried to the Place of Execution.

Not long after when the Hour was come, T. Haukes was led away to the Place appointed for the Slaughter, by the Lord Rich and his Aſſiſtants, who being now come to the Stake, there mildly and patiently addreſſed himſelf to the Fire, having a Chain caſt about his Middle, with a Multitude of People on every Side compaſſing him about. Unto whom after he had ſpoken many Things, eſpecially unto the Lord Rich, reaſoing with him of the innocent Blood of Saints, at length after his fervent Prayers firſt made and poured out unto God, the Fire was kindled.

In which when he continued long, and when his Speech was taken away by Violence of the Flame, his Skin alſo drawn together, and his Fingers conſumed with the Fire, ſo that now all Men thought certainly he had been gone, ſuddenly and contrary to all Expectation this good Man being mindful of his Promiſe before made, reached up his Hands burning on a light Fire, which was marvellous to behold, over his Head to the living God, and with great Rejoicing, as it ſeemed, ſtruck or clapped them three Times together. At the Sight whereof there followed ſuch Applauſe and Outcry of the People, and eſpecially of them which underſtood the Matter, that the like hath not commonly been heard: And ſo the bleſſed Martyr of Chriſt, ſtraitway ſinking down into the Fire, gave up his Spirit, June 10, 1555.

The

Anno 1555.

The Hiſtory of Mr. Thomas Wats.

THomas Wats of Billerica within the County of Eſſex, of the Dioceſs of London, was by his Occupation a Linnen Draper; who before he was apprehended had ſold and made away his Cloth in his Shop, and his Things being ſet in Order to his Wife and Children, and gave away much of his Cloth unto the Poor. For he daily expected to be taken by God's Adverſaries and his, as ſhortly after came to paſs: So that upon the 26th Day of April, he was apprehended and brought before the Lord Rich, and other Commiſſioners at Chelmsford, and there being accuſed for not coming to the Church, was upon the ſame examined before the Lord Rich, Henry Tyrel, Sir Anthony Brown, Edmund Tyrel, Thomas Mildmam, John Wiſeman, Roger Appleton, Richard Weſton, Juſtice Gaudy, &c. The Sum and principal Effect of which Examination, hereunder followeth briefly expreſſed.

The Examination of Thomas Wats before the Lord Rich, and other of the Queen's Commiſſioners.

When Thomas Wats came before the Lord Rich and the Juſtices, whoſe Names are ſpecified in the following Letter (which they ſent unto the Biſhop of London againſt him) at the Seſſions at Chelmsford, the Lord Rich ſpake to him as follows:

Wats, ye be brought hither, as I underſtand, becauſe of Diſobedience to the King and the Queen's Laws. Ye will not come to the Church ye will not hear Maſs, &c. But have your Conventicles a Sort of you in Corners, contrary to the King and Queen's Poceedings. To which Words Mr. Wats anſwered and ſaid:

My Lord, If I have offended a Law, I am ſubject here to the Law. Then Anthony Brown, Juſtice, ſaid unto him; Wats, I pray thee tell me who hath been thy Schoolmaſter to teach thee this Religion, or where didſt thou firſt learn it? Forſooth, ſaid Wats, even of you, Sir, you taught it me, and none more than you. For in King Edward's Days in open Seſſions you ſpake againſt this Religion now uſed, no Preacher more. You then ſaid the Maſs was abominable, and all their Trumpery beſides, wiſhing and earneſtly exhorting that none ſhould believe therein, and that our Belief ſhould be only in Chriſt: And you ſaid then, whoſoever ſhould bring in any ſtrange Nation to rule here, it were Treaſon, and not to be ſuffered. Then Mr. Brown ſaid to my Lord Rich, He belies me, my Lord. What a Knave is this? He will ſoon bely me behind my Back, when he doth it before my Face. And my Lord Rich ſaid again, I dare ſay he doth ſo.

Sir Anthony Brown a Proteſtant in King Edward's Days, and a Perſecutor in Q. Mary's Days.

After theſe Words, Mr. Wats took Occaſion to ſpeak ſomewhat of King Philip and of his coming in, but what it was I could not juſtly learn. But thus much was heard, that after thoſe Words ſpoken, the Bench among themſelves ſtood up, and ſaid one to another, Treaſon; except one good Man called Juſtice Gawdy, who a little before was about to ſpeak; but when he heard them cry Treaſon, he held down his Head as one grieved and troubled at their Doings.

In Concluſion, the Commiſſioners being weary of him, or elſe not willing to meddle further in ſuch Matters, ſent him up to the Biſhop of London, together with a Letter, declaring the Cauſe of his being ſent up, as by the Contents thereof may be ſeen.

A Letter ſent by certain Juſtices in Eſſex to Bonner Biſhop of London.

AFTER our moſt hearty Commendation to your good Lordſhip, theſe ſhall be to adverti ſe you, that at our Seſſions of Oyer and Terminer held at Chelmsford the 26th Day of April laſt paſt, there came before us in open Court, one Thomas Wats of Billerica within your Dioceſs, by ordinary Proceſs, and then and there being examined why he refuſed to come to his Pariſh Church, and there to receive the Sacrament of the Altar, and hear Divine Service, according to the Inſtitution of holy Church, he openly there anſwered generally, that like as the Service of the Church ſet out in the Days of the late King Edward VI. was ſaid by us now to be abominable, heretical, ſchiſmatical, and all naught; ſo he ſaid, that all that is now uſed and done in the Church is abominable, heretical, ſchiſmatical, and naught, with divers other erroneous and arrogant Words: And therefore we have thought good to ſend him to your Lordſhip, to be further examined by you of his particular Opinions, as to your paſtoral Office ſhall ſeem convenient, certifying you further, that in our Opinion he is one of the moſt arrogant Hereticks that hath been heard ſpeak, or ever came before you, and not meeet to be kept here in any Jail, as well for fear of corrupting others, as for divers and ſundry other ſpecial Cauſes hereafter to be more declared. Thus leaving to moleſt your good Lordſhip, we commit you to the Holy Ghoſt. Given at Chelmsford, April 27, 1555.

Your good Lordſhip's moſt aſſured,

R. Rich.	Thomas Wildman.
Henry Tyrel.	John Wiſeman.
Anthony Browne.	Roger Appleton.
Edmund Tyrel.	Richard Weſton.

Now when the Biſhop had received him, how he uſed him it is eaſy to judge. What his private Conferences were I know not, but what was publickly done in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's (the common Stage for theſe Tragedies) you ſhall here ſee.

The firſt Appearance of Thomas Wats the Biſhop's Conſiſtory.

FIRST upon Thurſday being the ſecond Day of May, Thomas Wats was brought thither before the Biſhop of London, and there being examined upon his Words had before the Lord Rich and others, as is contained in their Letter, he did earneſtly affirm the ſame to be true. Whereupon the Biſhop objected, and examined him upon theſe Articles following, to which he anſwered, as under may appear.

Articles objected againſt Thomas Wats of Billerica in the County of Eſſex, within the Dioceſs of London, by Biſhop Bonner.

1. THAT the ſaid Thomas Wats was of Billerica, and ſo of the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London.

2. Item,

2. Item, That he believed not in the Sacraments of the holy and catholick Church, as the catholick Church of Rome, and all other Churches Members of the ſame, ever hitherto have believed, and is taught by all good and faithful People, nor hath allowed the Sacraments, Rites, Uſages, or Ceremonies of the ſaid Church, but hath deſpiſed the ſame.

3. Item, That he believeth, and alſo hath taught others, that the Subſtance of material Bread and Wine do remain in the Sacrament of the Altar after the Conſecration, and that the ſaid material Bread and Wine are the Signs and Tokens of Chriſt's Body hanged upon the Croſs, and of his Blood there ſhed, and that in the ſaid Sacrament there is only a Memory or Remembrance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and nothing elſe.

4. Item, That he believeth, and doth preciſely affirm, that the very true Preſence of Chriſt's Body and Blood in Subſtance, is not in the Sacrament of the Altar, but only in Heaven, and no where elſe.

5. Item, That he believeth, affirmeth, and ſaith, that the Maſs now uſed in the Church of Rome, here in England, and other Places, is full of Idolatry, Abomination, and Wickedneſs, and that Chriſt did never inſtitute it, nor ordain it, nor yet allow it as a good and laudable Thing to be uſed in his Church.

6. Item, That he believeth and affirmeth, that auricular Confeſſion to be made unto the Prieſt is not neceſſary, but ſuperfluous: And that it is enough for a Man to believe only, and to confeſs himſelf unto God, without any Prieſt or Miniſter at any Time, though he may have the Prieſt to confeſs him unto.

Defence of Martyrs.

7. Item, That he believeth that Luther, Wickliffe, Dr. Barnes, and all others that have held againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, and ſuffered Death by Fire or otherwiſe, for the Maintenance of the ſaid Opinion, were good Men, and faithful Servants and Martyrs of Chriſt, in ſo believing and dying.

8. Item, That he hath and doth believe, that to faſt, pray, or to do Alms-deeds, is a Thing utterly unprofitable; for if a Man ſhall be ſaved, he ſhall be ſaved without doing of them; and if he ſhall be damned, they ſhall not help him, or do him any Good at all.

Queen Mary's Service reproved.

9. Item, That the ſaid Wats of late coming into open Court at the Seſſions before the Lord Rich, Sir Henry Tyrel Knight, Anthony Browne Eſquire, and others, and being then and there examined, did openly confeſs, that he had refuſed to come to the Church, and to hear there the Divine Service, and to receive the Sacrament of the Altar, according to the Order of the Church: Becauſe that like as the Service of the Church ſet out in the Days of the late King Edward the the Sixth, was ſaid and alledged to be abominable, heretical, ſchiſmatical, and altogether naught; ſo he the ſaid Thomas Wats then and there ſaid openly before the ſaid Commiſſioners, that all that is now uſed and done in the Church, is abominable, heretical, ſchiſmatical, and altogether naught: And that he did alſo then utter before the ſaid Commiſſioners other erroneous and arrogant Words, to the Hurt of his Soul, and to the evil Example of the People there preſent.

10. Item, That he the ſaid Thomas by reaſon of the Premiſſes, was, and is to be taken, had, reputed, and judged as a manifeſt and open Heretick, and for the ſame, by the Order of eccleſiaſtical Laws is to be declared accurſed; and being obſtinate and incorrigible, is to be delivered to the ſecular Power, there to be puniſhed as an Heretick. Anno 1555.

11. Item, That he over and beſides all theſe Offences and Treſpaſſes aforeſaid, had alſo added this Treſpaſs; namely, that he had believed and deliberately ſpoken that the Church of Rome in her Rites, Ceremonies, Sacraments, Conſtitutions, and Traditions, is the Synagogue of Satan; and therefore that he had conſented and agreed in Opinion with one John Tooley, of late hanged at Charing-Croſs, who at the Time of his Execution, deſired the People to pray to be delivered from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, with all his Enormities; as who ſhould ſay, that his Authority and Doings were Tyranny, and had all Enormities and Iniquities in them.

12. Item, That the Premiſſes and every Part thereof be true, notorious, manifeſt, and openly ſpoken and talked of amongſt the honeſt and credible Perſons in great Multitude, and that of all and ſingular the ſame within Billerica aforeſaid, and other Places thereabout, being of the Dioceſs of London, there is a common Voice and Fame thereof.

The Anſwer of Thomas Wats to the aforeſaid Articles.

TO the firſt he ſaid and confeſſed the ſame to be true in every Part thereof.

To the ſecond Article he anſwered, that he believed in all the Sacraments according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, and the catholick Church; but not according to the Biſhop of Rome's Church: And further ſaid, that he doth not believe now as he had done in Times paſt; for in Time paſt he believed as the Church then believed, but now he doth not ſo believe; for the Church of Rome had deceived us, and therefore he ſaid he did not believe as the Church of Rome believeth, but as Chriſt hath taught him; and further ſaid, that he was ſo taught to believe by the preaching of Mr. Alvey, and others whoſe Names he remembreth not; who did preach the Word of God truly and ſincerely. Mr. Wats firſt won to the Goſpel by Mr. Alvey.

To the third he anſwered, that he hath and doth believe, that Chriſt's Body is in Heaven, and no where elſe: And further, that he will never believe that Chriſt's Body is in the Sacrament.

To the Fourth he anſwered, confeſſing and firmly believing the ſame to be true.

To the Fifth, That he did believe that the Maſs is abominable, and he will not go one jot from that his Belief.

To the Sixth, That he neither did, nor yet doth believe, that the Prieſt can abſolve him from his Sins: Howbeit, he denieth not that it is good to aſk Counſel at the Prieſt's Mouth.

To the Seventh he ſaid, That he knew not what the Opinions of the ſaid Perſons named in the ſaid Article were; and in caſe the ſaid Perſons did believe, that the Body and Blood of Chriſt were really and in very Deed in the Sacrament of the Altar, then that they were not good Men. But in caſe they did believe that the Body and Blood of Chriſt was not in the Sacrament of the Altar really and truly, then he believed that they were good Men.

To the Eighth, That he had not ſpoken as is contained in this Article, but ſaid, that he hath and doth believe, that Faſting, Prayers, and Almſdeeds be Works of a lively Faith.

Anno 1555.

To the Ninth he confeſſed, that he did utter and ſpeak, as in this Article is contained, and further he deſired God that he might die in that Faith and Belief wherein he now is.

To the Tenth he anſwered and ſaid, that he will ſubmit himſelf herein to the Order of the Law: And further ſaid, that he truſteth that with God he ſhall be bleſſed, although with Men he be accurſed..

To the Eleventh he ſaid, he believed that the Biſhop of Rome is a mortal Enemy to Chriſt and his Church. And as for Tooley he ſaid, he did never ſee or know him: But in caſe the ſaid Tooley did wiſh and pray as is contained in the Article, then he did likewiſe wiſh and conſent with him therein.

To the Twelfth he anſwered, that all which before he confeſſed to be true, is alſo true: And all that he hath denied to be true, he denieth again to be true, and believeth the ſame to be according to ſuch Things as he hath confeſſed.

By me Thomas Wats.

Mr. Wats again appeareth in the Biſhop's Conſiſtory.

Theſe Articles thus propounded and anſwered, the Biſhop commanded him to appear again in the Afternoon at Three o' Clock upon the ſame Day. At which Hour being brought thither by his Keeper, the Biſhop began with him in this wiſe:

Wats. You know what I ſaid unto you to Day, and what I appointed unto you at this Time. The Time is now come; weigh and conſider with yourſelf, that you are but a Man, and albeit that you will wilfully caſt away your Body, yet caſt not away your Soul, but while ye have Time return and confeſs the Truth.

Whereunto Thomas Wats anſwered and ſaid, I am weary to live in ſuch Idolatry as ye would have me to live in. Upon which Anſwer the Biſhop cauſed his Articles again to be read. He thereto anſwered as before, and farther, ſubſcribed the ſame with his own Hand.

Another Appearance before Dr. Harpsfield.

The Biſhop after many Perſuaſions to cauſe him to recant, ordered him to depart, and to come again on Saturday at Eight of the Clock in the Morning. Where the Biſhop being abſent, Dr. Nicholas Harpsfield, as then being his Deputy, did ſit, and earneſtly exhorted him to deny his Opinions. To whom in the End he anſwered,

Well, ye have a Law to condemn me, and I ſubmit myſelf to the Laws of the Church (as you call it:) and farther I do affirm, and ſtill ſtand to mine Anſwers that I have made.

Mr. Wats privately appeareth again before the Biſhop.

Whereupon Dr. Harpsfield ordered him to appear there again upon Friday, being the 10th Day of the ſame Month of May. Upon which Day the Biſhop privately ſent for the ſaid Thomas Wats into his Chamber, and there with many fair Promiſes tempted and tried him, whether he would revoke his Errors as he then termed them. But Wats anſwered him in this Sort; I will not believe your Church, neither the Romiſh Church, and therefore you do but labour in vain thus to travail with me. He was hereupon again diſmiſſed for that Time until Friday the 17th of May, and then commanded to appear in the Conſiſtory; which Command he obeyed, and having the accuſtomed former Articles miniſtred unto him, made then ſuch Anſwers as before.

Being thus toſt to and fro from Day to Day, and Hour to Hour, he was at the laſt the 18th of May, brought into the Conſiſtory, where firſt was made a brief Recital of all the former Proceſs: And there the ſaid Wats being (by the Biſhop and others) deſired to deny his Profeſſion, made this final Anſwer; God keep me from the Doctrine that ye would have me to come unto, which ye have now declared. And I beſeech God that I may perſevere in that, that I have done; for I will ſtand to mine Anſwers.

The final Anſwer of Mr. Wats.

The Biſhop perceiving his fair flattering Promiſes prevail'd not (and having no great Store of other Reaſons to perſuade with) put forth his laſt and ſtrongeſt Argument of Condemnation. Which being ended, he was delivered to the Sheriffs of London, and by them was ſent to Newgate, where he remained until the Ninth of June, or (as ſome record) to the 22d of May: At which Time he was carried to Chelmsford, and there was brought to Mr. Scot's Houſe, keeping then an Inn in Chelmsford, where, as they were eating Meat with Haukes and the reſt that came down to their burning; they prayed together both before and after their Meat.

Sentence of Condemnation againſt him.

The Martyrdom of Mr. Wats at Chelmsford.

Then Mr. Wats went and prayed privately to himſelf, and afterward came to his Wife and his ſix Children being there, and ſaid theſe Words in Effect; Wife, and my good Children, I muſt now depart from you. Therefore henceforth know I you no more, but as the Lord hath given you unto me, ſo I give you again unto the Lord, whom I charge you ſee you do obey, and fear him: And beware ye turn not to this abominable Popery, againſt which I ſhall anon, by God's Grace, give my Blood. Let not the murdering of God's People cauſe you to relent, but take Occaſion thereby to be the ſtronger in the Lord's Quarrel, and I doubt not but he will be a merciful Father unto you. After which, he bade them farewel, and kiſſed them all, and was carried to the Fire.

The Words of Thomas Wats to the Lord Rich.

At the Stake, after he had kiſſed it, he ſpake to my Lord Rich theſe or the like Words: My Lord, ſaid he, Beware, beware, for you do againſt your own Conſcience herein, and without you repent, the Lord will revenge it: For you are the Cauſe of this my Death.

Concerning the Childbed of Queen Mary, as it was rumoured among the People.

Long Perſuaſion had been in England with great Expectation, for the Space of half a Year or more, that the Queen was conceived with Child. This Report was made by the Queen's Phyſicians, and others about the Court; ſo that ſeveral were puniſhed for ſaying the contrary. And a Command was given, that in all Churches Supplication and Prayer ſhould be made for the Queen's good Delivery: The Certificate whereof ye may read before in the Letter of the Council ſent to Biſhop Bonner. And alſo the ſame moreover may appear by Proviſion made before by Act of Parliament for the Child.

Rockers and Nurſes provided for Queen Mary's Child.

And now foraſmuch as in the Beginning of this Month of June, about Witſontide, the Time was thought to be nigh that this young Maſter ſhould come into the World, and that Midwives, Rockers, Nurſes, with the Cradle and all, were prepared and in a Readineſs; ſuddenly, upon what Cauſe or Occaſion is uncertain, a certain vain Rumour was blown in London of the proſperous Deliverance of the Queen, and the Birth of the Child. Inſomuch that the Bells were rung, Bonfires, and Proceſſions made, not only in the City of London, and in moſt other Parts of the Realm, but alſo in the Town of Antwerp, Guns were ſhot off upon the River by the Engliſh Ships, and the Mariners thereof rewarded with an hundred Piſtolets or Italian Crowns by the Lady Regent, who was the Queen of Hungary. Such great Rejoicing and Triumph was made for the Queen's Delivery, and that there was a Prince born. Yea, divers Preachers, namely one the Parſon of St. Ann within Alderſgate, after Te Deum ſung, took upon him to deſcribe the Proportion of the Child, how fair, how beautiful, he was, as the like had not been ſeen.

At this Time many talked diverſly. Some ſaid this Rumor of the Queen's Conception was ſpread for a Policy; others affirmed, that ſhe was deceived by a Tympany or ſome other like Diſeaſe, to think herſelf with Child, and was not; ſome thought ſhe was with Child, and that it did by ſome Chance miſcarry, or elſe that ſhe was bewitched; but what was the Truth thereof the Lord knoweth, to whom nothing is ſecret. One thing of mine own hearing and ſeeing, I cannot paſs over unwitneſſed.

There came to me, whom I did both hear and ſee, one Iſabel Malt, a Woman dwelling in Alderſgate-ſtreet in Horn-Alley, who before Witneſs made this Declaration unto us, That ſhe being delivered of a Manchild upon Whitſunday in the Morning, which was the 11th Day of June 1555. there came to her the Lord North, and another Lord to her unknown, dwelling then about Old Fiſh ſtreet, demanding of her if ſhe would part with her Child, and would ſwear that ſhe never knew nor had any ſuch Child. Which, if ſhe would, her Son, they ſaid, ſhould be well provided for, ſhe ſhould take no Care for it, with many fair Offers if ſhe would part with the Child.

After that came ſome Women alſo, of whom one they ſaid ſhould have been the Rocker; but ſhe in no wiſe would let go her Son, who at the Writing hereof being alive, and called Timothy Malt, was of the Age of 13 Years, and upward.

Thus much, I ſay, I heard of the Woman herſelf. What Credit is to be given to her Relation, I deal not withal, but leave it to the Liberty of the Reader, to believe it they that liſt; to them that liſt not, I have no further Warrant to aſſure them.

Among many other great Preparations made for the Queen's Deliverance of Child, there was a Cradle very ſumptuouſly and gorgeouſly trimmed, upon which Cradle for the Child appointed, theſe Verſes were written, both in Latin and Engliſh.

Verſes upon the Cradle.

Quam Maria ſobolem, Deus optime, ſumme [dediſti,
Anglis incolumem redde, tuere, Rege.

The Child which thou to Mary, O Lord of [Might do'ſt ſend,
To England's Joy, in Health preſerve, keep [and defend.

About this Time there came over into England a certain Engliſh Book, giving warning to Engliſhmen of the Spaniards, and diſcloſing ſome ſecret Practices for the recovery of Abby-Lands, which Book was called, A Warning for England. So that by the Occaſion of this Book, upon the 13th Day of this Month came out a certain Proclamation, ſet forth in the Name of the King and Queen, repealing and diſannulling all Manner of Books written or printed, whatſoever ſhould tend to empair the Pope's Dignity, whereby not only much pious Edification was hindred, but alſo great Peril grew among the People. The Copy of which Proclamation here followeth.

Anno 1555.

A Proclamation ſet out by the King and Queen, for the reſtraining of all Books and Writings, tending againſt the Doctrine of the Pope and his Church.

WHereas by the Statute made in the ſecond Year of King Henry IV. concerning the repreſſing of Hereſy, there is ordained and provided a great Puniſhment, not only for the Authors, Makers, and Writers of Books containing wicked Doctrine, and erroneous and heretical Opinions, contrary to the catholick Faith and Determination of the holy Church, and likewiſe for their Favourers and Supporters, but alſo for ſuch as ſhall have or keep any ſuch Books or Writings, and not make delivery of them to the Ordinary of the Dioceſs or his Miniſters, within a certain Time limited in the ſaid Satute, which Act or Satute being by Authority of Parliament of late revived, was alſo openly proclaimed, to the intent the Subjects of the Realm upon ſuch Proclamation ſhould the rather eſchew the Danger and Penalty of the ſaid Statute, and as yet nevertheleſs in moſt Parts of the Realm the ſame is neglected, and little regarded: The King and Queen our Sovereign Lord and Lady, therefore, &c. ſtraitly Charge and Command, that no Perſon or Perſons, of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he or they be, from henceforth preſume to bring or convey, or cauſe to be brought or conveyed into this Realm, any Books, Writings, or Works hereafter mentioned; that is to ſay, any Book or Books, Writings or Works made or ſet forth, by, or in the Name of Martin Luther, or any Book or Books, Writings or Works made and ſet forth, by, or in the Name of Œcolampadius, Zuinglius, John Calvin, Pomerane, John Alaſco, Bullinger, Bucer, Melancthon, Bernardinus, Ochinus, Eraſmus, Sarcerius, Peter Martyr, Hugh Latimer, Robert Barnes, otherwiſe called Friar Barnes, John Bale, otherwiſe called Friar Bale, Juſtus Jones, John Hooper, Miles Coverdale, William Tindal, Thomas Cranmer late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, William Turner, Theodore Baſil, otherwiſe callled Thomas Beacon, John Frith, Roy, and the Book commonly called Hall's Chronicle, or any of them in the Latin Tongue, Dutch Tongue, Engliſh Tongue, Italian Tongue, or French Tongue, or any other like Book, Paper, Writing, or Work, made, printed or ſet forth, by any other Perſon or Perſons, containing falſe Doctrine contrary and againſt the catholick Faith, and the Doctrine of the catholick Church. And alſo that no Perſon or Perſons preſume to write, print, utter, ſell, read, or keep any, or cauſe to be written, printed, uttered, or kept any of the ſaid Books, Papers, Works, or Writings, or any Book or Books written or printed in the Latin or Engliſh Tongue, concerning the common Service and Adminiſtration ſet forth in Engliſh to be uſed in the Churches of this Realm, in the Time of King Edward VI. commonly called the Communion Book, or Book of common Service and Ordering of Miniſters, otherwiſe called, The Book ſet forth by Authority of Parliament, for common Prayer and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, or to be uſed in the mother Tongue within the Church of England, but ſhall within the Space of fifteen Days next after the Publication of this Proclamation, bring or deliver, or cauſe the ſaid Books, Writings, and Works, and every of them remaining on their Cuſtody and keeping, to be brought and delivered to the Ordinary of the Dioceſs, where ſuch Books, Works, or Writings be or remain,

What ado is here to keep down Chriſt in his Sepulchre? and yet will he riſe in ſpite of all his Enemies.

Anno 1555. remain, or to his Chancellor or Commiſſaries, without Fraud, Colour or Deceit, at the ſaid Ordinaries Will and Diſpoſition to be burnt, or otherwiſe to be uſed or ordered by the ſaid Ordinaries, as by the Canons or ſpritual Laws it is in that Caſe limited and appointed, upon pain that every Offender contrary to this Proclamation, ſhall incur the Danger and Penalties contained in the ſaid Statute, and as they will avoid their Majeſties high Indignation and Diſpleaſure, and further Anſwer at their uttermoſt Perils.

And their Majeſties by this Proclamation give full Power and Authority to all Biſhops and Ordinaries, and all Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs of Cities and Towns corporate, and other head Officers within this Realm and the Dominions thereof, and expreſly commandeth and willeth the ſame and every of them, that they and every of them, within their ſeveral Limits and Juriſdictions, ſhall in the Default and Negligence of the ſaid Subjects, after the ſaid fifteen Days expired, enquire and ſearch out the ſaid Books, Writings, and Works; and for this Purpoſe enter into the Houſe or Houſes, Cloſets and ſecret Places of every Perſon, of whatſoever Degree, being negligent in this Behalf, and ſuſpected to keep any ſuch Book, Writing, or Works, contrary to this Proclamation: And that the ſaid Juſtices, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and other head Officers above ſpecified, and every of them within their ſaid Limits and Juriſdictions finding any of the ſaid Subjects negligent and faulty in this Behalf, ſhall commit every ſuch Offender to Ward, there to remain without Bail or Main prize, till the ſame Offender or Offenders have received ſuch Puniſhment as the ſaid Statute doth limit and appoint in this Behalf. Given under our Signs manual, at our Manour of Hampton-court, the 13th Day of June, the firſt and ſecond Years of our Reign.

Articles to be enquired upon by the Wardens of every Company, touching ſeditious Books, eſpecially concerning the Book called, A Warning for England.

1. Whether they have ſeen any of the aforeſaid Books.

2. Whether they have heard of any of the ſaid Books.

3. Where they were, and in what place they have ſeen them.

4. Whom they know to have lately come from beyond the Sea, eſpecially from Zurick, Straſburgh, Frankford, Wezel, Embden, and Diſburge.

5. Whom they know or vehemently ſuſpect to be common Carriers of Letters, or Money thither from hence.

6. That they bring to my Lord Mayor all ſuch ſeditious Books as they have, or ſhall have found hereafter.

In this Proclamation thou haſt heard, chriſtian Reader, the profound and learned Cenſure of the catholick Church of England, what Books they miſlike and reject as heretical, ſchiſmatical, and pernicious. Againſt which catholick Cenſure of theſe learned Fathers, I have not at this Time to infer: Neither doth any leiſure now ſerve to write Apologies in Defence of theſe Authors here condemned. Only ſo much Leave it may pleaſe the Reader to grant me, to ſet before him here a Pair of Ballance, wherein to weigh the Books on the one Side condemned, with the Books on the other Side allowed, to the End that we weighing the one with the other, may diſcern the better between them, which Part weigheth beſt with God's holy Truth and true catholick Church, againſt manifeſt Idolatry and palpable Abomination. And now therefore, as they have in this preſent Proclamation given their Condemnation upon theſe Books above recited: So I deſire thee to give thy Cenſure upon their Books by them allowed, and upon the Matter in them contained, and mark well what good Stuff it is.

The Books of the Proteſtants to be weighed with the Books of the Papiſts.

And firſt to begin with the Primmer in Engliſh, for Children after the Uſe of Saliſbury, imprinted with a Privilege according to the King and Queen's Majeſty's Letters Patents in the Reign of Queen Mary. Let us repeat and ſurvey ſome part of the ſaid Primmer (for to expreſs all it were too long) beginning the firſt Leſſon of our Lady, in theſe Words:

The Primmer ſet forth in Q. Mary's Time printed by J. Wayland.

Holy Mary, Mother moſt pure of Virgins all;
Mother and Daughter of the King celeſtial,
So comfort us in our Deſolation,
That by thy Prayer and ſpecial Mediation,
We enjoy the Reward of thy heavenly Reign.

Confer this with the Scriptures, good Reader, and judge uprightly whether this Doctrine be tolerable in the Church or not.

It followeth more in the ſecond Leſſon.

Holy Mary, of all Godly the Godlieſt,
Pray for us, of all Holy the Holieſt;
That he our Prayers accept may in good wiſe,
Which of thee was born, and reigneth above [the Skies, &c.

In the third Leſſon.

Thy Son beſeech with humble Interceſſion,
To purge us clean of our Tranſgreſſion;
That ſo being redeemed we may the Place aſcend,
Where thou dwelleſt with him World without [end.

The Verſicle.

Pray for the People, intreat for the Clergy; make Interceſſion for the devout Woman-kind; let all feel thy Help that worthily ſolemnize thy Memorial, &c.

One Mediator between God and Men, the Man Jeſus Chriſt.

Another Verſicle.

Holy Mother of God, make thy Petition, that we may deſerve Chriſt's Promiſſion, &c.

And in the Anthem after Benedictus, thus it followeth:

We beſeech thee of thy Pity to have us in Remembrance, and to make Means for us unto Chriſt, that we being ſupported by thy Help, may deſerve to attain the Kingdom of Heaven.

False Merits.

Furthermore in the Collect after it followeth:

And grant, that thro' the gracious Interceſſion of the Virgin thy Mother, we may be delivered from this preſent Heavineſs, and have the Fruition of eternal Gladneſs.

Wrong Mediation

It followeth moreover in the ſaid Primmer, thus, concerning the material Croſs.

O God, which haſt aſcended thy moſt holy Croſs, and hath given Light to the Darkneſs of the World, vouchſafe by the Virtue of thy Croſs to illuminate, viſit and comfort both our Hearts and Bodies, &c.

Idolatry to the material Croſs.

Moreover, in the Name of St. John Baptiſt thus it prayeth:

O Lord, defend us alway through the continual Succours of St. John Baptiſt. For the more frail we be, the more need we have to be relieved with neceſſary Prayers, &c.

In which Words note (good Reader) not only the Abſurdity of Doctrine, but alſo the Fooliſhneſs of the Reaſon. For where their Doctrine pretendeth that St. John Baptiſt ſhould pray for us, here we pray to God for St. John Baptiſt, that he will hear his Prayer praying for us. It followeth furthermore in the Name of Peter and Paul:

Hear us mercifully, and grant that through the Merits of them both, we may obtain the Glory everlaſting, &c.

Of St. Andrew.

So let him, O Lord, be a continual Petitioner for us to thee, &c.

Of St. Laurence thus:

St. Laurence the Deacon did work a great Work. For by the Virtue of the holy Croſs he gave Sight to the Blind, &c.

And how can this be true, when the holy Croſs was not yet found in the Time of St. Laurence? For Helen which firſt found the Croſs, as they ſay, came after St. Laurence more than forty Years.

To Thomas Becket, Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Horrid Blaſphemy and Derogation to Chriſt's Blood.

By the Blood of Thomas, which he for thee [did ſpend,
Make us, Chriſt, to climb, whither Thomas [did aſcend.

Of St. Nicholas.

False Merits.

O God, which haſt glorified bleſſed Nicholas, thy holy Biſhop, with innumerable Miracles, grant we beſeech thee that by his Merits and Prayers we may be delivered from the Fire of Hell.

Of Mary Magdalen.

Grant we beſeech thee, through thy Mercy, to let her purchaſe for us the Bliſs everlaſting, &c.

Another Prayer to our Lady.

The dolorous Compaſſion of God's ſweet Mother,
Bring us to the Bliſs of Almighty God the Fa- [ther, &c.

Another Prayer in the ſaid Primmer to our Lady.

The Office of Chriſt given to our Lady.

Eſtabliſh us in Peace and Tranquility,
And change the Name of ſinful Eva:
Looſe thy Priſoners from Captivity;
Unto the Blind give Sight again.
Deliver us from Malignity,
To the End we may ſome Grace attain.
Shew thyſelf to be a Mother,
So that he accept our Petition.
Deliver us from Bondage of Sin, &c.

Item,

Holy Mother ſuccour the miſerable, comfort the weak ſpirited, give Courage to the Deſperate, pray for the People, make Interceſſion for the Clergy, and be a Mean for the devout Woman-kind, &c.

Another blaſphemous Prayer.

Blaſphemy.

O thou meek Mother, have Mercy therefore
On Wretches for whom thou hadſt theſe Pains all,
Seeing thy Son that Vine-Cluſter preſſed ſore:
And from the Peſtilence of Death eternal,
Keep us, by 'voiding the Fiend infernal,
And join us with them which rewarded be
With eternal Life, ſeeing the Deity.

Another Blaſphemy in the ſaid Primmer.

Idolatry.

Hail Queen, Mother of Mercy, our Life, our Sweetneſs, our Hope. Unto thee do we cry and ſigh, weeping and wailing. Come off therefore our Patroneſs; caſt upon us thy pitiful Eyes, and after this our Baniſhment ſhew to us the bleſſed Fruit of thy Womb. O Gate of Glory, be for us a Reconciliation unto the Father and the Son. From the Wretched their Faults expel: Wipe the Spots of Sins unclean, &c. Anno 1555.

Item, to our Lady.

The Fruit of thy Womb everlaſting,
We may behold through thy deſerving, &c.

Item,

If Mary's Merits help us, then Chriſt died in vain.

Grant we beſeech thee, that by her Merits and Prayers we may attain to that unſpeakable Joy, whereas ſhe being aſcended, doth now rejoice with thee in Heaven for ever.

Like Primmer like Pſalter.

And thus much hitherto of this catholick Primmer, called our Lady's Mattens. Whereunto, if it were not tedious for the Reader, we would alſo adjoin our Lady's Pſalter, to the Intent that all indifferent Readers, as they have ſeen what Books theſe catholick Fathers have condemned for heretical; ſo they may alſo ſee and judge, what Books on the other Side they approve as lawful and catholick. And foraſmuch as it is not known to all Men what our Lady's Pſalter is, or what it meaneth: Yea, and ſome peradventure will deny any ſuch Book of our Lady's Pſalter to be written or approved, here therefore we will firſt produce the Name of the Author, who was Bonaventure, a ſeraphical Doctor, Biſhop alſo and Cardinal, canonized moreover by Pope Sixtus IV. in the Year 1482, for a Saint in the Kalendar, whoſe Book is thus intitled in Latin, Incipit Pſalterium beatæ Virginis, compilatum per Seraphicum doctorem ſanctum Bonaventuram epiſcopum Albanenſem, necnon ſanctæ Romanæ Eccleſia Preſbyterum Cardinalem, in honorem Genetricis, &c. Fol. 84. In the ſecond Part of his whole Works (which were printed at Argentine, An. 1495.) to ſhew himſelf a devout Servant to his Lady, hath taken every Pſalm of David's Pſalter (which are peculiarly made and referred to Almighty God) and hath in ſeveral of the ſaid Pſalms and Verſes put out the Name of our Lord, and hath placed in the Name of our Lady. This being done through the whole Pſalms and every one of them, it is now called our Lady's Pſalter, uſed to be ſung and ſaid in the Praiſe and Service of our Lady. A brief Taſte whereof for Example ſake (for it were too long to ſhew all) we thought here to exhibit unto the Reader in Order, as followeth.

Bonaventure Compiler of our Lady's Pſalter.

He lived An. 1170. and was canonized An. 1482.

The Title of the Pſalter in Engliſh.

Here beginneth the Pſalter of the Bleſſed Virgin, made by the ſeraphical Doctor St. Bonaventure, the Biſhop of Alban, and Cardinal of the holy Church of Rome.

1. BLeſſed is the Man which underſtandeth thy Name, O Virgin Mary, thy Grace ſhall comfort his Soul. Thou ſhalt bring forth in him the moſt plentiful Fruit of Juſtice, being watered as it were with Fountains of Water. All Women thou paſſeſt in the Beauty of thy Body; all Angels and Archangels in the Excellency of thy Holineſs. Thy Mercy and thy Grace is magnified every where, &c. Glory be to the Father, &c.

Treaſon againſt Chriſt's Perſon and Dignity.

2. Why do our Enemies fret and imagine vain Things againſt us? Let thy Right Hand defend us, O Mother of God, terribly confounding and deſtroying them as a Sword. Come unto her all ye that labour and are troubled, and ſhe will give Reſt unto your Souls. Come unto her in your Temptations, and her loving Countenance ſhall ſtabliſh and comfort you. Bleſs her with all your Heart; for the Earth is full of her Mercy. Glory be to the Father, &c.

Anno 1555. Blaſphemous Idolatry.

3. Why are they ſo many, O Lady, that trouble me? In thy Fury thou ſhalt perſecute and deſtroy them. Looſe the Bonds of our Impiety, and take away the Burden of our Sins. Have Mercy upon me, O Lady, and heal my Infirmity. Take away my Sorrow and the Anguiſh of my Heart. Deliver me not into the Hands of mine Enemies, and in the Day of Death comfort my Soul. Bring me unto the Haven of Salvation, and reſtore my Spirit unto my Maker and Creator. Glory be to the Father, &c.

False. Faith.

4. When I called to thee, thou heardeſt, O my Lady, and out of thy high Throne thou didſt vouchſafe to think upon me. From the Roaring of them that prepare themſelves to devour me, and out of the Hands of ſuch as ſeek after my Life, thy Grace ſhall deliver me: Becauſe thy Mercy and thy Pity are great towards all them that call upon thy holy Name. Bleſſed be thou, O Lady, for ever, and thy Majeſty for ever and ever. Glorify her all Nations of the Earth, &c.

Derogation of the Croſs of Chriſt.

5. Hear my Words, O Lady, &c. turn our Mourning into Gladneſs, and our Trouble into Rejoicing. Let our Enemies fall before our Feet, and with thy Power daſh their Heads in Pieces.

6. O Lady, ſuffer me not to be rebuked in God's Anger, nor to be chaſtned in his heavy Diſpleaſure, &c. From the Gate and deep Pit of Hell, with thy holy Prayers deliver us. Let the everlaſting Gates be opened, that we may ſhew forth thy marvellous Works for ever. Becauſe the dead, nor they that be in Hell, ſhall not praiſe thee, O Lady, but they which obtain by thy Grace Life everlaſting.

7. O my Lady, in thee will I put my Truſt; deliver me from mine Enemies, O Lady. Stop the Mouth of the Lion, and blind the Lips of the Perſecutors. Make no tarrying for thy Name's Sake, to ſhew thy Mercy upon me. Let the Brightneſs of thy Countenance ſhine upon us, that our Conſcience may be ſaved before the moſt higheſt. If the Enemy do perſecute my Soul, O Lady, help me that he deſtroy me not.

Manifeſt Idolatry.

Derogation of Chriſt's Paſſion.

11. In thee, O Lady, do I put my Truſt, &c. Seek her even from your Youth, and ſhe ſhall glorify you, &c. Her Mercy takes from us the Multitude of our Sins, and gives unto us Plenteouſneſs of Merits, &c.

13. How long doſt thou forget me, O Lady, and doſt not deliver me in the Day of my Trouble? How long ſhall mine Enemy triumph over me? With thy mighty Power deſtroy him, &c. We magnify thee the Finder and the Author of Grace, by whom the World is repaired, &c.

Yea rather bleſſed be they which hear the Word of God and keep it.

16. Preſerve me, O Lady, for in thee have I put my Truſt, &c. Bleſſed be thy Breaſts, which with thy deifying Milk didſt nouriſh the Saviour, &c.

18. I will love thee, O Lady of Heaven and Earth; I will call upon thy Name among the Nations. Confeſs yourſelves unto her, ye that are troubled in Heart, and ſhe ſhall ſtrengthen you againſt your Enemies, &c. All ye Cloyſterers honour her, for ſhe is your Helper and ſpecial Advocate. Be thou our Refreſhing and Reſt, for thou art the marvellous Foundation of all Religion.

20. Hear us O Lady in the Day of Trouble, &c. Caſt us not away in the Time of our Death, but ſuccour our Soul when it forſaketh the Body. Send an Angel to meet it, that it may be defended from the Enemies, &c. In Torments and Pains let it feel thy Comfort, and grant to it a Place among the Elect of God.

28. To thee, O Lady, &c. Have Mercy upon me in the Day of my Trouble, and in the Light of thy Truth deliver me, &c.

31. In thee, O Lady, do I put my Truſt, let me not be confounded for ever, in thy Glory receive me. Thou art my Strength and my Refuge, my Conſolation and Protection, &c. Deliver me from the Snare that they have laid for me, becauſe thou art my Helper. Into thy Hands I commend my Spirit, &c.

34. I will always praiſe our Lady, &c. In Perils, in Adverſity call upon her, and in Time of Need ye ſhall find Succour. Let her Converſation be an Example unto you, and follow the Virtue of her Humility. Becauſe therefore, O Lady, thou waſt humble and lowly. Thou didſt compel the Word increate to take Fleſh of thee.

Horrible Blaſphemy againſt the Lord.

36. The wicked Man ſaid, &c. Let him depart from his evil Purpoſe; O Mother of God, turn the Countenance of God towards us: Compel him to be merciful unto Sinners. Bleſſed be thy Power and Dominion in Heaven, and bleſſed be thy Magnificence upon the Earth.

Impious Blaſphemy.

45. My Heart is inditing a good Matter, O Lady, &c. By thy Holineſs let my Sins be purged, by thy Integrity let me obtain Incorruption, &c.

If Mary forgive Sins, then is our Faith in Chriſt in vain.

51. Have Mercy upon me, O Lady, which art called the Mother of Mercy, and in the Bowels of thy great Compaſſion cleanſe me from mine Iniquities.

71. In thee, Lady, have I put my Truſt: Let me not be confounded for ever, in thy Mercy deliver me, &c.

God's Honour derogated.

89. Thou that ruleſt Iſrael, &c. The Saviour of Life cometh from her, and all Health floweth out of her Heart, &c.

91. Whoſo dwelleth in the Help of the Mother of God, ſhall dwell in the Shadow of her Protection, &c. Cry unto her in your Dangers, and the Scourge ſhall not come near your Tabernacle. The Fruit of Grace ſhall be to him whoſo truſteth in her, and the Gate of Paradiſe ſhall be open unto him.

95. Come let us rejoioe to our Lady, &c. Receive our Souls at our laſt End, and bring them into everlaſting Reſt, &c.

105. Praiſe our Lady, and call upon her Name, &c. Everlaſting Salvation is in thy Hand, O Lady, &c.

The Devil and the Pope ſay ſo and not God.

110. The Lord ſaid unto our Lady; Sit here my Mother on my Right Hand, &c.

119. The whole Earth is full of thy Mercies, and therefore I will ſearch out the Way of thy Juſtifications, &c. I will covet for ever to praiſe thee, O Lady, when thou ſhall teach me thy Juſtifications, &c.

125. They that put their Truſt in thee, O Mother of God, ſhall not be afraid of the Face of their Enemy, &c.

128. Bleſſed is every one that feareth our Lady, and bleſſed be all they which know to do her Will, &c.

134. Behold and bleſs now our Lady, all ye that put your Truſt in her holy Name.

136. At the Floods of Babylon, &c. There is no Propitiation to be found without her, &c.

God's Office appointed to our Lady.

140. Deliver me, O Lady, from all Evil, and from the infernal Enemy defend me, &c.

145. Our Eyes look up and truſt in thee. Do thou ſend us Meat and Food convenient, &c. My Tongue ſhall ſpeak thy Praiſe, and ſhall bleſs thee for ever.

148. Praiſe thou our Lady, O Jeruſalem, and glorify her alſo O thou Sion: For ſhe buildeth up thy Walls, and bleſſed thy Children. Her Grace maketh thee fat, and giveth Peace unto thy Coaſt, &c.

I could recite alſo other Things of like Blaſ-phemy, following immediately after this Pſalter of our Lady, in the ſeraphical Doctor aforeſaid, as theſe:

Horrible Blaſphemy.

Behold my Lady my Saviour, I will be bold in thee, and will not fear, &c. Becauſe thou art my Strength, &c. And art become my Salvation, &c.

Rejoice, O all Mankind, becauſe the Lord thy God hath given unto thee ſuch a Mediatrix, &c.

The Scripture abuſed.

I will confeſs to thee, O Lady, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe Things from the Wiſe, and haſt revealed them to the little Ones.

O thou wicked and peeviſh Generation, acknowledge our Lady thy Saviour. Is not ſhe the Mother that hath poſſeſſed thee, and in Faith hath begotten thee?

O thou bleſſed, in thy Hands is laid up our Salvation, &c.

In thy Name let every Knee bend, in Heaven and Earth, and in Hell.

Like as an Infant cannot live without the Nurſe, ſo neither canſt thou have Salvation without our Lady.

Whoſo will be ſaved, before all Things he muſt needs hold this Belief of our Lady: Which Belief, unleſs every one ſhall hold perfect and found, he ſhall periſh without doubt for ever.

Moreover, after theſe ſo horrible Things and intolerable to be heard, conſequently in the next Tractation followeth the Roſary or Garland of our Lady, compiled by the ſaid Bonaventure; wherein theſe Words are to be read as followeth: O Mediatrix between God and Man, the Lord hath worthily magnified thee, that thou only ſhouldeſt conceive his Son. Wherefore, O good Mary our Mediatrix, Mother of Grace and Mother of Mercy, &c. And moreover, within few Lines it followeth in theſe Words, Therefore, O our Empreſs and Lady moſt bountiful, by the Authority of a Mother command, command (I ſay) thy well beloved Son, that he will ſtir up our Minds from the Love of worldly Things, to heavenly Deſires, &c.

The Roſary or Garland of our Lady called, Corona beatæ Mariæ.

Item, O the Advocate of the miſerable, the Eyes of thy Servants be directed to thee, &c.

To theſe Premiſſes, I might alſo adjoin the horrible and moſt blaſphemous Words of the ſaid Bonaventure in the ſaid Book, Fol. 100. Pag. 2. Col. 1. which I beſeech thee to read and note. What greater Goodneſs can be, than that Chriſt is content to be captive upon the Altar?

Whereupon he ſpeaketh in the Perſon of Jeremy, ſaying, Behold I am in your Hands, do with me as you ſee good, &c. Where note, ſaith he, that when any Duke or Prince is taken Priſoner for his Subjects, he is not let go, before he pay ſome great Ranſon. Even ſo neither we ought to let Chriſt go out of our Hands being our Priſoner and Captive, except he grant to us Remiſſion of our Sins and his heavenly Kingdom. The Prieſt therefore lifteth up the Body of Chriſt upon the Altar, as tho' he ſaid thus, Behold him whom the whole World is not able to comprehend, he is holden here our Captive, wherefore let us hold him faſt, and not let him go before we obtain of him our Requeſts, &c.

NOTES.

The Church of Rome examined.

Is not here good catholick Stuff (chriſtian Reader) think you? Confer I beſeech you this Doctrine with the Doctrine of the Apoſtles, which teach us that we are fully compleat in Chriſt, and I will refer me to no better Judge than to your own Conſcience. And now therefore, if any Man have been in doubt in Times paſt of the Doctrine and Proceeding of the Church of Rome, whether it be rightly charged with blind Errors, with Blaſphemy intolerable, and Idolatry abominable or not, here now he may be fully certified and reſolved. For where was ever Idolatry or Blaſphemy to be found, if it be not here in this Mattins and Pſalter of our Lady? If Idolatry be to make an Idol to be worſhipped as God, which is no God, what do we here but make an Idol of our Lady (as we call her) to be worſhipped with no leſs Dignity, Glory, Authority, Reverence, and Service, than is the Lord God himſelf? And as he is called our Lord, ſo ſhe is called our Lady. And if he be King, yet ſhe is the Queen of Heaven. And tho' he have the Name of God, yet ſhe beareth ſo the Title of the Mother of God; that as Mothers have Authority over their Children, ſo ſhe is willed to ſhew herſelf to be his Mother, to cauſe him to grant our Petitions. Finally if he be our Patron, yet ſhe is our Patroneſs. The Commandment ſaith, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. And what Worſhip or Service can we give to God, more than we do aſcribe unto her? And what Benefit is to be aſked at the Hands of Chriſt our Saviour, which is not equally aſk'd of her? To ſave our Souls, to give us Peace, to grant Grace, to comfort the Deſperate, to looſe our Captivity, to releaſe our Sins, to deliver from the Fiend, to bring to Heaven, &c. To her we pray, we cry, we weep, we ſigh, we groan, we knock and kneel, to her we truſt, and if we believe not alſo in our Lady, we be Hereticks ipſo facto. Anno 1555.

Our Lady made equal with God in the Church of Rome.

Furthermore, as Chriſt our only Lord and Saviour hath his Church and Congregation which profeſs his Name, of whom we are called Chriſtians; ſo neither is ſhe likewiſe without her Chappels, her Cloyſters, her Chapters, Fraternities, and Brotherhoods, which profeſſing her Name in like Sort, are called our Lady's Brethren, or white Friers, beſides an innumerable Sort of other Patrons of Churches, of whom every one hath his peculiar Church and Religion by himſelf, yet all theſe together be included under the general Devotion of our Lady their ſupreme Patroneſs and Governeſs.

Our Lady hath her Church as well as Chriſt.

Now to proceed further to the other Part of the Commandment, which ſaith, Him only ſhalt thou ſerve. What Service hath the Lord in all the Church, but our Lady alſo jointly with him hath the like? Her Maſs, her Mattins, her Even-ſong, her Roſaries, her Anthems, her Collects, her Primer, her Pſalter, her Holy-days likewiſe, yea five to one. Finally, as the Lord hath his Prayer called the Lord's-prayer, ſo hath ſhe her Ave Mary's, yea ten Ave's to one Pater noſter; yea, and read further in the ſaid Bonaventure, and ye ſhall ſee her alſo to have her Te Deum, her Benedictus, her Magnificat, and alſo her Quicunque vult.

If the Lord our God had not expreſſed unto us his own Will by plain Words, limiting unto us by expreſs Injunction what to believe, what to follow, and how to worſhip and ſerve him, and how to receive from him our Salvation; but had left us to the Imagination of our own Inventions, every Man to ſhift for himſelf after his own Policy, then peradventure this Way taken by the Pope's Church, to make Friends and Mediators between God and us, for Reconciliation, Remiſſion, and Salvation, might have ſome Rhime or Reaſon; but now God's Word doth bind us, doth preſcribe and limit us preciſely in every Point touching Salvation, what to believe, and what to do, ſhewing us plainly that we cannot be ſaved but by the Blood of his Son only, neither can be juſtified but by Faith only in the ſame

Anno 1555. Christ his Son: Wherefore not to believe that which he hath promised, is Infidelity, and to follow any other Belief than he hath set us, is plain Idolatry. Which two special Errors most commonly do follow the Doctrine of the Romish Church, as not only in this Primmer and Psalter of our Lady aforesaid, but also in all their Proceedings, Teachings and Preachings, besides may well appear. For where the Scripture doth perfectly promise and pronounce us to be justified through our Faith in Christ, and willeth us to seek our Salvation no where else, but only in the Merits of Jesus: The Institution of the Church of Rome neither will receive that God hath freely given, (wherein standeth Infidelity) neither yet will seek the same there where they should, but in the Merits and Prayers of our Lady, St. John Baptist, St. Peter and St. Paul, St. Andrew, St. Nicholas, St. Thomas of Canterbury, and by the Worthiness of the material Cross, and such other unlawful Means, wherein standeth plain Idolatry. And yet such Books as these can be suffered among the Catholicks to be current, as good, wholesome and lawful Books, whereas the others, which lead us the true Way from Infidelity and blind Idolatry to true Christianity, in no wise can be suffered. But of this to complain it is vain. Wherefore to pass from this Proclamation, let us proceed (God willing) in the Course of our History.

The Church of Rome charged with Infidelity and Idolatry.

The History of Thomas Osmond, William Bamford, and Thomas Osborne, &c.

MEntion was made before in the Story of Thomas Haukes, of six Prisoners besides, which were sent down with him to Essex the same Time as he went to Execution. Of which six Prisoners, three were sent to be burnt, the other three to recant, and to do penance: Of whom it followeth next to treat. The Names of which six were these, Thomas Osmond, Fuller; W. Bamford, alias Butler, Weaver; Thomas Osborne, Fuller; Nicholas Chamberlain, Weaver; Thomas Brodehill, Weaver; Richard Webb, Weaver; being all of the Town of Coxhall. All which Men, next after the Examinations of Thomas Haukes and Thomas Wats, were sent up to Bishop Bonner to be examined, by the Earl of Oxford and Sir Philip Paris Knight, a Letter also being sent with them, the Copy whereof here followeth.

The Earl of Oxford's Letter to Bishop Bonner.

AFTER our hearty Commendations unto your good Lordship, this shall be to advertize the same, that the Constables of Coxhall within your Dioceſs, have brought before us this Day six Persons dwelling in the Town of Coxhall aforesaid, whose Names do follow, to wit, Nicholas Chamberlain, Weaver; John Wallet, Fuller, Thomas Brodehill, Weaver; Richard Webb, Weaver; Wiliiam Bamford alias Butler, Weaver; and Thomas Osborne, Fuller; for that they at the Feast of Easter now last have not obeyed to the Order of the Holy catholick Church in receiving of the Sacraments, but obstinately refusing the same; besides of holding divers other Opinions contrary to the Faith of the said Church. Wherefore we have thought it good to send the same Persons unto your good Lordship further to be ordered, as in such Case shall appertain. Thus we commit your good Lordship to the keeping of Almighty God. From Hedingham, the first of May 1555.

Your Lordship's assuredly,

Oxford,

Philip Paris.

Then said Prisoners being sent up the First of May, were brought before the said Bishop the 17th of the said Month, to be examined upon divers and sundry Articles ministred and objected against them; whereunto they were compelled to answer and to put their Hands to the same: The Copy of which their Articles and Answers, being all in one Form and Effect (if the Register say true) here followeth.

Osmond Chamberlain and their Fellows brought before Bishop Bonner.

The Copy of the Articles objected against Thomas Osmond, William Bamford, and Nicholas Chamberlain.

FIRST, That thou Thomas Osmond Fuller, wast and art of the Parish of Coxhall, within the Dioceſs of London, and thou hast not believed nor dost believe, that there is here in the Earth one Catholick and Universal whole Church, which doth hold and believe all the Faith and Religion of Christ, and all the necessary Articles and Sacraments of the same.

2. Item, That thou hast not believed nor dost believe, that thou art necessarily bounden under the Pain of the Damnation of thy Soul, to give full Faith and Credence unto the said Catholick and Universal Church, and to the Faith and Religion of the same in all necessary Points of the said Faith and Religion, without doubting or wavering in the said Faith and Religion, or in any Part thereof.

The Pope's Church falsly termed by the Name of the Universal Church.

3. Item, That thou hast not believed that the Faith and Religion, which both the Church of Rome, Italy, Spain, England, France, Ireland, Scotland, and all other Churches in Europe, being true Members and Parts of the said Catholick and Universal Church, do believe and teach, is both agreeing with the Faith and Religion of Christ, and also is the very true Faith and Religion which all christian People ought to believe, observe, follow, and keep; but contrariwise, thou hast believed and dost believe, that that Faith and Religion which the said Church of Rome, and all the other Churches aforesaid, have heretofore believed, and do believe, is false, erroneous, and naught, and in no wise ought to be believed, observed, kept, and followed of any christian Person.

The Faith of the Romish Church not to be believed.

4. Item, That albeit it be true, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is in Substance the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Christ under the Forms of Bread and Wine; and albeit that it be so believed, taught and preached undoubtedly in the said Church of Rome, and all other Churches aforesaid, yet thou hast not so believed, nor dost so believe, but contrariwise, thou hast believed, and dost believe firmly and stedfastly, that there is not in the said Sacrament of the Altar, under the said Forms of Bread and Wine, the very Substance of Christ's Body and Blood, but that there is only the Substance of material and common Bread and Wine, with the Forms therof, and that the said material and common Bread and Wine are only the Signs and Tokens of Christ's Body and Blood, and are by Faith to be received only for a Remembrance

Anno 1555. of Chriſt's Paſſion and Death, without any ſuch Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood at all.

This Article not ſo put down as they meant it.

5. Item, That thou haſt believed and taught and haſt openly ſpoke and defended, and ſo doſt believe, think, maintain, and defend, that the very true receiving and eating of Chriſt's Body and Blood, is only to take material and common Bread, and to brake it and diſtribute it among the People, remembring thereby the Paſſion and Death of Chriſt only.

6. Item, That thou haſt likewiſe believed, thought, and ſpoken, that the Maſs, now uſed in the Realm of England, and other the Churches aforeſaid, is abominable and naught, and full of Idolatry, and is of the Ordinance of the Pope, and not of the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and hath no Goodneſs in it, ſaving the Gloria in Excelſis, the Epiſtle and Goſpel, and therefore thou haſt not, nor will not come and be preſent at Maſs, nor receive the Sacrament of the Altar, nor any other Sacrament of the Church, as they are now uſed in the Realm of England, &c.

Againſt auricular Confeſſion and Church Service.

7. Item, That thou haſt in Times paſt believed, and yet doſt now believe, that auricular Confeſſion is not neceſſary to be made unto the Prieſt, but is a Thing ſuperfluous, void, and naught, only to be made to God and to none other Perſon. And likewiſe thou haſt condemned as ſuperfluous, vain, and unprofitable, all the Ceremonies of the Church, and the Service of the ſame, and haſt ſaid that no Service in the Church ought to be ſaid but in the Engliſh Tongue, and if it be otherwiſe, it is unlawful and naught.

8. Item, That thou being notoriouſly and openly ſuſpected for an Heretick, and a Perſon culpable in the Premiſſes, waſt of late called and convented before the Earl of Oxford, and Mr. Philip Paris, and there was charged with the ſaid Hereſies, eſpecially againſt the Sacrament of the Altar. And becauſe thou didſt maintain and ſtand to thy ſaid Hereſies, and wouldſt not come to the Church and be confeſſed, and receive the ſaid Sacrament as other chriſtian People did, but utterly didſt refuſe to do the ſame, that waſt by the ſaid Earl of Oxford, and Mr. Philip Paris ſent up by a Conſtable unto me Biſhop of London, and waſt by them denounced, detected, and put up to me as an Heretick and miſbelieving Perſon.

9. Item, That thou haſt known and believed, thou doſt know and believe, or at leaſt thou haſt credibly heard, reported, ſpoken, and ſaid, that all and all Manner of Perſons, which do teach, preach, or hold any Thing concerning the Sacraments of the Church, or any the Articles of Faith, otherwiſe than is found already diſcuſſed and determined by our Mother the holy Church, or doth call into Doubt or Queſtion that Thing which is already decided or determined by the Church, or that willingly and wittingly do utter, openly or privily, any ſlanderous or blaſphemous Words concerning the ſaid Sacraments or any of them, or that do preach, teach, or keep any Sect or Kind of Hereſy againſt the wholſome Doctrine of the Church, and do wittingly, or obſtinately defend the Sect or Kind of Hereſy, are by the Canons of the whole and univerſal catholick Church, and alſo by the eccleſiaſtical Laws of this Church of England, by their ſo doing, accurſed with that Curſe, which doth ſeparate them from the Entry into the Church, from the receiving of the Sacraments, and from the Company of faithful People, and are (in continuing in this ſaid Sect and Hereſy) to be pronounced, declared, and taken for Hereticks, and to be delivered to the ſecular Power, and by the Laws temporal of this Realm of England, and the Cuſtom of the ſame, to be by the ſaid ſecular Power put to Death, and burnt for his ſaid Sect and Hereſy.

10. Item, That thou by reaſon of the Premiſſes waſt and art to be pronounced, taken, had, reputed, and judged for a manifeſt and open, wilful and obſtinate Heretick, for a wicked and curſed Perſon, and to be puniſhed accordingly for the ſame, according to the ſaid Canon Laws, Uſages, and Cuſtoms.

The Anſwers of Thomas Oſmond, W. Bamford, and Nicholas Chamberlain, to the aforeſaid Articles.

TO the Firſt they anſwered and confeſſed the ſame to be true, except that they do believe that there is here in Earth one catholick and whole Church, and that the ſame Church doth hold and believe, as is contained in this Article.

The Church of Rome not to be believed.

To the Second they anſwer and believe the ſaid Article not to be true; for they ſay that they have and do believe that they are neceſſarily bounden, under Pain of Damnation of their Soul, to give full Faith and Credence unto the ſaid catholick Church, and to the Faith and Religion of the ſame, in all neceſſary Points of the ſame Faith and Religion, without wavering or doubting in any Part thereof.

To the Third they anſwer, That the Church of Rome, and other Churches mentioned in this Article, be not true Members and Parts (as they be uſed in Faith and Religion) of the catholick Church of Chriſt, and that the Faith and Religion uſed in the ſaid Churches, is not agreeable with the Church of Chriſt, but are falſe and erroneous.

To the Fourth they anſwer and ſay, That howſoever the ſaid Churches of Rome and others of Chriſtendom have and do believe touching the Sacrament of the Altar, yet they do believe that in the Sacrament under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is not the very Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood, but that there is only the Subſtance of material Bread and Wine, and that the ſame material Bread and Wine be only the Signs and Tokens of Chriſt's Body and Blood, and are to be received only for a Remembrance of Chriſt's Paſſion and Death, without any Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood at all.

To the fifth Article they anſwer, that the true receiving and eating of Chriſt's Body, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, is to take, diſtribute, and eat material Bread, and thereby to remember the Paſſion and Death of Chriſt, and ſo receive by Faith (as they believe) Chriſt's Body and Blood, and not otherwiſe.

To the Sixth they anſwer, The ſame to be true in every Part thereof, except that over and beſides the Gloria in Excelſis, the Epiſtle and Goſpel, which they believe to be good, they believe the Pater noſter and Creed uſed in the Maſs, be alſo good.

Auricular Confeſſion not neceſſary.

To the Seventh they anſwer and confeſs, That auricular Confeſſion is not neceſſary to be made to the Prieſt; nevertheleſs they think that it is neceſſary to go to ſuch a Prieſt as is able to give good Counſel: And that for Counſel only, and not otherwiſe. And as concerning the Ceremonies of the Church, they anſwer the ſame to be vain and unprofitable. No Service in the Church

Anno 1555. ought to be ſaid, but only in the Engliſh Tongue.

To the Eighth, they anſwer and believe the ſame to be true in every Part thereof, except they do not believe that they be Hereticks, or ſuſpected of Hereſy.

To the Ninth Ofmond and Bamford anſwered, that they referred themſelves to the ſaid Laws mentioned in that Article; but Chamberlain made no Anſwer at all to this Article.

To the Tenth, the ſaid Ofmond and Bamford anſwered and ſaid, that by reaſon of their Belief before by them confeſſed, they are not to be reputed, taken or adjudged for wilful and obſtinate Hereticks, nor to be puniſhed therefore, as is declared in that Article. The other anſwered nothing.

Remarks upon the aforeſaid Articles.

THeſe Articles, in the ſame Form and Manner of Words, are commonly objected to all others that follow after, with the ſame Anſwers thereunto annexed. In which Articles thou may'ſt note, Reader, the crafty and ſubtle handling of theſe Lawyers and Regiſters, who ſo deceitfully frame their Articles and Poſitions, that unleſs a Man do adviſedly conſider them, it is hard for a ſimple Man to anſwer to them, but he ſhall be enſnared and entangled. So they paint their Church with ſuch a Viſage of Univerſal, Whole, Holy, Catholick, as who ſhould ſay, He that denieth Rome, denieth the holy Church of Chriſt here in Earth. Likewiſe in examining them, and eſpecially the ſimple Sort in the Matter of the Sacrament, to the material Bread in the Sacrament they put their Word [only] very captiouſly and fraudulently, to take them at the worſt Advantage, making the People believe that they take the holy Sacrament to be no better than only common Bread: When they do not ſo, but make a Difference between the ſame, both in the Uſe, Honour, and Name thereof.

The crafty and captious Dealing of the Papiſts in propounding their Articles.

Again, when the Examinates hold but only againſt the erroneous Points of Romiſh Religion, theſe Biſhops in their Interrogatories give out the Matter ſo generally, as tho' the ſaid Examinates in general ſpake againſt all the Articles of Faith taught in Rome, Spain, England, France, Scotland, &c.

Moreover, concerning Latin Service, in ſuch crafty Form of Words they propound their Article, that it might appear to the People theſe Men do deny any Service to be lawful in any Place, Country, or Language, but only in Engliſh.

And as theſe Articles are craftily, captiouſly and deceitfully in Form of Words deviſed by the Biſhops and their Notaries: So the Anſwers again to the ſame be no leſs ſubtilly framed, and after the moſt odious Manner put down in the Name of the Examinates, which being thus read unto them, without further Advice they were conſtrained upon a ſudden to ſubſcribe the ſame with their Hands. Whereby if any Word eſcaped their Hand, peradventure not conſiderately ſubſcribed; there the Papiſts take their Advantage againſt them, to defame them, and to bring them into Hatred with the People.

Theſe Articles thus propounded and anſwered, they were diſmiſſed till the Afternoon. At which Time they did again appear, and there were examined and perſuaded by fair and flattering Speeches, as well by the Biſhop as of others his Aſſiſtants. to recant and revoke their Opinions, who notwithſtanding remained conſtant and firm; and therefore, after the common Uſage of the eccleſiaſtical Laws, were ſent away again until the next Day, being Saturday, and the 18th of May. Then in the Forenoon the Biſhop uſing his accuſtomed Manner of Proceeding, which he had uſed before as well with them as with others, did likewiſe diſmiſs them, and at laſt in the Afternoon condemned them as Hereticks, and ſo delivered them to the Sheriffs, in whoſe Cuſtody they remained till they were delivered to the Sheriff of Eſſex, and by him were executed, Chamberlain at Colcheſter, the 14th of June; Thomas Ofmond at Mauingtree, the 15th of June; and William Bamford, alias Butler, at Harwich, the ſame 15th of June.

The Life and Acts of the worthy Martyr Mr. John Bradford.

MR. John Bradford was born at Mancheſter in Lancaſhire; his Parents brought him up in Learning from his Infancy, until he attained ſuch Knowledge in the Latin Tongue, and Skill in Writing, that he was able to gain his own Living in ſome honeſt Condition. Then he became Servant to Sir John Harrington, Knight, who in the great Affairs of King Henry the Eighth and King Edward the Sixth, which he had in hand when he was Treaſurer of the King's Camps and Buildings, at divers Times in Bullonois, had ſuch Experience of Mr. Bradford's Activity in Writing, his Expertneſs in the Art of Auditors, as alſo of his faithful Truſtineſs, that not only in thoſe Affairs, but in many others of his private Buſineſs he truſted Mr. Bradford before others.

The truſty Service of Mr. John Bradford under Sir John Harrington.

Mr. Bradford continued for ſeveral Years in an honeſt and thriving Way, after the Courſe of this World, if his Mind could have ſo liked, or had been given to the World as many others be. But the Lord which had elected him unto a better Function, and pre-ordained him to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt, called this his choſen Servant to the underſtanding and partaking of the ſame Goſpel of Life. In which Call he was ſo truly taught, that forthwith his effectual Call was perceived by the Fruits. For then he forſook his worldly Affairs and Forwardneſs in worldly Wealth, and, after the juſt Account given to his Maſter for all his Doings, he departed from him, and with marvellous Favour to further the Kingdom of God by the Miniſtry of his holy Word, he gave himſelf wholly to the Study of the holy Scriptures. And the better to accompliſh his Deſign, he departed from the Temple at London, and went to the Univerſity of Cambridge, to learn by God's Law how to further the Building of the Lord's Temple. In Cambridge his Diligence in Study, his profiting in Knowledge and pious Converſation ſo pleaſed all Men, that within a Year after he had been there, the Univerſity gave him the Degree of Maſter of Arts.

Mr. Bradford giveth himſelf to the Study of the Scriptures.

Immediately after, the Maſter and Fellows of Pembroke-hall gave him a Fellowſhip in their College with them; yea, that good Man Martin Bucer, ſo liked him, that he had him not only moſt dear unto him, but alſo oftentimes exhorted him to beſtow his Talent in Preaching. To which Mr. Bradford always anſwered, that he was unable to ſerve in that Office through Want of Learning. To which Bucer was wont to reply, ſaying, If thou have not fine manchet Bread, yet give the poor People Barley Bread, or whatſoever elſe the Lord hath committed unto thee. And while Mr. Bradford was thus perſuaded to enter into the Miniſtry, Dr. Ridley, that worthy Biſhop of London, and glorious Martyr of Chriſt, according to the Order that then was in the Church of England, called him to take the Degree of a Deacon. Which Order, becauſe it was not without ſome ſuch Abuſe, as to which Mr. Bradford would not conſent, and the Biſhop perceiving that he was willing to enter into the Miniſtry, was content to order him Deacon without any Abuſe, even as he deſired. This being done, he obtained for him a Licenſe to preach, and gave him a Prebend in his cathedral Church of St. Paul's.

He is made Maſter of Arts, and Fellow of Pembroke-hall.

Mr. John Bradford made Deacon by Biſhop Ridley.

John Bradford made Prebendary in St. Paul's and licenſed to preach.

In this preaching Office Mr. Bradford diligently laboured for the Space of three Years. Sharply he opened and reproved Sin, ſweetly he preached Chriſt crucified, pithily he diſproved Hereſies and Errors, and earneſty he perſuaded to godly Life. After the Death of bleſſed King Edward the Sixth, when Queen Mary had gotten the Crown, Mr. Bradford ſtill continued diligent in preaching, till he was unjuſtly deprived both of his Office and Liberty by the Queen and her Council. To the Doing whereof, becauſe they had no juſt Cauſe, they took Occaſion to do this Injury for ſuch an Act, as among Turks and Infidels would have been rewarded with Thankfulneſs, and with great Favour accepted, as indeed it did no leſs deſerve.

Mr. Bradford unjuſtly deprived of his Living and Preaching.

The Fact was this: The 13th of Auguſt, in the firſt Year of the Reign of Queen Mary, Mr. Bourne, then Biſhop of Bath, made a ſeditious Sermon at Paul's-Croſs in London, as partly is declared before, to ſet Popery abroad in ſuch Sort, that it moved the People to great Indignation, being almoſt ready to pull him out of the Pulpit. Neither could the Reverence of the Place, or the Preſence of Biſhop Bonner, who then was his Maſter, nor yet the Command of the Mayor of London, whom the People ought to have obeyed, ſtay their Rage: But the more they ſpake, the more the People were incenſed. At length Mr. Bourne ſeeing the People in ſuch a Mood, and himſelf in ſuch Peril (whereof he was ſufficiently warned by the hurling of a drawn Dagger at him as he ſtood in the Pulpit) and that he was hindred from ending his Sermon, he deſired Mr. Bradford, who ſtood in the Pulpit behind him, to come forth, and to ſtand in his Place and ſpeak to the People. Good Bradford at his Requeſt was content, and there ſpake to the People of godly and quiet Obedience. Whom as ſoon as the People ſaw to begin to ſpeak unto them, ſo glad they were to hear him, that they cried with a great Shout; Bradford, Bradford, God ſave thy Life Bradford: Well declaring not only what Affection they bare unto him, but alſo what Regard they gave unto his Words. For after he had entred a little to preach unto them, and to exhort them to Quiet and Patience, the Tumult ſoon ceaſed, and in the End each Man departed quietly to his Houſe. Yet in the mean Seaſon (for it was a long Time before ſo great a Multitude could all depart) Mr. Bourne thought, and truly, himſelf not yet full ſure of his Life till he were ſafely houſed, notwithſtanding that the Mayor and Sheriffs of London were there at hand to help him: Wherefore he deſired Mr. Bradford not to depart from him till he were in Safety: Which Mr. Bradford according to his Promiſe performed. For while the Mayor and Sheriffs did lead Mr. Bourne to the School-maſter's Houſe, which is next to the Pulpit, Mr. Bradford went at his Back, ſhadowing him from the People with his Gown, and ſo ſet him ſafe.

Mr. Bradford appeaſeth the Rage of the People and guardeth the popiſh Preacher.

Mr. Bradford procureth Mr. Bourne's Safety.

Anno 1555.

Let the Reader now conſider the Peril of Mr. Bourne, the Charity of Mr. Bradford, and the Headineſs of the Multitude, and alſo the grudging Minds of ſome, who yet ſtill there remained behind, greatly grieved in their Minds, to ſee that ſo good a Man ſhould ſave the Life of ſuch a popiſh Prieſt, ſo impudently and openly railing againſt King Edward. Among whom one Gentleman ſaid theſe Words: Ah Bradford, Bradford, thou ſaveſt him that will burn thee. I give thee his Life: If it were not for thee, I would, I aſſure thee, run him through with my Sword. Thus Bourne for that Time, through Bradford's Means, eſcaped bodily Death: But God hath his Judgment to be ſhewed in the Time appointed.

The ſame Sunday in the Afternoon Mr. Bradford preached at Bow Church in Cheapſide, and reproved the People ſharply for their ſeditious Miſdemeanour. After this he abode ſtill in London with an innocent Conſcience, to try what would come of his juſt Doing.

Mr. Bradford reproveth the People for the Tumult at Paul's-Croſs.

Within three Days after he was ſent for to the Tower of London, where the Queen then was, to appear before the Council. There was he charged with this Act of ſaving of Bourne, which Act they there called ſeditious, and alſo objected againſt him for preaching, and ſo by them he was committed firſt to the Tower, then unto other Priſons, out of which neither his Innocency, Piety, nor charitable Dealing could purchaſe to him Liberty of Body, till by Death (which he ſuffered for Chriſt's Cauſe) he obtained the heavenly Liberty, of which neither Pope nor Papiſt ſhall ever deprive him. From the Tower he came to the King's-Bench in Southwark; and after his Condemnation, he was ſent to the Compter in the Poultry in London: In which two Places, for the Time he did remain Priſoner, he preached twice a Day continually, unleſs Sickneſs hindred him; where alſo the Sacrament was often adminiſtred; and through his Means (the Keepers ſo well did bear with him) ſuch Reſort of good Folks were daily at his Lecture, and the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament, that commonly his Chamber was well nigh filled therewith. Preaching, Reading, and Praying, was all his whole Life. He did not eat above one Meal a Day, which was but very little when he took it; and his continual Study was upon his Knees. In the Midſt of Dinner he uſed often to muſe with himſelf, having his Hat over his Eyes, from whence came commonly plenty of Tears. Very gentle he was to Man and Child, and in ſo good Credit with his Keeper, that at his Deſire in an Evening (being Priſoner in the King's-Bench in Southwark) he had Licence, upon his Promiſe to return again that Night, to go into London without any Keeper, to viſit one that was ſick, lying by the Still-yard. Neither did he fail his Promiſe, but returned to his Priſon again, rather preventing his Hour, than breaking his Fidelity; ſo conſtant was he in Word and in Deed.

Mr. Bradford charged with Sedition for ſaving the Preacher.

Mr. Bradford preacheth and miniſtreth the Sacrament in Priſon.

Of Perſonage he was ſomewhat tall and ſlender, ſpare of Body, of a faint ſanguine Colour, with a dark brown Beard. He ſlept not commonly above four Hours in the Night; and in his Bed, till Sleep came, his Book went not out of his Hand. His chief Recreation was in no

The Deſcription of Mr. Bradford.

Anno 1555. Gaming or other Paſtime, but only in honeſt Company and comely Talk, wherein he would ſpend a little Time after Dinner at the Table, and ſo to Prayer and his Book again. He counted that Hour not well ſpent, wherein he did not ſome Good, either with his Pen, Study, or in exhorting of others, &c. He was no niggard in his Purſe, but would liberally participate that he had to his Fellow-Priſoners. And commonly once a Week he viſited the Thieves, Pick-purſes, and ſuch others that were with him in Priſon where he lay on the other Side, unto whom he would give pious Exhortation, to learn the Amendment of their Lives by their Trouble, and after that ſo done, diſtribute among them ſome Portion of Money to their Comfort.

The Meeting and Conference between Mr. Saunders and Mr. Bradford.

By the Way, this I thought not to conceal. While he was in the King's-Bench, and Mr. Saunders in the Marſhalſea both Priſoners, on the Backſide of thoſe two Priſons they met many Times, and conferred together when they would; ſo mercifully did the Lord work for them, even in the midſt of their Trouble: And the ſaid Bradford was ſo truſted by his Keeper, and had ſuch Liberty in the Backſide, that there was no Day, but that he might have eaſily eſcaped away, if he would, but that the Lord had another Work to do for him. In the Summer Time, while he was in the ſaid King's-Bench, he had Liberty of his Keeper to ride into Oxfordſhire, to a Merchant's Houſe of his Acquaintance, and Horſe and all Things prepared for him for that Journey, and the Party in Readineſs that ſhould ride with him; but God prevented him by Sickneſs that he went not at all.

One of his old Friends and Acquaintance came unto him whilſt he was Priſoner, and aſked him, if he ſued to get him out, what then he would do, or whether he would go? Unto whom he made Anſwer, as not caring whether he went out or no; but if he did, he ſaid he would marry, and abide ſtill in England ſecretly, teaching the People as the Time would ſuffer him, and occupy himſelf that way. He was had in ſo great Reverence and Admiration with all good Men, that a Multitude, which never knew him but by Fame, greatly lamented his Death: Yea, and a Number alſo of the Papiſts themſelves wiſhed heartily his Life.

The Night before he was had to Newgate, which was the Saturday Night, he was ſore troubled divers Times in his ſleep by Dreams, how the Chain for his burning was brought to the Compter Gate, and how the next Day being Sunday he ſhould be had to Newgate, and on the Monday after burned in Smithfield, as indeed came to paſs accordingly, as ſhall hereafter be ſhewed. Now he being vexed oftentimes in this ſort with theſe Dreams, about three of the Clock in the Clock in the Morning he awaked him that lay with him, and told him his unquiet ſleep, and what he was troubled withal. Then after a little Talk, Mr. Bradford roſe out of the Bed, and gave himſelf to his old Exerciſe of Reading and Prayer, as always he had uſed before: And at Dinner according to his accuſtomed Manner he did eat his Meat, and was very merry, no Body being with him from Morning till Night but he that lay with him, with whom he had many times on that Day Communication of Death, of the Kingdom of Heaven, and of the Ripeneſs of Sin in that Time.

In the Afternoon they two walking together in the Keeper's Chamber, ſuddenly the Keeper's Wife came up, as one half amazed, and ſeeming much troubled, being almoſt out of Breath, ſaid, Oh Mr. Bradford, I come to bring you heavy News. What is that, ſaid he? Marry, quoth ſhe, to Morrow you muſt be burned; and your Chain is now a buying, and you muſt ſoon go to Newgate. With that Mr. Bradford put off his Cap, and lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, ſaid, I thank God for it; I have looked for the ſame a long Time, and therefore it cometh not now to me ſuddenly, but as a Thing waited for every every Day and Hour, the Lord make me worthy thereof. And ſo thanking her for her Gentleneſs, departed up into his Chamber, and called his Friend with him, who when he came thither, he went ſecretly himſelf alone a long Time, and prayed; which done, he came again to him that was in his Chamber, and took divers Writings and Papers, and ſhewed him his Mind in thoſe Things what he would have done, and after they had thus ſpent the Afternoon, at Night half a Dozen of his Friends came to him, with whom he ſpent all the Evening in Prayer and other good Exerciſes.

Mr. Bradford hath Notice of his burning.

A little before he went out of the Compter, he made a notable Prayer of his Farewel, with ſuch plenty of Tears, and abundant Spirit of Prayer, that it raviſhed the Minds of the Hearers. Alſo when he ſhifted himſelf with a clean Shirt that was made for his burning (by Mr. Waltar Marlar's Wife, who was a good Nurſe to him, and his very good Friend) he made ſuch a Prayer of the Wedding-garment, that ſome of thoſe that were preſent were in ſuch great Admiration, that their Eyes were as thoroughly occupied in looking on him, as their Ears gave place to hear his Prayer. At his departing out of his Chamber, he made likewiſe a Prayer, and gave Money to every Servant and Officer in the Houſe, with Exhortation to them to fear and ſerve God, continually labouring to eſchew all manner of Evil. Then being beneath in the Court, all the Priſoners cried out to him and bid him farewel, as the reſt of the Houſe had done before with weeping Tears.

The Priſoners take their Leave of Mr. Bradford with Tears.

The Time they carried him to Newgate was about 11 or 12 a Clock in the Night, when it was thought none would be ſtirring Abroad; and yet contrary to their Expectation, there was in Cheapſide and other Places (between the Compter and Newgate) a great Multitude of People that came to ſee him, who moſt gently bad him farewel, praying for him with moſt lamentable and pitiful Tears; and he again as gently bade them farewel, praying moſt heartily for them and their Welfare. Now whether it were a Command from the Queen and her Council, or from Bonner and his Adherents, or whether it were merrily deviſed by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London, or no, I cannot tell; but a great Noiſe there was over Night about the City by ſeveral, that Mr. Bradford ſhould be burnt the next Day in Smithfield, by Four of the Clock in the Morning, before it ſhould be greatly known to any. In which Rumour many Heads had divers Minds; ſome thinking the Fear of the People to be the Cauſe thereof: Others thought, that it was becauſe the Papiſts judged his Death would convert many to the Truth, and give a great Overthrow to their Kingdom. So ſome thought one thing, and ſome another, that no juſt Conjecture of the Cauſe could be known that ever I heard yet. But this was certain, the People prevented the Device ſuſpected; for the next Day, at the ſaid Hour of Four a Clock in the Morning, there was in Smithfield ſuch a Multitude of Men and Women, that many being in Admiration thereat, thought it was not poſſible that they could have Notice of his Death, being ſo great a Number in ſuch ſhort Time, unleſs it were by the ſingular Providence of Almighty God.

was

Mr. Bradford going to Smithfield.

Well, this took not Effect as the People thought, for it was nine a Clock in the Morning before Mr. Bradford was brought, into Smithfield; who in going through Newgate thitherward, eſpied a Friend of his whom he loved, ſtanding on one ſide the Way, unto whom he reached his Hand over the People, and plucked him to him, and delivered to him from his Head his Velvet Night-cap, and alſo his Handkerchief, with other Things. And after a little private Talk with him, they parted, when immediately came to him a Brother-in-law of his, called Roger Beſwick, who as ſoon as he had taken the ſaid Mr. Bradford by the Hand, one of the Sheriffs of London, Mr. Woodroſe, came with his Staff and brake the ſaid Roger Beſwick's Head, that the Blood ran about his Shoulders. Which Sight Mr. Bradford beholding with Grief, bade his Brother farewel, deſiring him to commend him to his Mother, and the reſt of his Friends, and ſpeedily to go to ſome Surgeon; ſo they parting, had little or no talk together. Then was he led forth to Smithfield, with a great Company of armed Men to guard him thither, as the like was not ſeen at any Man's burning: For in every Corner of Smithfield there were ſome, beſides thoſe that ſtood about the Stake. Mr. Bradford being come to the Place, fell flat to the Ground, ſecretly making his Prayers to Almighty God. Then riſing again, and putting off his Cloaths unto his Shirt, he went to the Stake, and there ſuffered with a young Man of twenty Years of Age, joyfully and conſtantly, whoſe Name was John Leaf. Concerning the Manner and Order of whoſe burning, more ſhall be ſaid (God willing) hereafter. In the mean Time we will ſhew forth the ſundry Examinations, Conflicts, and Conferences between him and his Adverſaries during the Time of his Impriſonment, which was in all two Years lacking one Month and a Half. Which Examinations here follow.

Mr. Woodroſe breaketh the Head of Mr. Bradford's Brother-in-law.

Mr. Bradford almoſt two Years in Priſon.

It was a little above declared, that John Bradford, within three Days after the Sermon of Mr. Bourne, was by Order of the Council committed to the Tower, where he remained from the Month of Auguſt 1553, to the 22d of January 1555. upon which Day he was called out to Examination before Stephen Biſhop of Wincheſter and other Commiſſioners. The Effect of which Examination and Communication which paſſed between him and them, proceeded in Manner as followeth.

Talk between Mr. Bradford and the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Aftar the Lord Chancellor, and the reſt of the Queen's Council in Commiſſion with him, had ended their Talk with Mr. Farrar late Biſhop of St. David's, the Under-marſhal of the King's-Bench was commanded to bring in John Bradford: Who being come into the Preſence of the Council ſitting at a Table, kneeled down on his Knee, but the Lord Chancellor immediately commanded him to ſtand up, and ſo he did.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter's Words to Mr. Bradford.

When he was riſen, the Lord Chancellor ſpake thus to him in effect; That he had been a long Time juſtly impriſoned for his ſeditious Behaviour at Paul's-croſs, the 13th of Auguſt, in the Year 1553. for his falſe Preaching and Arrogancy, taking upon him to preach without Authority. But now, quoth he. the Time of Mercy is come, and therefore the Queen's Highneſs, minding to offer unto you Mercy, hath by us ſent for you, to declare and give the ſame, if ſo be ye will with us return: And if you will do as we have done, you ſhall find as we have found, I warrant you. This was the Sum of his Words, and in Manner the ſame Words which he ſpake.

Mr. Bradford's Anſwer.

To theſe Words John Bradford ſpake (after reverent Obeiſance made) in this Manner: My Lord and Lords all, I confeſs that I have been long impriſoned, and (with humble Reverence be it ſpoken) unjuſtly, for that I did nothing ſeditiouſly, falſely, or arrogantly, in Word or Fact, by Preaching or otherwiſe, but rather ſought Truth, Peace, and all godly Quietneſs, as an obedient and faithful Subject both in going about to ſave the Biſhop of Bath now, then Mr. Bourne, the Preacher at the Croſs, and in preaching for Quietneſs accordingly.

At theſe Words, or rather before he had fully finiſhed, the ſaid Lord Chancellor ſomething ſnuffed, and ſpake with an Admiration, that there was a loud Lye: For, ſaid he, the Fact was ſeditious, as you my Lord of London can bear Witneſs.

Bonner witneſſeth with Wincheſter againſt Bradford.

Bonner. You ſay true my Lord; I ſaw him with mine own Eyes, when he took upon him to rule and lead the People impudently, thereby declaring that he was the Author of the Sedition.

Brad. My Lords, notwithſtanding my Lord Biſhops's ſeeing and ſaying, yet the Truth I have told, as one Day my Lord God Almighty ſhall reveal to all the World, when we ſhall all come and appear before him: In the mean Seaſon, becauſe I cannot be believed by you, I muſt and am ready to ſuffer, as now your Sayings be, whatſoever God ſhall licenſe you to do unto me.

Lord Chan. I know thou haſt a glorious Tongue, and goodly Shews thou makeſt; but all is Lies thou ſpeakeſt. And again, I have not forgot how ſtubborn thou waſt when thou waſt before us in the Tower*, whereupon thou waſt committed to Priſon concerning Religion: I have not forgotten thy Behaviour and Talk, for which Cauſe thou haſt been kept in Priſon, as one that would have done more hurt than I will ſpeak of.

* This Conference of Mr. Bradford's in the Tower, came not to our Hands.

Brad. My Lord, as I ſaid I ſay again, that I ſtand as before you, ſo before God, and one Day we ſhall all ſtand before him: The Truth then will be the Truth, tho' now ye will not ſo take it. Yea, my Lord, I dare ſay, that my Lord of Bath, Mr. Bourne, will witneſs with me, that I ſought his Safeguard with the Peril of mine own Life, I thank God therefore.

Bonner. That is not true: For I myſelf did ſee thee take upon thee too much.

Brad. No, I took nothing upon me undeſired, and that of Mr. Bourne himſelf, as, if he were here preſent, I dare ſay he would affirm. For he deſired me both to help him, to pacify the People, and alſo not to leave him till he was in Safety. And as for my Behaviour in the Tower, and Talk before your Honours, if I did or ſaid any thing that did not beſeem me, if your Lordſhips would tell me wherein it was, I ſhould and would ſhortly make you anſwer.

Lord Chan. Well, to leave this Matter: How ſay'ſt thou now? wilt thou return again, and do as we have done, and thou ſhalt receive the Queen's Mercy and Pardon?

Brad. My Lord, I deſire Mercy with God's Mercy, but Mercy with God's Wrath, God keep me from: Altho' (I thank God therefore) my Conſcience doth not accuſe, that I did ſpeak any Thing why I ſhould need to receive the Queen's Mercy or Pardon. For all that ever Anno 1555. I did or ſpake, was both agreeable to God's Laws, and the Laws of the Realm at that preſent, and did make much to Quietneſs.

Lord Chan. Well, if thou make this babbling rolling in thy eloquent Tongue, and yet being altogether ignorant and vain-glorious, and wilt not receive Mercy offered to thee, know for truth, that the Queen is minded to make a * Purgation of all ſuch as thou art.

* That is the worſt you and your Pope can do, and the beſt Argument you have.

Brad. The Lord before whom I ſtand, as well as before you, knoweth what vain-glory I have ſought, and ſeek in this Behalf: His Mercy I deſire, and alſo would be glad of the Queen's Favour, to live as a Subject without a Clog of Conſcience. But otherwiſe the Lord's Mercy is better to me than Life. And I know to whom I have committed my Life, even into his Hands which will keep it, ſo that no Man may take it away before it be his Pleaſure. There are twelve Hours in the Day, and as long as they laſt, ſo long ſhall no Man have Power thereon. Therefore his good Will be done; Life in his Diſpleaſure is worſe than Death, and Death with his true Favour, is true Life.

The Lord's Mercy is better than Life to Mr. Bradford.

Lord Chan. I know well enough, that we ſhall have glorious Talk enough of thee: Be ſure, that as thou haſt deceived the People with falſe and deviliſh Doctrine, ſo ſhalt thou receive.

Brad. I have not deceived the People, nor taught any other Doctrine, than by God's Grace I am, and hope ſhall be ready to confirm with my Life. And as for the Devilliſhneſs and Falſeneſs in the Doctrine, I would be ſorry you could ſo prove it.

Durham. Why, tell me, what ſay you by the Miniſtration of the Communion, as now you know it is?

Brad. My Lord, here I muſt deſire of your Lordſhip and of all your Honours a Queſtion, before I dare make you an Anſwer to any Interrogatory or Queſtion, wherewith you now begin. I have been ſix times ſworn that I ſhall in no Caſe conſent to the practiſing of any Juriſdiction, or any Authority on the Biſhop of Rome's Behalf within this Realm of England. Now, before God, I humbly pray your Honours to tell me whether you aſk me this Queſtion by his Authority, or no? If you do, I dare not, nor may anſwer you any thing in his Authority, which you ſhall demand of me, except I would be forſworn, which God forbid.

Mr. Bradford ſix times ſworn againſt the Pope.

Secretary Bourne. Haſt thou been ſworn ſix Times? what Office haſt thou born?

Brad. Forſooth I was thrice ſworn in Cambridge, when I was admitted Maſter of Arts, when I was admitted Fellow of Pembroke-hall, and when I was there, the Viſitors came thither, and ſware the Univerſity. Again, I was ſworn when I entred into the Miniſtry, when I had a Prebend given me, and when I was ſworn to ſerve the King a little before his Death.

Lord Chan. Tuſh, Herod's Oaths a Man ſhould make no Conſcience at.

Brad. But my Lord, theſe were no Herod's Oaths, no unlawful Oaths, but Oaths according to God's Word, as you yourſelf have well affirmed in your Book De vera Obedientia.

Mr. Roch. My Lords (ſaid another of the Council that ſtood by the Table, Mr. Rocheſter I think) I never knew wherefore this Man was in Priſon before now: But I ſee well that it had not been good that this Man had been Abroad: What the Cauſe was that he was put in Priſon, I know not; but I now well know that not without a Cauſe he was, and is to be kept in Priſon.

Sec. Bourne. Yea, it was reported this Parliament Time by the Earl of Derby, that he hath done more Hurt by Letters, and exhorting thoſe that have come to him in Religion, than ever he did when he was Abroad by preaching. In his Letters he curſeth all that teach any falſe Doctrine (for ſo he calleth that which is not according to that he taught) and moſt heartily exhorteth them to whom he writeth to continue ſtill in that they have received by him, and ſuch like as he is. All which Words ſeveral of the Council affirmed. Whereunto the ſaid Mr. Bourne added, ſaying, How ſay you Sir, have you not thus ſeditiouſly written and exhorted the People?

The Earl of Derby's complaint againſt Mr. Bradford.

This Letter was written to his Mother, Brethren, and Siſters, and followeth hereafter.

Brad. I have not written, nor ſpoken any thing ſeditiouſly, neither (I thank God therefore) have I admitted any ſeditious Thought, nor I truſt ever ſhall do.

Mr. Bradford falſly charged with Sedition.

Sec. Bourne. Yea, thou haſt written Letters.

Lord Chan. Why ſpeakeſt thou not? Haſt thou not written as he ſaith?

Brad. That I have written, I have written.

Southwell. Lord God, what an arrogant and ſtubborn Boy is this, that thus ſtoutly and dallying behaveth himſelf before the Queen's Council? Whereat one looked upon another with diſdainful Countenances.

Brad. My Lords and Maſters, the Lord God which is, and will be Judge to us all, knoweth, that as I am certain I ſtand now before his Majeſty; ſo with Reverence in his Sight I ſtand before you, and unto you accordingly in Words and Geſture I deſire to behave myſelf. If you otherwiſe take it, I doubt not but God in his Time will reveal it: In the mean Seaſon, I ſhall ſuffer with all due Obedience your Sayings and Doings too, I hope.

Lord Chan. Theſe be gay and glorious Words of Reverence, but as in all other Things, ſo herein alſo thou doeſt nothing but lye.

All is Lies that pleaſeth not Winchester.

Brad. Well, I would God the Author of Truth, and Abhorrer of Lyes, would pull my Tongue out of my Head before you all, and ſhew a terrible Judgment on me here preſent, if I have purpoſed, or do purpoſe to lye before you, whatſoever you ſhall aſk me.

Lord Chan. Why then doeſt thou not anſwer? Haſt thou written ſuch Letters as here is objected againſt thee?

Brad. As I ſaid, my Lord, that I have written, I have written, I ſtand now before you, which either can lay my Letters to my Charge, or no: If you lay any Thing to my Charge that I have written, if I deny it, I am then a Liar.

Lord Chan. We ſhall never have done with thee, I perceive now: Be ſhort, be ſhort, wilt thou have Mercy?

Brad. I pray God give me his Mercy, and if therewith you will extend yours, I will not refuſe it, but otherwiſe I will have none.

Here now was much ado, one ſpeaking this, and another that of his Arrogancy, in refuſing the Queen's Pardon, which ſhe ſo lovingly did offer unto him: Whereto Mr. Bradford anſwered thus:

My Lords, if I may live as a quiet Subject without Clog of Conſcience, I ſhall heartily thank you for your Pardon; if otherwiſe I behave myſelf, then I am in Danger of the Law: In the mean Seaſon I aſk no more than the Benefit of a Subject till I be convinced of Tranſgreſſion. If I cannot have this, as hitherto I have not had, God's good Will be done.

Upon theſe Words my Lord Chancellor began a long Proceſs of the falſe Doctrine wherewith the People were deceived in the Days of King Edward, and ſo turned the End of his Talk to Bradford, ſaying: How ſay'ſt thou?

Brad. My Lord, the Doctrine taught in King Edward's Days was God's pure Religion: Which as I then believed, ſo do I now more believe it than ever I did, and therein I am more confirmed, and ready to declare it by God's Grace even as he will, to the World, than I was when I firſt came into Priſon.

Durham. What Religion mean you in King Edward's Days? What Year of his Reign?

Brad. Forſooth even the ſame Year my Lord, that the King died, and I was a Preacher. Here wrote Secretary Bourne I know not what.

Now after a little pauſing, my Lord Chancellor beginneth again to declare, that the Doctrine taught in King Edward's Days was Hereſy, uſing for Probation and Demonſtration thereof no Scripture nor Reaſon, but this; that it ended with Treaſon and Rebellion, ſo that, ſaid he, the very End were enough to prove that Doctrine to be naught.

Brad. Ah my Lord, that you could enter in God's Sanctuary, and mark the End of this preſent Doctrine that you now ſo magnify.

Lord Chan. What meaneſt thou by that? I am of Opinion we ſhall have a Snatch of Rebellion even now.

Brad. My Lord, I mean no ſuch End as you would gather: I mean an End which no Man ſeeth, but ſuch as enter into God's Sanctuary. If a Man look on preſent Things he will ſoon deceive himſelf.

The Queen's Mercy again offered to Mr. Bradford.

Here my Lord Chancellor again offer'd Mercy, and Bradford anſwered as before: Mercy with God's Mercy ſhould be welcome, but otherwiſe he would have none. Whereupon the Lord Chancellor rang a little Bell, belike to call in ſome Body: For there were few preſent beſides thoſe beforenamed, and the Biſhop of Worceſter. Now when one was come in; it is beſt, ſaid Mr. Secretary Bourne, that you give the Keeper a Charge of this Fellow. So the under Marſhal was called in.

Lord Chan. Ye ſhall take this Man to you, and keep him cloſe without Conference with any Man, but by your Knowledge, and ſuffer him not to write any Letters, &c. for he is of another Manner of Charge to you now than he was before. And ſo they departed, Bradford looking as cheerfully as any Man could do, declaring thereby even a Deſire to give his Life for the Confirmation of his Faith and Doctrine.

The ſecond Examination of John Bradford in St. Mary Overies Church, before the Lord Chancellor and other Biſhops, January 29, 1555.

AFTER the Excommunication of John Rogers, John Bradford was called in; and ſtanding before the Lord Chancellor and other Biſhops ſet with him, the ſaid Lord Chancellor ſpake thus in Effect.

Lord Chan. Whereas before the 22d of January the ſaid Bradford was called before them, ſaid he, and they offered unto him the Queen's Pardon, although he had contemned the ſame; and further ſaid, that he would ſtiffly and ſtoutly maintain and defend the erroneous Doctrine taught in the Days of King Edward VI. yet in conſideration that the Queen's Highneſs was wonderful merciful, they thought good to offer the ſame Mercy again, before it was too late: Threfore adviſe you well, ſaid he, there is yet Space and Grace before we ſo proceed, that you be committed to the ſecular Power, as we muſt and will do, if you will not follow the Example of Mr. Barlow and Mr. Cardmaker, whom he there commended, adding many Arguments to move the ſaid Bradford to yield to the Religion then ſet forth. Anno 1555.

After the Lord Chancellor's long Talk, Mr. Bradford began to ſpeak on this Sort: My Lord and my Lords all, as now I ſtand in your Sight before you, ſo I humbly beſeech your Honours to conſider, that you ſit in the Seat of the Lord, who (as David doth witneſs) is in the Congregation of Judges, and ſitteth in the Midſt of them judging: And as you would have your Place to be by us taken as God's Place, ſo demonſtrate yourſelves to follow him in your Sitting, that is, ſeek no guiltleſs Blood, nor hunt not by Queſtions to bring into the Snare them which are out of the ſame. At this preſent I ſtand before you guilty or guiltleſs, then proceed and give Sentence accordingly: If guiltleſs, then give me the Benefit of a Subject, which hitherto I could not have.

Here the Lord Chancellor replied, and ſaid, that the ſaid Bradford began with a true Sentence, Deus ſtetit in Synagoga, &c. But, ſaid he, this and all thy Geſture declareth but Hypocrify and Vain-glory. And further he endeavoured to clear himſelf, that he ſought not guiltleſs Blood, and ſo began a long Proceſs how that Bradford's Fact at Paul's-Croſs was preſumptuous, arrogant, and declared a taking upon him to lead the People, which could not but turn to much Diſquietneſs, in that thou (ſpeaking to Bradford) was ſo refractory and ſtout in Religion at that preſent. For which, as thou wert then committed to Priſon, ſo hitherto thou haſt been kept in Priſon, where thou haſt written Letters to the great Hurt of the Queen's Subjects, as was credibly declared by the Earl of Derby in the Parliament-Houſe. And to this he added, that the ſaid Bradford did ſtubbornly behave himſelf the laſt Time he was before them: And therefore not for any other Thing now I demand of thee, ſaid he, but of and for thy Doctrine and Religion.

The Witneſs of the Earl of Derby laid againſt Mr. Bradford.

Brad. My Lord, where you accuſe me of Hypocriſy and Vain-glory, I muſt and will leave it to the Lord's Declaration, who will one Day open yours and my Truth and hearty Meanings: In the mean Seaſon, I will content myſelf with the Teſtimony of mine own Conſcience, which if it yield to Hypocriſy, could not but have God to be my Foe alſo; and ſo both God and Man were againſt me. And as for my Fact at Paul's-Croſs, and Behaviour before you at the Tower, I doubt not but God will reveal it to my Comfort. For if ever I did any Thing which God uſed to publick Benefit, I think that my Deed was one, and yet for it I have been and am kept a long Time in Priſon. And as for Letters and Religion, I anſwer as I did the laſt Time I was before you.

Mr. Bradford defendeth his Fact at Paul's-Croſs.

Lord Chan. There didſt thou ſay ſtubbornly and ſaucily, that thou wouldſt manly maintain the erroneous Doctrine in King Edward's Days.

Brad. My Lord, I ſaid the laſt Time I was before you, that I had ſix Times taken an Oath, that I ſhould never conſent to the practiſing of any Juriſdiction on the Biſhop of Rome's Behalf, and therefore durſt I not anſwer to any Thing that ſhould be ſo demanded, leſt I ſhould be forſworn, which God forbid. Howbeit, ſaving mine Oath, I ſaid that I was more confirmed in Anno 1555. the Doctrine ſet forth publickly in the Days of King Edward, than ever I was before I was put in Priſon: And ſo I thought I ſhould be, and think yet ſtill I ſhall be found more ready to give my Life as God will, for the Confirmation of the ſame.

Biſhop Gardiner maketh but a ſmall Matter of an Oath.

Lord Chan. I remember well that thou madeſt much ado about needleſs Matter, as though the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome was ſo great a Matter. So others have done before thee, but yet not in ſuch Sort as thou haſt done: For thou pretendeſt a Conſcience in it, which is nothing elſe but mere Hypocriſy.

Brad. My Conſcience is known to the Lord: And whether I deal herein hypocritically or no, he knoweth. As I ſaid therefore then my Lord, ſo I ſay again now: That for fear leſt I ſhould be perjured, I dare not make Anſwer to any Thing you ſhall demand of me, if my Anſwering ſhould conſent to the confirming or practiſing of any Juriſdiction for the Biſhop of Rome here in England.

Lord Chan. Why didſt thou begin to tell that we are Gods, and ſit in God's Place, and now wilt thou not make us an Anſwer?

Mr. Bradford ſtandeth ſtill to his Oath.

Brad. My Lord, I ſaid, you would have your Place taken of us now as God's Place: And therefore I brought forth that Piece of Scripture, that ye might the more be admoniſhed to follow God and his Ways at this preſent, who ſeeth us all, and well perceiveth whether of Conſcience I pretend this Matter of the Oath, or not.

Lord Chan. No, all Men may well ſee thine Hypocriſy: For if for thine Oaths Sake thou didſt not anſwer, then wouldeſt thou not have ſpoke as thou didſt, and have anſwered me at the firſt: But now Men well perceive, that this is but a Starting-hole to hide thyſelf in, becauſe thou dareſt not anſwer, and ſo wouldeſt eſcape, blinding the ſimple People's Eyes, as though of Conſcience you did all you do.

Brad. That which I ſpake at the firſt was not a Replication or an Anſwer to that you ſpake to me; and therefore I needed not to lay for me mine Oath. For I thought you would have more weighed what I did ſpeak, than you did: But when I perceived you did not conſider it, but came to aſk Matter, whereto by anſwering I ſhould conſent to the practiſing of Juriſdiction on the Biſhop of Rome's Behalf here in England, and ſo be forſworn; then of Conſcience and Simplicity I ſpake as I do yet again ſpeak, that I dare not for Conſcience Sake anſwer you. And therefore I ſeek no Starting-holes, nor go about to blind the People, as God knoweth. For if you of your Honours ſhall tell me, that you do not aſk me any Thing, whereby mine anſwering ſhould conſent to the practiſing of the Biſhop of Rome's Juriſdiction, aſk me wherein you will, and you ſhall hear that I will anſwer you as flatly as ever any did that came before you. I am not afraid of Death, I thank God; for I look, and have looked for nothing elſe at your Hands a long Time: But I am afraid, when Death cometh, I ſhould have Matter to trouble my Conſcience by the Guiltineſs of Perjury, and therefore do I anſwer as I do.

The Cauſe why Mr. Bradford anſwereth not to the Biſhop of Winchester.

Lord Chan. Theſe be gay glorious Words, full of Hypocriſy and Vain-glory, and yet doſt thou not know that I ſit here as Biſhop of Winchester in mine own Dioceſs, and therefore may do this which I do, and more too?

Brad. My Lord, give me leave to aſk you this Queſtion, that my Conſcience may be out of Doubt in this Matter. Tell me here before God, all this Audience being Witneſs, that you demand of me nothing whereby mine anſwering ſhould conſent to and confirm the Practice of Juriſdiction for the Biſhop of Rome here in England, and yet your Honour ſhall hear me give you as flat and as plain Anſwers briefly, to whatſoever you ſhall demand me, as ever any did.

Mr. Bradford ready to anſwer under Proteſtation.

Here the Lord Chancellor was greatly offended, and ſpake much how the Biſhop of Rome's Authority needed no Confirmation of Bradford's anſwering, nor no ſuch as he was; and turned his Diſcourſe to the People, how that Bradford followed crafty covetous Merchants, which becauſe they would lend no Money to their Neighbours when they were in need, would ſay that they had often ſworn, that they would never lend any more Money, becauſe their Debtors had ſo often deceived them. Even ſo thou, ſaid he to Bradford, doſt at this preſent, to caſt a Miſt in the Peoples Eyes, to blear them with an Hereſy, (which is greater and more hurtful to the Commonwealth than the other is) pretend thine Oath, whereby the People might make a Conſcience, whereas they ſhould not. Why ſpeakeſt thou not?

Brad. My Lord, as I ſaid, I ſay again, I dare not anſwer you for fear of Perjury, from which God defend me, or elſe I could tell you that there is a Difference between Oaths. Some be according to Faith and Charity, as the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome; ſome be againſt Faith and Charity; as this, to deny by Oath my Help to my Brother in his Need.

Difference of Oaths, ſome with Faith and Charity, ſome againſt it.

Here my Lord Chancellor again was much offended, ſtill ſaying that Bradford durſt not anſwer, and further endeavoured to prove, that the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome was againſt Charity.

But Bradford anſwered, that howſoever his Honour took him, yet he was aſſured of his Meaning, that no Fear but the Fear of Perjury made him unwilling to anſwer: For as for Death, my Lord, ſaid he, as I know there are twelve Hours in the Day, ſo with the Lord my Time is appointed. And when it ſhall be his good Time, then I ſhall depart hence: But in the mean Seaſon I am ſafe enough, though all the People had ſworn my Death. Into his Hands have I committed it, and do, his good Will be done. And ſaving mine Oath, I will anſwer you in this Behalf, that the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome was not, nor is againſt Charity.

Lord Chan. How prove you that?

Brad. Forſooth I prove it thus:

The Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome, is not againſt Charity.

Nothing is againſt Charity, which is with God's Word, and not againſt it.

The Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome's Authority in England, is with God's Word, and is not againſt it.

Ergo, The Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome's Authority in England, is not againſt Charity.

Lord Chan. Is it againſt God's Word, that a Man ſhould take a * King to be ſupream Head of the Church in this Realm?

* A King how he may be taken for ſupream Head of the Church in his own Dominion

Brad. No, ſaving ſtill mine Oath, it is not againſt God's Word, but with it, being taken in ſuch Senſe as it may well be taken; that is, attributing to the King's Power, the Sovereignty in all his Dominion.

Lord Chan. I pray you where find you that?

Brad. I find it in many Places, but eſpecially in the 13th of the Romans, where St. Paul writeth, Every Soul to be ſubject to the higher Powers: But what Power? The Power verily which which beareth the Sword; which is not the ſpiritual, but the temporal Power. As Chryſoſtom full well noteth upon the ſame Place, which your Honour knoweth better than I. He (Chryſoſtom I mean) there plainly ſheweth that Biſhops, Prophets, and Apoſtles, are obedient to the temporal Magiſtrates.

Here the Lord Chancellor was angred yet more, and ſaid, how that Bradford went about to deny all Obedience to the Queen for his Oath: And ſo, ſaid he, this Man would make God's Word a Warrant of Diſobedience: For he will anſwer the Queen on this Sort, that when ſhe ſaith, Now ſwear to the Biſhop of Rome, or obey his Authority: No (will he ſay) for I ſhould be forſworn, and ſo he makes the Queen no Queen.

Refuſing the Pope's Obedience being ſworn againſt him is no denying of Obedience to the Queen.

Brad. No, I go not about to deny all Obedience to the Queen's Highneſs, but denying Obedience in this Part, if ſhe ſhould demand it. For I was ſworn to King Edward, not ſimply, that is, not only concerning his own Perſon, but alſo concerning his Succeſſors, and therefore in denying to the Queen's Requeſt herein, I deny not her Authority, nor become diſobedient.

The prepoſterous Judgment of Wincheſter, to care ſo little for an Oath to God, and ſo much for his Vow to the Pope.

Lord Chan. Yes that thou doſt; and ſo he began to tell a long Tale, how if a Man ſhould make an Oath to pay to me an hundred Pounds by ſuch a Day, and the Man to whom it was due ſhould forget the Debt, the Debtor ſhould ſay, No, you cannot do it; for I am forſworn then.

Here Bradford deſired my Lord Chancellor not to trifle it, ſaying, that he wondred his Honour would make ſolemn Oaths made to God Trifles in that Sort; and make ſo great a Matter concerning Vows (as they call it) made to the Biſhop for Marriage of Prieſts.

At theſe Words the Lord Chancellor was much offended, and ſaid, he did not trifle: But, quoth he, thou goeſt about to deny Obedience to the Queen, which now requireth Obedience to the Biſhop of Rome.

Brad. No my Lord, I do not deny Obedience to the Queen, if you would diſcern between Genus and Species. Becauſe I may not obey in this, Ergo, I may not obey in the other, is no good Reaſon. As if a Man let or ſell a Piece of his Inheritance, yet this notwithſtanding, all his Inheritance is not let or ſold: And ſo in this Caſe, all Obedience I deny not, becauſe I deny Obedience in this Branch.

Lord Chan. I will none of theſe Similitudes.

Brad. I would not uſe them, if that you went not about to perſuade the People, that I meant that which I never meant: For I myſelf not only mean Obedience, but will give Enſample of all moſt humble Obedience to the Queen's Highneſs, ſo long as ſhe requireth not Obedience againſt God.

Lord Chan. No, no, all Men may ſee your Meaning well enough. There is no Man, though he be ſworn to the King, that doth therefore break his Oath, if he afterwards be ſworn to the French King and to the Emperor.

Brad. It is true, my Lord, but the Caſes be not like. For here is an Exception; Thou ſhalt not ſwear to the Biſhop of Rome at any Time. If we in like Manner were ſworn; Thou ſhalt not ſerve the Emperor, &c. you ſee there were ſome Alteration and more Doubt. But I beſeech your Honour remember what ye yourſelf have written, anſwering the Objections hereagainſt in your Book, De vera obedientia. Let God's Word, and the Reaſon thereof, bear the Bell away.

Anno 1555.

Here the Lord Chancellor was greatly moved, and ſaid ſtill, how that Bradford had written ſeditious Letters, and perverted the People thereby, and did ſtoutly ſtand, as though he would defend the erroneous Doctrine in King Edward's Time, againſt all Men: And now, quoth he, he ſaith he dare not anſwer.

Biſhop of Wincheſter pretendeth as though Mr. Bradford for fear durſt not anſwer.

Brad. I have written no ſeditious Letters, I have not perverted the People: But that which I have written and ſpoken, that will I never deny, by God's Grace. And where your Lordſhip ſaith, that I dare not anſwer you: That all Men may know that I am not afraid, ſave mine Oath, ask me what you will, and I will plainly make you Anſwer, by God's Grace, although I now ſee my Life lieth thereon. But, O Lord, into thy Hands I commit it, come what will: Only ſanctify thy Name in me, as in an Inſtrument of thy Grace, Amen. Now ask what you will, and you ſhall ſee I am not afraid, by God's Grace, ſtatly to anſwer.

Mr. Bradford ready to tender a Reaſon of his Faith.

Lord Chan. Well then, how ſay you to the bleſſed Sacrament? Do you not believe there Chriſt to be preſent concerning his natural Body?

Brad. My Lord, I do believe that Chriſt is corporally preſent at and in the due Adminiſtration of the Sacrament. By this Word (corporally) I mean that Chriſt is there preſent corporally unto Faith.

Lord Chan. Unto Faith: We muſt have many more Words to make it plain.

Brad. You ſhall ſo: But firſt give me leave to ſpeak two Words.

Lord Chan. Speak on.

Brad. I have been now a Year and almoſt three Quarters in Priſon, and in all this Time you never queſtioned with me hereabout, when I might have ſpoken my Conſcience frankly without Peril; But now have you a Law to hang up and put to Death, if a Man anſwer freely, and not to your Appetite, and ſo now you come to demand this Queſtion. Ah my Lord, Chriſt uſed not this Way to bring Men to Faith. No more did the Prophets or Apoſtles. Remember what Bernard writeth to Eugenius the Pope; I read, that the Apoſtles ſtood to be judged, but I read not, that they ſate to judge. This ſhall be, that was, &c.

Note well the Pope's Way to bring Men to Faith.

The Pope's judging and condemning Men for their Faith, reproved by Bernard.

Here the Lord Chancellor was appalled, as it ſeemed, and ſaid moſt gently that he uſed not this Means. It was not my Doing, ſaid he, although ſome there be that think this to be the beſt Way: For I, for my Part, have been challenged for being too gentle oftentimes: Which Thing the Biſhop of London confirmed, and ſo did almoſt all the Audience, that he had been too mild and too gentle.

At which Words Bradford ſpake thus: My Lord, I pray you ſtretch out your Gentleneſs, that I may feel it, for hitherto I never felt it.

As ſoon as ever he had ſpoke thus; the Lord Chancellor belike thinking that Bradford would have had Mercy and Pardon, ſaid, that with all his Heart, not only he, bnt the Queen's Highneſs ſhould ſtretch out Mercy, if with them he would return.

Brad. Return, my Lord? God ſave me from that going back: I mean it not ſo, but I mean, that I was three Quarters of a Year in the Tower; you forbad me Paper, Pen, and and Ink, and never in all that Time, nor ſince did I feel any Gentleneſs from you. I have rather hitherto found, as I looked for, Extremity. And I thank God that I perceive now ye have kept me in Priſon thus long, not for any Matter ye had, but for Matter ye would have; God's good Will be done.

Anno 1555.

Mr. Bradford impriſoned, not for Matter they had, but for Matter they would have againſt him.

Here now were divers telling my Lord it was Dinner time. And ſo he roſe up, leaving Mr. Bradford ſpeaking, ſaying, that in the Afternoon they would ſpeak more with him. And he was had into the Veſtry, and was there all that Day till Night, and then was carried to Priſon again.

In the mean Time, about Four of the Clock in the Afternoon, a Gentleman called Mr. Thomas Huſſey of Lincolnſhire, who was once an Officer in the Duke of Norfolk's Houſe, came into the Veſtry to inquire for one Stoning, and when it was anſwered him by the Undermarſhal's Officers of the King's-Bench, that there was none ſuch, he entred into the Houſe, and took Acquaintance with John Bradford, ſaying, that he would commune and ſpeak with him the next Morning for old Acquaintance.

Thomas Huſſey cometh to Mr. Bradford.

The next Morning about Seven of the Clock, this Gentleman came into the Chamber wherein John Bradford did lye, and being with him, he began a long Oration, how that of Love and Acquaintance he came to him to ſpeak that which he would further utter. You did (ſaid he) ſo wonderfully behave yourſelf before the Lord Chancellor, and other Biſhops Yeſterday, that even the greateſt Enemies you have, did ſee that they have no Matter againſt you: And therefore I adviſe you (ſpeaking as tho' it came of his own good Will, without making any other Man privy, or any other procuring him, as he ſaid) this Day, for anon you ſhall be called before them again, to deſire a Time, and Men to confer withal, ſo ſhall all Men think a wonderful Wiſdom, Gravity, and Piety in you: And by this Means you ſhall eſcape preſent Danger, which elſe is nearer than you are aware of. To this John Bradford anſwered, I neither can nor will make ſuch Requeſt. For then ſhall I give Occaſion to the People and to all others to think that I doubt of the Doctrine which I confeſs, which Thing I do not, for thereof I am moſt aſſured, and therefore I will give no ſuch Offence.

As they were thus talking, the Chamber Door was unlocked, and Dr. Seton came in, whom when Mr. Bradford ſaw, he ſpake thus in his Heart to God, What Sir, goeth the Matter thus? This Man told me, no Man knew of his coming: Lord give me Grace to remember thy Leſſon, "Beware of thoſe "Men, &c. Caſt not your Pearls before "Dogs:" for I ſee theſe Men be come to hunt for Matter, that the one may bear witneſs with the other.

Dr. Seton cometh to Mr. Bradford.

Dr. Seton, after ſome by-talk of Mr. Bradford's Age, of his Country, and ſuch like, began a gay and long Diſcourſe of my Lord of Canterbury, Mr. Latimer, and Mr. Ridley, and how they at Oxford were not able to anſwer any thing at all; and that therefore my Lord of Canterbury deſired to confer with the Biſhop of Durham and others: All which Talk tended to this End, that John Bradford ſhould make the like Suit, being in nothing to be compared in Learning to my Lord of Canterbury.

To this John Bradford briefly anſwered as he did before to Mr. Huſſey.

With this Anſwer neither the Doctor nor Gentleman being contented, after many Perſuaſions, Mr. Doctor ſaid, I have heard much Talk of you, and even Yeſternight a Gentleman made Report of you at the Lord Chancellor's Table, that ye were able to perſuade as much as any that he knew. And I (tho' I never heard you preach, and to my Knowledge did never ſee you before Yeſterday) yet methought your Modeſty was ſuch, your Behaviour and Talk ſo without Malice and Impatience, that I would be ſorry you ſhould do worſe than myſelf. And I tell you further, I do perceive my Lord Chancellor hath a Favour towards you: wherefore be not ſo obſtinate, but deſire Reſpite and ſome learned Man to confer withal, &c.

The flattering commendation of Dr. Seton to Mr. Bradford.

But John Bradford kept ſtill one Anſwer: I cannot, nor I will not ſo offend the People. I doubt not, but I am moſt certain of the Doctrine I have taught.

Here Mr. Doctor waxed hot, and called Mr. Bradford arrogant, proud, and vain-glorious.

But Bradford anſwered, Beware of judging, leſt you condemn yourſelf. But ſtill Dr. Seton urged him, ſhewing him how merciful my Lord Chancellor was, and how charitably they entertained him.

Brad. I never ſaw any Juſtice, much leſs Love, I ſpeak for my Part, quoth Bradford, in my Lord Chancellor. Long have I been unjuſtly impriſoned, and handled in the ſame uncharitably: And now my Lord hath no juſt Matter againſt me.

This Talk ſerved not the Doctor's Purpoſe: Wherefore he went from Matter to Matter, from this Point to that Point. Bradford ſtill gave him the hearing, and anſwered not: For he perceived that they both did come but to fiſh for ſome Things which might make a Shew that my Lord Chancellor had juſtly kept him in Priſon.

When all their Diſcourſe took no ſuch Effect as they expected, Mr. Huſſey asked Mr. Bradford, Will ye not admit Conference, if my Lord Chancellor ſhould offer it publickly?

Brad. Conference, if it had been offered, before the Law had been made, or if it were offered ſo that I might be at Liberty to confer, and as ſure as he with whom I ſhould confer, then it were ſomething: But elſe I ſee not to what other purpoſe Conference ſhould be offered, but to defer that which at length will come, and the lingring may give more Offence than do good. Howbeit, if my Lord ſhall make ſuch an Offer of his own Motion, I will not refuſe to confer with whomſoever he ſhall appoint.

Mr. Bradford refuſeth to admit Conference but upon Conditions.

Mr. Doctor hearing this, called Bradford arrogant, proud, and whatſoever it pleaſed him.

Dr. Seton raileth againſt Mr. Bradford.

Then Bradford perceiving by them that he ſhould ſhortly be called for, beſought them both to give him Leave to talk with God, and to beg Wiſdom and Grace of him; for, ſaid he, otherwiſe I am helpleſs: And ſo they with much ado departed. Then Mr. Bradford went and made his Prayers to God, which the Lord of his Goodneſs did graciouſly accept in his Need, praiſed therefore be his Holy Name. Shortly after they were gone, Mr. Bradford was led to the aforeſaid Church, and there tarried uncalled for till Eleven of the Clock, that is, till Mr. Saunders was excommunicated.

The laſt Examination of Mr. Bradford, in the Church of St. Mary Overies.

AFTER the Excommunication of Laurence Saunders, John Bradford was called in, and being brought in before the Lord Chancellor and other Biſhops there ſitting, the Lord Chancellor began to ſpeak thus in Effect: That if Bradford, being now come before them, would anſwer with Modeſty and Humility, and conform himſelf to the catholick Church with them, he yet might find Mercy, becauſe they would be loath to uſe Extremity. Therefore he concluded with an Exhortation, that Bradford would recant his Doctrine.

After the Lord Chancellor had ended his long Oration, Mr. Bradford began to ſpeak thus: As Yeſterday I beſought your Honours to ſet in your Sight the Majeſty and Preſence of God to follow him, who ſeeketh not to ſubvert the Simple by ſubtle Queſtions: So I humbly beſeech every one of you to do this Day; for you know well enough, that guiltleſs Blood will cry for Vengeance. And this I pray not your Lordſhips to do, as one that taketh upon me to condemn you utterly herein, but that ye might be more admoniſhed to do that, which none doth ſo much as he ſhould do: for our Nature is ſo much corrupt, that we are very forgetful of God. Again, as Yeſterday I pretended mine Oath aad Oaths againſt the Biſhop of Rome, that I ſhould never conſent to the practiſing of any Juriſdiction for him, or on his Behalf in the Realm of England: So do I again at this Day, leſt I ſhould be perjured. And laſt of all, as Yeſterday the Anſwers I made, were by Proteſtation and ſaving mine Oath, ſo I would your Honours ſhould know that mine Anſwers ſhall be this Day: And this I do, that when Death ſhall come, I may not be troubled with the Guilt of Perjury.

Mr. Bradford's Anſwer to the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

At which Wordsthe Lord Chancellor was wroth, and ſaid, that they had given him Reſpite to deliberate till this Day, whether he would recant his Errors of the Bleſſed Sacrament.

Brad. My Lord, you gave me no Time for any ſuch Deliberation, neither did I ſpeak any thing of the Sacrament which you do diſallow. For when I had declared a Preſence of Chriſt to be there to Faith, you went from that Matter, to clear yourſelf that you were not cruel, and ſo went to dinner.

Lord Chan. What? I perceive we muſt begin all again with thee. Did I not Yeſterday tell thee plainly, that thou madeſt a Conſcience where none ſhould be? Did I not make it plain, that the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome was an unlawful Oath?

The Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome, whether it be lawful or unlawful.

Brad. No indeed my Lord: You ſaid ſo, but you proved it not yet, nor ever can do.

Lord Chan. O Lord God, what a Fellow art thou! Thou wouldeſt go about to bring into the Peoples Heads, that we, all the Lords of the Parliament Houſe, the Knights and Burgeſſes, and all the whole Realm be perjured. O what an Heretick is this! here good People, you may ſee what a ſenſleſs Hetick this Fellow is. If I ſhould make an Oath I would never help my Brother, nor lend him Money in his Need; were this a good Anſwer to tell my Neighbour deſiring my Help, that I had made an Oath to the contrary? or that I could not do it? Anno 1555.

Brad. O my Lord, diſcern betwixt Oaths that be againſt Charity and Faith, and Oaths that be according to Faith and Charity, as this is againſt the Biſhop of Rome.

Here the Lord Chancellor made much ado, and a long Time was ſpent about Oaths, which were good and which were evil, he captiouſly asking often of Bradford a direct Anſwer concerning Oaths: Which Bradford would not give ſimply, but with a Diſtinction. Whereat the Chancellor was much offended: But Bradford ſtill kept him at the Bay, that the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome, was a lawful Oath, uſing thereto the Lord Chancellor's own Book, De vera Obedientia, for Confirmation.

At length they came to this Iſſue, who ſhould be Judge of the Lawfulneſs of the Oath; and Bradford ſaid the Word of God, according to Chriſt's Word, John 12. My Word ſhall judge; and according to the Teſtimony of Iſaiah and Micah, That God's Word coming out of Jeruſalem, ſhall give Sentence among the Gentiles. By this Word, quoth Bradford, my Lord, I will prove the Oath againſt the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, to be a good, a godly, and a lawful Oath. So that the Lord Chancellor left his hold, and as the other Day he pretended a Denial of the Queen's Authority and Obedience to her Highneſs, ſo did he now.

God's Word Judge only of Oaths, whether they be made lawfully againſt the Supremacy of the Pope or no

But Bradford, as the Day before, proved, that Obedience in this Point to the Queen's Highneſs, if ſhe ſhould demand an Oath to the Biſhop of Rome, being denied, was not a general Denial of her Authority, and of Obedience to her; no more, ſaid he, than the Sale, Gift, or Leaſe of a Piece of a Man's Inheritance, proveth it a Sale, Gift, or Leaſe of the whole Inheritance.

One ſpecial Cauſe of Obedience denied by Conſcience, maketh no general Denial of Obedience in Cauſes lawful.

And thus much ado was made about this Matter: The Lord Chancellor talking much, and uſing many Examples of Debt, of going out of Town to morrow by Oath, and yet tarrying till Friday, and ſuch like. Which trifling Talk Bradford did touch, ſaying, that it was a Wonder his Honour weighed Conſcience no more in this, and would be ſo earneſt in Vows of Prieſts Marriages made to Biſhops, and be careleſs for ſolemn Oaths made to God and to Princes. Summa, this was the End. The Lord Chancellor ſaid, The Queen might diſpenſe with it, and did ſo to all the whole Realm. But Bradford ſaid, That the Queen's Highneſs could do no more but remit her Right; as for the Oath made to God, ſhe could never remit, foraſmuch as it was made unto God.

At which Words the Lord Chancellor chafed wonderfully, and ſaid, That in plain Senſe I ſlandered the Realm with Perjury; and therefore, quoth he to the People, you may ſee how this Fellow taketh upon him to have more Knowledge and Conſcience than all the wiſe Men of England, and yet he hath no Conſcience at all.

Brad. Well, my Lord, let all the Standers-by ſee who hath Conſcience: I have been a Year and a half in Priſon: Now before all this People declare wherefore I was impriſoned, or what Cauſe you had to puniſh me. You ſaid the other Day in your own Houſe, my Lord of London witneſſing with you, that I took upon me to ſpeak to the People undeſired. There he ſitteth by you, I mean my Lord of Bath,

Mr. Bradford impriſoned without a Cauſe.

Anno 1555. Bath, who deſired me himſelf, for the Paſſion of Chriſt, I would ſpeak to the People. Upon whoſe Words I coming into the Pulpit, had like to have been ſlain with a Dagger (which was hurled at him, I think) for it touched my Sleeve. He then prayed me I would not leave him, and I promiſed him, as long as I lived, I would take Hurt before him that Day, and ſo went out of the Pulpit and intreated with the People, and at length brought him myſelf into an Houſe.

Beſides this, in the Afternoon I preached at Bow-Chutch, and there going up into the Pulpit, one deſired me not to reprove the People; for, ſaid he, you will never come down alive, if you do it. And yet not notwithſtanding I did in that Sermon reprove their Fact, and called Sedition at leaſt twenty Times. For all which my Doing, I have received this Recompence, Impriſonment for a Year and a Half and more, and Death now, which you go about. Let all Men be Judge where Conſcience is.

They endeavoured to interrupt him while he was ſpeaking theſe Words, but Mr. Bradford ſtill ſpake on, and gave no place till he had made an end. And then the Lord Chancellor ſaid, That for all that fair Tale, his Fact at the Croſs was naught.

Brad. No, my Fact was good, as you your ſelf did bear me witneſs. For when I was at firſt before you in the Tower, you yourſelf did ſay, that my Fact was good, but, quoth you, thy Mind was Evil. Well, quoth I, then my Lord, in that you allow the Fact, and condemn my Mind; for ſo much as otherwiſe I cannot declare my Mind to Man but by ſaying and doing. God one Day, I truſt, will open it to my Comfort, what my Mind was, and yours is.

Here the Lord Chancellor was offended, and ſaid, that he never ſaid ſo. I quoth he, had not ſo little Wit, as not to diſcern betwixt Meaning and Doing: And ſo brought forth many Examples little to the Purpoſe, to prove that Men conſtrue Things by the Meaning of Men, and not by their Doings. But when this would not ſerve, then cometh he to another Matter, and ſaid, That Bradford was put in Priſon at firſt becauſe he would not yield, nor be conformable to the Queen's Religion.

Brad. Why my Lord? your Honour knoweth that you would not reaſon with me in Religion, but ſaid a Time ſhould afterwards be found out, when I ſhould be talked withal. But if it were as your Lordſhip ſaith, that I was put in Priſon for Religion, in that my Religion was then authorized by publick Laws of the Realm, could Conſcience puniſh, or caſt me in Priſon therefore? Wherefore let all Men be Judges, in whom Conſcience is wanting.

Here came forth Mr. Chamberlain of Woodſtock, and told my Lord Chancellor, that Bradford had been a Serving-man, and was with Mr. Harrington.

Lord Chan. True, and did deceive his Maſter of ſeven-ſcore Pound, and becauſe of this, he went to be a Goſpeller and a Preacher, good People, and yet you ſee how he pretendeth Conſcience.

Brad. My Lord, I ſet my Foot by his, whoſoever he be, that can come forth and juſtly vouch to my Face, that ever I deceived my Maſter. And as you are chief Juſticer by Office in England, I deſire Juſtice upon them that ſo ſlander me, becauſe they cannot prove it.

Here my Lord Chancellor and Mr. Chamberlain were ſmitten Blank, and ſaid they heard it. But, quoth my Lord Chancellor, we have another Manner of Matter than this againſt you: For you are an Heretick.

Yea, quoth the Biſhop of London, he did write Letters to Mr. Pendleton, which knoweth his Hand as well as his own, your Honour did ſee the Letters. Bp. Bonner cometh in again with another untruth.

Brad. This is not true, I never did write to Pendleton ſince I came to Priſon, and therefore I am not juſtly ſpoken of.

Lond. Yea, but you indicted it.

Brad. I did not, nor know not what you mean, and this I offer to prove.

Then came in another, I believe they call him Mr. Allen, one of the Clerks of the Council, putting the Lord Chancellor in remembrance of Letters written into Lancaſhire.

Lord Chan. You ſay true: For we have his Hand to ſhew.

Brad. I deny that you have my Hand to ſhew of Letters ſent into Lancaſhire, otherwiſe than before you all I will ſtand to, and prove them to be good and lawful.

Here was all anſwered, and then the Lord Chancellor began a new Matter. Sir, quoth he, in my Houſe the other Day you did moſt contemptuouſly contemn the Queen's Mercy, and further ſaid, that you would maintain the erroneous Doctrine in King Edward's Days againſt all Men, and this you do moſt ſtoutly.

Brad. Well, I am glad that all Men ſee now you have had no Matter to impriſon me before that Day juſtly. Now ſay I, that I did not contemptuouſly contemn the Queen's Mercy, but would have had it (though if Juſtice might take place, I need it not) ſo that I might have had it with God's Mercy, that is, without doing or ſaying any thing againſt God and his Truth. And as for Maintenance of Doctrine, becauſe I cannot tell how you will ſtretch this word Maintenance, I will repeat again that which I ſpake. I ſaid I was more confirmed in the Religion ſet forth in King Edward's Days, than ever I was: And if God ſo would, I truſt I ſhould declare it by giving my Life for the Confirmation and Teſtification thereof. So I ſaid then, and ſo I ſay now. As for otherwiſe to maintain it, than pertaining to a private Perſon by Confeſſion, I thought not, nor think not.

Lord Chan. Well, Yeſterday thou didſt maintain falſe Hereſy concerning the Bleſſed Sacrament, and therefore we gave thee Reſpite till this Day to deliberate. Another untruth in the Biſhop of Winchester.

Brad. My Lord, as I ſaid at the firſt, I ſpake nothing of the Sacrament, but that which you allowed, and therefore reproved it not, nor gave me any thing to deliberate.

Lord Chan. Why? didſt thou not deny Chriſt's Preſence in the Sacrament? Bleſſed are ye when Men ſhall revile you, and perſecute you, and ſhall ſay all Manner of Evil againſt you falſly for my Sake. Matth. 5. 11.

Brad. No, I never denied nor taught, but that to Faith, whole Chriſt, Body and Blood was as preſent as the Bread and Wine to the due Receiver.

Lord Chan. Yea, but doſt thou not believe that Chriſt's Body naturally and really is there, under the Forms of Bread and Wine?

Brad. My Lord, I believe Chriſt is preſent there to the Faith of a due Receiver: As for Transubſtantiation, I plainly and flatly tell you, I believe it not.

Here was Bradford called Diabolus, a Slanderer:

derer: for we ask no Queſtion, quoth my Lord Chancellor, of Tranſubſtantiation, but of Chriſt's Preſence.

Brad. I deny not his Preſence to the Faith of the Receiver, but deny that he is included in the Bread, or that the Bread was tranſubſtantiate.

Worceſt. If he be not included, how is he then preſent?

Brad. Forſooth, though my Faith can tell how, yet my Tongue cannot expreſs it, nor you otherwiſe than by Faith hear it, or underſtand it.

Here was much ado, now one Doctor ſtanding up and ſpeaking thus, and others ſpeaking that, and the Lord Chancellor talking much of Luther, Zuinglius, Oecolampadius, but ſtill Bradford kept him at that Point, that Chriſt is preſent to Faith; and that there is no Tranſubſtantiation nor including of Chriſt in the Bread: But all this would not ſerve them.

The Wicked receive not the Body of Chriſt. Receiving maketh not the Preſence of the Body but Grace.

Therefore another Biſhop asked this Queſtion, whether the wicked Man received Chriſt's very Body or no? And Bradford anſwered plainly, No. Whereat the Lord Chancellor made a long Oration, how that it could not be that Chriſt was preſent, except the evil Man received it. But Bradford put away all his Oration in few Words, that Grace was at that Time offered to his Lordſhip, although he received it not: So that, ſaid he, the Receiving maketh not the Preſence, as your Lordſhip would infer; but God's Grace, Truth, and Power is the Cauſe of the Preſence, which Grace the Wicked that lack Faith cannot receive. And here Bradford prayed my Lord, not to divorce that which God had coupled together. He hath coupled all theſe together; Take, eat, this is my Body: He ſaith not, See, peep, this is my Body; but, Take, eat. So that it appeareth this is a Promiſe depending upon Condition, if we take and eat.

Here the Lord Chancellor and other Biſhops made a great ado, that Bradford had found out a Toy that no Man elſe ever did, of the Condition, and the Lord Chancellor made many Words to the People thereabout.

But Bradford ſaid thus, My Lord, are not theſe Words, Take, eat, a Commandment? And are not theſe Words, This is my Body, a Promiſe? If you will challenge the Promiſe, and do not the Commandment, may you not deceive yourſelf?

Here the Lord Chancellor denied Chriſt to have commanded the Sacrament, and the Uſe of it.

Wincheſter denieth the Words. Take, eat, to be a Commandment

Brad. Why, my Lord, I pray you tell the People what Mood Accipite, Manducate, is; is it not plain to Children, that Chriſt in ſo ſaying, commandeth?

At theſe Words the Lord Chancellor made a great Toying and Trifling at the Imperative Mood, and fell to parſing or examining, as he ſhould teach a Child, and ſo concluded that it was no Commandment, but ſuch a Phraſe as this, I pray you give me Drink, which, ſaid he, is no Commandment, I think.

But Bradford prayed him to leave Toying and Trifling, and ſaid thus; My Lord, if it be not a Commandment of Chriſt to take and eat the Sacrament, why dare any take upon them to command and make that of Neceſſity, which God leaveth free? as you do in making it a neceſſary Commandment, once a Year for all that be of Diſcretion, to receive the Sacrament.

Here the Lord Chancellor called him again * Diabolus or Calumniator, and began out of theſe Words, Let a Man prove himſelf, and ſo eat of the Bread (yea Bread, quoth Bradford) and drink of the Cup, to prove that it was no Commandment to receive the Sacrament: For then (ſaid he) if it were a Commandment, it ſhould bind all Men, in all Places, and at all Times.

Anno 1555.

* Diabolus is as much as to ſay in Greek, a Slanderer, or a Caviller.

Brad. O my Lord, diſcern between Commandments: Some be general, as the Ten Commandments, that they bind always, in all Places, and all Perſons: Some be not ſo general, as this of the Supper, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, of the thrice appearing before the Lord yearly at Jeruſalem, of Abraham offering of Iſaac, &c.

Here my Lord Chancellor denied the Cup to be commanded by Chriſt: For then, ſaid he, we ſhould have eleven Commandments.

Brad. Indeed I believe you think as you ſpeak: For elſe you would not take the Cup from the People, in that Chriſt ſaith, Drink ye all of it. But how ſay you my Lords? Chriſt ſaith to you Biſhops eſpecially, Go and preach the Goſpel: Feed Chriſt's Flock, &c. Is this a Commandment, or no?

Here was my Lord Chancellor in a Chafe, and ſaid as pleaſed him.

Then the Biſhop of Durham asked Bradford, when Chriſt began to be preſent in the Sacrament? whether before the Receiver receiv'd it, or no?

Mr. Bradford anſwered that the Queſtion was curious, and not neceſſary; and further ſaid, that as the Cup was the New Teſtament, ſo the Bread was Chriſt's Body to him that received it duly, but yet ſo that the Bread is Bread. For, ſaid he, in all the Scripture ye ſhall not find this Propoſition, There is no Bread. And ſo he brought forth Chryſoſtom, Si in corpore eſſemus, Hom. in 83. Mat. 34. Summa. Much ado was here, they called Bradford Heretick, and he deſiring them to proceed on in God's Name, he looked for that which God appointed for them to do.

Lord Chan. This Fellow is now in another Hereſy of fatal Neceſſity, as though all Things were ſo tied together, that of mere Neceſſity all muſt come to paſs.

But Mr. Bradford deſired him to take Things as they are ſpoken, and not wreſt them to a contrary Sentence. Your Lordſhip, ſaid he, doth diſcern betwixt God and Man. Things are not by Fortune to God at any Time, though to Man they ſeem ſo ſometimes. I ſpeak but as the Apoſtles did, Lord, ſaith he, ſee how Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Prelates, are gathered together againſt thy Chriſt, to do that which thy Hand and Counſel hath before ordained for them to do. Acts 4.

Wincheſter readeth the Sentence of Excommunication againſt Mr. Bradford.

Here the Lord Chancellor began to read the Excommunication. And in the Excommunication, when he came to the Name of John Bradford, Lay-man: Why (quoth he) art thou no Prieſt?

Brad. No, nor never was either Prieſt, either beneficed, either married, either any Preacher, before publick Authority had eſtabliſhed Religion, or Preacher after publick Authority had altered Religion, and yet I am thus handled at your Hand: But God, I doubt not, will give his Bleſſing where you curſe. And ſo he fell down on his Knees, and heartily thanked God that he counted him worthy to ſuffer for his Name Sake; and

* prayed

Anno 1555. prayed to God to give him Repentance and a good Mind. After the Excommunication was read, he was delivered to the Sheriff of London, and ſo had to the Clink, and afterwards to the Compter in the Poultry, in the City of London, this being purpoſed by his Murderers, that he ſhould be deliver'd from thence to the Earl of Darby, to be conveyed into Lancaſhire, and there to be burned in the Town of Mancheſter, where he was born: But their Purpoſe concerning the Place was afterward altered, for he ſuffered in London.

He is ſent to the Compter in the Poultry.

After the Condemnation of Mr. Bradford, which was the laſt Day of January, Mr. Bradford being ſent to Priſon, remained there till the Firſt of July, during which Time he ſuſtained divers other Conferences and Conflicts with ſundry Adverſaries, who repaired to him in the Priſon. Of whom firſt Biſhop Bonner, coming to the Compter to degrade Dr. Taylor, the fouth Day of Februvry, began to diſcourſe with the ſaid Mr. Bradford; the Effect whereof here enſueth.

Bp. Bonner Diſcourſe with Mr. Bradford.

On the fourth of February, the ſame Day Mr. Rogers was burned, Bonner Biſhop of London came to the Compter in the Poultrey, to degrade Dr. Taylor, about One of the Clock in the Afternoon. But before he ſpake to Dr. Taylor, he called for John Bradford who was Priſoner there, whom when he ſaw he put off his Cap, and gave him his Hand, ſaying, Becauſe I perceive ye are deſirous to confer with ſome learned Men, therefore I have brought Mr. Archdeacon Harpsfield to you. And I tell you, you do like a wiſe Man. But I pray go roundly to work, for the Time is but ſhort.

Brad. My Lord as roundly as I can I will go to work with you: I never deſired to confer with any Man, nor yet do. Howbeit if ye will have one to talk with me, I am ready.

Bonner. What! (ſaid the Biſhop in a Fume to the Keeper) did you not tell me that this Man deſired Conference?

Keeper. No, my Lord, I told you that he would not refuſe to confer with any; but I did not ſay that it was his Deſire.

Bonner. Well, Mr. Bradford, you are well beloved, I pray you conſider yourſelf, and refuſe not Charity when it is offered.

Brad. Indeed, my Lord, this is ſmall Charity, to condemn a Man as you have condemned me, who never brake your Laws. In Turkey a Man may have Charity, but in England I could not yet find it. I was condemned for my Faith as ſoon as I uttered it at your Requeſts, before I had committed any Thing againſt the Laws. And as for Conference, I am not afraid to talk with whom ye will. But to ſay that I deſire to confer, that do I not.

More Charity amongſt the Turks than amongſt the perſecuting Papiſts.

Bonner. Well, well. And ſo he called for Dr. Taylor, and Bradford went his Way.

Diſcourſe between Mr. Bradford and Mr. Willerton.

Upon another Day in February, Mr. Willerton, Chaplain to the Biſhop of London, came to confer with Mr. Bradford; but when he perceived that Mr. Bradford deſired not his Company, and therefore rather wiſhed for his departing than his Stay: Well, Mr. Bradford, ſaid he, I pray you let us confer a little, perchance you may do me good, if I can do you none. Upon which Words Mr. Bradford was content, and ſo they began to talk. Willerton ſpake much of the Doctors, of the Fathers, of the Bread in the Sixth of St. John, &c. labouring to prove Tranſubſtantiation, and that wicked Men do receive Chriſt.

But Bradford on the contrary improved his Authorities, ſo that they came to this Iſſue, that Willerton ſhould draw his Reaſons out of the Scriptures and Doctors, and Bradford would peruſe them; and if he could not anſwer them, then he would give place. Likewiſe alſo Mr. Bradford ſhould draw his Reaſons out of the Scriptures and Doctors, to which Willerton ſhould anſwer if he could: And ſo they departed for that Day.

Mr. Willerton ſendeth his Writing to Mr. Bradford to prove Tranſubſtantiation.

The next Morning Mr. Willerton ſent half a Sheet of Paper written on both Sides, containing no Reaſons how he gathered his Doctrine, but only bare Sentences; "The Bread which "I will give is my Fleſh:" And the Places in the 26th of Matthew, the 14th of Mark, the 22d of Luke, and the 10th and 11th to the Corinthians, with ſome Sentences of the Doctors, all which made as much againſt him as for him.

In the Afternoon he came himſelf, and there he had a long Talk to little Effect. At length Willerton began to talk of the Church, ſaying, that Bradford ſwerved from the Church.

Brad. No that I do not, but ye do. For the Church is Chriſt's Spouſe, and Chriſt's Obedient Spouſe, which your Church is not, which robbeth the People of the Lord's Cup, and of Service in the Engliſh Tongue.

Willer. Why? It is not profitable to have the Service in Engliſh; for it is written, "The "Lips of the Prieſt ſhould keep the Law, "and out of his Mouth Man muſt look for "Knowledge."

Brad. Should not the People then have the Scriptures? Wherefore ſerveth this Saying of Chriſt, "Search the Scriptures."

Willer. This was not ſpoke to the People, but to the Scribes and learned Men.

Brad. Then the People muſt not have the Scripture.

Willer. No, for it is written, "They ſhall "be all taught of God."

Brad. And muſt we learn all from the Prieſts?

Willer. Yea.

Brad. Then I ſee you would bring the People to hang up Chriſt, and let Barabbas go, as the Prieſts did then perſuade the People. At which Words Mr. Willerton was ſo offended, that he had no deſire to talk any more. In the End Mr. Bradford gave him the Reaſons which he had gathered againſt Tranſubſtantiation, and deſired him to frame his into the Form of Reaſons, and then quoth Bradford, I will anſwer them.

Mr. Bradford's Reaſons againſt Tranſubſtantion not anſwered.

Willer. Well, I will do ſo. But firſt I will anſwer yours. Which he never performed.

On the 12th of February one of the Earl of Derby's Servants came to Mr. Bradford, ſaying, My Lord hath ſent me to you, he deſireth you to tender yourſelf, and he will be a good Lord to you.

Brad. I thank his Lordſhip for his good Will towards me: But in this Caſe I cannot tender myſelf more than God's Honour will allow.

Servant. Ah Mr. Bradford, conſider your Mother, Siſters, and Friends, Kinsfolk, and Country, what a great Diſcomfort will it be unto them to ſee you die as an Heretick?

M. Bradford preferreth Chriſt before all his Kindred.

Brad. I have learned to forſake Father, Mother, Brother, Siſter, Friends, and all that ever ever I have, yea, even mine ownſelf, for elſe I cannot be Chriſt's Diſciple.

Serv. If my Lord ſhould obtain for you that ye might depart the Realm, would you not be content to be at the Queen's Appointment, where ſhe would appoint you beyond the Sea.

Brad.-No, I had rather be burned in England, than be burned beyond the Seas. For I know that if ſhe ſhould ſend me to Paris, Lovain, or ſome ſuch Place, forthwith they would burn me.

Mr. Creſwell's Diſcourſe with Mr. Bradford.

Upon the Fourteenth of February, Percival Creſwell, an old Acquaintance of Mr. Bradford's, came to him, bringing with him a Kinſman of Mr. Fecknam's, who after many Words, ſaid; Creſ. I pray you let me intercede for you.

Brad. You may do what ye will.

Creſ. But tell me what Suit I ſhould make for you.

Brad. Forſooth what you pleaſe, do it not at my Requeſt, for I deſire nothing at your Hands. If the Queen will give me Life, I will thank her. If ſhe will baniſh me, I will thank her. If ſhe will burn me, I will thank her. If ſhe will condemn me to perpetual Impriſonment, I will thank her.

Hereupon Creſwell went away, and about Eleven of the Clock he and the other Man came again, and brought a Book wrote by one More deſiring Mr. Bradford to read it over.

Bradford taking the Book, ſaid, Good Percival, I am immovably ſettled in this Article.

Creſ. Oh, if ever ye loved me, do one thing for me.

Brad. What is that?

Creſ. Deſire and name what learned Man or Men ye will have to come unto you. My Lord of York, my Lord of Lincoln, my Lord of Bath, and others will gladly come unto you.

Brad. No, never will I deſire them, or any other, to come to confer with me; for I am as certain of my Doctrine as I am of any Thing. But for your Pleaſure, and alſo that all Men may know I am not aſhamed to have my Faith ſifted and tried, bring whom ye will, and I will talk with them. So they went their Way.

Dr. Harding cometh to Mr. Bradford.

About Three of the Clock in the Afternoon, Dr. Harding, who was then the Biſhop of Lincoln's Chaplain, came to Mr. Bradford, and after a ſolemn Proteſtation, declaring that he had prayed to God before he came, to turn his Talk to Bradford's Good, he began to tell the good Opinion he had of Bradford, and ſpent the Time in ſuch tatling, ſo that their Talk was to little Purpoſe; ſave that Bradford prayed him to conſider from whence he was fallen, and not follow the World, nor to love it: For the Love of God is not where the World is.

But Harding counted Bradford in a damnable State, as one being out of the Church, and therefore deſired him to take heed of his Soul, and not to die in ſuch an Opinion.

What? Mr. Harding, ſaid Bradford; I have heard you with theſe Ears maintain this what I now ſtand in.

Harding. I grant that I have taught that the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation was a ſubtle Doctrine, but otherwiſe I never taught it. And ſo he inveighing againſt Marriages of Prieſts, and namely againſt Peter Martyr, Martin Bucer, Luther, and ſuch, who for breaking their Vows were juſtly given up into Hereſies (as he ſaid). Mr. Bradford ſeeing him altogether given up to Popery, after admoniſhing him thereof, bad him farewel. Anno 1555.

Dr. Harpsfield's Diſcourſe with Mr. Bradford.

Upon the 25th of February, Percival Creſwell came with Mr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of London, and a Servant waiting upon him. After formal Salutations, he made a long Oration, of which this is a ſhort Sum; That all Men, even the Infidels, Turks, Jews, Anabaptiſts, and Libertines, deſire Felicity as well as the Chriſtians, and that every one thinketh they ſhall attain to it by their Religion. To which Bradford anſwered briefly, that he ſpake not far amiſs.

Then ſaid Harpsfield, But the Way thither is not all alike: For the Infidels by Jupiter, Juno, &c; the Turk by his Alcoran, the Jew by his Talmud, do believe to come to Heaven. For ſo may I ſpeak of ſuch as believe the Immortality of the Soul.

Brad. You ſpeak truly.

Harpſ. Well, then here is the Matter, to know the Way to this Heaven.

Brad. We are not to invent Ways. There is but one Way, and that is Jeſus Chriſt, as he himſelf doth witneſs; I am the Way. The true Way to Felicity.

Harpſ. What you ſay is true, and alſo falſe. I ſuppoſe what you mean by Chriſt, is believing in Chriſt.

Brad. I have learned to diſcern betwixt Faith and Chriſt. Albeit I confeſs, that whoſo believeth in Chriſt, the ſame ſhall be ſaved.

Harpſ. No, not all that believe in Chriſt; for ſome ſhall ſay, "Lord, Lord, have we "not caſt out Devils? &c. But Chriſt will anſwer in the Day of Judgment to theſe, "De-"part from me, I know you not."

Brad. You muſt make a Difference betwixt believing, and ſaying I believe: As for Example, If one ſhould ſay and ſwear he loveth you, for all his ſaying and ſwearing ye will not believe him, when you ſee he goeth about to utter and do all the Evil againſt you that he can. Note the Difference between believing, and ſaying I believe.

Harpſ. Well, this is not much material. There is but one Way, Chriſt. How come we to know him? Where ſhall we ſeek to find him?

Brad. Forſooth, we muſt ſeek him by his Word, and in his Word, and after his Word.

Harpſ. Very good: But tell me now how firſt we came into the Company of them that could tell us this, but by Baptiſm.

Brad. Baptiſm is the Sacrament, by which outwardly we are ingrafted into Chriſt: I ſay, outwardly, becauſe I dare not exclude from Chriſt all that die without Baptiſm. I will not tie God, where he is not bound. Some Infants die, whoſe Parents deſire Baptiſm for them, and cannot have it. Baptiſm an outward Seal, whereby we are known to be Chriſtians.

Harpſ. To theſe we may think perchance that God will ſhew Mercy.

Brad. Yea, the Children whoſe Parents do contemn Baptiſm will not I condemn, becauſe the Child ſhall not bear the Father's Offence.

Harpſ. Well, we agree, that by Baptiſm then we are brought, and (as a Man would ſay) begotten to Chriſt. For Chriſt is our Father, and the Church his Spouſe is our Mother. As all Men naturally have Adam for their Father, and Eve for their Mother; ſo all ſpiritual Men have Chriſt for their Father, and the Chutch for their Mother: And as Eve was taken out of Adam's Side, ſo was the Church taken out of Christ's Side; whereout flowed Blood for the Satisfaction and Purgation of our Sins.

Anno 1555.

Brad. All this is trully spoken.

Harpf. Now then tell me whether this Church of Christ hath not been always?

Brad. Yea, since the Creation of Man, and shall be for ever.

Harpf. Very good. But yet tell me whether this Church is a visible Church, or no?

Brad. It is no otherwise visible, than Christ was here on Eatth; that is, by no exterior Pomp or Shew that setteth her forth commonly, and therefore to see her we must put on such Eyes, as good Men put on to see and know Christ when he walked here on Earth: For as Eve was of the same Substance that Adam was of, so was the Church of the same Substance that Christ of, "Flesh of his Flesh, and Bone of his Bones; as St. Paul saith, Ephes. 5. Look therefore how Christ was visibly known to be Christ when he was on Earth, that is, by considering him after the Word of God, so is the Church known.

Multitude is not always the surest Mark to know the Church.

Harpf. I do not come to reason at this present, and therefore I will go on forward. Is not this Church a Multitude?

Brad. Yes that it is. Howbeit, Latet anguis in herba, as the Proverb is. For in your Question is a Subtilty. What visible Multitude was there in Elijah's Time, or when Moses was on the Mount, Aaron and all Israel worshipping the Calf?

Dr. Harpsfield prevented of his Purpose.

Harpf. Ye divert from the Matter.

Brad. No, nothing at all. For I do prevent you, knowing well where about you go. And therefore fewer Words might very well serve.

Harpf. Well, I perceive you have Knowledge, and by a little perceive I the more. Tell me yet further, whether this Multitude have not the Ministry or Preaching of God's Word?

Preaching of the Gospel goeth ever with the Church, unless it be interrupted sometime by Persecution.

Brad. Sir, ye go about the Bush. If ye understand Preaching for the confessing of the Gospel, I will go with you: For else if you will, you may know that Persecution often hindereth Preaching.

Harpf. Well, I mean it so. Tell me yet more: Hath it not the Sacraments administred?

Brad. It hath the Sacraments, howbeit the Administration of them is often hindred. But I will put you from your Purpose, because I see where about you go. If Hereticks have Baptism, and do baptize, as they did in St. Cyprian's Time, you know this Baptism is Baptism, and not to be reiterated. This Bradford spake that the Standers by might observe, that though the Popish Church hath Baptism which we have received of them, yet notwithstanding it is not the true Church, neither need we be baptized again.

The Pope's Church hath Baptism and Sacraments administred: Ergo, The Pope's Church is the true Church.

Harpf. You go far from the Matter, and I perceive you have more Errors than one.

Brad. So you say, but that is not enough till you prove it.

Harpf. Well, this Church is a Multitude. Hath it not the Preaching of the Gospel, and the Administration of the Sacraments? And yet more, hath it not the Power of Jurisdiction?

Bradford. What Jurisdiction is exercised in Persecution and Affliction?

Harpf. I mean by Jurisdiction admonishing one another, and so forth.

Brad. Well, go to, what then?

Harpf. It hath also Succession of Bishops. And here he made much ado to prove that this was an essential Point.

The Argument faileth, A causa non sufficiente, vel non causa ut causa. A Popish Distinction of the Church to be a Multitude, having Preaching of the Gospel, Ministration of the Sacrament, Power of Jurisdiction, and Succession of Bishops.

Brad. You say as you would have it; for if this Part fail you, all the Church that you go about to set up will fall down. You shall not find in all the Scripture, this your essential Part of Succession of Bishops. In Christ's Church Antichrist will sit. And Peter telleth us, as it went in the old Church before Christ's coming, so will it be in the new Church since Christ's coming: That is, as there were false Prophets, and such as bear rule were Adversaries to the true Prophets; so shall there be (saith he) false Teachers, even of such as are Bishops, and bear rule amongst the People.

Harpf. You go always out of the Matter: But I will prove further the Succession of Bishops.

Brad. Do so.

Harpf. Tell me, were not the Apostles Bishops?

Brad. No, except you will make a new Definition of a Bishop; that is, give him no certain Place.

Harpf. Indeed, the Apostles Office was not the Bishop's Office: For it was universal, but yet Christ instituted Bishops in his Church, as St. Paul saith, he hath given Pastors, Prophets, &c. So that I think it may be proved by the Scriptures that the Succession of Bishops is an essential Point.

The Ministry of God's Word and Ministers, be an essential Point of the true Church, but not the local Succession of Ministers in one certain Place.

Brad. The Ministry of God's Word and Ministers, be an essential Point. But to translate this to the Bishops and their Succession, is a plain Subtilty: And therefore that it may be plain, I will ask you a Question. Tell me, whether the Scripture knew any difference between Bishops and Ministers, which ye call Priests?

Harpf. No.

Brad. Well, then go on forwards, and let us see what ye shall get now by the Succession of Bishops: That is, of Ministers which can be understood of such Bishops as Minister not, but Lord it.

Harpf. I perceive that you are far out of the Way. By your Doctrine you can never shew in your Church, a Multitude which ministreth God's Word and his Sacraments, which hath Jurisdiction and Succession of Bishops, which hath from Time to Time believed as you believe, beginning now, and so going upwards, as I will do of our Doctrine, and therefore are ye out of the Church, and so cannot be saved. Perchance you will bring me downwards a Shew to blear Peoples Eyes; but to go upwards, that you can never do, and this is the true Trial.

Brad. Ye must and will, I am assured, give me leave to follow the Scriptures and Examples of good Men.

Harpf. Yea.

Brad. Well then, Stephen was accused and condemned as I am, that he had taught new and false Doctrine, before the Fathers of the Church then as they were taken. Stephen for his Purgation improveth their Accusation. But how? doth he it by going upwards? No, but by coming downwards, beginning at Abraham, and continuing still till Esaias's Time, and the People's Captivity. From whence he maketh a great Leap until the Time he was in, which was (I think) about 400 Years, and called them by their right Names, Hellhounds, rather than Heaven-hounds. In this Manner

Manner will I prove my Faith, and that you can never do yours.

Harpſ. Yea Sir, if we knew that you had the Holy Ghoſt, then could we believe you. Here Bradford would have anſwered, that Stephen's Enemies would not believe he had the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore they did as they did: but as he was ſpeaking, Mr. Harpſfield roſe up, and the Keeper and others that ſtood by began to talk gently, praying Bradford to take heed to what Mr. Archdeacon ſpake, who ſtill ſaid that Bradford was out of the Church.

Brad. Sir, I am moſt certain that I am in Chriſt's Church, and I can ſhew a Demonſtration of my Religion from time to time continually.

Bradford's Prayer. God our Father, for the Name and Blood of his Chriſt be merciful unto us, and unto all his People, and deliver them from falſe Teachers, and blind Guides, thro' whom (alas) I fear, much Hurt will come to this Realm of England. God our Father bleſs us, and keep us in his Truth and poor Church for ever. Amen.

Then the Archdeacon departed, ſaying, that he would come again the next Morning.

Dr. Harpſfield returneth again to Mr. Bradford. Upon the 16th of February in the Morning, the Archdeacon, and the other two with him, came again, and after a few By-words ſpoken, they ſate down.

Mr. Archdeacon began a very long Oration, firſt repeating what they had ſaid, and how far they had gone overnight, and therewith began to prove upwards Succeſſion of Biſhops here in England for 800 Years: In France at Lyons for 1200 Years: In Spain at Hiſpalen for 800 Years: In Italy at Milan for 1200 Years, labouring by this to prove his Church. He uſed all his Succeſſion of Biſhops in the Eaſt Church for the more Confirmation of his Words, and ſo concluded with an Exhortation and an Interrogation: The Exhortation was, that Bradford would obey this Church; the Interrogation, whether Bradford could ſhew any ſuch Succeſſion, for the Demonſtration of his Church (for ſo he called it) which followed.

Unto this his long Oration, Bradford made this ſhort Anſwer; my Memory is Evil, ſo that I cannot particularly anſwer your Oration.

Therefore I will do it generally, becauſe your Oration is rather to perſwade than to prove, and therefore a ſmall Anſwer will ſerve. If Chriſt or his Apoſtles, being here on Earth, had been required by the Prelates of the Church then, to have made a Demonſtration of that Church by Succeſſion of ſuch high Prieſts as had approved the Doctrine which he taught, I think that Chriſt would have done as I do: That is, have alledged that which upholdeth the Church, even the Verity, the Word of God, taught and believed, not by the high Prieſts, which of long Time had perſecuted it, but by the Prophets and other good ſimple Men, which perchance were counted Hereticks of the Church: Which Church was not tied to Succeſſion, but to the Word of God. And thus to think St. Peter giveth me Occaſion, when he ſaith that as it went in the Church before Chriſt's Coming, ſo ſhall it go in the Church after his Coming: But then the Pillars of the Church were Perſecutors of the Church: Therefore the like we muſt look for now.

Harpſ. I can gather and prove Succeſſion in Jeruſalem of the High-prieſts from Aaron's Time. Anno 1555.

Brad. I grant, but not ſuch Succeſſion as allowed the Truth.

Harpſ. Why, did they not allow Moſes's Law.

Brad. Yes, and keep it, as touching the Books thereof, as you do the Bible, and holy Scriptures. But the true Interpretation and Meaning of it they did corrupt, as you have done and do, and therefore the Perſecution which they ſtirred up againſt the Prophets and Chriſt, was not for the Law, but for the Interpretation of it. For they taught as you do now, that we muſt fetch the Interpretation of the Scriptures at your Hands. But to make an End, Death I look for daily, yea hourly, and I think my Time is but very ſhort; therefore I had need to ſpend as much Time with God as I can whilſt I have it, for his Help and Comfort, and therefore I pray you bear with me, that I do not now particularly and in more Words anſwer your long Talk. If I ſaw Death not ſo near me as it is, I would then weigh every Piece of your Oration, if you would give me the Sum of it, and I would anſwer accordingly: But becauſe I dare not, nor I will not leave off looking and preparing for that which is at Hand, I ſhall deſire you to hold me excuſed, though I do as I do, and I heartily thank you for your gentle good Will: I ſhall heartily pray God our Father to give you the ſame Light and Life I do wiſh to myſelf. And ſo Bradford began to riſe up.

The Jews corrupt the Law, as the Papiſts do the Scriptures.

But then Mr. Archdeacon began to tell him he was in a very perillous Caſe, and that he was ſorry to ſee him ſo ſettled. As for Death, whether it be nigh or far off, I know not, neither matters it, ſo that you die well.

Brad. I doubt not in this Caſe but that I ſhall die well: For as I hope and am certain my Death ſhall pleaſe the Lord, ſo I truſt I ſhall die chearfully to the Comfort of his Children.

Bold Confidence and Hope of God's Word and Promiſe, ſeemeth ſtrange among them which are not exerciſed in Mortification.

Harpſ. But what if you be deceived?

Brad. What if you ſhould ſay the Sun doth not now ſhine? (The Sun ſhone through the Window where they ſate).

Harpſ. Well, I am ſorry to ſee you ſo ſecure and careleſs.

Brad. Indeed I am more carnally ſecure, and careleſs than I ſhould be: God make me more vigilant. But in this Caſe I cannot be ſo ſecure, for I am moſt aſſured I am in the Truth.

Harpſ. That ye are not; for you are out of the catholick Church.

Brad. No, though you have excommunicated me out of your Church, yet I am in the catholick Church of Chriſt, and am, and by God's Grace ſhall be a Child, and an obedient Child of it for ever. I hope Chriſt will have no leſs Care for me, than he had for the blind Man excommunicated out of the Synagogue: And further, I am ſure that the neceſſary Articles of the Faith, I mean the twelve Articles of the Creed, I confeſs and believe with that which you call the holy Church, ſo that even your Church hath taken too much upon her to excommunicate me for that, which by the Teſtimony of my Lord of Durham, in the Book of the Sacrament lately put forth, was free many an hundred Year after Chriſt, to believe or not believe.

Harpſ. What is that?

Anno 1555.

Brad. Tranſubſtantiation.

Harpſ. Why: Ye are not condemned only for that.

Brad. For that, and becauſe I deny that wicked Men do receive Chriſt's Body.

Harpſ. You agree not with us in the Preſence, nor in any thing elſe.

Chriſt not included really in the Sacrament.

Brad. How you believe you know: For my Part I confeſs a Preſence of whole Chriſt, God and Man, to the Faith of the Receiver.

Harpſ. Nay, you muſt believe a real Preſence in the Sacrament.

Chriſt's Body preſent to the Faith of the Receiver.

Brad. In the Sacrament? Nay, I will not ſhut him in, nor tie him to it otherwiſe than Faith ſeeth and perceiveth. If I ſhould include Chriſt really preſent in the Sacrament, or tie him to it otherwiſe than to the Faith of the Receiver, then the wicked Men ſhould receive him, which I do not believe, and by God's Grace never will.

Harpſ. More Pity: But a Man may eaſily perceive, you make no Preſence at all, and therefore you agree not therein with us.

Brad. I confeſs a Preſence, and a true Preſence but to the Faith of the Receiver.

What (quoth one that ſtood by) of Chriſt's very Body which died for us?

Brad. Yea, even of whole Chriſt, God and Man, to feed the Faith of him that receiveth it.

Harpſ. Why? this is nothing elſe but to exclude the Omnipotency of God, and all Kind of Miracle in the Sacrament.

None denieth Omnipotency more than the Papiſts, which ſay, that Chriſt's Body cannot be in the Sacrament unleſs the Subſtance of Bread be away.

Brad. I do not exclude his Omnipotency, but you do it rather: For I believe that Chriſt can accompliſh his Promiſe, the Subſtance of Bread and Wine being there, as well as the Accidents, which you believe not. When we come to the Sacrament, we come not to feed our Bodies, and therefore we have but a little Piece of Bread; but we come to feed our Souls with Chriſt by Faith, which the Wicked do want, and therefore they receive nothing but Panem Domini, as Judas did, and not Panem Dominum, as the other Apoſtles did.

Argument. Whoſo receiveth the Body of Chriſt doth receive the Fruit and Grace of Life: No wicked Men do receive the Fruit and Grace of Life: Ergo, no wicked Men receive the Body of Chriſt.

Harpſ. The Wicked do receive the very Body of Chriſt, but not the Grace of his Body.

Brad. They receive not the Body. For Chriſt's Body is no dead Carcaſs: He that receiveth it, receiveth the Spirit, which is not without Grace.

Harpſ. Well, you have many Errors. You count the Maſs for Abomination, and yet St. Ambroſe ſaid Maſs, and ſo he read out of a written Book a Sentence of St. Ambroſe to prove it.

Brad. Why Sir? the Maſs as it is now, was nothing ſo in St. Ambroſe's Time. Was not the moſt Part of the Canon made ſince by Gregory and Scholaſticus?

* That is falſe, for Scholaſticus was not before Ambroſe's Time.

Harpſ. Indeed a great Piece of it was made (as ye ſay) by Gregory: But Scholaſticus was * before St. Ambroſe's Time.

Brad. I think not: However I will not contend. St. Gregory ſaith, that the Apoſtles ſaid Maſs without the Canon, only with the Lord's Prayer.

Harpſ. You ſay true: For the Canon is not the greateſt Part of the Maſs, the greateſt Part is the Sacrifice, Elevation, Tranſubſtantiation, and Adoration.

Brad. I can away with none of thoſe.

Harpſ. No, I think the ſame: But yet Hoc facite, telleth plainly the Sacrifice of the Church.

Brad. You confound Sacrifices, not diſcerning betwixt the Sacrifice of the Church, and for the Church. The Sacrifice of the Church is no propitiatory Sacrifice, but a gratulatory Sacrifice. And as for Hoc facite, is not referred to any ſacrificing, but to the whole Action of taking, eating, &c.

Note this Doctrine good Reader.

Harpſ. You ſpeak not learnedly now; For Chriſt made his Supper only to the twelve Apoſtles, not admitting his Mother or any of the ſeventy Diſciples to it. Now the Apoſtles do ſignify the Prieſts.

Brad. I think that you ſpeak as you would Men ſhould underſtand it: For elſe you would not keep the Cup away from the Laity. We have great Cauſe to thank you, that you will give us of your Bread. For I perceive you order the Matter ſo, as though Chriſt had not commanded it to his whole Church.

Then Harpsfield would have proved Elevation by a Place of Baſilius.

Elevation was not brought in indeed before the Time of Pope Honorius.

Brad. I have read the Place, which ſeemeth to make nothing for Elevation: But be it as it is, this is no time for me to ſcan the doubtful Places of the Doctors with you. I have been in Priſon long without Books and all Neceſſaries for Study, and now Death draweth night, and by your Leave I muſt now leave off, to prepare for it.

Harpſ. If I could do you good, I would be right glad, either in Soul or Body. For you are in a perillous Caſe both ways.

Brad. Sir, I thank you for your good Will. My Caſe is as it is. I thank God it was never ſo well with me; for Death to me ſhall be Life.

Creſwell. It were beſt for you to deſire Mr. Archdeacon that he would make Sute for you, that you might have a Time to confer.

Harpſ. I will do the beſt I can: For I pity his Caſe.

Brad. Sir, I will not deſire any Body to ſue for Time for me. I am not wavering, neither would I that any Body ſhould think I were ſo. But if you have the Charity and Love you pretend towards me, and do think that I am in an Error, I think the ſame ſhould move you to do as you would be done to. As ye think of me, ſo do I of you, that you are far out of the Way, and I do not only think it, but alſo am thereof moſt aſſured. And in this and ſuch like gentle Talk they departed.

Diſcourſe between Dr. Heath, Dr. Day, and Mr. Bradford.

On the 23d of the ſame Month, the Archbiſhop of York, and the Biſhop of Chicheſter came to the Compter to ſpeak with Mr. Bradford. When he was come before them, they both, and eſpecially the Biſhop of York, uſed him very gently: they would have him to ſit down, and becauſe he would not, they alſo would not ſit. So they all ſtood, and whether he would or not, they would needs have him put on, not only his Night-cap, but his upper Cap alſo, ſaying unto him, That Obedience was better than Sacrifice.

While they were thus ſtanding together, my Lord of York began to tell Mr. Bradford that they came to him out of pure Love and Charity, without being ſent: And himſelf, alſo for the Acquaintance which he had with Bradford, more than the Biſhop of Chicheſter had: And after commending Bradford's godly Life, he concluded with this Queſtion, How he was certain of Salvation and of his Religion.

After thanks for their good Will, Bradford anſwered, By the Word of God, even by the Scriptures I am certain of Salvation and Religion.

York. Very well ſaid; But how do ye know the Word of God and the Scriptures, but by the Church?

Brad. Indeed my Lord, the Church was and is a Means to bring a Man more ſpeedily to know the Scriptures and the Word of God, as the Woman of Samaria was the Means by which the Samaritans knew Chriſt: But when they had heard him ſpeak, they ſaid, Now we know that he is Chriſt, not becauſe of thy Words, but becauſe we ourſelves have heard him; ſo after we come to the hearing and reading of the Scriptures ſhewed unto us, and diſcerned by the Church, we do believe them, and know them as Chriſt's Sheep, not becauſe the Church ſaith they are the Scriptures, but becauſe they be ſo, being aſſured thereof by the ſame Spirit which wrote and ſpake them.

York. You know in the Apoſtles Time at firſt the Word was not written.

The Authority of the Church alledged againſt Hereticks, and why.

Brad. True, if you mean it for ſome Books of the New Teſtament: But elſe for the Old Teſtament St. Peter telleth us, "We have a "more ſure Word of Prophecy:" Not that it is ſimply ſo, but in reſpect of the Apoſtles, which being alive and compaſſed with Infirmity, attributed to the Word written more Weight, as wherewith no Fault could be found, whereas for the Infirmity of their Perſons Men perchance might have found ſome Fault at their Preaching; albeit in very Deed no leſs Obedience and Faith ought to have been given to the one, than to the other; for all proceedeth from one Spirit of Truth.

York. That Place of St. Peter is not ſo to be underſtood of the Word written.

Brad. Yea Sir, that it is, and of none other.

Chicheſter. Yea, indeed Mr. Bradford doth tell you truly in that Point.

York. Well, you know that Irenæus and others do magnify much, and alledge the Church againſt the Hereticks, and not the Scripture.

Brad. True, for they had to do with ſuch Hereticks as did deny the Scriptures, and yet did magnify the Apoſtles, ſo that they were enforced to uſe the Authority of thoſe Churches wherein the Apoſtles had taught, and which had ſtill retained the ſame Doctrine.

Chich. You ſpeak the very Truth; for the Hereticks did refuſe all Scriptures, except it were a Piece of St. Luke's Goſpel.

Brad. Then the alledging of the Church cannot be principally uſed againſt me, which am ſo far from denying of the Scriptures, that I appeal unto them utterly, as to the only Judge.

York. A pretty Matter, that you will take upon you to judge the Church, I pray you where hath your Church been hitherto? For the Church of Chriſt is catholick and viſible hitherto.

The Church is catholick and viſible, but yet ſometimes more catholick and viſible than at others.

Brad. My Lord, I do not judge the Church, when I diſcern it from that Congregation, and thoſe which be not the Church, and I never denied the Church to be catholick and viſible, although at ſometimes it is more viſible than at other Times.

Chich. I pray you tell me where the Church which allowed your Doctrine, was theſe four hundred Years?

Brad. I will tell you my Lord, or rather you ſhall tell yourſelf, if you will tell me this one Thing, where the Church was in Elijah's Time, when Elijah ſaid that he was left alone? Anno 1555.

Chich. That is no Anſwer.

Brad. I am ſorry that you ſay ſo: But this will I tell your Lordſhip, that if you had the ſame Eyes wherewith a Man might have eſpied the Church then, you would not ſay it were no Anſwer. The Fault why the Church is not ſeen by you, is not becauſe the Church is not viſible, but becauſe your Eyes are not clear enough to ſee it. The true Church is viſible and ever hath been, but every Man hath not Eyes to ſee it.

Chich. You are much deceived in making this Collation betwixt the Church then and now.

York. Very well ſpoken my Lord; for Chriſt ſaid, I will build my Church; and not I do, or have built it: But I will build it.

Brad. My Lords, St. Peter teacheth me to make this Collation, ſaying; as in the People there were falſe Prophets, which were moſt in eſtimation before Chriſt's coming, ſo ſhall there be falſe Teachers amongſt the People after Chriſt's coming, and very many ſhall follow them. And as for your future Tenſe, I hope your Grace will not thereby conclude Chriſt's Church not to have been before, but rather that there is no building in the Church but by Chriſt's Work only: For Paul and Apollos be but Waterers. The Biſhops driven to an inconvenience.

Chich. In good Faith I am ſorry to ſee you ſo light in judging the Church.

York. He taketh upon him, as they all do, to judge the Church, A Man ſhall never come to Certainty that doth as they do.

Brad. My Lords, I ſpeak ſimply what I think, and deſire Reaſon to anſwer my Objections. Your Affections and Sorrows cannot be my Rules. If you conſider the Order and Caſe of my Condemnation, I cannot think but that it ſhould ſomething move your Honours. You know it well enough (for you heard it) no Matter was laid againſt me, but what was gathered upon mine own Confeſſion. Becauſe I denyed Tranſubſtantiation, and the Wicked to receive Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament, therefore I was condemned and excommunicated, but not by the Church, although the Pillars of the Church (as they be taken) did it.

Chich. No; I heard ſay the Cauſe of your Impriſonment was, for that you exhorted the People to take the Sword in the one Hand, and the Mattock in the other.

Brad. My Lord, I never meant any ſuch thing, nor ſpake any thing in that Manner. Falſe Surmiſe againſt Bradford.

York. Yea, and you behaved yourſelf before the Council ſo ſtoutly at firſt, that you would defend the Religion then; and therefore worthily were you impriſoned.

Brad. Your Grace heard me anſwer my Lord Chancellor to that Point. But ſuppoſe I had been ſo ſtout as they and your Grace make it; were not the Laws of the Realm then on my Side? Wherefore unjuſtly was I impriſoned: Only that which my Lord Chancellor propounded, was my Confeſſion of Chriſt's Truth againſt Tranſubſtantiation, and of that which the Wicked do receive, as I ſaid. The Preſence of Chriſt's Body to the Faith of the worthy Receiver.

York. You deny the Preſence.

Brad. I do not, to the Faith of the worthy Receivers.

York. Why? what is that to ſay other, than that Chriſt lieth not on the Altar?

Brad. My Lord, I believe no ſuch Preſence.

Chich. It ſeemeth that you have not read Chryſoſtom: For he proveth it.

Anno 1555.

Brad. Hitherto I have been kept well enough without Books: Howbeit this I do remember of Chrysostom, that he saith that Christ lieth upon the Altar, as the Seraphins with their Tongs touch our Lips with the Coals of the Altar in Heaven, which is an Hyperbolical Locution, of which you know Chrysostom is full.

York. It is evident that you are too far gone; but let us come then to the Church, out of which ye are excommunicate.

Mr. Bradford excommunicated with the poor blind Man.

Brad. I am not excommunicate out of Christ's Church, my Lord, altho' they which seem to be in the Church, and of the Church, have excommunicated me, as the poor blind Man was, John 9. I am sure Christ receiveth me.

Here, after much Talk of Excommunication, at length Mr. Bradford said,

Assuredly, as I think you did well to depart from the Romish Church, so I think ye have done wickedly to couple yourselves to it again; for you can never prove that, which you call the Mother Church, to be Christ's Church.

Chich. Ah Mr. Bradford, you were but a Child when this Matter began. I was a young Man, and then coming from the University, I went with the World, but I tell you it was always against my Conscience.

Brad. I was but a Child then, howbeit as I told you, I think you have done Evil. For ye are come, and have brought others to that wicked Man which sitteth in the Temple of God, that is, in the Church: For it cannot be understood of Mahomet, or any out of the Church, but of such as bear Rule in the Church.

York. See how you build your Faith upon such Places of Scripture as are most obscure, to deceive yourself, as though you were in the Church where you are not.

What Bishop Tonstall writeth of Transubstantiation.

Brad. Well, my Lord, though I might by Fruits judge of you and others, yet will I not utterly exclude you out of the Church. And if I were in your Case, I would not condemn him utterly that is of my Faith in the Sacrament, knowing as you know, that at least 800 Years after Christ, as my Lord of Durham writeth, it was free to believe or not to believe Transubstantiation.

Note how these Bishops themselves do grant, that the Time was when Transubstantiation was not defined by the Church, Tonstall saith that it was more then 800 Years after Christ.

York. This is a Toy that you have found out of your own Brain; as though a Man not believing as the Church doth, that is, Transubstantiation, were of the Church.

Chich. He is an Heretick, and so none of the Church, that doth hold any Doctrine against the Definition of the Church, as a Man to hold against Transubstantiation. Cyprian was no Heretick, though he believed re-baptizing of them who were baptized by Hereticks, because he held it before the Chruch had defined it, whereas if he had held it after, then had he been an Heretick.

Brad. Oh my Lord, will ye condemn to the Devil any Man that believeth truly the twelve Articles of the Faith (wherein I take the Unity of Christ's Church to consist) although in some Points he believe not the Definition of that which ye call the Church? I doubt not but that he which holdeth firmly the Articles of our Belief, though in other Things he dissent from your Definitions, yet he shall be saved.

York. Chich. Yea, said both the Bishops, this is your Divinity.

Brad. No, it is St. Paul's; who saith, that if they hold the Foundation, Christ, though they build upon him Straw and Stubble, yet they shall be saved.

York. Lord God, how you delight to lean to so hard and dark Places of the Scriptures.

Chich. I will shew you that Luther did excommunicate Zuinglius for this Matter, and so he read a Place of Luther making for his Purpose.

Brad. My Lord, what Luther writeth, as you mind it not, no more do I in this Case. My Faith is not build on Luther, Zuinglius, or Oecolampadius, in this Point: And indeed to tell you truly, I never read any of their Works in this Matter. As for them, I do think assuredly, that they were God's Children, and are Saints with him.

York. Well, you are out of the Communion of the Church.

Brad. I am not, for it consisteth and is in Faith.

York. Lo, how you make your Church invisible; for you would have the Communion of it consist in Faith.

Brad. For to have Communion with the Church needeth no Visibleness of it; for Communion consisteth, as I said, in Faith, and not in exterior Ceremonies, as appeareth both by St. Paul, who would have one Faith, and by Irenæus to Victor, for the Observation of Easter, saying, that disagreeing about fasting should not break the Agreement of Faith.

Chich. The same Place hath often even wounded my Conscience, because we separated ourselves from the See of Rome.

Brad. Well, God forgive you; for you have done Evil in bringing England thither again.

Succession of Priests.

Here my Lord of York took a Paper-Book of common Places, and read a Piece of St. Augustine, how that there were many Things that held St. Augustine in the Bosom of the Church; Consent of People and Nation, Authority confirmed with Miracles, nourished with Hope, increased with Charity, established with Antiquity: Besides this, there holdeth me in the Church, said St. Augustine, the Succession of Priests from Peter's Seat until this present Bishop. Last of all, the very Name of catholick did hold me, &c. Lo, (quoth he) how say you to this of St. Augustine? Paint me out your Church thus.

All this might be objected against Christ and his Apostles, by the Scribes and Pharisees.

Brad. My Lord, these Words of St. Augustine make as much for me as for you: Altho' I might answer, that all this, if they had been so firm as you make them, might have been alledged against Christ and his Apostles. For there was the Law and the Ceremonies consented to by the whole People, confirmed with Miracles, Antiquity, and continual Succession of Bishops from Aaron's Time until that present.

Chich. In good faith, Mr. Bradford, you make too much of the State of the Church before Christ's coming.

Brad. Therein I do but as St. Peter teacheth, 2 Pet 2. and St. Paul very often. You would gladly have your Church here very glorious, like a most pleasant Lady. But Christ saith, and so may his Church say, Blessed are they that are not offended at me.

York. Yea, you think that none is of the Church, but such as suffer Persecution.

Brad. What I think, God knoweth: I pray your Grace to judge me by my Words, and mark what St. Paul saith, All that will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer Persecution. Sometimes times Chriſt's Church hath Reſt here; but commonly it is not ſo, and eſpecially towards the End, her Form will be more unſeemly.

York. But what ſay you to St. Auguſtine? where is your Church that hath the Conſent of the People and Nations?

Brad. Even all People and Nations that be God's People have conſented with me, and I with them in the Doctrine of Faith.

York. Lo, ye go about to ſhift off all Things.

Brad. No, my Lord; I mean ſimply, and God knoweth I ſo ſpeak.

York. St. Auguſtine doth here talk of Succeſſion, even from St. Peter's Seat.

Succeſſion from St. Peter.

Brad. Yea, that Seat then was not ſo much corrupt as it is now.

York. Well, you always judge the Church.

Brad. No, my Lord, Chriſt's Sheep diſcern Chriſt's Voice, but they judge it not; ſo they diſcern the Church, but judge her not.

York. Yes, that they do.

Brad. No, and it pleaſe your Grace: And yet full well may one not only doubt, but judge alſo of the Romiſh Church; for ſhe obeyeth not Chriſt's Voice, as Chriſt's true Church doth.

The Church of Rome ſwerveth from the Voice of Chriſt, and wherein.

York. Wherein?

Brad. In Latin Service, and robbing the Laity of Chriſt's Cup in the Sacrament, and in many other Things, in which it committeth moſt horrible Sacrilege.

Chich. Why? Latin Service was in England when the Pope was gone.

Brad. True; the Time was in England when the Pope was away, but not all Popery; as in King Henry's Days.

York. Latin Service was appointed to be ſung and had in the Quire, where only were Clerici, that is, ſuch as underſtood Latin, the People ſitting in the Body of the Church praying their own private Prayers; and this may well be yet ſeen by making of the Chancel and Quire, ſo as the People could not come in, or hear them.

Latin Service defended.

Brad. Yea, but in St. Chryſoſtom's Time, and alſo in the Latin Church in St. Jerom's Time, all the Church, ſaid he, anſwereth mightily, Amen. Whereby we may ſee that the Prayers were made ſo, that both the People heard them and underſtood them.

Againſt Latin Service.

Chich. Ye are to blame, to ſay that the Church robbeth the People of the Cup.

Brad. Well, my Lord, term it as you pleaſe: All Men know that the Laity hath none of it.

The People robbed of the Cup.

Chich. Indeed I wiſh the Church would define again, that they might have have it, for my Part.

Brad. If God make it free, who can define to make it a Bond?

York. Well, Mr. Bradford, we loſe our Labour; for you ſeek to put away all Things which are told you for your Good: Your Church no Man can know.

Brad. Yes, that we well may.

York. I pray you whereby?

The Church known only by the Scriptures.

Brad. Forſooth Chryſoſtom ſaith, only by the Scriptures; and this you well know he ſpeaketh very often.

York. Indeed that of Chryſoſtom is in Opere Imperfecto, which may be doubted of. The Church is beſt known by Succeſſion of Biſhops.

Brad. No, my Lord, Lyra upon Matthew writeth full well, that The Church conſiſteth not in Men by reaſon either of ſecular or temporal Power, but in Men indued with true Knowledge, and Confeſſion of Faith, and of Verity. Anno 1555.

And in Hilary's Time, you know he writeth to Auxentius, that the Church was hidden rather in Caves and Holes, than did gliſter and ſhine in Thrones of Pre-eminence.

Then came one of the Servants and told them, that my Lord of Durham tarried for them at the Archbiſhop of York's Houſe; and this was after they had tarried three Hours with Mr. Bradford. And after that their Man was come they put up their written Books of common Places, and ſaid that they lamented his Caſe: They deſired him to read over a Book which did Dr. Crome good; and ſo wiſhing him good in Words, they went their Way, and poor Bradford to his Priſon.

After this Communication with the Biſhops was ended, within two Days following came into the Compter two Spaniſh Friers to talk with Mr. Bradford, ſent, as they ſaid, by the Earl of Derby; of whom one was the King's Confeſſor, the other was Alphonſus, who had before written a popiſh Book againſt Hereſies, the Effect of which their Reaſoning here likewiſe followeth.

Communication between Mr. Bradford and two Spaniſh Friers.

Upon the 25th Day of February, about eight of the Clock in the Morning, two Spaniſh Friers came to the Compter where Mr. Bradford was Priſoner; to whom Bradford was called. Then one Frier, who was the King's Confeſſor, asked in Latin (for all their Diſcourſe was in Latin) of Bradford, whether he had not ſeen or heard of one Alphonſus that had written againſt Hereſies?

Brad. I do not know him.

Confeſ. Well, this Man (pointing to Alphonſus) is he, we are come to you of Love and Charity, by the Means of the Earl of Derby, becauſe you deſire to confer with us.

Brad. I never deſired your coming, nor to confer with you, or any other. But ſeeing you are come of Charity, as you ſay, I cannot but thank you: And as concerning Conference, though I deſire it not, yet I will not refuſe to talk with you if you will.

Alphonſus. It were requiſite that you did pray to God, that ye might follow the Direction of God's Spirit, that he would inſpire you, ſo that ye be not addicted to your own Self-will or Wit.

Whereupon Mr. Bradford made a Prayer, and beſought God to direct all their Wills, Words, and Works, as the Will, Words, and Works of his Children for ever.

Alph. Yea, you muſt pray with your Heart. For if you ſpeak but with Tongue only, God will not give you his Grace.

Brad. Sir, do not judge, leſt ye be judged. You have heard my Words, now Charity would have you leave the Judgment of the Heart to God.

Alph. You muſt be as it were a Neuter, and not wedded to yourſelf, but as one ſtanding in Doubt: Pray and be ready to receive what God ſhall inſpire; for in vain laboureth our Tongue to ſpeak elſe.

Brad. Sir, my Sentence, if you mean it for Religion, muſt not be in a doubting or uncertain, as I thank God I am certain in that for which I am condemned: I have no Cauſe to doubt of it, but rather to be more certain of it; and therefore I pray God to confirm me more in it. For it is his Truth, and becauſe it Anno 1555. it is ſo certain and true that it may abide the Light, I dare be bold to have it looked on, and confer it with you, or any Man; in Reſpect whereof I am both glad of your coming, and thank you for it.

Alph. What is the Matter whereof you were condemned? we know not.

Brad. Sir, I have been in Priſon almoſt two Years: I never tranſgreſſed any of their Laws for which I might juſtly be impriſoned, and now am I condemned, only becauſe I frankly confeſſed, whereof I repent not, my Faith concerning the Sacrament, when I was demanded in theſe two Points; one, that there is no Tranſubſtantiation; the other, that the Wicked do not receive Chriſt's Body.

The Cauſe why Mr. Bradford was condemned.

Alph. Let us look a little on the firſt. Do you not believe that Chriſt is preſent really and corporally in the Form of Bread?

Brad. No, I do believe that Chriſt is preſent to the Faith of the worthy Receiver, as there is preſent Bread and Wine to the Senſes and outward Man: As for any ſuch Preſence of including and placing Chriſt, I believe not, nor dare I believe.

Chriſt preſent to the Faith of the worthy Receiver.

Alph. I am ſure you believe Chriſt's natural Body is circumſcriptible. And here he made much ado of the two Natures of Chriſt, how that the one is every where, and the other is in his proper Place, demanding ſuch Queſtions as no wiſe Man would have ſpent any Time about. At length, becauſe the Friar had forgot to conclude, Mr. Bradford put him in Mind of it, and thus then at length he concluded. How that becauſe Chriſt's Body was circumſcriptible, concerning the human Nature in Heaven, therefore it was ſo in the Bread.

A Spaniſh Argument. Chriſt's Body is circumſcriptible In Heaven: Ergo, Chriſt's Body is circumſcriptible in Bread.

Brad. How hangeth this together? Even as if you ſhould ſay; becauſe you are here, Ergo, it muſt needs follow that you are at Rome. For thus you reaſon; becauſe Chriſt's Body is in Heaven: Ergo, it is in the Sacrament under the Form of Bread: Which no wiſe Man will grant.

Alph. Why? will you believe nothing but that which is expreſly ſpoken in the Scriptures?

Brad. Yes Sir, I believe whatſoever you ſhall by Demonſtration out of the Scriptures declare unto me.

Chriſt is able to do it, Ergo, he doth it.

He is obſtinate, quoth Alphonſus to his Fellow: And then turning to Bradford, ſaid, is not God able to do it?

Brad. Yes, but here the Queſtion is of God's Will, and not of his Power.

Alph. Why? doth he not ſay plainly, This is my Body?

Brad. Yes, and I deny not but that it is ſo, to the Faith of the worthy Receiver.

Alph. To the Faith; how is that?

Brad. Forſooth Sir, as I have no Tongue to expreſs it; ſo I know ye have no Ears to hear and underſtand it. For Faith is more than Man can utter.

Alph. But I can tell all that I believe.

Brad. You believe not much then. For if you believe the Joys of Heaven, and believe no more thereof than you can tell, you will not yet deſire to come thither. For as the Mind is more capable and receivable than the Mouth, ſo it conceiveth more than Tongue can expreſs.

Alph. Chriſt ſaith it is his Body.

Brad. And ſo ſay I, after a certain Manner.

Alph. After a certain Manner; that is, after another Manner than it is in Heaven.

Brad. St. Auguſtine telleth it more plainly, that it is Chriſt's Body after the ſame Manner as Circumciſion was the Covenant of God, and the Sacrament of Faith is Faith; or to make it more plain, as Baptiſm and the Water of Baptiſm is Regeneration.

Argument. As Grace is in the Water of Baptiſm: So is the Body in the Sacrament. But Grace is in the Water by Signification: Ergo, ſo is the Body in the Sacrament.

Alph. Very well ſaid, Baptiſm and the Water thereof, is a Sacrament of God's Grace and Spirit in the Water cleanſing the Baptized.

Brad. No Sir, away with your encloſing: But this I grant, that after the ſame Sort Chriſt's Body is in the Bread, on which Sort the Grace and Spirit of God is in the Water.

Alph. God's Grace is in Water by Signification.

Brad. So is the Body in the Bread in the Sacrament.

Alph. You are much deceived, in that you make no Difference between the Sacraments that be ſtanders, and the Sacraments that are tranſitory and paſſers by. As for Example, the Sacrament of Orders, which you deny, tho' St. Auguſtine affirmeth it, it is a Stander, although the Ceremony be paſt. But in Baptiſm ſo ſoon as the Body is waſhed, the Water ceaſeth to be a Sacrament.

Brad. Very good, and ſo it is in the Supper of the Lord; no longer than it is in Uſe, is it Chriſt's Sacrament.

Here the Frier was in a wonderful Rage, and ſo loud (as he had often done before) that the whole Houſe rang again. This Frier had the Character of being a very learned Man, but ſurely by his Behaviour here he had very little Patience, for if Bradford had been any thing hot, one Houſe could not have held them. At length they came to this Point, That Bradford could not find in Scripture that Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper bare any Similitude together. And here he triumphed before the Conqueſt, ſaying, that theſe Men would have have nothing but Scripture, and yet are able to prove nothing by the Scripture.

The Frier in a Chafe.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Table compared with Baptiſm in the Scripture.

Brad. Be patient, and you ſhall ſee that by the Scripture I will find Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper coupled together.

Alph. No, that thou canſt never do. Let me ſee a Text of it.

Brad. St. Paul ſaith, That as we are baptized into one Body, ſo were we Potati in uno ſpiritu, i. e. we have drank of one Spirit, meaning the Cup in the Lord's Supper. 1 Cor. 11.

Alph. St. Paul hath no ſuch Words.

Brad. Yes, that he hath.

Confeſ. I think he hath not.

Brad. Give me a Teſtament, and I will ſhew you.

So a Prieſt that ſate by them gave him his Teſtament, and he ſhewed them the plain Text. Then they looked one upon another. In fine, the Frier found this ſimple Shift, that St. Paul ſpake not of the Sacrament.

Brad. Well, the Text is plain enough, and there are many of the Fathers which do ſo underſtand the Place: for Chryſoſtom doth expound it ſo.

Alphonſus which had the Teſtament in his Hand, deſirous to ſuppreſs this Foil, turned the Leaves of the Book from Leaf to Leaf, till he came to the Place, 1 Cor. 11. and there he read how that he was guilty, which made no Difference of the Lord's Body.

Brad. Yea, but therewith he ſaith, He that eateth of the Bread: Calling it Bread ſtill: And that after Conſecration (as ye call it) as in the Tenth of the Corinthians he ſaith; The Bread which we break, &c.

Alph. Oh how ignorant are ye, who know not that Things after their Converſion do retain the ſame Names which they had before, as Moſes's Rod: And calling for a Bible, after he had found the Place, he began to triumph: But Bradford cooled him quickly, ſaying;

Converſion is mentioned in turning Moſes's Rod, ſo it is not in the Sacrament. Moſes's Rod was ſeen to be turned, ſo is not the Sacrament.

Sir, there is Mention made of the Converſion, as well as that the ſame appeared to the Senſe. But here ye cannot find it ſo. Find me one Word how the Bread is converted, and I will then ſay, ye bring ſome Matter that maketh for you.

At theſe Words Alphonſus was troubled, and at length he ſaid, That Bradford hanged on his own Senſe.

Brad. No that do I not; for I will bring you the Fathers of the Church 800 Years after Chriſt, to confirm what I ſpeak.

Alph. No, you have the Church againſt you.

Brad. I have not Chriſt's Church againſt me.

Alph. Yes that you have. What is the Church?

Brad. Chriſt's Wife, the Chair and Seat of Truth.

Alph. Is ſhe viſible!

The Church is viſible but to them that have ſpiritual Eyes.

Brad. Yea, that ſhe is to them that will put on the Spectacles of God's Word to look on her.

Alph. This Church hath defined the contrary, and that I will prove by all the good Fathers from Chriſt's Aſcenſion, even for 800 Years at leaſt continually.

Brad. What will you ſo prove? Tranſubſtantiation.

Alph. Yea, that the Bread is turned into Chriſt's Body.

Brad. You ſpeak more than you can do.

Alph. That do I not.

Brad. Then will I give Place.

Alph. Will you believe?

Brad. Belief is God's Gift; therefore I cannot promiſe: But I tell you that I will give Place; and I hope I ſhall believe his Truth always, ſo good is he to me in Chriſt my Saviour.

Here the Frier found a great Fault with Bradford, that he made no Difference betwixt Habitus and Actus; as tho' Actus, which he called Credulity, had been in our Power. But this he let paſs, and came again, asking Bradford, if he could prove it as he ſaid, whether he would give Place?

Brad. Yea that I will. Then called he for Paper, Pen, and Ink, to write; and then ſaid I, Suppoſe that I prove by the Teſtimony of the Fathers, that continually for 800 Years after Chriſt, at leaſt, they did believe that the Subſtance of Bread remain in the Sacrament? what will ye do?

Alph. I will give Place.

The Papiſts hold that the Act of believing is in Man's Power.

Brad. Then write you here that you will give Place if I ſo prove, and I will write that I will give Place if you ſo prove: Becauſe ye are the Ancient, ye ſhall have the Pre-eminency.

Here the Frier fumed marvelloufly, and ſaid; I came not to learn from thee: Are not here Witneſſes? (meaning the Prieſts) be not they ſufficient? But the Man was ſo angry, that if Mr. Bradford had not paſſed over this Matter of writing, the Frier would have gone to plain ſcolding. Anno 1555.

At length the King's Confeſſor asked Bradford what the ſecond Queſtion was?

Brad. That wicked Men receive not Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament, as St. Auguſtine ſpeaketh of Judas, that he received Panem Domini, but not Panem Dominum.

Alph. St. Auguſtine ſaith not ſo.

The Friers depart in a Heat from Mr. Bradford.

Brad. Yes that doth he. So they aroſe and talked no more of the Matter. Thus went they away, without bidding Bradford farewel.

After they were gone, one of the Prieſts came, and deſired Bradford not to be ſo obſtinate.

Brad. Sir, be not you ſo wavering; in all the Scriptures cannot you find me, Non eſt Panis.

Prieſt. Yes that I can in five Places.

A Prieſt put to a Foil.

Brad. Then I will eat your Book. So the Book was opened, but no Place found; and he went his Way ſmiling. God help us.

It followed after this, upon the twenty firſt of March, that by means of one of the Earl of Derby's Men, there came to the Compter to Dinner one Mr. Collier, once Warden of Manchester, and the ſaid Servant of the Earl of Derby, of whom Mr. Bradford learned, that Dr. Weſton Dean of Weſtminſter would be with him in the Afternoon about two of the Clock. At dinner Time, when the ſaid Warden diſcommended King Edward, and went about to ſet forth the Authority of the Pope, which Bradford withſtood, defending the King's Faith, that it was Catholick, and that the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome's Supremacy was uſurped, bringing forth the Teſtimony of Gregory, which affirmeth the Name of ſupream Head, to be a Title of the Forerunner to Antichriſt. A Woman Priſoner was brought in, whereupon the ſaid Bradford took Occaſion to riſe from the Table, and ſo went to his Priſonchamber to pray to God for his Grace and Aſſiſtance therein, continuing there till he was called down to ſpeak with Dr. Weſton, who was then come in.

Mr. Bradford then being called down, ſo ſoon as he was entred into the Hall, Dr. Weſton very gently took him by the Hand, and asked how he did, with ſuch other Talk. At length he deſired them to go out of the Chamber: So they all went out, ſave Dr. Weſton himſelf, Mr. Collier, the Earl of Derby's Servant, the Subdean of Weſtminſter, the Keeper, Mr. Claydon, and the Parſon of the Church near the Compter.

Conference between Mr. Bradford and Dr. Weſton.

Now when he began with Mr. Bradford, to tell how that he was often minded to have come unto him, being deſired by the Earl of Derby: And (quoth he) after I perceived by this Man, that you could be contented rather to ſpeak with me, than any other; I could not but come to do you all the Good I can; for you may be ſure I will never hurt you.

Sir, quoth Mr. Bradford, when I perceived by the Report of my Lord's Servant, that you did bear me good Will: More (as he ſaid) then any other of your Sort, I told him then, that I could be better content and more willing to talk with you, if you ſhould come unto me. This did I ſay, quoth he, otherwiſe I deſired not your coming.

Weſt. Well, quoth he, now I am come to talk with you: But before we ſhall enter into any any talk, certain Principles we muſt agree upon, which ſhall be this Day's work.

Anno 1555.

Dr. Weſton's Leſſons, ſuch as he never followed himſelf.

Frſt, quoth he, I ſhall deſire you to put away all vain Glory, and not hold any Thing for the Praiſe of the World.

Brad. Sir, St. Auguſtine maketh that indeed a Piece of the Definition of an Heretick; which if I cannot put away clean (for I think there will a Spice of it remain in us, as long as this Fleſh liveth) yet I promiſe you by the Grace of God, that I purpoſe not to yield to it. God I hope will never ſuffer it to bear Rule in them that ſtrive againſt it, and deſire all the Dregs of it utterly to be driven out of us.

Weſt. I am glad to hear you ſay ſo, altho' indeed I think you do not ſo much eſteem it as others do.

Secondly, I would deſire you that you will put away Singularity in your Judgment and Opinions.

Brad. Sir, God forbid that I ſhould ſtick to my Singularity or private Judgment in God's Religion. Hitherto I have not deſired it, neither do, nor mind at any time to hold any other Doctrine than is Publick and Catholick, underſtanding Catholick as good Men do; according to God's Word.

Dr. Weſton willeth Mr. Bradford to put down in writing the chief Grounds of his Faith.

Weſt. Very well, this is a good Day's Work, I hope to do you good: And therefore now thirdly, I ſhall pray you to write me the Heads of thoſe Things whereupon you ſtand in the Sacrament, and to ſend them to me betwixt this and Wedneſday next: Until which time, yea, until I come to you again, be aſſured that you are without all Peril of Death. Of my Fidelity, I warrant you, therefore away with all Dubitations, &c.

Brad. Sir, I will write to you the Grounds I lean to in this Matter. As for Death, if it come, welcome be it; this which you require of me, ſhall be no great Hindrance to me therein.

Weſt. You know that St. Auguſtine was a Manichean, yet was he converted at length; ſo have I good Hope of you.

Brad. Sir, becauſe I will not flatter you, I would you ſhould flatly know, that I am even ſettled in that Religion for which I am condemned.

Weſt. Yea, but if it be not the Truth, and you ſee evident Matter to the contrary, will you not then give Place?

Brad. God forbid, but that I ſhould always give Place to the Truth.

Well. I would have you ſo to pray.

Brad. So I do, and that he will more and more confirm me in it, as I thank God he hath done and doth.

Weſt. Yea but pray with a Condition, if you be in it.

Brad. No Sir, I cannot pray ſo, becauſe I am ſettled and aſſured of his Truth.

Well, quoth Weſton, as the learned Biſhop anſwered St. Auguſtine's Mother, that though he was obſtinate, yet the Tears of ſuch a Mother could not but win her Son: So, quoth he, I hope your Prayers (for then Bradford's Eyes did ſhew that he had wept in Prayer) cannot but be heard by God, though not as you would, yet as beſt ſhall pleaſe him. Do ye not, quoth he, remember the Hiſtory thereof?

Yea Sir, quoth Bradford, I think it be of St. Ambroſe.

Weſt. No, that it is not. And here Weſton would have laid a Wager, and began to triumph, ſaying to Bradford; As you are overſeen herein, ſo are you in other Things.

Brad. Well, Sir, I will not contend with you for the Name. This (I remember) St. Auguſtine writeth in his Confeſſions.

Mr. Bradford wrongfully charged with Sedition.

After this Talk Dr. Weſton began to tell Mr. Bradford, that the People were perſuaded by him to withſtand the Queen.

Whereunto Bradford anſwering again, bade him hang him up as a Traitor and a Thief, if ever he encourag'd any to Rebellion: His Keeper and the Prieſts that were there affirmed the ſame. At that Time there was much Talk to little Purpoſe. Dr. Weſton declared moreover how he had ſaved Men going in the Cart to be hanged, and ſuch like.

The End was this, that Bradford ſhould ſend unto him, the Heads of the Doctrine of the Supper, and after Wedneſday he would come unto him again, thus he departed, after he had drunk to him in Beer and Wine. I omit here Talk of Oxford, of Books of Germany Writers, of the Fear of Death, and ſuch other Talk, which are to no Purpoſe.

Conference between Mr. Bradford and Dr. Pendleton.

In the mean Time, when Mr. Bradford had written his Reaſons and Arguments, and had ſent them to Dr. Weſton, ſoon after, about the 28th of March, there came to the Compter Dr. Pendleton, and with him the aforeſaid Mr. Collier, ſometime Warden of Mancheſter, and Stephen Bech. After Salutations Dr. Pendleton began to ſpeak to Mr. Bradford, that he was ſorry for his Trouble. And further, ſaid he, after that I knew you could be content to talk with me, I made the more Speed, being as ready to do you Good, and pleaſure you what I can, as ye would wiſh.

Dr. Pendleton once of the ſame Religion with Mr. Bradford.

Brad. Sir, the Manner how I was content to ſpeak with you was on this Sort: Mr. Bech often asked me whom he ſhould bring unto me, and named you amongſt others: And I ſaid that I had rather ſpeak with you than with any other. Now the Cauſe why I ſo would I will briefly tell you. I remember that once you were (as far as a Man might judge) of the Religion that I am of at this preſent, and I remember that you have earneſtly ſet forth the ſame. Gladly therefore would I learn of you, what thing it was that moved your Conſcience to alter, and gladly would I ſee what thing it is that you have ſeen ſince which you ſaw not before.

Pendleton. I do not know for what you are condemned.

Brad. Tranſubſtantiation is the Cauſe for which I am condemned, and becauſe I deny wicked Men do receive Chriſt's Body: Wherein I would deſire you to ſhew me what Reaſons which before you knew not, did move your Conſcience now to alter. For once (as I ſaid) you were as I am in Religion.

Dr. Pendleton belike would ſtudy out the Reaſons that moved him to alter: For he had none ready to ſhew.

Here Mr. Pendleton half amazed, began to excuſe himſelf, though he had not fully denied Tranſubſtantiation indeed, although I ſaid, quoth he, that the Word was not in Scripture; and ſo he made an endleſs Tale of the Thing that moved him to alter: But ſaid he, I will gather to you the Places which moved me, and ſend you them. And here he deſired Mr. Bradford that he might have a Copy of that which he had ſent to Dr. Weſton; which Mr. Bradford promiſed him.

Some Reaſoning alſo they had, whether evil Men did receive Chriſt's Body, Bradford denying, and Pendleton affirming. Bradford ſaid, ſaid, that they received not the Spirit: Ergo, not the Body; for it is no dead Carcaſs. Hereto Bradford brought alſo St. Auguſtine, how Judas received Panem Domini, and not Panem Dominum, and that he muſt be in Chriſt's Body which muſt receive the Body of Chriſt. But Pendleton went about to put it away with Idem, and not Ad idem, and how that In Corpore Chriſti was to be underſtood of all that be in the viſible Church with God's Elect. Bradford denied this to be St. Auguſtine's Meaning, and ſaid alſo that the Allegation of Idem, and not Ad Idem, could not make for that Purpoſe. They talked more of Tranſubſtantiation, Pendleton bringing forth Cyprian, Panis natura niutatur, &c. And Bradford ſaid that in that Place Natura did not ſignify Subſtance. As the Nature of an Herb is not the Subſtance of it; ſo the Bread changed in Nature is not to be taken for changed in Subſtance: For now it is ordained not for the Food of the Body ſimply, but rather for the Soul. Here alſo Bradford alledged the Sentence of Gelaſius. Pendleton ſaid, that he was a Pope. Yea, ſaid Bradford, but his Faith is my Faith in the Sacrament, if ye would receive it.

The Place of St. Cyprian expounded how the Nature of Bread is changed.

They reaſoned alſo whether Accidentia were Res, or no. If they be properly Res, ſaid Bradford, then are they Subſtances; and if they be Subſtances, they are earthly, and then there are earthly Subſtances in the Sacrament, as Irenæus ſaith, which much needs be Bread. But Pendleton ſaid, that the Colour was the earthly Thing, and called it an accidental Subſtance.

I omit the Talk they had of my Lord of Canterbury, of Peter Martyr's Book, of Pendleton's Letter laid to Bradford's Charge when he was condemn'd, with other Talk about the Church; whether Dic Eccleſia was ſpoken of the univerſal Church, or of a particular Church, (at length Mr. Pendleton granted that it was ſpoken of a particular Church) alſo of Vainglory, which he deſired Bradford to beware of, and ſuch-like Talk. A little before his departing Mr. Bradford ſaid thus; Maſter Doctor, as I ſaid to Dr. Weſton before, ſo ſay I to you now, that I am the ſame Man in Religion againſt Tranſubſtantiation ſtill, as I was when I came into Priſon; for hitherto I have ſeen nothing in any one Point to convince me of the contrary. At which Words Mr. Pendleton was ſomething moved, and ſaid that it was no catholick Doctrine. Yes, quoth Mr. Bradford, and that I will prove even by the Teſtimony of the catholick Fathers until the Council of Lateran, or thereabout. Then Pendleton went his way, ſaying that he would often come to Mr. Bradford.

Mr. Bradford could hear no reaſon of the Papiſts to weaken his Opinion againſt Tranſubſtantiation.

God our Father be with us all, and give us the Spirit of his Truth for ever. Amen.

The ſame Day in the Afternoon, about five of the Clock, Dr. Weſton came to Bradford, and after gentle Salutations, he deſired the Company every Man to depart, and ſo they two ſate down. And after he had thanked Bradford for his writing to him, he pulled out of his Boſom the ſame Writing which Bradford had ſent him. The Writing is this that followeth.

Anno 1555.

Certain Reaſons againſt Tranſubſtantiation, gathered by John Bradford, and given to Dr. Weſton and others.

THAT which is former, ſaith Tertullian, is true; that which is latter is falſe. But the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation is a late Doctrine: For it was not defined generally before the Council of Lateran, about 1215 Years after Chriſt's coming, under Pope Innocent, the Third of that Name. For before that Time it was free for all Men to believe, or not believe it, as the Biſhop of Durham doth witneſs in his Book of the Preſence of Chriſt in his Supper, lately put forth: Ergo, The Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation is falſe.

Tranſubſtantiation not brought into the Church before the Year 1215 by Pope Innocent.

2. That the Words of Chriſt's Supper be figurative, the Circumſtances of the Scripture, the Analogy or Proportion of the Sacraments, and the Sentences of all the holy Fathers, which were and wrote for the Space of 1000 Years after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, do teach: Whereupon it followeth, that there was no Tranſubſtantiation.

3. That the Lord gave to his Diſciples Bread, and called it his Body, the Scriptures do witneſs. For he gave that, and called it his Body, which he took in his Hand, whereon he gave Thanks, which alſo he brake, and gave to his Diſciples, that is to ſay, Bread, as the Fathers Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen, Cyprian, Epiphanius, Auguſtine, and all the Reſidue which are of Antiquity, do affirm: But in as much as the Subſtance of Bread and Wine is another Thing than the Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, it plainly appeareth that there is no Tranſubſtantiation.

4. The Bread is no more tranſubſtantiate than the Wine: But that the Wine is not tranſubſtantiate, St. Matthew and St. Mark do teach us: For they witneſs, that Chriſt ſaid, that he would drink no more of the Fruit of the Wine, which was not Blood, but Wine: And therefore it followeth, that there is no Tranſubſtantiation. Chryſoſtom upon St. Matthew, and Cyprian do affirm this Reaſon.

The Wine is not tranſubſtantiate: Ergo, neither the Bread.

5. As the Bread in the Lord's Supper is Chriſt's natural Body, ſo it is his myſtical Body; for the ſame Spirit that ſpake of it, This is my Body, did ſay alſo, For we many are one Bread, one Body, &c. but now it is not the myſtical Body by Tranſubſtantiation, and therefore it is not his natural Body by Tranſubſtantiation.

The ſame Spirit which ſaith, This is my Body, ſaith alſo, We many are one Bread and one Body, &c.

6. The Words ſpoken over the Cup in St. Luke and St. Paul, are not ſo mighty and effectual, as to tranſubſtantiate it: For then the Cup, or that which is in it, ſhould be tranſubſtantiated into the New Teſtament: Therefore the Words ſpoken over the Bread, are not ſo mighty as to make Tranſubſtantiation.

The Words do not tranſubſtantiate the Cup into New Teſtament, Ergo, neither the Bread into the Body.

7. All that Doctrine which agreeth with thoſe Churches which be apoſtolical Mother Churches, or original Churches, is to be counted for Truth, in that it holdeth that which theſe Churches received of the Apoſtles, the Apoſtles of Chriſt, Chriſt of God. But it is manifeſt, that the Doctrine taught at this preſent by the Church of Rome, concerning Tranſubſtantiation, doth not agree with the apoſtolical and mother Churches in Greece, of Corinthus, of Philippos, Coloſſia, Theſſalonica, and and Epheſus, which never taught Tranſubſtantiation; yea, it agreeth not with the Doctrine of the Church of Rome, as it was taught in Times paſt. For Gelaſius the Pope, ſetting forth the Doctrine which that See then held, doth manifeſtly confute the Error of Tranſubſtantiation, and reproveth them for Sacrilege, who divided the Myſtery, and kept the Cup from the Laity: Therefore the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation agreeth not with the Truth.

Anno 1555.

The Doctrine of the Church of Rome for Tranſubſtantiation agreeth not with the Greek Churches, nor with the old Roman Church.

This was the Writing which Weſton pulled out of his Boſom; and yet before he began to read it, he told Mr. Bradford that he had enquired of his Converſation at Cambridge ſince his laſt being with him; and, ſaid he, becauſe you are a Man not given to the Glory of the World, I will ſpeak it before your Face: Your Life I have learned was always ſuch there, as all Men, even the greateſt Enemies you have, cannot but praiſe it, and therefore I love you much better than ever I did: But now I will read over your Arguments, and ſo we will confer them. They are ſuch that a Man may well perceive you ſtand on Conſcience, and therefore I am the more ready and glad to pity you. So he began to read the firſt; to which he ſaid, that though the Word Tranſubſtantiaton began but lately, yet the Thing always was, and hath been ſince Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Brad. I do not contend, or inſiſt upon the Word only, but upon the Thing, which is as new as the Word.

Then Dr. Weſton went to the Second, and there brought out St. Auguſtine, how that if an evil Man going to the Devil, did make his Will, his Son and Heir would not ſay his Father did lye in it, or ſpeak tropically: much more Chriſt, going to God, did never lye, or uſe any figurative Speech in his laſt Will and Teſtament. Do you not remember this place of St. Auguſtine, ſaid he?

Brad. Yea, Sir, but I do not remember that St. Auguſtine hath thoſe Words tropically, or figuratively, as you rehearſe them: For any Man may ſpeak a Thing figurately, and not lye: And ſo Chriſt did in his laſt Supper.

After this Dr. Weſton went to the Third, and brought forth Cyprian, how that the Nature of Bread is turned into Fleſh. Here, ſaith he, my Lord of Canterbury expoundeth Nature for Quality, by Gelaſius. Which Interpretation ſerveth for the Anſwer of your Argument, that Chrin called Bread his Body: That is, the Quality, Form, and Appearance of Bread. And further, the Scripture is wont to call Things by the ſame Names which they had before, as Simon the Leper; he was not ſo at that Time, but becauſe he had been ſo.

Simon, tho' he were called the Leper: Yet he was ſeen to be no Leper.

Brad. Cyprian wrote before Gelaſius: Therefore Cyprian muſt not expound Gelaſius, but Gelaſius Cyprian: And ſo they both teach, that Bread remaineth ſtill. As for Things having ſtill the Names they had, is no Anſwer, except you could ſhew that this now were not Bread, as eaſily as a Man might have known and ſeen then Simon to have been healed and clear from his Leproſy.

But Bread is ſeen ſtill to be Bread: And therefore hath its Name not of that it was, but of that it is.

After this Dr. Weſton went to the Fourth, of the Cup, which he did not fully read, but digreſſed into a long Talk of Cyprian's Epiſtle De Aquitiis: Alſo of St. Auguſtine, expounding the breaking of Bread by Chriſt to his two Diſciples going to Emmaus, to be the Sacrament; with ſuch other Talk to no certain Purpoſe: and therefore Mr. Bradford prayed him, that inaſmuch ss he had written the Reaſons that eſtabliſhed his Faith againſt Tranſubſtantiation, ſo he would likewiſe do to him, that is, anſwer him by writing, and ſhew him more Reaſons in writing to confirm Tranſubſtantiation. Which Dr. Weſton promiſed to do, and ſaid that he would ſend or bring it to Mr. Bradford again within three Days.

Dr. Weſton required to write his Reaſons.

Thus when he had read over the Arguments, and here and there ſpoke little to the Purpoſe for the avoiding of them, and Bradford had prayed him to give him his Anſwers in writing: Then he began to tell Mr. Bradford how and what he had done for Mr. Grimoald, and that Bradford needed not to fear any Reproach or Slander he ſhould ſuffer, meaning belike to have Bradford ſecretly to come to them as Grimoald did; for he ſubſcribed.

Mr. Bradford plain and firm in Confeſſion of the Truth.

Brad. Mr. Dean, I would not have you conceive that I mind the Shame of Men in this Matter: I would rather have you think as the very Truth is, that hitherto as I have not heard or ſeen any Thing to weaken my Faith againſt Tranſubſtantiation, ſo I am no leſs ſettled in it than I was at my firſt coming hither. I love to be plain with you, and to tell you at Firſt as you ſhall find at the Laſt.

Weſt. In good Faith Mr. Bradford, I love you the better for your Plainneſs: And do not think otherwiſe of me, but that you ſhall find me plain in all my Talk with you.

Here Weſton began to ask Bradford of his Impriſonment and Condemnation; and Bradford told him altogether how he had been handled. Whereat Weſton ſeemed to wonder: Yea in plain Words he ſaid, that Bradford had been handled otherwiſe than he had given Cauſe; and ſo ſhewed him, that my Lord of Bath reported that he had deſerved a Benefit at the Queen's Hand, and at all the Councils.

In this kind of Talk they ſpent almoſt an Hour, and Mr. Bradford, being weary, roſe up, and Weſton called the Keeper, and before him he bade Bradford be of good Comfort, and told him that he was in no danger of Death.

Sir, quoth the Keeper, but it is in every Man's Mouth, that he ſhall die to-morrow.

Whereat Weſton ſeemed half amazed, and ſaid, he would go ſay Even-ſong before the Queen, and ſpeak to her in his Behalf. But it is to be thought that the Queen had almoſt ſupped at that preſent: For it was paſt ſix of the Clock.

Before the Keeper, Bradford told Weſton again that ſtill he was one Man, and even as he was at the Firſt; and till he ſhould ſee Matter to teach his Conſcience the contrary, he ſaid he muſt needs ſo continue.

The Keeper deſired Bradford to hearken to Mr. Doctor's Counſel, and prayed Mr. Doctor to be good unto him: And ſo after they had drank together, Mr. Doctor with moſt gentle Words took his Leave for three Days.

Now when he was gone, the Keeper told Bradford, that Mr. Doctor ſpake openly, that he ſaw no Cauſe why they ſhould burn him. Which Sentence, for the Ambiguity of the Meaning, made him ſomewhat ſorry, leſt he had behaved himſelf in any Thing, wherein he had gathered any Conformableneſs to them in their Doctrine, which God knoweth, ſaith Bradford, I never as yet did. God our Father bleſs us, as his Children, and keep us from all Evil for ever. Amen.

Another Conference between Mr. Bradford and Dr. Weſton.

Upon the fifth Day of April Dr. Weſton came to the Compter about two of the Clock in the Afternoon, who excuſed himſelf for being ſo long abſent; partly by Sickneſs, partly for that Dr. Pendleton told him that he would come unto him; and partly for that, ſaid he, I withſtood certain Monks which would have come again into Weſtminſter; telling him moreover, that the Pope was dead, and alſo declared unto him, that he had ſpoken to the Queen in his Behalf, and that Death was not near to him.

Laſt of all he excuſed himſelf for not anſwering his Arguments againſt Tranſubſtantiation; becauſe my coming to Day, ſaid he, was more by Fortune, than of Purpoſe.

Brad. I would gladly, Mr. Doctor, if it pleaſe you, ſee your Anſwers to my Arguments.

Weſt. Why? you have remembred ſomething that I ſpake to you, when I was laſt with you.

Brad. No Sir, I never call'd them in manner to mind, ſince that Time, as well, becauſe I hoped you would have written them; as alſo for that they ſeemed not to be ſo material.

Bradford's Arguments not anſwered.

Weſt. In good Faith I cannot ſee any other or better Way for you, than to ſubmit yourſelf to the Judgment of the Church.

Brad. Marry ſo will I, Sir, if ſo be by the Church you underſtand Chriſt's Church.

Weſt. Lo, you take upon you to judge the Church.

The Papiſts will not have the Church judged.

Brad. No Sir, that do I not; in taking upon me to diſcern, I do not judge the Church.

Weſt. Yes, that you do; and make it inviſible.

Brad. I do neither.

Weſt. Why, who can ſee your Church?

Brad. Thoſe Sir, that have ſpiritual Eyes, wherewith they might have diſcerned Chriſt's viſible Converſation here upon Earth.

The Church is viſible but only to ſpiritual Eyes.

Weſt. Nay, Chriſt's Church hath three Tokens, that all Men may look well upon: Namely, Unity, Antiquity, and Conſent.

Brad. Theſe three may be as well in Evil as in Good, as well in Sin as in Virtue, as well in the Devil's Church, as in God's Church. As for an Example, Idolatry amongſt the Iſraelites had all thoſe three. Chryſoſtom telleth plainly, as you well know, that the Church is well known only by the Scriptures.

Weſt. In good Faith, you make your Church inviſible, when you will have it known only by the Scriptures.

Brad. No Sir, the Scriptures do plainly ſet forth to us the Church, that all Men may well enough know her thereby, if they pleaſe to look.

Weſt. The Church is like a Tower or Town, that all Men may ſee.

Brad. True Sir, all Men that be not blind. Viſible enough is the Church, but Mens Blindneſs is great. Impute not therefore to the Church, that which is to be imputed to Mens Blindneſs.

Why the Church is not ſeen.

Weſt. Where was your Church forty Years ago? Or where is it now, except in a Corner of Germany?

Brad. Forſooth Sir, the Church of God is diſperſed, and not tied to this or that Place, but to the Word of God; ſo that where it is, there is God's Church, if it be truly taught.

Weſt. Lo, is not this to make the Church inviſible? Point me out a Realm a hundred Years paſt which maintained your Doctrine.

Brad. Sir, if you will, or would well mark the State of the Church before Chriſt's coming, with it now (as S. Peter and Paul willeth us) I think you would not look for ſuch Shews of the Church to be made, as to point it by Realms. You know that in Elijah's Time, both in Iſrael and elſewhere, God's Church was not pointable; and therefore he cried out, that he was left alone. Anno 1555.

Weſt. No marry, did not God ſay that there was 7000 which had not bowed their Knees to Baal? Lo then 7000, ſhew me 7000 a hundred Years ago of your Religion.

Brad. Sir, theſe 7000 were not known to Men: For then Elijah would not have ſaid, that he had been left alone. And that is plain enough by the Text, namely, that God ſaith, I have reſerved to me ſeven thouſand. Mark that it ſaith, God hath reſerved to himſelf, to his own Knowledge; as I doubt not but a hundred Years ago God had his ſeven thouſand in his proper Places, tho' Men knew not thereof.

Weſton. Well, Mr. Bradford, I will not make your Caſe worſe, than for Tranſubſtantiation: Although I know that we agree not in other Matters. And I pray you make it not worſe yourſelf. If I can do you good, I will: Hurt you I will not. I am no Prince, and therefore I cannot promiſe you Life, except you will ſubmit yourſelf to the Definition of the Church.

Brad. Sir, If you will define your Church, and bring no falſe Church into that Definition, you ſhall ſoon ſee that I will be at a Point with you.

Weſt. In good Faith Mr. Bradford, I ſee no Good will be done, and therefore I wiſh you as much Good as I can; and perhaps I may come or ſend to you again: And ſo he departed, and went for Mr. Weal.

After his Departure, the Keeper, Mr. Claydon, and Stephen Bech came to Mr. Bradford, and ſpake to him in ſuch a Manner as if they had been his utter Enemies, notwithſtanding the Friendſhip they hitherto pretended. If God be with us, it matters not who is againſt us.

Divers came to Mr. Bradford in Priſon, ſome to diſpute, ſome to confer, ſome to give Counſel, ſome to take Comfort, and be confirmed in their Faith, and others came to viſit him. There was a certain Gentlewoman's Servant, which Gentlewoman had been cruelly afflicted, and miſerably handled by her Father and Mother, and all her Kindred in her Father's Houſe, for not coming to Maſs, and ſhe had been put to Death, had not the Providence of God delivered her from her Father's Houſe, although at the Loſs of all ſhe had.

Conference between Bradford and a Gentlewoman's Servant.

This Gentlewoman's Servant therefore coming to Mr. Bradford, and taking him by the Hand, ſaid, God be thanked for you. How do you?

Mr. Bradford anſwered, Well, I thank God. For as Men in ſailing, which be near to the Shore or Haven where they would be, would be nearer; even ſo the nearer I am to God, the nearer I would be.

Serv. Sir, I have never ſeen you ſo ſtrong and healthful in Body, as methink you be now, God be thanked for it.

Why, ſaid Bradford, I have given over all Care and Study, and only do I covet to be talking with him, whom I have always ſtudied to be withal.

Anno 1555.

Serv. Well, God hath done much for you ſince the Time that I firſt knew you, and hath wrought wonderouſly in you to his Glory.

Brad. Truth it is, for he hath dealt favourably with me, in that he hath not puniſhed me according to my Sins, but hath ſuffered me to live, that I might ſeek Repentance.

Serv. Truly, we hear ſay, there is a Rod made ſo grievous, out of which I think no Man ſhall pluck his Head.

Brad. Well, let all that be of Chriſt's Flock, arm themſelves to ſuffer: For I think verily, God will not have one of his to eſcape untouched, if he love him, let them ſeek what Means or Ways they can.

Serv. Well Sir, there is a Diſcourſe of a Frier that preach'd before the King, who told him, that he ſhould be guilty of the innocent Blood that hath been ſhed of late.

By this Frier he meaneth Alphonſus mentioned before.

Verily, quoth Bradford, I had a Book within theſe two Days of his Writing, and therein he ſaith, that it is not meet nor convenient that the Hereticks ſhould live: And therefore I do marvel how that Talk ſhould riſe: For I have heard of it alſo, and I have alſo talked with this Frier (he is named Frier * Fonſo) and with divers others, and I praiſe God they have confirmed me: For they have nothing to ſay but that which is moſt vain.

* Alphonſus, otherwiſe called in the vulgar Speech Frier Fonſo.

Serv. Sir, Father Cardmaker commendeth himſelf unto you.

Brad. How doth he, how doth he?

Serv. Well, God be thanked.

Brad. I am very glad thereof: For indeed my Lord Chancellor did caſt him in my Teeth: But as David ſaith, God hath diſappointed him.

Serv. Forſooth, God's Name be praiſed, he is very ſtrong.

Brad. And I truſt, ſo are we. What elſe? our Quarrel is moſt juſt: Therefore let us not be afraid.

Serv. My Miſtreſs commendeth herſelf unto you.

Brad. How doth ſhe?

Serv. Well, God be praiſed, but ſhe hath been ſorer afflicted with her own Father and Mother, than ever you were with your Impriſonment, and yet God hath preſerved her, I truſt, to his Glory.

A Story of a faithful Woman and Martyr in the primitive Church, named Juleddo.

Brad. I pray you tell her, I read this Day a godly Hiſtory, written by Baſilius Magnus, of a virtuous Woman which was a Widow, and was named Juleddo. She had great Lands and many Children, and nigh her dwelled a Cormorant, who for her Virtue and pious Living, had great Indignation againſt her, and of very Malice he took away her Lands, ſo that ſhe was conſtrained to go to Law with him: And in Concluſion, the Matter came to to the Trial before the Judge, who demanded of this Tyrant why he wrongfully with-held theſe Lands from this Woman? He made Anſwer and ſaid, he might ſo do: For (ſaid he) this Woman is diſobedient to the King's Proceedings; for ſhe will in no wiſe worſhip his Gods, nor offer Sacrifice unto them. Then the Judge hearing that, ſaid unto her, Woman, if this be true, thou art not only like to loſe thy Land, but alſo thy Life, unleſs that thou worſhip our Gods, and do Sacrifice unto them. This good Woman hearing that, ſtept forth to the Judge, and ſaid, Is there no Remedy but either to worſhip your falſe Gods, or elſe to loſe my Lands and Life? Then farewel Suit, farewel Lands, farewel Children, farewel Friends, yea, and farewel Life too: And in reſpect of the true Honour of the everliving God, farewel all. And with that Saying the Judge committed her to Priſon, and afterward ſhe ſuffered moſt cruel Death: And being brought to the Place of Execution, ſhe exhorted all Women to be ſtrong and conſtant. For, ſaith ſhe, ye were redeemed with as dear a Price as Men. For although ye were made of the Rib of the Man, yet be you all of his Fleſh: So that alſo, in the Caſe and Trial of your Faith towards God, ye ought to be as ſtrong. And thus died ſhe conſtantly, not fearing Death: I pray you tell your Miſtreſs of this Hiſtory.

Serv. That I ſhall, Sir, by God's Grace: For ſhe told me that ſhe was with you and Mr. Saunders, and received your gentle Counſel.

Brad. We never gave her other Counſel but the Truth, and in Witneſs thereof, we have and will ſeal it with our Blood. For I thought this Night that I had been ſent for, becauſe at Eleven of the Clock there was ſuch rapping at the Door.

Then anſwered a Maid, and ſaid, Why then I perceive you were afraid.

Mr. Bradford not afraid of Death.

Brad. Ye ſhall hear how fearful I was. For I conſidered that I had not ſlept, and I thought to take a Nap before I went: And after I was aſleep, theſe Men came into the next Chamber, and ſang, as it was told me, and yet for all my Fearfulneſs, I heard them not: Therefore belike I was not afraid that ſlept ſo faſt.

Serv. Do you lack any Thing towards your Neceſſity?

Brad. Nothing but your Prayers, and I truſt I have them, and you mine.

Serv. I ſaw a Prieſt come to you to Day in the Morning.

Brad. Yea, he brought me a Letter from a Frier, and I am writing an Anſwer.

Serv. Then we hinder you, therefore the living God be with you.

Brad. And with you alſo, and bleſs you.

Serv. Amen, ſaid he, and gave him Thanks and departed.

Mr. Bradford continued ſtill in Priſon, until the Month of July, in ſuch Labours and Sufferings as he always before had ſuſtained in Priſon. But when the Time of his determined Death was come, he was ſuddenly conveyed ont of the Compter where he was Priſoner, in the Night Seaſon to Newgate, as is declared before, and from thence he was carried the next Morning to Smithfield, where he conſtantly abiding in the ſame Truth of God, which before he had confeſſed, earneſtly exhorting the People to repent, and to return to Chriſt, and ſweetly comforting the pious young Man of nineteen or twenty Years of Age, who ſuffered with him, chearfully he ended his painful Life to live with Chriſt.

John Leaf fellow Martyr with Mr. Bradford.

With whom was burnt John Leaf, Apprentice to Humphry Gawdy, Tallow-chandler, of the Pariſh of Chriſt-Church in London, born at Kirkly More-ſide in the County of York; who upon the Friday before Palm-Sunday was committed to the Compter in Bread-ſtreet, by an Alderman of the Ward where the ſaid John Leaf dwelt. Afterwards he coming to Examination before Biſhop Bonner, gave a firm and chriſtian Teſtimony of his Doctrine and Profeſſion, feſſion, anſwering to ſuch Articles as were objected to him by the ſaid Biſhop.

The Answer of John Leaf concerning his Faith in the Sacrament.

Firſt, As touching his Belief and Faith in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, he anſwered, that after the Words of Conſecration ſpoke by the Prieſt over the Bread and Wine, there was not the very true and natural Body and Blood of Chriſt in Subſtance; and further did hold and believe, that the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, as it is now called, uſed, and believed in this Realm of England, is idolatrous and abominable; and alſo ſaid further, that he believed, that after the Words of Conſecration ſpoke by the Prieſt over the material Bread and Wine, there is not the ſelf-ſame Subſtance of Chriſt's Body and Blood there contained; but Bread and Wine, as it was before. And further ſaid, that he believed, that when the Prieſt delivereth the ſaid material Bread and Wine to the Communicants, he delivereth but only * material Bread and Wine; and the Communicants do receive the ſame in Remembrance of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion, and ſpiritually in Faith they receive Chriſt's Body and Blood, but not under the Forms of Bread and Wine; and alſo affirmed, that he believed auricular Confeſſion not neceſſary to be made unto a Prieſt: For it is no Point of Soul Health: Neither that the Prieſt hath any Authority given him by the Scripture to abſolve and remit any Sin.

* Only as touching the Subſtance, but not as concerning the Effect thereof.

Auricular Confeſſion.

He meaneth after the popiſh Manner of remitting Sin.

Upon theſe his Anſwers, and Teſtimony of his Faith, he was at that time diſmiſſed, ordering him to appear again on the next Monday, June 10, in the ſaid Place, there and then to hear the Sentence of his Condemnation. At which time the aforeſaid Biſhop propounded the ſaid Articles again to him as before, endeavouring by all manner of Ways to bring him to renounce his Religion; but notwithſtanding all his Perſuaſions, Threats and Promiſes, found him the ſame Man ſtill, ſo planted upon the ſure Rock of Truth, that no Words or Deeds of Men could remove him.

Then the Biſhop, after many Words to and fro, at laſt asked him, if he had been Mr. Rogers's Scholar? To whom the aforeſaid John Leaf anſwered again, granting it ſo to be; and that he believed in the Doctrine of the ſaid Rogers, and in the Doctrine of Biſhop Hooper, Cardmaker, and others of their Opinion, who were lately burned for the Teſtimony of Chriſt, and that he would die in that Doctrine that they died for: And after other Replications again by the Biſhop, moving him to return to the Unity of the Church, he anſwered again in theſe Words: My Lord, ſaid he, you call mine Opinion Hereſy, it is the true Light of the Word of God: And again repeating the ſame, he profeſſed that he would never forſake his ſtayed and well grounded Opinion, while the Breath ſhould be in his Body. Whereupon the Biſhop being too weak, either to refute his Sentence, or to remove his Conſtancy, proceeded conſtantly to read the popiſh Sentence of Condemnation; whereby this pious and conſtant young Man being committed to the ſecular Power of the Sheriffs there preſent, was then adjudged, and not long after ſuffered, the ſame day with Mr. Bradford, confirming with his Death that which he had ſpoken and profeſſed in his Life.

John Leaf Mr. Rogers's Scholar.

Sentence againſt John Leaf.

It is reported of the ſaid John Leaf, by one that was in the Compter at the ſame Time, and ſaw the Thing, that after his Examinations before the Biſhop, when two Bills were ſent unto him in the Compter in Bread-ſtreet, the one containing a Recantation, the other his Confeſſions, to know to which of them he would put his Hand, firſt hearing the Bill of Recantation read unto him (becauſe he could not read nor write himſelf) which he refuſed. And when the Bill of his Confeſſions was read unto him, inſtead of a Pen he took a Pin, and ſo pricking his Hand, ſprinkled the Blood upon the ſaid Bill, deſiring the Reader thereof to ſhew the Biſhop, that he had ſealed the ſame Bill with his Blood already. Anno 1555.

The Behaviour of Mr. Bradford and John Leaf at their Martyrdom.

FIRST, when they came to the Stake in Smithfield to be burned, Mr. Bradford lying proſtrate on one Side the Stake, and the young Man John Leaf on the other Side, they lay flat on their Faces, praying to themſelves the Space of a Minute. Then one of the Sheriffs ſaid to Mr. Bradford, Ariſe, and make an End; for the Preſs of the People is great.

At that Word they ſtood up, and Mr. Bradford took a Faggot in his Hand and kiſſed it, and likewiſe the Stake. And when he had ſo done, he deſired of the Sheriffs, that his Servant might have his Raiment. For (ſaid he) I have nothing elſe to give him: And beſides that, he is poor Man. And the Sheriff ſaid he ſhould have it. And then Mr. Bradford immediately took off his Raiment, and went to the Stake: And holding up his Hands, and caſting his Eyes towards Heaven, he ſaid thus, O England, England, repent of thy Sins, repent of thy Sins, beware of Idolatry; beware of Antichriſt; take heed they do not deceive you. And as he was ſpeaking theſe Words, the Sheriff order'd his Hands to be ty'd if he would not be quiet: O Maſter Sheriff ſaid he, I am quiet: God forgive you this, Maſter Sheriff. And one of the Officers who was to make the Fire, hearing Mr. Bradford ſo ſpeaking to the Sheriff, ſaid, If you have no better Learning than this, you are but a Fool, and you had beſt hold your Peace. To which Mr. Bradford gave no Anſwer; but asked all the World Forgiveneſs, and forgave all the World, and deſired the People to pray for him: Then he turned his Head to the young Man that ſuffer'd with him, and ſaid, Be of good Comfort, Brother; for we ſhall have a merry Supper with the Lord this Night: And then embracing the Reeds, he ſaid thus, Strait is the Gate and narrow is the Way that leadeth to eternal Salvation, and few there be that find it.

The Words of Mr. Bradford at the Stake.

And thus they both ended this mortal Life like two Lambs, without any Alteration of their Countenance, being void of all Fear, hoping to obtain the Prize that they had long run for; to which I beſeech Almighty God happily to conduct us, through the Merits of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord and Saviour, Amen.

A Letter from Mr. Bradford to his Mother, a pious Matron, dwelling in Mancheſter, and to his Brethren and Siſters, and other Friends there.

OUR dear and ſweet Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe Priſoner at this preſent (praiſed be his Name) I am, preſerve and keep you, my good Mother, with my Brothers and Siſters, my Father John Traves, Thomas Sorrocold, Laurence and James Bradſhaw, with their Wives and Families, &c. now and for ever, Amen.

Mr. Bradford's Letter to his Mother, Brethren, and Siſters, whereof the Earl of Derby complained in the Parliament.

I am now in Priſon, ſecure enough from ſtarting, to confirm what I have preached unto you, as I am ready (I thank God) to ſeal the ſame with my Life and Blood, if God ſhall vouchſafe to make me worthy of that Honour. For, good Mother and Brethren, it is a moſt ſpecial Benefit from God, to ſuffer for his Name's ſake and Goſpel, as now I do: I heartily thank God for it, and am ſure that with him I ſhall be Partaker of his Glory, as St. Paul ſaith, If we ſuffer with him, we ſhall
2 Tim. 2. reign with him. Therefore be not faint-hearted, but rather rejoice, at leaſt for my Sake, who am now in the right and high Way to Heaven: For by many Afflictions we muſt enter into the Kingdom of Acts 14. Heaven. Now will God make known his Children. When the Wind doth not blow, a Man cannot know the Wheat from the Chaff; but when the Blaſt cometh, then the Chaff flieth away, but the Wheat remaineth, and is ſo far from being hurt, that by the Wind it is more cleanſed from the Chaff, and known to be Wheat. Gold when it is caſt in the Fire, is the more precious; ſo are God's Children by the Croſs of Affliction. God always beginneth his Judgment at his Houſe. Chriſt and the Apoſtles were in moſt Miſery in the Land of Jewry, but yet the whole Land ſmarted for it after: So now the Children of God are firſt chaſtiſed in this World, that they ſhould not be damned with the World: For ſurely the great Plagues of God hang over this Realm.

God beginneth his Judgment with his own Houſe.

Ye all know there was never more Knowledge of God, and leſs godly Living, and true ſerving of God. It was counted a fooliſh Thing to ſerve God truly; and earneſt Prayer was not minded. Preaching was but a Paſtime. The Communion was counted too common. Faſting to ſubdue the Fleſh was quite out of Uſe. Alms was almoſt nothing. Malice, Covetouſneſs, and Uncleanneſs, was common every where, with Swearing, Drunkenneſs, and Idleneſs. God therefore now is come, and you have heard me preach, and becauſe he will not damn us with the World, he beginneth to puniſh us: As me for carnal living. For, as for my Doctrine, I am very certain that it is and was God's Truth, and by his Grace I reſolve to give my Life for it; but becauſe I loved not the Goſpel as ſincerely as I ought, therefore doth he thus puniſh me; nay, in puniſhing, he rather bleſſeth me. Indeed I thank him more for this Priſon, than for any Parlour, yea, than for any Pleaſure that ever I had; for in it I always find God my ſweeteſt and greateſt Good. The Fleſh is now puniſhed to admoniſh us heartily to live as we profeſs; and to certify the wicked of their juſt Damnation, if they repent not.

Perhaps you are weakened in that which I have preached, becauſe God doth not defend it, as you think, but ſuffereth the popiſh Doctrine to come again and prevail: But you muſt know, good Mother, that God by this doth prove and try his Children and People, whether they will unfeignedly and ſimply ſtand ſtedfaſt to him and his Word. He did ſo with the Iſraelites, bringing them into a Deſart, after their coming out of Egypt, where (I mean in the Wilderneſs) was Want of all Things, in Compariſon of that which they had in Egypt. Chriſt when he came into this World, brought no worldly Wealth, nor Quietneſs with him, but rather War, The World (ſaith he) ſhall rejoice, but ye John 19. ſhall mourn and weep, but your weeping ſhall be turned into Joy: And therefore happy are they that mourn and weep, for they ſhall be comforted. They are marked then with God's Mark in their Foreheads, and not with the Beaſt's Mark, I mean the Pope's ſhaven Crown, who now with his Shavelings rejoice; but wo unto them, for they ſhall be caſt down, they ſhall weep and mourn. The rich Glutton had here his Joy, and Lazarus Sorrow, but afterwards the Caſe was changed. The End of carnal Joy is Sorrow. Now let the Whoremonger joy with the Drunkard, Swearer, covetous, malicious and blind Buzzard Sir John: For the Maſs will not bite them, nor make them bluſh as preaching doth. Now they may do what they will, come Devils to Church, and go Devils home again, for no Man muſt ſpeak againſt it. They are glad of all this; now they have their Heart's deſire, as the Sodomites had when Lot was gone; but what followed? forſooth when they cried Peace, all ſhall be well, then came God's Vengeance, Fire and Brimſtone from Heaven, and burnt up every Mother's Child; even ſo (dear Mother) will it be to our Papiſts.

God uſeth to prove and try his Children.

Of this Place the Earl of Derby ſeemeth to take hold, complaining that he curſeth them that teach any falſe Doctrine, &c.

Wherefore fear God; ſtick to his Word, tho' all the World ſwerve from it. Die you muſt once, and when and how, you cannot tell. Die therefore with Chriſt, ſuffer for ſerving him truly, according to his Word: For we may be ſure, that of all Deaths it ought to be our greateſt Deſire to die for the Cauſe of God. This is the ſafeſt Way of dying; we need not doubt but that we ſhall go to Heaven, if we die for his Name's ſake. And that you ſhall ſo die, the Word of God will warrant you, if you ſtick to that which God by me hath taught you. You ſhall ſee that I ſpeak as I think; for by God's Grace I will drink before you of this Cup, if it be put to me.

The beſt Death is to die for Chriſt's ſake.

I doubt not but God will give me Grace and Strength to undergo what I purpoſe: Pray for me, that I may be immoveable in the fiery Trial. I am ready whenever God ſhall be pleaſed to call me. Death nor Life, Priſon nor Pleaſure, I truſt in God, ſhall be able to ſeparate me from my Lord God and his Goſpel. In Peace, when no Perſecution was, then were you content and glad to hear me, then you believed me, and will you not do ſo now, ſeeing I ſpeak nothing but that which by God's Grace I will verify with my Life? Good Mother, I write to you before God, as before him I have preached.

I have taught the pure Word of God: It is the ſame infallible Truth whereof he ſaid, Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs, but my Word ſhall not paſs. The Maſs, and ſuch Baggage as the falſe Worſhippers of God, and the Enemies of Chriſt's Croſs (the Papiſts) have brought in again, to poiſon the Church of God, highly diſpleaſeth him, and is abominable in his Sight. Happy may he be who for Conſcience-ſake will ſuffer the Loſs of Life or Goods, in contending againſt it. Come not near it. If God be God, follow him: If the Maſs be God, let who will ſee it, hear, or be preſent at it, go to the Devil with it. What is there which God ordained? His Supper was ordained to be received by us as a Memorial of his Death, for the Confirmation of our Faith, that his Body was broken for us, and his Blood ſhed for the Pardon of our Sins; but in the Maſs there is no receiving, but the Prieſt alone keepeth all to himſelf. Chriſt ſaith, Take, eat: No, ſaith the Prieſt, Gape, peep. Here (in the Maſs) is a ſacrificing, yea, crucifying Chriſt again as much as they can. Here is Idolatry in worſhipping the outward Sign of Bread and Wine; here is all in Latin, you cannot tell what is ſaid. In ſhort, here is nothing as God ordained. Wherefore (my good Mother) come not near it.

Comparison between the Lord's Supper and the Maſs.

I preſume ſome will ſay, that it will be worſe for you, if you refuſe to go to Maſs, and do as others do. But be aſſured, that God will aſſiſt and protect you, as you ſhall one Day find: He hath promiſed to them who ſuffer for his Cauſe, his great Bleſſing in this World, and in the World to come Life everlaſting.

You ſhall be counted an Heretick: But they are the Hereticks that ſo call you, whoſe Praiſe is a Scandal.

You are not able to Reaſon againſt the Prieſts, but God will, that they ſhall not be able to withſtand you. I doubt not but Father Traves, and others of my Brothers and Siſters will comfort and aſſiſt you by their Counſel and pious Examples; but if they do not, I your Son in God, by his Grace, will ſo do, and go before you: Pray that I may be conſtant: Rejoice in my Sufferings, for it is for your Sakes, that thereby I may confirm the Truth I have taught. Beware that this Letter come not abroad, but only into Father Traves his Hands: For if it ſhould be known that I have Pen and Ink in Priſon, it would be much worſe for me. Therefore keep it to yourſelves, and commend me to God's Mercy through Jeſus Chriſt, and pray that he would make me worthy to give my Life for the Sake of his Church and Goſpel. From the Tower of London, October 26. 1553.

For all this Caveat, yet this Letter came to the Earl of Derby's Knowledge.

My Name I write not, you know the Reaſon well enough: Like the Letter never the worſe. Commend me to all our good Brethren and Siſters in the Lord. Howſoever you do, be obedient to the higher Powers, that is, in no Point either in Hand or Tongue rebel, but rather if they command that which with good Conſcience you cannot obey, lay your Head on the Block, and ſuffer whatſoever they ſhall do or ſay. By Patience poſſeſs your Souls.

To Mr. Laurence Saunders, Priſoner in the Marſhalſea.

* This Friend moved them to ſubſcribe to the Papiſts Articles, with this Condition: So far as they were not againſt God's Word, being indeed clean contrary to it: And yet ſhortly after he valiantly ſuffered Death for refuſing the ſame.

My good Brother, I beſeech our good and gracious Father always to continue his gracious Favour and Love towards us, and by us, as by Inſtruments of his Grace, to work his Glory and the Confuſion of his Adverſaries. Out of the Mouth of Infants and Babes he will ſhew forth his Praiſe to deſtroy the Enemy, &c.

I have peruſed your Letters to myſelf, and have read them to others. For Anſwer whereof, if I ſhould write what Dr. Taylor and Mr. Philpot *do think, then muſt I ſay, that they think the Salt ſent unto us by your * Friend, is unſeaſonable. And I think they both will declare it heartily, if they ſhould come before Men. As for me, if you would know what I think (my good and moſt dear Brother) becauſe I am ſo ſinful and ſo defiled (the Lord knoweth that I lie not) with many grievous Sins, which I hope are waſhed away with the Blood of Chriſt, I neither can nor would be conſulted withal, but as a Cypher in* Agrime. Howbeit, to tell you how and what I mind, take this for a Sum: I pray God in no Caſe I may ſeek myſelf, and indeed, I thank God for it, I purpoſe it not. Anno 1555.

That which remaineth I commit to my Lord God; and I truſt in him, that he will do according to this; Caſt thy Care on the Lord, &c. Caſt all your Care upon him, &c. Reveal unto the Lord thy Way, and truſt, &c. Whoſoever truſteth in the Lord, Mercy ſhall compaſs him about. For the Lord is faithful: He will in Temptation make a Way that ye may be able to bear it. The Lord knoweth how to rid out of Temptation the Godly, &c. O would God I were godly, &c. The Lord knoweth how to deliver out of Temptation ſuch as truſt in him, &c. I cannot think that they will offer any kind of indifferent or mean Conditions: For if we will not Adorare Beſtiam, we never ſhall be delivered, but againſt their Will, think I. God our Father and gracious Lord make perfect the Good he hath begun in us.

He will do it my Brother, my dear Brother, whom I have in my inward Bowels to live and dye with. O that I were with you. Pray for me my own Heart Root in the Lord.

For ever your own, John Bradford.

Another Letter to Mr. Saunders.

GOD's ſweet Peace in Chriſt be with you, my good Brother in the Lord Jeſus, and with all your Fellow-captives, Amen.

I was hindered this Morning from muſing on that which I purpoſed to have thought on by reaſon of you, againſt whom I ſaw myſelf guilty of Negligence, even in this Point that I would not write, I ſhould ſay, that I had not written unto you as yet: Therefore I prepared myſelf out of hand to clear myſelf hereof, not that I will go about to excuſe my Fault (for that were more to load me) but by asking God and you Pardon, to get it no more laid to my Charge. Now when I was thus purpoſing, and partly doing, there cometh one with a Letter from you: For which as I have Cauſe to thank God and you, ſo I ſee myſelf more blame worthy for thus long holding my Peace. Howbeit, good Brother, in this I have given a Demonſtration to you, to behold my Negligence in all other Things and eſpecially in praying for you, and for the Church of God, which for my Sins and Hypocriſy (Hypocriſy indeed even in this writing, God deliver me from it) have deſerved to be puniſhed. God is juſt, for we have deſerved all Kinds of Plagues at his Hands; but yet merciful is he that will on this wiſe chaſtize us in this World, that we ſhould not be condemned with the World. He might otherwiſe have puniſhed us, I mean, he might have caſt us in Priſon for other Cauſes, me eſpecially, than for his Goſpel and Word ſake. Praiſed therefore be his Name, who vouchſafeth us worthy of this Honour. Ah good God forgive us our Sins, and work by this thy fatherly Correction on us, on me eſpecially, effectually to love thee and thy Chriſt; and with Joyfulneſs carry thy Croſs to the End.

Ah good Brother, if I could always have God, his Majeſty, Mercy, Heaven, Hell, &c. before mine Eyes, then ſhould I endure, as St. Paul writeth of Moſes, Heb. 11. He endured as he that ſaw him which is inviſible. Pray for me, as I know you do, and give Thanks alſo: For, In the Lord I truſt, I ſhall not waver. If I walk by Pſal. 23. the Valley of the Shadow of Death I will not fear, for thou art with me, O Lord. I think we ſhall be ſhortly called forth; for now Legem habent, & ſecundum legem, &c. otherwiſe will they not reaſon with us: And I think their ſhoot-anchor will be, to have us to ſubſcribe. Which Anno 1555. Thing if we do, though with this Condition (ſo far as the Thing ſubſcribed to is not againſt God's Word) yet this will be offenſive. Therefore let us all confeſs that we are no Changlings, but the ſame as we were in Religion, and therefore cannot ſubſcribe except we will diſſemble both with God, our ſelves, and the World. Theſe Things I write to you, dear Brother in the Lord. Now I will read your Epiſtle. Ah Brother, that I had the practical Underſtanding with you in that Vine which you deſcribe: pray the Lord that I may think ſo indeed. God make me thankful for you. All our Fellow-priſoners ſalute you, and give Thanks to God for you. The ſame do you for us, and pray that, &c.

1 John 2. 13.

Your Brother in the Lord Jeſus, to live and die with you,

J. Bradford.

To my dear Fathers, Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Dr. Latimer.

Mr. Bradford's Letter Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Dr. Latimer.

JESUS Immanuel. My dear Fathers in the Lord, I beſeech God our ſweet Father through Chriſt, to make perfect the good he hath begun in us all, Amen.

I had thought that every one of your Staves had ſtood next the Door, but now it is otherwiſe perceived. Our dear Brother Rogers hath broken the Ice valiantly, as this Day, I think, or to-morrow at the uttermoſt, hearty Hooper, ſincere Saunders, and truſty Taylor end their Courſe, and receive their Crown. The next am I, which hourly look for the Porter to open me the Gates after them, to enter into the deſired Reſt. God forgive me mine Unthankfulneſs for this exceeding great Mercy, that amongſt ſo many thouſands it pleaſeth his Mercy to chuſe me to be one, in whom he will ſuffer. For although it be moſt true, that I juſtly ſuffer (for I have been a great Hypocrite, and a grievous Sinner, the Lord pardon me, yea, he hath done it, he hath done it indeed) yet what Evil hath he done? Chriſt, whom the Prelates perſecute, his Verity which they hate in me, hath done no Evil, nor deſerved Death. Therefore ought I moſt heartily to rejoice of this tender Kindneſs of the Lord towards me, which uſeth Remedy for my Sin, as a Teſtimonial of his Teſtament, to his Glory, to my everlaſting Comfort, to the edifying of his Church, and to the Overthrowing of Antichriſt and his Kingdom. Oh what am I, Lord, that thou ſhouldſt thus magnify me ſo vile a Man and Miſer, as always I have been? Is this thy Cuſtom, to ſend for ſuch a Wretch and Hypocrite as I have been, in a fiery Chariot, as thou didſt for Elijah? O dear Fathers, be thankful for me, that I ſtill might be found worthy in whom the Lord would ſanctify his holy Name. And for your Part, make you ready: For we are but your Gentlemen-uſhers. The Marriage of the Lamb is prepared, come unto the Marriage. I now go to leave my Fleſh there where I received it. I ſhall be conveyed thither, as Ignatius was at Rome, Leopardis; by whoſe Evil I hope to be made better. God grant, if it be his Will that I ask, it may make them better by me, Amen.

He meaneth that he ſhould be conveyed by the Queen's Guard into Lancaſhire to be burnt, as his Adverſaries had once determined, like as Ignatius was by a Company of Soldiers conveyed to Rome, and caſt to the Leopards.

For my Farewel therefore, I write and ſend this unto you, truſting ſhortly to ſee you where we ſhall never be ſeparated. In the mean Seaſon I will not ceaſe, as I have done, to commend you to our Father of Heaven, and that you would ſo do by me, I moſt heartily pray every one of you: You know now I have moſt need. Faithful is God, who will not ſuffer us to be tempted above our Strength. He never did it hitherto, and I am aſſured he never will, Amen. He is on my right Hand, therefore I ſhall not fall. Wherefore my Heart ſhall rejoice, for he ſhall not leave my Soul in Hell, neither ſhall ſuffer me his holy One, by his Grace in Chriſt, to ſee Corruption.

Out of Priſon in haſte, looking for the Tormenter, February 8. 1555.

John Bradford.

William Minge, who died in Priſon.

THE next Day after Mr. Bradford and John Leaf ſuffered in Smithfield, William Minge, Prieſt, died in Priſon at Maidſtone, being there in Bonds for Religion, and would (had he lived a little longer) alſo have ſuffered the Fury of his Adverſaries, whoſe Nature was to ſpare and favour none that favoured Chriſt's pure Goſpel: This William Minge with as great Conſtancy and Boldneſs yielded up his Life in Priſon, as if it had pleaſed God to have called him to ſuffer by Fire, as other good Men had done before at the Stake, as he himſelf was ready to do, had it pleaſed God to have called him thereunto.

James Treviſam, buried in the Fields.

UPON Sunday the Third of July 1555. died one James Treviſam in the Pariſh of St. Margaret in Lothbury, who being impotent and lame, kept his Bed a long Time. This Treviſam had a Servant named John Small, who was reading in the Bible, when one Berd the Promoter came to the Houſe, and would needs go up Stairs, where he found four Perſons beſides him and his Wife; to wit, the young Man that read, and two Men and a Woman. All whom the ſaid Berd apprehended and carry'd to the Compter, where they remained about a Fortnight, notwithſtanding all the Friends they could make. Not only ſo, but the ſaid Berd intended to carry the poor lame bedridden Man to Newgate in a Cart (and brought a Cart to the Door for that Purpoſe) had not the Neighbours, who had a little more Humanity, prevented that barbarous Deſign. Nevertherleſs, the poor Man was obliged to have two Sureties for his forthcoming, notwithſtanding he could not get out of his Bed, being not only lame, but alſo very ſick at the ſame Time. In a few Days time he grew ſo ill that his Life was not expected; and the Parſon of the Pariſh, one Mr. Farthing, came to viſit him, and had Communication with him, and they both agreed very well in matters of Religion, and ſo the Parſon departed. No ſooner was he come down into the Street but he was met by one Toller a Founder, who threatned to accuſe him for agreeing with Treviſam; for, ſaid the Founder, he denieth the Sacrament of the Altar. Upon that the Parſon went to him again, and then they could not agree. And ſo the Parſon went to the Biſhop of London, and told him. The Biſhop anſwered, that he ſhould be burnt burnt; and if he were already dead he ſhould be buried in a Ditch. And when he was dead, the Parſon ſhewed as much Spight and ill Nature to his poor ſorrowful Widow as poſſible he could, not ſuffering her to put him in a Coffin, or any Thing elſe, but were fain to carry him on a Table to Moor-fields, and there he was buried. The ſame Night the Body was taken up again, and the Sheet taken from him, and he left naked above Ground. The Owner of the Field ſeeing this, buried him again; a Fortnight after the Sumner came to his Grave, and ſummoned him to appear at Paul's before his Ordinary, to anſwer to ſuch Things as ſhould be laid againſt him. But what became of this Affair afterwards I cannot certainly ſay.

Mr. Farthing Parſon of St. Margaret's in Lothbury, accuſeth Treviſam.

The Hiſtory of Mr. John Bland, Preacher and Martyr.

THE 12th Day of July, John Bland, John Frankeſh, Nicholas Sheterden, and Humphry Middleton, were all four burnt at Canterbury together for one Cauſe. Of which Number, Frankeſh and Bland were Miniſters and Preachers of the Word of God, the one being Parſon of Adeſham, the other Vicar of Rolvindon. Mr. Bland was a Man ſo little born for his own Advantage, that no part of his Life was ſeparated from the common and publick Utility of all Men. For his firſt Doings were there imployed to the bringing up of Children in Learning and Virtue. Under whom were trained up ſeveral hopeful young Men, which even at this preſent do handſomely flouriſh. In which number is Dr. Sands, a Man of ſingular Learning and Worthineſs, as may well become a Scholar for ſuch a Schoolmaſter, whom I gladly here name for his ſingular Gifts of Virtue and Erudition.

Mr. Bland Schoolmaſter to Dr. Sands, ſome time Biſhop of Worceſter, afterwards Archbiſhop of York.

After this, he coming to the Miniſtry in the Church of God, or rather being called thereto, was inflamed with incredible Deſire to profit the Congregation, which may appear by this, that whereas he was caſt into Canterbury Priſon for preaching of the Goſpel, and delivered once or twice from thence at the Interceſſion of his Friends, yet he would preach the Goſpel again as ſoon as he was delivered. Whereupon he being the third Time apprehended, when his Friends yet once again would have found Means to have delivered him, if he would promiſe to abſtain from preaching; he ſtood in it earneſtly, that he would admit no ſuch Condition, notably well expreſſing unto us the Manner and Example which we read in the Apoſtle St. Paul; Who ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt? Tribulation, or Anguiſh, or Hunger, or Nakedneſs, or Danger, or Perſecution, or the Sword, &c. But to expreſs the whole Life and Actions of this pious Martyr, ſeeing we have his own Teſtimony concerning the ſame, it will be beſt to refer the Reader to his own Report, writing to his Father the whole Diſcourſe of his Troubles, from the Beginning almoſt to the latter End, in Order and Manner as ye ſhall hear.

Anno 1555.

An Account of the whole Proceedings againſt Mr. Bland, written by himſelf to his Father.

DEarly beloved Father in Chriſt Jeſus, I thank you for your gentle Letters. And to ſatisfy your Mind as concerning the Troubles whereof you have heard, theſe ſhall both declare unto you all my Vexations that have happened unto me ſince you were with me, alſo ſince I have received your laſt Letters. God keep you ever.

Declaration of the Troubles of Mr. Bland, how and by whom he was apprehended, and brought to his Condemnation.

Your Son, John Bland.

FIRST, The Third of September, being Sunday, after Service ended, e'er I had put off my Surplice, John Auſten came to the Table (commonly called the Lord's Table) and laid both his Hands upon it, ſaying, Who ſet this here again? Now they ſay they took the Table down the Sunday before, which I knew not, neither do I know who ſet it up again. The Clerk anſwered, that he knew not. Then, ſaid Auſten, he is a Knave that ſet it here. I was then going down the Church, marvelling what he meant, and ſaid, Goodman Auſten, the Queen's Highneſs hath ſet forth a Proclamation that ye may move no Sedition: And before I could ſpeak any more, he ſaid, Thou art a Knave: And I ſaid, Well, Goodman Auſten, what I have ſaid, I have ſaid. By God's Soul, quoth he, thou art a very Knave. Then my Clerk ſpake to him, but what I am not ſure. But he ſaid, Ye are both Heretick Knaves, and have deceived us in this Manner too long already, and if ye ſay any Service here again, I will turn your Table upſide down; and in that Rage he, with others, took the Table and laid it on a Cheſt in the Chancel, and ſet the Treſſels by it. Soon after I rode to Mr. Iſaac, and declared unto him how ſeditiouſly Auſten had behaved himſelf. Mr. Iſaac directed a Warrant to the Conſtable, which was immediately ſerved, ſo that he was brought before him the ſame Night, and was bound by Recognizance, with Sureties, to appear if he were called. But then we agreed ſo well, that it was never called for: The Table was brought down, and was permitted as before.

John Auſten Perſecutor.

John Auſten offended with the Communion Table.

Note the uncharitable Spirit of this Paſſage, and ſo commonly of them all.

The Communion Table ſet up again.

The 26th of November, being Sunday, Richard Auſten and his Brother Thomas came to the aforeſaid Table after the Communion was done, and as I was going by them, Richard ſaid unto me, Mr. Parſon, we want to ſpeak with you. And I ſaid, What is your Will? And he ſaid, You know that you took down the Tabernacle wherein the Rood did hang, and ſuch other Things: We would know what Recompence you would make us: For the Queen's Proceedings are (as you know) that ſuch Things muſt be put again.

Quoth I, I know no ſuch Proceedings as yet; and as for what I did, I did it by Commandment.

No, ſaid Thomas Auſten, ye will not know the Queen's Proceedings.

Yes, ſaid I, I refuſe not to know them.

Then ſaid Richard, Ye are againſt the Queen's Proceedings; for you ſay there are abominable Uſes and Deviliſhneſs in the Maſs.

Goodman Auſten, ſaid I, if I ſo ſaid, I will ſay

Anno 1555. ſay it again, and God willing, ſtand to the Proof of it.

Maſters all, quoth Richard Auſten, bear Record of theſe Words, and went his Way.

Mr. Bland charged for ſpeaking againſt the Maſs. Quoth Thomas Auſten, thou will as ſoon eat this Book as ſtand to them. No, quoth I, not ſo ſoon.

Tell us, quoth he, what Deviliſhneſs is in the Maſs. I have often preached it unto you, ſaid I, and ye have not believed it, nor born it away, nor will now neither, tho' I ſhould tell you.

Thou (quoth he) haſt told us always like an Heretick as thou art. Now ye lye, Goodman Auſten, quoth I, by your leave. Marry, ſaid he, thou lieſt. And I ſaid, you lye, for I have taught you Chriſt and his Truth.

Quoth he, thou art an Heretick, and haſt taught us nothing but Hereſy: For thou canſt ſay nothing that is true.

Yes, Goodman Auſten, I can ſay that God is in Heaven, and ye will ſay, (I hope) that it is true, and ſo have I taught you truly.

Quoth he, thou haſt taught us like an Heretick, and haſt ſaid, that there is no Devil in Hell.

Well, ſaid I, lye on; methinks you can ſay little Truth. Many other Taunts he gave, too long to write. And at laſt he ſaid, Ye pulled down the Altar, will ye build it again? No, ſaid I, except I be commanded; for I was commanded to do that I did.

Well, if you will not, ſaid he, then will I. For I am Church-warden.

Tho. Auſten threatneth to bring in a Popiſh Prieſt againſt Mr. Bland. I charge you ſaid I, that you do not, except you have Authority. I will not, ſaid he, be hindered by your Charge. For we will have a Maſs here on Sunday, and a Preacher that ſhall prove thee an Heretick, if thou dare abide his coming.

Yes, ſaid I, God willing, I will abide and hear him; for ſure I am that he cannot diſprove any Doctrine that I have preached.

Yes, ſaid he, and that thou ſhalt hear, if thou run not away e're then.

No, Goodman Auſten, I will not run away.

Marry, ſaid he, I cannot tell; thou art as like as not: With many more Words we came out of the Church, and ſo departed.

When Sunday came I looked for our Preacher, and at the Time of Morning Prayer I ſaid to the Clerk, why do you not ring? ye forget that we ſhall have a Sermon to Day. No, quoth he, Mr. Miles's Servant hath been here this Morning, and ſaid, his Maſter hath Letters from my Lord Chancellor, that he muſt go to London, and cannot come. That Day I

Mr. Bland ſlandered. preach'd to them a Sermon in his ſtead. Now have they ſlandered me, that I had prepared a Company from divers Places to have troubled him; but they agreed not in their Lye. For ſome ſaid I had them at Adeſham, and that Richard Auſten had Knowledge, and ſent for the Conſtable to ſee the Peace kept, which is found a Lye. Others ſaid, I had them lying in wait for him between Canterbury and Adeſham. Other ſaid, I had them in both Places, that if the one miſs'd, the other ſhould not. God forgive them all. Now upon theſe two Matters they boaſt, that they ſent two Bills of Complaint to the Councils. Wherefore by the Advice of Friends, I made this Teſtimony, and ſent it up by Mr. Wiſeman.

The Behaviour of John Bland, Parſon of Adeſham, in the County of Kent, on Sunday, the third Day of December laſt.

Mr. Bland Parſon of Adeſham, cleareth himſelf.

WHereas upon certain Communication had between the ſaid Parſon and Richard Auſten, and Thomas Auſten in the Preſence of all the Pariſh of Adeſham, the Sunday before St. Andrew's Day laſt, the ſaid Auſten then declared, That the ſaid Parſon had taught there in Times paſt great Hereſies, which to confound, they would prepare a Preacher againſt the next Sunday following, if ſo be the ſaid Parſon would abide, and not run away: Upon which Rumour, divers Perſons reſorted out of the Country, unto the ſaid Pariſh Church, at the Day appointed, there to hear the Preacher; and at the Time in which the Sermon ought to be made, no Man appeared there to preach: But it was reported to the Parſon that the Preacher appointed, had urgent Buſineſs, and could not come. So that the Multitude being now come together, the ſame Parſon perceiving that the Peoples Expectation was defrauded, ſaid, Foraſmuch as you are willingly come to hear ſome good Advertiſement of the Preacher, who cannot be now preſent, I think it not convenient to let you depart without ſome Exhortation for your Edification. And further declaring that he had no Licence to preach, ſaid, That he would not meddle with any Matter in controverſy. And then he began the Epiſtle for the Day, deſiring the Audience to mark three or four Places in the ſaid Epiſtle, which touched of Quietneſs and Love to one another: And there briefly reading the Epiſtle, he noted the ſame Places, and ſo making an End thereof, deſired all Men to depart quietly and in Peace, as they did, without any Manner of Diſturbance, or Token of Evil.

Mr. Bland exhorting the People to Love and Quietneſs.

Another Matter of Trouble wrought againſt John Bland, as appeareth by his own Narration.

UPON Innocents Day, being the 28th of December, they had procured the Prieſt of Stodmaſh to ſay Maſs; he had nigh made an end of Mattins e're I came; and when he had ended them, he ſaid to me, Mr. Parſon, your Neighbours have deſired me to ſay Mattins and Maſs; I hope ye will not be againſt the Queen's Proceedings. No (quoth I) I will offend none of her Majeſty's Law, God willing. What ſay ye, quoth he, and made as though he had not heard? And I ſpake the ſame Words to him again with an higher Voice; but he would not hear, though all the reſt in the Chancel heard: I ſpake ſo loud the third Time, that all the Church might hear, That I would not offend the Queen's Laws, and then he went to Maſs; and when he was reading the Epiſtle, I called the Clerk unto me, with the Beckning of my Finger, and ſaid unto him, I pray you deſire the Prieſt when the Goſpel is done, to tarry a little, I have ſomething to ſay to the People; and the Clerk did ſo.

Mr. Bland again exhorteth the People in his Pariſh Church.

And the Prieſt came down into the Stall where he ſate; and I ſtood up in the Chancel Door, and ſpake to the People of the great Goodneſs of God always ſhewed unto his People, unto the Time of Chriſt's coming; and in him and his coming, what Benefit they paſt, we preſent, and our Succeſſors have; and among other Benefits I ſpake of the great and comfortable Sacrament of his Body and Blood. And after I had briefly declared the Inſtitution, the Promiſe of Life to the Good, and Damnation to the Wicked, I ſpake of the Bread and Wine, affirming them to be Bread and Wine after the Conſecration, as yonder Maſs-book, ſaying, Holy Bread of eternal Life, and the Cup of perpetual Salvation. So that like as our bodily Mouths eat the ſacramental Bread and Wine, ſo doth the Mouth of our Souls (which is our Faith) eat Chriſt's Fleſh and Blood. And when I had made an End of that, I ſpake of the Miſuſe of the Sacrament in the Maſs; ſo that I judged it in that Uſe no Sacrament, and ſhewed how Chriſt bade us all eat and drink; and in the Maſs one only eateth and drinketh, and the reſt kneel, knock, and worſhip: And after theſe Things ended, as briefly as I could, I ſpake of the Benefactors of the Maſs, and began to declare who made the Maſs, and recited every Man's Name, and the Patch that he put to the Maſs; but before I had rehearſed them all, the Church-warden and the Conſtable, his Son-in-law, violently came upon me, and took my Book from me, and pulled me down, and thruſt me into the Chancel, with an exceeding Roar and Cry. Some cried, Thou Heretick; ſome, Thou Traitor; ſome, Thou Rebel; and when every Man had ſaid his Pleaſure, and the Rage was ſomething paſt, Be quiet good Neighbours, ſaid I, and let me ſpeak to you quietly. If I have offended any Law, I will make Anſwer before them that are in Authority to correct me. But they would not hear me, and pulled, one on this Side, and another on that, and began again. Then Richard Auſten ſaid, Peace, Maſters, no more till Maſs be done, and they ceaſed. Then I ſaid to the Church-warden and the Conſtable, each holding me by the Arm; Maſters, let me go into the Church-yard till your Maſs be done. No, ſaid the Church-warden, thou ſhalt tarry here till Maſs be done. I will not, quoth I, but againſt my Will. And they ſaid, Thou ſhall tarry, for if thou go out thou wilt run away. Then I ſaid to the Conſtable, Lay me in the Stocks, and then ye will be ſure of me, and turned my Back to the Altar. By that Time Richard Auſten had deviſed what to do with me, and called to the Conſtable and the Church-warden, and bade them put me into a ſide Chappel, and ſhut the Door to me, and there they made me tarry till Maſs was ended. When the Maſs was ended, they came into the Chappel to me, and ſearched what I had about me; and found a Dagger, and took it from me. Then ſaid Tho. Auſten, Church-warden, after many Brablings that they made with me, Thou keepeſt a Wife here amongſt us, againſt God's Law and the Queen's. Ye lye, Goodman Auſten, ſaid I, it is not againſt God's Law, nor, as I ſuppoſe, againſt the Queen's. Thus they brought me out of the Church, and without the Door they railed on me without Pity or Mercy: But anon the Prieſt came out of the Church, and Ramſey that of late was Clerk, ſaid unto him, Sir, where dwell you? And therefore Thomas Auſten took him by the Arm, and ſaid, Come on Sarrah, you are of his Opinion, and took his Dagger from him, and ſaid, he ſhould go with him. I am content, ſaid he, and a little mocked them in their envious Talk. By this Time John Gray of Wingham, Servant to John Smith, came in at the Church Style, and ſeeing them hold Ramſey by the Arms, ſaid to him, How now Ramſey, have you offended the Queen's Laws? No, quoth he. Then there is no Tranſgreſſion. Therewith Thomas Auſten took him, and ſaid, Ye are one of their Opinion, ye ſhall go with them for Company, and took his Dagger from him, and then demanded what he did there? But after (I think) for very Shame they let him go again. But they carried me and Ramſey to Canterbury, guarded with eighteen Perſons. A Sheet of Paper will not hold the Talk that we had that Night with Mr. Hardes, Juſtice, Mr. Oxenden, Mr. Spilman, and Mr. Tutſam.

Anno 1555.

Ramſey apprehended by Thomas Auſten.

John Gray of Wingham troubled for a Word ſpeaking.

Bland and Ramſey carried to Canterbury.

He ſpeaketh of the Abuſe of the Sacrament in the Maſs.

The next Day they made a Bill againſt me, but it ſerved not their Purpoſe, which was, that they would have had me to Priſon. But James Chapman, and Bartholomew Joyes were bound in twenty Pounds each of them for my Appearance at the next general Seſſions, or in the mean Time to appear, if I were ſent for before the Queen's Majeſty's Council, or any other Commiſſioners ſent by the Queen's Authority. And Ramſey was bound to the Peace, and to be of good Behaviour till the next Seſſions. His Sureties were Thomas Hodgeking and Simon Barrat.

James Chapman and Bartholomew Joyes, Sureties for Mr. Bland.

Th. Hodgeking and Simon Barrat, Sureties for Ramſey.

Mr. Bland violently plucked down in his Sermon by the Church-warden.

Now the 23d or 24th of February Sir Thomas Finch, Knight, and Mr. Hardes ſent for me and my Sureties to Mr. Finch's Place, and took me from my Sureties, and ſent me to the Caſtle of Canterbury, by Sir Thomas Moyles's Order, as they ſaid, where I lay ten Weeks, and then was bail'd, and bound to appear at the next Seſſions holden at Canterbury; but after, they changed it to be at Aſhford on Thurſday in Whitſon Week, being the nineteenth of May: But in the mean Time the Matter was exhibited to the ſpiritual Court.

Mr. Bland taken from his Sureties.

The firſt Examination of Mr. John Bland in the Spiritual Court, before Dr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury, and Mr. Collins Commiſſary.

Mr. Bland thruſt into a Side Chappel till the Maſs was done.

THE 18th Day of May, Mr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury, obliged the Mayor's Serjeant to bring me before him and Mr. Collins Commiſſary, into Chriſt's-church, and they took me into a Chamber in the Suffragan of Dover's Houſe.

Then the Archdeacon ſaid, Art thou a Prieſt? And I ſaid, I was one. And he ſaid, Art thou a Graduate of any Univerſity? and I ſaid, Yea. What Degree, ſaid he, haſt thou taken? The Degree, quoth I, of Maſter of Arts. The more Pity, quoth he, that thou ſhouldſt behave thyſelf as thou haſt done. Thou haſt been a common licenſed Preacher, haſt

Mr. Bland Maſter of Arts of Cambridge.

Anno 1555.

haſt thou not? and I ſaid, I have been ſo. Marry, quoth he, ſo I underſtand.

Harpſ. What haſt thou preached?

Bland. God's Word, to the edifying of his People.

Harpſ. No, no, to the Deſtruction both of thy Soul and theirs too, if the Mercy of God be not ſpeedily extended towards you. I pray thee tell me what thou haſt preached?

Bland. I told you already what I have preached.

Harpſ. Nay, but tell me what one Matter haſt thou preached to the edifying of the People, as thou ſayeſt?

Bland. I will tell you no particular Matter; for I ſee you would have ſome Matter againſt me.

Harpſ. No, by my Faith, I only deſire to win thee from the Hereſies thou art bewrapt in, and haſt infected others withal. For thou haſt preached, as I am informed, that the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar is not the real Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt after the Conſecration. Tell me, haſt thou not thus preached? and is not this thine Opinion?

Note how theſe Papiſts ſeek for Matter to ſuck the Blood of poor Men.

Bland. Sir, I perceive, as I ſaid before, that ye ſeek ſome Matter againſt me. But ſeeing that I am bound in the Seſſions to my good Behaviour for preaching, which may be broken with Words, and well I know not with what Words; and alſo both mine Authority to preach, and my Living are taken from me, I think I am not bound to make you an Anſwer.

Collins. Mr. Bland, do you not remember, that St. Peter biddeth you make Anſwer to every Man that asketh you a Reaſon of the Faith that is in you?

Bland. I know that, and am content ſo to Anſwer as that Text biddeth: But I know that Mr. Archdeacon doth not ask me after that Manner, but rather to bring me into Trouble. Then they ſaid, No, ye ſhall not be troubled for any Thing that ye ſay here.

A Man not bound to anſwer ſuch as ask of purpoſe to bring him into Trouble.

Bland. I am content for Knowledge ſake to commune with you in any Matter, but not otherwiſe. And ſo they fell to reaſoning for the Space of an Hour, of the Sacrament, both againſt me. At laſt Mr. Collins ſaid, Mr. Bland, will ye come and take in Hand to anſwer ſuch Matters on Monday next as ſhall be laid to you?

Mr. Bland upon Promiſe talketh with them of the Sacrament.

Bland. Sir, ye ſaid I ſhould not be troubled for any Thing that ſhould be ſaid here for Learning's ſake. And they ſaid, ye ſhall not, but it is for other Matters.

Bland. Sir, I am bound to appear, as ſome tell me, on Thurſday next at Aſhford, I am in doubt whether I can or no: Yet have I purpoſed to be there, and ſo to go to London to Mr. Wiſeman, for an Obligation that he hath, whereby I ſhould receive ſome Money to pay my Debts withal. Then ſaid Mr. Archdeacon, I will write to Mr. Wiſeman, that ye ſhall ſuſtain no Loſs.

Mark what Fidelity is in the Promiſe of theſe Men.

Bland. That ſhall not need: For I can ſuſtain no great Loſs if I go not. But I pray you let me have a longer Day. No, quoth he.

Mr. Bland warned to appear again before them.

Bland. Sir, I cannot well come on Monday.

Harpſ. Wilt thou not come when he ſo gently ſpeaketh to thee, where he may command thee?

Bland. I do not deny to come, but I deſire a longer Day.

Harpſ. * Thou ſhalt have no other Day: I charge thee to come on Monday.

* Note here the extream dealing of Harpſfield.

Bland. Sir, I perceive it ſhall be for this or like Matters: Will it pleaſe you, or Mr. Collins, for God's ſake, to confer Scriptures privately with me in this Matter, ſeeing ye ſay ye would gladly win me?

Harpſ. With all my Heart will I take the Pains, and I will alſo borrow my Lord of Dover's Library, to have what Books thou wilt: And thus they departed. Now the 17th of May at Aſhford I could not be releaſed, although I was called to the Spiritual Court for that Purpoſe, but was bound to appear at the Seſſions held at Crambroke the Third of July.

Another Appearance of Mr. Bland before the Archdeacon and his Fellows.

ON the 21ſt of May I appeared in the Chapter-houſe, where was a great Multitude of People, unlooked for by me, and Mr. Archdeacon ſaid thus to me; Ye are come here according as ye were appointed; and the Cauſe is, that it hath pleaſed the Queen's Highneſs here to place me, to ſee God's Holy Word ſet forth, and to reform thoſe that are here fallen into great and heinous Errors, to the great Diſpleaſure of God, and the Decay of Chriſt's Sacraments, and contrary to the Faith of the catholick Church, whereof thou art notably known to be one that is ſore poiſoned with the ſame, and haſt infected and deceived many with thy evil Preaching; which if thou wilt renonunce and come Home again to the catholick Church, both I and many others would be very glad: And I for my Part ſhall be right glad to ſhew you the Favour that lieth in me, as I ſaid unto you when you were appointed hither, becauſe ye then refuſed to ſatisfy again the People that ye had deceived. And whereas it is feigned by you, that I ſhould openly diſpute the Matter with you this Day; although I did neither ſo intend nor appoint, yet I am content to diſpute the Matter with thee, if thou wilt not without Diſputation help to heal the Souls that are brought to Hell-ward by thee? What ſayeſt thou?

Falſe Surmiſes pretended againſt Mr. Bland.

Bland. I do proteſt before God and you all, that neither is my Conſcience guilty of any Error or Hereſy, neither that I ever taught any Error or Hereſy willingly. And where your Maſterſhip ſaith, That I have feigned an open Diſputation with you, it is not true, as I can thus prove: Upon Saturday I was at Ugden's, and there Mr. Bingham laid it to my Charge, that ſuch an open Diſputation, as you have here offered, ſhould be this Day between you and me. Whereat I much marvelled, and ſaid to him, That before that preſent I never heard any ſuch Word; neither would I Anſwer or Diſpute: And Mr. Vaughan, Mr. Oxenden, Mr. Seth of Overland, and Mr. Ugden can witneſs to this; and further I ſaid to them, that I never ſpake to you of any Diſputation, nor you to me. Now if your Maſterſhip have any Thing to ſay to me by the Law, I will make to Anſwer it.

His Anſwer to Mr. Harpſfield's Words.

Harpſ. Hear ye what he ſaith? His Conſcience is clear. I pray thee whereon groundeſt thou thy Conſcience? Let me hear what thy Faith is?

Bland.

Bland. I know not why ye ſhould ask me a Reaſon of my Faith, more than any other Man in this open Audience?

Harpſ. Why thou Heretick, art thou aſhamed of thy Faith? If it were a chriſtian Belief, thou needeſt not to be aſhamed of it.

To believe the Articles of our chriſtian Faith never ſo well, it will not ſuffice the Papiſts.

Bland. I am not aſhamed of my Faith. For I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jeſus Chriſt his only Son our Lord, &c. with all the other Articles of the Creed; and I do believe all the Holy Scriptures of God to be moſt certain and true.

Harpſ. Wilt thou declare no more than this?

Bland. No.

Harpſ. Well, I will tell thee whereon I ground my Faith: I do believe and ground my Faith and Conſcience upon all the Articles of the Creed, and upon all the holy Scriptures, Sacraments, and holy Doctors of the Church, and upon all the general Councils that ever were ſince the Apoſtles Time. Lo, hereupon ground I my Faith; with many more Words which I do not well remember.

And when he could get no other Anſwer from me, than what I had ſaid before, he called for a Scribe to make an Act againſt me. And after much Communication, I ſaid, By what Law and Authority will ye proceed againſt me? Mr. Collins ſaid, By the Canon Law.

Mr. Bland requireth to have his Counſellor.

Bland. I doubt whether it be in Strength or no. Yet I pray you let me have a Counſellor in the Law, and I will make Anſwer according to the Law.

Harpſ. Why thou Heretick, thou wilt not confeſs thy Faith to me, that have Authority to demand it of thee; and yet I have confeſſed my Faith to thee before all this Audience. As concerning the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, thou haſt taught, that after the Conſecration it is Bread and Wine, and not the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. How ſay'ſt thou, haſt thou not thus taught?

Bland. Sir, as concerning this Matter of the Sacrament, when I was with you and Mr. Collins, ye, ſaid then it was for other Matters that I ſhould come hither: And further, that ye would be content at my Deſire, to confer Scriptures with me, to ſee if ye could win me; and ye ſaid, ye would borrow my Lord of Dover's Library, that I ſhould have what Book I would; and now ye require me thus to anſwer, contrary to your Promiſe before any Conference be had, and ſeek rather to bring me into Trouble, than to win me.

Harpſ. I will, as God ſhall help me, do the beſt to thee that I can, if thou wilt be any thing conformable; and I hope to diſſolve all thy Doubts, if thou be willing to hear. And I alſo will deſire theſe two worſhipful Men, my Lord of Dover, and Mr. Collins, to hear us.

Bland. No, ye ſhall pardon me of that: There ſhall be no ſuch Witneſs. But when we agree, ſet to our Hands. Here the People made a Noiſe againſt me, for refuſing the Witneſs: And here we had many more Words than I can rehearſe. But at laſt I ſaid, Sir, will ye give me Leave to ask you one Queſtion? And he ſaid, Yea, with all my Heart. For in that thou askeſt any Thing, there is ſome Hope that thou may'ſt be won.

Mr. Bland's Queſtion to Dr. Harpſfield.

Bland. Sir, when it pleaſed Almighty God to ſend his Angel unto the Virgin Mary to ſalute her, and ſaid, Hail, full of Grace, &c. came any Subſtance from God our Father into the Virgin's Womb to become Man? Whereat Mr. Archdeacon, my Lord of Dover, and Mr. Collins were ſilent. But my Lord ſpake firſt, and ſaid, The Holy Ghoſt came to her; and e're he had brought out his Sentence, Mr. Syriac Peters ſaid, The Power of the moſt High over ſhadowed her. Truth, ſaid Mr. Archdeacon, it was the Power of God ſent by the Holy Ghoſt. They had forgot, that He was begotten of the Subſtance of his Father; or elſe they perceived whereunto this Queſtion tended: And ſo both I and they left it, by what Words I cannot tell. But I ſaid, Sir, ſhall I ask one other? And he ſaid, Yea. Is there in the Sacrament, after the Conſecration, Chriſt's natural Body, with all the Qualities of a natural Body, or no! Anno 1555.

Another Queſtion to Dr. Harpſfield.

Harpſ. Hark, ſaid, Mr. Archdeacon, hear ye this Heretick? He thinks it an Abſurdity to grant all the Quantities of Chriſt's natural Body to be in the Sacrament. But it is no Abſurdity: For even that natural Body that was born of the Virgin Mary is glorified, and that ſame Body is in the Sacrament after the Conſecration. But perceive ye not the Arrogancy of this Heretick, that will put me to anſwer him, and he will not anſwer me? He thought to put me to a Pinch with his Queſtion; for I tell you it is a learned Queſtion.

Dr. Harpſfield's Anſwer.

Bland. If ye be ſo much diſcontented with me, I will ſay no more; yet I would all Men heard, that ye ſay the glorified Body of Chriſt is in the Sacrament after the Conſecration.

How can the glorified Body be in the Sacrament, when the Sacrament was given before the Body was crucified, and it was crucified before it was glorified? The Body unglorified was given in the Sacrament in a glorified Act, quoth Harpſfield.

Harpſ. I may call thee groſs Ignorant. Thou groſs Ignorant, is not the ſame Body glorified, that was born of the Virgin Mary? Is it then any Abſurdity to grant that to be in the Sacrament? And while he ſpake many other Words, I ſaid to Mr. Petit, That the Sacrament was inſtituted, delivered, and received of his Apoſtles, before Chriſt's Body was crucified; and it was crucified before it was glorified; which Saying Mr. Petit partly recited to Mr. Archdeacon.

Harpſ. Thou haſt no Learning. Was not Chriſt's Body given to his Apoſtles, as in a glorified Act? And yet no Inconvenience, although his natural Body was not crucified; for when he was born of the Virgin Mary without Pain, was not that the Act of a glorify'd Body? And when he walked on the Water, and when he came into the Houſe to his Apoſtles, the Doors being ſhut faſt, were not theſe Acts of a glorify'd Body?

Then my Lord of Dover helped him to a better Place, and ſaid, When Chriſt was in Mount Tabor, he was there glorify'd in the Sight of his Apoſtles.

Harpſ. Ye ſay Truth, my Lord, he was glorify'd in the Sight of three of his Apoſtles.

Bland. This methinks is new Doctrine.

Harpſ. Well, ſeeing he will by no other Way be reformed, let the People come in and prove theſe Matters againſt him. And thereupon the Archdeacon brought forth a Copy of the Bill of Complaint that was put up againſt me at Chriſtmas, and about that we had a little Talk. And then Mr. Archdeacon roſe up, and ſaid, See ye good People that know this Matter, that ye come in, and prove it againſt him. Whereunto anſwered Thomas Auſten, I pray you let us be no more troubled with him, and then ſpake John Auſten, and Heath a one-ey'd Man, and began to accuſe me; but I gave them no other Anſwer, but do to me what ye can by Law, and I will anſwer it. Then ſaid Thomas Auſten, Bland, ye were once abjured. Ye ſay not truly, Goodman Auſten, ſaid I, I was never abjured. Either, ſaid he, ye were abjured, or elſe ye had the King's Pardon. Neither of both, ſaid I; ye ſpeak this of mere Malice, with many other Words. Then Mr. Archdeacon departed, and left Mr. Collins to command me to appear the next Day. Howbeit, for certain other urgent Buſineſs that I had, I did not appear, but wrote a Letter to Mr. Commiſſary, deſiring him to reſpite the Matter till my coming Home again; and if he would not, I would contentedly ſubmit myſelf to the Law when I came Home.

Now about the 28th Day of June I came to Mr. Commiſſary to let him know of my Return, and offered myſelf to ſatisfy the Law, if it were proceeded againſt me, before Mr. Cocks of Surry, and Marks the Apparitor; but Mr. Commiſſary gently ſaid, that he had done nothing againſt me. And ſo appointed me to appear before him the Friday Seven-night after. In the mean Time a Seſſions was held at Crambroke, where I was bound to appear; and carrying Surety with me to be bound again, for I expected no other, did appear the third Day of July.

Mr. Bland appearing at Seſſions in Crambroke.

Then ſaid Sir John Baker, Bland, we hear that you be a Scot; where were ye born and brought up? And I ſaid I was born in England. And he ſaid, where? And I ſaid, in Sedber, and brought up by one Dr. Lupton, Provoſt of Eaton College. Well, ſaid he, I know him well. Remain to your Bond till Afternoon.

Mr. Bland brought up by Dr. Lupton, Provoſt of Eaton College.

Then ſaid Sir Thomas Moyle, Ah Bland, thou art a ſtiff-necked Fellow. Thou wilt not obey the Law, nor anſwer when thou art called. Then ſaid Sir John Baker, Mr. Sheriff take him to your Ward: And the Bailiff ſet me in the Stocks, with others, and would not hear me ſpeak one Word; and ſo we remained in the Goal of Maidſtone, till a Fortnight before Michaelmas, or thereabouts; and then we were carried to Rocheſter, to the Aſſizes held there, where we were two Days among the Priſoners: And when we were called, and the Judges asked our Cauſes, when my Cauſe was rehearſed, Mr. Barrow, Clerk of the Peace, ſaid, that I was an excommunicate Perſon.

Then the Judges of Aſſize remanded us to Maidſtone again, ordering us to be brought to the next Seſſions that ſhould be held at the Town of Malden: However the Sheriff never ſent for us; ſo that we tarried at Maidſtone till the Seſſions held at Greenwich the 18th and 19th of February. I and others being within the Bar amongſt the Felons, and Irons upon our Arms, were called out the latter Day by the Jaylor and Bailiffs, and eaſed of our Irons, and carried by them into the Town to Sir John Baker, Mr. Petit, Mr. Webb, and two others whom I knew not.

Another Examination of Mr. Bland.

BAKER. Bland, wherefore were you caſt into Priſon?

Bland. I cannot well tell. Your Maſterſhip caſt me in.

Baker. Yea, but for what were you in before that Time?

Bland. For an unjuſt Complaint put upon me.

Baker. What was the Complaint?

I told him as truly and as briefly as I could.

Baker. Let me ſee thy Book? And I gave him a Latin Teſtament.

Baker. Will ye go to the Church, and obey and follow the Queen's Proceedings, and do as an honeſt Man ſhould do?

Bland. I truſt in God to do no otherwiſe but as an honeſt Man ought to do?

Baker. Will ye do as I ſaid?

Bland. Will it pleaſe your Maſterſhip to give me Leave to ask you a Queſtion?

Baker. Yea.

A Queſtion propounded to Sir John Baker.

Bland. Sir, may a Man do any Thing that his Conſcience is not ſatisfy'd in to be good?

Baker. Away, away; and threw down the Book, and ſaid, It is no Teſtament. And I ſaid, Yes. And Mr. Webb took it up, and ſaid unto me very gently, Mr. Bland, I knew you when you were not of this Opinion; I would to God ye would reform yourſelf; with better Words than I can write. And I ſaid; If ye have known me of another Opinion than I am now of, it was for lack of Knowledge.

Haſty Judgment of a Juſtice.

Baker. Yea, ſaiſt thou ſo? by St. Mary, and thou hold thee there, I will give ſix Faggots to burn thee withal, e're thou ſhouldeſt be unburned: Hence Knave, hence. And ſo were we returned into our Place again within the Bar. And at Night, when Judgment of Felons and all was done, we were called, and the Judge ordered the Jaylor to deliver us to the Ordinary. And if, ſaid the Judge, they will not be reformed, let them be delivered to us again, and they ſhall have Judgment and Execution. And one of our Company ſaid, My Lord, if we be killed at your Hands for Chriſt's Sake, we ſhall live with him for ever.

Mr. Bland and his Fellows ſent to the Ordinary by Sir John Baker.

Another Appearance of Mr. Bland in the Spiritual Court.

THEN we came to the Caſtle of Canterbury, and there we remained till the ſecond Day of March, on which Day we were brought into the Chapter-houſe of Creechurch, where were ſitting the Suffragan of Canterbury, Mr. Collins, Mr. Mills, with others, and then went to them Mr. Oxenden, Mr. Petit, Mr. Webb and Mr. Hardes, Juſtices. And when I was called, Mr. Webb ſaid, Here we preſent this Man unto you, as one vehemently ſuſpected of Hereſy.

Bland. Mr. Webb, ye have no Cauſe to ſuſpect me of Hereſy. I have been a Priſoner this whole Year, and no Matter proved againſt me. I pray you what is the Reaſon that I have been kept ſo long in Priſon?

Webb. Leave your arrogant asking of Queſtions, and anſwer to that that is laid to your Charge.

Bland. I do ſo; for I ſay you have no Cauſe to ſuſpect me of Hereſy.

Webb. Yes; ye deny'd to Sir John Baker, to be conformable to the Queen's Proceedings.

Bland. Is it a juſt Cauſe to ſuſpect me of Hereſy, for asking a Queſtion with Leave? So we had more Words there than I will remember.

Then ſtood up Mr. Petit, and ſaid, ye were caſt into Priſon, becauſe ye fled away from your Ordinary.

Bland. Then have I had wrong: For I never fled nor diſobey'd mine Ordinary, nor did any Thing contrary to the Law. If I did, let them now ſpeak: But they ſaid nothing. And when I ſaw that they held their Peace, I ſaid, Mr. Commiſſary, have you been the Cauſe of this my Impriſonment? No, quoth he; ye know that when ye went from me, ye were appointed to appear the Friday after the Seſſions. Here I was ſuffered to ſpeak no more, but ſhut up in a Corner till my Companions were alſo preſented, and then we were ſent to Weſtgate into Priſon, and were put in ſeveral cloſe Holds, ſo that we could not ſpeak to one another, neither was any Man permitted to come to us. We appeared four Times in this Manner: But one they diſpatched, by what Means I cannot tell; whoſe Name was Cornwall, a Tanner.

And thus paſſed the Talk between Bland and the Juſtices, and certain Gentlemen of the Shire. Now followeth the Order of the Reaſoning between him and the Clergy-men, before whom he was examined. But foraſmuch as the chief Actor againſt him was the Biſhop of Dover, or Suffragan of Canterbury, Dr. Richard Thornton, to the Intent it may appear what little Truth or Conſtancy is in theſe catholick Perſecutors, I thought here to exhibit, a certain Letter, written to him by a Papiſt. Wherein is declared what a Goſpeller the ſaid Richard Thornton was in King Edward's Time, who now turning with the Tide, ſhewed himſelf a moſt bitter Perſecutor againſt God's Servants in Queen Mary's Time. The Copy of this Letter here followeth.

The Copy of a Popiſh Letter written to the Biſhop of Dover, by one Thomas Goldwell a Prieſt, declaring what a Profeſſor he was in King Edward's Time.

*Right Reverend and my good Lord, after my hearty Thanks for your good Cheer at my laſt being with your Lordſhip, this ſhall be to certify you, that as ſoon as my Lord's Grace arrived , I gave him your Letters, but I had much Work to obtain any Thing of him for you. For there hath been very evil Informations given of you, and it hath been ſaid, that you have concurred with all Manner of evil Proceedings, which have for ſome Years been in England, as well againſt the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, and againſt the ſupreme Authority of Chriſt's Vicar upon Earth, as with the Uſe of the late abominable Communion, and with the Marriage of Prieſts, as well Religious as Secular; and that you have given Orders to (I cannot tell how many) baſe, unlearned, and evil-diſpoſed People, by reaſon of which they have taken upon them to preach, and thereby have done much Hurt in Kent. So that Men think that yet if any new Mutation (which God forbid) ſhould happen, you would be as ready to change as any other. And indeed it maketh me to fear the ſame, by reaſon that notwithſtanding it hath pleaſed Almighty God to provide, that your Abſolution was ſent unto you (when you little thought of it) abſolving you from all your paſt Offences, yet your Lordſhip (more regarding the Vanity of the World than the Offence of God, which he only knoweth how much it grieves me, for the due Love I bear unto you) preſumed to ſing Maſs in Pontificalibus, the Holy-days immediately following, and alſo to miniſter to Children the Sacrament of Confirmation, becauſe that one (being a Member of the Devil) did ſomewhat comfort you ſo to do. Anno 1555.

* He meaneth of the Arrival of Cardinal Poole.

Thornton Biſhop of Dover againſt the Pope and Sacrament of the in King Edward's Time.

Oh my Lord, what Honour ſhould it have been both to God and to yourſelf, and alſo Edification to all good People (though all worldly Men and Hereticks would have laughed you to ſcorn) if you conſidering your great Offences towards God, and his Goodneſs towards you, would, as you have offended in the Face of the World, to the Damnation of many, likewiſe have ſhewed your ſelf penitent in the Face of the World, to the Edification of many, and not ſo ſoon to have celebrated for Vanity Pontificaliter; but for a Time to have abſtained for Reverence Totaliter from the Altar, according to the ancient Cuſtom of the Church. Which I have alſo ſeen obſerved by ſome honeſt Men, not being thereto enjoin'd by any Man, but as their own Conſciences obliged them. But what is paſt cannot be recall'd. And I thought it not my Part to leave your Lordſhip, mine own Friend and Maſter, in the Mire. Where I ceaſed not to ſolicit your Cauſe with my Lord's Grace, till at laſt I obtained of his Grace for your Lordſhip all the Faculties of which I ſend you a Copy here encloſed, partly for your own Conſolation, and partly for the Comfort of others, deſiring your Lordſhip to uſe them to the Honour of God, that there come to me thereof no Rebuke: Not publiſhing them to any Perſon, but to ſuch as you know will gladly receive them. For hitherto there is never a Biſhop in England, who hath granted him ſo great Authority concerning thoſe which be under his Cure. Only Mr. Archdeacon hath the like, and in one Thing, more great than be theſe your Lordſhips. Wherefore your Lordſhip ſhall do well to remit unto him all ſuch Prieſts as have Cure of Souls, whether they be beneficed Men, or Pariſh Prieſts. For he hath not only Authority to abſolve them, as you have, but alſo to give them Authority to abſolve ſuch as be underneath their Cures. And thus I commit your Lordſhip to the Protection of Almighty God. Written at Bruſſels the 16*th of* June, 1554.

Power to give Abſolution granted to the Biſhop of Dover from the Cardinal.

Your Lordſhip's Beadman,

Thomas Goldwell.

And thus much, by way of Digreſſion, concerning the Biſhop of Dover. Now to return again to the Examination of Mr. Bland: Let us hear his own Report of his Anſwers, as followeth.

Here followeth mine Anſwer, as nigh as I can call to Remembrance, every Word and Sentence; yet if any that was preſent can help to perfect it, I would be glad. But yet this dare I ſay, that there is not one Sentence, but it was openly ſpoken the ninth of March in the Chapter-houſe of Creechurch, in the Preſence of as many as they had choſen, the Mayor of the City being called to be Aſſiſtant, and all others ſhut out.

The Anſwer of Mr. Bland in his Appearance before the Commiſſary, and others in the Spiritual Court.

MAſter Collins ſaid; Mr. Bland, ye know that ye are preſented unto us as one ſuſpected of Hereſy. How ſay ye, be ye contented to reform yourſelf to the Laws of this Realm, and of the holy Church?

Bland. I deny that I am juſtly ſuſpected of Hereſy, and that ye heard when I was preſented, that I deny'd the Suſpicion to be juſt, but to defend the unjuſt Puniſhment that I have ſuffered: Neither can ye prove that any Occaſion hath been given by me, whereby any Man ſhould ſuſpect me therein. But if you have any Law or Authority to proceed againſt me for any thing done for a whole Year ago and more, I will anſwer to it.

Anno 1555.

Mr. Bland unjuſtly ſuſpected of Hereſy, and more unjuſtly puniſhed.

Collins. Ye were convented before Mr. Archdeacon and me, and Matter of Hereſy laid to your Charge.

Bland. That Matter was done and ſaid a whole Year ago, for I have been in Priſon this Year and more. If ye have any Thing againſt me by any Law, I deſire you to let me know the Law and the Matter, and I will anſwer according to the Law.

Then ſaid my Lord Suffragan; But that I am one of the Judges, I would riſe, and ſtand by thee, and accuſe thee to be a Sacramentary, and bring Witneſs to prove it; yea, and further, that thou haſt called the Maſs an abominable Idol.

Bland. You, my Lord, never heard me ſay ſo: But I heard you once ſay, That in your Conſcience ye had abhorred the Maſs three Years. Thou lieſt, quoth he, I never ſaid ſo.

Bland. My Lord, if they might be heard, I can bring Witneſs to prove it, with the Day, Time and Place; and I once did hear Mr. Collins at a Viſitation in Wingham ſay, That Chriſt was a full Satisfaction for all Sin, preſent, paſt and to come, contrary to that he ſaith now.

And here we had more Words of this Matter, which I let paſs for lack of good Remembrance.

Mr. Collins ſaid, This is but a Drift. You were better anſwer now, elſe you ſhall go to Priſon again, and be called on Monday, and have Articles laid to you, and if ye then anſwer not directly, ye ſhall be condemned Pro confeſſo, and that will be worſe for you.

Bland. Sir, I do not now, nor will I then deny to anſwer to any Thing that ye can lay to my Charge by the Law; wherefore I truſt ye will let me have the Benefit of the Law.

Collins. This is the Law, that if be required of the Ordinary, to render a Reaſon of your Faith, then may ye not deny it. And that we do now.

Mr. Bland confeſſeth all the Arcles of his Creed. If the Faith of the Sacrament be in the Scripture, and ſo neceſſary a Thing, why did not the Apoſtles then put it in the Creed, and make thirteen Articles? If it be not in the Scripture, nor yet put in the Creed, why then doth the Pope ſo extreamly bind us unto it?

Bland. To that then will I anſwer. For I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jeſus Chriſt his only Son our Lord, with all the other Articles of the ſame Creed: And I believe all the Articles contained both in the Creed called the Maſs Creed, and in the Creed of Athanaſius: And I do believe, that all the Holy Scriptures, and all Things therein contained, are moſt true.

Collins. This will not ſerve you: Ye muſt anſwer to all ſuch Articles in all theſe as ſhall be laid to you, or asked of you.

Bland. Let me know the Law that it is in that Force (without any juſt Cauſe of Suſpicion proved againſt me) and I will anſwer.

Collins. How ſay, will ye anſwer?

Bland. Sir, I have anſwered you. Have him away, ſaid my Lord of Dover, he had better have anſwered.

Bland. My Lord, I am ready to anſwer, if ye have any Thing againſt me by the Law.

Biſhop of Dover. Ye have preached many Hereſies in Adeſham, where I am Parſon now; and therefore ye muſt make Anſwer to them.

Bland. Lay them to my Charge by the Law, and I will anſwer them, if ye can prove I am bound to anſwer to that which was done a Year ago or more: For if ye may do that, ye may alſo lay to my Charge, and compel me to anſwer to all Things done in all my Life.

Collins. It is not a Year ago ſince you were before Mr. Archdeacon and me.

Bland. It is a Year and ten Weeks ſince the Words were ſpoken, and I have been a Priſoner ever ſince, and have been at five Seſſions, and never could have my Cauſe tried. Methinks your Charities ſhould think it Puniſhment enough if I had been guilty.

Collins. All this will not ſerve you; you muſt needs anſwer, and it will be better for you to anſwer now than at another Time. Will ye reform yourſelf and go to the Church, and worſhip Chriſt in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and be obedient unto all the Queen's Laws?

Bland. I pray you wherefore am I brought hither?

Collins. To anſwer to ſuch Things as are demanded of you.

Bland. Sir, I thought ye had ſome Matters againſt me by the Law.

Mr. Bland called before the ſpiritual Judges, not for any Matter they had, but that they would have againſt him.

Collins. Well, on Monday at Nine of the Clock ye ſhall ſee the Law, and have Articles laid unto you.

Then they had eſpied Mr. Cox the Lawyer, and called him in, and ſaid, Here is a Lawyer can tell you are bound by the Law to anſwer: And he ſaid as they had ſaid.

Collins. Do ye not believe, that after the Conſecration of the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, there remaineth no Subſtance of Bread, but the Subſtance of Jeſus Chriſt, both God and Man?

Bland. Mr. Commiſſary, I know not by any Law why ye ſhould ask me that Queſtion more than any other Man here. And after a little Talk, my Lord Dover asked me this Queſtion: Doſt not thou believe, after the Conſecration, that it is the Body of Chriſt? And I ſaid, No, I do not ſo believe: For the Scriptures do not teach me, that there ſhould remain the Fleſh of Chriſt, to eat as a Man ſhould eat Man's Fleſh.

Then Mr. Glaſier ſaid, That was the Opinion of the Capernaites, there is no Man here of that Opinion: And ſpake long of cutting of Chriſt's Body, as Men cut Fleſh in the Shambles.

Then Dr. Faucet ſaid, Mr. Bland, foraſmuch as you and I were brought up both in one Houſe, and born both in one Pariſh, I would be as glad as any Man alive to do you good; but ye may not thus ſtand againſt the Church. For Chriſt ſaith, ye muſt humble yourſelf, and take up his Croſs, and follow him: And to humble yourſelf in this Place, is to be content, and not ſtick to your own Judgment, but to humble yourſelf to the holy Chrch, which hath determined, that after the Conſecration there remanieth no Bread, but the natural Body and Blood of Chriſt.

Determination of the Church is to be followed ſo far as the Church determineth by the Scriptures.

Bland. Mr. Doctor, if ye take humbling of ourſelves in that Place, to admit the Determination of the Church, then muſt we know by the Scriptures, that the ſame Church determined nothing but according to the Scriptures, as this is not: And therefore I do not believe any ſuch Tranſubſtantiation, nor never will, God willing. Then, quoth he, I have done with you: I will no more pray for you than for a Dog.

Then

Then said Mr. Glasier, How think ye? Did St. Paul, when he said, I not the Bread that we brake a partaking of the Body of Christ? Did he mean Bakers Bread?

Bland. Though he did not mean Bakers Bread, that doth not prove that he brake natural and real Flesh.

Glasier. No, by St. Mary, we say not so, but we say it is the natural Body glorified, under the Forms of Bread and Wine.

Bland. Then the Apostles had it not as we have; or else his glorified Body was crucified for us.

Glasier. Tush, ye do not understand the Scriptures. For Christ's Body was ever glorified. in that it was so marvellously united to the Godhead: Yea, and he shewed his Body divers Times glorified, as in the Mount Tabor: And when he walked on the Water, we see he was light, and had no Weight in him. Was not that then a glorified Body?

Bland. Then belike Peter's Body was glorified, if walking on the Water was the Deed of a glorified Body: And the Iron that Elisha made to swim upon the Water.

2 Kings 6. 6.

Tush, said my Lord of Dover, that was done by Prayer. But there was such a Noise made with laughing, that I heard no more what my Lord said.

It availeth not to reason with the Papists in the Time of their Kingdom.

Bland. Masters, I know that it availeth us nothing to Reason with you, no more than it availeth you in the Time of the Gospel. For then neither the Reason of Eckius, Cochlæus, nor yet of Detection of the Devil's Sophistry of my Lord Chancellor's Doing, could take any Place. And it is known to some that be here, that something I can say in them.

Dover. No, you know Oecolampadius, Zuinglius, and such others.

Bland. Indeed, my Lord, I have seen Part of their Doings.

Dover. That is seen by thee to Day.

Glasier. I was glad when I heard you say ye believed the catholick Church, and now go you from it?

Bland. No that I do not.

Matth. 18. 15, 16, 17.

Glasier. Ye know that Christ saith; If thy Brother have offended thee, go and reconcile him between thee and him. If he hear thee not, take two or three with thee, that in the Mouth of two or three Witnesses all Things may be established. If he hear not them, tell it unto the Church; if he hear not the Church, take him as an Heathen. I pray where could ye have found this Church of yours fifty Years ago?

Bland. Ye know that the true Church did not at all Times flourish, but was wonderfully persecuted.

Then my Lord of Dover cried, No more, I command you to hold your Peace. Have him away, and bring in another.

Collins. Ye shall come again on Monday at Nine of the Clock, and in the mean Time ye shall have whom ye will to confer withal; your Friend Dr. Faucet, or Mr. Glasier, if ye desire them.

Bland. I will refuse to talk with no Man: As for any Conference of your Part, it is but weak Laws, established as they are. But when there was no Law, I did desire Conference. And so for that Time I departed.

The Monday after we were brought to the same Place again; and then Mr. Collins began to speak to me, but after what Manner, it is clean out of my Mind: But the End was, that I would reform myself. But as I did before, I demanded what they had to lay to my Charge, and to see the Law, which they said before I should see.

Anno 1555.

Dover. What needs that? We have enough against you: * For ye denied unto me Transubstantiation in the Sacrament.

* Yea, but why then did you imprison him a whole Year before?

Bland. I did not refuse to answer till ye promised that I should see the Law, whereby ye might compel me to answer.

Dover. My Lord took the Scribe's Book, and read the Answer that I made to Dr. Faucet's Reason, which I knew not that they had written.

Bland. My Lord, I made you no such Answer when ye asked me: I take Mr. Collins and Mr. Glasier to witness. Then they brought forth a Decretal, a Book of the Bishop of Rome's Law, to bind me to answer, which my Heart abhorred to look upon. This Effect was, that the Ordinary had Authority to examine, and that those whom they so examined must needs answer. But I said that it meaned such as were justly suspected, as I was not. And here we had much Communication: For I charged them with unjust Imprisonment, which they could not avoid.

Mr. Oxenden would have helped them, and said, the Justices put me in Prison for preaching a seditious Sermon, and for troubling a Priest at Mass.

Bland. That is not true; for after I had been ten Weeks in Prison I was bailed out, till I was cast in again (as the Justice said) for the disobeying mine Ordinary, which I never did.

Collins. Are ye willing to confer with some? it will be better for you; now we offer it, because ye would not desire it.

Bland. As I did not refuse before, no more will I now. But I did perceive before, but that one Thing might have come, without Leave-asking, to confer the Scriptures: And therefore I expected Dr. Faucet would have come to me without desiring, if any Profit to me had been in Conference; for though I was never able to do him good; yet once I was his Tutor.

Collins. Will ye come to his Chamber in the Afternoon?

Bland. Sir, I am a Prisoner, and therefore it is meet that I obey, and come whither you will, and so departed. At this Time we were three. But they took another to appear before them the Tuesday seven-night after. And when he came, I knew not what was done, but I hear they excommunicated, and let him go. His Name was Miller a Clothier.

These three belike were Bland, Sheterden, and Middleton.

Miller a Clothier excommunicated and let go.

Here followeth a certain Confutation of Mr. Bland against false and manifest Absurdities, granted by Mr. Milles, Priest of Christchurch in Canterbury.

MILLES. We say that Christ is in or under the Sacrament really and corporally, which are the Forms of Bread and Wine, and that there is his Body contained invisibly, and the Qualities which we do see, as Whiteness and Roundness, be there without Substance by God's Power, as Quantity and Weight be there also by visible Measure.

The popish Faith of the Sacrament.

Bland. This is your own Divinity, to make Accidents the Sacrament, and in Christ's real

Anno 1555.

Body inviſibly contained in them, and ſo to deſtry the Sacrament. And yet the Doctors ſay; * Materia Sacramenti eſt Panis & Vinum. And God by his Power worketh no Miracles with Hoc eſt Corpus meum, ſo to change the Subſtance of Bread and Wine into his Body and Blood, in that he maketh Accidents to be without their Subſtance by inviſible Meaſure. I am aſhamed to ſee you ſo deſtroy Chriſt's Sacrament, contrary to your own Doctors, and trifle with God's Work.

1. The Matter of the Sacrament is Bread and Wine. If Chriſt be able to be where he liſt, and occupy no Place: Why then is not he able to be as well under the Subſtance of Bread, as under the Accidents of Bread, ſeeing he is omnipotent? Chriſt may be where he liſt: Ergo, Chriſt is really in the Sacrament without occupying of Place. The Antecedent is true, and the Conſequence is falſe.

Milles. To Chriſt is given all Power in Heaven and in Earth, ſo that by the omnipotent Power of his Godhead he may be, and is where he liſteth; and is in the Sacrament really and corporally without occupying of Place; for a glorified Body occupieth no Place.

Bland. Mark your own Reaſon. All Power is given to Chriſt both in Heaven and Earth; by the omnipotent Power of his Godhead he may be where he liſt: Ergo, he is in the Sacrament really and corporally without occupying of Place.

I deny your Argument; for it followeth neither of your Major nor Minor. And firſt I would learn of you, how you know that Chriſt liſteth to be preſent at the Will of every Prieſt. For if the Prieſt liſt not to ſay your Maſs, then Chriſt liſteth not to be there.

Again, ye ſay, all Power is given unto Chriſt both in Heaven and in Earth, ſo that is the Cauſe by your Reaſon, that by the omnipotent Power of his Godhead he may be where he liſt: And by that Reaſon he had no Power of his Godhead, till he had his human Body, and then he was not equal with the Father in Divinity: For all Power was not given to Chriſt, before the Humanity and the Godhead were knit together, neither was he Filius. Here is more Danger than ye are aware of, if ye would ſtand to it with juſt Judges.

Milles. We eat Chriſt's Fleſh and Blood ſpiritually when we receive it with Faith and Charity. And we alſo do eat it corporally in the Sacrament; and the Body that we ſo receive hath Life. For the Godhead is annexed thereto: Which although it be received with the Body of Chriſt, yet it is not viſible after a groſs Sort, and the Fleſh of Chriſt that we receive is lively; for it hath the Spirit of God joined to it. And if a Man be druken, it is not by receiving of the Blood of Chriſt: For it is contrary to the Nature of Chriſt's Blood. If he be drunken, it is by the Qualities and * Quantities, without Subſtance of Blood.

* Caſe being put that the Prieſt taking a great Quantity in the Chalice, be made drunk, which of theſe three is it that maketh him drunk? the Nature of Blood: the Accidents only of Wine: Or elſe the true Subſtance of Wine? Let any reaſonable Man judge.

Bland. I am glad that you are ſo much againſt all Men, to ſay that Chriſt's Body is alive in the Sacrament; it may fortune to bring you to the Truth in Time to come. Methinks it is evil to keep Chriſt's Body alive in the Pix; or elſe muſt ye grant, that he is alive in receiving, and dead in the Pix. And ye ſay Truth, that it is not the natural receiving of Chriſt's Blood that maketh a Man drunken; for it is the Nature of Wine that doth that, which ye deny not.

And a greater Truth ye confeſs than ye did think, when ye ſaid; If a Man be drunken, it is by the Qualities and Quantities, without the Subſtance of Blood; for indeed Blood hath no ſuch Qualities with it: By which it is evident that there is no natural Blood.

If a Man be drunken with Wine conſecrated, it muſt be a Miracle, as I think you will have it, that the ſaid Accidents ſhould be without their natural Subſtance, and work all the Operations of both Subſtance and Accidents; and ſo it followeth that a Man may be drunken by Miracle. The Body that ye receive, ye ſay, is alive, becauſe it is annexed to the Godhead; and the Fleſh that ye receive is lively, becauſe it hath the Spirit of God joined to it.

This Diviſion is of your new Inventions, to divide the Body and the Fleſh, the one alive by the Godhead, the other lively by God's Spirit, and both one Sacrament: Ye make of it a Thing ſo fantaſtical, that ye imagine a Body without Fleſh, and Fleſh without a Body; as ye do Qualities and Quantities without Subſtance, and a living Body without Qualities and Quantities.

Fantaſtical Abſurdities in the Pope's Doctrine to be noted.

Milles. If caſe ſo require, and there be a godly Intent in the Miniſter to conſecrate, after the Conſecration thereof, there is preſent the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and no other Subſtance, but Accidents without Subſtance to a true Believer.

Bland. Ye grant three Abſurdities, * That in a Tun of Wine conſecrated is nothing but Accidents: And to increaſe it withal, ye have brought in two Inconveniences; firſt, that it is not the Word of God that doth conſecrate, but the Intent of the Prieſt muſt help it; and if that fail, ye ſeem to gant no Conſecration, though the Prieſt ſpeak the Word; and yet your Doctors ſay, that the Wickedneſs of the Prieſt diminiſheth not the Sacrament.

* Three Inconveniences granted by the Papiſts.

1. That a Tun of Wine being conſecrated, nothing remaineth but Accidents: Which is falſe by the Operation thereof.

2. Where he ſaith, that the Word of God doth not conſecrate without the Intent of the Prieſt, which is againſt their own Doctrine, ſaying, That the Wickedneſs of the Prieſt diminiſheth not the Sacrament.

3. Where he ſaith, that to the Unbeliever it is not the Sacrament as the Papiſts ſay, that the Wicked receive the Body.

And to an Unbeliever ye ſeem to ſay, that it is not the ſame, as it is to the true Believer; and then muſt the Believer have ſomething to do in the Conſecration. Incidit in Scyllam * qui vult vitare Charibdim.

* Scylla, a Rock over-againſt the Gulph Charybdis, ſo that the Paſſage there is dangerous for Ships; whence the Proverb, To avoid Scylla he falls into Charybdis; or in Engliſh, He leaps out of the Frying-pan into the Fire.

Milles. The Subſtance of Chriſt's Body doth not fill the Mouſe's Belly. For although he doth receive the outward Forms of Bread and Wine, yet he doth not receive the Subſtance inwardly, but without Violation. And a Mouſe doth not eat the Body of Chriſt, to ſpeak properly; for it doth not feed him ſpiritually or corporally, as it doth Man, becauſe he doth not receive it to any Inducement of Immortality to the Fleſh.

Bland. Ye make not your Doctrine plain to be underſtood: We muſt know how a Mouſe can receive the Subſtance inwardly and outwardly. Ye ſay he doth not receive the Subſtance † inwardly, but without Violation: Ergo, With Violation he receiveth the Subſtance inwardly. Ye ſay that the Mouſe cannot violate Chriſt's Body; but he violateth the Subſtance that he eateth. And this your proper Speech doth import Argument. A contrario ſenſu.

† The Mouſe receiveth not the Body inwardly, but without Violation.

Ergo, With Violation he receiveth the Body inwardly.

Argument.

The Mouſe violateth not the Body of Chriſt.

The Mouſe violateth the Subſtance which he eateth.
Ergo, The Mouſe eateth no Subſtance of Chriſt's Body.

import as much, as that the Mouſe ſhould eat the Sacrament to as great Effect, and the ſame Thing as doth the unworthy Receiver. For if that be the Cauſe that ſhe properly eateth not the Body of Chriſt, becauſe ſhe doth not feed upon it ſpiritually nor corporally, nor receiveth it to any Inducement of Immortality, as ye ſay; then it followeth, that the Unbeliever and the * Mouſe receive both one Thing. And yet it cannot be denied, but the † Mouſe will live with conſecrated Bread, and then ye muſt grant this Abſurdity, that a Subſtance is nouriſhed and fed only with Accidents.

* The Mouſe and the Unbeliever receive the Body of Chriſt both alike, by the Papiſts Doctrine.

† Argument.
No Mouſe can live with Accidents only without Subſtance.
A Mouſe may live with conſecrated Hoſts.
Ergo, Conſecrated Hoſts have not only Accidents, but the Subſtance of Bread.

Milles. Mens Bodies be fed with Chriſt's Body, as with immortal Meat, by reaſon of the Godhead annexed, to eternal Life; but Mens Bodies be corporally nouriſhed with Qualities and Forms of Bread and Wine: And we deny that by the ſacramental Eating any groſs Humour turned into Blood is made miraculouſly in the Body.

Bland. Where it cannot be denied that a Man may live, and naturally be nouriſhed in his natural Body with the ſacramental Bread and Wine conſecrated; ye cannot avoid that: But then ye turn to the ſpiritual nouriſhing of Man's Body, by Chriſt's Body and Godhead annexed, which is nothing to put away the Abſurdity, that either a Man's natural Body ſhould be fed naturally with Accidents, or elſe to have them changed into groſs Humours. But ye ſay, Mens Bodies be corporally nouriſhed with Qualities and Forms of Bread and Wine; and then muſt ye needs grant, that Qualities and Quantities muſt be made Subſtance in Man. For ex eiſdem ſunt & nutriuntur mixta, or elſe is all that is the Nutriment in Man Accidents and no Subſtance.

Another Abſurdity, that Mens Bodies be nouriſhed naturally with Accidents and Qualities.

Milles. If the Forms of Bread and Wine be burned, or Worms ingendered, it is no Derogation to the Body of Chriſt, becauſe the Preſence of his Body ceaſeth to be there, and no Subſtance cometh again.

Bland. Ye grant here, that a Subſtance may be made of Accidents, as Aſhes or Worms: But I think you will have it by your Miracles, and this I count a greater Abſurdity than the other, that Chriſt's Body ſhould ceaſe to be there, and no Subſtance to come again; for no Word in all the whole Bible ſeems to ſerve you for the ceaſing of his Preſence, tho' we granted you, which we do not, that it were there. God Almighty open your Heart, if it be his Will and Pleaſure, to ſee the Truth. And if I thought not my Death to be at Hand, I would anſwer you to all the reſt, in theſe and all other my Doings.

Another Abſurdity, that Subſtance is made of Accidents, when Aſhes or Worms be made of the Forms of Bread and Wine.

I ſubmit myſelf to our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and his holy Word, deſiring you in the Bowels of Chriſt to do the ſame.

Your Orator in the Lord,

John Bland.

The laſt Appearance and Examination of Mr. Bland.

HItherto you have heard the troubleſome Handling of this faithful Servant of God, John Bland, toſt to and fro, from Priſon to Priſon, from Seſſion to Seſſion. At laſt he was brought before the Biſhop of Dover, the Commiſſary, and the Archdeacon, at Canterbury the 13th Day of June. The Name of this Biſhop was Richard Thornton. The Commiſſary was Robert Collins, whom the Cardinal by his Letters Patents had ſubſtituted his Agent, before his coming over ro England. The Archdeacon was Nicholas Harpsfield. Under theſe a great many innocent Lambs of Chriſt were cruelly treated and barbarouſly ſlain at Canterbury, amongſt whom this aforeſaid Mr. Bland was one of the Firſt; who, as it is ſaid, being brought before the ſaid Biſhop, and Colleagues, which were John Frankeſh, Nicholas Sheterden, Thomas Thacker, Humfrey Middleton, and William Cocker, were examined of Articles. To whom it was objected by the Commiſſary, Whether he believed that Chriſt is really in the Sacrament, or no, &c. To this he anſwer'd and ſaid, that he believed, that Chriſt is in the Sacrament, as he in all other good Bodies; ſo that he judged not Chriſt to be really in the Sacrament. Anno 1555.

Whereupon the Day being on Monday, he was bid to appear again upon Wedneſday next, and from thence he was deferred again to Monday following, being the twentieth of June, in the ſame Chapterhouſe, then to hear further what ſhould be done, in Caſe he would not relent to their Mind. Which Day and Place he appearing as before, was required to ſpeak his Mind plainly and fully to the aforeſaid Articles, being again repeated to him. Which Articles, commonly and in courſe they uſually objected to their Examinates which were brought before them, which Articles as here now followeth, need not hereafter be repeated, eſpecially for the County of Kent.

The laſt Appearance of Mr. Bland before the Biſhop of Dover and others.

Articles miniſtred by Richard Biſhop of Dover, to Mr. Bland, and likewiſe to the reſt following after him.

FIRST, That thou art of the Dioceſs of Canterbury, and ſo ſubject to the Juriſdiction of the Archbiſhop there.

2. Item, That thou art a chriſtian Man, and doſt profeſs the Laws of God, and Faith of Chriſt's catholick Church, and the Determination of the ſame.

3. Item, That all Perſons who teach, preach, believe, affirm, hold, maintain, or ſay within the Dioceſs of Canterbury, otherwiſe than our holy Mother the Church doth, are excommunicate Perſons, and Hereticks, and as excommunicate and Hereticks ought to be named, reputed, and taken.

4. Item, That thou, coutrary to the catholick Faith and Determination of our Mother holy Church, within the Dioceſs of Canertbury, haſt openly ſpoken, maintained, holden, affirmed, believed, and yet doſt hold, affirm, and believe, that in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, there is not the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt in Subſtance, but only a Token, Sign, and Remembrance thereof, and that the very Body and Blood of Chriſt is only in Heaven, and no where elſe.

5. Item, That thou, contrary to the catholick Faith, and Determination of our Holy Mother Church, haſt within this Dioceſs of Canterbury

Anno 1555. Canterbury openly ſpoken, ſaid, maintained, holden, affirmed, and believed, and yet doſt hold, maintain, affirm, and believe, that it is againſt God's Word, that the Sacrament of Chriſt's Church ſhould be miniſtred in an unknown Tongue; and that no Man with a ſafe Conſcience, or without Peril of Sin receiveth any Sacrament adminiſtred in any Tongue that he underſtandeth not.

6. Item, That thou, contrary to the catholick Faith of our Mother holy Church, haſt, and yet doſt hold Opinion, and ſay, that it is againſt God's Word, that the Sacrament of the Altar ſhould be adminiſtred in one Kind; and that no Man may with a ſafe Conſcience ſo receive it.

7. Item, That the Premiſes be true, and that there is a common Fame upon them within the Dioceſs of Canterbury.

The Anſwers of Mr. Bland to the aforeſaid Articles.

1. TO theſe Articles Mr. Bland, anſwering again in Order as they were objected to him, ſaith to the Firſt, granting the ſame, that he was a Prieſt, and of the Dioceſe of Canterbury.

2. To the Second alſo he anſwereth affirmatively.

3. Item, to the Third he anſwereth, that the Article is true, meaning the catholick Church to be Chriſt's Church.

4. Item, in the Fourth Article, as touching the firſt Part of the Article, he doth confeſs, that he hath preached and taught it, as it is contained in the ſame. And as touchiug the ſecond Part of the Article, he doth confeſs, that he doth now alſo hold and ſay, as he preached and taught before.

5. Item, to the fifth Article he granteth.

6. To the Sixth he preached, held, and doth hold, as is contained in the Article.

7. Item, to the laſt Article he granted the ſame, &c.

This done, and his Anſwers and Confeſſion taken, Reſpite was given him yet a few Days to deliberate with himſelf. And on the 25th Day of the ſaid Month of June he appeared again in the Chapter-houſe, and there openly and boldly withſtood the Authority of the Pope; whereupon he was condemned and committed to the ſecular Power.

Mr. Bland condemned.

Mr. Bland's Prayer before his Death.

THE Lord Jeſus, for whoſe Love I do willingly leave this Life, and deſire rather the bitter Death of his Croſs, with the Loſs of all earthly Things, than to abide the Blaſpheny of thy Holy Name, or elſe to obey Man in breaking of the Commandments: Thou ſeeſt, O Lord, that whereas I might live in worldly Wealth to worſhip falſe Gods, and honour thy Enemy, I choſe rather the Torments of this Body, and Loſs of this my Life, and have counted all Things but vile Duſt and Dung that I might win thee: Which Death is more dear unto me than thouſands of Gold and Silver. Such Love, O Lord, haſt thou laid up in my Breaſt, that I Hunger for thee, as the Deer that is wounded deſireth the Soil. Send thy holy Comfort, O Lord, to aid, comfort, and ſtrengthen this weak Piece of Earth, which is void of all Strength of itſelf. Thou remembreſt, O Lord, that I am but Duſt, and not able to do any Thing that is Good. Therefore, O Lord, as thou of thy accuſtomed Goodneſs haſt bidden me to this Banquet, and counted me worthy to drink of thine own Cup amongſt thine Elect; give me Strength againſt this Element, that as it it is to my Sight moſt irkſome and terrible, ſo to my Mind it may be at thy Commandment, as an obedient Servant, ſweet and pleaſant; and through the Strength of thy Holy Spirit I may paſs through the Strength of this Fire into thy Boſom, according to thy Promiſe, and for this Mortality to receive Immortality, and for this Corruptible to put on Incorruptible. Accept this Burnt-offering and Sacrifice, O Lord, not for the Sacrifice itſelf, but for thy dear Son's ſake my Saviour; for whoſe Teſtimony I offer this freewill Offering with all my Heart and with all my Soul. O heavenly Father, forgive me my Sins as I forgive the whole World. O ſweet Saviour, ſpread thy Wings over me. O God, grant me thy Holy Ghoſt, through whoſe merciful Inſpiration I am come hither. Conduct me unto everlaſting Life. Lord, into thy Hands I commend my Spirit; Lord Jeſus receive my Soul. So be it.

The Hiſtory of John Frankeſh, Humphry Middleton, and Nicholas Sheterden.

HAVING now paſſed over the Examinations of Mr. Bland, let us further proceed to the reſt of his Fellow-priſoners, being joined the ſame Time with him in the like Cauſe and like Affliction. The Names of whom were, John Frankeſh, Nicholas Sheterden, Humphry Middleton, Thacker and Cocker, of whom Thacker only gave back. The reſt conſtantly ſtanding to the Truth, were altogether condemned by the Suffragan of Canterbury, the 25th Day of June the Year above expreſſed. Whoſe Examinations I need not dwell long upon, foraſmuch as the Articles miniſtred againſt them were all one, ſo in their Anſwers they little or nothing diſagreed, as you ſhall hear hereafter. In the mean Time becauſe Nicholas Sheterden in his Examinations had a little more Talk with the Archdeacon and the Commiſſary. I will firſt begin with him.

The firſt Examination of Nicholas Sheterden with Mr. Archdeacon Harpsfield, and Mr. Collins the Commiſſary, for which they ſent him to Priſon.

FIRST the Archdeacon and Commiſſary affirmed, that the very Words of Chriſt, when he ſaid, This is my Body, did change the Subſtance, without any other Interpretation or ſpiritual Meaning of the Words.

Sheterden. Then belike when Chriſt ſaid, This Cup is my Blood, the Subſtance of the Cup was changed into his Blood, without any other Meaning, and ſo the Cup was changed, and not the Wine.

The Papiſts can deny a figurative Speech in the Cup, and yet will not grant the ſame in the Bread.

Harpsfield. Not ſo; for when Chriſt ſaid, This Cup is my Blood, he meant not the Cup, but the Wine in the Cup.

Sheterden. If Chriſt ſpake one Thing, and meant another, then the bare Words did not change the Subſtance; but there muſt be a Meaning Meaning ſought as well of the Bread, as of the Cup.

Harpſ. There muſt be a Meaning ſought of the Cup otherwiſe than the Words ſtand. But of the Bread it muſt be underſtood only as it ſtandeth, without any other Meaning.

Sheterden. Then do ye make one half of Chriſt's Inſtitution a Figure, or borrow'd Speech, and the other half a plain Speech, and ſo ye divide Chriſt's Supper.

Harpſ. Chriſt meant the Wine, and not the Cup, though he ſaid, This Cup is my Blood.

Sheterden. Then ſhew me whether the Words which the Prieſt ſpeaks over the Cup, do change the Subſtance, or whether the Mind of the Prieſt doth it?

Harpſ. The Mind of the Prieſt doth it, and not the Words.

Sheterden. If the Mind of the Prieſt doth it, and not the Words, if the Prieſt then do mind his Harlot, or any other vain Thing, that Thing ſo minded was there made, and ſo the People do worſhip the Prieſt's Harlot inſtead of Chriſt's Blood: And again, none of the People can tell when it is Chriſt's Blood, or when it is not, ſeeing the Matter ſtandeth in the Mind of the Prieſt. For no Man can tell what the Prieſt meaneth but himſelf; and ſo are they ever in Danger of committing Idolatry.

If the Mind and not the Words of the Prieſt doth it: How then is it that Duns and his Fellows ſay, that the Words be the Form and formal Cauſe only that maketh the Sacrament?

Then was the Archdeacon ſomewhat moved, and ſate him down, and ſaid to the Commiſſary, I pray you Mr. Commiſſary to ſpeak to him for a while; for they are unreaſonable and perverſe Anſwers as ever I heard of. Then the Commiſſary ſtood up and ſaid:

Your Argument is much againſt yourſelf, for ye grant that the Bread is a Figure of Chriſt's Body; but the Cup can be no Figure of his Blood, nor yet his very Blood; and therefore Chriſt did not mean the Cup, but the Wine in the Cup.

Sheterden. My Argument is not againſt me at all; for I do not ſpeak it to prove that the Cup is his Blood, nor the Figure of his Blood, but to prove that the bare Words being ſpoken by the Prieſt, do not change the Subſtance no more of the Bread, than they do change the Cup into Blood.

Commiſ. It could not be ſpoken of the Cup, when he ſaid, This Cup is my Blood; but he meant the Wine in the Cup.

Sheterden. Then it remaineth for you to anſwer my Queſtion to the Archdeacon, that is, whether the Mind of the Prieſt when he ſpeaketh over the Cup, doth change it into Blood, or the bare Words?

Commiſ. Both together doth it, the Words and the Mind of the Prieſt together; yea, the Intent and the Words together doth it.

Sheterden. If the Words and Intents together do change the Subſtance, yet muſt the Cup be his Blood, and not the Wine, foraſmuch as the Words are, This Cup is my Blood, and the Intent ye ſay, was the Wine; or elſe the Words take none Effect, but the Intent only.

After, the Commiſſary in his Chamber, ſaid, it was the Intent of the Prieſt before he went to Maſs, without the Words; for the Prieſt did intend to do as holy Church had ordained, then the Intent made the Sacrament to take Effect.

The Intent of the Prieſt maketh not the Sacrament.

Sheterden. If the Sacraments take Effect of the Intent of the Prieſt, and not of God's Word, then many Pariſhes having a Prieſt that intendeth not well, are utterly deceived, both in baptizing, and alſo worſhipping that Thing to be God, which is but Bread, becauſe for lack of the Prieſt's Intent, the Words do take none Effect in it; ſo that by this it is ever doubtful, whether they worſhip Chriſt or Bread, becauſe it is doubtful what the Prieſts do intend. Anno 1555.

Then the Commiſſary would prove to me, that Chriſt's Manhood was in two Places at one Time, by theſe Words of Chriſt in the third Chapter of John, where he ſaith, No Man aſcendeth up into Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven. By this he would prove, that Chriſt was then in Heaven, and on Earth alſo, naturally and bodily. Chriſt's Body, whether it may be in two Places at once.

Sheterden. This and other Places muſt needs be underſtood for the Unity of the Perſon, in that Chriſt was God and Man, and yet the Matter muſt be referred to the Godhead, or elſe ye muſt fall into great Error.

Commiſ. That is not ſo: For it was ſpoken of the Manhood of Chriſt, foraſmuch as he ſaith, The Son of Man which is in Heaven.

Sheterden. If ye will needs underſtand it to be ſpoken of Chriſt's Manhood, then muſt ye fall into the Error of the Anabaptiſts, who deny that Chriſt took Fleſh of the Virgin Mary; for if there be no body aſcended up, but that which came down, where is then his Incarnation? For then he brought his Body down with him.

Commiſ. Lo, how you ſeek an Error in me, and yet ſee not how ye err yourſelf. For it cannot be ſpoken of the Godhead, except ye grant that God is paſſible, for God cannot come down becauſe he is not paſſible.

Sheterden. If that were a good Argument, that God could not come down, becauſe he is not paſſible; then it might be ſaid by the like Argument, that God could not ſit, and then Heaven is not his Seat, and then ſay as ſome do, that God hath no Right Hand for Chriſt to ſit at.

Then the Commiſſary affirmed plainly, that it was true, God hath no Right Hand indeed.

Sheterden. Oh what an Injury to Chriſt's Religion will this be, that becauſe we cannot tell how God came down, therefore we ſhall ſay, that he came not down at all; and becauſe we cannot tell what Manner of Hand he hath, to ſay that he hath no Hand at all; and then he cannot reach the utmoſt Parts of the Sea. O Miſery! at length it will come to paſs, that God cannot ſit, and then how can Heaven be his Seat? And if Heaven be not his Seat, then there is no Heaven; and then at length I doubt ye will ſay there is no God, or elſe no other God but ſuch as the Heathen Gods are, which cannot go nor feel.

If God cannot come down, then Chriſt were not God: For Chriſt came from Heaven.

Commiſ. Why, doth not the Scripture ſay, that God is a Spirit? and what Hand can a Spirit have?

Sheterden. Truth it is, God is a Spirit, and therefore is worſhipped in Spirit and Truth; and as he is a Spirit, ſo hath he a ſpiritual Power, ſo he hath a ſpiritual Seat, a ſpiritual Hand, and a ſpiritual Sword, which we ſhall feel, if we go on at this Rate. Becauſe we know not what God hath, therefore if we ſay he hath none, then it may as well be ſaid, there is no Chriſt.

Then the Commiſſary ſaid, he would talk no more with me, and ſo departed; and alſo the Commiſſary was compelled to grant, that Anno 1555. Chriſt's Teſtament was broken, and his Inſtitution was changed from that he left it: But he ſaid they had Power ſo to do.

My firſt anſwering after their Law was eſtabliſhed.

BEcauſe I know ye will deſire to hear from me ſome Certainty of my Eſtate, I was called before the Suffragan, and ſeven or eight of the chief Prieſts, and examined of certain Articles, and then I required to ſee their Commiſſion.

They ſhewed it to me, and ſaid there it is, and the King and Queen's Letters alſo. Then I deſired to have it read: And ſo in reading I perceived, that on ſome notable Suſpicion he might examine upon two Articles; Whether Chriſt's real Preſence were in the Sacrament, and whether the Church of England be Chriſt's catholick Church.

Sheterden three Quarters of a Year in Priſon before the Law took Place.

To that I anſwered, that I had been a Priſoner three Quarters of a Year, and, as I thought, wrongfully: Reaſon would therefore that I ſhould anſwer to thoſe Things for which I was impriſoned.

The Suffragan ſaid, his Commiſſion was, that I muſt anſwer directly, yea, or no.

This Commiſſion, ſaid I, was not general to examine whom he will, but juſt Suſpicion.

He ſaid, I was ſuſpected, and preſented to him.

Then I required him to ſhew the Accuſation.

He ſaid he was not bound to ſhew it; but he commanded me in the King and Queen's Name to anſwer directly.

Sheterden. I, as a Subject, do require Juſtice of you: For what I have done I ask no Favour.

Suffragan. You were ſuſpected.

Sheterden. Prove your Suſpicion, or ſhew what Cauſe you have to ſuſpect.

Suffragan. Thou wert caſt into Priſon for that Cauſe.

Sheterden. That was a pretty Suſpicion, becauſe I had ſuffered Impriſonment contrary to God's Law and the Realm, that therefore I muſt now for amends be examined of Suſpicion without Cauſe, to hide all the Wrong done to me before. For when I was caſt into Priſon, there was no Law that hindered me from ſpeaking as I did: Therefore in that Point I could be no more ſuſpected than you, who preached the ſame yourſelf not long before.

The Biſhop of Dover a Proteſtant in King Edward's Time.

Suffragan. That was no matter to thee what I preached.

Sheterden. Well, yet in the King and Queen's Name I muſt anſwer directly: And therefore I require as a Subject, that ye do not extend beyond your Commiſſion, but prove me ſuſpected, more than you yourſelf.

Then Mr. Mills told them that I had written to my Mother, and that he had ſeen the Letter, wherein I perſuaded my Mother to my Opinions.

Sheterden. In that I did but my Duty to certify her, that I was not in Priſon for any Evil. And likewiſe that was before the Law, and therefore no more Suſpicion was in me, than was in them which taught the like.

Milles. Well, ye are required here to anſwer directly.

Sheterden. Firſt then I require of you to prove this Suſpicion; and thus we toſſed it to and fro. At laſt the Biſhop ſaid he himſelf did ſuſpect me. I asked whereby?

Suffragan. Well, I myſelf did ſuſpect thee, and it is no matter whereby.

Sheterden. But your Commiſſion doth not ſerve you ſo to do without cauſe of Suſpicion.

Suffragan. Well, yet I did ſuſpect you.

Sheterden. It is not meet for you to be my Accuſer and my Judge alſo, for that is too much for one Man. And thus many Words were multiply'd, and they were much grieved.

Milles. If you were a chriſtian Man, you would not be aſhamed of your Faith being required.

Sheterden. I am not aſhamed indeed, I thank God, and if any Man did come to me, either to teach or learn, I would declare it; but foraſmuch as I perceive you come neither to teach nor to learn, I hold it beſt not to anſwer you.

Milles. If you will not, then will we certify the King's Counſel.

Sheterden. I am therewith content that you ſhould certify that I had ſuffered three Quarters of a Year wrongfully in Priſon, and therefore I deſire to be juſtified or condemned, firſt for that I ſuffered ſuch Impriſonment; and then I will not refuſe to anſwer your Articles, though they were a Buſhel of them. But to ſay that I would anſwer, whereby you ſhould heal all your Wrong done to me againſt the Law of God and the Realm, I will not.

Upon this it appeareth the Letters were written the Biſhop of Winchester, by whom he was afterwards ſent for and examined.

Here much ado there was to prove that he had no Wrong, and again, that it was not they that did it. But, ſaid he, the Commiſſary was one of them. He anſwered, No, and ſaid it was the Archdeacon. He ſaid, You ſat with him, and he asked your Counſel in it, and yet if it were he, it was your Church, except the Archdeacon and you be divided one from another. Well, ſaid they, will ye now deny what ye ſaid then, and promiſe here to ſubmit yourſelf henceforth, and ye ſhall be delivered?

Sheterden refuſeth to ſubmit himſelf.

Sheterden. I am not ſo much beholden to you as to grant you any ſuch Promiſe: And you ſhall plainly ſee that I will not promiſe to go a-croſs the Street for you: But if at any time I have offended your Law, let me have the Puniſhment: I ask no Favour.

Then they ſaid, it was Obſtinacy in him that he would not anſwer, and a Token that his Faith was nought, ſeeing he was aſhamed to utter it.

Nay, ſaid Sheterden, you ſhall well know I am not aſhamed of my Faith: But becauſe you do ſo greedily ſeek Blood, I will anſwer only to that you have againſt me.

Suffragan. Nay, you ſhall anſwer to the Articles, or elſe be condemned upon Suſpicion.

Sheterden. I am content with that, yet all Men ſhall know, that as ye ſuſpect and can prove no Cauſe, ſo ſhall ye condemn me without a Matter, and then ſhall all Men know ye ſeek my Blood, and no Juſtice.

Suffragan. No, we ſeek not thy Blood, but thy Converſion.

Sheterden. That we ſhall ſee. For then ſhall you prove my Perverſion firſt, before you condemn me on your Suſpicion without Proof of the ſame: And by that I ſhall know whether you ſeek Blood or no. Many other Words were between them.

At laſt ſtept up one Lovels a Lawyer, who would prove his Impriſonment not to be wrong, but right, by old Statutes of Edward the Fourth, and Henry, &c. but at laſt he was compelled to forſake thoſe Statutes from Michaelmas to Chriſtmas, and then he ſaid it was no Wrong.

To this Mr. Sheterden ſaid, if he could prove that Men might wrongfully impriſon before a Law, and in the mean while make Laws, and then under that hide the firſt Wrong, then he ſaid true, or elſe not.

Thus he kept the Band-Dogs at Staves end, not as thinking to eſcape them, but that I would ſee, ſaid he, the Foxes leap above the Ground for my Blood if they can reach it (ſo it be the Will of God) yet we ſhall ſee them gape and leap for it. From Weſtgate in haſte.

By yours, Nicholas Sheterden.

His Examination before the Biſhop of Wincheſter then Lord Chancellor.

I Was called into a Chamber before the Lord Chancellor, the Suffragan, and others, Prieſts I think for the moſt Part. He ſtanding near to the Table, called me to him, and becauſe I ſaw the Cardinal was not there, I bowed myſelf and ſtood near.

Then ſaid he, I have ſent for you, becauſe I hear you are indicted of Hereſy; and being called before the Commiſſioners, ye will not anſwer nor ſubmit yourſelf.

I ſaid, if it pleaſe you, I did not refuſe to anſwer; but I did plainly anſwer, that I had been in Priſon a long Time, and Reaſon it was that I ſhould be charged or diſcharged of that, and not to be examined of Articles to hide my wrong Impriſonment, neither did I know any Indictment againſt me. If there were any, it could not be juſt, for I have not been Abroad ſince the Law was made.

Then ſaid the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Well, yet if ſuch a Suſpicion be of you, if you be a Chriſtian, ye will declare that it is not true, and ſo clear yourſelf.

Sheterden. I thought it ſufficient to anſwer to mine Offences, &c. truſting that they would lay no ſuch Burden upon me, whereby the Wrong done to me might be covered, but I would be proved to have wrong or right.

Wincheſter. If thou wilt declare thyſelf to the Church to be a Chriſtian, thou ſhalt go, and then have a Writ of wrong Impriſonment, &c.

Sheterden. I have no Mind to ſue now, but require right Juſtice: But to make a Promiſe, I will not: And if I offend the Law, then puniſh me accordingly. For it might be that my Conſcience was not perſuaded, nor would be, in Priſon; ſeeing theſe Things which I have learned, were by God's Law openly taught and received by the Authority of the Realm. And he ſaid, it was never received, that I might ſpeak againſt the Sacrament; I ſaid, that againſt ſome Opinion of the Sacrament it was openly taught.

Winch. By no Law, and that was not able to conſider, that all that while God preſerved that, ſo that no Law could paſs againſt it.

Sheterden. I ſaid their Law did not only perſwade me, but this moſt; when they preached unto us, they took Pains to ſet out the Word of God in our Tongue, ſo that we may read and judge whether they ſay true or no, but now they take the Light from us, and would have us believe it, becauſe they ſay ſo, which is to me a great Perſwaſion. Anno 1555.

Winch. It was not a few that could be your Guide in underſtanding, but the Doctors and the whole Church, now whom wouldeſt thou believe? either the few or the many? The Papiſts ſtand upon the Number.

Sheterden. I did not believe for the few or for the many, but only for that he bringeth the Word, and ſhewed it to me to be ſo according to the Proceſs thereof. The Faithful ſtand upon the Word.

Winch. Well, then if an Arian come to thee with Scripture, thou wilt believe him, if he ſhew this Text, My Father is greater than I.

Sheterden. No, my Lord, he muſt bring me alſo to the contrary Place, and prove them both true, where he ſaith, My Father and I am one.

Winch. Yea, that is by Charity, as we are one with him.

Sheterden. That Gloſs will not ſtand with the reſt of the Scripture, where he ſaid, I am the very ſame that I ſay to you; He ſaid the Truth, and the Truth was God, with more ſuch like. And here he made many Words, but very gently, of the Sacrament. Likewiſe Chriſt ſaid, quoth he, it was his Body; yea, that is to ſay, a Figure of his Body; and how Men did not conſider that the Word was God, and God the Word, and ſo provoked me with ſuch Temptation; but I let him alone, and ſaid nothing. So, after many Words, he came to the Church's Faith, and comely Order of Ceremonies, and Images. And then I joined to him again with the Commandments. Wincheſter defendeth Images.

Winch. That was done that no falſe Thing ſhould be made, as the Heathen would worſhip a Cat, becauſe ſhe killed Mice.

Sheterden. It is plain that the Law forbad not only ſuch, but even to make an Image of God to any Manner of Likeneſs. No image of God to be made.

Winch. Where find ye that?

Sheterden. Forſooth, in the Law where God gave them the Commandments: For he ſaid, Ye ſaw no Shape, but heard a Voice only: And added a Reaſon why? leſt they ſhould after make Images and marr themſelves: So that God would not ſhew his Shape, becauſe they ſhould have no Image of him who was the true God, &c.

Winch. You have made a goodly Interpretation.

Sheterden. No, it is the Text.

Then was the Bible called for, and when it came, he bade me find it, and I ſhould preſently be confounded with my own Words; ſo that if there were any Grace in me, I ſhould no longer truſt to my own Judgment; and when I looked, it was Latin.

Winch. Why, can ye read no Latin?

Sheterden. No. Then was the Engliſh Bible brought. He bade me find it; and ſo I read it aloud: And then he ſaid; Lo here thou mayſt ſee; this is no more to forbid the Image of God, than of any other Beaſt, Fowl or Fiſh (the Place was Deut. 4.) I ſaid it did plainly forbid to make any of theſe as an Image of God, becauſe no Man might know what Shape he was of. Therefore might no Man ſay of any Image, this is an Image of God. * But the Commandment ſaith: Deut. 4. Thou ſhalt make no Image of God either Man or Woman, &c.

Winch. Well, yet by your Leave, ſo much as was ſeen we may, that is, of Chriſt, of the Holy Ghoſt; and the Father appeared to Daniel like an old * Man, &c. The Holy Ghoſt like a Dove in ſome Qualities but not in Shape.

Sheterden. That is no Proof that we may make Images contrary to the Commandment; for though the Holy Ghoſt appeared like a Dove, yet was he not like in Shape, but in certain Anno 1555. certain Qualities; and therefore when I ſaw the Dove which is God's Creature, indeed I might remember the Spirit to be ſimple and loving, &c. and with that he was ſomewhat moved, and ſaid, I had learned my Leſſon, and asked who taught me, with many Words; and he ſaid he would prove how good and profitable Images were to teach the unlearned, &c.

Sheterden. At laſt I ſaid, my Lord, although I were able to make never ſo good a Gloſs upon the Commandments, yet Obedience is better than all our good Intents, and much ado we had: At laſt he ſaid, He ſaw what I was, and that he had ſent for me for Charity ſake to talk with me, but now he would not meddle; and ſaid, my wrong Impriſonment could not excuſe me, but I muſt clear myſelf.

Sheterden. I ſaid that was eaſy for me to do, for I had not offended.

Winch. He ſaid I could not eſcape ſo, there I was deceived.

Sher. Well then I am under the Law, &c.

The Archdeacon was then called in, and he ſaid, that I behaved myſelf before him with ſuch Arrogancy and Stoutneſs, as never was heard; whereas he was minded with ſuch Mercy towards me, &c. and many other Lies he laid to me, that I was ſent Home till another Time, and I would not be contented, but went out of the Church with ſuch an Outcry as was notable.

Sherterden. I declare that herein he falſly reported me, and brought in the Laws then in the Realm, and the Queen's Proclamation, that none of her Subjects ſhould be compelled till the Law were to compel, and that I rehearſed the ſame in the Court for me, and I did uſe him then, ſaid I, as I uſe your Grace now, and no otherwiſe.

Winch. He ſaid, that I did not uſe myſelf very well now.

Sheterden. I ſaid I had offered myſelf to be bailed, and to confer with them when and where they would.

Winch. He ſaid I ſhould not confer, but be obedient. I ſaid, let me go, and I will not deſire to confer neither: And when I offended, let them puniſh me, and ſo departed.

By your Brother,

Nicholas Sheterden.

The laſt Examination with the Condemnation of John Bland, John Frankeſh, Nicholas Sheterden and Humphry Middleton.

AND thus much touching the particular and ſeveral Examinations of Mr. Sheterden and Mr. Bland. Now to touch ſomeing alſo of the other Martyrs, who were examined the ſame Time, and ſuffered together with them, to wit, Humphry Middleton of Aſhford, and John Frankeſh Vicar of Rolvynden in the Dioceſs of Kent abovementioned, here firſt ſhould be declared the Articles, which publickly in their laſt Examinations were jointly and ſeverally miniſtred unto them by the aforeſaid Thornton Biſhop of Dover; but foraſmuch as theſe Articles being ordinary and of Courſe, are already expreſſed in the Story of Mr. Bland, it is not therefore needful to make any new Rehearſal thereof.

The ſeven Articles being propounded to the Perſons above named, to wit, John Frankeſh, John Bland, Nicholas Sheterden, Humphry Middleton, and one Thacker; John Frankeſh firſt anſwered ſomewhat doubtfully, deſiring further Reſpite to be given him of fourteen Days to deliberate with himſelf, which was granted. Mr. Bland anſwered flatly and roundly, as ye heard before. Nicholas Sheterden and Humphry Middleton anſwered to the firſt and ſecond Articles affirmatively. To the third concerning the catholick Church after a Sort they granted. To the fourth, fifth and ſixth, concerning the real Preſence, and the Sacrament to be adminiſtred in the Latin Tongue, and in one Kind they utterly refuſed to anſwer. Sheterden ſaid, he would not anſwer thereto before the Cauſe were determined why he was impriſoned, and ſo ſtill remained Priſoner, before the Laws of Parliament received, &c. Middleton added moreover and confeſſed, that he believed in his own God, ſaying, My living God, and no dead God, &c. Thacker only relented, and was content to take Penance. Thus the aforeſaid Four upon theſe Anſwers were condemned by the Biſhop of Dover the 25th Day of June 1555.

The Martyrdom of J. Bland, J. Frankeſh, N. Sheterden, and H. Middleton, at Canterbury.

And being delievered to the ſecular Power, they were all four burnt together at Canterbury the 12th of July, at two ſeveral Stakes, but in one Fire, where they in the Sight of God and his Angels, and before Men, like true Soldiers of Jeſus Chriſt, gave a conſtant Teſtimony to the Truth of his holy Goſpel.

The next Day after the Condemnation of theſe aforeſaid, which was the 26th Day of June, W. Coker, W. Hooper of Crambrooke, Henry Laurence, Richard Wright of Aſhford, W. Stere of Aſhford, were likewiſe condemned for the ſame Articles. But becauſe the Execution of theſe Martyrs pertaineth not to this Mouth, more ſhall be ſaid of them when we come to the Month of Auguſt.

Nicholas Hall and Chriſtopher Waid, Martyrs.

THE ſame Month of July, Nicholas Hall Bricklayer, and Chriſtopher Waid of Dartford, ſuffered Death, who were condemned by Maurice Biſhop of Rocheſter about the laſt Day of June. The ſix Articles adminiſtred to them were of the ſame ordinary Courſe and Effect with the other Articles before ſpecified, the brief Sum whereof were theſe.

Articles objected againſt Nich. Hall and Chriſtopher Waid.

1. Firſt, That they were chriſtian Men and profeſſed the catholick Determinations of our mother holy Church.
2. That they which maintain or hold otherwiſe than our holy Mother the catholick Church doth, are Hereticks.
3. That they hold and maintain, that in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, is not the very Body and Blood of Chriſt. And that the ſaid very Body of Chriſt is verily in Heaven only, and not in the Sacrament.
4. Item, That they have and do hold and maintain, that the Maſs, as it is now uſed in the the catholick Church, is naught and abominable.

5. Item, That they have been and be amongſt the People of that Juriſdiction vehemently ſuſpected upon the Premiſſes, and thereupon indicted, &c.

Their Anſwers.

To theſe Articles they anſwered as follows: Firſt, Granting themſelves chriſtian Men, and acknowledging the Determination of the holy Church, that is of the Congregation or Body of Chriſt; ſave that Hall denied to call the catholick and apoſtolick Church his Mother, becauſe he found not this Word Mother, in the Scripture.

To the Second they granted. To the third Article as touching the very Body and Blood of Chriſt to be under the Forms of Bread and Wine in Subſtance they would not grant, only affirming the very Body of him to be in Heaven, and the Sacrament to be a Token or Remembrance of Chriſt's Death; Nicholas Hall adding moreover, and ſaying, That whereas before he held the Sacrament to be but only a Token or Remembrance of Chriſt's Death, now he ſaid, that there is neither Token nor Remembrance, becauſe it is now miſuſed and clean turned from Chriſt's Inſtitution, &c. And concerning the Maſs in the fourth Article, to be abominable, Chriſtopher Waid, with the other, anſwered, that as they had confeſſed before, ſo they would not now go from what they had ſaid. To the fifth Article, for the People's Suſpicion they made no great Account nor ſticking to grant to the ſame.

The Condemnation of Nicholas Hall and Chriſtopher Waid.

And thus much concerning the Articles and Anſwers of theſe good Men. Which being received, immediately Sentence of Condemnation was pronounced by the ſaid Maurice the Biſhop againſt them, the Copy of which Sentence as it runneth much after the common Courſe in condemning all the other Servants of Chriſt, ſo the ſame being exemplify'd before in the Story of Mr. Rogers, needeth not here to be repeated. Nicholas Hall was burnt at Rocheſter about the 19th Day of July.

Ex regiſtro.

Furthermore, with the aforeſaid Hall and Waid, in the ſame Month of July, three others were condemned by Maurice Biſhop of Rocheſter, whoſe Names were Joan Beach Widow, John Harpol of Rocheſter, and Margery Polley. Of which Margery Polley, touching her Examination and Condemnation here followeth in Story.

The Cond mnation of Margery Polley, Widow and Martyr.

Ex regiſtro. Margery Polley Widow and Martyr.

Margery Polley Widow, ſometime Wife of Richard Polley of Pepingbury, was accuſed and brought before the ſaid Maurice Biſhop of Rocheſter, about the Beginning of the Month of June. Which Biſhop according to the pontifical Solemnity of that Church, riſing up out of the Chair of his Majeſty, in the high ſwelling Stile after his ordinary Manner to daſh the ſilly poor Woman, beginning in theſe Words.

We Maurice, by the Sufferance of God, Biſhop of Rocheſter, proceeding of our mere Office in a Cauſe of Hereſy, againſt thee Margery Polley, of the Pariſh of Pepingbery, of our Dioceſs and Juriſdiction of Rocheſter, do lay and object againſt thee all and ſingular theſe Articles enſuing. To which, and to every Parcel of them, we require of thee a true, full, and plain Anſwer; by virtue of thine Oath thereupon to be given, &c. Anno 1555.

Thus the Oath firſt being adminiſtred, and the Articles commenced againſt her, which Articles were the ſame that were miniſtred to Nicholas Hall and Waid before, ſhe ſo framed her Anſwers again, eſpecially anſwering to the third and fourth Articles, that ſhe neither allowed the Deity of their Sacrament, nor the Abſurdity of their Maſs. For which Sentence was read againſt her about the Beginning of June, and ſhe condemned for the ſame. But becauſe her Death followed not upon the ſame we will therefore defer the Tractation thereof to the due Place and Time, firſt ſetting down in order of Hiſtory the Execution of Chriſtopher Waid above mentioned. The Condemnation of Margary Polley.

The Martyrdom of Chriſtopher Waid.

Chriſtopher Waid of Dartford in the County of Kent, Linnen-weaver, was condemned by Maurice Biſhop of Rocheſter, and appointed to be burnt at Dartford aforeſaid. At the Day appointed for his Execution, which was in the Month of July, there was carried out of Town betimes in the Morning in a Cart, a Stake, and therewith many Bundles of Reeds, to a Place a Quarter of a Mile out of the Town, called the Brimth, into a Gravel-pit thereby, the common Place of the Execution of Felons. Thither alſo was brought a Load of Broom-faggots, with other Faggots and tall Wood. Unto which Place the People of the Country reſorted in great Numbers, and there waited his coming; inſomuch as divers Fruiterers came thither with Horſe loads of Cherries, and ſold them. About ten of the Clock the Sheriff came riding with a great many other Gentlemen and Retinue, appointed to aſſiſt him therein, and with them Chriſtopher Waid, Margery Polley of Tunbridge riding pinioned by him, both ſinging of a Pſalm; which Margery, as ſoon as ſhe eſpied afar off the Multitude gathered about the Place where he ſhould ſuffer, waiting his coming, ſhe ſaid unto him very loud and cheerfully, You may rejoyce, Waid, to ſee ſuch a Company gathered to celebrate your Marriage this Day.

And ſo paſſing by the Place, which joined to the High-way, they were ſtraightway carried down to the Town, where ſhe was kept till the Sheriff returned from Waid's Execution. Mr. Waid being made ready, and ſtripped out of his Cloaths in an Inn, a fair long white Shirt was brought unto him from his Wife, which being put on, and he pinioned, was led up on foot again to the aforeſaid Place. When he was come to the Stake, he took it in his Arms, and kiſſed it, ſetting his Back unto it, and ſtanding in a Pitch-barrel which was taken from the Beacon, being hard by; then a Smith brought a Hoop of Iron, and with two Staples made him faſt to the Stake under his Arms.

As ſoon as he was thus ſettled, with his Eyes and Hands lifted up to Heaven, he ſpake with a cheerful and loud Voice the laſt Verſe of the 86th Pſalm; Shew ſome good Token upon me, O Lord, that they which hate me may ſee it, and be aſhamed aſhamed: becauſe thou, Lord, haſt helped me, and comforted me. Near to the Stake was a little Hill, upon the Top whereof were ſet up four Stays, quadrangle-wiſe, with a covering round about like a Pulpit: into which Place as Waid was thus praying at the Stake, entered a Friar with a Book in his Hand; whom when Waid eſpied, he cried earneſtly unto the People, to take Heed of the Doctrine of the Whore of Babylon, exhorting them to embrace the Doctrine of the Goſpel preached in King Edward's Days. While he was thus ſpeaking to the People, the Sheriff interrupted him, ſaying, Be quiet, Waid, and die patiently. I am quiet, ſaid he, I thank God, Mr. Sheriff, and ſo truſt to die. All this while the Friar ſtood ſtill looking over the Coverlet, as tho' he would have uttered ſomewhat: But Waid mightily admoniſhed the People to beware of that Doctrine; which when the Friar perceived, whether he was amazed, or could have no Audience of the People, he withdrew out of the Place immediately, without ſpeaking any Word, and went away down to the Town. Then the Reeds being ſet about him, he pulled them, and embraced them in his Arms, always with his Hands making a Hole againſt his Face, that his Voice might be heard, which his Tormenters perceiving, they caſt Faggots at the ſame Hole; but notwithſtanding he ſtill, as he could, put them off, his Face being hurt with the end of a Faggot caſt thereat. Then Fire being put unto him, he cried unto God often, Lord Jeſus receive my Soul; without any Token or Sign of Impatience in the Fire, till at length after the Fire was thoroughly kindled, he was heard by no Man to ſpeak, ſtill holding up his Hands together over his Head towards Heaven, even when he was dead and altogether roaſted, as though they had been ſtay'd up with a Prop ſtanding under them.

Anno 1555.

This Sign did God ſhew upon him, whereby his very Enemies might perceive, that God had according to his Prayer, ſhewed ſuch a Token upon him, even to their Shame and Confuſion. And thus was the Order of this godly Martyr's Execution, this was his End. Whereby God ſeemed to confound and ſtrike with the Spirit of Dumbneſs the Friar, that Locuſt which was riſen up to have ſpoken againſt him; and alſo no leſs wonderfully ſuſtained thoſe Hands which he lifted up to him for Comfort in his Torment.

The Apprehenſion, Examination, Condemnation, and Burning of Dirick Carver, and John Launder, who ſuffered Martyrdom for the Teſtimony of the Goſpel.

THE 22d Day of July, Dirick Carver, late of the Pariſh of Brighthamſted in the County of Suſſex, was burnt at Lewes in the ſaid County: And the Day following John Launder, late of Godſtone in the County of Surry, was burnt at Steining. Theſe two Men were, with others, about the latter End of the Month of October, in the Year 1554, apprehended by Edward Gage Gentleman, as they were at Prayers in the Dwelling-houſe of the ſaid Dirick, and by him were ſent up to the Queen's Counſel, who, after Examination, ſent them as Priſoners to Newgate, there to attend the Leiſure of Bonner Biſhop of London. From whence (upon the Biſhop's Receipt of a Letter from the Lord Marquis of Wincheſter, now Lord Treaſurer) they were brought by the Keeper of the Priſon on the 8th of June next after into the Biſhop's Chamber at his Houſe in London; and there (being examined upon divers Points of Religion) they made their ſeveral Confeſſions, ſubſcribing and ſigning them with their own Hands: Which being read, the Biſhop objected unto them certain other Articles, cauſing them to ſwear truly and directly to anſwer thereunto; which Articles they confeſſed to be true, referring themſelves chiefly to their former Confeſſions.

Carver and Launder appear before Bp. Bonner.

This done, after long Perſwaſions and fair Exhortations, they were demanded whether they would ſtand to their Anſwers. To whom Launder ſaid, I will never go from theſe Anſwers as long as I live. The other alſo confirmed the ſame, and therefore they were commanded to appear again before the Biſhop in the Conſiſtory at St. Paul's the tenth Day of the ſame Month. Which Articles and Confeſſion, with the forementioned Letter, do here enſue.

A Letter from the Marquiſs of Wincheſter, Lord Treaſurer, to Bonner Biſhop of London, concerning the Examination of the ſaid Priſoners.

AFTER my right hearty Commendations to your good Lordſhip, I ſhall not forget your Livery of Black againſt this Time; no more I ſhall Mr. Dean, to whom I wrote to make the Sermon, who muſt now aſſuredly do it; for my Lord of Chicheſter cannot attend it. To whom I have given like Knowledge by my Letter now ſent; and your Lordſhip muſt command the Sextons of your Church to be in a Readineſs for ringing in the Time of Service. And if ye be not furniſhed with black Apparel for the Altar, and for the Prieſt, Deacon, and Sub-Deacon, I muſt have Knowledge thereof that it may be taken of the Queen's Stuff, whereof I pray you let me be advertiſed.

Theſe Funerals were for the King's Grand-Mother the old Queen of Spain.

And ye have ſent Bradford to Newgate, as a Man convicted of Hereſy before you; but as I perceive ye have not ſent me a Significavit, and therefore you muſt ſend me one, that I may proceed with him, and that ſhall I do, as ſoon as I am anſwered by you.

A Significavit to be ſent to the lord Treaſurer for burning of Bradford.

There be divers like Priſoners that came from Suſſex, that be not yet examined before you, lying now in Newgate, who muſt be examined by you, ſince they be come to London, and ſo I pray they may be, and I certify'd of your Proceedings, that I may follow, which I ſhall do, thanking your Lordſhip heartily for my Conies, truſting to recompenſe your Lordſhip again ſhortly with twice as many. From my Houſe this ſeventh Day of June, 1555.

He meaneth Dirick Carver and John Launder.

Your loving Friend,

WINCHESTER.

The Confession of Dirick Carver, before Bonner Bishop of London.

DIRICK CARVER, Beer-Brewer, of Bright-hamsted, in the County of Sussex, where he hath dwelt about eight or nine Years, born in the Village of Dilson by Stockhom in the Land of Luke, about forty Years of Age, and now Prisoner in Newgate, where he hath remained and continued at the Council's Commandment, since Alhallows Day last past, being examined concerning his Faith and Belief in the Sacrament of the Altar, saith that he hath and doth believe, that the very Substance of the Body and Blood of Christ is not in the said Sacrament, and that there is no other Substance remaining in the said Sacrament after the Words spoken by the Priest, but only the Substance of Bread and Wine.

The material Substance of the Sacrament denied to be the Body of Christ really.

Item, Being examined concerning the Mass in Latin now used in the Church of England, he believeth that there is no Sacrifice in the said Mass, and that there is in it no Salvation for a Christian Man, except it should be said in the Mother Tongue, that he might understand it; and concerning the Ceremonies of the Church, he saith and believeth that they be not profitable to a Christian Man.

The Use and Sacrifice of the Latin Mass denied.

Item, Being examined concerning auricular Confession, he answereth, that he hath believed, and doth believe, that it is necessary to go to a good Priest for good Counsel; but the Absolution of the Priest, laying his Hand upon any Man's Head, as is now used, is nothing profitable to a Christian Man's Salvation. And further he saith, that he hath not been confessed, nor received the Sacrament of the Altar, since the Coronation of the Queen that now is.

Item, Concerning the Faith and Religion now taught, set forth and believed in the Church of England, he answereth and believeth, that the Faith and Doctrine now taught, set forth, and used in the said Church of England, is not agreeable to God's Word. And furthermore he saith, that Bishop Hooper, Cardmaker, Rogers, and others of their Opinion, who were lately burnt, were good Christian Men, and preached the true Doctrine of Christ, as he believeth; and saith that they shed their Blood in the same Doctrine, which was by the Power of God, as he saith and believeth.

The Faith of the Church of England in Queen Mary's Time reproved.

And further being examined, he saith, That since the Queen's Coronation, he hath had the Bible and Psalter in English read in his House at Brighthamsted divers Times, and likewise since his coming to Newgate: But the Keeper hearing thereof, took them away, and also said, that about a Twelve-month ago, he had the English Procession said in his House, with other English Prayers. And further said, That Thomas Iveson, John Launder, and William Vesie, being Prisoners with him in Newgate, were taken with this Examinate in his House at Brighthamsted, as they were hearing of the Gospel then read in English, a little before Alhallows Day last, and brought into the Court: And being examined thereupon by the Council, were committed by them to Prison in Newgate.

Iveson, Launder, and Vesie, imprisoned for hearing the Gospel.

The Confession of John Launder, before Bonner Bishop of London.

Anno 1555.

JOHN LAUNDER of the Parish of Godstone, in the County of Surrey, Husbandman, aged 25 Years, born at Godstone aforesaid, being examined, doth confess and say, That about two Days before last Alhallowntide this Examinate and one Dirick Carver, Thomas Iveson, William Vesie, with divers other Persons, to the Number of twelve, (being all together in their Prayers, saying the Service in English, set forth in the Time of King Edward the Sixth, in the House of the said Dirick Carver, situated at Brighthamsted in Sussex) were apprehended by one Mr. Edward Gage, and by him sent up to London to the King and Queen's Council, and by them (upon his Examination) committed to Newgate, where he with his said Fellows hath ever since remained.

The Cause of the Apprehension of John Launder.

And further being examined, he doth confess and say, that the Occasion of his coming to the said Brighthamsted, was upon some Business there to be done for his Father: And so being there, and hearing that the said Dirick was a Man that did much favour the Gospel, this Examinate did resort to his House and Company, whom before that Time he did never see or know, and by reason of that his Resort he was apprehended as before: And further doth confess and believe, that there is here in Earth one whole and universal catholick Church, whereof the Members be dispersed through the World, and doth believe also, that the same Church doth set forth and teach only two Sacraments, namely, the Sacrament of Baptism, and the Sacrament of the Supper of our Lord. And whosoever doth teach or use any more Sacraments, or yet any Ceremonies, he doth not believe that they be of the catholick Church, but doth abhor them from the Bottom of his Heart: And doth further say and believe, that all the Service, Sacrifices and Ceremonies, now used in this Realm of England (yea and in all other Parts of the World, which hath been used after the same Manner) be erroneous and naught, and contrary to Christ's Institution, and the Determination of Christ's catholick Church, whereof he believeth that he himself is a Member.

The real Presence of Christ's Body under the Forms of Bread and Wine denied.

Also he doth confess and believe, that in the Sacrament now called the Sacrament of the Altar, there is not really and truly contained, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, the very natural Body and Blood of Christ in Substance; but his Belief and Faith therein is as followeth; to wit, That when he doth receive the material Bread and Wine, he doth receive the same in a Remembrance of Christ's Death and Passion, and so receiving it he doth eat and drink Christ's Body and Blood by Faith, and none other Ways as he believeth.

And moreover he doth confess, say, and believe, that the Mass now used in the Realm of England, or elsewhere in all Christendom, is naught and abominable, and directly against God's Word, and his catholick Church; and that there is nothing said or used in it good and profitable. For he saith, that albeit the Gloria in excelsis, the Creed, the Sanctus Pater Noster, Agnus, and other Parts of the Mass be of themselves good and profitable, yet the same being used amongst other Things that be naught and superfluous in the Mass, the same good

good Things do become naught alſo, as he believeth.

Auricular Confeſſion not neceſſary.

Alſo he doth believe and confeſs, that auricular Confeſſion is not neceſſary to be made to any Prieſt, or to any other Creature, but every Perſon ought to acknowledge and confeſs his Sins only to God; and alſo that no Man hath any Authority to abſolve any one from his Sins; and alſo believeth, that the right and true Way (according to the Scripture) after a Man hath fallen from Grace to Sin, to ariſe to Chriſt again, is to be ſorry for his Offences, and to do the ſame or the like no more; and not to make any auricular Confeſſion of them to the Prieſt, or to take Abſolution for them at the Prieſt's Hands. All which his ſaid Opinions he hath believed theſe ſeven or eight Years paſt, and in that Time hath divers Times openly argued and defended the ſame, as he ſaith, &c.

Upon Monday being the tenth Day of June, theſe two Perſons, with others were brought by the Keeper unto the Biſhop's Conſiſtory, (as it was before commanded) at one of the Clock in the Afternoon, where the Biſhop firſt beginning with the ſaid Dirick Carver, cauſed his Confeſſion to be openly read unto him, asking him whether he would ſtand to the ſame. To whom the ſaid Dirick anſwered, that he would: For your Doctrine, ſaid he, is Poiſon and Sorcery. If Chriſt were here, you would put him to a worſe Death than he was put to before.

The Words of Dirick Carver to Biſhop Bonner.

You ſay that you can make a God; ye can make a Pudding as well. Your Ceremonies in the Church be Beggary and Poiſon. And further I ſay, that auricular Confeſſion is contrary to God's Word, and very Poiſon: With divers other ſuch like Words.

The Biſhop ſeeing his Conſtancy, and that neither his accuſtomed Flatteries, nor yet his cruel Threatnings could once move this good Man to incline to their Idolatry, pronounced his uſual and general Bleſſing, as well towards Dirick Carver, as alſo on the ſaid John Launder, although ſeverally; who remained as conſtant as the other: And therefore were both delivered to the Sheriffs, who were there preſent, but afterwards were conveyed to the Places above named, and there moſt joyfully gave their Bodies to be burned in the Fire, and their Souls into the Hands of Almighty God, by Jeſus Chriſt, who hath aſſured them to a better Hope of Life.

Dirick Carver and John Launder ſent down into the Country to be burnt.

Dirick Carver was a Man whom the Lord had bleſſed as well with temporal Riches, as with his ſpiritual Treaſures; which yet were no Clog or Hindrance unto his true profeſſing of Chriſt, of which there was ſuch Havock made by the greedy Raveners of that Time, that his poor Wife and Children had little thereof. During his Impriſonment, although he was well ſtricken in Years (and, as it were, paſt the Time of Learning) yet he ſo diligently ſpent his Time, that being at his firſt Apprehenſion utterly ignorant of any Letter of the Book, he could before his Death perfectly read any printed Engliſh.

Dirick Carver burnt at Lewes in Suſſex.

Moreover, at his coming into the Town of Lewes to be burnt, the People called to him, beſeeching God to ſtrengthen him in the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt. He thanked them, and pray'd to God that of his Mercy he would ſtrengthen them in the like Faith. And when he came to the Sign of the Star, the People flocked about him, where the Sheriff ſaid, that he had found him a faithful Man in all his Anſwers. And as he came to the Stake, he kneeled down and made his Prayers, and the Sheriff made haſte.

Then his Book was thrown into the Barrel, and when he had ſtripped himſelf, he went into the Barrel himſelf. And as ſoon as ever he came in, he took up the Book and threw it among the People, and then the Sheriff commanded in the Name of the King and Queen, on pain of Death, to throw in the Book again. And immediately the holy Martyr began to ſpeak with a joyful Voice, ſaying:

His Exhortation to the People.

Dear Brethren and Siſters, I call you all to witneſs, that I am come to ſeal Chriſt's Goſpel with my Blood, becauſe I know that it is true: It is well known to you all, that it hath been truly preached here in Lewes, and in all Places of England, and now it is not. And becauſe I will not deny God's Goſpel, and be obedient to Man's Laws, I am condemned to die. Dear Brethren and Siſters, as many of you as do believe in the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, unto everlaſting Life, ſee you do the Works appertaining to the ſame. And as many of you as do believe in the Pope of Rome and his Laws, which he ſets forth in theſe Days, you do believe to your utter Condemnation, and, except the infinite Mercy of God prevent it, you ſhall burn in the eternal Flames of Hell.

Where find you that in the Creed, to believe on the Pope.

Immediately the Sheriff ſpake unto him, and ſaid, If thou doſt not believe on the Pope thou art damned Body and Soul. And further the Sheriff ſaid unto him, Speak to thy God, that he may deliver thee now, or elſe to ſtrike me down, to the Example of his People; but this pious Man ſaid, The Lord forgive you your Sayings.

And then he ſpake again to all the People there preſent with a loud Voice, ſaying, Dear Brethren, and all you whom I have offended in Words or in Deed, I ask you for the Lord's Sake to forgive me, and I heartily forgive all you who have offended me in Thought, Word, or Deed. And he ſaid further in his Prayer, O Lord my God thou haſt written, He that will not forſake Wife, Children, Houſe and all that ever he hath, and take up thy Croſs and follow thee, is not worthy of thee. But thou Lord knoweſt that I have forſaken all, to come unto thee: Lord have Mercy upon me, for unto thee I commend my Spirit; and my Soul doth rejoice in thee. Theſe were the laſt Words of that faithful Servant of Chriſt, before the Fire was put to him. And when the Fire came to him, he cried, O Lord have Mercy upon me, and ſprung up in the Fire, calling upon the Name of Jeſus, and ſo he ended his Life.

Dirick's Prayer at his Death.

Thomas Iveſon, Martyr.

Thomas Iveſon ap-prehended with Dirick and others, and ſuffered at Chicheſter.

THomas Iveſon of Godſtone in the County of Surrey, Carpenter, was burnt about the ſame Month at Chicheſter; whoſe Apprehenſion, Examination, and Condemnation (for as much as it was at the ſame Time, and in the ſame Form with Dirick Carver and John Launder) I do here omit, referring the Reader to their Hiſtory and Proceſs before mentioned, except only this, that the ſaid Iveſon being earneſtly perſuaded to recant, ſaid in this wiſe, I would not recant and forſake my Opinion and Belief for all the Goods in London: I do appeal to God's Mercy, and will be none of your Church, nor ſubmit myſelf to the ſame: And that I have ſaid, I will ſay again. And if there came an Angel from Heaven to teach me any other Doctriue than that which I am now in, I would not believe him. Which Anſwer thus made, he was condemned as an Heretick, and with the ſame Perſons was committed to the ſecular Power, as they term it, and at the Place above-mentioned was burned, perſevering ſtill in his conſtant Faith unto the End.

Tho. Tyeſon condemned.

John Aleworth, who died in Priſon.

IN the latter End of this Month of July, John Aleworth died in Priſon at the Town of Reading, being there in Bonds for the Teſtimony of the Goſpel. Whom, although the catholick Prelates (according to their uſual Solemnity) excluded out of their catholick Burial, yet we ſee no Cauſe why to exclude him out of the Number of Chriſt's Holy Martyrs, and Heirs of his Holy Kingdom.

James Abbes, Martyr.

AMong many that endeavoured in theſe troubleſome Days to keep a good Conſcience, there was one James Abbes, a young Man, who was forced to have his Part with his Brethren in wandering, and going from Place to Place, to avoid the Peril of apprehending. But at length he was caught by the Hands of wicked Men, and brought before Dr. Hopton Biſhop of Norwich: Who examining him of his Religion, and charging him therewith both with Threats and fair Speeches, at laſt the ſaid James Abbes did yield to their Perſuaſions, although his Conſcience conſented not thereto.

James Abbes relented.

Now when he was diſmiſſed, and ſhould go from the Biſhop, the Biſhop calling him again, gave him a Piece of Money, either 1xd. or xxd. whether I know not; which when the ſaid James had received, and was gone from the Biſhop, his Conſcience began to throb, and inwardly to accuſe his Fact; In which Combat with himſelf (being pitiouſly vexed) he went immediately to the Biſhop again, and there threw him his ſaid Money which he had received at his Hand, and ſaid, he repented that he ever gave his Conſent to their wicked Perſwaſions, and in taking of his Money.

Money given to James Abbes by the Biſhop.

James Abbes throweth to the Biſhop his Money again.

Now this being done, the Biſhop with his Chaplains laboured afreſh to win him again, but in vain; for he would not yield for their Perſuaſions (although he had played Peter before through Infirmity) but ſtood manfully in his Maſter's Quarrel to the End, and abode the Force of the Fire in the conſuming of his Body to Aſhes, which Tyranny of burning was done in Bury, the Second of Auguſt 1555.

James Abbes made ſtrong by his Infirmity.

The Apprehenſion, Examination, and Condemnation of John Denley Gentleman, John Newman, and Patrick Packingham.

IN the midſt of this tempeſtuous Rage of malignant Adverſaries, perſecuting and deſtroying the poor Flock of Chriſt, many there were, which though they were not ſpiritual Men, yet thought to help forward for their Parts, and as one would ſay, to heap up more Coals to this furious Flame of Perſecution, whether of a blind Zeal, or a paraſitical Flatery, I know not. Amongſt which one was Edmund Tyrel, Eſq; and at that Time a Juſtice of Peace within the County of Eſſex, an Aſſiſtant to the cruel Murderers of God's Saints: Who as he came from the Burning of ſome pious Martyrs, met with John Denley Gentleman, and John Newman, (both of Maidſtone in Kent) travelling upon the Way, and going to viſit ſome of their Friends in the ſaid County of Eſſex. And upon the Sight of them, as he yet braggeth, apprehended them upon Suſpicion, and ſearched them; and finding the Confeſſions of their Faith about them in writing, ſent them up unto the Queen's Commiſſioners, directing alſo unto one of the ſame Commiſſioners theſe his favourable Letters in their Behalf. The Copy whereof here may appear as followeth.

A Copy of Edmund Tyrel's Letter to one of the Queen's Commiſſioners.

SIR, with moſt hearty Commendations unto you, theſe ſhall be to advertize you, that I have received a Letter from Sir Nicholas Hare and you, and others of their Majeſties Commiſſioners, by a Servant of the King and Queen's, named John Failes, for certain Buſineſs about S. Oſythes, which I could not immediately go about, for that I had received a Letter from the Council, to aſſiſt the Sheriff for the Execution of the Hereticks, the one at Raleigh, and the other at Rochford, which was done on Tueſday laſt.

Mr. Tyrell's Letter to a Commiſſioner, whom I gueſs to be Sir Richard Southwel.

And as I came homeward, I met with two Men: Even as I ſaw them, I ſuſpected them, and I did examine and ſearch them, and found about them certain Letters which I have ſent you, and alſo a certain Writing in Paper, what their Faith was. And they confeſſed to me, that they had forſaken and fled out of their Country for Religion ſake; and ſince they have been in many Countries, by their own Confeſſion, which I have ſent you: For which I thought it good, (as they came from London, and that there may be more found of them than at preſent I can inform you) to ſend them to you, whereby you and others of the King and Queen's Commiſſioners there might try them ſo that their Lewdneſs may thoroughly be known; for I think theſe have cauſed many to trouble their Conſciences. So this hath been ſome hindrance to me, wherefore I could not go about thoſe Matters expreſſed in your Letters: but to Morrow at Noon I intend by God's Grace to accompliſh your Letters, with as much Diligence as I can. May the Holy Trinity ever have you in his

By your aſſured at Commmand,

EDMUND TYREL.

Foraſmuch as in this Letter mention is made of a certain Writing found about them, containing an Account of their Faith, the Contents whereof here enſueth.

Certain Notes collected out of the Scriptures by John Denley, Gentleman, with a Confeſſion of his Faith, concerning the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body and Blood, found in his Pocket at the Time of his Apprehenſion.

Chriſt is in the Sacrament, as he is where two or three are gathered together in his Name.

Mr. Denly's Notes concerning the Matter of the Sacrament.

THE Difference of Doctrine between the Faithful and the Papiſts concerning the Sacrament is, that the Papiſts ſay, that Chriſt is corporally under, or in the Forms of Bread and Wine; but the Faithful ſay, that Chriſt is not there, neither corporally nor ſpiritually; but in them that worthily eat and drink the Bread and Wine, he is ſpiritually, but not corporally.

For figuratively he is in the Bread and Wine, and ſpiritually he is in them that worthily eat and drink the Bread and Wine; but really, carnally, and corporally he is only in Heaven, from whence he ſhall come to judge the Quick and the Dead.

My Belief in the Sacrament of the bleſſed Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Mr. Denley's Belief of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord.

AS concerning the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, my Belief is this, that the Bread and Wine is appointed unto a Sacrament; and that after Thanks be given to God the Father, then it doth repreſent unto me the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; not that the Bread is the Body, or the Wine the Blood, but that I in Faith do ſee that bleſſed Body of our Saviour broken on the Croſs, and his precious Blood plenteouſly ſhed for the Redemption of my Sins. Alſo in Faith I hear him call us unto him, ſaying, Come unto me all ye that Labour and are Laden, and I will refreſh you, Eſay 55. alſo Matth. 11, &c. In Faith I come unto him, and I am refreſhed, ſo that I believe that all that do come to the Table of the Lord in this Faith, Fear and Love, being ſorry for their Offences, intending earneſtly to lead a godly Converſation in this Vale of Miſery, do receive the Fruit of the Death of Chriſt, which Fruit is our Salvation.

The Fruit of Chriſt's Death, what it is, and how it is received in the Sacrament.

How Chriſt is received ſpiritually in the Sacrament.

I do underſtand (ſpiritually) that as the outward Man doth eat the material Bread which comforteth the Body, ſo doth the inward Man (through Faith) eat the Body of Chriſt, believing that as the Bread is broken, ſo was Chriſt's Body broken on the Croſs for our Sins; which comforteth our Souls unto Life everlaſting, and ſignifying thereby, that even as that Bread was divided among them, ſo ſhould his Body and Fruit of his Paſſion, be diſtributed unto as many as believed in his Words. But the Bread broken and eaten in the Supper, admoniſheth, and putteth us in Remembrance of his Death, and ſo exciteth us to Thankſgiving, to laud and praiſe God for the Benefits of our Redemption.

The groſs Error of the Papiſts in the real Being of Chriſt in the Sacrament.

And thus we there have Chriſt preſent; in the inward Eye and Sight of our Faith we eat his Body and drink his Blood; that is, we believe ſurely that his Body was crucified for our Sins, and his Blood ſhed for our Salvation.

Chriſt's Body and Blood is not contained in the ſacramental Bread and Wine, as the Papiſts have ſaid, and as ſome yet do ſay, as ye read in theſe Scriptures following: Firſt read in Matth. 9. Luke 5. Matth. 24, and 26. Mark 16. Luke 24. John 13. Luke 23. in the End, John 14, 15, 16, 17. Acts 1. 3. 7. 9. Rom. 8. Pſal. 8. 1 Cor. 10, 11. Exod. 12. Coloſſ. 1. Epheſ. 1. 4. Phil. 2. 1. 1 Theſſ. 1. 4. Heb. 1. 5. 8. 9. 10. 12. 1 Pet. 3. Pſal. 11. 47. 103. 10.

Chriſt's material Body is not in all Places, as theſe Scriptures do teſtify hereafter.

Chriſt's Body not in all Places at once.

First, read St. Matthew the Laſt, Mark the Laſt, Luke the Laſt, John 11. 20. 21. Theſe Places of the Scriptures do plainly declare, that his Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, cannot be in more Places than one, and that is in Heaven, on the right Hand of God, and not in the Sacrament, nor in all Places, as the Papiſts have affirmed, and yet do affirm.

Therefore whoſoever they be that do worſhip the Creatures of Bread and Wine, do commit Idolatry, and make abominable Idols of them, and take the Glory from God, and give it to his Creatures, which is contrary to the Mind of God, as theſe Scriptures hereafter do teſtify: Firſt in Exod. 20. 22, 23, 24. Lev. 19. Deut. 4. 6. 32. Pſal. 80. Iſa. 45. Mal. 2. Mat. 4. Luke 4. Acts 14. Rev. 14. Pſal. 98. 1 Cor. 1. Epheſ. 4. 1 Tim. 2. 1 John 5. Rev. 19. 22.

JOHN DENLEY.

Mr. Denly and his fellow Priſoners ſent to Biſhop Bonner.

Now to return to the Commiſſioners again: They receiving theſe Priſoners before mentioned, after they ſaw they could little prevail with their own Perſuaſions, ſent them to Biſhop Bonner to be handled after his fatherly and charitable Diſcretion. Which how diſcreet and favourable it was, as well the Hiſtory of others, as alſo the Sequel of this doth manifeſtly declare. For the 28th of June then next following he cauſed the ſaid Denley and Newman, with one Patrick Packingham, to be brought into his Chamber within his Palace, there examining them upon their Confeſſions (which Tyrell had found about them) objecting alſo unto them certain others, and therefore I thought his Anſwers ſufficient to lay down, as containing the Subſtance of all the reſt, except that Packingham had one Article of no great Force objected to him, which the others had not.

And examined by him.

The Words of Mr. Denley to Biſhop Bonner.

This done, the Biſhop began with his Accuſtomed Perſwaſions; to whom Mr. Denley reply'd, God ſave me from your Counſel, and keep me in the Mind I am now in, for what you count Hereſy I take to be the Truth: And thereupon they were commanded to appear in the Biſhop's Conſiſtory the fifth Day of July then next coming, in the Afternoon, where theſe Articles were objected againſt them.

FIRST, that the ſaid Denley now is of the Dioceſs of London, and the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London.

This is not true.

Secondly, That the ſaid Denley hath not believed, nor doth believe, that there is any catholick Church of Chriſt here in Earth.

Thirdly, That the ſaid Denley hath not believed nor doth believe, that this Church of England is any Part or Member of the ſaid catholick Church.

Fourthly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed and doth believe, that the Maſs now uſed in this Realm of England is naught, and full of Idolatry and Evil, and plain againſt God's Word, and therefore he, the ſaid Denley hath not heard it, nor will hear it.

Fifthly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed, and doth ſo believe, that auricular Confeſſion uſed now in this Realm of England, is not good, but contrary to God's Word.

Sixthly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed, and doth ſo believe, that Abſolution given by the Prieſt hearing Confeſſion, is not good, nor allowable by God's Word, but contrary to the ſame.

Seventhly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed, and doth ſo believe, that chriſtening of Children, as it is now uſed in the Church of England, is not good, nor allowable by God's Word, but againſt it: Likewiſe confirming of Children, giving of Orders, ſaying of Mattins and Even-ſong, anointing of ſick Perſons, making of holy Bread and holy Water, with the reſt of the Church.

Eighthly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed, and doth ſo believe, that there are but two Sacraments in Chriſt's catholick Church, that is to ſay, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the Sacrament of the Altar.

Ninthly, That the ſaid Denley hath believed, and doth ſo believe, that foraſmuch as Chriſt is aſcended up into Heaven, therefore the very Body of Chriſt is not in the Sacrament of the Altar.

This Article was only objected againſt Patrick Packingham.

Tenthly, That thou Patrick Packingham, now being of the Age of twenty one at leaſt, being within the Houſe of the Biſhop of London at Paul's, and by him brought to the great Chappel to hear Maſs there, the ſaid 23d Day of June, in the Year of our Lord 1555. didſt unreverently ſtand in the ſaid Chapel, having thy Cap on thy Head all the Time of Maſs; and didſt alſo refuſe to receive holy Water, and holy Bread at the Hands of the Prieſt, there contemning and deſpiſing both the Maſs, and the ſaid holy Water and holy Bread.

Anſwers to the foregoing Articles.

TO the firſt Article I anſwer, It is very true. To the ſecond Article I anſwer, That it is not true: For I believe the holy catholick Church which is built upon the Foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Chriſt being the Head; which holy Church is the Congregation of faithful People diſperſed thro' the whole World, which Church doth truly preach God's Holy Word; and doth alſo adminiſter the two Sacraments, that is to ſay, Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord, according to his bleſſed Word.

To the third Article I anſwer, That I do believe that this Church of England, uſing the Faith and Religion which is now uſed, is no Part or Member of the aforeſaid catholick Church, but is the Church of Antichriſt, the Biſhop of Rome being the Head thereof: For it is plain, that they have altered the Teſtament of God, and ſet up a Teſtament of their own deviſing, full of Blaſphemy and Lies: For Chriſt's Teſtament is, that he would have all Things done to the edifying of the People, as it appeareth when he taught them to pray, Matth. 6. and alſo it appeareth by St. Paul, 1 Cor. 14. for he ſaith, that He that propheſieth ſpeaketh unto Men, for their edifying, for their Exhortation, and for their Comfort; he that ſpeaketh with the Tongue, profiteth himſelf; he that propheſieth, edifieth the Congregation. Anno 1555.

Alſo he ſaith, Even ſo likewiſe when ye ſpeak with Tongues, except ye ſpeak Words that have Signification, how ſhall it be underſtood what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall but ſpeak in the Air; that is as much as to ſay, in vain. Alſo he ſaith, thou verily giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edify'd. I thank my God, I ſpeak with Tongues more than you all: Yet I had rather in the Congregation to ſpeak five Words with Underſtanding, to the Information of others, than ten thouſand Words with the Tongue. Alſo he ſaith, let all Things be done to Edification. 1 Cor. 14. The Pope's Service in a Tongue which edifieth not the People.

Alſo it is written in the 46th Pſalm, For God is King of all the Earth: O ſing Praiſes unto him with Underſtanding, &c. So it doth appear, that this Church of England, now uſed, is not built upon Chriſt, if St. Paul's Words be true, and alſo the Pſalms; therefore this Church is not built upon the Prophets, Apoſtles, nor Chriſt, as I have before declared.

To the fourth Article I anſwer, and I do believe (as I ſaid before) That the Maſs now uſed in this Realm of England, is naught, and abominable Idolatry and Blaſphemy againſt God's holy Word; for Chriſt in his holy Supper inſtituted the Sacrament of Bread and Wine, to be eaten together in Remembrance of his Death till he come, and not to have them worſhipped, and make an Idol of them: For God will not be worſhipped in his Creatures, but we ought to give him Praiſe for his Creatures, which he hath created for us. For he ſaith in the ſecond Commandment, Thou ſhalt not make to thyſelf any graven Image, nor the Likeneſs of any Thing that is in Heaven above, or in the Earth beneath, thou ſhalt not bow down to them, nor worſhip them. So it appeareth by this Commandment, that we ought not to worſhip the Sacrament of Bread and Wine, for it is plain Idolatry; for he ſaith, No Similitude, therefore, Thou ſhalt not bow down to them nor worſhip them. I pray you what do you call kneeling down, holding up the Hands, knocking of the Breaſt, putting off the Cap, and making Courteſy, with other like Superſtition? You would make Men to be ſo blind as to think that this is no Worſhipping. The Maſs abominable and idolatrous.

Peradventure you will object and ſay, You do not worſhip the Bread and Wine, but Chriſt's Body which was born of the Virgin Mary, contained under the Forms of Bread and Wine. But that is a very Lie; for Chriſt's Body that was born of the Virgin Mary is in Heaven, if St. Paul's Words be true, as undoubtedly they are: For he ſaith in the 10th of the Hebrews, But this Man, after he had offered one Sacrifice for Sins, is ſet down for ever on Objections of the Papiſts removed.

Anno 1555.

the Right Hand of God, and from henceforth tarrieth till his Foes be made his Footstool.

Also in the 9th Chapter he saith, For Christ is not entered into holy Places made with Hands, which are Similitudes of true Things, but he is entered into very Heaven, to appear now in the Sight of God for us, &c. Also Phil. 3. But our Conversation is in Heaven, from whence we look for the Saviour, even the Lord Jesus Christ, &c. 1 Thes. 1. For they themselves shew of you, what Manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from Images to serve the living God, and to look for his Son from Heaven, whom he raised from Death, even Jesus which delivered us from the Wrath to come, &c. Also John 16. I went out from the Father, and came into the World. Again, I leave the World and go to the Father, &c. John 17. Now I am not in the World, and they are in the World and I come to thee. All these Places of Scripture, with many more, plainly prove to them that have Ears to hear, that Christ's Body, which was born of the Virgin Mary, is in Heaven, and not in the Sacramental Bread and Wine; and therefore it is Idolatry to worship them, &c.

Scripture proving Christ not to be bodily in the Sacrament.

To the fifth Article I answer, That I do believe, as I said before, that auricular Confession is not good, as it is now used. Touching my Sins, wherein I have offended God, I must seek to him for Remission thereof, for our Saviour saith in the 11th Chapter of Matthew. Come unto me all ye that labour and are laden, I will ease you, &c. The prodigal Son, Luke 15. saith, I will arise and go to my Father, and I will say to him, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Son, &c. Psalm. 31. I said I will acknowledge mine Offences, and accuse myself unto the Lord, and so thou forgavest the Iniquity of my Sin, &c. Job 13. But I will reprove mine own Ways in his Sight: He shall make me whole, and there may no Hypocrite come before him. Syrach 34. saith, Who can be cleansed of the unclean? And there was but one of the ten Lepers that were cleansed, that came to Christ to give him Thanks. He asked for the other nine. But if I have offended my Neighbour, I must reconcile myself to him; and if I be a notorious Sinner, after the first and second Admonition, it ought to be declared to the Congregation, and the Minister of the Congregation hath Power by the Word to excommunicate me, and I am to be taken as an Heathen Person, not for a Day, or for forty Days, but until such Time as I do openly in the Congregation acknowledge my Fault, then the Minister hath Power by the Word to preach to me or them the Remission of our Sins in the Blood of Jesus Christ, as it is written in the 13th of the Acts of the Apostles, and Mat. 18. I know no more of any other Confession.

Against auricular Confession.

Remission of Sins to be sought only at the Hands of Christ.

To this sixth Article, I the said John Denly have answered in the fifth.

To the seventh Article I answer, that as touching the Sacrament of Baptism, which is the Christening of Children, it is altered and changed; for St. John used nothing but the Preaching of the Word and the Water, as it doth appear when Christ required to be baptized of him, and others also who came to John to be baptized, as it appeareth, Matth. 3. Mark 1. Luke 3. And Acts 8. the Chamberlain said; See here is Water, what hindereth me to be baptized? It appeareth here that Philip had preached unto him; for he said, Here is Water. We do not read that he asked for any Cream, Oil, or Spittle, or conjured Water, or conjured Wax, nor Croysom or Salt, for it seemeth that Philip had preached no such Things to him; for he would as well have asked for them as for Water: And the Water was not conjured, but even as it was before. Also Acts 10. Then answered Peter, Can any Man forbid Water that these should not be baptized, &c. Acts 16. And Paul and Silas preached unto him the Word of the Lord, and to all that were in his House: And he took them the same Hour of the Night, and washed their Wounds, and so was he baptized, and all they of his Houshold straitway, where ye see nothing but preaching the Word and the Water. The like also is to be said of the rest of the Ceremonies of your Church.

To the eighth Article I answer shortly, that there be no more Sacraments than two; Baptism, and the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, except ye will make the Rainbow a Sacrament: For there is no Sacrament but what hath a Promise annexed to it.

The Rainbow as good a Sacrament as some of the popish Sacraments.

To the ninth Article I answer you, That ye have my Mind written already: For it was found about me when I was taken; and also ye know my Mind in the fourth Article, plainly expressed concerning the bodily Presence; for Christ's Body is in Heaven, and will not be contained in so small a Piece of Bread. And as the Words which Christ spake are true indeed, so must they also be understood by other Places of Scripture which Christ spake himself, and also the Apostles after him. And thus I make an End.

By me, John Denley.

The first Day of the Month of July, the said three Prisoners were brought into the Consistory in St. Paul's Church, where he proceeded against them after the usual Form and Manner of Law, reading first their Confessions, Articles, and Answers, and then tempting them sometimes with fair Promises, at other Times with Threatnings, which indeed were generally his chief Arguments and Reasons. In the End, seeing their unmoveable Constancy, upon the fifth of July he condemned them as Hereticks, and deliver'd them to the Sheriffs of London, as to his common Executioners, who kept them till they were commanded by Writ to send them to their several Places of Suffering; and accordingly Mr. Denley was sent to Uxbridge, where he was burnt on the 8th Day of August: And being set in the Fire, with the burning Flames about him, he sung a Psalm.

Then cruel Dr. Story being there present, commanded one of the Tormentors to throw a Faggot at him, wherewith being so hurt that his Face bled, he left singing, and clapt both his Hands upon his Face. Truly, quoth Dr. Story to him that hurled the Faggot, thou hast marr'd a good old Song.

The Barbarity of Dr. Story toward Mr. Denley.

Yet notwithstanding all this, he put his Hands abroad in the Flames, and sung again, resigning his Spirit into the Hands of God through his Son Jesus Christ.

After the Martyrdom of Mr. Denley at Uxbridge, which was the 8th of August, soon after Patrick Packingham also suffered at the same Town about the 28th of the said Month. This Packingham was charged by Bonner (as ye heard before in the tenth Article) for his Behaviour in the Bishop's Chapel, who at the Mass time there standing, would not put off his his Cap, which was taken for a heinous Offence. Packingham being much perſuaded by Bonner to recant, proteſted in theſe Words to the Biſhop, That the Church which he believed was no catholick Church, but was the Church of Satan, and therefore he would never turn to it, &c.

The Martyrdom of John Newman at Saffron Walden, Auguſt 31. 1555.

Furthermore as concerning the other, which was John Newman Pewterer, dwelling at Maidſtone in Kent, he was burnt the laſt Day of Auguſt, at Saffron-walden in the County of Eſſex.

Richard Hook martyred at Chicheſter.

Likewiſe Richard Hook about the ſame Time, and for the ſame Matter gave his Life at Chicheſter.

The Examinations, Anſwers, and Condemnation of William Coker, William Hopper, Henry Laurence, Richard Colliar, Richard Wright, William Stere, before the Biſhop of Dover, and Dr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury.

MEntion was made a little before in the Story of Mr. Bland and Nicholas Sheterden, of certain other Kentiſh-men, who being the ſame Time with them called forth and examined by Thornton Biſhop of Dover, Dr. Harpsfield, Richard Faucet, and Robert Collins: Yet notwithſtanding, becauſe the Condemnation and Execution of them was deferred a little longer, till the latter End of the Month of Auguſt; coming therefore now to the Time of ſuffering, we will briefly touch ſome Part of their Examinations and Anſwers as we find them in the Regiſters. The Names of theſe were William Coker, W. Hopper, Henry Laurence, Richard Colliar, Richard Wright, William Stere. What the Articles objected to Mr. Bland and them were, ye heard before. To which Articles they ſeverally anſwered for themſelves in effect as followeth.

W. Coker condemned.

Firſt, William Coker ſaid, he would anſwer no otherwiſe than he had already anſwered; and being offered to have longer Reſpite of ſix Days after, he refuſed to take it, and ſo upon the ſame, Sentence of Condemnation was read againſt him, the 11th of July.

W. Hopper condemned.

William Hopper firſt ſeemed to grant to the Faith and Determination of the Roman Church, but calling himſelf better to mind, conſtantly ſtuck to the Truth, and was condemned the next Week after, the 16th of July.

The Words of H. Laurence.

Henry Laurence examined the ſaid 16th of July, and partly deferred to the 2d of Auguſt, anſwered to the Articles objected againſt him; firſt denying auricular Confeſſion, and that he neither had, nor would receive the Sacrament, becauſe, ſaith he, the Order of the holy Scriptures is changed in the Order of the Sacrament.

Moreover, the ſaid Laurence was charged for not putting off his Cap, when the Suffragan made mention of the Sacrament, and did Reverence to the ſame. The ſaid Laurence anſwered in theſe Words, What? ye ſhall not need to put off your Cap: For it is not ſo holy that you need to put off your Cap thereunto. Anno 1555.

Further, being oppoſed concerning the Verity of the Sacrament given to Chriſt's Diſciples, he affirmed, that even as Chriſt gave his very Body to his Diſciples, and confeſſed it to be the ſame; ſo likewiſe Chriſt himſelf ſaid, he was a Door, &c. adding moreover, that as he had ſaid before, ſo he ſaith ſtill, that the Sacrament of the Altar is an Idol, and no Remembrance of Chriſt's Paſſion, and contrary he knoweth not. At laſt, being required to ſubſcribe his Anſwers, he wrote theſe Words under the Bill of their Examinations, Ye are all of Antichriſt, and him ye fol— and here his Hand was hindred from writing any further: Belike he would have written out (follow), &c. And ſo upon the ſame, Sentence was given againſt him the Second of Auguſt.

Richard Colliar condemned.

Richard Colliar of Aſhford, abovementioned, having the 16th of Auguſt to appear, examined of the Sacrament of the Popiſh Altar, anſwered and ſaid, that he did not believe, that after the Conſecration there is the real and ſubſtantial Body of Chriſt, but only Bread and Wine, and that it is moſt abominable, moſt deteſtable, and moſt wicked to believe otherwiſe, &c. Upon this Sentence was read againſt him, and he condemned the 16th of Auguſt. After his Condemnation he ſang a Pſalm. Wherefore the Prieſts and their Officers railed at him, ſaying he was out of his Wits.

Richard Wright condemned.

Richard Wright the ſame Place and Day above-mentioned, appearing, and required by the Judge what he believed of the real Preſence in the Sacrament, anſwered again, that as touching the Sacrament of the Altar and the Maſs, he was aſhamed to ſpeak of it, or to name it, and that he allowed it not, as it was uſed in the Church. Againſt whom the Sentence was alſo read the Day and Place aforeſaid.

Will. Stere, Martyr.

William Stere of the aforeſaid Pariſh of Aſhford, likewiſe detected and accuſed, was brought to appear the ſaid 16th Day of Auguſt, where he in the ſaid Chapter-houſe of Canterbury, being required to make anſwer to the Poſitions laid unto him by the Judge, made anſwer again, That he ſhould command his Dog, and not him: And further declared, that Dick of Dover had no Authority to ſit againſt him in Judgment; and asked where his Authority was? Who then ſhewed him certain Bulls and Writings from Rome, as he ſaid. William Stere denying that to be of ſufficient Force, the ſaid Dick alſo ſaid he had Authority from the Queen. Then the Martyr alledging that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, (who was then in Priſon) was his Dioceſan, urged him to ſhew his Authority from the Archbiſhop, or elſe he deny'd his Authority to be ſufficient. And as touching the Sacrament of the Altar, he found it not, he ſaid, in the Scripture, and therefore he would not anſwer thereunto.

Dick of Dover was the common Term for Richard Biſhop of Dover.

He meaneth Dr. Cranmer, impriſoned at Oxford.

And moreover, the Judge ſpeaking of the Sacrament of the Altar, with Reverence, and putting off his Cap, William Stere told him, that he needed not to reverence that Matter ſo highly. And thus (ſaying to the Judge, that he was a bloody Man, &c.) the Sentence was

Anno 1555. was pronounced againſt him; and after the Sentence was read, he ſaid, that the Saerament of the Altar was the moſt blaſphemous Idol that ever was, &c.

Will. Stere condemned.

And thus theſe ſix heavenly Martyrs and Witneſſes to the Truth, being condemned by the bloody Suffragan and Archdeacon of Canterbury, Mr. Coollins, and Mr. Faucet, were burnt altogether in the ſame Town of Canterbury, at three Stakes in one Fire, about the latter End of Auguſt.

The Copy of their Sentence condemnatory, you may find before in the Story of Mr. John Rogers; for the Papiſts in their Condemnations follow one manner of Sentence againſt all they have condemned through their unmerciful Tyranny.

The Perſecution of ten Martyrs together, ſent by ſome of the Council to Bonner to be examined.

AFTER the Burning of theſe Six abovenamed, next followeth the Perſecution of ten others, the Names of whom are as follow.

Ten Martyrs ſent up together to Biſhop Bonner.

Elizabeth Warne,	William Hale,
George Tankerfield,	Thomas Leyes,
Robert Smith,	George King,
Stephen Harwood,	John Wade,
Thomas Fuſt,	Joan Laſhford.

The Priſons of London beginning now to be repleniſhed with God's Saints, and ſtill more and more coming in, the Council and Commiſſioners, thinking to make ready diſpatch with the poor Priſoners, cauſed theſe Ten to be ſent with their Letter directed to Bonner Biſhop of London, by him to be examined, and rid out of the Way. The Copy of which Letter, with their Names ſubſcribed, here followeth to be read and noted.

A Letter ſent by the Commiſſioners to Dr. Bonner Biſhop of London.

AFTER our hearty Commendations to your good Lordſhip, we ſend you here John Wade, William Hale, George King. Thomas Leyes, of Thorp in Eſſex, Thomas Fuſt, Hoſier, Robert Smith, Painter, Stephen Harwood, Brewer; George Tankerfield, Cook, Elizabeth Warn, Joan Laſhford of London, Sacramentaries; all which we deſire your Lordſhip to examine, and to order according to the eccleſiaſtical Laws: Praying your Lordſhip to appoint ſome of your Officers to receive them at this Bearers Hands. And thus moſt heartily fare your Lordſhip well. From London this 2*d of* July.

Your Lordſhip's loving Friends,

The Names of the Commiſſioners.

WILL. ROPER, WILL. COOKE.

The Hiſtory of Elizabeth Warne, Widow, burnt at Stratford Bow.

NOW ſeverally to proſecute the Stories of theſe ten Martyrs aforenamed: Firſt we will begin with the Hiſtory of Elizabeth Warne, Widow, who in the Month of Auguſt was burnt at Stratford Bow, near London; ſhe was the late Wife of John Warne Upholſter and Martyr, who alſo was burnt the latter End of the May before. Elizabeth Warne Martyr.

This Elizabeth Warne had been apprehended amongſt others, the firſt Day of January, in a Houſe in Bow Church-yard in London, as they were gathered together in Prayer, and at that preſent was carried to the Compter, where ſhe remained till the 11th Day of June: At which Time ſhe was brought to Newgate, and was confined there till the ſecond Day of July. Then ſhe was ſent by the King and Queen's Commiſſioners unto Bonner Biſhop of London, who the ſixth Day of the ſaid Month cauſed her with divers others (as Robert Smith, George Tankerfield, &c.) to be brought before him into his Palace, and there examined her upon ſundry Articles, ſuch as were commonly adminiſtred unto the poor Saints and Martyrs of God, as you may more plainly perceive by other more large and ample Proceſſes before mentioned. Elizabeth Warne brought to Examination.

The chief Objection that he uſed towards her, or the moſt of thoſe, was touching the real and corporal Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar, as the chief Ground and the moſt profitable Foundation for their catholick Dignity. Many other Matters he objected againſt them, as for not coming to the Church, for ſpeaking againſt the Maſs, for deſpiſing their Ceremonies and new found Sacraments, with divers other fond and trifling Toys, not worthy to be mentioned.

In the End, when ſhe had been divers Times brought before him and other his Adherents, and there earneſtly exhorted to recant, ſhe ſaid, Do what ye will; for if Chriſt were in an Error, then am I in an Error. Upon which Anſwer, ſhe was condemned as an Heretick, the 12th Day of the ſame Month of July, and ſo delivered to the ſecular Power, as they term it, to be by them put to Death, which was done in the ſame Month. The Words of Elizabeth Warne at her Examination.

The chief Procurer of her Death was Dr. Story, being (as it is thought) ſomewhat related to her, or elſe to her late Husband. Who, at the firſt Apprehenſion of his ſaid Kinſwoman, endeavoured by all Means to get her Pardon, and accordingly apply'd to Dr. Martin, then one of the King and Queen's Commiſſioners in matters of Religion (himſelf being as yet not made Commiſſioner) and by this his Suit obtained her Deliverence for that Preſent, as Dr. Martin himſelf (the Author hereof) hath reported; yet afterwards, upon what Occaſion God only knoweth, except upon ſome burning Charity, the ſaid Dr. Story obtaining to be one of the Commiſſioners, cauſed not only the ſaid John Warne, but alſo his Wife, and afterwards his Daughter to be again apprehended, never leaving them till he had brought them all to Aſhes. Such was Dr. Story perſecuteth his Kinsfolks.

the Rage of that devout Catholick, and white Child of the Mother Church, that neither Kindred nor any other Consideration could prevail with him, although it did (at his Request) with others, who in respect of him were but Strangers unto them.

George Tankerfield, Martyr.

George Tankerfield of London, Cook, born in the City of York, about the Age of 27 or 28 Years, was in the Days of King Edward a Papist, till the Time Queen Mary came in, and then perceiving the great Cruelty which the Papists used, was brought into a Misdoubt of their Doings, and began (as he said) in his Heart to abhor them. And as concerning the Mass, whereof he had but a doubtful Opinion before, and much striving with himself in that Case; at length he fell to Prayer, desiring God in Mercy to open to him the Truth, that he might be thoroughly persuaded therein, whether it were of God, or no: If not, that he might utterly hate it in his Heart, and abhor it: Which the Lord mercifully heard, and, according to his Prayer, daily working more and more in him to detest and abhor the same: And so he was moved to read the Testament, whereby (as is said) the Lord enlightened his Mind with the Knowledge of the Truth, working a lively Faith in him to believe the same; and utterly to detest all Popery, and so he came no more to their Doings: And not only that, but also this lively Faith (as he said) kindled such a Flame in him, as would not be kept in, but utter itself by the Confession thereof, reproving his own former Doings to his Friends, exhorting them likewise to repent and turn to the Truth with him; thus they began to smell him out, and at length he was sent for as followeth.

How Mr. Tankerfield was first called to the Knowledge of the Gospel.

It pleased God to strike him with Sickness, whereby he lay long sick; and on a certain Day to take the Air Abroad, he rose up, and went and walked into the Temple Fields to see the Shooters. In the mean Time Mr. Beard came to his House and enquired for him, pretending to his Wife, that he came only to have him dress a Banquet at the Lord Paget's. His Wife, because of his Apparel (which was very brave) took him to be some honest Gentleman, and with all Speed prepared herself to fetch her Husband, having a good Hope he should now earn some Money: And lest this Gentleman should be tired with tarrying, she fetch'd him a Cushion to set him soft, and laid a fair Napkin before him, and set Bread thereon, and came to her Husband; who when he heard it, said, A Banquet, Woman: Indeed it is such a Banquet as will not be very pleasant to the Flesh, but God's Will be done. And when he came Home he saw who it was, and called him by his Name, which when his Wife perceived, and wherefore he came, like a Tall Woman would play Peter's Part, and instead of a Sword took a Spit, and had run him through, had not the Constable which Mr. Beard had sent for by his Man, came in and rescued him: Yet she sent a Brickbat after him, and hit him on the Back. And so Tankerfield was delivered to the Constable, and brought to Newgate about the last Day of February, 1555. by the said Beard, Yeoman of the Guard, and Simon Pond Pewterer, Constable of St. Dunstans in the West, sent in by Roger Chomley Knight, and Dr. Martin.

Tankerfield carried to Newgate.

Anno 1555.

Tankerfield being thus brought to Prison by his Adversaries, at length with the others before named was brought to his Examination before Bishop Bonner. Who, after his accustomed Manner, ordered his Articles and Positions unto him, the Copy and Tenor of which his ordinary Articles ye may read above expressed.

Examined by Bishop Bonner.

To these Articles he answered again, constantly declaring his Mind concerning auricular Confession, and also the Sacrament of the popish Altar, and likewise the Mass, &c. First, that he was not confessed to any Priest five Years past, nor to any other but only to God: And further denying that he would hereafter be confessed to any Priest, for that he found it not in Christ's Book, and took it only to be a Counsel.

And concerning the Sacrament, commonly called here in England of the Altar, he confessed, that he neither had nor did believe, that in the said Sacrament there is the real Body and Blood of Christ, because that the Body is ascended into Heaven, and there doth sit at the right Hand of God the Father.

And moreover he said, that the Mass now used in the Church of England was naught, and full of Idolatry and Abomination, and against the Word of God; affirming also, that there are but two Sacraments in the Church of Christ, Baptism and the Supper of the Lord, &c. And to these Assertions he said he would stand; and so he did to the End.

And when at last the Bishop began to read the Sentence, first exhorting him with many Words to revoke his professed Opinion (which they called damnable and heretical) he notwithstanding resisted all their Persuasions, answering the Bishop again in this Manner: I will not, said he, forsake mine Opinions, except you, my Lord, can refel them by Scriptures; and I care not for your Divinity; for you condemn all Men, and prove nothing against them. And after many fair Words of Exhortation, which Bonner then used, to convert, or rather pervert him, he answered boldly again, saying moreover, That the Church whereof the Pope is supreme Head, is no Part of Christ's catholick Church; and adding thereunto, and pointing to the Bishop, spake to the People saying, Good People beware of him, and such as he is, for these be the People that deceive you, &c.

The Words of Tankerfield to Bishop Bonner.

These and many other Words he spake; whereupon the Bishop, reading the Sentence of Condemnation, gave him to the secular Power.

Tankerfield condemned.

And so this good Man being carried to St. Albans, there ended his Life with much Patience and Constancy, the 26th Day of August, for the Defence of the Truth, which at length will have the Victory.

The History and Examination of Robert Smith, Martyr.

ROBERT SMITH was brought to Newgate the fifth of November, by John Matthew, Yeoman of the Guard of the Queen's side, by the the Command of the Council. Robert Smith firſt gave himſelf to Service in the Houſe of Sir Thomas Smith, Knt. being then Provoſt of Eaton; from thence he was preferred to Windſor, having there in the College a Clerkſhip of ten Pounds a Year. Of Stature he was tall and ſlender, active about many Things, but chiefly delighting in the Art of Painting, which many Times rather for his Mind's Sake, than for any Gain, he did practiſe and exerciſe. In Religion he was fervent, after he had once taſted the Truth; wherein he was much confirmed by the Preaching of Mr. Turner of Windſor, and others. Whereupon, at the Coming in of Queen Mary, he was deprived of his Clerkſhip by her Viſitors; and not long after he was apprehended, and brought to Examination before Bonner, as here followeth, written and teſtified with his own Hand.

The firſt Examination of Robert Smith before Biſhop Bonner.

ABOUT nine of the Clock in the Morning I was among the reſt of my Brethren brought to the Biſhop's Houſe; and firſt of all I was brought before him into his Chamber, to whom the Biſhop ſaid as followeth, after he had asked my Name.

Bonner. How long is it ſince ye were confeſſed to any Prieſt?

Smith. Never ſince I had Years of Diſcretion. For I never ſaw it needful, neither commanded by God to come and ſhew my Faults to any of that ſinful Number whom ye call Prieſts.

Bonner. Thou ſheweſt thyſelf even at thy firſt Speech to be a rank Heretick, who being wearing of Painting, art entered into Divinity, and ſo fallen, through thy departing from thy Vocation, into Hereſy.

Smith. Although I have underſtanding in the ſaid Occupation, yet (I praiſe God) I have had little Need all my Life hitherto to live by the ſame, but have lived without the ſame in mine own Houſe as honeſtly in my Vocation as ye have lived in yours, and yet uſed the ſame better than ever you uſed the Pulpit.

Bonner. How long is it ſince ye received the Sacrament of the Altar, and what is your Opinion in the ſame?

Smith. I never received the ſame ſince I had Years of Diſcretion, nor never will, by God's Grace; neither do eſteem the ſame in any Point, becauſe it hath not God's Ordinance, neither in Name, nor in other Uſage, but rather is ſet up and erected to mock God withal.

Bonner. Do ye not believe that it is the very Body of Chriſt that was born of the Virgin Mary, naturally, ſubſtantially, and really, after the Words of Conſecration?

Smith. I ſhewed you before it was none of God's Ordinances, as ye uſe it; then much leſs to be God, or any part of his Subſtance, but only Bread and Wine erected to the Uſe aforeſaid; yet nevertheleſs, if ye can prove it to be the Body that ye ſpake of by the Word, I will believe it; if not, I will as I do, account it a deteſtable Idol, not God; but contrary to God and his Truth.

Bonner's Argument to prove the Sacrament.

Then after many raging Words and vain Objections Bonner ſaid, There was no Remedy but I muſt be burned.

Smith. Ye ſhall do no more unto me, than ye have done to better Men than either of us both. But think not thereby to quench the Spirit of God, neither thereby to make your Matter good. For your Sore is too well ſeen to be healed ſo privily with Blood. For even the very Children have all your Deeds in Deriſion; ſo that although ye patch up one Place with Authority, yet ſhall it break out in forty to your Shame. Anno 1555.

Bonner. Then after much ado, and many railing Sentences, he ſaid, throwing away the Paper of mine Examination; Well, even now, by my Troth, even in good Earneſt, if thou wilt go to Confeſſion, I will tear this Paper in Pieces.

Smith. To which I anſwered; It would be too much to his Shame to ſhew it to Men of Diſcretion.

After which Anſwer, I was carried down to the Garden with my Jaylor, and there remained till my Brother Harwood was examined; and then being again brought up before the ſaid Bonner, he demanded if I agreed with Harwood in his Confeſſion upon theſe Articles following.

Bonner. What ſay you to the catholick Church? Do ye not confeſs there is one in Earth.

Smith. Yes verily, I believe that there is one catholick Church, or faithful Congregation, which as the Apoſtle ſaith, is built upon the Prophets and Apoſtles, Chriſt Jeſus being the head Corner-ſtone: which Church in all her Words and Works maintaineth the Word, and bringeth the ſame for her Authority, and without it doth nothing, nor ought to do, of which I am aſſured I am by Grace made a Member.

Bonner. Ye ſhall underſtand, that I am bound when my Brother offendeth, and will not be reconciled, to bring him before the Congregation; now if your Church be the ſame, where may a Man find it, to bring his Brother before the ſame.

Smith. It is written in the Acts of the Apoſtles, that when the Tyranny of the Biſhops was ſo great againſt the Church in Jewry, they were fain to aſſemble in Houſes and ſecret Places, as they now do; and yet were they nevertheleſs the Church of God: And ſeeing they had their Matters redreſſed, being ſhut up in a Corner, may not we do the like now-a-days?

Here he would not anſwer me to the Church of Jewry, but flieth to the Church of Corinth.

Bonner. Yea, their Church was known full well. For St. Paul writ to the Corinthians, to have the Man puniſhed and excommunicated, that had committed Evil with his Father's Wife: Whereby we may well perceive it was a known Church; but yours is not known.

Smith. Then could you not perſecute it as you do: But as ye ſay the Church of God at Corinth was manifeſt both to God and St. Paul; even ſo is this Church of God in England, whom ye perſecute, both known to God, and alſo even to the very wicked, although they know not, nor will not know their Truth nor Converſation; yea, and your ſinful Number have profeſſed their Verity, and maintained the ſame a long Seaſon.

Bonner. Well, thou ſayeſt that the Church of God was only at Corinth, when St. Paul writ unto them, and ſo will I put in writing, ſhall I?

How Bonner layeth Snares to catch the Innocent.

Smith. I do greatly marvel, my Lord, that ye are not aſhamed to lay Snares for your Brethren on this Manner. This is now the third Snare you have laid for me. Firſt, to make me confeſs that the Church of England is not the Church of Chriſt. Secondly, to ſay it is not not known. Thirdly, to ſay the Church of God is not Univerſal, but Particular. And this is not the Office of a Biſhop. For if an Innocent had come in your Way, you would have done your beſt, I ſee, to have entangled him.

Well Friend, ſaid Dr. Harpsfield, you are no Innocent, as it appeareth.

Smith. By the Grace of God I am that I am; and this Grace in me, I hope, is not in vain.

Well, ſaid Bonner, laughing, tell me how ſayſt thou of the Church?

Smith. I told you whereon the true Church is built, and I affirm in England to be the Congregation of God, and alſo in omnem terram; as it is written, Their Sound is gone forth into all Lands, and that this is the afflicted and perſecuted Church, which ye ceaſe not to impriſon, ſlay and kill. And in Corinth was not all the Congregation of God, but a Number of thoſe holy and elect People of God. For neither Paul nor Peter were preſent at Corinth when they wrote, and yet were they of the Church of God, as many thouſands more which alſo communicate in that Holy Spirit.

Bonner. What call ye Catholick, and what call ye Church?

Smith. Catholick is Univerſal, and Church is a Congregation knit together in Unity.

Then after much like Talk, it was laid to my Charge, that my Fellow and I ſpake one Thing. For which I praiſed God, and was ſent again to a Garden. Where, after a while as I and my Brother Harwood had been together, came one of my Lord's Chaplains, that much deſired to commune with me, demanding firſt if I were a Priſoner.

Talk between Robert Smith and the Biſhop's Chaplain.

Smith. I am in this Fleſh a Priſoner, and ſubject to my Maſter and yours; but I hope yet the Lord's free Man through Chriſt Jeſus.

Doctor. I do much deſire to talk with you lovingly, becauſe ye are a Man that I much lament, with many other ſweet Words.

To which I anſwered, Sub melle latet venenum. And after much ado about his God, I compelled him to ſay, that it muſt needs enter into the Belly, and ſo fall into the Draught. To which he anſwered.

Abſurdity granted by the Papiſts, that the Body of Chriſt goeth into the Belly, and ſo into the Draught.

Doctor. What Derogation was it to Chriſt, when the Jews ſpit in his Face?

Smith. If the Jews, being his Enemies, did ſpit in his Face, and we being his Friends throw him into the Draught, which of us have deſerved the greateſt Damnation? Then by your Argument, he that doth Injury to Chriſt, ſhall have a moſt plenteous Salvation.

Note this Catholick Doctrine, which reſembleth the Body of Chriſt, to the incomprehenſible Soul of Man.

Then the Doctor ſtarted away, and would have his Humanity incomprehenſible, making a Compariſon between the Soul of Man and the Body of Chriſt, bringing in to ſerve his Turn, which way Chriſt came in among his Diſciples, the Doors being ſhut?

The Queſtion is not what Chriſt is able to do in the Sacrament, but what he doth therein.

Smith. Although it be ſaid that when he came the Doors were ſhut, yet have I as much to prove, that the Doors opened at his coming, as ye have to prove he came through the Door. For that Almighty GOD who brought the Diſciples out of Priſon, which yet when Search was made, were found ſhut, was able to let Chriſt in at the Door, although it were ſhut: And yet it maketh not for your Purpoſe; for they ſaw him, heard him, and felt him, and that ye cannot ſay ye do, neither is he in more Places than one at the ſame Time.

At which Anſwer when he had made many Scoffings, he went from me, and we were carry'd into my Lord's Hall, where we were baited by my Lord's Band of Servants, almoſt all the Day, until our Keeper ſeeing their Diſorder, ſhut us all up in a handſome Chamber, while my Lord went into his Synagogue to condemn Mr. Denley and John Newman. Anno 1555.

Then they brought my Lord Mayor up into the Chamber where my Lord intended to ſup, to hear the Matter; and I was the Firſt that was called; where my Lord Mayor being ſet with the Biſhop and one of the Sheriffs, Wine was walking on every Side, whilſt I ſtood before them like a Mute; which made me remember how Pilate and Herod were made Friends, but no Man was ſorry for Joſeph's Hurt. But after my Lord had well drank, my Articles were ſent for and read, and he demanded whether I did ſay as was written? Robert Smith brought again before the Biſhop and the Lord Mayor.

Smith. That I have ſaid, I have ſaid, and what I have ſaid I do mean utterly.

Bonner. Well, my Lord Mayor, your Lordſhip hath heard in ſome Meaſure, what a ſtout Heretick this is, and that his Articles have deſerved Death: Yet nevertheleſs for as much as they report me to ſeek Blood, and call me Bloody Bonner, whereas, God knoweth I never ſought any Man's Blood in all my Life, I have kept him from the Conſiſtory this Day, whither I might have brought him juſtly: And yet here before your Lordſhip I deſire him to turn, and I will with Speed diſpatch him out of Trouble; and this I profeſs before your Lordſhip and all this Audience. The Biſhop rightly called Bloody Bonner.

Smith. Why, my Lord, do you put on this fair Viſor before my Lord Mayor, to make him believe that ye ſeek not my Blood, to cloak your Murders through my Stoutneſs, as ye call it? Have ye not had my Brother Tomkins before you, whoſe Hand when you had burnt moſt cruelly, ye burnt alſo his Body, and not only him, but a great many of the Members of Chriſt, Men that feared God, and lived virtuouſly, and alſo the Queen's Majeſty's moſt true Subjects, as their Goods and Bodies have made manifeſt? and ſeeing in theſe Saints ye have ſhewed ſo little Mercy, ſhall it ſeem to my Lord and this Audience, that you ſhew me more Favour? No, no, my Lord. But if ye mean as ye ſay, why then do you examine me of what I am not bound to anſwer you?

Bonner. Well, what ſaiſt thou by the Sacrament of the Altar? is it not the very Body of Chriſt Fleſh, Blood, and Bone, as it was born of the Virgin?

Smith. I have anſwered, that it is none of God's Order nor a Sacrament, but Man's own vain Invention, and ſhew'd him the Lord's Inſtitution. But when he was ſo earneſt before the Audience, declaring that we knew nothing, bringing out his Hoc eſt corpus meum, to lay in my Diſh; I proved before the Audience that it was a dead God, declaring the Diſtinction appointed between the two Creatures of Bread and Wine, and that a Body without Blood hath no Life. At which Harpsfield found himſelf much offended, and took the Tale out of my Lord's Mouth, ſaying, Harpſ. I will prove by the Scriptures, that ye blaſpheme God in ſo ſaying: For it is given in two Parts, becauſe there is two Things ſhewed, that is to ſay, his Body and his Paſſion, as ſaith St. Paul: And therefore the Bread is his Body, and the Wine the Repreſentation of his Death and Blood-ſhedding.

Anno 1555.

Smith. Ye falſify the Word, and rack it to ſerve your Purpoſe. For the Wine was not only the ſhewing of his Paſſion, but the Bread alſo. For our Saviour ſaith, So oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me. And St. Paul ſaith, So oft as ye eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, ye ſhall ſhew the Lord's Death till he come. And here is as much Reverence given to the one as to the other. Wherefore if the Bread be his Body, the Cup muſt be his Blood, and as well ye make his Body in the Cup, as his Blood in the Bread.

Then my Lord roſe up, and went to the Table, where the Lord Mayor deſired me to ſave my Soul. To whom I anſwered, I hope it was ſaved through Chriſt Jeſus, deſiring him to have Pity on his Soul, and remember whoſe Sword he carried.

At which I was carried into the Garden, and there abode till the reſt of my Friends were examined, and then were we ſent away to Newgate with many foul farewels, my Lord Biſhop giving the Keeper a Charge to lay me in Limbo.

Smith ſent to Newgate by Biſhop Bonner.

Another Examination of Robert Smith before Biſhop Bonner.

UPON Saturday, at Eight of the Clock, I was brought to his Chamber again, and there examined by him, as followeth.

Bonner. Thou Robert Smith, &c. ſayeſt that there is no catholick Church here on Earth.

Bonner beginneth with an untruth.

Smith. Ye have heard me both ſpeak the contrary, and ye have written as a Witneſs of the ſame.

Bonner. Yea, but I muſt ask thee this Queſtion: How ſayſt thou?

Smith. Muſt ye of Neceſſity begin with a Lie? it maketh manifeſt that ye determine to end with the ſame. But there ſhall no Liars enter into the Kingdom of God. Nevertheleſs, if ye will be anſwered, ask mine Articles that were written Yeſterday, and they ſhall tell you that I have confeſſed a Church of God, as well in Earth as in Heaven, and yet all one Church, and one Man's Members, even Chriſt Jeſus.

Bonner. Well, what ſayſt thou to auricular Confeſſion? Is it not neceſſary to be uſed in Chriſt's Church? and wilt thou not be confeſſed by the Prieſt?

Auricular Confeſſion is but a pick-purſe Matter.

Smith. It is not needful to be uſed in Chriſt's Church, as I anſwered Yeſterday. But if it be needful for your Church, it is to pick Men's Pockets; and ſuch pick-pocket Matters is all the whole Rabble of your Ceremonies: For all that ye maintain is but Money-matters.

Bonner. Why, how art thou able to prove that Confeſſion is a pick-poket Matter? Art thou not aſhamed to ſay ſo?

The Inconveniencies of auricular Confeſſion.

Smith. I ſpeak by Experience: for I have both heard and ſeen the Fruits of the ſame. For firſt it hath been, we ſee, a Betrayer of King's Secrets, and the Secrets of other Mens Conſciences; who being delivered, and glad to be diſchaged from their Sins, have given great Sums of Money to Prieſts to abſolve them, and ſing Maſſes for their Souls health.

And for Example, I began to bring in a Pageant, that by Report was played at St. Thomas of Acres, and where I was ſometime a Child waiting on a Gentleman of Norfolk, which being bound in Conſcience, through the Perſuaſion of the Prieſt, gave away a great Quantity of his Goods, and forgave unto one Mr. Greſham a large Sum of Money, and to another as much. The Prieſt for his Part had a good Share, and the Houſe had an Annuity to keep him: Which Thing when his Brother heard, he came to London, and after Declaration made to the Council, how by the Subtilty of the Prieſt he had robbed his Wife and Children, recovered a great Part again, to the Value of two or three hundred Pounds of Mr. Greſham and his other Friend; but what he gave to the Houſe could not be recovered. This Story I began to tell; but when my Lord ſaw it ſavoured not to his Purpoſe, he began to revile me, and ſaid; By the Maſs, if the Queen's Majeſty were of my Mind, thou ſhould'ſt not come to talk before any Man, but ſhouldeſt be put into a Sack, with a Dog in the ſame, and be thrown into a River

Smith. I know you ſpeak by Practice, as much as by Speculation: For both you and your Predeceſſors have ſought all poſſible Means to kill Chriſt ſecretly; record of Mr. Hunne, whom your Predeceſſor cauſed to be thruſt in at the Noſe with hot burning Needles, and then to be hanged, and gave it out that the ſaid Hunne hanged himſelf: And alſo a good Brother of yours, a Biſhop of your Profeſſion, having in his Priſon an innocent Man, whom becauſe he could not overcome by Scripture, he cauſed him to be privately ſnarled, and his Fleſh to be torn and plucked away with a Pair of Pincers, and bringing him before the People, ſaid, the Rats had eaten him. Thus according to your Oath is all your dealing, and hath been; and as you, taking upon you the Office, do not without Oaths open your Mouth, no more do you without Murder maintain your Traditions.

Example of terrible Cruelty ſhewed upon a poor Innocent.

Bonner. Ah, ye are a Generation of Liars; there is not one true Word that cometh out of your Mouths.

Smith. Yes, my Lord, I have ſaid that Jeſus Chriſt is dead for my Sins, and riſen for my Juſtification, and this no Lye.

Then Bonner made his Man to put in my Tale of the Gentleman of Norfolk, and would have me recite it again: Which when I would not do, he made his Man put in ſuch Sums as he imagined. At the End of this Sir John Mordant came in, and ſate down to hear my Examination. Then ſaid my Lord, how ſayſt thou, Smith, to the ſeven Sacraments? Believeſt thou that not they be God's Order, that is to ſay, the Sacrament of, &c.

Smith. I believe that in God's Church are but two Sacraments, that is to ſay, the Sacrament of Regeneration, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: And as for the Sacrament of the Altar, and all your Sacraments, they may well ſerve your Church, but God's Church hath nothing to do with them, neither have I any thing to do to anſwer them, nor you to examine me of them.

Bonner. Why, is God's Order changed in Baptiſm? in what Point do we diſſent from the Word of God?

Smith. Firſt, in hallowing your Water; in conjuring of the ſame; in baptizing Children with anointing and ſpitting in their Mouths, mingled with Salt, and with many other lewd Ceremonies, of which not one Point is able to be proved in God's Order.

Bonner. By the Maſs, this is the moſt unſhameſac'd Heretick that ever I heard ſpeak.

Smith. Well ſworn, my Lord, ye keep a good Watch.

Bonner. Well, Mr. Controller, ye catch me at my Words: but I will watch thee as well, I warrant thee.

By my troth, my Lord, ſaid Sir John Mordant, I never heard the like in all my Life. But I pray you, my Lord, mark well his Anſwer for Baptiſm. He diſalloweth therein holy Ointment, Salt, and ſuch other laudable Ceremonies, which no chriſtian Man will deny.

Smith. That is a ſhameful Blaſphemy againſt Chriſt, ſo to uſe any mingle mangle in baptizing young Infants.

Bonner. I believe, I tell thee, that if they die before they be baptized, they be damned.

Smith. Ye ſhall never be ſaved by that Belief. But I pray you, my Lord, ſhew me, are we ſaved by Water, or by Chriſt?

Bonner. By both.

This was ſpoken more to confound the Opinion of Water, than to hinder Children to have Water.

Smith. Then the Water died for our Sins; and ſo muſt ye ſay, that the Water hath Life, and it being our Servant and created for us, is our Saviour: This, my Lord, is a good Doctrine, is it not?

Bonner. Why how underſtandeſt thou the Scriptures? Except a Man be born of Water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

And again, Suffer (ſaith our Saviour) theſe Children to come unto me: And if thou wilt not ſuffer them to be baptized after the laudable Order, thou hindereſt them to come unto Chriſt.

Smith. Where ye alledge St. John, Except a Man be born, &c. and will thereby prove the Water to ſave, and ſo the Deed or Work to ſave or put away Sins, I will ſend you to St. Paul, which asketh of the Galatians, Whether they received the Spirit by the Deeds of the Law, or by the Preaching of Faith? and there concludeth, that the Holy Ghoſt accompanieth the Preaching of Faith, and with the Word of Faith entereth into the Heart. So now if Baptiſm preach to me the waſhing in Chriſt's Blood, ſo doth the Holy Ghoſt accompany it, and it is unto me as a Preacher and not a Saviour. And where ye ſay, I hinder the Children to come unto Chriſt, it is manifeſt by our Saviour's Words that ye hinder them to come, that will not ſuffer them to come unto him without the Neceſſity of Water. For he ſaith, Suffer them come unto me, and not unto Water, and therefore if ye condemn them, ye condemn both the Merits and Words of Chriſt. For our Saviour ſaith, Except ye turn and become as Children, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. And ſo brought I out many other Examples, to make manifeſt that Chriſt hath cleanſed original Sin, bringing in Examples out of the Scriptures for the ſame.

Bonner. Then thou makeſt the Water of none effect, then put away Water.

The Element of Water in Baptiſm, bringeth not the Holy Ghoſt.

Smith. It is not (ſaith St. Peter) the waſhing away of the Filth of the Fleſh, but in that a good Conſcience conſenteth unto God. And to prove that Water only bringeth not the Holy Ghoſt, it is written in the 8th of the Acts, that Simon received Water, but would have received the Holy Ghoſt for Money. Alſo that the Holy Ghoſt hath come before Baptiſm; it is written that John had the Holy Ghoſt in his Mother's Womb. Cornelius, Paul, and the Queen Candaces Servant, with many others, received the Holy Ghoſt before Baptiſm. Yea, and although your Generation have ſet at naught the Word of God, and like Swine turned his Words upſide down, yet muſt his Church keep the ſame in that Order which he left them, which his Church dare not break; and to judge Children damned that be not baptized, it is wicked.

The Holy Ghoſt received by ſome before Baptiſm.

Anno 1555.

Mordant. By our Lady, Sir, but I believe that if my Child die without Water, he is damned.

Bonner. Yea, and ſo do I, and all catholick Men, good Mr. Mordant.

Smith. Well, my Lord, ſuch Catholick, ſuch Salvation.

Bonner. Well Sir, what ſay you to the Sacrament of Orders?

Smith. Ye may call it the Sacrament of miſorders: For all Orders are appointed of God. But as for your ſhaving, anointing, greaſing, poling, and rounding, there are no ſuch Things appointed in God's Book, and therefore I have nothing to do to believe your Orders. And as for you, my Lord, if ye had Grace and Intelligence, ye would not ſo diſfigure yourſelf as ye do.

Bonner. Say'ſt thou ſo? now by my Troth I will go ſhave myſelf to anger thee withal: And ſo ſent for his Barber, who immediately came: And before my Face at the Door of the next Chamber he ſhaved himſelf, deſiring me before he went, to anſwer to theſe Articles.

Bonner. What ſay you to holy Bread and holy Water, to the Sacrament of anointing, and to all the reſt of ſuch Ceremonies of the Church?

Smith. I ſay they be Baubles for Fools to play withal, and not for the Children of God to exerciſe themſelves in; and therefore they may go among the refuſe. Then Mr. Mordant went away, and my Lord went to be ſhaved, leaving there certain Doctors, as he called them, to try what they could do, by whom I was baited for half an hour: Of whom I alſo asked this Queſtion, Where were you all in the Days of King Edward, that ye ſpake not that which ye ſpeak now?

Talk between Robert Smith and the Doctors.

Doctor. We were in England.

Smith. Yea, but then ye had the Faces of Men, but now ye have put on Lions Faces again, as ſaith St. John, Ye ſhew yourſelves as full of Malice as ye may be. For ye have for every Time a Vizor; yea, and if another King Edward ſhould ariſe, ye would then ſay, Down with the Pope, for he is Antichriſt, and ſo are all his Angels.

Then was I reviled, and ſent away, and brought in again before theſe Men; and one of them that baited me before, asked me if I diſallowed Confeſſion?

Smith. Look in mine Articles, and they ſhall ſhew you what I allow.

Doct. Your Articles confeſs that you allow not auricular Confeſſion.

Smith. I allow it not, becauſe the Word alloweth it not, nor commandeth it.

Doct. Why it is written, thou ſhalt not hide thy Sins and Offences.

Smith. No more do I when I confeſs them to Almighty God.

Doct. Why ye cannot ſay that ye can hide them from God, and therefore you muſt underſtand the Words are ſpoken to be uttered to them that do not know them.

Smith. Ye have made a good Anſwer, then the Prieſt muſt confeſs himſelf to me, as well as I to him; I know his Faults and Secrets no more than he knoweth mine. But if you confeſs Anno 1555. feſs to the Prieſt, and not unto God, ye ſhall have the Reward that Judas had: For he confeſſed himſelf to the Prieſt, and preſently went and hanged himſelf; and ſo as many as do not acknowledge their Faults to God are ſaid to hide them.

Doct. What did they that came to John to be baptized?

Againſt auricular Confeſſion. Smith. They came and confeſſed their Sins to Almighty God.

Doct. And not unto John?

Smith. If it were unto John, as ye are not able to prove, yet it was to God before John and the whole Congregation.

Doct. Why, John was alone in the Wilderneſs.

Smith. Why, and yet the Scriptures ſay he had many Diſciples, and that many Phariſees and Sadducees came to his Baptiſm. Here the Scriptures and you agree not. And if they confeſſed themſelves to John, as ye ſay, it was to all the Congregation, as St. Paul doth to Timothy, and to all that read his Epiſtle, in opening to all the Hearers, that he was not worthy to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe he had been a Tyrant. But as for Ear-confeſſion, ye never heard it allowed by the Word. For the Prophet David made his Confeſſion unto God, and ſaith, I will confeſs my Sins unto the Lord, Daniel maketh his Confeſſion unto the Lord; Judith, Toby, Jeremy, Manaſſeh, with all the Forefathers did even ſo. For the Lord hath ſaid, Call upon me in the Time of Trouble, and I will deliver thee. Knock, ask, ſeek, with ſuch like; and this is the Word of God; now bring ſomewhat of the Word to help yourſelf withal. Then they raged, and called me Dog, and ſaid I was damned.

Smith. Nay, ye are Dogs, that becauſe holy Things are offered, will ſlay your Friends. For I may ſay with St. Paul, I have fought with Beaſts in the Likeneſs of Men. For here I have been baited theſe two Days, of my Lord and his great Bulls of Baſan, and in his Hall beneath have I been baited of the reſt of his Band. With this came my Lord from ſhaving, and asked me how I liked him?

Smith. Forſooth, ye are even as wiſe as ye were before ye were ſhaven.

Bonner. How ſtandeth it, Mr. Doctors, have ye done any good?

Doct. No by my Troth, my Lord, we can do no good.

Smith. Then it is fulfilled which is written, How can an evil Tree bring forth good Fruit?

Bonner. Nay, naughty Fellow, I ſet theſe Gentlemen to bring thee home to Chriſt.

Smith. Such Gentlemen, ſuch Chriſts; and as truly as they have that Name from Chriſt, ſo truly do they teach Chriſt.

Bonner. Well, wilt thou neither hear them nor me?

Smith. Yes, I am compelled to hear you; but ye cannot compel me to follow you.

Bonner. Well thou ſhalt be burnt at a Stake in Smithfield if thou wilt not turn.

Smith. And ye ſhall burn in Hell, if ye repent not: But my Lord, to put you out of doubt, becauſe I am weary, I will ſtrain courteſy with you: I perceive you will not with your Doctors come unto me, and I am determined not to come unto you, by God's Grace. For I have hardened my Face againſt you as hard as Braſs. Then after many railing Sentences I was ſent away.

The marvellous Boldneſs of Robert Smith.

And thus have I left the Truth of mine Anſwers in writing, gentle Reader, being compell'd by my Friends to do it: That ye may ſee how the Lord hath according to his Promiſe given me a Mouth and Wiſdom to anſwer in his Cauſe, for which I am condemned, and my Cauſe not heard.

The laſt Examination of Mr. Smith, before Biſhop Bonner, with his Condemnation.

THE twelfth of July I was with my Brethren brought into the Conſiſtory, and mine Articles read before my Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs, with all the Aſſiſtants; to which I anſwered, as followeth.

Bonner. By my Faith, my Lord Mayor, I have ſhewed him as much Favour as any Man living might do: But I perceive all is loſt, both in him and all his Company.

At this Word which he coupled with an Oath, Mr. Smith came in, and ſaid to the Biſhop, My Lord, it is written, Ye muſt not ſwear.

Bonner. Ah Mr. Controller, are ye come? Lo, my Lord Mayor, this is Mr. Speaker, pointing to my Brother Tankerfield; and this is Mr. Controller, pointing to me. And then beginning to read my Articles, he perſevered till he came at my Tale of the Gentleman of Norfolk, and then demanded of my Lord Mayor, if he heard of the ſame before. To which he anſwered, no. To whom I ſaid:

Smith. My Lord Mayor, will it pleaſe you to hear me recite it, as I heard it, and I told it; and then ſhall you hear the Truth. For this Tale that my Lord hath told is untrue.

Sir John Mordant came in after this Story was told.

Bonner. How ſay you, good Mr. Mordant, ſpake he not this here as it is written? Were ye not by?

Mordant. Yes, my Lord, that it is: I heard him ſay it.

Smith. How heard you me ſay it, and were not preſent when I ſpake it? Should ſuch a Man make a Lie? It is manifeſtly proved that the Prophet ſaith: Even as the King ſaith, ſo ſaith the Judge, that he may do him a Pleaſure again. And then my Jailor was brought out for proof thereof, who there openly profeſſed, that neither Mr. Mordant, nor the Doctors before-mentioned were preſent when I ſpake it.

At which Mr. Mordant with bluſhing Cheeks ſaid, he heard them read, and heard me affirm the ſame; which alſo was not true. Then my Lord proceeded with the reſt of my Articles, demanding of me, If I ſaid not as written. To which I anſwered, No. And turning to my Lord Mayor, I ſaid, I require you, my Lord Mayor, in God's Behalf, unto whom pertaineth your Sword and Juſtice, that I may here before your Preſence anſwer to theſe Objections that are laid againſt me, and have the Probation of the ſame; and if any Thing that I have ſaid, or will ſay, be proved (as my Lord ſaith) Hereſy, I ſhall not only with all my Heart forſake the ſame, and cleave to the Truth, but alſo recant whereſoever ye ſhall aſſign me, and all this Audience ſhall be witneſs to the ſame.

The Words of R. Smith to the Lord Mayor.

Lord Mayor. Why, Smith, thou canſt not deny but this thou ſaidſt.

Smith. Yes, my Lord, I deny that which he hath written, becauſe he hath both added to,

to, and diminiſhed from the ſame: But what I have ſpoken, I will never deny.

Lord Mayor. Why thou ſpakeſt againſt the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar.

Smith. I denied it to be any Sacrament, and I do ſtand here to make Probation of the ſame; and if my Lord or any of his Doctors be able to prove either the Name or Uſage of the ſame, I will recant mine Error. Then ſpake my Brother Tankerfield, and defended the Probation of Things which they called Hereſy. To which the Biſhop anſwered.

By my Troth, Mr. Speaker, ye ſhall preach at a Stake.

Smith. Well ſworn, my Lord, ye keep a good Watch.

Bonner no Saint.

Bonner. Well, Mr. Controller, I am no Saint.

Smith. No, my Lord, nor yet good Biſhop. For a Biſhop, ſaith St. Paul, ſhould be faultleſs, and a dedicated Veſſel unto God; and are ye not aſhamed to ſit in Judgment, and be a Blaſphemer, condemning Innocents.

Bonner. Well, Mr. Controller, ye are faultleſs.

Smith. My Lord Mayor, I require you in God's Name, that I may have Juſtice. We be here to Day a great many Innocents wrongfully accuſed of Hereſy. And I require you, if you will not ſeem to be partial, let me have no more Favour at your Hands, than the Apoſtle had at the Hands of Feſtus and Agrippa, who being Heathens and Infidels, gave him Leave not only to ſpeak for himſelf, but alſo heard the Probation of his Cauſe. This require I at your Hands, who being a chriſtian Judge, I hope will not deny me that Right, which the Heathen have ſuffered: If ye do, then ſhall all this Audience, yea, and the Heathen ſpeak Shame of your Fact. For a City (ſaith our Saviour) that is built on a Hill cannot be hid: If they therefore have the Truth, let it come to Light. For all that well do, come to the Light, and they that do Evil hate the Light.

Here my Brother Tankerfield pulled a Teſtament out of his Boſom, requiring Judgment by the ſame, but it could not be heard.

Then my Lord Mayor hanging down his Head, ſaid nothing, but the Biſhop told me, I ſhould preach at a Stake, and the Sheriff cried, with the Biſhop, away with me.

This Sheriff was Mr. Woodroſe.

Thus came I in before them four times, deſiring Juſtice, but could have none: And at length my Friends required the ſame with one Voice, and could not have it, we had Sentence, and then being carried out, were brought in again, and received it ſeparately. But before the Biſhop gave me Sentence, he told me in Deriſion of my Brother Tankerfield, a Tale between a Gentleman and his Cook. To which I anſwered, My Lord, ye fill the Peoples Ears with Fantaſies and fooliſh Tales, and make a laughing Matter at Blood; but if ye were a true Biſhop, ye ſhould leave theſe railing Sentences, and ſpeak the Words of God.

Bonner. Well, I have offered to that naughty fellow, Mr. Speaker, your Companion the Cook, that my Lord Chancellor ſhould here inſtruct him, but he hath here with great Diſdain refuſed it. How ſay'ſt thou, wilt thou have him inſtruct thee, and lead thee in the right Way?

Smith. My Lord, if your Chancellor will do me any Good, and take any Pains, as ye ſay, let him take mine Articles in his Hands, that ye have objected againſt me, and either prove one of them Hereſy, or any Thing that you do to be good: And if he be able ſo to do, I ſtand here with all my Heart to hear him; if not, I have no need, I praiſe God, of his Sermon: For I come to anſwer for my Life, and not to hear a Sermon. Anno 1555.

Then began the Sentence, In Dei nomine. To which I anſwered, that he began in a wrong Name, requiring of him where he learned in Scripture to give Sentence of Death againſt any Man for his Conſcience ſake. To which he made no Anſwer, but went forward to the End, and immediately cried, Away with him. Then I turned to the Mayor, and ſaid, Is it not enough for you my Lord Mayor, and you that are the Sheriffs, that ye have left the ſtraight Way of the Lord, but ye muſt condemn Chriſt cauſeleſs? The Biſhop's Sentence beginneth with a wrong Name.

Bonner. Well, Mr. Controller, now ye cannot ſay, but I have offered you fair, to have Inſtruction. And now, I pray thee, call me Bloody Biſhop, and ſay, I ſeek thy Blood.

Smith. Well, my Lord, if neither I nor any of this Congregation do report the Truth of your Fact, yet ſhall theſe Stones cry it out, rather than it ſhall be hidden.

Bonner. Away with him, away with him.

Woodroſe. Away with him, take him away.

Smith. Well, good Friends, ye have ſeen and heard the great Wrong that we have received this Day, and ye are all Witneſſes that we have deſired the Probation of our Cauſe by God's Book, and it hath not been granted: But we are condemned, and our Cauſe not heard. Nevertheleſs, my Lord Mayor, for as much as ye have here exerciſed God's Sword cauſeleſs, and will not hear the right of the Poor, I commit my Cauſe to Almighty God, who will judge all Men according to right, before whom we ſhall both ſtand without Authority; and there will I ſtand in the Right, and have true Judgment, to your great Confuſion, except ye repent, which the Lord grant you to do, if it be his Will. And then was I with the reſt of my Brethren carried away to Newgate.

Thus, gentle Reader, as near as I can, I have ſet forth the Truth of my Examination, and the Verity of mine unjuſt Condemnation for the Truth, praying to God that it may not be laid to the Charge of thee, O England, requiring your hearty Prayers to God for his Grace and Spirit of Boldneſs, with Hope even ſhortly to ſet to my Seal at Uxbridge the 8th Day of Auguſt, by God's Grace: Pray that it may be to his Honour, my Salvation, and your Conſolation, I pray you, Da gloriam Deo.

Robert Smith.

On the 8th of Auguſt, the ſaid Robert Smith was brought to the Stake at Uxbridge; where he deſired the Spectators to think well of his Cauſe, and not to doubt but that his Body dying in that Quarrel, ſhould riſe again to Life. And, ſaid he, I doubt not but God will ſhew you ſome Token thereof. At length he being well nigh half burnt, and all black with Fire, cluſtered together as a Lump like a black Cole, all Men thinking him for dead, ſuddenly roſe upright before the People, lifting up the Stumps of his Arms, and clapping the ſame together, declaring a rejoicing Heart unto them; and ſo bending down again, and hanging over the Fire, ſlept in the Lord, and ended this mortal Life.

Anno 1555.

A Sententious Letter written by Robert Smith, to Anne Smith his Wife.

SEEK firſt to love God, dear Wife, with your whole Heart, and then ſhall it be eaſy to love your Neighbour.

Be friendly to all Creatures, and eſpecially to your own Soul.

Be good to thy Enemy.

Be always an Enemy to the Devil and the World, but eſpecially to your own Fleſh.

In hearing of good Things join the Ears of your Head and Heart together.

Seek Unity and Quietneſs with all Men, but eſpecially with your Conſcience; for he will not eaſily be intreated.

Love all People, but eſpecially your Enemies.

Hate the Sins that are paſt, but eſpecially thoſe to come.

Be as ready to further your Enemy, as he is to hinder you, that ye may be the Child of God.

Defile not that which Chriſt hath cleanſed, leſt his Blood be laid to your Charge.

A double Hedge to the Tongue.

Remember that God hath hedged in your Tongue with the Teeth and Lips, that it might ſpeak under Correction.

Be ready at all Times to look to your Brother's Eye, but eſpecially in your own Eye: For he that warneth others of what he himſelf is guilty, doth give his Neighbour the clear Wine, and keepeth the Dregs to himſelf.

Covet not to be rich.

Beware of Riches and worldly Honour; for without Underſtanding, Prayer, and Faſting, it is a Snare, and alſo Poverty, all which are like to conſuming Fire, of which if a Man take a little, it will warm him, but if he take too much, it will conſume him. For it is hard for a Man to carry Fire in his Boſom, and not be burnt.

Shew Mercy to the Saints for Chriſt ſake, and Chriſt ſhall reward you for the Saints ſake. Among all other Priſoners viſit your own Soul: For it is incloſed in a perillous Priſon.

If you will love God, hate Evil, and ye ſhall obtain the Reward of well doing.

Thus fare you well, good Anne. Have me heartily commended to all that love the Lord unfeignedly. I beſeech you have me in your Prayer while I am living, and I am aſſured the Lord will accept it. Bring up my Children and yours in the Fear of God, and then ſhall I not fail but receive you together in the everlaſting Kingdom of God, which I go unto.

Your Husband,

ROBERT SMITH.

If ye will meet with me again,
Forſake not Chriſt for any Pain.

Robert Smith to all the faithful Servants of Chriſt, exhorting them to be ſtrong under Perſecution.

CONtent thyſelf with Patience,
With Chriſt to bear the Croſs of Pain,
Which can and will thee recompenſe,
A thouſand fold with Joys again.
Let nothing cauſe thy Heart to quail,
Launch out thy Boat, hale up thy Sail,
Put from the Shore:
And be thou ſure thou ſhalt attain
Unto the Port that ſhall remain
For evermore.

The Martyrdom of Stephen Harwood, and Thomas Fuſt.

ABOUT this Time alſo died theſe two Martyrs of God, Stephen Harwood at Stratford, and Thomas Fuſt at Ware. Who, as they were both burnt much about the ſame Time (though not at the ſame Place) with the aforeſaid Robert Smith and George Tankerfield, ſo were they likewiſe examined and openly condemned together with them; and as the Proceedings againſt them all were alike, I thought it needleſs to repeat the ſame; only there is one Thing more to be added concerning Thomas Fuſt, who at his laſt Appearance on the 12th of July, being moved by the Biſhop to revoke his Opinion, anſwered thus; No, my Lord, for no Truth cometh out of your Mouth, but all Lies: Ye condemn Men, and will not hear the Truth. Where can ye find any anointing or greaſing in God's Book? I ſpeak nothing but the Truth, and I am certain that it is the Truth that I ſpeak. This Anſwer of Thomas Fuſt only I find noted by the Regiſter; and how unfaithful theſe Regiſters have been (I mean in omitting thoſe Things that were moſt worthy of note, in Order to render the Martyrs ridiculous to the People) is very evident in many Places of this Hiſtory. But to be ſhort, when they had made their Anſwers, both he and Stephen Harwood were for their faithful Perſeverance condemned together by the Biſhop in his accuſtomed Pity, to be burnt as Hereticks, and ſo (as you have heard before) they finiſh'd their Martyrdom, the one at Stratford, and the other at Ware, in the Month of Auguſt, and Year aboveſaid.

The Anſwer of Thomas Fuſt to Biſhop Bonner.

The Condemnation and Martyrdom of Stephen Harwood, and Thomas Fuſt.

The Martyrdom of William Hale, at Barnet.

OF the ſame Company with thoſe ten before recorded, who were ſent to Biſhop Bonner by Sir Nicholas Hare, and other Commiſſioners, in the Company of George Tankerfield and Robert Smith, was alſo William Hale of Thorp in the County of Eſſex, who likewiſe being examined with the reſt, the 12th of July, received with them alſo the Sentence of Condemnation; giving this Exhortation withal to the Lookers on: Ah, good People, ſaid he, beware of this Idolater, and this Antichriſt (pointing to the Biſhop of London) and ſo he was delivered to the Sheriffs to be burnt as an Heretick, who ſent him to Barnet, where about the latter End of Auguſt he moſt conſtantly ſeal'd up his Faith with the conſuming of his Body by cruel Fire, yielding his Soul to the Lord Jeſus his only and moſt ſure Redeemer.

Hale's Words to the People, Ex Regiſt.

George King, Thomas Leyes, and John Wade, who fell sick in Prison, and dying were bury'd in the Fields.

YE heard before of ten ſundry Perſons ſent out of Newgate by Mr. Hare and other Commiſſioners, to be examined by Bonner Biſhop of London: Of whom ſix already have been executed in ſeveral Places, as hath been ſhewed; whoſe Names were Elizabeth Warn, George Tankerfield, Robert Smith, Stephen Harwood, Thomas Fuſt, and William Hale. The other three, namely, George King, Thomas Leyes, and John Wade falling ſick in Lollard's Tower, were ſo weak that they were removed into ſundry Houſes within the City of London, and there died, and were thrown into the Fields, and there bury'd in the Night by ſome of the faithful Brethren, when none in the Day-time durſt do it, Propter metum Judæorum. The laſt that remained of this Company aforeſaid was Joan Layſh, or Laſhford, the Daughter-in-law of John Warn and Elizabeth Warn, Martyrs: But becauſe ſhe was reprieved to another Time, her Story and Martyrdom we will defer till the Month of January the next Year following.

William Andrew.

THE like catholick Charity was alſo ſhewed upon William Andrew of Horſley, in the County of Eſſex, Carponter, who was brought to Newgate the firſt Day of April, 1555, by John Motham Conſtable of Malden in Eſſex. The firſt and principal Promoter of him was the Lord Rich, who ſent him firſt to Priſon. Alſo Sir Richard Southwell Knight, was another great Enemy to him, as appeareth by a Letter written by him to Bonner, which here followeth.

The Lord Rich ſends William Andrew to Priſon.

A Letter from Sir Richard Southwell to Bonner Biſhop of London.

MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhip to underſtand, that the Lord Rich did about ſeven or eight Weeks paſt, ſend up unto the Council one William Andrew of Thorp, within the County of Eſſex, an arrogant Heretick. Their Pleaſure was to command me to commit him to Newgate, where he remaineth; and as I am informed, hath infected a Number in that Priſon with his Hereſy. Your Lordſhip ſhall do very well if it pleaſe you to convent him before you, and to take Order with him as his Caſe doth require. I know the Council meant to have writ herein unto your Lordſhip, but by Occaſion of other Buſineſs, the Thing hath been omitted. Wherefore knowing their good Pleaſure, I did adviſe the Keeper of Newgate to wait on you with theſe few Lines. And ſo referring the reſt to your virtuous Conſideration, I remain your Lordſhips to command, this 12*th Day of* June, 1555.

RICH. SOUTHWELL.

This William Andrew being twice examined before Biſhop Bonner, there manfully ſtood in the Defence of his Religion. At length, by the ſevere Uſage he met with in Newgate Priſon, he there loſt his Life, which otherwiſe would have been taken away by Fire: And ſo after the popiſh Manner he was caſt out into a Field, and by Night was privily buried by the Hands of good Men and faithful Brethren. Anno 1555. William Andrew dieth in Newgate, and buried in the Fields.

The Martyrdom of Robert Samuel, Miniſter of Barfold in Suffolk.

MR. Foſter a Juſtice, dwelling at Cobdock near Ipſwich in the County of Suffolk, being in continual Hatred againſt the Truth, and the Profeſſors of the ſame, did not only not ceaſe Day nor Night to ſtudy how to bring thoſe into Thraldom and Captivity, that were honeſt and piouſly inclin'd to Religion; but alſo whatſoever they were that once came into his Claws, could not eaſily eſcape without Clog of Conſcience or Loſs of Life, ſo greedy was he of Blood. Among many whom he had troubled, there was one Samuel, in King Edward's Days a very godly and faithful Preacher of God's Word, who for his valiant and conſtant Behaviour in his Sermons, ſeemeth worthy of high Admiration. He was Miniſter at Barfold in Suffolk, where he induſtriouſly and ſucceſsfully taught the Flock which the Lord had committed to his Charge, ſo long as the Time would ſuffer him to do his Duty. R. Samuel a pious Preacher in the Days of King Edward.

At laſt being removed from the Miniſtry, and put from his Benefice, when he could not avoid the raging Violence of the Time, yet would he not give over his Care that he had for his Flock, but would teach them privily and by ſtealth, when he could not openly do ſo. At which Time Order was taken by the Queen, to be publiſhed by the Commiſſioners, that all Prieſts which had been married in King Edward's Days, ſhould put away their Wives from them, and be compelled to return again to their Chaſtity and ſingle Life. This Decree Mr. Samuel would not ſtand to, becauſe he knew it to be manifeſtly wicked and abominable; but determining with himſelf, that God's Laws were not to be broke for Man's Traditions, ſtill kept his Wife at Ipſwich, and gave his Diligence in the mean Time to the inſtructing of others which were about him, as Occaſion ſerved. At laſt Mr. Foſter having Intelligence hereof, being a great Doer in thoſe Parts, ſpared no Time nor Diligence, but quickly ſent his Spies Abroad, laying cloſe wait for Mr. Samuel, that if he came Home to his Wife at any Time, they might apprehend him, and carry him to Priſon. Mr. Samuel removed from the Miniſtry. Mr. Samuel would not conſent to put away his Wife.

In Concluſion, when ſuch as ſhould betray him eſpied him at Home with his Wife, they brought Word to the Officer, who came to the Houſe, and beſet it with a great Company, and ſo took him in the Night-ſeaſon, becauſe they durſt not do it in the Day time for fear of Trouble and Tumult, although good Mr. Samuel did not withſtand them at all, but meekly yielded himſelf into their Clutches of his own Accord. When they had thus caught him, they put him into Ipſwich Goal, where he Mr. Samuel apprehended in his Houſe by Night. And ſent to Ipſwich Goal.

The Examination of William Hale before Bishop Bonner.

The Martyrdom of Mr. Robert Samuel Minister of Barfold in Suffolk.

Anno 1555. he patiently ſpent his Time among his pious Brethren, ſo long as he was permitted to continue there. Howbeit not long after, being taken from thence, he was carried to Norwich, where Dr. Hopton Biſhop of that Dioceſe, or Dr. Dunnings his Chancellor, exerciſed great Cruelty againſt him, as indeed they were Men in that time of Perſecution, as had not their Matches for cruel tormenting the Bodies of the Martyrs among all the reſt; and eſpecially through the procuring of Dunnings. For although the others were ſharp enough in their Generation, yet could they be ſatisfied with Impriſonment and Death, and could go no farther. Neither did I ever yet hear of any beſides theſe, who ſo far exceeded all Bounds of Pity and Compaſſion in tormenting their poor Brethren, as this Biſhop did; in ſuch Sort, that many of them he perverted, and brought quite from the Truth, and ſome from their Wits alſo.

Removed to Norwich.

The Biſhop therefore, or elſe his Chancellor, thinking that he might as eaſily prevail with Mr. Samuel, as he had done with the others before, kept him in a very cloſe Priſon at his firſt coming, where he was chained bolt-upright to a great Poſt, in ſuch Sort, that ſtanding only on Tip-toe, he was fain to ſtay up the Poiſe or Weight of his Body thereby. And to make amends for the Cruelty or Pains that he ſuffered, they added a far more grievous Torment, keeping him without Meat and Drink, whereby he was unmercifully vexed through Hunger and Thirſt; ſaving that he had every Day allowed two or three Mouthfuls of Bread, and three Spoonfuls of Water, to the End rather that he might be reſerved to farther Torment, than that they would preſerve his Life. O worthy Conſtancy of the Martyr! O pityleſs Hearts of Papiſts, worthy to be complained of, and to be accuſed before God and Nature! O the wonderful Strength of Chriſt in his Members! Whoſe Heart, though it had been made of adamant Stone, would not have relented at the intolerable Vexations, and extream Pains above Nature? How often would he have drunk his own Water; but his Body was ſo dried up with his long Emptineſs, that he was not able to make one Drop.

The cruel Handling of Mr. Samuel in Priſon.

Robert Samuel famiſhed in Priſon.

At laſt when he was brought forth to be burnt, which was but a Trifle in Compariſon of thoſe Pains that he had paſſed, there were ſeveral that heard him declare what ſtrange Things had happened unto him during the Time of his Impriſonment: To wit, that after he had been famiſhed or pined with Hunger two or three Days together, he then fell into a Sleep, as it were one half in a Slumber, at which Time one clad all in white ſeemed to ſtand before him, which adminiſtred Comfort unto him by theſe Words: Samuel, Samuel, be of good cheer, and take a good Heart unto thee. For after this Day ſhalt thou never be either Hungry or Thirſty. Which came to paſs accordingly, for ſoon after he was burned; and from that Time till he ſuffered, he felt neither Hunger nor Thirſt. And this he declared, to the End as he ſaid, that all Men might behold the wonderful Works of God. Many other Matters concerning the great Comfort he had of Chriſt in his Afflictions he could utter, he ſaid, beſides this, but that Shamefacedneſs and Modeſty would not ſuffer him to utter it.

Strange Viſions that happened to R. Samuel.

As this pious Martyr was going to the Stake, a certain Maid came to him, who took him about the Neck and kiſſed him, which being marked by them that were preſent, was ſought for the next Day after to be had to Priſon and burned, as the very Party herſelf informed me: Howbeit, as God of his Goodneſs would have it, ſhe eſcaped their fiery Hands, keeping herſelf ſecret in the Town a good while after. But as this Maid, called Roſe Nottingham, was marvellouſly preſerved by the Providence of God; ſo there was two other honeſt Women that fell into the Rage and Fury of that Time. The one was a Brewer's Wife, the other was a Shoemaker's Wife, but both together now eſpouſed to a new Huſband, Chriſt.

Two godly Women, the one a Brewer's Wife, the other a Shoemaker's Wife, apprehended.

With theſe two this Maid aforeſaid was very well acquainted, who on a Time giving Counſel to one of them, that ſhe ſhould convey herſelf away while ſhe had Time and Space, ſeeing ſhe could not away with the Queen's Proceedings; had this Anſwer at her Hands again: I know well, ſaith ſhe, that it is lawful enough to fly away, which Remedy you may uſe if you pleaſe. But my Caſe ſtandeth otherwiſe. I am tied to an Husband, and have beſides young Children at Home; and then I know not how my Husband, being a carnal Man, will take my Departure from him; therefore I am minded, for the Love of Chriſt and his Truth to ſtand to the Extremity of the Matter.

And ſo the next Day after Mr. Samuel ſuffered, theſe two pious Wives, the one named Anne Potten, the other Joan Trunchfield, Wife of Michael Trunchfield Shoemaker of Ipſwich, were apprehended, and both had to Priſon together. Who, as they were both by Sex and Nature ſomewhat tender, ſo were they at firſt leſs able to endure the Straitneſs of the Priſon, and eſpecially the Brewer's Wife was caſt into marvellous great Agonies and Troubles of Mind thereby. But Chriſt beholding the weak Infirmity of his Servant, did not fail to help her when ſhe was in this Neceſſity. So at length they both ſuffered after Samuel, Feb. 19. 1556. as ſhall be by God's Grace declared hereafter. This bleſſed Samuel, the Servant of Chriſt, ſuffered the 31ſt of Auguſt, Anno 1555.

The Lord Jeſus a ready Help in Time of Weakneſs.

The Report goeth among ſome that were there preſent, and ſaw him burn, that his Body in burning did ſhine as bright and white as new tried Silver in the Eyes of them that ſtood by, as I am informed by ſome that were there, and beheld the Sight.

Mr. Robert Samuel's Letter of Exhortation to the patient ſuffering of Affliction for the Cauſe of Chriſt.

A Man knoweth not his Time, but as the Fiſh is taken with the Angle, and as the Birds are caught with the Snare; ſo are Men caught and taken in the perillous Time when it cometh upon them. The Time cometh; the Day draweth near, Ezekiel 7. Better it were to die (as the Preacher ſaith) than to live and ſee the miſerable Works which are done under the Sun; ſuch ſudden and ſtrange Mutation, ſuch woful, heinous, and lamentable Diviſions ſo faſt approach, and none, or very few thoroughly repent. Alas, for this ſinful Nation, a People of great Iniquity and Seed of Ungraciouſneſs, corrupting their Ways. They have forſaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One Eccleſ. 9. Eccleſ. 4. Iſaiah 4.

of Iſrael to Anger, and are gone backward. Who now liveth not in ſuch Security and Reſt as tho' all Dangers were clean overpaſt? Who now blindeth and buffeteth not Chriſt, which ſeeth me, and ſeeth me not? Yea, who liveth not now in ſuch Felicity, worldly Pleaſures and Joys, wholly ſeeking the World, providing and craftily ſhifting for the earthly Clod and carnal Appetites, as though Sin were Matth. 8. clean forgotten, overthrown, and devoured? Like hoggiſh Gergeſites, now are we more afraid and aſhamed of Chriſt our Meſſias, fearing the Loſs of our filthy Pigs, I mean our tranſitory Goods, and diſquieting our ſinful and mortal Bodies in this ſhort, uncertain, and miſerable Life, than of a Legion of Devils, ſeducing and driving us from hearing, reading, and believing Chriſt, God's eternal Son, and his Word, the Power to ſave our Souls, unto Vanities, Lies, and Fables, and to this bewitching World.

O perillous abundance of Goods, too much Saturity of Meats, Wealth and Quietneſs, which deſtroy'd with ſo many Souls, thoſe goodly Cities, Gen. 19. Sodom and Gomorrah! Jeroboam, ſo long as he was but a poor Man, not yet advanced to his Dignity, lived in the Laws of God, and without Reprehenſion; but brought once to Wealth and a proſperous State, he became a wicked and moſt ſhameful Idolater. And what made the covetous Matth. 19. young Man ſo loth to follow Chriſt, when he was bidden to forſake but worldly Wealth which he then enjoyed? Wo be unto theſe falſe Illuſions of the World, Baits of Perdition, Hooks of the Devil, which have ſo ſhamefully deceived and ſeduced full many from the right Path unto the Lord, into the High-ways of Confuſion and perpetual Perdition.

We might now worthily, dear Chriſtians, lament and bewail our heavy Eſtate, miſerable Condition, and ſorrowful Chance: Yea, I ſay, we might Job 3. Iſa. 10. well accuſe ourſelves, and with Job curſe theſe our turbulent, wicked, and bloody laſt Days of this World, were it not that we both ſee and believe, and find in God's ſacred Book, that God hath reſerved a Remnant in all Ages, I mean the Faithful, as many as have been from the Beginning of the World exerciſed, whetted, and poliſhed with divers Afflictions, Troubles and Toſſings, caſt and daſhed againſt all Perils and Dangers, as the very Droſs and Out-caſts of the Earth, and yet will in no wiſe halt between God and Baal; for God verily abhorreth two Men in one: He cannot away with them that are between both, but caſteth them away as a filthy Vomit. Chriſt will not part Spoil with his mortal Enemy the Devil; he will have all, or loſe all: He will not permit the Devil to have the Service of the Body, and he to ſtand contented with the Heart and Mind: But He will be glorified both in your Bodies and in your Spirits, which are his, as St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 6. For he hath made, bought all, and dearly paid for all, as St. Peter ſaith, With his own immaculate Body hath he clean diſcharged your Bodies from Sin, Death, and Hell, and with his moſt precious Blood paid your Ranſom and full Price once for all and for ever.

God hath always a Remnant, whom he poliſheth with hard Adverſities. 1 Cor. 4. 1 Pet. 1.

Now what harm, I pray you, or what loſs ſuſtain you by this? Why are you, O vain Men, more afraid of Jeſus your gentle Saviour, and his Goſpel of Salvation, than of a Legion of cruel Devils, going about with falſe Deluſions utterly to deſtroy you both Souls and Bodies? Think you to be more ſure then under your Captain, Chriſt? Do you promiſe yourſelves to be more quiet in Satan's Service, than in Chriſt's Religion? Eſteem you more theſe tranſitory and pernicious Pleaſures, than God and all his heavenly Treaſures? O palpable Darkneſs, horrible Madneſs, and wilful Blindneſs, without Compariſon, too much to be ſuffered any longer! We ſee and will not ſee; we know and will not know; yea, we ſmart and will not feel, and that our Conſcience well knoweth. O miſerable and brainleſs Souls, which would for fooliſh Pleaſures and ſlippery Wealth loſe the royal Kingdom and permanent Joys of God, with the everlaſting Glory which he hath prepared for them that truly love him, and renounce the World. The Children of the World live in Pleaſure and Wealth; and 2 Cor. 4. John 12. the Devil, who is their God, and Prince of this World, keepeth their Wealth which is proper unto them, and letteth them enjoy it. But let us, which be of Chriſt, ſeek and enquire for heavenly Things, which by God's Promiſe and Mercy in Chriſt ſhall be peculiar unto us. Let, I ſay, the Cretians, Epicures, and ſuch other beaſtly Belials and carnal People, paſs for Things that be pleaſant for the Body, and do appertain to this tranſitory Life: Yet ſhall they once (as the kingly Prophet ſaith) run about the City of God, to and fro howling like Dogs, deſiring one Scrap of the Joys of God's Elect, but all too late as the rich Glutton did. Pſalm 58. Luke 16.

Anno 1555.

Let us therefore paſs for thoſe Things that do pertain to the Spirit, and are celeſtial. We muſt be here (ſaith St. Paul) not as Inhabiters, and Home-dwellers, but as Strangers; not as Strangers only, but after the Mind of Paul, as painful Soldiers appointed by our Governour, to fight againſt the Governour of Darkneſs of this World, againſt ſpiritual Craftineſs in heavenly Things. The Time is come; we muſt to it; the Judgment muſt begin firſt at the Houſe of God. Began they not firſt with the green and ſappy Tree? And what followed then on the dry Branches? Jeremy ſpeaking in the Perſon of God, ſaith; In the City wherein my Name is invocated, will I begin to puniſh: But as for you (meaning the Wicked) ſhall you be as Innocents, and not once touched? Nay, the Dregs of God's Wrath, the Bottom of all Sorrows, are reſerved unto them in the End: But God's houſhold ſhall drink the Flower of the Cup of his Mercy. And therefore let us ſay with Ezechias; Play the Men and ſhrink not: Let us comfort ourſelves, for the Lord is with us our Helper, and fighteth for us. The Lord is (ſaith he) with you, when you be with him; and when you ſeek him, he will be found of you: And again, when you forſake him, he will forſake you. Col. 3. Heb. 13. John 7. Jer. 25.

*Wherefore we ought not to be diſmay'd, or diſcourage ourſelves, but rather to be of good Comfort; not to be ſad but merry; not ſorrowful but joyful, in that God of his Goodneſs will vouchſafe to take us as his beloved Children, to ſubdue our ſinful Luſts, our wretched Fleſh and Blood unto his Glory, the promoting of his holy Word, and edifying of his Church. What if the earthly Houſe of this our Habitation (*St. Paul meaning the Body) be deſtroyed? We know aſſuredly we ſhall have a Building not made with Hands, but everlaſting in Heaven, with ſuch Joys as Faith taketh not, Hope toucheth not, and Charity apprehendeth not. They paſs all Deſires and Wiſhes. Gotten they may be by Chriſt, eſteemed they cannot be. Wherefore the more Affliction and Perſecution the Word of God bringeth, the more Felicity and greater Joy abideth in Heaven. But the worldly Peace, idle Eaſe, wealthy Pleaſure, and this preſent and pleaſant tranſitory Life and Felicity, which the Ungodly fooliſhly imagine to procure unto themſelves by perſecuting and thruſting away the Goſpel, ſhall turn unto their own Trouble, and at laſt unto horrible Deſtructions and Mutations of Realms and Countries; and after this Life, if they repent not, unto their perpetual Infelicity, and Damnation. For they had rather 2 Cor. 5.

No true Quietneſs in Satan's Service.

Joys laid up in Chriſt to Men's Senſe inеſtimable.

Anno 1555. with Nabal, and his temporal Pleaſures, deſcend to the Devil, than with poor Chriſt, and his bodily Troubles, aſcend unto the Kingdom of God his Father. But an unwiſe Man (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) Pſal. 40. comprehendeth them not, neither doth the fooliſh underſtand them; that is, theſe bloody Perſecutors grow up and flouriſh like the Flower and Graſs in the Field. But unto this End do they ſo flouriſh, that they might be cut down and caſt into Job 21. the Fire for ever. For as Job ſaith, Their Joy laſteth but the twinkling of an Eye, and Death ſhall lie gnawing upon them as doth the Flock upon the Paſture; yea, the cruel Worm, late Repentance, Mark 9. (as St. Mark ſaith) ſhall lie gnawing, tormenting, and accuſing their wretched Conſcience for evermore.

Let us therefore (good Chriſtians) be conſtant in obeying God rather than Men. For although they ſlay our ſinful Bodies (yea, rather our deadly Enemies) for God's Verity; yet they cannot do it, but by God's Sufferance and good Will, to his Praiſe and Honour, and to our eternal Joy and Felicity. For our Blood ſhed for the Goſpel ſhall preach it with more Fruit, and greater Furtherance, than did our Mouths, Lives, and Writings, as did the Blood of Abel, Stephen, with many others. What though they laugh Chriſt and his Word to ſcorn, who ſit in the Chair of perverſe peſtilent Scorners? To whom, as to the wiſe Gentiles of the World, the Goſpel of Chriſt is but Fooliſhneſs, as it was to the Jews, a Slander and a ſtumbling Stone, whereat they now being fallen, have provoked the Wrath and Vengeance of God upon them.

Theſe are the Days of Vengeance, ſaith Luke, Luke 2. that all Things written may be fulfilled. And ſurely it ſhall be no leſs than a huge Storm of Evils that ſhall come upon us, becauſe that a long and obſtinate Maliciouſneſs of us hath gone before, crying in the Ears of the Lord God of Hoſts, who ſo many Times and ſo many Ways have been provoked with the unſpeakable Riches of his Goodneſs, his Patience, and Long-ſuffering, to Amendment, and have nevertheleſs contemned the ſame, and proceeded forward to worſe and worſe, provoking and ſtirring the Preſence of God's Majeſty to Anger.

God long looketh for Repentance, and we wax worſe.

Now therefore ſaith God by the Mouth of his Iſa. 3. Prophet, I will come unto thee, and I will ſend my Wrath upon thee: Upon thee, I ſay, O England, and puniſh thee according to thy Ways, and reward thee after all thine Abominations. Thou haſt kindled the Fire of God's Wrath, and haſt ſtirred up the Coals. For thou waſt once enlightned, and hadſt taſted of the heavenly Gift, and waſt become Partaker of the Holy Ghoſt, and hadſt taſted of the good Word of God: Yea, it is yet in thy Mouth, ſaith the Prophet. Alas, O England, thou kneweſt thy Lord and Maſter's Will, but didſt not do it; Thou muſt therefore, ſaith he, ſuffer many Stripes, and many ſharp Strokes, and walk in the glittering and hot Flame of thine own Fire, and on the Coals that thou haſt kindled. This cometh to thee from my Hand, ſaith the Lord, namely, that thou ſhalt ſleep in Sorrow, yea, even ſo thou ſhalt. The plain Truth telleth the Tale, the immutable Juſtice of the everliving God, and the ordinary Courſe of his Plagues from the Beginning confirmeth the ſame. The Joy of our Heart, Jer. 5. ſaith Jeremy, is gone, our Glory is fallen away, our merry Singing is turned into Mourning, the Garland of our Head is fallen: Alas and weal away, that ever we ſinned ſo ſore!

England worthily rebuked.

Let all the wicked Enemies of Chriſt, and all the Unbelievers, look to be tormented and vexed with all helliſh Furies, and clean without hope of God's accounting Day, who knew not God in Chriſt to be their very Righteouſneſs, their Life, their only Salvation and alone Saviour, nor believe in him. They muſt, as St. John ſaith, needs abide and periſh with their Sins in Death and eternal Damnation. But we be the Children of Saints, as the elder Toby did anſwer, and look for another Life, which God ſhall give to all them who change not their Faith, and ſhrink not from him. Rejoice therefore ye Chriſtian afflicted Brethren, for they cannot take our Souls and Bodies out of the Hands of the Almighty, which be kept as in the Boſom of our ſweet and loving Father: And if we abide faſt in Chriſt, and turn not away like Weather-cocks, ſurely we ſhall live for ever. Chriſt affirmeth the ſame, ſaying, My Matth. 10. Sheep hear my Voice, I know them, they John 10. hearken unto me, and to no Strangers, and I give them everlaſting Life; for they ſhall not be loſt, and no Man ſhall pluck them out of my Hands: No nor yet this flattering World with all its vain Pleaſures, nor any Tyrant with his great Threats and ſtout Brags can once move them out of the Way of eternal Life. What Conſolation and Comfort can we have more pleaſant and effectual than this? God is on our Side and fighteth for us; he ſuffereth, he ſmarteth, and is afflicted with us. As the World can do nothing againſt his Might, neither in taking away or diminiſhing from his Glory, nor putting him from his celeſtial Throne; ſo neither can it hurt any one of his Children without his good Will. For we are Members of his Epheſ. 5. Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones, and as dear to him as the Apple of his Eye.

Let us therefore with an earneſt Faith lay faſt hold on the Promiſes in the Goſpel, and let us not be ſeparated from the ſame by any Temptation, Tribulation, or Perſecution. Let us conſider the Verity of God to be invincible, inviolable, and immutable, promiſing and giving us his faithful Soldiers Life eternal. It is he only that hath deſerved it for us: It is his only Benefit, and of his only mere Mercy, and unto him only muſt we render Thanks. Let not therefore the vain Fantaſies and Dreams of Men, and fooliſh gaudy Toys of the World, nor the crafty Deluſions of the Devil, drive and ſeparate us from our Hope of the Crown of Righteouſneſs 2 Tim. 2. that is laid up in ſtore for us againſt the laſt Day. O that happy and joyful Day, I mean to the Faithful, when Chriſt by his Covenant ſhall grant and give unto them that overcome, and keep his Words to the End, that they may aſcend and ſit in Seats with him, as he aſcended and ſitteth on the Throne with his Father. The ſame Body and Soul that is now with Chriſt afflicted, ſhall then with Chriſt be glorified: Now in the Butchers Hands, as Sheep appointed to die; then ſitting at God's Table with Chriſt in his Kingdom, as God's honourable and dear Children; where we ſhall have heavenly Riches for earthly Poverty, Saturity of the pleaſant Preſence of the Glory of God, for Hunger and Thirſt; celeſtial Joys in the Company of Angels, for Sorrows, Troubles, and cold Irons; and Life eternal, for bodily Death. O happy Souls! O pre- Precious is the Death of God's Saints. cious Death and evermore bleſſed, right dear in the Eyes of God; to you the Spring of the Lord ſhall ever be flouriſhing. Then (as ſaith Iſaiah) The redeemed ſhall return and come again into Sion, praiſing the Lord, and eternal Mercies ſhall be over their Heads: They ſhall obtain Mirth and Solace; Sorrow and Wo ſhall be utterly vanquiſhed. Yea, I am he, ſaith the Lord, that in all Things giveth you everlaſting Conſolation. To whom with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, be Glory and Praiſe for ever, Amen.

God's Promiſe is immutable.

Robert Samuel.

William Allen, Martyr.

NOW after the Suffering of Robert Samuel, about the Beginning of September, William Allen was burnt in Walſingham, a labouring Man, ſometime Servant to John Houghton of Somerton. He being brought before the Biſhop, and asked the Cauſe why he was impriſoned, anſwered, That he was put in Priſon becauſe he would not follow the Croſs, ſaying, that he would never go on Proceſſion.

Then being willed by the Biſhop to return again to the Catholick Church; he anſwered, That he would turn to the Catholick Church, but not to the Romiſh Church: And ſaid, That if he ſaw the King and Queen, and all others follow the Croſs, or kneel down to the Croſs, he would not. For which Sentence of Condemnation was given againſt him the 12th of Auguſt, to be burnt at Walſingham about the Beginning of September, who declared ſuch Conſtancy at his Martyrdom, and had ſuch Credit with the Juſtices, by reaſon of his upright Converſation among them, that he was ſuffered to go untied to his Suffering, and there being faſtened with a Chain, ſtood quietly without ſhrinking until he died.

The Martyrdom of W. Allen.

The Martyrdom of Roger Coo, of Melford in Suffolk, firſt examined by the Biſhop of Norwich, and by him condemned, Auguſt 12, 1555.

ROGER COO being brought before the Biſhop, was firſt asked by him why he was impriſoned.

Talk between Roger Coo and Dr. Hopton Biſhop of Norwich.

Coo. At the Juſtices Commandment.

Biſhop. There was ſome Cauſe why.

Coo. Here is my Accuſer, let him declare.

And his Accuſer ſaid, that he would not receive the Sacrament.

Then the Biſhop ſaid, that he thought he had tranſgreſſed a Law.

But Coo anſwered, that there was no Law to tranſgreſs.

The Biſhop then asked, What he ſaid to the Law that then was?

Coo anſwered, That he had been in Priſon a long Time, and knew it not.

No, ſaid his Accuſer, nor will not. My Lord, ask him when he received the Sacrament.

When Coo heard him ſay ſo, he ſaid, I pray you my Lord let him ſit down and examine me himſelf.

But the Biſhop would not hear that, but ſaid, Coo, why will ye not receive?

He anſwered him, That the Biſhop of Rome had changed God's Ordinances, and given the People Bread and Wine inſtead of the Goſpel, and the Belief of the ſame.

Biſhop. How prove you that?

Coo. Our Saviour ſaid, My Fleſh is Meat indeed, and my Blood is Drink indeed. He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, abideth in me, and I in him; and the Bread and Wine doth not ſo.

Biſhop. Well Coo, thou doſt ſlander our holy Fathers. Did not Chriſt take Bread, give Thanks, and break it, and ſaid, This is my Body. Anno 1555.

Yes, ſaid he; and ſo he went further with the Text, ſaying, Which ſhall be given for you: Do this in Remembrance of me.

Biſhop. You have ſaid the Truth.

Then Coo replied further, and ſaid, Chriſt commanded to do this in Remembrance of him, and not to ſay this in Remembrance of him, neither did the Holy Ghoſt ſo lead the Apoſtles, but taught them to give Thanks, and to break Bread from Houſe to Houſe, and not to ſay as the Biſhop ſaid.

Biſhop. How prove you that?

Coo. It is written in the Second of the Acts.

Then the Biſhop's Chaplain ſaid it was true.

The Biſhop asked him if he could ſay his Creed.

He anſwered yea, and ſo ſaid part of the Creed; and then after he ſaid he believed more; for he believed the Ten Commandments, that it was meet for all ſuch as look to be ſaved, to be obedient unto them.

Biſhop. Is not the Holy Church to be believed alſo?

Coo. Yes, if it be built upon the Word of God.

The Biſhop ſaid to Coo, that he had Charge of his Soul.

Coo. Have ye ſo, my Lord? Then if ye go to the Devil for your Sins; where ſhall I become?

Biſhop. Do you not believe as your Father did? Was not he an honeſt Man?

Coo. It is written, that after Chriſt hath ſuffered, There ſhall come a People with the Prince that ſhall deſtroy both City and Sanctuary. Dan. 9. I pray you ſhew me, whether this Deſtruction was in my Father's Time, or now?

The Biſhop not anſwering his Queſtion, asked him whether he would not obey the King's Laws?

Coo. As far as they agree with the Word of God I will obey them.

Biſhop. *Whether they agree with the Word of God or not, we be bound to obey them, if the King were an Infidel. * Well ſpoken, and like the Pope's Clerk.

Coo. If Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego had ſo done, Nebuchadnezzar had not confeſſed the Living God.

Biſhop. Theſe two and twenty Years we have been governed by ſuch Kings.

Coo. My Lord, why were ye then dumb, and did not ſpeak or bark?

Biſhop. I durſt not for Fear of Death. And thus they ended.

But after this done, it was reported that I railed; wherefore I recollected, and wrote down my railing (as they called it) that Light ſhould not be taken for Darkneſs, nor Sin for Holineſs, and the Devil for God, who ought to be feared and honoured both now and ever. Amen.

The Martyrdom of Roger Coo at Yexford.

This Roger Coo, an aged Father, after his ſundry Troubles and Conflicts with his Adverſaries, at length was committed to the Fire at Yexford in the County of Suffolk, where he moſt bleſſedly ended his aged Years, in the Month of September 1555.

Thomas

Anno 1555.

Thomas Cob of Haverhill, Butcher, Martyr.

THOMAS COB of Haverhill, Butcher, was condemned on the 12th Day of Auguſt, and executed in the Month of September. Being brought and examined by Michael Dunnings the bloody Chancellor of Norwich; firſt, whether he believed that Chriſt is really and ſubſtantially in the Sacrament of the Altar; anſwered, That the Body of Chriſt, born of the Virgin, was in Heaven, and otherwiſe (he ſaid) he would not anſwer, becauſe he had read it in the Scripture, that Chriſt did aſcend, and did never deſcend ſince; and therefore ſaid, that he had not learned in the Scripture, that Chriſt ſhould be in the Sacrament.

The Martyrdom of Thomas Cob at Thetford, in Septemb. 1555.

Furthermore, being demanded whether he would obey the Laws of the Realm of England, made for the Unity of Faith, or no: He anſwered, That his Body ſhould be at the King and Queen's Commandment ſo far as the Law of God would ſuffer, &c. In fine, he being condemned, was burnt in the Town of Thetford in September, 1555.

The Martyrdom of George Catmer, Robert Streater, Anthony Burward, George Brodbridge, and James Tutty.

NOW to return from Norfolk and Suffolk into the Dioceſs of Canterbury, where we ſhall treat of five worthy Martyrs, whoſe Blood in the ſame Year and Month of September was ſpilt for the true Teſtimony of Chriſt and his Goſpel. The Names of whom are as follow.

George Catmer of Hith, Robert Streater, of Hith, Anthony Burward of Calete, George Brodbridge of Bromfield, James Tutty of Brenchley.

Examinations of theſe five Martyrs.

Who upon the third Day of Auguſt were brought before Dr. Thornton the aforeſaid Biſhop of Dover, and his Accomplices, and there were both jointly and ſeverally examined upon certain Articles, touching the Sacrament of the Altar, auricular Confeſſion, and other ſuch like.

Examination and Anſwers of Catmer.

To which the ſaid Catmer (being firſt examined) made Anſwer on this wiſe; Chriſt, ſaid he, ſitteth in Heaven on the right Hand of God the Father; and therefore I do not believe him to be in the Sacrament of the Altar; but he is in the worthy Receiver ſpiritually: And the Sacrament, as you uſe it, is an abominable Idol.

Examination and Anſwers of Streater.

Next unto him Robert Streater was called forth, who being alſo asked, Whether he did believe the real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar, ſaid, that he did not ſo believe; for you do maintain Hereſy and Idolatry (quoth he) in that ye teach to worſhip a falſe God in the Sacrament, encloſed in a Box. It is you that are the malignant Church; for in your Church there are twenty Things uſed againſt the Law of God.

The like Objection was likewiſe made againſt Anthony Burward, who alſo ſaid that their Sacrament was made an Idol.

Burward examined.

After him, it was demanded of George Brodbridge what he ſaid to thoſe Articles. Who anſwered, that he would not be confeſſed of a Prieſt, becauſe he could not forgive his own Sins. And further ſaid, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is not the real Body of our Saviour Chriſt, but Bread given in the Remembrance of him. Moreover, as for your Holy Water, and your Maſs, I do (quoth he) utterly defy them.

Brodbridge examined.

At laſt of all, James Tutty made and confirmed the foregoing Anſwers.

J. Tutty examined.

And therefore they were all five condemned as Hereticks, and accordingly were all burnt at Canterbury in one Fire, about the ſixth Day of September then next following.

Although the Rage and Vehemency of this terrible Perſecution in Queen Mary's Days did chiefly light in London, Eſſex, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Kent, as hath been partly already declared; yet notwithſtanding, few Parts of the Realm were free from this fatal Storm, but in almoſt all Places ſome were put to Death for the ſame righteous Cauſe. And now to begin with the Dioceſs of Litchfield and Coventry, where we ſhall juſt mention two Perſons, namely, Thomas Hayward, and John Goreway, who were both condemned as Hereticks, and were burnt at Litchfield about the Middle of September.

The Martyrdom of Hayward and Goreway at Litchfield, September, An. 1555.

The Hiſtory of Robert Glover, Gentleman, and Mr. John Glover his Brother, in the Dioceſs of Litchfield.

ROBERT GLOVER, Gentleman, was likewiſe apprehended, and put to death in the Month of September, in the Dioceſs of Litchfield and Coventry. Of whoſe Apprehenſion and Troubles I cannot well treat, without mentioning ſome Things relating to John Glover his Bother, becauſe the Commiſſion was chiefly ſent down for John, and not for Robert (although it pleaſed God that John eſcaped, and Robert in his ſtead was apprehended) therefore I thought it neceſſary to comprehend them both in one Story. In deſcribing ſome Part of their virtuous Inſtitution and order of Life, I ſhall firſt begin with John the eldeſt Brother: Who being a Gentleman, and Heir to his Father in the Town of Mancetor, was endow'd with fair Poſſeſſions and worldly Goods, but much more plentifully enriched with God's heavenly Grace, and inward Virtues: Which Grace ſo wrought in him, that he with his other Brethren Robert and William, not only received and embraced the happy Light of Chriſt's Holy Goſpel, but alſo moſt zealouſly profeſſed, and no leſs diligently in their Lives and Converſation followed the ſame.

J. Glover, R. Glover, W. Glover, three pious Brethren, and zealous Profeſſors of the Goſpel.

John Glover was a Man of a very tender Conſcience, and ſeemed to have a deeper Taſte and Contemplation of heavenly Things, and more mortify'd from worldly Cares than the others were. His ſpiritual Conflicts were very extraordinary, and becauſe the Conſideration of them is both worthy of Memory, and the Example

Example may work Experience to the Comfort of the Godly, it may not be amiss to rehearse some Part of them. It pleased God so to lay his heavy Hand of inward Afflictions and grievous Passions upon him, that though he suffered not the Pains of the outward Fire, as his Brother and other Martyrs did; yet if we consider what he suffered inwardly, and that for a long Time, he may well be counted a Martyr with his Brother Robert, being no less desirous with him of the same Martyrdom; yea, and in Comparison may seem to be chronicled for a double Martyr.

For as the said Robert was speedily dispatched with the sharp and extreme Torments of the Fire in a short Time, so this no less blessed Saint of God, what, and how much more grievous Pangs, what sorrowful Torments, what boiling Heats of the Fire of Hell he inwardly felt, no Tongue is able to express. Being young, I remember I was once or twice with him, who partly by his Talk I perceived, and partly by mine own Eyes saw to be so worn and consumed by the Space of five Years, that he could hardly digest any Meat, enjoy the Quietness of Sleep, or Pleasure of Life; yea, and almost no kind of Senses were left in him. And truly I have often greatly wondered at the miraculous Operation of Christ shewed upon him, who unless he had relieved in Time his poor wretched Servant so far worn, with some opportune Consolation now and then, it could not be possible for him to subsist under such intolerable Agonies. And yet the Occasion thereof was of no great Moment neither. But nothing is more common amongst the holiest and best of Men, by how much the more devout and watchful they are, (having the Fear of God before their Eyes) so much the more they mistrust and suspect themselves; whereby it cometh to pass, that they are often so terrified and perplexed with small Matters (in Comparison) as though they were huge Mountains; whereas on the contrary, others there be whom the blackest and most heinous Crimes will nothing touch or move.

The better the Conscience the sooner disquieted.

The first Occasion of John Glover's inward Affliction.

The Occasion of this was, That he being first called by the Light of the Holy Spirit to the Knowledge of the Gospel, and having received a wonderful sweet, and feeling Sense of Christ's heavenly Kingdom, his Mind, after that, falling a little to some Cogitation of his former Affairs belonging to his Vocation, began by and by to misdoubt himself upon Occasion of these Words written in the sixth Chapter to the Hebrews; For it is impossible for those who were once enlightned, and have tasted of the heavenly Gift, and were made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come; if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto Repentance: Seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open Shame. Upon the Consideration of which Words, he fully perswaded himself that he had sinned against the Holy Ghost: Even so much, that had he been in Hell, he could hardly despair much more of his Salvation. Every good Man may readily judge, by himself, what Terrors, Boilings, and Convulsions turmoiled in the mean Time in his woful Breast: Altho' it be hard for any Man to judge of the Misery thereof, but he who hath by Experience felt the like.

No Grief like to the Grief of Conscience.

Now in comparing the Torments of all Martyrs with his Pains, I pray you what Pains, Punishment, and Flames would he not willingly have suffered, to have had some small Ease and Refreshment? Being under such intolerable Agonies of Mind, that he could have no Enjoyment of his Food, yet was he compelled to eat against his Appetite, on purpose to defer the Time of his Damnation as long as he could, thinking with himself that he must needs be thrown into Hell, as soon as the Breath went out of his Body. However, he thought Christ pity'd his Case, and was sorry for him; yet he could not (as he imagin'd) help, because of the Verity of the Word, which said, It is impossible for those whose who were once enlightned, &c. Anno 1555.

And this I mention not to open his Wounds, and expose his Misfortunes, but to encourage all good Men by his Example to glorify the Son of God, who suffereth none to be tempted above his Strength, but so tempereth and seasoneth the Asperity of Evils, that what seemeth to us intolerable, he doth not only alleviate, that we may bear it, but also turneth it more to our Advantage than we can imagine: Which manifestly appeared in this good Servant of God, and in no Man more. And although (as we have said) he suffered many Years these sharp Temptations and strong Buffetings of Satan; yet the Lord, who graciously preserved him all the while, did not only at last rid him out of all Discomfort, but also framed him thereby to such Mortification of Life, as the like probably hath not been seen, in such sort as he being like one placed in Heaven already, and dead to this World, both in Word and Meditation led a Life altogether celestial, abhorring in his Mind all prophane Doings. Neither was his Talk any Thing different from the Fruits of his Life, never throwing out an idle, vile, or vain Word. The most Part of his Lands he distributed to the Use of his Brethren, and committed the rest to the Guiding of his Servants, and Officers, whereby he might the more quietly give himself up to his godly Study, as to a continual Sabbath rest. This was about the latter End of King Henry's Reign, and continued in the Time of King Edward the Sixth.

Christ a merciful Helper in time of Temptation and hard Distress.

J. Glover by the Grace of Christ restored again to perfect Tranquility.

After this, in the persecuting Days of Queen Mary, as soon as the Bishop of Coventry heard of his Fame, and of his being so ardent and zealous in the Gospel of Christ, he immediately wrote a Letter to the Mayor and Officers of Coventry to apprehend him as soon as possible. But by the good Providence of God, it happened otherwise: For God disposeth all Things after his own secret Pleasure, who seeing his old trusty Servant so many Years with so extreme and many Torments broken and dried up, would in no wise heap too many Sorrows upon one poor silly Wretch: Neither would he commit him to the Flames of Fire, who had been already baked and scorched with the sharp Fires of inward Affliction, and had sustained so many burning Darts and Conflicts of Satan so many Years: God therefore of his Divine Providence, thinking it too much that one Man should be so overcharged with so many Plagues and Torments, did graciously provide, that Robert his Brother being both stronger in Body, and also better furnished with Helps of Learning to answer the Adversaries (being a Master of Arts in Cambridge) should sustain that Conflict, and even so it came to pass.

For

Anno 1555. The Mayor of Coventry ſendeth a private Caution to J. Glover.

For as ſoon as the Mayor of Coventry had receiv'd the Biſhop's Letters for the apprehending of Mr. John Glover, he forthwith ſent private Notice to the ſaid John to convey himſelf away: Who with his Brother William was not ſo ſoon departed out of his Houſe, but that yet in the Sight of the Sheriff and others, the Searchers came and ruſhed in to take him, according to the Biſhop's Order.

Mr. Robert Glover apprehended lying ſick in his Chamber.

But when the Perſon they ſought for could not be found, one of the Officers going into an upper Chamber, found there Robert the other Brother lying on his Bed, and ſick of a long Diſeaſe; who was by him immediately brought before the Sheriff. Which Sheriff, notwithſtanding, favouring Robert and his Cauſe, would indeed fain have diſmiſſed him, and wrought what Means he could, ſaying, that he was not the Man for whom they were ſent: Yet nevertheleſs being terrified with the ſtout Words of the Officer, contending with him to have him detained till the Biſhop's coming, he was conſtrained to carry him away againſt his Will, and ſo laid him faſt while the Biſhop came. And thus much by way of Preamble, concerning the worthy Remembrance of Mr. John Glover.

Now to enter upon the Matter which principally we have in Hand, that is, to conſider the Story and Martyrdom of Mr. Robert Glover; as the whole Narration was ſent in a Letter of his own writing to his Wife, concerning the Manner of his being handled; therefore it ſeemeth beſt for the more Credit of the Matter, to exhibit his own Letter, the Contents whereof are as follow.

Mr. Robert Glover's Letter to his Wife, containing the whole Deſcription of his Troubles.

To my entirely beloved Wife, Mary Glover.

THE Peace of Conſcience which paſſeth all Underſtanding, the ſweet Conſolation, Comfort, Strength and Boldneſs of the Holy Ghoſt be continually increaſed in your Heart, through a fervent, earneſt, and ſtedfaſt Faith in our moſt dear and only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

I thank you heartily (moſt loving Wife) for your Letters ſent to me in my Impriſonment. I read them with Tears more than once or twice with Tears (I ſay) for Joy and Gladneſs, that God had wrought in you ſo merciful a Work; Firſt, an unfeigned Repentance; Secondly, an humble and hearty Reconciliation; Thirdly, a voluntary Submiſſion and Obedience to the Will of God in all Things. Which when I read in your Letters, and judged them to proceed from the Bottom of your Heart, I could not but be thankful to God, rejoicing with Tears for you, and theſe his great Mercies poured upon you.

Theſe your Letters, and the Hearing of your moſt godly Proceedings and conſtant Doings from Time to Time, much relieved and comforted me at all Times, and ſhall be a goodly Teſtimony with you at the great Day, againſt many worldly and dainty Dames, who ſet more by their own Pleaſure and Pelf in this World, than by God's Glory, little regarding (as it appeareth) the everlaſting Health of their own Souls or others. My Prayer ſhall be whilſt I am in this World, that God, which of his great Mercy hath begun his good Work in you, will finiſh it to the Glory of his Name; and by the mighty Power and Inſpiration of his Holy Spirit ſo ſtrengthen, eſtabliſh, and confirm you in all his Ways to the End, that we may together ſhew forth his Praiſes in the World to come, to our unſpeakable Conſolation everlaſtingly, Amen.

So long as God ſhall lend you Continuance in this miſerable World, above all Things give your ſelf continually to Prayer, lifting up, as St. Paul ſaith, clean or pure Hands without Anger, Wrath, or Doubting, forgiving (as he ſaith alſo) if you have any Thing againſt any Man, as Chriſt forgiveth us. And that we may be the better willing to forgive, it is good often to call to Remembrance the Multitude and Greatneſs of our Sins, which Chriſt daily and hourly pardoneth and forgiveth us; and then we ſhall, as St. Peter affirmeth, be ready to cover and hide the Offences of our Brethren, be they never ſo many. And becauſe God's Word teacheth us, not only the true Manner of praying, but alſo what we ought to do, or not to do in the whole Diſcourſe and Practice of this Life, what pleaſeth or diſpleaſeth God, and that, as Chriſt ſaith, The Word of God that he hath ſpoken, ſhall judge in the laſt Day: Let your Prayer be to this End eſpecially, That God of his great Mercy would open and reveal more and more daily to your Heart, the true Senſe, Knowledge, and Underſtanding of his moſt holy Word, and give you Grace in your Living, to expreſs the Fruits thereof.

John 12.

And foraſmuch as it is, as the Holy Ghoſt calleth it, the Word of Affliction, that is, it is ſeldom without Hatred, Perſecution, Peril, Danger of Loſs of Life and Goods, and whatſoever ſeemeth pleaſant in this World, as Experience teacheth you in this Time: Call upon God continually for his Aſſiſtance always, as Chriſt teacheth, caſting your Accounts what is it like to coſt you, endeavouring yourſelf, through the Help of the Holy Ghoſt, by Continuance of Prayer, to lay your Foundation ſo ſure, that no Storm or Tempeſt ſhall be able to overthrow or caſt it down; remembring always (as Chriſt ſaith) Lot's Wife; that is, to beware of looking back to any Thing that diſpleaſeth God ſo much as Idolatry, that is, falſe worſhipping of God, otherwiſe than his Word commandeth: Look not back (I ſay) nor turn not your Face to their idolatrous and blaſphemous Maſs, manifeſtly againſt the Word, Practice, and Example of Chriſt; as is it moſt manifeſt to all that have any Taſte of the true Underſtanding of God's Word, that there remaineth nothing in the Church of England at this preſent, profitable or edifying to the Church and Congregation of the Lord, all Things being done in an unknown Tongue, contrary to the expreſs Commandment of the Holy Ghoſt.

1 Cor. 1.

Luke 17. Example of Lot's Wife.

They object that they be the Church, and therefore they muſt be believed. My Anſwer was, The Church of God knoweth and acknowledgeth no other Head but Jeſus the Son of God, whom ye have refuſed, and choſen the Man of Sin, the Son of Perdition, Enemy to Chriſt, the Devil's Deputy and Lieutenant, the Pope.

Note 1. proving the Popiſh Church to be no true Church.

Chriſt's Church heareth, teacheth, and is ruled by his Word, as he ſaith, My Sheep hear my Voice. If you abide in me, and my Word in you,

Note 2. John 10.

you, you be my Diſciples. Their Church repelleth God's Word, and forceth all Men to follow their Traditions.

Note 3. Acts 7. Chriſt's Church dare not add or dimniſh, alter or change his bleſſed Teſtament; but they be not afraid to take away all that Chriſt inſtituted, and go a Whoring (as the Scripture ſaith) with their own Inventions: To glory and rejoyce in the Works of their own Hands.

Note 4. to know the Church. The Church of Chriſt is, hath been, and ſhall be in all Ages under the Croſs, perſecuted, moleſted, and afflicted, the World ever hating them, becauſe they be not of the World. But theſe perſecute, murder, ſlay and kill ſuch as profeſs the true Doctrine of Chriſt, be they in Learning, Living, Converſation, and other Virtues never ſo excellent.

Note 5. John 5. Chriſt and his Church reſerved the Trial of their Doctrine to the Word of God, and gave the People leave to judge thereof by the ſame Word, Search the Scriptures. But this Church taketh away the Word from the People, and ſuffereth neither learned nor unlearned to examine or prove their Doctrine by the Word of God.

Note 6. to know the Church. The true Church of God laboureth by all Means to reſiſt and withſtand the Luſts, Deſires, and Motions of the World, the Fleſh and the Devil: Theſe for the moſt Part give themſelves to all Voluptuouſneſs, and ſecretly commit ſuch Things, (as St. Paul ſaith) it is Shame to ſpeak of.

Epheſ. 5. Compare the Proceedings of the Papiſts with the true Members of Chriſt's Church, and you ſhall ſee what they are. By theſe and ſuch like manifeſt Probations, they declare themſelves to be none of the Church of Chriſt, but rather of the Synagogue of Satan. It ſhall be good for you often to confer and compare their Proceedings and Doings with the Practice of thoſe whom the Word of God doth teach to have been true Members of the Church of God, and it ſhall work in you both Knowledge, Erudition and Boldneſs to withſtand with ſuffering their Doings. I likened them therefore to Nimrod, whom the Scripture calleth a mighty Hunter, or a ſtout Champion, telling them that that which they could not have by the Word, they would have by the Sword, and be the Church whether Men will or no; and called them with good Conſcience, as Chriſt called their Forefathers, the Children of the Devil; and as their Father the Devil is a Liar and a Murderer, ſo their Kingdom and Church (as they call it) ſtandeth by lying and murdering.

The Church of the valiant Papiſts compared to Nimrod, and why?

Have no Fellowſhip with them therefore, my dear Wife, nor with their Doctrine and Traditions, leſt you be Partaker of their Sins, for whom is reſerved a heavy Damnation, without ſpeedy Repentance. Beware of ſuch as ſhall advertiſe you to bear with the World for a Seaſon as they do. There is no dallying with God's Matters: It is a fearful Thing (as St. Paul ſaith) to fall into the Hands of the living God. Remember the Prophet Elias, Why halt ye on both Sides. Remember what Chriſt ſaith, He that putteth his Hands to the Plough, and looketh back, is not worthy of me. And ſeeing God hath hitherto allowed you as a good Solder in the Forefront, play not the Coward, neither draw back to the Rearward. St. John numbreth among them that ſhall dwell in the fiery Lake, ſuch as be fearful in God's Cauſe, as Stephen, Peter, Paul, Daniel, the three Children, the Widow's Sons, and in your Days Anne Askew, Laurence Saunders, John Bradford, with many other faithful Witneſſes of Chriſt. Be afraid in nothing (ſaith St. Paul) of the Adverſaries of Chriſt's Doctrine, which is to them the Sign of Perdition, but to you of eternal Salvation. Chriſt commandeth the ſame, ſaying, Fear them not. Let us not follow the Example of him which asked Time firſt to take Leave of his Friends. If we ſo do, we ſhall find few of them that will encourage us to go forward in our Buſineſs, pleaſe it God never ſo much. We do not read that James and John, Andrew and Simon, when they were called, put off the Time till they had known their Fathers or Friends Pleaſure. But the Scripture ſaith, They forſook all, and by and by followed Chriſt. Chriſt likened the Kingdom of God to a precious Pearl, which whoſoever findeth, ſelleth all that he hath to buy it. Yea, whoſoever hath but a little Taſte or Glimmering how precious a Treaſure the Kingdom of Heaven is, will gladly forego both Life and Goods for the obtaining of it. But the moſt Part now-a-days are like Eſop's Cock, which when he had found a precious Stone, wiſhed rather to have found a Barley-corn. So ignorant are they how precious a Jewel the Word of God is, that they chooſe rather the Things of this World, which being compared to it, are leſs in value than a Barley-corn.

Anno 1555. Phil. 3. Matth. 13.

If I would have given Place to worldly Reaſons, theſe might have moved me: Firſt, the leaving of you and my Children; the Conſideration of the State of my Children, being yet tender of Age, and young, apt and inclinable to Virtue and Learning, and ſo having the more need of my Aſſiſtance, being not altogether deſtitute of Gifts to help them withal; Poſſeſſions above the common Sort of Men; becauſe I was never called to be a Preacher or Miniſter; and (becauſe of my Sickneſs) Fear of Death in Impriſonment before I ſhould come to my Anſwer, and ſo my Death to be unprofitable.

Experience of the Lord's Aſſiſtance in confirming his Servants. But theſe and ſuch like, I thank my heavenly Father (who of his infinite Mercy inſpired me with his Holy Spirit, for his Son's ſake my only Saviour and Redeemer) prevailed not in me: But when I had by the wonderful Permiſſion of God fallen into their Hands, at the firſt Sight of the Sheriff, Nature a little abaſhed; yet before I came to the Priſon, by the Working of God, and through his Goodneſs, Fear departed. I ſaid to the Sheriff at his coming to me, What Matter have you Mr. Sheriff to charge we withal? He anſwered, You ſhall know when you come before the Maſters; and ſo taking we with him, I expected to have been carried before the Maſters, and to have heard what they could have burdened me withal: But contrary to my Expectation, I was committed forthwith to the Goal, not being called to my Anſwer, little Juſtice being ſhewed therein. But the leſs Juſtice a Man findeth at their Hands, the more Conſolation in Conſcience ſhall he find from God; for whoſoever is of the World, the World will love him.

Mr. Glover committed to the Goal, before any Cauſe was declared.

Mr. Glover weepeth for Joy in Priſon. After I came into Priſon, and had repoſed my ſelf there a while, I wept for Joy and Gladneſs, muſing much of the great Mercies of God, and (as it were) ſaying to myſelf after this Sort: O Lord, who am I on whom thou ſhouldſt beſtow this thy great Mercy, to be numbered among the Saints that ſuffer for the Goſpel ſake? And ſo beholding and conſidering on the one Side my Imperfection, Unableneſs, ſinful Miſery, and Anno 1555. Unworthineſs, and on the other Side the Greatneſs of God's Mercy, to be called to ſo high Promotion, I was, as it were, amazed and overcome for a while with Joy and Gladneſs, concluding thus with myſelf in my Heart; O Lord, thou ſheweſt Power in Weakneſs, Wiſdom in Fooliſhneſs, Mercy in Sinfulneſs; who ſhall hinder thee to chooſe where and whom thou wilt? As I have zealouſly loved the Confeſſion of thy Word, ſo I ever thought myſelf to be moſt unworthy to be Partaker of the Affliction for the ſame.

Not long after Mr. W. Brasbridge, Mr. C Phineas, Mr. N. Hopkins came unto me, perſuading with me to be diſmiſſed upon Bonds. To whom my Anſwer was (to my Remembrance) after this Sort: Foraſmuch as the Maſters have impriſoned me, having nothing to burthen me withal; if I ſhould enter into Bonds, I ſhould in ſo doing accuſe myſelf; and ſeeing they have no Matter to lay to my Charge, they may as well let me paſs without Bonds as with Bonds.

Mr. Glover counſelled to put in Bonds.

He refuſeth to enter into Bonds.

Secondly, If I ſhall enter Bonds, Covenant and Promiſe to appear, I ſhall do nothing but excuſe, colour and cloak their Wickedneſs, and indanger myſelf nevertheleſs, being bound by my Promiſe to appear. They alledged many worldly Perſuaſions to me to avoid the preſent Peril, and alſo how to avoid the Forfeiture if I brake my Promiſe. I ſaid unto them, I had caſt up my Pennyworth by God's Help. They undertook alſo to make the Bond eaſy.

And when they were ſomewhat importunate, I ſaid to Mr. Hopkins, That Liberty of Conſcience was a precious Thing; and took, as it were, a Pauſe, lifting up my Heart to God earneſtly for his Aid and Help, that I might do the Thing that might pleaſe him. And ſo when they had let their Suit fall, my Heart (methought) was wonderfully comforted. Mr. Dudley communed with me in like Manner; whom I anſwered in Effect as I did before.

Afterward debating the Matter with myſelf, theſe Conſiderations came into my Head; I have from Time to Time with good Conſcience (God I take to record) moved all ſuch as I had Conference withal to be no Dalliers in God's Matters, but to ſhew themſelves, after ſo great a Light and Knowledge, hearty, earneſt, conſtant and ſtable in ſo manifeſt a Truth, and not to give Place one Jot contrary to the ſame. Now thought I, if I ſhall withdraw myſelf, and make any ſhifts to pull my own Neck out of the Collar, I ſhall give great Offence to my weak Brethren in Chriſt, and Advantage to the Enemies to ſlander God's Word. It will be ſaid, He hath encouraged others to be earneſt and fervent, to fear no worldly Perils or Dangers, but he himſelf will give no ſuch Example.

Mr. Glover reaſoning with himſelf.

Wherefore I thought it my bounden Duty, both to God and Man, being (as it were) by the great Goodneſs of God marvellouſly called and appointed hereunto, to ſet aſide all Fear, Perils and Dangers, all worldly Reſpects and Conſiderations, and like as I had heretofore, according to the Meaſure of my ſmall Gift within the Compaſs of my Vocation and Calling, from the Bottom of my Heart unfeignedly moved, exhorted and perſuaded all that profeſs God's Word, manfully to perſiſt in the Defence of the ſame, not with Sword and Violence, but with Suffering and Loſs of Life, rather than to defile themſelves again with the whoriſh Abomination of the Romiſh Antichriſt; ſo the Hour being come, with my Fact and Example to ratify, confirm and proteſt the ſame to the Hearts of all true Believers: And to this End, by the mighty Aſſiſtance of God's Holy Spirit, I reſolved myſelf with much Peace of Conſcience, willingly to ſuſtain whatſoever the Romiſh Antichriſt ſhould do againſt me, and the rather, becauſe I underſtood the Biſhop's coming to be at Hand, and conſider'd that poor Mens Conſciences would be then ſharply aſſaulted. So I remained Priſoner in Coventry for the Space of ten or eleven Days, being never called to my Anſwer by the Maſters, contrary to the Laws of the Realm, they having neither Statute, Law, Proclamation, Letter, Warrant, nor Commandment for my Apprehenſion. They would have laid all the Matter upon the Summer; who being examined, denied it before their Faces, as one of my Friends told me, ſaying, that he had no Commandment concerning me, but for my elder Brother. God lay not their extreme Doings againſt me to their Charge at the great Day.

Mr. Glover reſolved in himſelf to abide the uttermoſt for the Goſpel's Cauſe.

The Papiſts proceed with Mr. Glover againſt the Laws of the Realm.

The ſecond Day after the Biſhop's coming to Coventry, Mr. Warren came to the Guild-hall, and ordered the chief Jaylor to carry me to the Biſhop. I laid to Mr. Warren's Charge the cruel ſeeking of my Death; and when he would have excuſed himſelf, I told him he could not wipe his Hands ſo; he was as guilty of my Blood before God, as though he had murdered me with his own Hands.

This Biſhop's Name was Dr. Banes.

And ſo he departed from me, ſaying, I needed not to fear if I would be of his Belief. God open his Eyes if it be his Will, and give him Grace to believe this, which he and all of his Inclination ſhall find (I fear) too true for their Parts; that is, that all they which cruelly, maliciouſly, and ſpitefully perſecute, moleſt, and afflict the Members of Chriſt for their Conſcience ſake, and for the true Teſtimony of Chriſt's Word, and cauſe them moſt unjuſtly to be ſlain and murdered, without ſpeedy Repentance ſhall dwell with the Devil and his Angels in the fierce Lake everlaſtingly, where they ſhall wiſh and deſire, cry and call, but in vain (as their right Companion did) to be refreſhed by them whom in this World they contemned, deſpiſed, diſdained, as Slaves, Miſers and Wretches. Luke 16.

When I came before the Biſhop in Mr. Denton's Houſe, he began with this Proteſtation; That he was my Biſhop for lack of a better, and willed me to ſubmit myſelf.

Mr. Glover brought before Banes Biſhip of Litchfield and Coventry.

I ſaid to him, I am not come to accuſe myſelf, what have you to lay to my Charge?

He asked me, whether I was learned? I anſwered, ſmally learned.

Mr. Chancellor ſtanding by, ſaid, I was a Maſter of Art.

Mr. Glover Maſter of Art in Cambridge.

Then my Lord laid to my Charge my not coming to the Church.

Here I might have dallied with him, and put him to his Proofs, foraſmuch as I had not been in his Dioceſs for a long Seaſon, neither was any of the Citizens able to prove any ſuch Matter againſt me. Notwithſtanding I anſwered him through God's merciful Help, that I neither had, nor would come to their Church as long as the Maſs was uſed there, to ſave (if I had them) five hundred Lives. I deſired him to ſhew me one Jot or Tittle Tittle in the Scriptures for the Proof and Defence of the Maſs.

He anſwered, he came to teach, and not to be taught.

I was content (I told him) to learn of him, ſo far as he was able to teach me by the Word of God.

Biſhop. Who ſhall judge the Word?

Glover. Chriſt was willing that the People ſhould judge his Doctrine by ſearching the Scriptures, and ſo was Paul; methinks you ſhould claim no further Privilege nor Prehemi-nence than they had.

The Biſhop refuſeth to be judged by the Primitive Church.

Thus ſpake Rebert Glover, offering him further, that he was content that the primitive Church next to the Apoſtles Time, ſhould judge between the Biſhop and him. But the Biſhop refuſed that. Then he ſaid he was his Biſhop, and therefore he muſt believe him.

Glover. If you ſay Black is White, my Lord, muſt I ſay ſo too, and believe the ſame becauſe you ſay it is ſo? Mr. Chancellor here noted me to be arrogant, becauſe I would not give Place to my Biſhop.

Glover. If you will be believed becauſe you be a Biſhop, why find you Fault with the People that believed Biſhop Latimer, Biſhop Ridley, and Biſhop Hooper, and the Reſidue of them that were Biſhops?

Biſhop. Becauſe they were Hereticks.

Glover. And may not you err as well as they? I expected my Lord to uſe ſome learned Arguments to perſwade me, but inſtead of that, he oppreſſed me only with his Authority. He ſaid I diſſented from the Church, and asked me where my Church was before King Edward's Time?

I deſired him to ſhew me where their Church was in Elias's Time, and what outward Shew it had in Chriſt's Time.

Biſhop. Elias's Complaint was only of the ten Tribes that fell from David's Houſe, whom he called Hereticks.

Glover. You be not able to ſhew any Prophets that the other two Tribes had at that ſame Time.

My Lord making no Anſwer to that, Mr. Rogers, one of the Maſters of the City, cometh in the mean Seaſon, taking upon him as though he would anſwer to the Text. But my Lord forthwith commanded me to be committed to ſome Tower, if they had any beſides the common Jail, ſaying, He would at the End of his Viſitation of his Dioceſs, weed out ſuch Wolves. Mr. Rogers willed him to content himſelf for that Night, till they had taken further Order for me. Even where it pleaſeth you, ſaid I to my Lord, I am content; and ſo I was returned at that Time to the common Jail again from whence I came.

On the Friday Morning, being the next Day, I had warning by one of the Priſoners to prepare myſelf to ride with my Fellow-priſoners the ſame Day to Litchfield, there to be beſtow'd at the Biſhop's Pleaſure. Which Tidings at firſt ſomething diſcouraged me, fearing leſt I ſhould by Means of my great Sickneſs, thro' hard Uſage (which I expected) have died in Priſon before I ſhould come to anſwer: But immediately with God's Word I rebuked this Infidelity in myſelf, and by the ſame corrected mine own Diſtruſt in the following Manner. What make I of God? Is not his Power as great in Litchfield as in Coventry? Doth not his Promiſe extend as well to Litchfield as to Coventry? was he not with Habbakkuk, Daniel, Miſaach, and Jeremy, in their moſt dangerous Impriſonments? he knoweth what Things we have need of. He hath numbred all the Hairs of our Heads. The Sparrow falleth not to the Ground, without our heavenly Father's Will; much more will he care for us if we be not faithleſs, whom he hath made worthy to be witneſſes of his Truth. So long as we put our truſt in him, we ſhall never be deſtitute of his Help, neither in Priſon, in Sickneſs, nor in Health, neither in Life nor in Death, neither before Kings, Biſhops, or the Devil himſelf, much leſs one of his Miniſters, ſhall be able to prevail againſt us. With ſuch Meditations I grew chearful of good Conſolation and Comfort: So that hearing one ſay that they could not provide Horſes enow for us, I ſaid, Let them carrry us in a Dung-cart for lack of Horſe, if they pleaſe, I am willing for my Part. Anno 1555.

R. Glover diſcouraged at the firſt hearing of his bemoved to Litchfield.

He is comforted by meditating on God's Promiſe.

Notwithſtanding, at the Requeſt of my Friends, I wrote to Mr. Mayor and his Brethren, briefly requiring them that I might make Anſwer here to ſuch Things as ſhould be laid to my Charge: The Contents of which Letter were theſe.

A Letter of Mr. Robert Glover to the Mayor of Coventry and his Brethren.

I Beſeech you to underſtand, that it is not unknown, as well to the Keeper of the Jail, as to the Inhabitants about me where I dwell, that I am a Man ſubject to very great Sickneſs, and have been for the Space of ſeven Years and more, ſo that it is not like that I ſhall be removed without great Peril and Danger of Life. And becauſe I was here committed to Ward by your Appointment, I would gladly here anſwer to ſuch Things as ſhould be laid to my Charge. If I may obtain this of you, I have Cauſe thankfully to acknowledge your Indifferency; if otherwiſe, I pray God it be not laid to your Charge at the great Day, where every Man ſhall have juſt Judgment without reſpect of Perſon.

Your Priſoner in the Lord, always mindful of you in my Prayers, Robert Glover.

But receiving no Anſwers to my Letters, I conjectured, that when the Biſhop and the Chancellor had ſeen them, they moved them rather to have me away, being more deſirous (as I ſuppoſe) to have had me diſpatched privily in Priſon, than to bring me openly to my Anſwer; as did in ſome Meaſure appear by the Treatment I met with at my firſt coming to Priſon.

R. Glover and his fellow Priſoners removed from Coventry to Litchfield in the Face of the open Market.

Certain Serjeants and Conſtables of Coventry being appointed to have the conveying of us to Litchfield, to be delivered there to one Jephcot the Chancellor's Man, ſent from Coventry with us for the ſame Purpoſe, we were commanded to be on Horſeback about Eleven or Twelve of the Clock on Friday, being Market-day, that we might be the more gazed at: And to ſet the Peoples Hearts more againſt us, they did proclaim a Letter concerning a Proclamation made for calling in, and diſannulling of all ſuch Books as truly expound and interpret the Scriptures. We came to Litchfield about Four of the Clock at Night, and had Leave to repoſe ourſelves for Anno 1555. Supper-time. We put in at the Sign of the Swan, where we were entertained friendly and gently.

After Supper Jephcot repaired to us, whom we intreated, that upon Sureties we might reſt ourſelves that Night, being unprovided of any Thing to help ourſelves withal in the Priſon at that preſent. He ſeemed willing at firſt, but afterwards (whether by Perſwaſion, but I rather ſuppoſe out of Policy, till he could gather a Multitude to ſtare and gaze upon us, and alſo that we ſhould provide nothing to eaſe ourſelves withal) he revoked his Promiſe, and ſo by Conſent we were carry'd to Priſon, in the Sight of a great Multitude of People. I deſired Jephcot before to execute his Office with Mercy, telling him that they ſhould have Judgment without Mercy, that ſhewed no Mercy. And this Mercy I found at his Hand.

He put me into a Priſon that ſame Night, where I continued till I was condemned, in a Place next the Dungeon, where was ſmall Room, ſtrong Building, and very cold, with little Light, and there he allowed me a Bundle of Straw inſtead of my Bed, without Chair, Form, or any Thing elſe to eaſe my ſelf withal. God of his Mercy gave me great Patience through Prayer that Night, ſo that if it had been his Pleaſure, I could have been contented to have ended my Life: But Jephcot and one Perſey the Biſhop's Man, who afterwards was my continual Keeper for the moſt Part, came to me in the Morning, to whom I ſaid, This is a great Extremity, God ſend us Patience, and no more.

Jephcot and Perſey cruel to Mr. Glover.

Then they were content that I ſhould have a Bed of my own procuring. But I was allowed no Help, neither Night nor Day, nor Company of any Man, notwithſtanding my great Sickneſs; nor yet Paper, Pen nor Ink, or Books, except my New Teſtament in Latin, and a Prayer-book which I privily ſtole in.

Talk between Mr. Glover and the Chancellor in Priſon.

Within two Days after, Mr. Chancellor and Mr. Temſey a Prebendary there, came to me in Priſon. Mr. Chancellor exhorted me to conform myſelf to my Lord and to the Church. He wiſhed no more hurt to my Soul than to his own; belike becauſe I had laid to his Charge at Coventry the ſeeking of my Blood unjuſtly and wrongfully.

The Church giveth witneſs which be the true Books and Writings of the Apoſtles: As alſo the old Synagogue of the Jews doth witneſs which be the true Books of the holy Prophets: Yet it followeth not thereby, that the Jews have Authority over the Scripture.

Now thus the ſecond Time I anſwered Mr. Chancellor to his Exhortation, That I refuſed not to be ruled by that Church, that was content to be ordered and governed by the Word of God.

Chancellor. How know you the Word of God, but by the Church?

Glover. The Church ſheweth which is the Word of God, therefore the Church is above the Word of God: This is no good Reaſon in Learning, ſaid I to Mr. Chancellor. For it is like unto this; John ſhewed the People who was Chriſt: Ergo, John was above Chriſt. Or elſe, I have a Man that knoweth not the King, and I tell him who was the King, am I therefore above the King?

Mr. Chancellor ſaid, he came not to reaſon with me, and ſo departed. And I remained for the Space of eight Days without any further Conference with any Man, until the Biſhop's coming: In which Time I gave myſelf continually to Prayer, and Meditation of the merciful Promiſes of God made unto all, without Exception of Perſon, that call upon the Name of his dear Son Jeſus Chriſt. I found in myſelf daily Amendment of Health of Body, increaſe of Peace in Conſcience, and many Conſolations from God, by the Help of his Holy Spirit, and ſometimes as it were a Taſte and Glimmering of the Life to come; all for his only Son Jeſus Chriſt's ſake: To him be all Praiſe for ever and ever.

The Enemy ceaſed not many Times ſundry Ways to aſſault me, often objecting to my Conſcience mine own Unworthineſs, through the Greatneſs of the Benefit to be counted among the Number of them that ſhould ſuffer for Chriſt, for his Goſpel ſake. Againſt him I replied with the Word of God on this Sort, What were all thoſe whom God had choſen from the Beginning, to be his Witneſſes, and to carry his Name before the World? Were they not Men, as Paul and Barnabas ſaid, as well Subject to Wickedneſs, Sin, and Imperfections, as other Men be? Even ſuch were Noah, Abraham, David, and all the reſt. Who gave firſt unto him, as Paul ſaith. And alſo ſpeaking to every Man, What haſt thou that thou receivedſt not? Likewiſe John, All have received of his Fullneſs: They were no Bringers of any Goodneſs to God, but altogether Receivers. They choſe not God firſt, but he choſe them. They loved not God firſt, but he loved them firſt. Yea, he both loved and choſe them when they were his Enemies, full of Sin and Corruption, and void of all Goodneſs. He is and will be ſtill the ſame God, as rich in Mercy, as mighty, as able, as ready, as willing to forgive Sins without reſpect of Perſons, to the World's End, of all them that call upon him. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him: To all that call upon him in Truth. God is near, he is at Hand, he is with all, with all (I ſay) and refuſeth none, excepteth none that faithfully in true Repentance call upon him, in what Hour, what Place, or what Time ſoever it be. It is no Arrogancy nor Preſumption in any Man, to burthen God (as it were) with his Promiſe, and of Duty to claim and challenge his Aid, Help and Aſſiſtance in all our Perils, Dangers and Diſtreſs, calling upon him, not in the Confidence of our own Godlineſs, but in the Truſt of his Promiſes made in Chriſt, in whom and by whom, and for whoſe ſake, whoſoever boldly approacheth to the Mercy-ſeat of the Father, is ſure to receive whatſoever is expedient or neceſſary, either for Body or Soul, in a more bountiful Manner, than he can well wiſh, or dare deſire. His Word cannot lie, Call upon me in the Day of Trouble, and I will hear thee, and thou ſhalt praiſe me.

Acts 24. Rom. 11. Rom. 4. John 1. Pſal. 145.

It is no Arrogancy to preſume upon God's Promiſe.

I anſwered the Enemy alſo on this Manner; I am a Sinner, and therefore unworthy to be a Witneſs of this Truth. What then? muſt I deny his Word, becauſe I am not worthy to profeſs it? what bring I to paſs in ſo doing, but add Sin to Sin? what is greater Sin than to deny the Truth of Chriſt's Goſpel? as Chriſt himſelf beareth Witneſs, He that is aſhamed of me or of my Words, of him I alſo will be aſhamed before my Father and all his Angels. I might alſo for the like Reaſon neglect Obedience to any of God's Commandments.

When I am provoked to pray, the Enemy may ſay to me, I am not worthy to pray, therefore I ſhall not pray: And ſo in like Manner of all the Commandments, I ſhall not forbear ſwearing, ſtealing, or murdering, becauſe I am not worthy to keep any Commandment of God. Theſe be the Deluſions of the Devil, and Satan's Suggeſtions, which muſt be overcome by continual Prayer, and with the Word of God apply'd according to the Meaſure of every Man's Giſt, againſt all Aſſaults of the Devil.

At the Biſhop's firſt coming to Litchfield, after mine Impriſonment, I was called into a By-chamber next to my Priſon, to my Lord. Before whom when I came, and ſaw none but his Officers, Chaplains and Servants, except it were an old Prieſt, I was partly amaz'd, and lifted up my Heart to God for his merciful Help and Aſſiſtance.

My Lord asked me how I liked my Impriſonment; I gave him no Anſwer touching that Queſtion. He proceeded to perſwade me to be a Member of his Church, which had continued ſo many Years. As for your Church (ſaid he to me) it was not known but lately in King Edward's Time.

* The true Church is always built upon the Doctrine of the Apoſtles: which tho' it appear not always alike in outward Sight, the Fault is in the Time, not in the Church. Times did alter, and with the Times the outward Face of the Church may alter, ſometimes appearing more, ſometimes leſs, ſometimes very little, ſometimes nothing at all, according as the Perſecution is. Nevertheleſs, the Truth of the Church abideth always one. Neither doth it go by Number of Men, but by Soundneſs of Truth. Many agreeing in one maketh an Unity: but the Verity of the Word maketh the Church, whether it be in few or many.

I profeſs myſelf to be a Member of that Church (ſaid I) that is built * upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt being the Head Corner-ſtone; and ſo alledged the Place of St. Paul to the Epheſians. And this Church hath been from the Beginning (ſaid I) tho' it bear no glorious Shew before the World, being ever, for the moſt part, under the Croſs and Affliction, contemned, deſpiſed, and perſecuted; my Lord contended on the other Side, that they were the Church.

So cried all the Clergy (ſaid I) againſt the Prophets of Jeruſalem, ſaying, The Church of the Lord, the Church of the Lord. And always when I was about to ſpeak any thing, my Lord cried, Hold thy Peace, I command thee by the Virtue of thy Obedience to hold thy Peace, calling me a proud arrogant Heretick.

I deſired my Lord to lay ſomething to my Charge in particular, and then to convince me with ſome Scriptures and good Learning.

Then my Lord began to move certain Queſtions. I refuſed to anſwer him in Corners, requiring that I might make my Anſwer openly. He ſaid, I ſhould anſwer him there. I ſtood with him upon that Point till he ſaid I ſhould go to Priſon again, and there have neither Meat nor Drink till I had anſwered him.

Then I lifted up my Heart to God, that I might ſtand and agree with the Doctrine of his moſt holy Word.

The firſt Queſtion was this, How many Sacraments Chriſt inſtituted to be uſed in the Church?

The Sacrament of Baptiſm, ſaid I, and the Sacrament that he inſtituted at his laſt Supper.

No more, ſaid he.

Then ſaid I, To all thoſe that declare a true and unfeigned Repentance, a ſure Hope, Truſt and Confidence in the Death of Chriſt, to ſuch Miniſters (I grant) have Authority to pronounce by the Power of God's Word the Remiſſion of Sins.

Here interrupting me, he would needs bear me in Hand that I called this a Sacrament. I would not greatly concern with him in that Point, becauſe the Matter was of no great Weight or Importance; although he in ſo doing did me wrong, for I called it not a Sacrament.

He asked me further, Whether I allowed their Confeſſion?

I anſwered, No.

Then the Biſhop would know my Mind what I thought of the Preſence of Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament.

Anno 1555.

I anſwered, That their Maſs was neither Sacrifice nor Sacrament, becauſe (ſaid I) you have taken away the true Inſtitution, which when you reſtore again, I will tell you my Judgment concerning Chriſt's Body in the Sacrament.

And thus much did this worthy Martyr leave behind him in his own Hand-writing, concerning the Manner of his Uſage in Priſon, and alſo of his Conflicts with the Biſhop and his Chancellor. More Examinations he had (no doubt) with the Biſhop in the publick Conſiſtory, when he was brought forth to be condemned, which he would alſo have left unto us, if either Length of Life, or Leiſure of Time, or Haſte of Execution, had permitted him to finiſh what he intended; but by reaſon of the Writ of his Burning being come down from London, want of Time did neither ſerve him ſo to do, neither yet could I get the Records of his laſt Examination, whereſoever they are become.

Only this which I could learn by the Relation of one Auguſtine Bernher, a Miniſter, and a familiar Friend of his, concerning the going to his Death, I can report; That the ſaid Mr. Robert Glover, after he was condemned by the Biſhop, and was now at a Point to be delivered out of this World, it ſo happened, that two or three Days before, his Heart being lumpiſh, and deſolate of all ſpiritual Conſolation, felt in himſelf no Aptneſs or Willingneſs, but rather a Heavineſs and Dullneſs of Spirit, full of much Diſcomfort to bear the bitter Croſs of Martyrdom ready to be laid upon him.

Mr. Glover deſtitute for a Time of the Lord's Comfort.

Whereupon fearing in himſelf leſt the Lord had utterly withdrawn his wonted Favour from him, made his Moan to this Auguſtine his Friend abovementioned, ſignifying unto him how earneſtly he had prayed Day and Night unto the Lord, and yet could receive no Motion nor Senſe of any Comfort from him.

Unto whom the ſaid Auguſtine anſwering again, deſired him patiently to wait the Lord's Pleaſure, and howſoever his preſent Feeling was, yet ſeeing his Cauſe was juſt and true, he exhorted him conſtantly to ſtick to the ſame, and to play the Man, nothing miſdoubting but the Lord in his good Time would viſit him, and ſatisfy his Deſire with Plenty of Conſolation: Whereof (he ſaid) he was right certain and ſure; and therefore deſired him whenſoever any ſuch Feeling of God's heavenly Mercies ſhould begin to touch his Heart, that then he ſhould ſhew ſome Signification thereof, whereby he might witneſs with him the ſame, and ſo departed from him.

The Lord for a Time may withdraw his Comforts, but at length he viſiteth his Servants.

The next Day, when the Time came of his Martyrdom, as he was going to the Place, and was come within Sight of the Stake, (although all the Night before praying for Strength and Courage he could feel none) ſuddenly he was ſo mightily repleniſhed with God's holy Comfort and heavenly Joys, that he cried out, clapping his Hands to Auſtin, and ſaying theſe Words, Auſtin, He is come, He is come, &c. and that with ſuch Joy and Alacrity, as one ſeeming rather to be riſen from ſome deadly Danger to Liberty of Life, than as one paſſing out of the World by any Pains of Death. Such was the Change of the marvellous Working of the Lord's Hand upon that good Man.

Mr. Glover again receiveth Comfort from the Lord.

Anno 1555.

Cornelius Bungey, Fellow-Martyr with Mr. Robert Glover.

IN the ſame Fire with Mr. Glover, Cornelius Bungey of Coventry was likewiſe burnt, who was condemned by the ſaid Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield. As concerning the Articles which were objected to him, the Effect thereof was this.

Articles objected againſt Mr. Bungey.

Firſt, It was objected againſt him, that theſe three Years laſt, in the City of Coventry and Litchfield, and Places thereabout, he did hold, maintain, argue and teach, that the Prieſt hath no Power here to abſolve any Sinner from his Sins.

Secondly, That by Baptiſm Sins are not waſhed away, becauſe he ſaid that the Waſhing of the Fleſh purgeth the Fleſh outwardly, and not the Soul.

Thirdly, That there be in the Church only two Sacraments, that is, Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper.

Fourthly, That in the Sacrament of the popiſh Altar, was not the real Body and Blood of Chriſt, but the Subſtance of Bread and Wine there remaining ſtill, becauſe St. Paul calleth it Bread and Wine, &c.

Fifthly, That he within the Compaſs of the ſaid Years and Time, did hold, maintain, and defend, that the Pope is not the Head of the viſible Church here on Earth, &c.

Sixthly, That he was of the Dioceſe and Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, &c.

Seventhly, That the Premiſſes are true, maniſeſt and notorious, and that upon the ſame there hath been and is a publick Voice and Fame, as well in the Places above rehearſed, as in other Quarters alſo about, &c.

His Anſwers to the Articles.

To which Articles he anſwered again:

To the Firſt he granted, and to every Part thereof, meaning after the popiſh Manner of Abſolution.

To the Second he granted firſt, after revoked the ſame.

To the Third alſo he granted, adding withal, that in Scripture there is no more contained.

To the Fourth touching the Sacrament, he granted, and to every Part thereof.

To the Fifth, concerning the Pope likewiſe.

Alſo to the ſixth he granted, and likewiſe to the Seventh.

Upon theſe Articles and his Anſwers to the ſame, the ſaid Radulph the Biſhop read the Sentence, and ſo committed him alſo after Condemnation of Mr. Robert Glover, to the Secular Power.

Thus this aforeſaid Cornelius, falſly condemned by the Biſhop beforementioned, ſuffered at the ſame Stake with the Chriſtian Martyr Mr. Robert Glover at Coventry, about the twentieth Day of September.

The Hiſtory of John Glover and William Glover, who were excommunicated after their Death and buried in the Fields.

JOHN and William Glover, the two Brothers of Robert Glover the Martyr, ought not to be omitted in this Hiſtory, although they were not called to finiſh their Courſe in Fire, as their Brother and other Martyrs were; yet they were caſt out of the Church, and excommunicated even after they were dead, and deny'd chriſtian Burial.

And firſt concerning Mr. John Glover the eldeſt Brother, what inward Storms and Agonies he ſuſtained by the ghoſtly Enemy, ye have partly heard before deſcribed: Now what his bodily Enemies wrought againſt him remaineth to be declared. Whoſe Rage and Malice, altho' God reſtrained, that they could little prevail againſt him ſo long as his Life endured, yet after his Deceaſe, having Power upon him, what they did ye ſhall now underſtand.

After the Martyrdom of Mr. Robert Glover, although John Glover, ſeeing his Brother to be apprehended for him, had ſmall Joy of his Life for the great Sorrow of his Heart, wherewith he was ſore oppreſſed, and would gladly have put himſelf in his Brother's ſtead, if his Friends had not otherwiſe perſuaded him, ſhewing that in ſo doing he might entangle himſelf, but could do his Brother no good. He thus remained in great Care and Vexation, yet notwithſtanding endured as well as he could, till at length about the latter End of Queen Mary, there was a new Search made for the ſaid John Glover.

A new Search made for J. Glover.

Whereupon the Sheriffs, with their under-Officers and Servants, being ſent to ſeek him, came into his Houſe where he and his Wife were. It chanced as he was in the Chamber by himſelf, the Officers burſting into the Houſe, and ſearching other Rooms, came to the Chamber-door where John Glover was, who being within, and holding the Latch ſoftly with his Hand, perceived and heard the Officers buſtling about the Door, amongſt whom one of the ſaid Officers having the String in his Hand, was ready to draw and pluck at the ſame.

In the mean Time another coming by, (whoſe Voice he heard and knew) bade them come away, ſaying they had been there before. Whereupon they departing thence, went to ſearch other Corners of the Houſe, where they found Agnes Glover his Wife, who being carried to Litchfield, and there examined before the Biſhop, at length after much ado, was conſtrained to give Place to their Tyranny. John Glover in the mean Time, partly for care of his Wife, partly through Cold taken in the Woods where he did lie, took an Ague, whereupon not long after he left his Life, which the cruel Papiſts ſo long had ſought for.

Agnes Glover Wife to John Glover, apprehended.

Thus by the mighty Protection of the Almighty Lord, how John Glover was deliver'd and defended from the Hands of the perſecuting Enemies during all the Time of his Life, ye have heard. Now what befel after his Death, both

both to him and his Brother William, is worthy to be remembred. Who after he was Dead, and buried in the Church-yard without Prieſt or Clerk, Dr. Dracot then Chancellor, ſix Weeks after, ſent for the Parſon of the Town, and demanded how it happened that he was there buried. The Parſon anſwered that he was then ſick, and knew not of it. Then the Chancellor commanded the Parſon to go Home, and to cauſe the Body of the ſaid John Glover to be taken up, and to be caſt over the Wall into the High-way: The Parſon again anſwered, that he had been ſix Weeks in the Earth, and ſo ſmelled, that none were able to endure it. Well, quoth Dr. Dracot, then take this Bill, and pronounce him in the Pulpit a damned Soul, and a Twelvemonth after take up his Bones (for then the Fleſh will be conſumed) and caſt them over the Wall, that the Carts and Horſes may tread upon them, and then I will come and hallow again that Place in the Church-yard where he was buried. Recorded by the Parſon of the Town, who told the ſame to Hugh Burrows, dwelling at Fynden in Darbyſhire, and to Mr. Robert Glover's Wife, by whoſe credible Information we received the ſame.

Dr. Dracot not ſuffering John Glover to be buried in the Church-yard.

Not much unlike Uſage was practiſed alſo by theſe catholick Children of the Mother Church, upon the Body of William the third Brother: Whom after it had pleaſed Almighty God about the ſame Seaſon to call out of this Vale of Miſery, the well-diſpoſed People of the Town of Weme in Shropſhire, where he died, brought the Body into the Pariſh Church, intending there to have it buried. But one Bernard being then Curate of the ſaid Church (and yet is, as I hear ſay, to this Day) to ſtop the Burial thereof rode to the Biſhop named Ralph Baine, to certify him of the Matter, and to have his Advice therein. In the mean Time the Body lying there a whole Day, in the Night-time one Richard Morice a Taylor, would have interred him. But then came John Thorlyne of Weme with ſome others, and would not ſuffer the Body to be buried; expreſſing to us the contrary Examples of good Tobit; for as he was religious in burying the Dead, ſo this Man putteth Religion in not burying the Dead; ſo that after he had lain there two Days and one Night, the aforeſaid Bernard the Curate came with the Biſhop's Letter, the Contents of which Letter being copied out Word for Word, here followeth.

The Manner of handling the Body of William Glover after his Death.

A Copy of the Biſhop's Letter written to the Pariſh of Weme.

UNderſtanding that one Glover an Heretick is dead in the Pariſh of Weme, which Glover hath all the Time of my being in this Country, been known for a Rebel againſt our holy Faith and Religion, a Contemner of the Holy Sacraments and Ceremonies uſed in the holy Church, and hath ſeparated himſelf from the Holy Communion of all good chriſtian Men, and never required to be reconciled to our Mother Holy Church, nor in his laſt Days did call for his ghoſtly Father, but died without all Rites belonging to a chriſtian Man; I thought it good not only to command the Curate of Weme, that he ſhould not be buried in a chriſtian Man's Burial, but alſo will and command all the Pariſh of Weme, that no Man procure, help, nor ſpeak to have him buried in holy Ground: But I do charge and command the Church-wardens of Weme in ſpecial, and all the Pariſh of the ſame, that they aſſiſt the ſaid Curate in defending and hindering, and procuring that he be not buried in the Church, or within the Walls of the Church-yard: And likewiſe I charge thoſe that brought the Body to the Place, to carry it away again, and that at their Charge, as they will anſwer at their Peril. At Eccleſch this ſixth of September 1558. Anno 1555.

By your Ordinary, Radulph,

Coventry and Litchfield.

By virtue of this aforeſaid Letter, ſo it fell out, that they who brought the Corps thither, were obliged to carry it back again at their own Charges. But as the Body was corrupted, and ſmelt ſo ſtrong, that no Man could well come near it, they were forced to draw it with Horſes into a Broom-field, and there he was buried. The dead Corpſe of W. Glover dragged into a Broom-field by Horſes.

The like Example of charitable Affection in theſe catholick Churchmen, is alſo to be ſeen and noted in burying one Edward Burton Eſq; who in the ſame Dioceſs of Cheſter, departing out of this World the very Day before Queen Elizabeth was crowned, required of his Friends, as they would anſwer for it, that his Body ſhould be buried in his Pariſh Church (which was St. Chads in Shrewsbury) ſo that no Maſs-monger ſhould be preſent thereat. Which Thing being declared to the Curate of that Pariſh, named Sir John Marſhall, and the Body being withal brought to the Burial, upon the ſame Day when the Queen was crowned, the Curate being therewith offended, ſaid plainly, that he ſhould not be bury'd in the Church there. Whereunto one of the Friends of the Deceas'd, named George Torpelley, anſwering again, ſaid, That God would judge him in the laſt Day, &c. Then ſaid the Prieſt, Judge God or Devil the Body ſhall not come there. And ſo they buried him in his own Garden, where he is, no doubt, as near the Kingdom of Heaven, as if he had been bury'd in the midſt of the Church. Ed. Burton Eſquire, not ſuffered to have chriſtian Burial, on the ſame Day that Queen Elizabeth was crowned.

Moreover, in the ſaid County of Salop, I find that one Oliver Richardine of the Pariſh of Whitchurch, was burnt in Hartford-weſt, Sir John Ygone being Sheriff the ſame Time, which ſeemeth to be about the laſt Year of King Henry the Eighth. Whoſe Name, as it was not mention'd before, I thought here to give ſome little touch of him, having now in hand to ſpeak of the Perſecution within the Dioceſs of Coventry and Litchfield. Oliver Richardine, Martyr.

The Martyrdom of William Wolſey and Robert Pygot, Painter.

WILLIAM WOLSEY and Robert Pygot, both Inhabitants of the Town of Wiſbich, were the next condemned after the Suffering of Robert Glover and Cornelius Bungey. Theſe two bleſſed Martyrs were judged and condemned at Ely, by John Fuller the Biſhop's Chancellor of Ely, Dr. Shaxtone his Suffragan, Robert Stewart Dean of Ely, John Chriſtopherſon Dean of Norwich, October 9, 1555. The ſaid William Wolſey, who was then a Conſtable, was brought into Trouble by the Procurement of one Richard Everard Gentleman, a Juſtice appointed for thoſe Days, who extremely tremely handled the said William Wolsey, and causing him to put in Sureties for his good Behaviour and Appearance at the next general Sessions held within the Isle of Ely. Being called again at the next Sessions, he was still constrained to put in new Sureties, which at length he refused to do, and so was commanded to Jail, at the Assize held at Ely in Lent.

Anno 1555.

W. Wolsey commanded to the Jail.

In the Easter Week following, Dr. Fuller, the Chancellor, with Christopherson, and one Dr. Yong, came to confer with him, who laid earnestly to his Charge that he was out of the catholick Faith, willing him to meddle no further with the Scriptures, than it did become such Lay-men as he was, to do. The said William Wolsey standing still a great while, suffering them to say their Pleasure, at last he answered in this wise; Good Mr. Doctor, What did our Saviour Christ mean, when he spake these Words written in the 23d Chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, Wo be unto you Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites; for ye shut up the Kingdom of Heaven against Men: For ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering, to go in.

Dr. Fuller, Christopherson, and Dr. Yong, come to confer with Wolsey.

Wolsey putteth a Question to the Doctors.

Yea, saith Dr. Fuller, you must understand, that Christ spake to the Scribes and Pharisees.

Nay, Mr. Doctor, (said Wolsey) Christ spake even to you, and your Fellows here present, and to all others such as you be.

Away Mr. Doctor, said Christopherson, for you can do no good with this Man. Yet saith Dr. Fuller, I will leave thee a Book to read, I promise thee of a learned Man's Doing, that is to say, of Dr. Watson's doing (who was then Bishop of Lincoln).

Wolsey receiving the same Book, did diligently read it over, which in many Places did manifestly appear contrary to the known Truth of God's Word. At length, a Fortnight or three Weeks following, the said Dr. Fuller resorting again to the Prison to confer with the said Wolsey, asked him how he liked the said Book, (thinking that he had won him by the reading of the same) who answered him and said, Sir, I like the Book no otherwise than I thought before I should find it. Whereupon the Chancellor taking his Book, departed home.

At Night when Dr. Fuller came to his Chamber to look on it, he found in many Places, contrary to his Mind, the Book raised with a Pen by the said Wolsey. Which he seeing, and being vexed therewith, said, O this is an obstinate Heretick, and hath quite marred my Book.

The Chancellor giveth Wolsey leave to depart.

Then the Assizes to be held at Wisbich drawing nigh, Dr. Fuller cometh again to the said Wolsey, and spake unto him on this Manner: Thou dost much trouble my Conscience, wherefore I pray thee depart, and rule thy Tongue, so that I hear no more Complaint of thee, and come to the Church when thou wilt, and if thou be complained upon, so far as I may, I promise thee I will not hear of it.

Mr. Doctor, said Wolsey, I was brought hither by a Law, and by a Law I will be deliver'd.

Wolsey laid in the Castle of Wisbich.

Then being brought to the Sessions before named, Wolsey was laid in the Castle at Wisbich, he and all his Friends thinking, that he should have suffered there at that present Time, but it proved otherwise.

Rob. Pygot Painter, presented for not coming to the Church.

Then Robert Pygot the Painter, being at Liberty, was there presented by some evil disposed Persons (sworn Men as they called them) for not coming to the Church.

Talk between Sir Clement Higham Judge, and R. Pygot.

The said Pygot being called in the Sessions, would not absent himself, but there did plainly appear before Sir Clement Hygham being Judge, who said unto him; Ah, are you the Holy Father the Painter? How chance ye came not to the Church? Sir, quoth the Painter, I am not out of the Church, I trust in God.

No Sir, said the Judge, this is no Church, this is a Hall. Yea Sir, said Pygot, I know very well it is a Hall: But he that is in the true Faith of Jesus Christ, is never absent, but present in the Church of God.

Ah Sirrah, said the Judge, you are too high learned for me to talk withal, wherefore I will send you to them that are better learned than I, straightways commanding him to the Jail where Wolsey lay. So the Sessions being broke up and ended, the said Wolsey and Pygot were carried again to Ely in Prison, where they both remain'd till the Day of their Death.

R. Pygot brought to the Jail where W. Wolsey lay.

In the mean Time some of their Neighbours of Wisbich being at Ely, came to see how they did. There came thither also a Chaplain of Bishop Goodrick's, a Frenchman born, one Peter Valentius, who said to the said Wolsey and Pygot: My Brethren, according to my Office I am come to talk with you, for I have have been Amner here these twenty Years and above. Wherefore I must desire you, my Brethren, to take it in good Part that I am come to talk with you, I promise you not to pull you from your Faith. But I both require and desire in the Name of Jesus Christ, that you stand to the Truth of the Gospel and Word, and I beseech the Almighty God, for his Son Jesus Christ's sake, to preserve both you and me in the same unto the End. For I know not myself (my Brethren) how soon I shall be at the same Point that you are. Thus with many other like Words he made an End, causing all that were there present to water their Cheeks, contrary to the Expectation they all had of him. God be praised therefore.

Then within a short Time after, Pygot and Wolsey were called to Judgment about the 9th Day of October, before Dr. Fuller then Chancellor, with old Dr. Shaxton, Christopherson, and others in Commission, who laid earnestly to their Charge for their Belief in divers Articles, but especially of the Sacrament of the Altar. Whereunto their Answer was, That the Sacrament of the Altar was an Idol, and that the natural Body and Blood of Christ was not present really in the said Sacrament; and to this Opinion they said they would stick, perfectly believing the same to be no Heresy that they had affirmed, but the very Truth, whereunto they would stand. Then the Doctors said, that they were out of the catholick Faith.

The Words of Nicholas Shaxton to the Martyrs.

Then Dr. Shaxton said unto them, Good Brethren, remember yourselves, and become new Men, for I myself was in this fond Opinion that you are now in, but I am now become a new Man.

Wolsey's Answer to Shaxton.

Ah, said Wolsey, are you become a new Man? Wo be to thee thou wicked new Man, for God shall justly judge thee.

Dr. Fuller then spake, saying, This Wolsey is an obstinate Fellow, and one that I could never do good upon. But as for the Painter, he is a Man quiet and indifferent (as far as I perceive) ceive) and is soon reformed, and may very well be delivered for any ill Opinion I find in him.

Mr. Christopherson writeth what he would have Pygot confess of the Sacrament.

Then Christopherson called for Pen and Ink, and wrote these Words following; I Robert Pygot do believe, that after the Words of Consecration spoken by the Priest, there remaineth no more Bread and Wine, but the very Body and Blood of Christ really and substantially, the self-same that was born of the Virgin Mary: And reading it to the Painter, he said thus, Dost thou believe all this according as it is written?

Pygot refuseth to subscribe to Christopherson's Faith.

No, Sir, said the Painter, that is your Faith, and not mine.

Christopher. Lo, Dr. Fuller, you would have let this Fellow go, he is as much an Heretick as the other. And so immediately Judgment was given upon them to die. Which done, after the Sentence read, they were sent again to Prison, where they lay till the Day of their Death. On which Day, one Peacock, a Batchelor of Divinity, being appointed to preach, took his Text out of the first Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, Chap. 5. of one that had lived inordinately by abusing his Father's Wife; likening the said Pygot and Wolsey to the same Man, oftentimes saying, that such Members must be cut off from the Congregation, most maliciously reporting the said Wolsey to be clean out of the Faith, and in many Places quite denying the Scriptures.

So his Sermon being ended, the aforesaid Pygot and Wolsey were brought to the Place of Execution, and so bound to the Stake with a Chain, thither came one Sir Richard Collinson a Priest, at that Time destitute of any abiding Place or settled Benefice, who said unto Wolsey; Brother Wolsey, the Preacher hath openly reported in his Sermon this Day, that you are quite out of the catholick Faith, and deny Baptism, and that you do err in the Holy Scripture; wherefore I beseech you for the certifying of my Conscience, with others here present, that you declare in what Place of the Scripture you do err or find Fault.

Wolsey. I take the eternal and everlasting God to witness, that I do err in no Part or Point of God's Book, the Holy Bible, but hold and believe in the same to be most firm and sound Doctrine in all Points most worthy for my Salvation, and for all other Christians to the End of the World. Whatsoever mine Adversaries report of me, God forgive them therefore. With that came one to the Fire with a great Sheet full of Books to burn, like as they had been New Testaments. O, said Wolsey, give me one of them, and Pygot desired another, both of them clapping them close to their Breasts, saying the 106th Psalm, desiring all the People to say Amen, and so received the Fire most thankfully. Witnesses and Informers hereof were,

Books burnt with Wolsey and Pygot.

Robert Scortred, Robert Crane, Edward Story, Robert Kendall, Richard Best, &c.

Concerning the Story of William Wolsey, I received moreover from the University of Cambridge, by a credible Person, and my faithful Friend William Fulke, this Relation which I thought in this Place not improper to be notify'd to the Reader in Order and Form as followeth.

The Natures of Wolsey and Pygot described.

There were two godly Martyrs burnt at Ely, the one named Wolsey, the other Pygot. In these two appeared a different Disposition of Spirit. Pygot was mild, humble, and modest, promising that he would be conformable to his Persecutors, if they could persuade him by the Scripture. Wolsey was stout, strong, and vehement, as one having the Fulness of the Spirit, and detested all their Doings, as of whom he was sure to receive nothing but Cruelty and Tyranny. He was wonderfully jealous over his Companion, fearing lest his gentle Nature would have been overcome by the flattering Enticements of the World; and therefore the same Day that they were burnt, when they would have talked with him alone, he pulled him away from them almost by Force. He was so desirous to glorify God with his Suffering, that being wonderful sore tormented in the Prison with the Tooth-ach, he feared nothing more than that he should depart before the Day of Execution (which he called his glad Day) were come. Anno 1555.

This Wolsey being in Prison at Ely, was visited by Thomas Hodilo Brewer in Ely. To him he delivered certain Money to be distributed (as he appointed) part to his Wife, and part to his Kinsfolks and Friends, and especially six Shillings and Eight-pence to be delivered to one Richard Denton a Smith, dwelling at Wells in Cambridgeshire, within the Jurisdiction of the Isle of Ely, with his Commendation, that he marvelled that he tarried so long behind him, seeing that he was the first that deliver'd him the Book of Scripture into his Hand, and told him that it was the Truth, desiring him to make haste after as fast as he could.

Richard Denton first Converter of Wolsey.

This Thomas Hodilo, both to avoid the Danger of the Time, and to have a Witness of his Doings herein, delivered the said Sum of Money to one Mr. Lawrence, a Preacher in Essex (who then resorted often to his House) to be distributed as Wolsey had appointed; which Thing he performed, riding from Place to Place. And when this six Shillings and Eight-pence was delivered to Richard Denton, with the Commendation aforesaid: His Answer was this, I confess it is true, but, alas; I cannot burn. This was almost one whole Year after Wolsey was burnt. But he that could not burn for the Cause of Christ, was afterwards burnt against his Will, even after Christ had given Peace to his Church. For in the Year of our Lord 1564, on Tuesday being the 18th Day of April, his House was set on Fire, and he going to save his Goods, perish'd in the Flames, with two others that were in the same House.

Money sent by Wolsey to Denton. Wolsey exhorting R. Denton to persist in the Truth. Denton afraid of burning. R. Denton burned in his own House, who before would not burn for Christ, April 18, 1564.

Witnessed by Thomas Hodilo and Will. Fulke.

Not much unlike this, was the Example of Mr. West, Chaplain to Bishop Ridley, who refusing to die in the Cause of Christ with his Master, said Mass against his Conscience, and died soon after.

The History of Dr. Nicholas Ridley and Mr. Hugh Latimer, both Bishops, Preachers, and Martyrs.

ON the 16th of October 1555. (the Day on which William Wolsey and Thomas Pygot suffered at Ely) those two famous and singular Captains, the principal Pillars of Christ's Church, Dr. Nicholas Ridley Bishop of London, and Mr. Hugh Latimer, sometime Bishop of Worcester

Anno 1555. ceſter were cruelly burnt in one Fire at Oxford. Men, ever memorable for their Piety, Learning, and incomparable Ornaments and Gifts of Grace, joined with no leſs commendable Sincerity of Life, as the whole Realm can ſufficiently teſtify; ſo it needeth not greatly that we ſhould ſtand exactly at this Time in ſetting forth a full Deſcription of the ſame, but only to comprehend briefly in a few Words the Order of their Lives, ſo much as neceſſarily ſerveth to the due Inſtruction of the Reader, and maketh to the uſe of this preſent Hiſtory, in declaring firſt their Beginning and bringing up, then their Studies and Acts in the Univerſity, their Preferments alſo by their Studies to higher Dignity, at laſt their Care and Trouble in ſetting forth Religion, and in maintaining the ſame to the Shedding of their Blood. And firſt to begin with the Life of Dr. Ridley, whoſe Story here enſueth.

Among many other worthy Hiſtories and notable Acts of ſuch as of late Days have been troubled, murdered and martyred for the true Goſpel of Chriſt in Queen Mary's Reign, the tragical Story and Life of Dr. Ridley, I thought good to commend to Chronicle, and leave to perpetual Memory; beſeeching thee (gentle Reader) with Care and Study well to peruſe, diligently to conſider, and deeply to print the ſame in thy Breaſt, ſeeing him to be a Man beautified with ſuch excellent Qualities, ſo ghoſtly inſpired, and godly learned, and now written doubtleſs in the Book of Life, with the bleſſed Saints of the Almighty, crowned and enthroned amongſt the glorious Company of Martyrs. Firſt, deſcending of a Stock right worſhipful, he was born in the County of Northumberland, who being a Child learned his Grammar with great Dexterity in Newcaſtle, and was removed from thence to the Univerſity of Cambridge, where he in ſhort Time became ſo famous, that for his ſingular Aptneſs he was called to higher Functions and Offices of the Univerſity, by Degrees attaining thereunto, and was called to be Head of Pembroke-Hall, and there made Doctor of Divinity. After this, departing from thence, he travelled to Paris, and at his Return was made Chaplain to King Henry the Eighth, and promoted afterwards by him to the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter, and from thence tranſlated to the See and Biſhoprick of London in King Edward's Days.

Dr. Nicholas Ridley born in Northumberland, and educated at Newcaſtle; made Maſter of Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge. Is made Doctor of Divinity. Is made Chaplain to King Henry. Is made Biſhop of Rocheſter, and afterwards Biſhop of London.

In which Calling and Offices he ſo diligently occupied himſelf by preaching and teaching the true and wholeſome Doctrine of Chriſt, that no good Child was more ſingularly loved by his dear Parents, than he by his Flock and Dioceſs. Every Holiday and Sunday he preached in ſome one Place or other, except he were otherwiſe hindered by weighty Affairs and Buſineſs, to whoſe Sermons the People reſorted, ſwarming about him like Bees, and coveting the ſweet Flowers and wholſome Juice of the fruitful Doctrine, which he did not only preach, but ſhewed the ſame by his Life, as a glittering Lanthorn to the Eyes and Senſes of the Blind, in ſuch pure Order and Chaſtity of Life (declining from evil Deſires and Concupiſcences) that even his very Enemies could not reprove him in any one Jot thereof.

The ſucceſsful Diligence of Bp. Ridley in preaching the Goſpel.

Beſides this, he was very well learned, his Memory was great, and he of ſuch Reading withal, that of Right he deſerved to be compared to the beſt of this our Age, as his notable Works, pithy Sermons, and his ſundry Diſputations in both the Univerſities can well teſtify, and alſo his very Adverſaries will ſay the ſame themſelves.

Beſides all this, he was wiſe of Counſel, deep of Wit, and very politick in all his Doings. How merciful and careful he was to reduce the obſtinate Papiſts from their erroneous Opinions, and by Gentleneſs to win them to the Truth, his gentle Ordering, and courteous Handling of Dr. Heath late Archbiſhop of York, being Priſoner with him in King Edward's Time in his Houſe one Year, ſufficiently declareth. In fine, he was ſuch a Prelate, and in all Points ſo good, pious and ſpiritual a Man, that England may juſtly rue the Loſs of ſo worthy a Treaſure. And thus much concerning theſe publick Matters.

Now I will ſpeak ſomething further particularly of his Perſon and Conditions. He was a Man right comely and well proportioned in all Points, both in Complexion and Lineaments of the Body. He took all Things in good Part, bearing no Malice nor Rancour from his Heart, but ſtraightways forgetting all Injuries and Offences done againſt him. He was very kind and natural to his Kinsfolk, and yet not bearing with them any otherwiſe than Right would require, giving them always for a general Rule, yea to his own Brother and Siſter, that they doing Evil ſhould ſeek or look for nothing at his Hand, but ſhould be as Strangers and Aliens to him; and they to be his Brother and Siſter, who uſed Honeſty and a godly Trade of Life.

Bp. Ridley tender to his Kindred, yet no otherwiſe than Truth and Right required.

He uſed all kinds of Ways to mortify himſelf, and was much given to Prayer and Contemplation: For duly every Morning, as ſoon as his Apparel was put upon him, he went forthwith to his Bed-chamber, and there upon his Knees prayed the Space of half an Hour; which being done, immediately he went to his Study (if no other Buſineſs came to interrupt him) where he continued till Ten of the Clock, and then came to the common Prayer, daily uſed in his Houſe. The Prayers being done, he went to Dinner; where he uſed little Talk, except otherwiſe occaſion had been miniſtred, and then it was ſober, diſcreet and wiſe, and ſometimes merry, as Cauſe required.

The Order of his Study and Diet.

The Dinner done, which was not very long, he uſed to ſit an Hour or thereabouts talking, or playing at the Cheſs: That done, he returned to his Study, and there would continue, except Suiters, or Buſineſs abroad were Occaſion of the contrary, until Five of the Clock at Night, and then would come to common Prayer, as in the Forenoon; which being finiſhed, he went to Supper, behaving himſelf there as at his Dinner before. After Supper recreating himſelf in playing at Cheſs the Space of an Hour, he would then return again to his Study; continuing there till Eleven of the Clock at Night, which was his common Hour of going to Bed, then ſaying his Prayers upon his Knees as in the Morning when he roſe. Being at his Manour of Fulham, as ſometimes he uſed to be, he read daily a Lecture to his Family at the common Prayer, beginning at the Acts of the Apoſtles, and ſo going through all the Epiſtles of St. Paul, giving to every Man that could read a New Teſtament, hiring them beſides with Money to learn by Heart certain principal Chapters, but eſpecially the 13th Chapter of the Acts of the Apoſtles, reading alſo unto his Houſhold oftentimes the 101 Pſalm, being marvellous careful over his Family, that they might be a Spectacle of all Virtue and Honeſty to others. To be ſhort, as he was godly and virtuous himſelf, ſo nothing but Virtue and Godlineſs reigned in his Houſe, feeding them with the Food of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

The careful Diligence of Biſhop Ridley in inſtructing his Family.

Now remaineth a Word or two to be declared of his gentle Nature and kind Behaviour to old Mrs. Bonner, Mother to Dr. Bonner ſometime Biſhop of London, which I thought good to mention, as well for the rare Clemency of Dr. Ridley, as the unworthy Inhumanity and ungrateful Diſpoſition again of Dr. Bonner. Biſhop Ridley being at his Manour of Fulham, always ſent for the ſaid Mrs. Bonner, dwelling in a Houſe adjoining to his Houſe, to Dinner and Supper, with one Mrs. Mungey, Bonner's Siſter, ſaying; Go for my Mother Bonner; who coming, was always placed in the Chair at the Head of the Table, being ſo gently treated, welcomed and taken, as though ſhe had been his own Mother, being never diſplaced from her Seat, although the King's Council had been preſent; ſaying, when any of them were there, (as ſeveral Times they were) By your Lordſhip's Favour, this Place of Right and Cuſtom is for my Mother Bonner. But how well he was recompenſed for this his ſingular Kindneſs, and gentle Pity afterwards at the Hands of the ſaid Dr. Bonner, almoſt the leaſt Child that goeth on the Ground can declare. For who afterward was more Enemy to Dr. Ridley than Dr. Bonner and his? Who more went about to ſeek his Deſtruction than he? recompenſing this his Gentleneſs with extreme Cruelty; as well appeared by the ſtrict Handling of Dr. Ridley's own Siſter, and her Husband George Shipſide from Time to Time: Whereas the Gentleneſs of the other permitted Bonner's Mother, Siſter, and others of his Kindred, not only quietly to enjoy all that which they had from Biſhop Bonner, but alſo entertained them in his own Houſe, ſhewing much Courteſy and Friendſhip daily unto them: Whereas on the other Side, Biſhop Bonner being reſtored again, would not ſuffer the Brother and Siſter of Biſhop Ridley, and others of his Friends, not only not to enjoy that which they had by their ſaid Brother Biſhop Ridley, but alſo curriſhly, without all Order or Law of Honeſty, wreſted from them all the Livings they had.

The Courteſy of Biſhop Ridley, and the Cruelty of Biſhop Bonner compared together.

And yet being not therewith ſatisfy'd, he ſought all the Means he could to work the Death of the foreſaid Shipſide, ſaying, that he would make twelve Godfathers to go upon him, which indeed had been brought to paſs, at the Time he was Priſoner at Oxford, had not God otherwiſe wrought his Deliverance by the Means of Dr. Heath, then Biſhop of Worceſter. Witneſſed by George Shipſide.

Whereby all good impartial Readers may eaſily underſtand what great Diverſity there was in the Diſpoſition of theſe two Natures. Inſomuch that as the one excelled in Mercy and Piety, ſo the other again, as much, or more, excelled in churliſh Ingratitude, and deſpiteful Diſdain. But of this Matter enough.

Now concerning God's Vocation, how Dr. Ridley was firſt called to the Savouring and Favouring of Chriſt and his Goſpel, partly by his Diſputation before, and by his other Treatiſes it may appear, that the firſt Occaſion of his Converſion was by reading of Bertram's Book of the Sacrament, whom alſo the Conference with Archbiſhop Cranmer, and with Peter Martyr did not a little confirm in that Behalf. Who now by the Grace of God, being thoroughly won and brought to the true Way, as he was before blind and zealous in his old Ignorance, ſo was he conſtant and faithful in the right Knowledge which the Lord had opened unto him (as well appeared by his Life and Doctrine during all the Time of King Edward) and ſo long he did much good, when Power and Authority defended the Goſpel, and ſupported the Peace and Happineſs of the Church. But after it pleaſed God (in his wiſe Providence) to bereave us of our Stay, in taking from us that precious Prince King Edward, the whole State of the Church of England was lett deſolate and open to the Enemies Hand: So that Biſhop Ridley, after the coming in of Queen Mary, was one of the firſt that Hands were laid on, and committed to Priſon, as before hath been ſufficiently declared: Firſt in the Tower, and from thence tranſlated with the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury and Mr. Latimer to Oxford, and with them incloſed in the common Priſon of Bocardo, but at length being ſeparated from them, he was committed to Cuſtody in the Houſe of one Iriſh, where he remained 'till the Day of his Martyrdom, which was from the Year of our Lord 1554, 'till October 16, 1555.

Anno 1555.

Biſhop Ridley one of the firſt in trouble after the Death of King Edward. He is put into the Tower, and removed from thence to Bocardo in Oxford.

As for his Diſputations at Oxford, his Determination at Cambridge, his Reaſons and Conference in the Tower at the Lieutenant's Table, enough hath been ſaid already. Beſides, he had other Conferences in Priſon, both with Dr. Cranmer and Mr. Latimer, as here followeth to be read.

Conference between Dr. Ridley and Mr. Latimer in Priſon upon the Objection of Antonian, meaning by that Name ſome Popiſh Perſecutor, at Wincheſter, alluding thereby to the Story of Victor. lib. 3. De perſecut. Aphri.

IN writing again ye have done me an unſpeakable Pleaſure, and I pray that the Lord may requite it you in that Day. For I have received great Comfort at your Words: But yet I am not ſo filled withal, but that I thirſt much more of the Cup of yours, wherein ye mingle unto me profitable with pleaſant. I pray you, good Father, let me have one Draught more to comfort my Stomach. For ſurely except the Lord aſſiſt me with his gracious Aid, in the Time of his Service, I know I ſhall play but the Part of a White-liver'd Knight. But truly my Truſt is in him, that in mine Infirmity he ſhould try himſelf ſtrong, and that he can make the Coward in his Cauſe, to fight like a Man.

Dr. Ridley to Mr. Latimer.

Sir, now I daily look when Diotrephes with his Warriors ſhall aſſault me: Wherefore I pray you good Father, for that you are an old Soldier, and an expert Warrior, and God knoweth I am but a young Soldier, and as yet of ſmall Experience in theſe Feats, help me, I pray you, to buckle my Harneſs. And now I would have you to think, that theſe Darts are caſt at my Head by ſome of Diotrephes, or Antonius Soldiers.

Anno 1555.

Except the Lord help me, ye ſay. Truth it is. For without me, ſaith he, ye can do nothing, much leſs ſuffer Death by our Adverſaries, through the bloody Law now prepared againſt us. But it followeth, If you abide in me, and my Word abide in you, ask what you will, and it ſhall be done for you. What can be more comfortable? Sir, you make Anſwer yourſelf ſo well, that I cannot better it. Sir, I begin now to ſmell what you mean by travelling thus with me; you uſe me as Bilney once did, when he converted me, pretending as tho' he would be taught by me, he ſought Ways and Means to teach me, and ſo do you. I thank you therefore moſt heartily. For indeed you miniſter Armour unto me, whereas I was unarmed before and unprovided, ſaving that I give myſelf to Prayer for my Refuge.

Mr. Latimer's Anſwer to Dr. Ridley.

John 15.

The firſt Objection of the Antonian.

All Men marvel greatly, why you, after the Liberty you have granted unto you, more than the reſt, do not go to Maſs, which is a Thing much eſteemed of all Men, yea, of the Queen herſelf.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

Luke 9. Gal. 2.

Becauſe no Man that layeth Hand on the Plough and looketh back is fit for the Kingdom of God, and alſo for the ſelf-ſame Cauſe why St. Paul would not ſuffer Titus to be circumciſed, which is, that the Truth of the Goſpel might remain with us uncorrupt, Gal. 2. And alſo, If I build again the Things which I deſtroy'd, I make myſelf a Treſpaſſer. This is likewiſe another Cauſe: Leſt I ſhould ſeem by outward Fact to allow the Thing, which I am perſuaded is contrary to ſound Doctrine, and ſo ſhould be a Stumbling-block unto the Weak. But wo be unto him by whom Offence cometh: It were better for him that a Mill-ſtone were hanged about his Neck, and he caſt into the midſt of the Sea.

Matth. 18. Mark 9.

The ſecond Objection of the Antonian.

What is it then that offendeth you ſo greatly in the Maſs, that you will not vouchſafe once either to hear it or ſee it? And from whence cometh this new Religion upon you? Have not you uſed in Times paſt to ſay Maſs yourſelf?

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

* He meaneth his own Confeſſion openly in preaching

I confeſs unto you my Fault and Ignorance; but know you that for theſe Matters I have done * Penance long ago, both at Paul's Croſs, and alſo openly in the Pulpit at Cambridge, and I truſt God hath forgiven me this mine Offence: For I did it ignorantly. But if you be deſirous to know, and will vouchſafe to hear what Things do offend me in the Maſs, I will rehearſe thoſe Things which be moſt clear, and ſeem moſt manifeſtly to repugn againſt God's Word, and they be theſe: The ſtrange Tongue, the want of the ſhewing of the Lord's Death, the breaking of the Lord's Commandment of having a Communion; the Sacrament is not communicated to all under both Kinds, according to the Word of the Lord; the Sign is ſervily worſhipped for the Thing ſignified; Chriſt's Paſſion is injured, for as much as this Maſs-ſacrifice is affirmed to remain for the purging of Sins; to be ſhort, the manifold Superſtitions, and trifling Fooleries which are in the Maſs, and about the ſame.

Matth. 26.

1 Tim. 1.

Mr. Latimer.

Better a few Things well pondered, than to trouble the Memory with too much; you ſhall prevail more with praying, than with ſtudying, though Mixture be beſt, for ſo one ſhall alleviate the Tedioufneſs of the other. I intend not to contend much with them in Words, after a reaſonable Account of my Faith given: For it will be but in vain. They will ſay as their Fathers ſaid, when they have no more to ſay: We have a Law, and by our Law he ought to die. Be ye ſtedfaſt and unmoveable, ſaith St. Paul: And again, Stand faſt: And how oft is this repeated, If ye abide, if ye abide, &c. But we ſhall be called obſtinate, ſturdy, ignorant, heady, and what not? ſo that a Man hath need of much Patience, having to do with ſuch Men.

John 19. 1 Cor. 15. 1 Tim. 3. John 15. Coloſ. 1.

The third Objection of the Antonian.

But you know how great a Crime it is to ſeparate yourſelf from the Communion or Fellowſhip of the Church, and to make a Schiſm, or Diviſion. You have been reported to have hated the Sect of the Anabaptiſts, and always to have impugned the ſame. Moreover, this was the pernicious Error of Novatus, and of the Hereticks called (Cathari) that they would not communicate with the Church.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

I know that the Unity of the Church is to be retained by all Means, and the ſame to be neceſſary to Salvation. But I do not take the Maſs, as it is at this Day, for the Communion of the Church, but a popiſh Device, whereby both the Commandment and Inſtitution of our Saviour Chriſt, for the oft freqenting of the Remembrance of his Death, is eluded, and the People of God are miſerably deluded. The Sect of the Anabaptiſts, and the Hereſy of the Novatians ought of right to be condemned, foraſmuch as without any juſt or neceſſary Cauſe they wickedly ſeparated themſelves from the Communion of the Congregation, for they did not alledge that the Sacraments were unduly adminiſtred, but turning away their Eyes from themſelves, wherewith according to St. Paul's Rule they ought to examine themſelves, and caſting their Eyes ever upon others, either Miniſters, or Communicants with them, they always reproved ſomething for which they abſtained from the Communion, as from un unholy Thing.

1 Cor. 11.

Mr. Latimer.

I remember that Calvin beginneth to confute the Interim after this Sort with this Saying of Hilary, The Name of Peace is beautiful, and the Opinion of Unity is fair: But who doubteth that to be the true and only Peace of the Church, which is Chriſt? I would you had that little Book, there ſhould you ſee how much is to be given to Unity. St. Paul, when he requireth Unity, joyneth with it, according to Jeſus Chriſt, no further. Diotrephes now of late did always harp upon Unity, Unity. Yea Sir, ſaid I, but in Verity, not in Popery. Better is Diverſity, than an Unity in Popery. I had nothing again but ſcornful Taunts, with Commandment to the Tower.

Rom. 15.

The fourth Objection of the Antonian.

But admit there be in the Maſs, that peradventure might be amended, or at leaſt made better: Yea, ſeeing you will have it ſo, admit there be a Fault; if you do not conſent thereto, why do you trouble yourſelf in vain? Do you not know both by Cyprian and Auguſtine, that Communion of Sacraments doth not defile a Man, but Conſent of Deeds?

Cyr. lib. 1. epiſt 2. Aug. epiſt. 152.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

If it were any one trifling Ceremony, or if it were ſome one Thing of itſelf indifferent (although I would wiſh nothing ſhould be done in the Church which doth not edify the ſame) yet for the Continuance of the common Quietneſs I could be content to bear it. But foraſmuch as Things done in the Maſs tend openly to the Overthrow of Chriſt's Inſtitution, I judge that by no Means either in Word or Deed I ought to conſent unto it. As for that which is objected out of the Fathers, I acknowledge it to be well ſpoken, if it be well underſtood. But it is meant of them which ſuppoſe they are defiled, if any ſecret Vice be either in the Miniſters, or in them that communicate with them; and is not meant of them which do abhor Superſtition, and wicked Traditions of Men, and will not ſuffer the ſame to be thruſt upon themſelves, or upon the Church, inſtead of God's Word and the Truth of the Goſpel.

Mr. Latimer. The very Marrow-bones of the Maſs are altogether deteſtable, and therefore by no Means to be born withal; ſo that of Neceſſity the mending of it is to aboliſh it for ever. For if you take away Oblation and Adoration, which do hang upon Conſecration and Tranſubſtantiation, moſt of the Papiſts will not ſet a Button by the Maſs, as a Thing which they eſteem not, but for the Gain that followeth thereon. For if the Engliſh Communion which of late was uſed, were as gainful to them, as the Maſs hath been heretofore, they would ſtrive no more for their Maſs: From thence groweth the Grief.

The fifth Objection of the Antonian. Conſider into what Dangers you caſt your ſelf, if you forſake the Church; and you cannot but forſake it, if you refuſe to go to Maſs. For the Maſs is the Sacrament of Unity; without the Ark there is no Salvation. The Church is the Ark and Peter's Ship. Ye know this Saying well enough: He ſhall not have God to be his Father, which acknowledgeth not the Church to be his Mother. Moreover without the Church (ſaith St. Auguſtine) be the Life never ſo well ſpent, it ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of Heaven.

Aug. lib. 1. de Sim. 10. In Ep. poſt. col contra Donat.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer. The holy Catholick or Univerſal Church, which is the Communion of Saints, the Houſe of God, the City of God, the Spouſe of Chriſt, the Body of Chriſt, the Pillar and Stay of the Truth; this Church I believe, according to the Creed. This Church I do Reverence and Honour in the Lord. But the Rule of this Church is the Word of God, according to which Rule we go forward unto Life. And as many as walk according to this Rule, I ſay with St. Paul, Peace to be upon them, and upon Iſrael which pertaineth unto God. The Guide of this Church is the Holy Ghoſt, The Marks whereby this Church is known unto me in this dark World, and in the midſt of this crooked and froward Generation, are theſe; The ſincere Preaching of God's Holy Word, the due Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, Charity, and faithful obſerving of eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline, according to the Word of God. And that Church or Congregation which is garniſhed with theſe Marks, is in very Deed that heavenly Jeruſalem, which conſiſteth of thoſe that be born from above. This is the Mother of us all, and by God's Grace I will live and die the Child of this Church. Forth of this (I grant) there is no Salvation; and I ſuppoſe the reſt of the Places objected are rightly to be underſtood of this Church only. In Times paſt (ſaith Chryſoſtom) there were many Ways to know the Church of Chriſt, that is to ſay, by good Life, by Miracles, by Chaſtity, by Doctrine, by adminiſtring the Sacraments. But from that Time that Hereſies did take hold of the Church, it is only known by the Scriptures, which is the true Church. They have all Things in outward Shew, which the true Church hath in Truth. They have Temples like unto ours.

1 Tim. 3. Rev. 21. Epheſ. 1. Gal. 6. Phil. 2. Rev. 2. John 3. Gal. 4. In op. imp. Hom. 49. in Matth.

Anno 1555.

And in the End concluded. Wherefore only by the Scriptures do we know which is the true Church. To that which they ſay, That the Maſs is the Sacrament of Unity, I anſwer; The Bread which we break, according to the Inſtitution of the Lord, is the Sacrament of the Unity of Chriſt's myſtical Body. For we being many are one Bread and one Body, foraſmuch as we all are Partakers of one Bread. But in the Maſs the Lord's Inſtition is not obſerved; for we are not all Partakers of one Bread, but one devoureth all, &c. So that (as it is uſed) it may ſeem a Sacrament of Singularity, and of a certain ſpecial Privilege for one Sect of People, whereby they be diſcerned from the reſt, rather than a Sacrament of Unity, wherein our knitting together in one is repreſented. 1 Cor. 10.

Yea, what Fellowſhip hath Chriſt with Antichriſt? Therefore is it not lawful to bear the Yoke with Papiſts. Come forth from among them, ſaith the Lord. It is one Thing to be the Church indeed, another Thing to counterfeit the Church. Would God it were well known what is the forſaking of the Church. In the King's Days that is Dead, who was the Church of England? The King and his Favourers, or Maſs-mongers in Corners? If the King and the Favourers of his Proceedings, why be we not now the Church, abiding in the ſame Proceedings? If private Maſs-mongers might be of the Church, and yet contrary to the King's Proceedings, why may not we as well be of the Church contrary to the Queen's Proceedings? Not all that are covered with the Title of the Church, are the Church indeed. Separate thyſelf from them that are ſuch, ſaith St. Paul; From whom? The Text hath before, If any Man follow other Doctrine, &c. he is puffed up, and knoweth nothing, &c. Weigh the whole Text, that ye may perceive what is the Fruit of contentious Diſputations: But wherefore are ſuch Men ſaid to know nothing, when they know ſo many Things? You know the old Verſes, Mr. Latimer. 2 Cor. 6. 1 Tim. 6.

Hoc eſt neſcire, ſine Chriſto plurima ſcire:
Si Chriſtum bene ſcis, ſatis eſt, ſi cætera neſcis.

That is, This is to be ignorant, to know many Things without Chriſt. If thou knoweſt Chriſt well, thou knoweſt enough, though thou know no more. Therefore would St. Paul know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt crucified, &c. As many as are Papiſts and Maſs-mongers, they may well be ſaid to know nothing. For they know not Chriſt, foraſmuch as in their Maſſing they take much away from the Benefit and Merit of Chriſt. 2 Cor. 2.

The ſixth Objection of the Antonian. That Church which you have deſcribed to me is inviſible, but Chriſt's Church is viſible and known. For elſe why ſhould Chriſt have ſaid, Tell it unto the Church. For he had commanded in vain to go unto the Church, if a Man cannot tell which it is.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer. The Church which I have deſcribed is viſible, it hath Members which may be ſeen; and alſo Anno 1555. alſo I have before declared, by what Marks tnd Tokens it may be known, but if either our Eyes are ſo dazzled, that we can't ſee, or that Satan hath brought ſuch Darkneſs into the World, that it is hard to diſcern the true Church; that is not the Fault of the Church, but either of our Blindneſs or of Satan's Darkneſs. But yet in this moſt deep Darkneſs there is one moſt clear Candle, which of itſelf alone is able to put away all Darkneſs. Thy Word is a Candle unto my Feet, and a Light unto my Steps.

The Seventh Objection of the Antonian. The Church of Chriſt is a Catholick or Univerſal Church, diſperſed throughout the whole World; this Church is the great Houſe of Ood, in this are good Men and evil mingled together, Goats and Sheep, Corn and Chaff; it is the Net which gathereth all Kind of Fiſhes: This Church cannot err, becauſe Chriſt hath promiſed it his Spirit, which ſhall lead it into all Truth, and that the Gates of Hell ſhall not prevail againſt it; that he will be with it unto the End of the World; whatſoever it ſhall looſe or bind upon Earth, ſhall be ratified in Heaven, &c. This Church is the Pillar and Stay of the Truth; this is it for which St. Auguſtine ſaith, he believeth the Goſpel: But this Univerſal Church alloweth the Maſs, becauſe the greater Part of the ſame alloweth it. Therefore, &c.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer. I grant that the Name of the Church is taken after three divers Manners in the Scripture. Sometimes for the whole Multitude of them who profeſs the Name of Chriſt, of which they are alſo named Chriſtians. But as St. Paul ſaith of the Jew, not every one is a Jew, that is a Jew outwardly, &c. Neither yet all that be of Iſrael are counted the Seed; even ſo not every one that is a Chriſtian outwardly is a Chriſtian indeed. For if any Man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his. Therefore that Church which is his Body, and of which Chriſt is the Head, ſtandeth only in living Stones, and true Chriſtians, not only outwardly in Name and Title, but inwardly in Heart and in Truth. But forſomuch as this Church (which is the Second taking of the Church) as touching the outward Fellowſhip, is contained within the great Houſe, and hath with the ſame, outward Society of the Sacraments and Miniſtry of the Word, many Things are ſpoken of that Univerſal Church (which St. Auguſtine calleth the mingled Church) which cannot truly be underſtood, but only of that pure part of the Church. So that Rev. 2. the Rule of Ticonius concerning the mingled Church, may here well take Place; where there is attributed unto the whole Church that which cannot agree to the ſame, but by reaſon of the one Part thereof; that is, either for the Multitude of good Men, which is the very true Church indeed; or for the Multitude of evil Men, which is the malignant Church and Synagogue of Satan. And there is alſo a Third taking of the Church; of which, although there be ſeldomer mention in the Scriptures, in that Signification, yet in the World, even in the moſt famous Aſſemblies of Chriſtendom, this Church hath born the greateſt Sway. This Diſtinction preſuppoſed of the three Sorts of Churches, it is an eaſy Matter, by a Figure called Synecdoche, to give to the mingled and univerſal Church, that which cannot truly be underſtood but only of the one Part thereof. But if any Man will ſtiffly affirm, that Univerſal doth ſo pertain unto Church, that whatſoever Chriſt hath promiſed to the Church, it muſt needs be underſtood of that, I would gladly know of the ſame Man, where that Univerſal Church was in the Times of the Patriarchs and Prophets, of Noah, Abraham, and Moſes, (at ſuch Time as the People would have ſtoned him) of Elias, of Jeremiah, in the Times of Chriſt, and the Diſperſion of the Apoſtles, in the Time of Arius, when Conſtantius was Emperor, and Felix Biſhop of Rome ſucceeded Liberius. It is worthy to be noted, that Lyra writeth upon Matthew; The Church (ſaith he) doth not ſtand in Men by reaſon of their Power or Dignity, whether it be eccleſiaſtical or ſecular. For many Princes and Popes, and other Inferiours, have been found to have fallen away from God. Therefore the Church conſiſteth in thoſe Perſons, in whom is true Knowledge and Confeſſion of the Faith, and of the Truth. Evil Men (as it is in a Gloſs of the Decrees) are in the Church in Name, and not in Deed. And St. Auguſtine (Contra Creſconium grammaticum) ſaith, Whoſever is afraid to be deceived by the Darkneſs of this Queſtion, let him ask Counſel at the ſame Church of it: Which Church the Scripture doth point out without any Doubtfulneſs. All my Notes which I have written and gathered out of ſuch Authors as I have read in this Matter, and ſuch like, are come into the Hands of ſuch as will not let me have the leaſt of all my written Books; wherein I am inforced to complain of them unto God: For they ſpoil me of all my Labours, which I have taken in my Study theſe many Years. My Memory was never good, for help whereof I have uſed for the moſt Part, to gather out Notes of my reading, and ſo to place them, that thereby I might have had the Uſe of them when the Time required. But who knoweth whether this be God's Will, that I ſhould be thus ordered, and ſpoiled of the poor Learning I had (as I thought) in ſtore, to the Intent that I now deſtitute of that, ſhould from henceforth, with St. Paul, learn only to know Chriſt, and him crucified? The Lord grant me herein to be a good young Scholar, and to learn this Leſſon ſo well, that neither Death nor Life, Wealth nor Woe, &c. make me ever to forget that, Amen, Amen.

Exod. 7. 1 Kings 19. Jerem. 6. Theo. Eccleſ. Hiſt. lib. 2. cap. 15. 61. Lyra in Matthew. De pœnit. diſt. 1. cap. eccleſ. lib. 2. cap. 1 Cor. 2.

Mr. Latimer. I have no more to ſay in this Matter; for you yourſelf have ſaid all that is to be ſaid. That ſame vehement Saying of St. Auguſtine, I would not believe the Goſpel, &c. was wont to trouble many Men; as I remember, I have read it well qualify'd of Philip Melanchthon; but my Memory is altogether ſlippery. This it is in Effect; The Church is not a Judge, but a Witneſs. There were ſome in his Time that lightly eſteemed the Teſtimony of the Church, and the outward Miniſtry of Preaching, and rejected the outward Word itſelf, ſticking only to their inward Revelations. Such raſh Contempt of the Word, provoked and drove St. Auguſtine into that exceſſive Vehemency. In which after the bare Sound of the Words, he might ſeem to ſuch as do not attain unto his Meaning, that he preferred the Church far before the Goſpel, and that the Church hath a Free Authority over the ſame; but that pious Man never thought ſo. It were a Saying worthy to be brought forth againſt the Anabaptiſts, who think the open Miniſtry to be a Thing not neceſſary, if they any thing thing esteemed such Testimonies. I would not stick to affirm, that the most Part of the great House, that is to say, of the whole universal Church, may easily err. And again, I would not stick to affirm, that it is one thing to be gathered together in the Name of Christ, and another Thing to come together with a Mass of the Holy Ghost going before. For in the first, Christ ruleth; in the latter, the Devil beareth the Sway; and how then can any thing be good that they go about? From this latter shall our six Articles come forth again into the Light, they themselves being very Darkness.

A Question. But it is demanded, whether the sounder or better Part of the catholick Church may be seen of Men, or no?

Answer. St. Paul saith, The Lord knoweth them that are his. What manner of Speaking is this in Commendation of the Lord, if we knew as well as he who are his? Well, thus is the Text: The sure Foundation of God standeth still, and hath this Seal: The Lord knoweth them that are his; and let every Man that nameth the Name of Christ depart from Iniquity. Now how many are there of the whole catholick Church of England who depart from Iniquity? How many of the Noblemen, how many of the Bishops or Clergy, how many of the rich Men, or Merchants, how many of the Queen's Counsellors, yea, how many of the whole Realm? In how small Room then I pray you is the true Church within the Realm of England? And where is it? And in what State? I had a Conceit of mine own well grounded (as they say) when I began, but now it is fallen by the way.

The eighth Objection of the Antonian. General Councils represent the universal Church, and have this Promise of Christ; Where two or three be gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midst of them. If Christ be present with two or three, then much more where there is so great a Multitude, &c. But in General Councils Mass hath been approved and used. Therefore, &c.

Dr Ridley's Answer. Of the universal Church, which is mingled of good and bad, thus I think; Whensoever they which be chief in it, which rule and govern the same, and to whom the whole mystical Body of Christ doth obey, are the lively Members of Christ, and walk after the guiding and rule of his Word, and go before the Flock towards everlasting Life, then undoubtedly Councils gathered together of such Guides and Pastors of the Christian Flock, do indeed represent the universal Church; and being so gathered in the Name of Christ, they have a Promise of the Gift and Guiding of his Spirit into all Truth. But that any such Council hath at any Time allowed the Mass, such an one as ours was of late, in a strange Tongue, and stuffed with so many Absurdities, Errors and Superstition; that I utterly deny, and affirm it to be impossible. For like as there is no Agreement betwixt Light and Darkness, betwixt Christ and Belial; so surely Superstition and the sincere Religion of Christ, Will-worship, and the pure worshipping of God, such as God requireth of his, that is, in Spirit and Truth, can never agree together. But ye will say, where so great a Company is gathered together, it is not credible but there are two or three gathered in the Name of Christ. I answer, If there be one hundred good, and two hundred bad (forasmuch as the Decrees and Ordinances are pronounced according to the greater Number of the Multitude of Voices) what can the less Number of Voices avail? It is a known Thing, and a common Proverb, Oftentimes the greater Part overcometh the better. Anno 1555.

Mr. Latimer. As touching General Councils, at this present I have no more to say than you have said. Only I refer you to your own Experience, to think of our Country Parliaments and Convocations, how and what ye have seen and heard. The greater part in my Time did bring forth six Articles; for then the King would have it so, being seduced of certain. Afterward the greater part did repel the same, our good Josias willing to have it so. The same Articles now again (alas) another great but worse part hath restored. O what an Uncertainty is this! But after this Manner, most commonly are Man's Proceedings, God be merciful unto us. Who shall deliver us from such Torments of Mind? Therefore is Death the best Physician, but unto the faithful, whom she together and at once delivereth from all Griefs. You must think this written upon this Occasion, because you would needs have your Paper blotted.

The Inconstancy of the English Parliaments and Convocations.

The ninth Objection of the Antonian. If the Matter should go thus, that in General Councils Men should not stand to the greater Number of the Multitude (I mean of them which ought to give Voices) then should no certain Rule be left unto the Church, by which Controversies in weighty Matters might be determined; but it is not to be believed, that Christ would leave his Church destitute of so necessary a Help and Safeguard.

D. Ridley's Answer. Christ, who is the most loving Spouse of his Church, who also gave himself for it, that he might sanctify it unto himself, did give unto it abundantly all things which are necessary to Salvation; but yet so, that the Church should declare itself obedient unto him in all things, and keep itself within the Bounds of his Commandments, and further not to seek any thing which he teacheth not, as necessary unto Salvation. Now further, for Determination of all Controversies in Christ's Religion, Christ himself hath left unto the Church not only Moses and the Prophets, whom he willeth in all Doubts to go unto, and ask Counsel at, but also the Gospels, and the rest of the Body of the New Testament; in which whatsoever is heard of Moses and the Prophets, and whatsoever is necessary to be known unto Salvation, is revealed and opened. Ephes. 5.

So that now we have no Need to say, Who shall climb up into Heaven, or who shall go down into the Depth, to tell us what is needful to be done? Christ hath done both, and hath commended to us the Word of Faith, which also is abundantly declared unto us in his Word written; so that hereafter if we walk earnestly in this Way, to the searching out of the Truth, it is not to be doubted, but through the certain Benefit of Christ's Spirit, which he hath promised unto his, we may find it, and obtain everlasting Life. Should Men ask Counsel of the Dead for the Living, saith Isaiah? Let them go rather to the Law and to the Testimony, &c. Christ sendeth them that be desirous to know the Truth, unto the Scriptures, saying, Search the Scriptures. I remember a like Thing well spoken of St. Jerome; Ignorance of the Scriptures is the Mother and Cause of all Errors. And in another Place, as I remember in the same Author, The Knowledge of the Scriptures is the Food of everlasting Life. But now methinks I enter into a very broad Sea, Isa. 8. John 5. Hier. 23. in Matt.

Anno 1555. in that I begin to shew, either out of the Scriptures themselves, or out of the ancient Writers, how much the Holy Scripture is of Force to teach the Truth of our Religion. But this is it, that I am now about, that Christ would have the Church his Spouse in all Doubts to ask Counsel at the Word of his Father written, and faithfully left, and commended unto it in both Testaments, the Old and New. Neither do we read, that Christ in any Place hath laid so great a Burden upon the Members of his Spouse, that he hath commanded them to go to the universal Church. Whatsoever things are written, saith St. Paul, Rom. 12. are written for our Learning. Ephes 4. And it is true, that Christ gave unto his Church, some Apostles, some Prophets, some Evangelists, some Shepherds and Teachers, to the Edifying of the Saints, till we come all to the Unity of Faith, &c. But that all Men should meet together out of all Parts of the World, to define of the Articles of our Faith, I neither find it commanded by Christ, nor written in the Word of God.

Mr. Latimer. There is difference betwixt Things pertaining to God or Faith, and politick and civil Matters. For in the First we must stand only to the Scriptures, which are able to make us all perfect and instructed unto Salvation, if they well be understood. And they offer themselves to be well understood only to them, which have good Wills, and give themselves to Study and Prayer. Neither are there any Men less apt to understand them, than the prudent and wise Men of the World. But in the other, that is, in civil or politick Matters, oftentimes the Magistrates do tolerate a less Evil, for avoiding of a greater, as they which have this Saying oft in their Mouths; Better an Inconveniency than a Mischief. And it is the Property of a wise Man, saith one, to dissemble many Things; and he that cannot dissemble cannot rule. In which Sayings they bewray themselves, that they do not earnestly weigh what is just, and what is not. Wherefore forsomuch as Mans Laws, if it be but in this Respect only, that they be devised by Men, are not able to bring any Thing to Perfection, but are inforced of Necessity to suffer many Things out of square, and are compelled sometimes to wink at the worst Things: Seeing they know not how to maintain the common Peace and Quiet otherwise, they do ordain that the greater Part shall take Place. You know what these Kind of Speeches mean, I speak after the Manner of Men; ye walk after the Manner of Men, all Men are Liars. And that of St. Augustine, If ye live after Man's Reason, ye do not live after the Will of God.

The tenth Objection of the Antonian. If ye say that Councils have sometimes erred, or may err, how then should we believe the catholick Church? for that Councils are gathered by the Authority of the catholick Church.

Dr. Ridley's Answer. From may be, to be indeed, is no good Argument; but from being, to may be, no Man doubteth but it is a most sure Argument. But now that Councils have sometimes erred, it is manifest. How many Councils were there in the East Parts of the World, which condemned the Nicene Council; and all those who would not forsake the same, they called by a Soc. eccles. hist. lib. 2. slanderous Name (as they thought) Homousians. Was not Athanasius, Chrysostom, Cyril, Eustachius, Men very well learned, and of godly Life, banished and condemned as famous Hereticks, and that by wicked Councils? How many Things are there in the Canons and Constitutions of the Councils, which the Papists themselves do much mislike? But here peradventure one Man will say unto me, We will grant you this in provincial Councils, or Councils of some one Nation, that they may sometimes err, forsomuch as they do not represent the Universal Church; but it is not to be believed, that the General and full Councils have erred at any Time. Here if I had my Books of the Councils, or rather such Notes as I have gathered out of those Books, I could bring something which should serve for this Purpose. But now seeing I have them not, I will recite one Place only out of St. Austin, which, in my Judgment, may suffice in this Matter instead of many. Who knoweth not (saith he) that the Holy Scripture is so set before us, that it is not lawful to doubt of it, and that the Letters of Bishops may be reproved by others Mens Words, and by Councils, and that the Councils themselves which are gathered by Provinces and Countries, do give Place to the Authority of the general and full Councils; and that the former and general Councils are amended by the latter, when as by some Experience of Things, either what was shut up is opened, or that which was hid is known. Thus much out of St. Austin. But I will plead with our Antonian upon Matter confessed. Here with us when as Popery reigned, I pray you how doth that Book, which was called, The Bishop's Book, made in the Time of King Henry the Eighth, whereof the Bishop of Winchester is thought to be either the first Father, or chief Gatherer; how doth it (I say) sharply reprove the Florentine Council, in which was decreed the Supremacy of the Bishop of Rome, and that with the Consent of the Emperor of Constantinople, and of the Grecians? So that in those Days our learned ancient Fathers and Bishops of England did not stick to affirm, that a general Council might err. But methinks I hear another Man despising all that I have brought forth, and saying, These which you have called Councils, are not worthy to be called Councils, but rather Assemblies and Conventicles of Hereticks. I pray you, Sir, why do you judge them worthy of so scandalous a Name? Because (saith he) they decreed Things heretical, contrary to sound Doctrine and true Godliness, and against the Faith of christian Religion. The Cause is weighty, for which they ought of Right so to be called. But if it be so that all Councils ought to be despised, which decree any Thing contrary to sound Doctrine, and the true Word, which is according to Godliness, forsomuch as the Mass, such as we had here of late, is openly against the Word of God; forsooth, it must of Necessity follow, that all such Councils, as have approved such Masses, ought of right to be shunn'd and despised, as Conventicles and Assemblies that stray from the Truth.

Soc. eccles. hist. lib. 2. cap. 24, 32. Theo. lib 5. cap. 34. Objection. Answer. Lib. 2. de baptis. cont. Don. c. 3. The Bishop's Book.

The Bishop of Rome's Authority. Another Man alledgeth unto me the Authority of the Bishop of Rome, without which neither can the Councils (saith he) be lawfully gathered, neither being gathered determine any Thing concerning Religion. But this Objection is only grounded upon the ambitious and shameless Maintenance of the Romish Tyranny and usurped Dominion over the Clergy; which Tyranny we English Men long ago, by the Consent of the whole Realm, have expulſed and abjured. And how rightly we have done it, a little Book ſet forth of both the Powers, doth clearly ſhew. I grant that the Romiſh Ambition hath gone about to challenge to itſelf, and to uſurp ſuch a Privilege of old Time. But the Council of Carthage, in the Year of our Lord 457, did openly withſtand it, and alſo the Council at Milevite, in which St. Auſtin was preſent, did prohibit any Appellations to be made to Biſhops beyond the Sea.

Concil. Carthag. 3. can. 22.

The 11th Objection of the Antonian.

St. Auſtin ſaith, the good Men are not to be forſaken for the Evil, but the Evil are to be born withal for the Good. Ye will not ſay (I ſuppoſe) that in our Congregations all be Evil.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

I ſpeak nothing of the Goodneſs or Badneſs of your Congregations; but I fight in Chriſt's Quarrel againſt the Maſs, which doth utterly take away and overthrow the Ordinance of Chriſt. Let that be taken quite away, and then the Partition of the Wall that made the Striſe ſhall be broken down. Now to the Place of St. Auſtin, For bearing with the Evil for the Good's ſake, there ought to be added other Words, which the ſame Writer hath expreſſed in other Places; that is, if thoſe evil Men do caſt abroad no Seeds of falſe Doctrine, nor lead others to Deſtruction by their Example.

Aug. lib. 3. cont. literas Param. cap. 23.

The 12th Objection of the Antonian.

It is perillous to attempt any new Thing in the Church, which lacketh Example of good Men. How much more perillous is it to commit any Act, unto which the Example of the Prophets, of Chriſt, and of the Apoſtles are contrary? But unto this your Fact, in abſtaining from the Church by reaſon of the Maſs, the Example of the Prophets, of Chriſt, and of the Apoſtles are clean contrary: Therefore &c. The firſt Part of the Argument is evident, and the ſecond Part I prove thus. In the Times of the Prophets, of Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, all Things were moſt corrupt. The People were miſerably given to Superſtition, the Prieſts deſpiſed the Law of God; and yet notwithſtanding we read not that the Prophets made any Schiſms or Diviſions; and Chriſt himſelf haunted the Temple, and taught in the Temple of the Jews. Peter and John went up into the Temple at the Ninth Hour of Prayer; Paul after the reading of the Law, being deſired to ſay ſomething to the People, did not refuſe to do it. Yea further, no Man can ſhew, that either the Prophets, or Chriſt, or his Apoſtles, did refuſe to pray together with others, to ſacrifice, or to be Partakers of the Sacrament of Moſes Law.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer.

I grant the former Part of your Argument; and to the ſecond Part I ſay, that although it contain many true Things, as of the corrupt State in the Times of the Prophets, of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, and of the Temple being frequented by Chriſt and his Apoſtles; yet notwithſtanding the ſecond Part of your Argument is not ſufficiently proved. For ye ought to have proved, that either the Prophets, either Chriſt or his Apoſtles did in the Temple communicate with the People in any Kind of worſhipping which is forbidden by the Law of God, or repugnant to the Word of God. But that can no where be ſhewed. And as for the Church, I am not angry with it, and I never refuſed to go to it, and to pray with the People, to hear the Word of God, and to do all other Things whatſoever may agree with the Word of God. St. Auſtin ſpeaking of the Ceremonies of the Jews (I ſuppoſe in the Epiſtle ad Januarium) although he grants they grievouſly oppreſſed that People, both for the Number and Bondage of the ſame, yet he calleth them Burdens of the Law, which were delivered unto them in the Word of God, not Preſumptions of Men, which notwithſtanding if they were not contrary to God's Word, might in ſome Meaſure be born withal. But now, ſeeing they are contrary to ſuch Things as are written in the Word of God, whether they ought to be born by any Chriſtian or no, let him judge who is ſpiritual, who feareth God more than Man, and loveth everlaſting Life more than this ſhort and tranſitory Life. To that which was ſaid, that my Fact lacketh Example of the godly Fathers that have gone before, the contrary is moſt evident in the Hiſtory of Toby: Of whom it is ſaid, that when all others went to the golden Calves, which Jeroboam the King of Iſrael had made, he himſelf alone fled from their Company, and got him to Jeruſalem unto the Temple of the Lord, and there worſhipped the Lord God of Iſrael. Did not the Man of God threaten grievous Plagues both unto the Prieſts of Bethel, and to the Altar which Jeroboam had there made after his own fantaſy? Which Plagues King Joſias the true Miniſter of God, did execute at the Time appointed. And where do we read, that the Prophets or the Apoſtles did agree with the People in their Idolatry, when as the People went a Whoring with their Hill-altars? For what Cauſe, I pray you, did the Prophets rebuke the People ſo much, as for their falſe worſhipping of God after their own Minds, and not after God's Word? For what was ſo much as that was? Wherefore the falſe Prophets ceaſed not to malign the true Prophets of God: Therefore they beat them, they baniſhed them, &c. How elſe, I pray you, can you underſtand what St. Paul alledgeth, when he ſaith, What Concord hath Chriſt with Belial? or what part hath the Believer with the Infidel? or how agreeth the Temple of God with Images? for ye are the Temple of the living God, as God himſelf hath ſaid; I will dwell among them, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. Wherefore, come out from among them, and ſeparate yourſelves from them (ſaith the Lord) and touch no unclean Thing; ſo will I receive you, and be a Father unto you, and ye ſhall be my Sons and Daughters, ſaith the Lord God Almighty.

Judith that holy Woman, would not ſuffer herſelf to be defiled with the Meats of the Wicked. All the Saints of God, which truly feared God, when they have been provoked to do any Thing which they knew to be contrary to God's Laws, have choſe to die rather than to forſake the Laws of their God. Wherefore the Macchabees put themſelves in danger of Death for the Defence of the Law, and at length died manfully in the Defence of the ſame. If we do praiſe (ſaith St. Auguſtine) the Macchabees, and that with great Admiration, becauſe they did ſtoutly ſtand even unto Death, for the Law of their Country; how much more ought we to ſuffer all Things for our Baptiſm, for the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, &c. But the Supper of the Lord, ſuch a one (I mean) as Chriſt commandeth

Anno 1555. mandeth us to celebrate, the Maſs utterly aboliſheth, and corrupteth moſt ſhamefully.

Mr. Latimer. Who am I that I ſhould add any Thing to this which you have ſpoken? Nay, I rather thank you that have vouchſafed to miniſter ſo plentiful Armour to me, being otherwiſe altogether unarmed, ſaving that he cannot be left deſtitute of Help, who rightly truſteth in the Help of God. I only learn to die in reading of the New Teſtament, and am ever now and then praying unto my God, that he will be an Helper unto me in time of Need.

The 13th Objection of the Antonian. Seeing you are ſo obſtinately ſet againſt the Maſs, that you affirm, becauſe it is done in a Tongue not underſtood of the People, and for other Cauſes, I cannot tell what; therefore is it not the true Sacrament ordained of Chriſt? I begin to ſuſpect you, that you think not catholickly of Baptiſm alſo. Is our Baptiſm, which we do uſe in a Tongue unknown unto the People, the true Baptiſm of Chriſt, or no? If it be, then the ſtrange Tongue doth not hurt the Maſs. If it be not the Baptiſm of Chriſt, tell me how you were baptized. Or whether will ye (as the Anabaptiſts do) that all which were baptized in Latin, ſhould be baptized again in the Engliſh Tongue?

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer. Although I would wiſh Baptiſm to be given in the vulgar Tongue for the Peoples ſake which are preſent, that they may the better underſtand their own Profeſſion, and alſo be more able to teach their Children the ſame, yet notwithſtanding there is not like Neceſſity of the vulgar Tongue in Baptiſm, as in the Lord's Supper. Baptiſm is given to Children, who by reaſon of their Age are not able to underſtand what is ſpoken unto them, what Tongue ſoever it be. The Lord's Supper is, and ought to be given to them that are at Years of Maturity. Moreover, in Baptiſm, which is accuſtomed to be given to Children in the Latin Tongue, all the ſubſtantial Points (as a Man would ſay) which Chriſt commanded to be done, are obſerved. And therefore I judge that Baptiſm to be a perfect and true Baptiſm; and that it is not only not needful, but alſo not lawful for any Man ſo baptized, to be chriſten'd again. But yet notwithſtanding, they ought to be taught the Catechiſm of the chriſtian Faith, when they ſhall come to Years of Diſcretion; which Catechiſm whoſoever deſpiſeth, or will not deſirouſly embrace and willingly learn, in my Judgment he playeth not the Part of a chriſtian Man. But in the Popiſh Maſs are wanting certain Subſtantials, that is to ſay, Things commanded by the Word of God to be obſerved in the Miniſtration of the Lord's Supper; of which there is ſufficient Declaration made before.

Mr. Latimer. Where you ſay (I would wiſh) ſurely I would wiſh that you had ſpoken more vehemently, and to have ſaid, It is of Neceſſity, that all Things in the Congregation ſhould be done in the vulgar Tongue, for the Edifying and Comfort of them that are preſent, notwithſtanding that the Child itſelf is ſufficiently baptiſed in the Latin Tongue.

The 14th Objection of the Antonian. Foraſmuch as I perceive you are ſo ſtiffly, I will not ſay obſtinately bent, and ſo wedded to your Opinion, that no gentle Exhortations, no wholeſome Counſels, no other Kind of Means can call you Home ro a better Mind, there remaineth that which in like Caſes was wont to be the only Remedy againſt ſtiff-necked and ſtubborn Perſons, that is, you muſt be hampered by the Laws, and be compelled to obey whether ye will or no, or elſe to ſuffer that which a Rebel to the Laws ought to ſuffer. Do you not know that whoſoever refuſeth to obey the Laws of the Realm, he bewrayeth himſelf to be an Enemy to his Country? Do not you know that this is the readieſt Way to ſtir up Seditson and civil War? It is better that you ſhould bear your own Sin, than that through the Example of your Breach of the common Laws, the common Quiet ſhould be diſturbed. How can you ſay, you will be the Queen's true Subject, when as you do openly profeſs that you will not keep her Laws?

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer. O heavenly Father, the Father of all Wiſdom, Underſtanding, and true Strength, I beſeech thee for thy only Son our Saviour Chriſt's ſake, look mercifully upon me wretched Creature, and ſend thy Holy Spirit into my Breaſt, that not only I may underſtand according to thy Wiſdom, how this peſtilent and deadly Dart is to be born off, and with what Anſwer it is to be beaten back, but alſo when I muſt join to fight in the Field for the Glory of thy Name, that then I being ſtrengthened with the Defence of thy right Hand, may manfully ſtand in the Confeſſion of thy Faith, and of thy Truth, and continue in the ſame unto the End of my Life, through the ſame our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

Now to the Objection. I grant it to be reaſonable, that he which by Words and Gentleneſs cannot be made to yield to that that is right and good, ſhould be bridled by the ſtrait Correction of the Laws: That is to ſay, He that will not be ſubject to God's Word, muſt be puniſhed by the Laws. It is true that is commonly ſaid, He that will not obey the Goſpel, muſt be tamed and taught by the Rigour of the Law. But theſe Things ought to take place againſt him which refuſeth to do that is right and juſt according to true Godlineſs, not againſt him which cannot quietly bear Superſtitions, but doth hate and deteſt from his Heart ſuch kind of Proceedings, and that for the Glory of the Name of God. To that which ye ſay, a Tranſgreſſor of the common Laws bewrayeth himſelf to be an Enemy of his Country, ſurely a Man ought to look unto the Nature of the Laws, what manner of Laws they be which are broken. For a faithful Chriſtian ought not to think alike of all manner of Laws. But that Saying ought only truly to be underſtood of ſuch Laws as are not contrary to God's Word. Otherwiſe, whoſoever love their Country in Truth (that is to ſay, in God) they will always judge, if at any Time the Laws of God and Man be the one contrary to the other, that a Man ought rather to obey God than Man. And they that think otherwiſe, and pretend a Love to that Country foraſmuch as they make their Country to fight as it were againſt God, in whom conſiſteth the only Stay of their Country, ſurely, I do think that ſuch are to be judged moſt deadly Enemies, and Traitors to their Country. For they that fight againſt God which is the Safety of their Country, what do they elſe but go about to bring upon their Country a preſent Ruin and Deſtruction? But they that do ſo are worthy to be judged Enemies to their Country, and Betrayers of the Realm. Therefore, &c.

But this is the readieſt Way (ye ſay) to ſtir ſtir up Sedition, to trouble the Quiet of the Commonwealth; therefore are theſe Things to be repreſſed in Time by force of Laws. Behold, Satan doth not ceaſe to practiſe his old Guiles, and accuſtomed Subtleties. He hath ever this Dart in a Readineſs to hurl againſt his Adverſaries, to accuſe them of Sedition, that he may bring them, if he can, in danger of the higher Powers. For ſo hath he by his Miniſter always charged the Prophets of God. Ahab ſaid unto Elias, Art thou he that troubleth Iſrael. The falſe Prophets alſo complained to their Prince, of Jeremy, that his Words were ſeditious, and not to be ſuffered: Did not the Scribes and Phariſees falſly accuſe Chriſt as a ſeditious Perſon, and one that ſpake againſt Cæſar? Did they not at the laſt Cry, If thou let this Man go, thou art not Cæſar's Friend? The Orator, Tertullus, how doth he accuſe Paul before Felix the high Deputy? We have found this Man, ſaith he, a Peſtilent Fellow, and a Stirrer of Sedition, unto all the Jews in the whole World, &c. But, I pray you, where theſe Men, as they were called, ſeditious Perſons? Chriſt, Paul and the Prophets? God forbid. But they were by falſe Men falſely accuſed. And for what, I pray you? but becauſe they reproved before the People their Guiles, Superſtition and Deceit. And when the others could not bear it, and would gladly have had them taken out of the Way, they accuſed them as ſeditious Perſons, and Troublers of the Commonwealth, that being by this Means made hateful to the People and Princes, they might the more eaſily be ſnatched up to be tormented, and put to Death. But how far they were from all Sedition, their whole Doctrine, Life, and Converſation doth well declare. For that which was objected laſt of all, that he cannot be a faithful Subject to his Prince, who profeſſeth openly that he will not obſerve the Laws which the Prince hath made; here I would wiſh that I might have an impartial Judge, and one that feareth God, to whoſe Judgment in this Cauſe, I promiſe I will ſtand. I anſwer therefore, A Man ought to obey his Prince, but in the Lord, and never againſt the Lord. For he that knowingly obeyeth his Prince againſt God, doth not a Duty to the Prince, but is a Deceiver of the Prince, and an Helper unto him to work his own Deſtruction. He is alſo unjuſt, who giveth not to the Prince that which is the Prince's, and to God that which is God's. Here cometh to my Remembrance that notable Saying of Valentinian the Emperor for chuſing the Biſhop of Milan. Set him (ſaith he) in the Biſhop's Seat, to whom if we (as Man) do offend at any Time, we may ſubmit ourſelves. Polycarp the moſt conſtant Martyr, when he ſtood before the Chief Rulers, and was commanded to blaſpheme Chriſt, and to ſwear by the Fortune of Cæſar, &c. he anſwered with a mild Spirit; We are taught (ſaith he) to give Honour unto Princes: And thoſe Powers which be of God; but ſuch Honour as is not contrary to God's Religion.

Satan and his Miniſters do always charge the godly with Sedition.

Hitherto ye ſee (good Father) how I have in Words only made as it were a Flouriſh before the Fight, which I ſhortly look for, and how I have begun to prepare certain kinds of Weapons to fight againſt the Adverſary of Chriſt, and to muſe with myſelf how the Darts of the old Enemy may be born off, and after what manner I may ſmite him again with the Sword of the Spirit. I learn alſo hereby to accuſtom myſelf to Armour, and to try how I can go armed. In Tindal where I was born, not far from the Borders of Scotland, I have known my Countrymen to watch Night and Day in their Harneſs, ſuch as they had, and their Spears in their Hands, eſpecially when they had any private Warning of the coming of the Scots. And ſo doing, although at every ſuch bickering ſome of them ſpent their Lives, yet by ſuch Means, like valiant Men, they defended their Country. And thoſe that ſo died, I think that before God they died in a good Quarrel, and their Off-ſpring and Progeny all the Country loved them the better for their Fathers ſake. And in the Quarrel of Chriſt our Saviour, in the Defence of his own divine Ordinances, by which he giveth unto us Life and Immortality, yea, in the Quarrel of Faith and the Chriſtian Religion, wherein reſteth our everlaſting Salvation, ſhall we not watch? Shall we not go always armed? Always looking when our Adverſary (which like a roaring Lion ſeeketh whom he may devour) ſhall come upon us by reaſon of our Slothfulneſs? Yea, and wo be unto us, if he can oppreſs us unawares, which undoubtedly he will do, if he find us ſleeping. Let us awake therefore. For if the good Man of the Houſe knew at what Hour the Thief would come, he would ſurely watch, and not ſuffer his Houſe to be broken up. Let us awake therefore, I ſay: Let us not ſuffer our Houſe to be broken up. Reſiſt the Devil, ſaith St. James, and he will fly from you. Let us therefore reſiſt him manfully, and taking the Croſs upon our Shoulders, let us follow our Captain Chriſt, who by his own Blood hath dedicated and hallowed the Way which leadeth unto the Father, that is to the Light which no Man can attain, the Fountain of the everlaſting Joys. Let us follow, I ſay, whither he calleth and inviteth us, that after theſe Afflictions, which laſt but for a Moment, whereby he trieth our Faith, as Gold by the Fire, we may everlaſtingly Reign and Triumph with him in the Glory of the Father, and that through the ſame our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; to whom with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, be all Honour and Glory now and for ever, Amen, Amen.

Anno 1555.

Good Father, forſomuch as I have determined with myſelf, to pour forth theſe my Cogitations into your Boſom, here, methinks, I ſee you ſuddenly lifting up your Head towards Heaven, after your Manner, and then looking upon me with your prophetical Countenance, and ſpeaking to me, with theſe or ſuch like Words, Truſt not, my Son (I beſeech you vouchſafe me the Honour of this Name; for in ſo doing I ſhall think myſelf both honoured and beloved of you). Truſt not, I ſay, my Son, to theſe Word-weapons; for the Kingdom of God is not in Words, but in Power. And remember always the Words of the Lord. Do not imagine beforehand, what and how you will ſpeak; for it ſhall be given you in that ſame Hour what ye ſhall ſpeak. For it is not ye that ſpeak, but the Spirit of your Father which ſpeaketh in you. I pray you therefore, Father, pray for me, that I may caſt my whole Care upon him, and truſt upon him in all Perils. For I know, and am ſurely perſwaded, that whatſoever I can imagine or think beforehand, it is nothing, except he aſſiſt me with his Spirit when the Time is. I beſeech you therefore, Father, pray for me, that Matt. 10. Mark 12.

Anno 1555. that ſuch a complete Harneſs of the Spirit, ſuch a Boldneſs of Mind may be given unto me, that I may out of a true Faith ſay with David; I will not truſt in my Bow, and it is not my Sword that ſhall ſave me. For he hath no Pleaſure in the Strength of an Horſe, &c. but the Lord's Delight is in them that fear him, and put their Truſt in his Mercy. I beſeech you pray, pray, that I may enter this Fight only in the Name of God, and that when all is paſt, I being not overcome through his gracious Aid, may remain and ſtand faſt in him, till that Day of the Lord, in which to them that obtain the Victory ſhall be given the lively Manna to eat, and a triumphant Crown for evermore.

Pſal. 44. Pſal. 147.

Now farther, I pray you help me to buckle on this Harneſs a little better. For ye know the Deepneſs of Satan, being an old Soldier, and you have collared with him e're now: Bleſſed be God, that hath ever aided you ſo well. I ſuppoſe he may well hold you at the Bay. But truly he will not be ſo willing (I think) to join with you as with us Youngſters: Sir, I beſeech you, let your Servant read this my babling unto you, and now and then, as it ſhall ſeem unto you beſt, let your Pen run on my Book; ſpare not to blot my Paper: I give you good Leave.

Mr. Latimer. Sir, I have cauſed my Man not only to read your Armour unto me, but alſo to write it out; for it is not only no bare Armour, but alſo well buckled Armour. I ſee not how it could be better. I thank you even from the Bottom of my Heart for it, and my Prayers you ſhall not lack, truſting that you do the like for me; for indeed there is the Help, &c. many Things make Confuſion in Memory. And if I were learned as well as St. Paul, I would not beſtow much amongſt them, further than to gall them, and ſpur-gall too, when and whereas Occaſion were given, and Matter came to Mind; for the Law ſhall be their Sheet-anchor, Stay, and Refuge. Therefore there is no Remedy, namely, now when they have the maſter Bowl in their Hand, and rule the Roaſt, but Patience. Better it is to ſuffer what cruelly they will put upon us, than to incur God's high Indignation. Wherefore (my good Lord) be of good Cheer in the Lord, with due Conſideration what he requireth of you, and what he doth promiſe you. Our common Enemy ſhall do no more than God will permit him. God is faithful, who will not ſuffer us to be tempted above our Strength, &c. Be at a Point what ye will ſtand unto; ſtick unto that, and let them both ſay and do what they liſt. They can but kill the Body, which otherwiſe is of itſelf mortal. Neither yet ſhall they do that when they liſt, but as God will ſuffer them, when the Hour appointed is come. It will be but in vain to uſe many Words with them, now they have a bloody and deadly Law prepared for them. But it is very requiſite that ye give a reaſonable Account of your Faith, if they will quietly hear you; elſe, ye know, in a wicked Place of Judgment a Man may keep Silence, after the Example of Chriſt. Let them not deceive you with their ſophiſtical Sophiſms and Fallacies: You know that falſe Things may have more Appearance of Truth, than Things that be moſt true: Therefore St. Paul giveth us a Watch-word, Let no Man deceive you with Likelineſs of Speech. Neither is it requiſite that with the Contentious ye ſhould follow Striſe of Words, which tend to no Edification, but to the Subverſion of the Hearers, and the vain Bragging and Oſtentation of the Adverſaries. Fear of Death doth moſt perſwade a great Number. Be well aware of that Argument; for that perſuaded Shaxton (as many Men thought) after that he had once made a good Profeſſion openly before the Judgment-ſeat. The Fleſh is weak, but the Willingneſs of the Spirit ſhall refreſh the Weakneſs of the Fleſh.

Coloſ. 2.

The Number of the Criers under the Altar muſt needs be fulfilled; if we be ſeparated thereunto, happy be we. That is the greateſt Promotion that God giveth in this World, to be ſuch Philippians, to whom it is given not only to believe, but alſo to ſuffer, &c. But who is able to do theſe Things? ſurely all our Ability, all our Sufficiency is of God. He requireth and promiſeth. Let us declare our Obedience to his Will when it ſhall be requiſite in the Time of Trouble, yea, in the midſt of the Fire.

Rev. 6. Phil. 1.

When that Number is fulfilled; which I ſuppoſe will be ſhortly, then have-at the Papiſts, when they ſhall ſay Peace, all Things are ſafe, when Chriſt ſhall come to keep his great Parliament to redreſs all Things that are amiſs. But he ſhall not come as the Papiſts feign him, to hide himſelf, and to play Bo-peep as it were under a Piece of Bread: But he ſhall come glorioufly, to the Terror and Fear of all Papiſts, but to the great Conſolation and Comfort of all that will here ſuffer for him. Comfort yourſelves and one another with theſe Words.

Lo Sir, here have I blotted your Paper vainly, and played the Fool egregiouſly; but ſo I thought better than not to do your Requeſt at this Time. Pardon me, and pray for me, pray for me I ſay, pray for me I ſay. For I am ſometimes ſo fearful, that I would creep into a Mouſe-hole; ſometimes God doth viſit me again with his Comfort. So he cometh and goeth, to teach me to feel and to know mine Infirmity, to the Intent to give Thanks to him that is worthy, leſt I ſhould rob him of his due, as many do, and almoſt all the World. Fare ye well.

What Belief is to be given to Papiſts, may appear by their Wracking, Writing, Wrinching, and monſtrouſly Injuring of God's holy Scripture, as appeareth in the Pope's Law. But I dwell here now in a School of Obliviouſneſs. Fare you well once again, and be you ſtedfaſt and unmoveable in the Lord. Paul loved Timothy marvellous well, notwithſtanding he ſaith unto him, Be thou Partaker of the Afflictions of the Goſpel; and again, Harden thyſelf to ſuffer Afflictions. Be faithful unto Death and I will give thee a Crown of Life, ſaith the Lord.

A Letter ſent from Biſhop Ridley and his Fellow-Priſoners, to Mr. Bradford and his Fellow-Priſoners in the King's-Bench in Southwark, Anno 1554.

WELL beloved in Chriſt our Savicur, we all with one Heart wiſh to you, with all thoſe that love God in Deed and Truth, Grace and Health, and eſpecially to our dearly beloved Companions which are in Chriſt's Cauſe, and the Cauſe both of their Brethren and of their own Salvation, to put their Neck willingly under the Yoke of Christ's Cross. How joyful it was to us to hear the Report of Dr. Taylor, and of his godly Confession, &c. I assure you it is hard for me to express.

False Reports spread by the Policy of the Papists.

Blessed be God, which was and is the Giver of that, and of all godly Strength and Support in the Time of Adversity. As for the Rumours that have or do go Abroad, either of our relenting or massing, we trust, that they which know God and their Duty towards their Brethren in Christ, will not be too light of belief. For it is not the Slanderer's evil Tongue, but a Man's evil Deed that can with God defile a Man; and therefore with God's Grace, ye shall never have cause to do otherwise than ye say ye do, that is, not to doubt but that we will, by God's Grace continue, &c. Like Rumours as ye have heard of our coming to London, hath been here spread of the coming of certain learned Men Prisoners, hither from London; but as yet we know no Certainty which of these Rumours is, or shall be more true. Know ye that we have you in our daily Remembrance, and wish you and all the rest of our aforesaid Companions well in Christ.

It would much comfort us, if we might have Knowledge of the State of the rest of our most dearly beloved, which in this troublesome Time do stand in Christ's Cause, and in the Defence of the Truth thereof. We have heard somewhat of Mr. Hooper's Matter, but nothing of the rest. We long to hear of Father Crome, Dr. Sands, Mr. Saunders, Veron, Beacon, * Rogers, &c. We are in good Health, thanks be to God, and yet the Manner of using us doth change as sour Ale in Summer. It is reported to us by our Keepers, that the University beareth us heavily. A Coal happened to fall in the Night out of the Chimney, and burnt a Hole in the Floor, and no more harm was done, the Bailiff's Servant sitting by the Fire. Another Night there chanced (as Mr. Bailiffs told us) a drunken Fellow to multiply Words, and for the same he was set in Borcado. Upon these Things as is reported, there is a Rumour risen in the Town and Country about, that we would have broke the Prison with such Violence, as that if Mr. Bailiffs had not played the pretty Men, we should have made an Escape. We had out of our Prison a Wall that we might have walked upon, and our Servants had Liberty to go abroad in the Town or Fields, but now both they and we are restrained of both.

* This Letter seemeth to be written a little before, or about the Time of the Burning of Mr. Rogers.

My Lord of Worcester passed through Oxford, but he did not visit us. The same Day our Restraint began to be more close, and the Book of the Communion was taken from us by the Bailiffs at the Mayor's Commandment, as the Bailiffs did report to us. No Man is licensed to come unto us; before they might, that would see us upon the Wall, but that is so grudged at, and so evil reported, that we are now restrained, &c. Sir, blessed be God, with all our evil Reports, Grudges and Restraints, we are merry in God, all our Care is and shall be (by God's Grace) to please and serve him, of whom we look and hope, after these temporal and momentary Miseries, to have eternal Joy and perpetual Felicity with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Peter and Paul, and all the heavenly Company of the Angels in Heaven, through Jesus Christ our Lord. As yet there has no learned Man, nor any Scholar, been to visit us since we came into Bocardo, which now in Oxford may be called a College of Quondams. For as ye know we are no fewer than three, and I dare say every one well contented with his Portion, which I do reckon to be our heavenly Father's fatherly, good and gracious Gift. Thus fare you well. We shall by God's Grace one Day meet together, and be merry. The Day assuredly approacheth apace; the Lord grant that it may shortly come. For before that Day come, I fear the World will wax worse and worse. But then all our Enemies shall be overthrown and trodden under foot; Righteousness and Truth then shall have the Victory; and bear the Bell away, whereof the Lord grant us to be Partakers, and all that love truly the Truth.

Bp. Ridley and his Fellow-prisoners in Bocardo, restrained of their Liberty.

Anno 1555.

We all pray you, as we can, to cause all our Commendations to be made unto all such as ye know did visit us and you when we were in the Tower, with their friendly Remembrances and Benefits. Mrs. Wilkson and Mrs. Warcup have not forgotten us, but ever since we came to Bocardo, with their charitable and friendly Benevolence have comforted us: Not that else we did lack (for God be blessed, he hath always hitherto sufficiently provided for us) but that is a great Comfort, and an Occasion for us to bless God, when we see that he maketh them so friendly to tender us, whom some of us were never familiarly acquainted withal.

Mrs. Wilkson and Mrs. Warcup help the Bishops in Prison.

Yours in Christ,

NICH. RIDLEY.

Another Letter from Bishop Ridley to Mr. Bradford.

This Letter was written to Mr. Bradford soon after his Condemnation, when it was thought that he would be carried to Lancashire to suffer.

O Dear Brother, seeing the Time is now come, wherein it pleaseth the heavenly Father for Christ our Saviour's sake to call upon you, and to bid you to come, happy are you that ever you were born, thus to be found awake at the Lord's Calling. Well done good and faithful Servant, because thou hast been faithful in small Matters, he shall set thee over great Things, and thou shalt enter into the Joy of thy Lord.

O dear Brother, what meaneth this, that you are sent into your own native Country? The Wisdom and Policy of the World may mean what they will, but I trust God will so order the Matter finally by his fatherly Providence, that some great Occasion of God's gracious Goodness shall be plentifully poured abroad amongst our dear Brethren in that Country by this your Martyrdom, where the Martyrs for Christ's sake shed their Blood, and lost their Lives. O what wondrous Things hath Christ afterwards wrought to his Glory, and Confirmation of their Doctrine? If it be not the Place that sanctifieth the Man, but the holy Man doth by Christ sanctify the Place, Brother Bradford then happy and holy shall be that Place wherein thou shalt suffer, and shall be with thy Ashes in Christ's Cause sprinkled over withal. All thy Country may rejoyce of thee, that it ever brought forth such a One, which would render his Life again in his Cause, of whom he had received it. Brother Bradford, so long as I shall understand thou art in thy Journey, by God's Grace I shall call upon our heavenly Father for Christ's sake to set the safely home: And then good Brother, speak you, and pray for the Remnant which are to suffer for Christ's sake, according to that thou then shalt know more clearly.

We do look now every Day when we shall be called on, blessed be God. I think I am the weakest many Ways of our Company; and yet I thank our Lord God and heavenly Father by Christ, that since I heard of our dear Brother Rogers departing, and stout Confession of Christ and his Truth even unto the Death, my Heart (blessed be God) rejoyced for it; that since that Time (I say) I never felt any lumpish Heaviness in my Heart, as I grant I have felt sometimes before. O good Brother, blessed be

God

Anno 1555. God in thee, and bleſſed be the Time that ever I knew thee. Farewel, farewel.

Your Brother in Chriſt,

NICHOLAS RIDLEY.

The Subſtance of Mr. Grindal's Letter to Biſhop Ridley.

Mr. Grindal (afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury) being in the Time of Exile in the City of Frankfort, wrote to Dr. Ridley then Priſoner, a certain Epiſtle, wherein firſt he lamenteth his Captivity, exhorting him withal to be conſtant. Secondly, He certifieth him of the State of the Engliſh Exiles being diſperſed in Germany, and of the ſingular Providence of God in ſtirring up the Magiſtrates and Rulers there towards them. Thirdly, he writeth to know his Mind and Will concerning the Printing of his Book againſt Tranſubſtantiation, and of certain other Treatiſes and his Diſputations. Whereunto Biſhop Ridley anſwereth again in Order as followeth.

Dr. Ridley's Anſwer to Mr. Grindal's Letter.

BLeſſed be God our heavenly Father which inclined your Heart to have ſuch a Deſire to write unto me, and bleſſed be he again which hath heard your Requeſt, and brought your Letters ſafe unto my Hands; and over all this I bleſs him through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the great Comfort I received by the ſame, of the Knowledge of your State, and of other our dearly beloved Brethren and Countrymen in thoſe Parts beyond the Sea.

Dearly beloved Brother Grindal, I ſay to you and all the reſt of our Brethren in Chriſt with you, rejoyce in the Lord, and as you love me, and the other my Reverend Fathers and Fellow-priſoners, (which undoubtedly are Gloria Chriſti) lament not our State, but I beſeech you and them all to give to our heavenly Father for his boundleſs Mercies and unſpeakable Benefits, even in the midſt of all our Troubles given unto us, moſt hearty Thanks. For know ye, that as the Weight of his Croſs hath increaſed upon us, ſo he hath not, nor doth not ceaſe to multiply his Mercies to ſtrengthen us; and I truſt, yet by his Grace I doubt nothing, but he will do ſo for Chriſt our Maſter's ſake, even to the End. To hear that you and our other Brethren do find Favour and Grace in your Exile, with the Magiſtrates, Miniſters, and Citizens at Tigury, Frankfort, and other Places, it doth greatly comfort (I dare ſay) all here that do love Chriſt and his true Word. I do aſſure you it warmed my Heart, to hear you by Chance name ſome, as Scory, Cox, &c. O that it had come in your Mind to have ſaid ſomewhat alſo of Cheek, Turner, Leaver, Sampſon, and Chambers, but I truſt in God they be all well. And, Sir, ſeeing you ſay, that there be in thoſe Parts with you of Students and Miniſters ſo good a Number, now therefore care you not for us, otherwiſe than to wiſh that God's Glory may be ſet forth by us. For whenſoever God ſhall call us Home (as we look daily for none other, but when it ſhall pleaſe God to ſay, Come) you, bleſſed be God, are enow through his Aid, to light, and ſet up again the Lanthorn of his Word in England. As concerning the Copies ye ſay ye have with you, I wonder how ever they did or could find the Way to come to you. My Diſputation, except ye have that which I gathered myſelf after the Diſputation was done, I cannot think ye have it truly. If ye have that, then ye have therewithal the whole Manner after which I was uſed in the Diſputation.

As for the Treatiſe in Engliſh againſt Tranſubſtantiation, I can't think it worth tranſlating into Latin, nor would I have you tranſlate any other of my Writings, 'till you are certain how the Lord will diſpoſe of me. And thus much concerning your Letters. Now, although I ſuppoſe you know a good Part of our Condition here, (for we are forth-coming, even as when ye departed, &c.) you ſhall underſtand that I was in the Tower about the Space of two Months cloſe Priſoner, and after that had granted to me, without my Labour, the Liberty of the Tower, and ſo continued about half a Year, and then, becauſe I refuſed to allow the Maſs with my Preſence, I was ſhut up in Priſon again.

Bp. Ridley Priſoner in the Tower above half a Year.

The laſt Lent ſave one, it chanced by reaſon of the Tumult ſtirred up in Kent, there were ſo many Priſoners in the Tower, that my Lord of Canterbury, Mr. Latimer, and Mr. Bradford and I were put all together in one Priſon, where we remained 'till almoſt the next Eaſter, and then we three, Canterbury, Latimer and I, were ſuddenly ſent a little before Eaſter to Oxford, and were ſuffered to have nothing with us, but what we carried upon us. About the Whitſuntide following was our Diſputations at Oxford, after which all was taken from us, as Pen, Ink, &c. Our own Servants were taken from us before, and every one had a ſtrange Man put to him, and each of us were appointed to be kept in ſeparate Places, as we are unto this Day.

Bleſſed be God, we three at the Writing hereof were in good Health, and (in God) of good Chear. We expected long ago to have been diſpatched, for we were all three on one Day condemned as Hereticks by Dr. Weſton (he being the head Commiſſioner) within a Day or two of our Diſputations, and ever ſince we remain as we were by him left. The Lord's Will be fulfilled in us, as, I doubt not but by his Grace it ſhall be to his Glory, and our eternal Salvation through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Likewiſe the Lord hath hitherto preſerved above all our Expectation, our dear Brother, and in Chriſt's Cauſe, a ſtrong Champion, John Bradford. He is alſo condemned, and is already deliver'd to the Secular Power, and Writs (as we have heard ſay) given out for his Execution, and called in again.

Writs for burning of J. Bradford called in again.

Thus the Lord, ſo long as his bleſſed Pleaſure is, preſerveth whom he liſteth, notwithſtanding the wonderful raging of the World. Many (as we hear ſay) have valiantly ſuffered confeſſing Chriſt's Truth, and nothing yielding to the Adverſary, yea, not for the Fear or Pains of Death.

The Names of them which I knew, and have now ſuffered, are theſe; Farrar Biſhop of St. David's, Hooper Biſhop of Worceſter, Rogers your Fellow-Prebend, Dr. Taylor of Hadley, Mr. Saunders, and one Tomkins a Weaver, and now this laſt Day Mr. Cardmaker, with another were burnt in Smithfield at London, and many others in Eſſex and Kent, whoſe Names are written in the Book of Life, whom yet I do not know.

Weſt, your old Companion, and ſometime my Officer (alas) hath relented (as I have heard) but the Lord hath ſhortened his Days, for ſoon after he died, and is gone. Grimbold was caught by the Heel, and caſt into the Marſhalſea, but now is at Liberty again, but I fear he eſcaped not without bowing of his Knee to Baal.

Mr. Weſt when he had recanted and ſaid Maſs againſt his Conſcience, ſhortly after pined away, and died for Grief.

My dear Friend Thomas Ridley of the Bull-head in Cheap, which was to me the moſt faithful Friend that I had in my Trouble, is departed alſo unto God. My Brother Shipſide that hath married my Siſter, hath been almoſt half a Year in Priſon, for delivering (as he was accuſed) of *certain Things from me; but now, Thanks be to God, he is at Liberty again, but ſo that the Biſhop hath taken from him his * Park.*

Note how Bonner here requiteth the Kindneſs of Bp. Ridley ſhewed to his Mother.

Of all us three Priſoners in Oxford, I am kept moſt ſtrict, and with leaſt Liberty; either becauſe the Man in whoſe Houſe I am a Priſoner is governed by his Wife, who is a moroſe, ſuperſtitious old Woman, and thinks ſhe ſhall merit by having me very cloſely confin'd; for the Man himſelf, whoſe Name is Iriſh, is civil enough to all, but too much rul'd by his Wife. Though I never had a Wife, yet from this daily Uſage I begin to underſtand how great and intolerable a Burthen it is to have a bad one. The wiſe Man ſays rightly, A good Wife is the Gift of God: And again, Bleſſed is the Man who has a good Wife. Or elſe I ſay the Reaſon is (for I know not from which) that he is ſo commanded from the higher Powers, which is what he pleads, when I complain of my hard Uſage.

All the Statutes of Reformation in Cambridge broken, and all Things reduced again into the old State of Popery.

At Cambridge (as I hear ſay) all the Reformations of Students and Statutes which were lately made, are now undone; and all Things are reduced to their ancient Confuſion and old popiſh Superſtition. All the Heads of Colleges who preached the ſincere Word of God, or favour'd it, are turned out, and others of the popiſh Faction put in their Places; inſomuch that I hear no one can be admitted Fellow of a College, that will not bow the Knee to Baal. Nor do I wonder, ſince 'tis ſo throughout the whole Realm of England among Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, and the whole Body of the Clergy. And to tell you much naughty Matter in few Words, Popery every where reigns among us in its full and ancient Force.

The Lord be merciful, and for Chriſt's ſake pardon us our old Unkindneſs and Unthankfulneſs: For when the poured upon us the Gifts of his manifold Graces and Favours, (alas) we did not ſerve him nor render Thanks unto him according to the ſame. We Paſtors many of us were too cold, and bare too much with the wicked World; our Magiſtrates did abuſe, to their own worldly Gain, both God's Goſpel and the Miniſters of the ſame. The People in many Places were unruly and unkind. Thus of every Side and of every Sort we have provok'd God's Anger and Wrath to fall upon us: But bleſſed might he be that hath not ſuffered his to continue in thoſe Ways which ſo wholly hath diſpleaſed his ſacred Majeſty, but hath awaked them by the fatherly Correction of his own Son's Croſs, unto his Glory, and our endleſs Salvation through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Biſhop Ridley's Prayer for the Churches Abroad, which openly profeſs the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt.

My daily Prayer is (as God doth know) and by God's Grace ſhall be ſo as long as I live in this World, for you my dear Brethren that are fled out of your own Country, becauſe you will rather forſake all worldly Things than the Truth of God's Word. It is even the ſame that I uſe to make to God, for all thoſe Churches Abroad through the World, which have forſaken the Kingdom of Antichriſt, and profeſſed openly the Purity of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt; that is, that God our eternal Father, for our Saviour Chriſt's ſake, will daily increaſe in you the gracious Gift of his heavenly Spirit, to the true ſetting forth of his Glory and of his Goſpel, and make you to agree brotherly in the Truth of the ſame, that there ariſe no Root of Bitterneſs among you, that may infect that good Seed which God hath ſown in your Hearts already, and finally that your Life may be ſo pure and ſo honeſt, according to the Rule of God's Word, and according to that Vocation whereunto we are called by the Goſpel of Chriſt our Saviour, that the Honeſty and Purity of the ſame may provoke all that ſhall ſee or know it, to the Love of your Doctrine, and to love you for your Honeſty and Virtue ſake, and ſo both in brotherly Unity of your true Doctrine, and alſo in the godly Virtue of your honeſt Life, to glorify our Father which is in Heaven. Anno 1555. 52

Several of our Magiſtrates, viz. The Chancellor of Wincheſter, Earl of Arundel, and Lord Paget, are Embaſſadors with Cardinal Pool beyond the Seas, to make Peace (as 'tis ſaid) between the Emperor, our Realm, and the King of France. After whoſe Return, and the Delivery of the Queen, which we daily expect, and have long expected, and which God for the Glory of his Name grant to be a ſafe and happy one, then ſhall we expect from the old Enemy of our Profeſſion, ſoon to receive triumphant Crowns in the Lord. Bp. Ridley prayeth for Queen Mary.

I humbly with my whole Heart commend myſelf to all your Prayers, and firſt to yours, O moſt dear Brother in Chriſt, and my moſt beloved Grindal, to yours moſt dear and together with me beloved in the Lord, Cheek, Cox, Turner, Lever, Sampſon, Chambers, and all our Brethren and Fellow-countrymen who live amongſt you, and love our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in Truth. I commend alſo to you the reverend Fathers in God, and my Fellow-captives in the Lord, Thomas Cranmer, now moſt worthy of the Name of a true great Paſtor and Archbiſhop; and that old Soldier of Chriſt and true Apoſtle of our Engliſh Nation, Hugh Latimer. I here give myſelf the greater Length in this Letter, moſt dear Brother, becauſe after this I am perſuaded they'll be too ſhort to trouble you.

Oxford, N. R.

The Life of Biſhop Latimer, a famous Preacher, and worthy Martyr of Chriſt.

NOW conſequently after the Life of Biſhop Ridley, followeth the Life of that valiant Champion of Chriſt, Biſhop Hugh Latimer, who was the Son of one Hugh Latimer of Thirkeſſon in the County of Leiceſter, a Husbandman in good Repute; with whom he was brought up 'till he was about four Years old: At which Time his Parents ſeeing him to be of a ready, prompt, and ſharp Wit, purpoſed to train him up in Erudition, and Knowledge of good Literature; wherein he ſo profited in the common Schools of his own Country, that at fourteen Years of Age he was ſent to the Univerſity of Cambridge: Where, after ſome Continuance in the Exerciſe of other Things, he gave himſelf up to the Study of ſuch School Divinity, as the Ignorance of that Age would ſuffer. Hugh Latimer firſt ſet to School. He is ſent to Cambridge.

Zealous he was then in the popiſh Religion, and therewith ſo ſcrupulous, as himſelf confeſſed, that being a Prieſt, and uſing to ſay Maſs, he was ſo ſervile an Obſerver of the Romiſh Decrees, that he thought he had never ſufficiently mingled his maſſing Wine with Water; and moreover, that he ſhould never be damned, if he were once a profeſſed Friar, with divers of ſuch ſuperſtitious Fancies. And in this blind Zeal he was a very Enemy, to the Profeſſors of Chriſt's Goſpel; as both his Oration made, when he proceeded Batchelor of Divinity, againſt Melanchthon, and alſo his other Works did plainly declare. But eſpecially in thoſe Days his popiſh Zeal could in no Caſe abide good Mr. Stafford, Reader of the the divinity Lectures in Cambridge, moſt ſpitefully railing againſt him, and perſuading the Youth of Cambridge in no wiſe to believe him.

Notwithſtanding, ſuch was the Goodneſs and merciful Purpoſe of God, that when he ſaw his good Time, by which way he thought utterly to have defaced the Profeſſors of the Goſpel, and true Church of Chriſt, he was at length himſelf by a Member of the ſame prettily caught in the Bleſſed Net of God's Word. For Mr. Thomas Bilney being at that Time a Trier out of Satan's Subtilties, and a ſecret Overthrower of Antichriſt's Kingdom, ſeeing Mr. Latimer to have a Zeal in his Way (altho' not according to Knowledge) was ſtricken with a brotherly Pity towards him, and began to conſider by what Means he might beſt win this zealous ignorant Brother to the true Knowledge of Chriſt. Wherefore, after a ſhort Time, he came to Mr. Latimer's Study, and deſired him to hear him make his Confeſſion, which he willingly did; and by hearing thereof he was, by the good Spirit of God, ſo touched, that thereupon he forſook the Study of the School-doctors, and other ſuch Fopperies, and became an earneſt Student in true Divinity, as he himſelf, as well in his Conference with Biſhop Ridley, as alſo in his firſt Sermon made upon the Pater Noſter, doth confeſs. So that whereas before he was an Enemy, and almoſt a Perſecutor of Chriſt, he was now a zealous Seeker after him, changing his old Manner of caviling and railing, into a diligent Kind of conferring, both with Mr. Bilney and others, and came alſo to Mr. Stafford before he died, and deſired him to forgive him.

After his own Converſion, he was not ſatisfy'd without endeavouring that of others, and therefore became both a publick Preacher, and alſo a private Inſtructor to the reſt of his Brethren within the Univerſity, by the Space of three Years, ſpending his Time partly in the Latin Tongue among the Learned, and partly amongſt the ſimple People in his natural and vulgar Language. Howbeit, as Satan never ſleepeth when he ſeeth his Kingdom to begin to decay, ſo likewiſe now, ſeeing that this worthy Member of Chriſt would be a terrible Shaker thereof, he raiſed up his impious Imps to moleſt and trouble him.

Enemies ſtirred in Cambridge againſt Mr. Latimer.

Amongſt theſe there was an Auguſtine Friar, who took Occaſion upon certain Sermons that Mr. Latimer made about Chriſtmas, 1529, as well in the Church of St. Edward, as alſo in St. Auguſtine's, within the Univerſity of Cambridge to inveigh againſt him, for that Mr. Latimer in the ſaid Sermons (alluding to the common Uſage of the Seaſon) gave the People certain Cards out of the 5th, 6th, and 7th Chapters of St. Matthew, whereupon they might, not only then, but always elſe occupy their Time. For the chief Triumph in the Cards he limited the Heart, as the principal Thing that they ſhould ſerve God withal, whereby he quite overthrew all hypocritical and external Ceremonies, not tending to the neceſſary Furtherance of God's Holy Word and Sacraments. For the better attaining hereof, he wiſhed the Scriptures to be in Engliſh, whereby the common People might the better learn their Duty, as well to God as to their Neighbours.

Latimer's preaching of the Cards in Cambridge.

The Handling of this Matter was ſo apt for the Time, and ſo pleaſantly apply'd by him, that it not only declared the Wit and Dexterity of the Preacher, but alſo wrought in the Hearers much Fruit, to the Overthrow of popiſh Superſtition, and ſetting up of perfect Religion.

This was upon the Sunday before Chriſtmas Day; on which Day coming to the Church, and cauſing the Bell to be tolled to a Sermon, he entered into the Pulpit, taking for his Text the Words of the Goſpel aforeſaid, read in the Church that Day; Who art thou? &c. In delivering which Cards (as is aboveſaid) he made the Heart to be Triumph, exhorting and inviting all Men thereby to ſerve the Lord with inward Heart and true Affection, and not with outward Ceremonies: Adding moreover to the Praiſe of that Triumph, that tho' it were never ſo ſmall, yet it would take up the beſt Court-card beſide in the Bunch, yea, though it were the King of Clubs, &c. meaning thereby how the Lord would be worſhipped and ſerved in Simplicity of Heart and Verity, wherein conſiſteth true Chriſtian Religion, and not in the outward Deeds of the Letter only, or in the glittering Shew of Man's Traditions, or Pardons, Pilgrimages, Ceremonies, Vows, Devotions, voluntary Works, and Works of Supererogation, Foundations, Oblations, the Pope's Supremacy, &c. ſo that all theſe either were needleſs, where the other is preſent; or elſe were of ſmall Eſtimation, in Compariſon of the other.

The Difference between true and falſe.

It would require a long Diſcourſe to declare what a ſtir there was in Cambridge upon this Preaching of Mr. Latimer. Belike Satan began to feel himſelf and his Kingdom to be touched too near, and therefore thought it Time to look about him, and to make out his Men of Arms.

Dr. Buckneham preacheth againſt Mr. Latimer.

Firſt came out the Prior of the Black Friars called Buckneham, who thinking to make a great Hand againſt Mr. Latimer, about the ſame Time of Chriſtmas, when Mr. Latimer brought forth his Cards to deface belike the Doings of the other, brought out his Chriſtmas Dice, caſting there to his Audience Cinque and Quater, meaning by the Cinque five Places in the New Teſtament, and the Four Doctors by the Quater; by which his Cinque Quater, he would prove that it was not expedient the Scripture to be in Engliſh, leſt the Ignorant and Vulgar Sort through the Occaſion thereof, might aptly be brought in danger to leave their Vocation, or elſe to run into ſome Inconvenience: As for Example.

Note theſe great Reaſons of the Catholicks why the Scriptures ſhould not come in Engliſh.

The Plowman when he heareth this in the Goſpel, No Man that layeth his Hand on the Plough and looketh back, is meet for the Kingdom of God; might peradventure hearing this, ceaſe from his Plough. Likewiſe the Baker, when he hears that a little Leaven corrupteth a whole Lump of Dough, may perchance leave our Bread unleavened, and ſo our Bodies ſhall be unſeaſoned. Alſo the ſimple Man, when he heareth in the Goſpel, If thine Eye offend thee, pluck it out, and caſt it from thee, may make himſelf blind, and ſo fill the World with Beggars. Theſe with ſome others this clerkly Friar brought out, to the Number of five, to prove his Purpoſe.

Mr. Latimer hearing this Sermon of Dr. Buckneham, cometh again in the Afternoon, or ſhortly after to the Church, to anſwer the Friar, where reſorted to him a great Multitude, as well of the Univerſity as of the Town, both Doctors and other Graduates, with great Expectation to hear what he could ſay: Among whom alſo, directly in the Face of Latimer, underneath the Pulpit, ſate Buckneham the aforeſaid Friar, Prior of the Black Friars, with his Black Friar's Cowl about his Shoulders.

Anſwer of Mr. Latimer to Dr. Buckneham's Sermon.
